"We'll get to the castle once we do, Lemon." Khorne cut him off, seemingly not in a foul mood for once. "It'd be pointless and futile to force you to move at top speeds right now. What we need to do is keep moving."

The other Chaos God nodded their heads, moving closer to Lemon as if to shield him as they began to trot at a speed that Lemon was able to match comfortably.

Still, something was poking at the back of his head and it was not the headache. The four ponies around him, they were-

"Why are you four acting so weird?"

That question caused the four of them to stop dead in their tracks, their faces unreadable as looked at him before each other.

Tzeentch sighed, "Of all times he asks, he asks now." He then elbowed Khorne to speak, thrusting his head towards Lemon.

Sighing, Khorne spoke slowly to him. "Lemon Russ, do you know what we are?"

Lemon frowned, trying to piece together what scheme the four of them were planning. "You're the Chaos Gods."

"NO!" Khorne snapped, stomping his hooves before shaking himself and started to move forwards with the rest of the group following him. "That's who we are, not what we are!"

"That doesn't make sense, how you can not be the Chaos Gods yet be them at the same time!" Lemon shouted back, glaring at them as Nurgle slowed down to address him.

"What he meant to say was do you know what a Chaos God is?"

"Huh?" Lemon blinked at the question before he found his tongue again. "Ye-es, you're the embodiment of Warp's negative emotions."

Slaanesh huffed, rolling hir eyes. "And good ones. I'm suppose to a Love God, after all, and several of emotions I embody are not that bad. Pleasure and Mastery are under my domain, something all enjoy and I know that you've praised the Beauty of a certain pair of moons more than once in the past. But that's besides the point; what we are is the embodiments of emotions felt in the Warp made into a physical form."

"Or were," Tzeentch said without turning his head around.

"Were?" Lemon asked, blinking as he started to walk on his own.

"We're like SkyNet, in a way," Tzeentch sighed. "For everything we were before we started Looping, we still lacked one thing that all you mortals had. A true sense of self."

The four of them actually sighed sadly at this, with Khorne speaking again. "Everything for me was the battle, the fight, the honour, the blood, the victories, the skulls, but that was because that was expected of me, forcing the concept of what a blood crazed god would be."

"None of us had a true identity, a true sense of being until we began to loop," Nurgle said with his head low. "Sure we did plan, scheme, fought, thought and a thousand other things, but that was all because that's what we were forced to be!"

"I couldn't go on an all out attack like Khorne no more than Khorne could convince thousands to have one big orgy. It was simply beyond us."

"And then we began to loop." Tzeentch said happily, his body relaxing. "For the first time, we were truly living. We could do as please without any of your notions defining who we must be. And once we learned of the reason why the time resets were happening and what it meant..."

They all had a brief look of pure joy on their faces, as if tasting freedom for the first time in their lives before it vanished.

"Then why do you act so...chaos gody all of the time?" Lemon asked as they were nearing the river. He was still trying to comprehend what the four were saying and whatever Nurgle did to him for his injury was starting to wear off.

"Oh please," Slaanesh laughed as s/he began to levitate tree trunks across the river. "Just because we can do stuff outside of our baseline selves doesn't meant we won't. I still like to find new partners to sleep with; I've even got a list of who to do," Slaanesh paused, ears darting upwards. "My to-do list!"

Tzeentch, Ciaphas and Slaanesh laughed, with Khorne and Nurgle groaning at the poor joke.

"Why have you never told me any of this?" Lemon said with a bit more hostility than he would have liked to but what was done was done.

"Would you have listened, or cared if we brought this up out the blue?" Tzeentch glared at him, ears flicking as Slaanesh placed the last tree in place for them to cross. "No, you would have shot at us, or just flat out ignore us which is very rude_ and I am sure Fluttershy taught you better than that!"

"Like you four are any better!" Lemon snapped back, face a bit red as he began to think of what the Little Mother would say about his behaviour towards his loopers. "Half the time we loop here, you tease me and do your best to annoy the hell out of me with your stupid antics!" He leaned back on Ciaphas, as they walked across the makeshift bridge, his leg starting hurt.

The Chaos Gods looked red in the face as they moved up the hill in silence when Ciaphas coughed.

"If I may, I think I know the answer." He looked at the four Chaos Gods who stared at him before nodding their heads. "A majority of the time, you four loop together, correct?" He was given a nod to this in the affirmative. "So you have formed a sense of comradery for each other, as that no one can try to mortify one but the other three, yes?"

The Chaos Gods looked at each other, staring at each other's eyes before turning back and nodding again at the pegasus. "And most of the time, when one of you loop here with Leman, you are related to the Emperor in some way, brother or sister or the like?"

There was a pause before they nodded again before turning rigidly forwards to the rope bridge, Nurgle flying down to bring it up for them.

"Sir, I do believe they were trying to act their roles then and other times because they feel that you are apart of that band of camaraderie they have for each other."

Lemon blinked at what Ciaphas said, and then turned his head towards the Chaos Gods in surprise when they said nothing to deny it.

Thenâ€|

"If you say the F word, I swear I will drop kick you." Khorne muttered as they walked across the bridge.

"Agreed. We've might have changed but not that much," Slaanesh shuddered as they walked closer to crumbling castle. "You'll never see me turn someone down, for example and we will not say the F word. Ever!"

Nodding their heads in agreement, the four Chaos Gods pushed the doors open and walked towards the stone orbs of the Elements.

Using hir magic, Slaanesh began to levitate the orbs to each of them to hold.

"Good, now that's done, let's get back and find who the Elements are." The white unicorn said when a blast of cold air entered the room as the Smooze flew in.

* * *

>Bon Bon shouldn't be staring out the windows, but she had to. Something drove her to do so, probably because of her crazy, insane, curious, beautiful, lovely, sweet, wonderful, perfect marefriend Lyra.

Said marefriend was resting against her, a fin still clamped tightly around her barrel with her head resting on her shoulder. Lyra had more or less tackled her over once Ciaphas brought her in the library and refused to let go since. Bon Bon couldn't blame her as she was not letting her go again either, and was doing her best to convince herself that it wasn't her fault she lost Lyra in the panic in the town hall, that Lyra was separated from the one pony that was able to help the blind seapony was not her fault, that Lyra nearly died was not her fault, that Lyra had nearly became one with the Smooze was not her fault.

She was trying.

Lyra mumbled something in her sleep, something about humans and cats, before leaning into Bon Bon's side with a happy snore. Bon Bon had learned that the seapony had fit that spot beside her perfectly a long time ago, with her head belonging on top of the seapony's head to complete everything.

Smiling, Bon Bon kissed her head when she heard a series of gasps.

The Chaos God Khorne was fighting the Smooze when he suddenly vanished. And then so did Nurgle.

"Bon Bon, I don't like this!" Lyra said, leaning into her side for comfort, apparently awake this whole time. She would need to remember this for later. If there _was_ a later.

"Me neither." Bon Bon said, stroking her back as the Smooze's laughter began to fill the room again.

Still, if this _was_ the end, Bon Bon would have Lyra, and for that, she was happy.

* * *

>"Alright you lot, come on, move on, keep it going!" With a clap of its- hir - hands, the Chaos God Slaanesh rushed more drones and ponies into the throne room, with Trixie by its-_hir_ side to reassure the populace that it was not a trap or a bad idea to listen to a Chaos God.

Normally that would be hard to sell, but thanks to Slaanesh's tearing off the doors, everybeing walking into the room could see what they were saying was true and that they _could_ help.

Slaanesh had forced the first batch of surviving drones into the throne room before grabbing Trixie to find more ponies, with her being the reassuring carrot to the terrifying stick that was Slaanesh, to help them save the Emperor.

And it was _working!_

While they might not have enough emotions stored up to vanquish the Smooze completely, the positive emotions from all the beings in the room linked together was driving it back, ever so slightly.

It was not much, with over seventy beings working together the Smooze only losing small ground against their attempts but they were giving their Emperor a chance to win, a chance to _live!_

Then without warning Slaanesh groaned in pain and vanished.

* * *

>Gleaming Shield found herself yelling once more, with Tzeentch laughing beside her as it gave more outstanding orders that were keeping them one step ahead the enemy, and most importantly; her crew were in very high spirits. She wasn't sure of it exactly, but it seemed at some point during the night Flash Sentry had proposed to Gilda to which the griffon shouted about bucking time. Hopefully they had a soldier take over their stations before they started snogging each other over.

Tzeentch had to have fired a wedding cake at them for a _reason_ after all.

Right?

Shaking her head, she order the _Excelsior_ to fire when Tzeentch suddenly swore in pain as he vanished.

* * *

>The Smooze smiled wickedly from above them, the purple goo dancing around the body with glee.

_"Thanks, foolish ponies_"

_"You led me here_"

_"Your Emperor will fail_"

_"And you'll tremble with fear"_"

Khorne growled, pawing the ground as if to charge "I don't think so, you anno-" but was caught off when the Smooze slammed a wave of magic into Khorne, knocking him into a wall.

"HEY!" Slaanesh shouted, throwing some stone rumble at the Smooze above. "Only _I_ can slap Khorne around!"

_"Watch as I_"

_"Conquer all_"

_"The mighty do fall_"

_"You've no chance to prevail"_"

Ducking and laughing, the Smooze grabbed the thrown stone and shot it straight back at Slaanesh while firing Smooze to entrap the pony.

Slaanesh would have been stoned to death if not for Nurgle leaping up and tackling Slaanesh out of the way. Unfortunately, Nurgle got hit on the side with several large stones, knocking him into a corner of the room painfully.

_"That's right,_"

_"Old man, cry_"

_"Just curl up and die_"

_"All you will do is fail_"

_"You imbecile ponies_"

_"Think you can win?_"

_"You're nothing to me_"

_"You'd better give in"_"

Slaanesh was furious now, turning many of the rumble into sharp small swords. "NO ONE TOUCHES THEM BUT _ME!_" Slaanesh roared, throwing every single sword at the Smooze. The Smooze didn't even move as every single sword pierced itself but it laughed.

Suddenly, the remains of Slaanesh's scarf tightened around the pony's neck as it began to float into the sky.

_ "Horny colt_

_ Preen and prance_

_ And dance, pervert, dance_

_ You've no chance to prevail"_

The Smooze laughed as it slammed the asphyxiating pony into the side of a wall, with Slaanesh body slumping over.

"YOU THINK YOU CAN TAKE US ON AND WIN!? I AM TZEENTCH, GOD OF CHANGE AND BEHOLDER OF THE PINK!"

_ "Delusion-_

_ Al foal_

_ I've total control_

_ All you can do is fail"_

The Smooze laughed as it launched the blades that Slaanesh created, and threw them at the pink stallion. Backing up to avoid being skewered, Tzeentch found himself back against a wall with a balcony hanging above. The Smooze laughed as it ripped off the balcony and sent it crashing down on Tzeentch's head.

_ "The cripple, the coward_

_ It's all down to you_

_ But soon, my dear friends_

_ You'll both be dead too"_

Ciaphas glared, shoving Lemon to the side as he flapped his wings once and then disappeared.

_ BANG._

The Smooze laughed as a bit of leaked to the floor as Ciaphas appeared on the other side of the room with a sharp knife in his hoof.

_ "Simple fool_

_ You're no threat_

_ What, are you upset?_

_ You've no chance to prevail_

_ I'm invin-_

_ Cible_

_ I'll swallow you whole_

_All you will do is fail"_

The ground under Ciaphas exploded, sending the pegasus across the room and into a pillar with a sickening thud.

The Smooze then danced its way over to Lemon, smiling hideously at his prone form.

_"The warrior, defeated_

_With mightier force_

_The old fool was put in his place_

_The lecherous pervert_

_Fell prey to the noose_

_The idiot got egg on his face_

_"The coward resisted his betters_

_By fighting us, death's what you choose_

_You'll never win here_

_Your end's drawing near_

_For we're the all-powerful Smooze!"_

Something inside Lemon snapped. Snorting as he forced himself to his hooves, he summoned his magic.

"SHUT YOUR DAMN MOUTH!" Lemon sent a beam of magic against the Smooze's face as he dashed forwards, temporarily blinding it.

"Those are _WONDERFUL_ people, far better than I can _ever_ hope to be!" The Smooze laughter turned bitter as it shook its head to clear its vision, sending beams of magic towards the looper.

"Khorne inspired people with true, power, _honest_ words!" Lemon danced away from the bolts of magic, adrenaline surging through his body.

"Nurgle, _always_ giving his own gifts to any who would pass by, always thinking of other in his own unique _kind_ way!" A form was planning in Lemon's mind, something that he was dimly aware of. He just knew he needed to get _closer_.

"Slaanesh might be a self-centered bastard that may care for himself above all, but _shi_ does care for those close to hir heart!" Jumping over a beam of Smooze magic, he waved his front right leg at the pony shape Smooze blob. "This scarf meant a lot to hir, but _without_ batting an eye, shi _generously_ gave this is up for me!"

"Tzeentch is one of the smartest people I know, and with all that horrible knowledge he's picked up, he learned the best way to deal with monsters like you," Lemon snorted at the furious Smooze, "And that's to take the piss away from freaks like _YOU_ and _LAUGH!_"

The Smooze laughter turned vicious, firing beam around the room in attempts to hit the unicorn now, throwing stone and rubble at him with most hitting the same spot in the center of the room.

"Ciaphas is _NO COWARD!_" He yelled ducking under the beam of blue magic, and pushing himself over the black magic and diving behind the piece of the wall that the Smooze threw just a few second ago. "He went back again and again to save other people and unlike any sane person, instead of running away, he stayed by my side and help while knowing fully well the odds he was against! I can think of no one more _LOYAL_ than _**CIAPHAS CANE, THE GREATEST HERO THE IMPERIUM EVER KNEW!**_"

_"Cease your prattle_"

_"You're done_"

"They are wonderful and _no one!"_

_"You pitiful squirt_"

_"IS GOING TO HURT!"_ Lemon shouted, seeing that his plan had worked, that there was a massive pile of stone and rubble in the middle of the room.

_"Now say goodbye!"_

Lemon ran up the debris, blood flowing through his veins like fire. He ignored the pain in his leg, ducking the last blots of magics trying to strike him down. Leaping towards the Smooze, pull back his left hoof, shouting, "_**ANY OF MY**_"

_"Did you think you could run from_"

_"Your imminent ends?"_

_"You cannot defeat me!"_

_"**"FRIENDS!"**_" he declared as his hoof made contact with the Smooze's face.

And then everything went white.

* * *

>CRACK!

* * *

>Bon Bon gasped at the massive rainbow extending from the center of the Everfree forest upwards to the very heavens.

"That was-"

"So beautiful."

"That's it, Lyra." Bon Bon said, nodding her head. Then suddenly, the words clicked in her head. Snapping her head to the side, she saw her marefriend staring right at her, tears running down her face and her eyes were no longer white but the most wonderful shade of yellow she ever saw. "Lyra?"

Before she could get another word out, the seapony grabbed her and pulled her in for a kiss. There might have been a list of the eight most wonderful kisses in the Imperium, but this one easily blew them all away. For a moment, there was nothing but just them, for an eternity of time there was only the two of them in existence.

As the moment ended, and the two pulled away, Bon Bon was aware that everypony was applauding loudly for the two, cheering for them. There was only one thing she could say to all of this.

"Shoo bee doo."

* * *

>"Reports, Gilda Sentry," Gleaming Shield said with a grin, looking at the two that she kinda married on the spot. She wasn't sure if they they were pissed or not, but she was going to attend their actual wedding if they had a 'proper' one. Then again, she would be very annoyed if somebeing pulled the same stunt with her and Bolero as she had been a very strict diet and she was going to walk down that aisle in her white wedding dress that she damn well deserved to wear! "Status of the enemy fleet?"

"Gone sir," Glida snapped a salute to her, her other wing wrapped around Flash Sentry. It wasn't exactly regulation behaviour, but after surviving the onslaught and the night, everybeing deserved to be happy and the rules could be bent just this once. "All destroyed in that rainbow beam emitting from the Everfree forest."

"Very good," Gleaming nodded her head, unbuckling herself. "Please put -"

"~leaming? Can you hear me Gleamy?" The voice caused the Warmistress of the Imperium to gasp and look up at the static screen.

"Bolero?" she asked in a shaky voice as the picture began to clear up. "Is that you?"

"Sure is love," The alicorn smiling down at her made her legs weak, her face red and heart race. "Just had to make you are still there."

"Bolero I-"

"Warmistress!" Flash Sentry snapped to attention, holding a hoof to his head. "I would like to remind you that you have served your time on board and that you are officially off duty."

Biting back a smile, Gleaming Shield let Flash Sentry take over acting duties, knowing he would make sure that everyone else was alright. Walking to her quarters to continue her talk with Bolero in private, Gleaming Shield had only one thought on her mind.

Please let nothing bad like this happen on my wedding!_

* * *

>Trixie shook herself awake, vaguely aware somebeing was holding her tightly.

"Good morning, my dear friend," Chrysalis said softly, stretching out slightly. "It seems that morning has come, but did we managed to save the Emperor?"

"No, my little ponies, for another did that task," a loud, booming voice from behind them caused the tired mares to jump. "But without you, I would have been lost anyways, so I must thank you two for trying beyond hope."

The two of them turned around to see the joyful alicorn standing amidst the sleeping ponies, changelings and others races.

"Do you feel it?" the Emperor laughed, filling the mares with a sense of joy. "The Warp feels purier than it has felt in a very long time." Looking out the window, he stared at the fading massive rainbow beam of light. "And I believe I know why." Flexing out his wings and grinning impishly, he tilted his head. "If you will accompany me, ladies, I believe I have to have a talk with my student."

Trixie snuggled her way out of Chrysalis' forelegs and stood by the Emperor and her oldest friend as they teleported away.

* * *

>The first thing Lemon felt was pain as he came back to the world of the living. Everything was sore as hell, his wings stiff with exhaustion and his right leg screaming at him from the sheer pain he had put it through.

The second thing was that he was laying down on his back with his horn scraping against the floor.

Before he could even open his eyes, he heard a loud gasp as someone grabbed his head.

"Our saviour is awake!" A voice that sounded familiar shouted, cupping his head. "We are forever in your debt, but please, allow me to bestow my thanks unto you, dear knight."

Before Lemon knew what happened, a pair of lips met his. Flicking his eyes open he caught a hint of cyan which relaxed him.

After a few second, a much more familiar voiced giggled from behind him. "Sister please, I know we hadn't much chance to do much while we were trapped, but I do think suffocating our liberator is a poor choice."

"Oh Nighty," the mare above him giggled, Lemon trying to blink his eyes clearer. "I doubt I could do that, but I suppose I should let him."

Finally clear his eyes, Lemon saw the dark navy alicorn look longingly at him from above, another mare with a black coat standing a few feet away.

He had kissed Luna. With Nyx standing nearby. Oh buck him sideways, this was going to be bad when he told Nyx about this loop.

Folding his wings inwards, Lemon rolled his head to the side and noticed something was off.

"Wings?" He knew he didn't have them before he entered the room, but why did he have them now? The last thing he could remember was punching the Smooze, and the only way he as a unicorn could get wings was to do something beyond impossible, which meant - "I became an alicorn by punching the Smooze?!_"

"And eliminating all traces of it, Lemon Rush," a chuckling voice said from a distance. "I do not know fully yet, but you have somehow quite literally punched the Smooze to death." The Emperor snickered, Trixie and Chrysalis beside him. "And of course, the Elements decided to be flashy this time."

Lemon looked at himself and saw that instead of his usual coat, he was wearing golden power armor edged with silver flames that burned constantly. The segment for his right leg was off to the side, showing his injured pastern for some reason. Feeling his head, he felt a crown in the shape of a wolf, his cutie mark.

Element of Magic. He, Leman Russ, was the Element of Magic.

Go figure.

"I am very proud of you, my dear student." The Emperor smiled, nuzzling his student. "Now let's meet your friends that helped you win the nîgâ€|" The Emperor's voiced trailed off as five ponies began to stir, very distinct markers hanging from their necks. "Th- the Chaos Gods are the Elements?!_" he snapped, his horn glowing as he stepped towards the still very disoriented ponies. "No, I do not know how they gained the Elements but I will not stand for this." Taking a step closer to them, he lowered his horn as he summoned his most powerful spells. He would be done with these monsters once and for all.

"No," Lemon snapped, stepping in front of the Emperor and flaring his wings. "I will not let you do this!"

"Lemon, you know who they are." The Emperor stared at him, eyeing him coldly. "And what they can do if left unchecked."

"I do, and I do not care." Lemon said, lowering his horn, pawing the ground with his good hoof.

"You would willingly fight me for them?" The Emperor looked at his student with a schooled face which hid his hope and building pride. "You know as well as I do that you have no chance against me. Your magic was never that grand, you are greatly injured and unused to the new magic and form that being an alicorn gives you. You would toss all that you just gained for them?"

"Yes," Lemon growled, his coat standing on edge and the silver fire on his power armor flaring out. "Now and always."

The Emperor had heard enough. "Very well then." The Emperor then turned his head away to look at Trixie and Chrysalis. "Ladies, I do hope you would not mind if I ask you to alert the hospital that we have some special patients for them. I will be sending Lemon and his friends to you shortly, I will just need Luna and Nightmare Moon's help in removing the Powersuits of Harmony as not to alarm the citizens."

Turning his head, the Emperor had joyful tears running down his face. "I am so very proud of you, my wonderful student." Leaning over, the Emperor of Ponykind pulled his student into a deep hug. "You have grown by leaps and bounds this night, achieving things I would never have thought possible and doing things I have hoped for you to do for so very long. Once we are done here, I am sure you will amaze everyone at the palace by this wonderful change."

"Actually," Lemon said, blushing a bit from the praise. Some of it was due to his unAwake self but still part of it rang true for him despite how long he had been looping for. "I was thinking of staying here, in Ponyville, with them." Lemon nodded his head to the Chaos Gods and Ciaphas. "Can't just abandon them, now can I?"

The Emperor only shook his head and laughed. "And then you do something like that, Lemon." Pulling him in close for another hug, the Emperor ruffled his mane. "How much higher will you fly, my dear student?"

Lemon was jostled by his loopers...his companions, who were smiling and laughing softly. Smiling himself, Lemon looked at them and turned to address the Emperor. "I do not know, but every day is a new day for the impossible to happen. And I've got the best ponies to make sure that happens."

* * *

>"And that's the story of our Nightmare Moon solo loop!" Lemon said to the table of his looping friends, Nyx leaning into his side. She wasn't as mad as he had thought she would be, only giving him the Look that made him apologize immediately for kissing an unAwake Luna.

Pulling his girlfriend closer with his wing, he used his magic to lift the mug of ginger ale to his mouth. "And that's why I can go alicorn now," he chuckled, nuzzling Nyx's face. "So Shining, I expect Fenrir and Sleipnir to make us go through a Prince brother loop sooner or later."

"I'm looking forward to it, squirt!" Shining shouted, nuzzling Cadence.

"I'm very interested in your designs, Slaanesh," Rarity said, looking at the table of grinning Chaos Gods. "I wonder if we could mix our styles."

Smiling, Slaanesh took a piece of paper and began to do quick sketches while eyeing Nyx. Slaanesh floated the paper over to Rarity, but Twilight's curiosity made her grab it. In an instant, her mane went grey and the purple strip turned snow white.

"You are never to put my daughter in this!" she snapped, her wings twitching in anger. Rarity rolled her eyes at her overprotective friend and just chuckled at the design. A tad more risqué than she would normally do, but this would be very interesting to make when Twilight wasn't so uptight.

"Now I am curious about this," Lemon said, trying to float the paper over when he was pelted by rolled papers from the Chaos Gods' table. "Oi!"

"When you grow up, squirt, then you can see it!" Khorne roared, slapping the table in good spirits.

"Otherwise, we'll unleash the Little Mother on ya!" Slaanesh laughed, swinging his mug in the air and spilling some of the alcohol onto the floor.

"And I'll sick BB on you!" Lemon grinned cheekily at his, watching Slaanesh meep loudly before ducking under the table.

Groaning, Slaanesh grabbed the bowls of peanuts and started to throw them at the giggling stallion. Nurgle, Khorne and Tzeentch reached over to the other tables to give his some more ammo while booing loudly.

"BB?" Rainbow asked, watching the Chaos God duck again at the name being mentioned. "What the-"

"I'll tell you if Slaanesh doesn't mind." Lemon said, poking his head above the table with Nyx still beside him.

"You can tell, if you get us some more booooooooooooooze!" Slaanesh giggled before falling onto empty tables.

"Fine, fine." Smiling, Lemon pushed himself out of his seat and began to walk over to Big Mac when he was suddenly hugged from behind.

Looking up, he saw the one mare he loved more than Nyx above him. Leaning into Fluttershy's forelegs, she gave him a kiss just above his horn.

"I am so proud of you, Lemon, so very proud." Fluttershy had tears in her eyes, her wings closing around the two of them.

"Thank you," Lemon happily said, eyes closed and content.

"You know why?" she asked him, nuzzling him like only a mother could do.

Turning his head, Lemon looked at the rowdy table of the Chaos his loopers_ and nodded his head. "I do, Little Mother, I do."

* * *

>AN:

Too long to fit in other chapters.

>(Sorry about Slaanesh pushing the rating... but, you know. Slaanesh.)

My Little Argent: Music is Magic Part 2

_Ponyville, Saturday._

What appeared to be chaos just happened, as Saturday was a good day for abruptness and randomness to occur on the same day, especially if your location was Ponyville. In this case, the abrupt chaos on Saturday took the form of a titan bursting from the ground, a large amount of buildings and foliage sailing into the sky and landing who knows where.

The titan rose and rose until it rose no more and formed into a more solid state as it poured from the ground. The titan was a strange humanoid yet legless creature made of the earth the ponies stood on. Red veins of lava were engraved onto its skin, and the same fiery substance formed what could be described as hair. Four angry red eyes stared at the ponies who stared back in awe and fear.

Pinkie Pie simply walked between the beast and Ponyville's civilians. "Okay everypony, repeat after me." She took a deep breath before screaming. **"RUN FOR YOUR LIVES!"****

And so all of Ponyville screamed and ran for their lives as the beast roared louder than a dragon and tore into the town with a mighty swing of it's arm. Just as suddenly the ground ripped apart to allow vines and brambles to emerge, hunting the ponies that ran.

* * *

>A mountain

Two hundred miles away from Ponyville, Twilight Sparkle, Zecora, and Symphonic Void watched in horror as the mountain creature burst from the ground, trees and buildings flying into the sky like they were birds enjoying the freedom of flight. "What kind of creature do I behold, this mighty beast with power untold!?" Zecora asked.

"And that would be my nemesis Akash'Bhuta." Symphonic Void replied. "The embodiment of chaos and destruction in nature."

With a thud, several of the launched items fell next to the trio. One of the items that had landed was the ruins of Twilight's tree.

Twilight begun to shake violently, and Symphonic Void swore by the Virtuoso's that came before him that she was starting to smolder. "Uh, Twilight?"

"I WAS FINALLY ABLE TO RELAX AFTER THAT SOAP OPERA LOOP!" She shouted. One Crown of Magic, one ascension and one teleport later, Twilight was gone in a flash of magic.

"Dare I ask?" Void turned to Zecora, who seemed to be ready for what was going to happen. As if it happened on a regular basis.

"Akash'Bhuta I'd hate to be, for she has ruined Twilight's Tree." the zebra explained. "A fate most dangerous and I know why, for know that beast will now soon die."

The gigantic burst of magical energy shaped into a laser beam that tore across the landscape and into Akash'Bhuta explained all Symphonic Void needed to know.

* * *

>The Pits of Tartarus_

The gaunt red centaur sat in his cell, hunched over and leaning against the wards that kept him in his cell. He turned to his new cellmate, oddly calm in her cell. "So, how did you wind up in here?"

The creature roared.

"No kidding? Celestia's standards must have fallen far if destroying a tree was worthy of imprisonment in Tartarus."

* * *

>139.2 (Kris Overstreet)

Sing a song of six bits

>A pony named Pinkie PieBaked four and twenty cupcakes,
>Please don't ask me why.

They giggle if you're friendly

>And explode if you are not.Isn't that a silly dish
>To serve in Canterlot?

Rarity, Rarity, quite contrary,

>How went your fashion show?With rude reviews and hurled horseshoes;
>To the ice cream she doth go.

There was a crooked pegasus

>With golden crooked eyesShe flew a crooked flight path,
>Each trip was a surprise.

Hoity Toity sat on the wall.

>Hoity Toity had a great fall.Celestia's horses and Celestia's mares
>COULDN'T CARE LESS.

Fluttershy has a little hare,

>Its fur as white as snow.And what it does when she's not there,

>You really don't want to know.

How now, zebra, have you any brews?

>Three, sir, three, sir, yes I do;One for the frog, one for his croak,
>And one to cure fools who walk through poison joke.

This is the tree library.

>This is the dragon who lives in the tree library.This is the owl who aids the dragon who lives in the tree library.

>These are the books reshelfed by the owl who aids the dragon who lives in the tree library.

This is the unicorn who's kind of a geek
>Who reads the booksReshelfed by the owl
>Who aids the dragonWho lives in the tree library.

This is the farmer who lies never speaks
>Who rescued the unicorn who's kind of a geekWho reads, etc.

This is the swift pony whose tricks are unique
>Whose rival's the farmer who a lie never speaksWho rescued the unicorn who's kind of a geek
>Who reads, etc.

This is the pegasus who's really quite meek
>Best friends with the pony whose tricks are uniqueWhose rival's the farmer who a lie never speaks
>Who rescued the unicorn who's kind of a geekWho reads,
etc.

This is the seamstress whose designs are tres chic
>Who spas with the pegasus who's really quite meekBest friends with the pony whose tricks are unique
>Whose rival's the farmer who a lie never speaksWho rescued the unicorn who's kind of a geek
>Who reads, etc.

This is the pink pony who acts like a freak
>And flusters the seamstress whose designs are tres chicWho spas with the pegasus who's really quite meek
>Best friends with the pony whose tricks are uniqueWhose rival's the farmer who a lie never speaks
>Who rescued the unicorn who's kind of a geekWho reads, etc. etc. etc.

Twilight the Sparkle
>Lay down her ink-quillAnd said this to Rari-ti:
>"The Loops at this timeMade us nursery rhymes,
>And don't you dare ask me why!"

* * *

>139.3 (Evilhumour with KrisOverstreet editing skills)

Big Mac blinked in surprise as a furious _Pinkie_ _Pie_ stormed into his bar, glaring angrily around. Every looper that had any remote survival instincts fled the bar immediately, with Rapid Hooves in the lead. "G-g-gosh sakes, Pinkie," the bartending stallion stammered, pouring a glass of Pinkie's usual rough-Loop tonic, "what's got you loco all of a sudden?"

"I looped into a Hub loop." She muttered, grinding her teeth as she slammed back a drink. "I saw the _worst_ show _ever_. And it had THIS in it!" She pulled a music player out of her mane and turned it on:

_Happy happy joy joy, happy happy joy,
>Happy happy joy joy, happy happy joy...

"That show made a mockery of Laughter and Happiness," Pinkie snarled. "And if I _ever_ loop into _that_ world, they will get _full_ Chaos Goddess of Parties, Fun Lord of Sith, Pinkamena _BUCKING_ Diane Pie!" she roared before storming out of the bar.

"Do y'all want your drink?" Mac called after her.

The cellar doors slammed shut hard enough to knock one off its hinges.

"Eenope," said Big Mac, and slammed the shot himself.

* * *

>139.4 (Evilhumour)

"Are you _sure_ you want to do this Lemon?" Nyx looked around, knowing how much trouble they could get in if someone were to walk in.

"Ye-yes Nyx," Lemon blushed, pulling his wings in close as he looked off to the side. "I want to do it and you're the only one that I trust to do it with."

Nyx blushed at her boyfriend's praise. Taking a moment to calm herself, she used her magic to lift Lemon above her. Slowly, inch by inch, he came closer to the goal, closer to that treasure pot they both loved.

Licking his lips, Lemon reached out with his hooves, his wings beating rapidly almost caused Nyx to cancel her magic out from the breeze.

And then, suddenly, the light flicked on as two ponies walked into the room.

"What are you two doing?!" Fluttershy shouted, causing Nyx and Lemon to meep loudly. With a startled shout, Lemon grabbed the beloved treasure pot in his hooves, with his wings beating to keep him upright when Twilight's magic grabbed him by the scruff of the neck and carried him over to Fluttershy with Nyx going over to Twilight in the same manner.

"Um...nothing momma?" Nyx tried to give her mother her big puppy dog eyes, with Lemon doing the same to Fluttershy. Sadly, neither attempt worked with both mares glaring at their kids.

"I told you Lemon, cookies are for _after_ dinner!" Fluttershy scolded the flinching pegasus colt, with Twilight pulling out lecture number three-four-oh-two-dash-one for her daughter. "We are both _very_ disappointed in you two!" That caused Lemon to whimper, proving how much of a mamma's boy he was, with Nyx folding inwards next to him. "Now Lemon, go to your room, I will be in there in a moment to talk to you."

"You too Nyx." Twilight was a bit miffed that Fluttershy stole a chance to give her looping daughter a proper scolding.

With a sadden look on their young faces, the two foals went to the bedroom and closed the door.

Instantly, their faces perked up. Nyx turned to face her boyfriend and smiled.

"You still have it?"

Lemon responded by pulling the cookie jar out of his subspace pocket and handed over a cookie to Nyx.

"My hero!" Nyx happily said, kissing his cheek before taking a bite of the cookie.

* * *

>"So you two wish to be proper thieves, right?" Sly looked at the two sitting on the couch in their hideout, with Murry and Bentley smirking behind him with Camerlita barely holding back her laughter.

The two looked at each before nodding.

"Just one thing, before I teach you anything, you promise me that your moms won't skin me for this?" Sly asked in a seriously scared voice.

They both nodded their heads at this.

"Good," Sly smiled at the winged unicorn and wolf sitting next to each other. "Now Nyx, Leman, you want to learn how to steal cookies without getting caught?" Sly smiled at the two kids, sitting down in front of them while rubbing his paws together. "Let's begin with the basics, shall we?"

* * *

>Lemon looked at Nyx.

"You know, maybe Pinkie Pie was not the best choice."

Nyx nodded her head.

"But Nyx, can you tell me what we were thinking in stealing Celestia's cakes?!"

"I don't know Lemon, I just don't know." Nyx sighed, kicking a rock away. "But hey, first time out on the moon; you've lasted longer than most loopers in not getting sent here!" Nyx smiled as Lemon chuckled, hugging her with his wing as they looked down at Equestria from their lunar time out together.

* * *

>139.5 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"Twi', can we talk a' minute."

Twilight looked up from her copy of Daring Do and the Filliosopher Stone. Applejack stood in the doorway, seeming uncomfortable. Shrugging, Twilight set the book down and asked. "Sure Applejack.

What's up?"

"Well, do ya think we're relyin' too much on our outside abilities? Ah mean, if a problem arises these days, we just go Alicorn a'lot and beat the stuffin' out'a anythin'."

Twilight shrugged. "Well, we don't want to let any one thing get too stale with time repeating itself."

Applejack shook her head. "Ah know that. But still, just the other day, ah saw Fluttershy stop the stampedin' cows by circlin' them up with trees til' they calmed down with her druid powers, Pinkie's been experimentin' with her warp goddess level parties, and Dash has pretty much takin' over running the weather worldwide. Don' get me started on Rarity and her enchanted dress business, 'Bloom snuck up on me with one of her invisibility cloaks. Bark knows Ah can't remember the last time we had a regular, baseline loop without one of us changin' somethin'."

Twilight tilted her head. "So...you want a perfectly baseline loop, is that it?"

Applejack gritted her teeth. "No! Ah just...can't we have a loop where we don't ascend or use abilities outside Equestria?"

"What brought this on?" Asked Twilight.

The mare lowered her head. "Mah extended family, every time they visit and see Ah keep hangin' out with ya'll when yah do those out of loop powers, they look at me funny."

Applejack looked clearly uncomfortable, meaning this happened enough times that it broke the pony's back, to use a phrase. The purple unicorn nodded. "I'm sure we can do that. I'll talk to the others."

* * *

>After Applejack had left, Twilight sighed and pulled out a picture of her mother and father. A single tear slid down her snout as she slid the picture back into her pocket. Celestia, by this point, was more of a mother to her than even her own mother. However, her parents were still her parents and she still loved them. Silently, she wondered to herself, would they ever start looping?

She knew that most of the other loopers in Equestria were in a similar situation...except maybe Dash and Scoots since their parentage were constantly in flux. With such a large family, Applejack probably hurt worst of all since family was the most important thing to her. However, Twilight still hoped that her family start looping one day, even if it was a bit selfish. Maybe after Applejack's self imposed limitation loop, Twilight would quit being Celestia's student after redeeming Nightmare Moon and live with her parents for a loop, re-establish her connection to them. Heck, one loop, she may establish connections with all the other loopers' parents or siblings, whichever they had in the hopes that they start looping too.

* * *

>(Several Loops later)

Twilight awoke to an elderly voice saying, "Get yourself up, Twilight Apple! Family reunion's upon us, and Summer Sun waits for no-mare."

The purple pony's gaze landed on Granny Smith, felt her head, and sure enough there was no horn. She pulled out a brown cowpony hat, put it on her head and began setting her plan into action.

* * *

>139.6 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"TWILIGHT SPARKLE!"

Twilight awoke to the screeching of one Pinkamena Diane Pie poking her head out from behind the tree she was resting under. Pinkie's eyes were narrowed as she leaned in close to Twilight and asked. "Were you awake my last loop? Were you responsible for _that_?"

Having absolutely no idea what she was talking about, however sensing this was somehow her baseline self's fault, she asked. "What...happened during your last loop?"

Pinkie circled Twilight as she began. "I was all set to have a deluxe super party for your arrival in Ponyville, since I haven't had one of those in forever, so when I step into your library to begin preparations, I see you there already getting preparations started. I thought it was weird, but decided to go along with it anyway. I gave the looping code, but you didn't give the right response, so I figure you're not awake. But then it doesn't stop there. After we defeat Black Snootie, I jump back to Ponyville to start preparations for another deluxe super party, when I see Spike finishing up decorations for the party. Cakes are baked, pin the tail pony posters are up, even the hot sauce practical jokes are there! I figure it's just coincidence, but it's like that every party for the whole loop. I even tried setting up parties for people on the other side of the world, Gilda or Chrysy, but lists for party preparations were already sent out a week prior to the party and I just get there when the preparations are complete-"

By this time, Pinkie is almost hyperventilating. Twilight pulled her into a hug and patted her on the back. "Shhhh...It's alright Pinkie, it's Ok. No, I wasn't awake for that loop. Maybe one of the others were awake and was playing a prank."

Pinkie suddenly pulled away and started bouncing, her good mood restored, "Oh, Oh, you think it was Chrysy? Dissy might have been able to pull it off. Or Dashy like when she disguised herself as future you and appeared in your Castle tree, the day that one loop ended and said to do all those crazy things to have Daring Do write a new novel for the next expansion set for her blackmail collection. Or-"

Twilight blinked, then reacted. "WAIT, THAT WAS DASH?!"

Pinkie put her hoof to her mouth and muttered, "Oopsie!"

The pony ran behind the tree and disappeared, leaving a stunned Twilight behind. A couple strands of her hair popped out. However, she did not once raise her voice, which was the most terrible. "Dash, next loop we spend together, you're getting a lecture you can't sleep through or ignore."

* * *

>Elsewhere in the Multiverse

A certain blue skinned Turian paused and shivered all over. Shepard noticed this and asked, "Trouble, Darrus?"

The turian looked at Shepard with an annoyed glance, "I told you to call me Dash. And I think someone just placed a curse on me..."

* * *

>139.7 (RowanEx)

Twilight opened her eyes, then, looked at the ground. More like, a huge flat solid brick. Sleipnir told her about a new Safe-Mode loop, and Twilight rolled her eyes after realizing that THIS was that loop.

She didn't notice Pinkie Pie creating a big cake, and after realizing what she made, Twilight's eyes shrank to pinpricks and her jaw slacked open.

"Pinkie, how did you do that?!" Twilight asked.

"It's simple!" Pinkie gave Twilight a stamp-shaped object which she picked up, "Use the Stamp Tool! Build everything! It's free!"

That last sentence ringed a bit from a hub loop she had before. Twilight looked at the Stamp Tool, Pinkie's big cake, and the flat brick. Then, it was clear.

'Roblox?' Twilight thought, 'I thought it... huh.'

Twilight spawned a Roblox version of her house, in front of Pinkie's cake which she began to "eat" by poking it with her nose.

This was going to be fun, until Rainbow Dash zoomed by, riding a poptart cat that left a trail of rainbows.

She hoped that Pinkie wasn't the owner of the empty Place they're in. At least she let the Stamp Tool in, which means build all the time.

And so, Twilight Sparkle, knowing the loop's abilities, built 500 libraries.

"And the books aren't the same!" she declared.

* * *

>139.8 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Twilight stood outside Golden Oaks Library, staring at a changeling resting in a box she had just opened. Said box was delivered for her birthday, which won't take place for the next six months. Her left eye was quirked at the bug. "You're not fooling anyone, changeling."

The changeling spoke in a monotone voice, "Please refer to the instruction manual for further input."

Rolling her eyes, Twilight removed the paper from the box and started reading. After a few minutes, she started laughing and cast a simple spell. Twilight's horn began to glow a golden hue for a lie detector spell as she said, "Enter registration mode."

"Thank you for purchasing your changeling doll. We hope you have an amazing, magical experience with all the adventures the changeling doll will give you."

The golden color surrounding her horn glowed red, indicating that the changeling was lying. Twilight rolled her eyes again. The changeling continued. "In order to make sure your changeling doll isn't stolen or used by unwanted ponies, please insert a D.N.A sample into the changeling doll's mouth. It is recommended to use a strand of hair."

Of course, Twilight was curious just how far this changeling was willing to take this farce, so she gave him a strand of hair. She was prompted to give him her name, to which said did so. "Twilight Sparkle, please pick an objective for me. What am I intended for?"

Twilight thought for a second, when an evil idea came along, "Research subject."

To the changeling's credit, he seemed to adapt quickly, "Error. Purpose not recognized. Please enter valid use for changeling doll. Options include bodyguard, friend, lover, child, parent, servant and slave."

Twilight rolled her eyes again, feeling she would be doing this a lot this loop, "How about statue."

The changeling replied. "Optional mode accepted. Changeling will now enter statue mode. To exit statue mode, you may say, 'enter reprogramming mode,' and change the purpose as you see fit. In order to choose an appropriate statue appearance, please connect your horn to your changeling doll's horn."

This was getting too interesting to stop, so she shielded every part of her mind until the only image accessible was of a stone statue of a royal guardsman. To be extra safe, she removed the image of the spear from her mind, giving him only a set of armor.

With that, the changeling took on the requested appearance and stood completely at attention. Twilight smirked as she pulled out several saddlebags and started loading them with bricks, then placing them on the 'statue.' With that finished, Twilight called for Spike. "I need you to bring the others who are awake here. I will stay here and watch our friend."

* * *

>How long have I stood here, unmoving...unending pain of my back and being forced to stand wide awake, The changeling pondered, even now not moving for fear of being discovered. It was Rainbow Dash's turn to watch over him. Every second of every day, he was watched by at least one pony if not more, all of them element bearers. Every time she said an error, Twilight was called in and cast a healing spell, whether it was his feet or back. However his consciousness was even now waning from being awake for so long. He never wrote in an error code for the optional statue mode. He shouldn't have latched onto that opportunity to infiltrate. But what was he supposed to do? Twilight thought about dissecting him. He figured a statue couldn't be any worse. Boy was he wrong.

His mental facilities were spent, he was unable to even announce a simple "Error Code," as he wobbled a bit. His eyes were drooping under his facade as the wobbling got worse. _Is that the ground rising to meet me_, he pondered.

* * *

>The changeling slammed face first into the floor, the saddlebags crashing down and denting the wood beneath. Immediately, the changeling reverted to its original form. Rainbow sipped another Mountain Dew and checked her watch, "Buck, that's some dedication to your act. Two weeks and five hours, much longer than I figured possible. You got my respect, little guy."

She pulled off the brick filled saddlebags and picked up the changeling, making for the door and Ponyville Hospital.

* * *

>139.9 (Detective Ethan Redfield)**
>What if the Wibbly Lever was the Wrong Lever?

It was not one of the doctor's best days. First, Rory drops the thermal coupling causing the Tardis to crash land inside herself resulting in a space loop. Then when things can't possibly get worse, a second Amy Pond steps through the door of the Tardis, declaring things just got more complicated, and starts flirting with Amy 1. Now, he was trapped in a space AND time loop. With the departure of Amy 1 into the police box, Pond Couple 2 exited the Tardis doors. Resisting the urge to rub his forehead, he shouted at the flirting Ponds, "Stop...that...you two into the police box NOW!"

With their departure, he prevented any further Ponds from entering his craft by ordering them to stay still, "I'm setting up a controlled temporal implosion, it's the only way to reset the Tardis-but unless I find exactly the right lever to control the implosion...we're all gonna die!"

The Ponds winced, Amy deciding to speak, "You don't know...which lever..."

The doctor's concern started fading as he almost rubbed his hands together, "No...but I'm about to find out."

The Tardis door flew open with a flourish, a triumphant doctor shouting, "The Wibbly Lever!"

The doctor raced to the console, "The...Wibbly Lever, thank you!"

Lifting the oddly designed lever up and slamming it down, the device made several beeps reminiscent of a classic arcade game. His task finished, he raced across the control room and into the TARDIS doors. The light from the TARDIS Exterior Shell started flashing white, a grinding noise resounding through the room. And then the tardis started shaking violently, the cloister bell ringing. The doctor ran to the levers, a panicked expression on his face, "Oh dear!"

The TARDIS central console glowed brilliant yellow for a second, then erupted into an ever expanding fireball which consumed everything.

* * *

>The doctor's eyes opened as he jerked backwards, "What?!"

His head turned from side to side, his eyes scanned the immediate area, confusion evident on his face. Apparently, he was in an apple orchard, in a strangely vibrant world where everything was slightly off like he was in a cartoons. His mind immediately asked where was his TARDIS? If the TARDIS did explode like he remembered, why wasn't he dead? If it had all been a dream, where was he? His hand withdrew his sonic screwdriver and began scanning the area...only for his eyes to finally land on the screwdriver in hand. It was the one he held from his 10th incarnation that had been destroyed in an earlier adventure. Still, it was programmed with the function to locate his TARDIS so he switched to the appropriate setting.

A second later, he asked again, "What?!"

His screwdriver could not find the TARDIS anywhere on this world. A second after that, the screwdriver didn't even recognize the world he was on. His mind started racing, thinking up reasons for why he couldn't recognized neither the time period nor the world he was on. His musings were halted a few minutes later when a small voice spoke from deeper in the orchard with a southern accent, "Yer not from these parts, ain't ya stranger?"

His head turned and mouth dropped, "What..."

Standing in front of him was an orange coated small horse, pony he recalled from his knowledge of earth animal life, with three apples on her flank, "No, sorry, I'm the doctor."

The pony tilted her head, "Doctor? Where ya from, stranger?"

The doctor shrugged, "Oh...here and there, well, I travel a lot."

He blinked for a second...something was wrong. He wasn't speaking like he usually did...almost as if...

His hand dipped in his pocket and pulled out an oversized mirror, which confirmed his suspicions, "What?!"

Staring back at him in the reflection was the image of the 10th doctor. He was the 10th doctor, his predecessor. Maybe he absorbed some of the Time Vortex, causing his body to regress to an older regeneration, well whatever. His mouth curled into a grin regardless, "Oh...brilliant!"

The pony looked at him quizzically, "Are ya alright, Doc? And how'd ya pull that mirror out a' yer pocket?"

The doctor looked up, surprised, "Oh, yes, sorry, just got a pocket that's bigger on the inside. What's your name, miss?"

She tilted her hat up, "Name's Applejack."

* * *

>Applebloom sighed as she slammed her head on the desk, throwing away another failed version of the sonic screwdriver. She couldn't even get the screwdriver function to work on it, and her special talent usually involved building machines. With a sigh, she withdrew several new parts and started working on it again. She hardly noticed the door open and Applejack greeting everyone. She muttered a greeting before being absorbed in her work again. It was several minutes later that someone spoke to her, not that she noticed, "Oh, I see you're working on a screwdriver."

Applebloom nodded, "Yeah."

The stranger continued, "Seems like your frequencies are all wrong. Have to tune things just right, or all you get is a vibrator. Though, your model doesn't seem to have certain crystals that would make it work."

Applebloom muttered in frustration, "Ah can't get them items, they're from a read only universe! And apparently Ah'm tone deaf, else Ah would have this figured out already!"

"Oh...sorry."

A few minutes passed in silence before he spoke again, "You know, you could try for a laser screwdriver instead."

"If Ah wanted a weapon, sure," the looper muttered in a surly tone.

"Well, laser can be applied non-lethally. One of my companions used one as a power source to pull me out of a riptide in time."

Applebloom blinked, her attention and curiosity picked. She turned to the voice, only for her mouth to drop completely. The doctor waved, "Hello! I'm the doctor!"

The filly's eyes widened a great deal before she rose from her seat and raced out of the house, screaming "TWILIGHT!"

The doctor watched, slightly confused. Applejack shouted out the door. "'Bloom, get back here! 'BLOOM!"

The pony sighed. "Sorry about that, Doc. Ah'll see to her. Ya'll should head to the cellar. Ah heard he's startin' a new hobby as a bartender."

The doctor took her up on that and made her way to the cellar, only to see a red massive pony standing behind a bar. His eyes widened a bit for a second, then returned to his passive expression. The doctor waved a bit. "Hello, I'm the doctor."

The red stallion nodded. "Big Macintosh. What'll ya have?"

The doctor thought for a second. "Lime Soda."

* * *

>139.10 (Evilhumour)

Luna blinked as she Woke up while flying.

Over _mud_.

And then in mud.

Groaning as she went fairly deep within the mud, she shook her head as her loop memories beg-

"LULU!" Tia's voice caused her to snapped her head around as a galloping white mare came right up to her-_oh_ Tree, not this again! Before Luna had any chance to respond, her 'sister' picked her up in her magic and held her up in the air. Blushing, Luna tried to escape but she was just a filly this loop against the adult white mare holding her in golden aura. "I know you are eager to try flying, and using your magic, but you mustn't scare me like that! Jumping out of the window?" Tia tsked as she carried Luna beside her, still covered in mud. "Didn't Miss Rainbow Dash teach you better then that?"

"Well, she _did_ say going fast was good..."

"No Luna, I know she didn't," Tia leaned over and sniffed. "Goodness, my little Lulu, some_pony_ needs a bath." Smiling, Tia tapped Luna's nose, teleporting them into Luna's bedroom. It was filled with stuff toys, castles, dollies, knights, a couple of play swords and a seemingly sleeping possum called Tiberius on her pillow. "Do you want to take a bath with mommy again?"

Luna's ears folded against her head, blushing as she nodded her head. As humiliating and awkward these loops were for Celestia and herself, Luna _greatly_ enjoyed the times she could be a filly again with an actual mom this time.

With a hum and silly song, the Queen Celestia of Equestria and Princess Luna had a very fun, very bubbly bath together.

* * *

>139.11 (Kris Overstreet)

Ryu had learned, long ago, the bartender's sixth sense of when to ask questions and when to stay the hell out of a customer's affairs.

So, when a slim woman apparently just out of her teens, with purple skin and pony ears and tail, sat next to a giant of a man who looked like his hair had never been cut, combed, brushed, or possibly even washed since the day he was born, and each matched the other shot for shot, Ryu just served the drinks and turned his attention to less potentially disruptive customers, like the evil god with the flaming eyebrows holding a heated discussion over the nature of inverse morality with the Monarch.

"... and that's when I threw myself into the volcano," Twilight Sparkle said. "For which I spent a Loop in Hyrule's CDi-variant, and after that here." She slammed back the remainder of her drink, banged the bar with her fist for more, and said, "So what's your excuse?"

"You remember that Loop you crashed with your fleet of Elements of Harmony cannons?" Leman Russ quaffed his tankard and slammed it down. A refill appeared next to it almost immediately. "Well, something like that happened again, except I was the only one Awake. My father and the Chaos Gods were all at their absolute worst. And one of Father's most intolerant Inquisitors decided to invade planet Equus. Twice. And failed catastrophically both times."

"Well, good," Twilight nodded.

"I'm not done," Leman warned. "You and Celestia and pretty much every pony on the planet decided that their world would never be safe until all the warring races of the galaxy were converted into ponies. And the Elements of Harmony could do that in that Loop."

"WHAT?" Twilight knocked over her fresh drink. "We never did any of that! In our Loop we just used the Elements to purge the corruption of the Void and its accompanying hatred! Humans stayed human! Eldar stayed eldar! And orks... well... that was a bad idea all around," she admitted, picking up the fresh drink which had replaced her spilled one while she talked.

"I know," Leman nodded. "I was there. But this time the Elements had more than a turn-to-stone or exile-to-moon setting. They had a bam-you're-a-pony-now setting. And nothing could block it- shields, armor, whole planets, nothing at all."

"That sounds terrible," Twilight said. "How did you stop them?"

"Stop them?" Leman asked. "Whose side did you think I was on?"

Twilight's jaw dropped as Leman chugged down his drink.

"To be fair," he added as he set the tankard down again, "I ended up flipping a coin to decide. The Imperium was really that bad, that Loop."

* * *

>139.12: (Evilhumour, with little add-on by Detective Ethan Redfield)

There was a chorus of snickering, causing the colt's ear to twitch.

"Brothers, we can be mature about this," The colt said with a strained voice, looking upwards at three ponies around him. One was a red unicorn with a strange sun circle for a cutie mark, one was a green earth pony with a dragon's head as a cutie mark with the last pony, a bat-pony, with a skull withered wings coming off the sides for his cutie mark. They were at that odd stage between colt and stallion, gangly and awkward with their new long legs but still at that age where they loved to tease those closely related to them and younger than they were. "Isn't that what you're always complaining about Maroon?"

"Ma<sup>roon</sup>!" The red unicorn shouted, falling onto his back while laughing his head off. The green earth pony and the bat-pony snickering were getting louder. "Oh by Father, this is too rich!" He continued to laugh. "What's your name, wittle brother? Fierce Fang? Mighty Bark?" The red unicorn managed to get on his hooves, still chuckling.

"Well," the colt blushed, rubbing the back of his head and looking around Ponyville.

"GAAAAAAAAASP!" All four of them snapped their heads towards the pink pony. "Your brothers are here Lemon Rush?! Oh I have to plan for so many parties!" With that Pinkie Pie vanished in with a squeal.

All three heads of the teenage stallions turned slowly to the blushing and frowning pegasus colt. "Don't you dare laugh, any of you!"

"Awww," Big Maroon cooed, mockingly rubbing his brother's mane. "Is our wittle bwother cranky?" He laughed again, ignoring Lemon slapping the hoof away. "What do you say, Vul-I mean Forging Fire and Corn Curse?"

"Maroon, I'm warning you, I am this close to bucking you in the face!" Lemon snapped, shoving his face into the unicorn's, with the earth pony sharing a concerned look with the threstal. They were no longer laughing, but looked around nervously.

"BUCK!" Maroon laughed again, before using his hooves to pinch Lemon's cheek. "Oh this far too fu-GAH!" He shouted as he was suddenly kicked in the chest, sailing through the air and into a building.

"I TOLD YOU TO STOP YOU DORK!" Lemon shouted, flying into the building with Forging and Corn leaping towards to the building to stop their brothers from fighting in the odd tree building.

Ducking as books flew through the sky as their two brothers wrestled around the library floor, both of the other Primarchs tried to pull their brothers apart when a loud voice roared:

"WHAT THE BIRITCHING SAP ARE YOU DOING TO MY LIBRARY?!"

All four's head snapped towards the furious purple pony standing on top of the staircase, magic flowing from her body. This caused Forging Fire to drop Lemon back onto Big Maroon's chest with Corn Curse trying to get his hooves out from his brother's armpits.

"Lemon, are these your _brothers?!"_

"Um...yes." Lemon squeaked, hunching down on Maroon's chest in fear. "Look Twilight, I'm _really_ sorry, it's our first time all together here in Equestria and _please_ don't send us to Lunar time out!"

"Lunar time out?!" Twilight laughed a bit crazy, her magic reaching out for the four of them. Before any of them could react, she grabbed each of their ears and began to tug as she stormed her way out. "Oh _no_, I doing something _far_ worse for _you_ lot!"

* * *

>Fluttershy was awoken by loud banging on her front door. Flying down as quickly as she could, she opened the door to see her friend and Anchor furious.

"Oh dear, what's wron-"

"Your _boys_," She snapped, her horn's glow twitching and four sharp yelps of pain were heard. "Destroyed part of my library!" All of a sudden, three stallions and a colt were thrown into her cottage. "Deal with them!" She snapped before teleporting away.

"But... I only raised Lemon." Looking down she saw the four of them look embarrassed by the whole situation, with Lemon trying to hid behind the green earth pony. "Lemon, _who_ did you fight with?" She asked sharply, using the Stare on her son. Meekly, he pointed a hoof at the red unicorn who was grumbling at the whole situation before turning to face her.

Maroon, or Magnus, had face a lot of strange and odd things in the loops that only strengthened his resolve and will power. Looking into those eyes, however, made him feel incredibly small and _naughty_, with the humble words of an apology was muttered from his mouth to her.

"Good," Fluttershy smiled, "Magnus, Vulkan and Konrad?" She asked the three of them, with them nodding in response.

"Big Maroon, Forging Fire and Corn Curse." The green earth pony answered with a weary smile. "It's a pleasure to finally meet you ma'am."

"Thank you," Fluttershy smiled. "I'm glad we could finally meet."

"Indeed," Forging Fire smiled, pulling a series of books out of his Subspace pocket. "I've been waiting to give you this."

"Oh?" Fluttershy asked, taking the books, looking at the title. "_The Stupid Things Leman Russ Did Whilst Unsupervised, Vol. 1'_."

"You _actually_ wrote it!?" Lemon squeaked in surprise, with Maroon snickering before being cut quiet by Fluttershy's glare.

"Oh Lemon, I'm sure it can't be tha-" Fluttershy stopped herself as she began to read. "FTL?" Flipping a page, one of her eyebrows arched upwards. "Stuffed animals?" With another page, the other eyebrow joined the first one. "Leman Russ, we are going to have a long talk afterwards."

"Awwwww." Lemon pouted, glaring at his snickering brothers again, knowing it would be a _mortifying _loop to deal with.

* * *

>The door to the small cottage slammed open, causing Fluttershy, Forging Fire and Corn Curse to jump up from the sofa, with their tea cups rattling after jostling the table.

Big Maroon looked furious, before wilting under Fluttershy's glare as he used his magic to close the door quietly. "Where is _my little _brother?!_" He snapped, twigs and leaves falling from his body, still covered from head to hoof in tree sap.

"What happened Maroon?" Forging Fire asked, biting back a smirk.

"Our _brother_," Maroon's ear twitched in anger. "Introduce me to his _girlfriend_." At this, both of Forging Fire and Corn Curse ears perked up at the mention of their Anchor's famous girlfriend. "She's the daughter of this loops Anchor, _that_ _M_iss Twilight Sparkle," He switched his tone as Fluttershy raised an eyebrow at him, reminding him the terror that was the Stare. "She _was_ a perfect lady, or so I thought." He grumbled loudly as he paced across the hallway, itching to shake his body but the yellow pegasus would _not_ like it and he did not want to make her angry. _Ever_. "She wanted to show me around with her friends, to introduce me to some interesting concepts that she wished to test _without_ Lemon." He pawed the ground, his horn glowing for a brief moment before going out. "These little girls took me to the top of a hill, and wished to see if a person who joined one of their crusades would incur the same results they do."

"They took you on a Cutie Mark Crusade?" Fluttershy asked, holding back her laughter perfectly. Forging Fire and Corn Curse, on the other hoof, were not doing so well, being loud in their laughter.

"_Yes._"

"And by that, they pushed you down a hill in a wagon to see if you would get covered in tree sap-" She turned her head to her other ...sons. She was warming up to the idea of calling them _hers_ like she had done for Leman Russ so long ago. "No matter what the girls do for their crusades, they _always_ get covered in tree sap."

_"BUT THERE WERE NO TREES!"_

* * *

>Sitting on a cloud above the cottage, the two foals were joined in the laughter by the other stallions inside the small house.

Lemon turned his head to face Nyx, tears running down her face. "You were _right_," leaning over, he gave her a kiss on the cheek. "_Thank you for dealing with him._"

"Like there was _any_ doubt." Nyx fluffed her chest out, snickering loudly. "Only _I_ _get_ to decide who torments _my_ favourite stallion!"

Lemon was giggling loudly before managing to stop himself. "_My hero!_" He swooned himself into her arms before she let him go onto the cloud, both of them giggling like loons and happy as could be.

A voice shouted from below the cloud, "I thought I was your favorite stallion!"

Nyx looked down to see Shining Armor, resting comfortably against the side of the cottage. Nyx blew a raspberry at her uncle. Shining chuckled and shouted, "I heard that!"

Rolling her eyes, Nyx looked back to Lemon and muttered, "Barking chaperones."

* * *

>139.13 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Twilight rested her chin against the countertop of Donut Joe's restaurant. Nothing she did helped. She had taken a dozen loops worth of lessons trying to eliminate one of her major weaknesses: Dancing. She couldn't dance to save her life. Literally, when asked to out dance cockroach on a DDR machine, the cockroach had won. It was a second later that another pony, male, sat next to her. Her eyes turned to the pony, and she recognized him immediately from the N7 emblazoned on his flank. "Why didn't you ping us when the loop began, Shepard?"

The pony held up a hoof for a glass of tea. "Wasn't awake at the time. Woke up about a month ago and went on an intensive training trip. Only came back a couple days ago. What's got you down this time, Twilight?"

"Can't dance."

The stallion chuckled as he held the glass up in his hoof and gulped it down. "Neither can I. Doesn't stop me from having fun on the floor."

He set the glass down and turned to face her. Twilight scoffed. "At least you can probably out dance a cockroach."

Shepard had the glass up to his lip at that, and he gagged on the drink, spraying it out in a burst of laughter and coughing, "You...danced against Dr. Cockroach and you're upset? He...*cough*...got his PHD in dance!"

Twilight's eyes widened, "Wait...what?"

Shepard pulled out a PADD of his own and showed her a wikipedia entry on Monsters vs. Aliens. Twilight rubbed her horn and moaned. Shepard patted her on the back, "His universe has only recently started looping, probably why you never heard of him."

A minute of silence passed, then Shepard asked, "What are your plans for the Gala this loop?"

Twilight sighed, "Not going. The others are putting together a dance party and I don't want to give them more blackmail material."

Shepard thought for a second, then his mouth formed a smirk. "Want to turn their party on their heads?"

* * *

>Celestia, the only other pony besides the elements that was awake, stood a short distance from the specially designed dance floor. Her usual spot was occupied by an illusion of Celestia that would greet all well wishers and nobles without them any the wiser. She herself was under a notice-her-not charm as well as a compulsion charm to avoid her area. She was resting on a bench, waiting for Applejack and the others to begin their dance off. Dash and Pinkie stepped onto the floor first, strutting their stuff. Dash seemed more into the robot and electric slide. Pinkie initiated a very impressive break dance. Applejack took to line dancing while Rarity performed the tango solo. Fluttershy danced a slower waltz. A crowd had gathered around the dancing mares, all wondering what the buck they were doing.

Suddenly, a disco ball dropped from the ceiling as every spotlight on the floor came to rest on the orb. This threw off all the others as the floor started lighting up. A snappy beat started up, _Shake it, Shake it._

Celestia blinked as a familiar tan coated stallion stepped onto the floor dressed in a white jacket and blue ascot. The stallion gripped his collar and allowed the beat to take him. A familiar purple unicorn stepped out of the crowd as well, wearing a green shoulder-less dress that went down to her ankles. The music still played in the background (_Shake it, shake it_) as the five elements and Celestia's jaw dropped in unison. The unicorn held up her front hoof and beckoned the stallion forth.

_Shake your groove thing, shake your groove thing, yeah yeah.
>Show 'em how they do it now.

Dash asked Pinkie, "What's going on? Is that Twilight? I thought she was staying at home?"

Pinkie held up a video camera as she muttered, "Thought I felt a doozie coming."

The stallion and mare stepped forward towards one another, in unison bobbing their head at each other. Once they were a foot from each other, their disco began, as they proved themselves quite good at it. Dash leaned in to Pinkie and asked, "Was Twilight replaced by a changeling or something? She's doing really well here."

A couple other ponies stepped around them and joined in. Dash finally managed to get a glimpse at the stallion's cutie mark and her jaw dropped again, "That's Shepard! Ok, those two have to have been replaced by changelings."

Applejack gave Dash a quirked expression, "Dash, ya think anythin' baseline could kidnap those two and replace em'?"

Dash opened her mouth, then thought better of it. "No."

By the end of the song, the entirety of the nobility had joined in on the strange dance.

* * *

>Twilight and Shepard managed to extract themselves from the dance floor without the other elements catching up. After exiting the building, Twilight teleported the two of them back to her library. Once they arrived, the two burst out laughing, Twilight asking, "Did you get their reaction on camera?"

Shepard rubbed a tear away, "Sure did, and the expressions of everyone else, including your mentor."

Another moment passed as Twilight asked, "How long do you think it'll take them to figure out we artificially induced a heartsong?"

Shepard shrugged, "Give them a couple days. Still, that was fun."

* * *

>139.12 continued: (Evilhumour)

Twilight paced back and forth with Forging Fire, Big Maroon and Corn Curse watching her with fear. Fluttershy was sitting in the middle of them, watching her friend and preparing some tea as Twilight tried to deal with what happened when they all Woke up.

Luna was also pouting in the corner of the room, grumbling about how her daughter/sister stole her/their moon to go on a thousand year date with her boyfriend.

Twilight was ok with the thought of her daughter dating, knowing that their two kids were more than capable to defend themselves and her Nyxie was beyond capable to defend herself if Lemon tried anything. This wasn't the first time the two of them have gone off for an adventure, but it was the first time the two of them did so as alicorn teens. Even though they were both ageless, all of them were ageless but Nyx was still too young to go on a date with a teenage boy and she was growing up too fast and she knew what teenage boys were interested and she knew how sav-

Suddenly, there was a knock on her door, causing Twilight to jump. Teleporting over and opening the door, she saw an armoured unicorn stallion glaring at her, his horn glowing as he held up two red face ponies.

"Ma'am, we found these two on a moon reported stolen over a thousand years ago." He moved a dark coated mare, her long purple mane hiding half of her grinning, blushing face. "After making them pull over, discovering the stolen property and finally producing evidence, we do believe she lives here; is this correct?"

"Yes, this is my daughter." Twilight said calmly, eying the mare that was holding the yellow coated stallion's hoof, both of them in mid snickering. Said mare noticed the glare the purple unicorn was giving her and meeped softly, hiding behind her mane like the stallion next to her mother once did.

"Sorry ma-"

"Later Nightmare Moon Sparkle." She said equally calm, causing her daughter to squeak and the stallion next to her to gulp loudly. The stallion holding them coughed, causing Twilight to throw her calm glare at him. With nary a flinch, the stallion looked into the room and eyed Fluttershy.

"Ma'm, are you the mother of this stallion he-"

"Yes, he is one of my boys and I do hope he did not do anything wrong." Fluttershy blinked, looking at the table before glancing at the trembling, pale alicorn stallion. "I trust there is a record of events?"

"Yes ma'am," He said, pulling out a pamphlet to both mothers. "This is when they are due to appear in court, the cost of the damages, the fine of driving a moon without a permit and several other details." Placing the two alicorns down inside the library, he nodded his head. "I do need to find one miss Princess Luna; we need to know what to do with the remains of the moon."

"I am she and what did they do my moon?" Luna asked with a bit of fear and a bit of steel in her voice.

"This was ma'am, and I do apologize as what you see may be a bit uncomfortable." He lead Luna out of the library, closing the door.

Twilight eyed her blushing, teenage daughter cuddling up against the tall, rugged stallion, his wing holding her close.

Grinding her teeth and pulling her wings in tight to her side, she took a step forwards to give a brand new lecture that she just invented that would last at least two loops when Luna suddenly cried loud enough to cause several glass planes to shatter, with the others gaining spiderweb cracks.

Twilight blinked, turning her head to see a weeping Luna latching onto the armoured stallion before turning back to look at the two teenagers, only to find the door open and a note where they just sitting.

Picking up the note, she started to read it out loud.

_ 'Sorry momma, but we were only halfway done with our date! Don't worry, we'll be back in time for our court day and tell Auntie Luna we're really sorry! _

_ Love, _

_ Nyx & Lemon' _

Twilight blacked out after reading that, later learning from Fluttershy that she blew up the Golden Oaks in a fit of rage.

Oh she would need a _special _lecture for these two!

* * *

>139.14: (Detective Ethan Redfield)

A vacationing police officer and his niece sat on a plane. The plane was destined for Austin, Texas. However, these two weren't ordinary vacationers. The younger one was giving funny looks at her uncle, "Uncle, stop being so coy and tell me why you kidnapped me-"

Shining looked affronted, "I have not kidnapped you."

Nyx gave him a flat stare with her eyebrow quirked, "So what do you call coming into mommy and my house at two in the morning, hold your finger to your mouth in an attempt to shoosh me, then picked me up and a pre-prepared suitcase, and then finally walked out the door?"

Shining looked sheepish, "I left a message on the kitchen table explaining everything. Besides, we haven't spent uncle/niece bonding time in...a three million loops or so."

Nyx's expression somehow turned more skeptical, "And you think mommy will react like a normal human when she finds me gone from my bed tomorrow? She probably won't even look at the table."

Several rapid fire pings washed over them in rapid succession, causing Shining to flinch. Nyx chuckled, "She's probably torn the entire neighborhood apart looking for me. You're so dead when she finds out."

* * *

>The house hovered mid air, broken down into its individual pieces down to the bare nails. Twilight was frantic, stepping between the pieces looking for any sign of Nyx. Could this loop not be a hub loop? Had a supervillain kidnapped Nyx? These and many more thoughts flew through Twilight's head as she grew more and more panicked. Why hadn't Nyx Pinged by now? Sure, she can handle herself, but what if it were Dio, or Kyubey, or some other villain looper they haven't met yet appears?

Suddenly, her cell phone started ringing.

* * *

>Shining gulped as Twilight picked up, "Twiley? Yes, I'm awake. I know Nyx is missing. Look, I have her with me now."

Dead silence reigned for a second. Sweat started dripping down the officer's head, "I just wanted to have some uncle/niece bonding time-"

He held the phone away as the phone somehow managed to convey the Royal Canterlot Voice, "***AND YOU DIDN'T THINK IT A GOOD IDEA TO TELL ME BEFORE PULLING THIS STUNT! WHY DIDN'T YOU ASK TO TAKE HER WITH YOU?!**"

With a wandless muffliato, he weathered the diatribe of words, "There was a note on the kitchen table. It should still be there. It even outlines the places I'm going, alright?"

Twilight's voice cut off for a second as, presumably, the note floated over to the anchor. After a full minute passed, she growled out the rest, "I expect her back in a month. Aspen Birch Bark help you if she isn't back by midnight on the 28th day. And if she doesn't say this was the best hub world adventure she's ever had, I won't be held responsible for my actions. Now put Nyx on."

Shining passed his niece the phone. Twilight said, "Nyxie, let me know if Shining causes you any trouble. And do have fun!"

Nyx replied in an enthused tone, "Will do mommy! Love you!"

Twilight said the same, then the line cut off. Nyx handed back the phone to Shining and asked, "So, what's in Austin anyway?"

Shining shook his head. "That's not our final destination. We're catching a connecting flight to New Braunfels, Texas."

Nyx quirked her eyes again, "And there?"

Shining chuckled. "That's a surprise."

* * *

>After arriving in New Braunfels and a short trip through the town, they arrived at their destination, a massive water park named Schlitterbahn. Nyx muttered, "This is definitely new."

Shining chuckled, "Never been to a water park before?"

"I've been to garden worlds in Warhammer, Aquilaris during its time as a resort world in Star Wars, ridden the space Titanic in the Whoverse among many others, but no, I haven't. Now I'm curious how it will stack up."

Shining ruffled Nyx's hair. "You can't compare one universe's adventures to another, otherwise you'll just long for times that have passed and won't come again for billions of loops. Let's have some fun."

Nyx could get behind that. As the day progressed, Nyx couldn't help but admit she was having fun. There were dozens of rides to partake in, plenty of tasty food to eat, and excellent company to enjoy. Even though she had been through life and death situations, her heart still went to her throat as she slid down the 168 foot water slide. She played a pirate as she defended Han's Hideout from the one man army of Shining Armor. Her mind imagined herself flying like her Alicorn self as she was launched into the air in the Skycoaster. As the day wound down and Shining took her to the hotel, Nyx wondered what would be next? Twilight did say Shining would have her for a month, so where else would the two travel?

* * *

>139.15: (Kris Overstreet)

"So, what did you call me over for?" Skuld asked.

"You know how that tree library almost always gets blown up in the Equestria Loop?" Sleipnir asked. "I've been going over the logs, and that library was getting destroyed at above-average frequency even before the Tirek expansion began."

"Your point?" Skuld said pointedly. "I ask because there are a dozen acts of divine idiocy happening right now, and I need to administer the mighty hammer of debugging." She gently rapped Sleipnir's desk with said hammer. It went squeak.

"Maybe Yggdrasil's trying to tell us something."

Skuld blinked. "Continue."

"Library. Tree containing lots of knowledge. Gets horribly damaged." The horse spread its four forehooves to indicate the whole of the Admin offices. "Yggdrasil. Tree containing all that is knowable. Gets horribly damaged." Lowering his hooves, he pointed one to his terminal and concluded, "Maybe if we study the various incidents that destroyed the library in Ponyville, we'll gain insight into the Event, and thus to a final workable repair that brings Yggdrasil back to full capacity."

Skuld raised an eyebrow. "So, what you're saying is, Yggdrasil is trying to point on the dolly where the bad man touched it."

Sleipnir looked distinctly uncomfortable. "Er... could you please pick a different metaphor?"

"The bad, bad centaur man with horns," Skuld pressed on. "I'll just tell Tyr that we all need to be on the lookout for a malevolent centaur about fifty thousand parsecs tall? Or maybe larger? Be kind of hard to miss. And we'll have to question Chiron very closely, make sure he wasn't-"

"All right, I get it," Sleipnir sighed, slumping over his terminal. "The theory needs work."

* * *

>AN:

139.1: Crossover is Sentinels of the Multiverse. They don't seem very good at sentineling, though.

>139.2: Dang loops.139.3: Someone didn't like Ren OR Stimp.

>139.4: D'awww.139.5: May not actually work that way.

>139.6: Aim Twilight Sparkle away from eyes or face when annoyed.139.7: Duplication.

>139.8: That is dedication, alright.139.9: Whoops...

>139.10: Note the anchor asleep on the bed.139.11: ...I have to admit, it's a tricky choice. Either way you can moderate the worst bits of your side.

>139.12: Oh, dear. Shenannigans.139.13: Dance, Dance Revulsion?

>139.14: Laughing "Uncle!"139.15: ...well, it might be the explanation.

147. Chapter 147

140.1 (Evilhumour)

Sunset looked at the teenager next to her and sighed.

"Nyx, your mom is going to kill me if I let you do this, you know that right?" She rubbed her face, looking at the parking lot. "I mean, she'll be here in a few minutes and if she knows I let you go, she's going to lecture my head off!"

Nyx was about to respond when the distinctive sound of a chopper was heard. Turning their heads, they saw a young man dressed in an open dark blue jacket with fur lining around the neck pull up in front of the steps. Stepping off his bike in his form fitting jeans, every student was able to see his chiselled stomach against his black muscle shirt. Pulling off his wolf style helmet and letting his rough, messy orange hair fall to his side, he gave a smile that caused every girl's knees to melt, either single or in a relationship otherwise.

"Oh sweet birch, he's gorgeous!" Sunset place a hand to her mouth, her face blushing horribly as the definition of bad boy walked over to them, with a silver helmet in his hands.

"I know," Nyx smirked as Leman walked up the steps and gave Nyx a kiss on the lips, causing several of the girls to gasp; either in jealousy or delight that the resident daughter of the librarian, the nerd queen, was being kissed by this hunk of teenage perfection. "Hi Leman."

"Hi yourself." He grinned, his hand reaching for her bag which she passed over without a second thought. "Ready to go?"

Placing the helmet on her head, she smiled as the two of them went to the wolf styled motorcycle, Leman placing the bag in the compartment under the seat. Sunset smiled as she watched Nyx got on the bike behind Leman, holding onto him tightly, her head resting against his shoulder. She, along with the rest of student body, began to cheer as they pulled out of the parking lot for Nyx.

That was cut short as someone slammed the doors open behind her, causing everyone to fall quiet.

Sunset gulped, and she slowly turned her head around to face the enraged librarian.

"Sunset Shimmer, did you just let my daughter off with Leman Russ on that bike?!_"

Sunset gulped, wondering how she would deal with her unAwake friend and make sure she wouldn't get detention for a month.

* * *

>Twilight pulled into her house, eying that damn bike in her drive way and did her best not run it over. Opening the door to her house, slammed the door shut and stormed up the staircase.

"Ok, get your damn hands off my daug-" She blinked, her daughter's room empty. She was sure that the two of them would be in there, doing things her Nyxie was too young to do and things that were making her feel old.

"Mama?" Nyx's voice called out from the living room. Twilight gasped, they were doing it down there, in public, where anyone could see them?!_

Running back down the stairs, she took a deep breath to begin lecturing the damn boy that was sitting next to her daughter going over their homework?

"Hello Miss Sparkle," Leman smiled at her, putting down the pencil. "How are you?"

"Very good thank you," she said automatically, "What are you doing in my house?" she glared at the boy sitting next to her little girl both hunched over the table.

"Your daughter and I are going over our homework after I gave her a lift home," he shared a smile with her daughter, who was leaning against him now. "I'd be lost without her help Miss Sparkle."

"I see..." Twilight's eye twitched, noticing the two of them were holding hands as well as that they were going over some semi difficult algebra that she knew Leman was having trouble with so they were not lying. Sighing, she changed mental gears in regards to the boy next to her daughter. "Will you be staying for supper Mister Russ?"

"Oh that would be lovely, Miss Sparkle," he smiled. "I heard so much of your cooking from Nyxie; I'd love to finally taste it."

"Thank you," Twilight smiled, walking towards the kitchen. "Afterwards, we can have a nice, long, talk about you dating my daughter."

Twilight smiled as she heard the gulp from the teenage boy, knowing that she still had it.

* * *

>Emps bit his lip, trying his hardest not to laugh as his son walked past him again, tugging his neck.

"Leman, please come over and let me help you." He waved over his son, who was trying to fix the bowtie on himself again.

With a groan, his son walked over to him as Leman let him fix the pink bowtie around his neck that matched nicely with his blue tuxedo. "Thank you father, these thing are a devil to put on."

"I know my son," the man nodded his head, pulling out the ends to make it perfect. "They always throw me for a loop."

Once again, Leman head jerked up as he hinted that he was Awake. "Thank you father, I would need to stay Awake next time you show me."

"Indeed as I will not always be here to do it for you and your girlfriend would be annoyed at seeing you as a mess." He said, ignoring the prompt to reveal he was Awake this loop, enjoying how none of his sons could figure it out this loop.

"If you are done with Leman," Magnus muttered in his red tuxedo. "Mom can take our picture and we can go pick up our dates; I know that your Nyx wouldn't mind but my Adagio _would!_"

"Remind me again how the captain of the Chess and Debate team got the leader of the Dazzlings as a date again, brother?" Leman snarked before running a hand through his somewhat washed hair.

"Your girlfriend's friend Sunset hooked us up." Vulkan answered, looking at Konrad who was tapping his foot against the floor. "I don't know _why_ Sunset gave Konrad Sonata as a date but who am I to judge?"

"Boys, are you fighting?" The woman in a beautiful green dress asked, walking down the staircase with a camera in her hands.

"No mom!" The four of his sons said in unison; the Little Mother was still a terrifying presence to _any_ of his sons, Awake or not.

"Good, now stand together please." She said, walking over to Emps, who picked up the photographer bag as his wife this loop was taking picture for the prom. Fluttershy smiled as she began to take pictures of the four of them smiling together with the Emperor doing his best not to break down in laughter as she 'asked' Magnus and Leman to hug each other.

Hearing a car honk, he walked over to the window and saw the limos.

"Boys, your rides are here." Smiling, he watched Leman and Magnus try to shoot each other dirty glares, only to be stopped when Fluttershy coughed. Handing Fluttershy a coat, he watched three of his sons pile into one limo as Leman went into the other one.

"You think they will be ok dear?" Fluttershy sighed, leaning against him as they walked to their car, with Fluttershy sitting behind the wheel.

"I think tonight will be one for the records dear."

* * *

>Leman watched the clock on the wall, hearing the ticks echo loudly as he tried not to fidget in seat. Twilight simply smiled at him, holding the camera in one hand and her purse in the other hand as she sat opposite of him in the living room.

"Leman, "

"Yes ma'am?" He winced, his voice cracking as he answered her.

"I do not believe I need to remind you that my brother is the captain of the police force, so if you so much as _step_ on her toes, I will-"

"I swear to you ma'am, I will do _nothing_ untoward to your daughter!" Leman responded, paling as he remembered the time the unAwake Shining had once picked him up for a _very_ long talk. Despite everything he had done and gained in the loops, he was still scared witless from Nyx's family as he _didn't_ have his usual strength to back him up as well as the fact disobeying any of them would hurt Nyx's feelings as she had asked him for a baseline loop.

"Good." Twilight said with a smile, nodding her head softly. "Because everything that my brother can dish out, I am _far_ worse." The way that Twilight said it made Leman wished he was fighting unAwake Khorne with limited power right now.

"I-I-" He tried to come up with something to say, but his tongue was tying itself in fear.

"Mom, please stop terrifying my boyfriend." Nyx's voice called out from the second floor. "I'll need someone to dance with and I cannot do it if Leman has fainted."

"Alright dear!" Twilight called back up, turning away from Leman. "One more thing; if you ruin this for her, they will _never_ find your body!" She snapped, glaring at him now with a finger pointed at him.

"Not-_woah!_"

Leman was short of breath, as Nyx stood at the top of the staircase, in a beautiful silver dress, her purple hair flowing down her shoulders. With a tiny blush, she walked down the staircase as Twilight took picture after picture as Leman stood there with his jaw hanging low.

Finally she reached the bottom and walked up to Leman, examining his appearance before standing on her toes and running her fingers through his hair, messing it up. Smiling, she sat back down as she rocked in her high heel shoes.

"Much better." She said with a giggle, batting an eye at him. "How do I lo-

"_Wonderful!_" He squeaked out, his legs barely holding back his trembles. "Stunning Nyx."

It was Nyx turn to become all emotions, tilting her head to the side as she blushed from the praise. "_Thanks._"

Leman reached into his coat and pulled out the corsage to place on Nyx, and blushed. "Um..." he looked over his shoulder, seeing Twilight glare at him.

Oh boy, this was going to be the most difficult thing he ever did: putting on a corsage without getting killed.

Like any soldier, however, Leman simply dug in and went to place the flower on his girlfriend's chest.

Before he could fumble too much, Nyx grabbed his hands and guided them into place. She gave him a reassuring smile and pointedly did not give her mom a coy grin that would have instantly gotten her in more trouble than that time they wrecked the Moon.

* * *

>Leman gulped as the music began to slow down, with the light dimming in the gym. Konrad was off to the side with Sonata, both of them giggling and seemingly having a blast despite his brother making a bit of a dunce of himself earlier. Vulkan seemed to have a pleasant time with his own date, the two of them in hushed conversation over at the tables now. Magnus and Adagio were also slow dancing; his brother and his date had threatened to steal the show with their dancing skills the entire prom, showing to everyone how nimble the captain of the debate and chess team was. Of course, Nyx and Leman had countered them at every turn with their own dancing and he was sure that they would be crowned king and queen. Then again, it wasn't really fair as Nyx had a much longer time to practice her skills and Leman knew that dancing was just a different style of fighting.

Although, this was more terrifying than any fight he had been in. Leman looked at the crowd, spotting Twilight slow dancing with a man with blue hair with a happy blush on her face and with Father and the Little Mother dancing in another corner, their parents were not really watching what they were doing now. Turning his head to Nyx, he tried to think of how to do this right as none of his soldier training prepared him for this.

"Come on, Leman." Nyx cooed into his ear, leaning against him. "We rarely get to dance, let alone slo-"

Leman had one thought to this whole thing: screw this!

Leman cut her off when he placed his hand around her waist, and his other holding her hand as he slowly stepped in beat with the music, leading Nyx into a dance. Nyx meeped softly while blushing beautifully as she leaned against him, her hand going around his waist to link them together as they dance as one. Slowly, the world began to fade away as it was just the two of them dancing, lost in each others eyes.

She then caused Leman to jump slightly as her hand reached down to his rear and gave a pinch. Giggling softly, she leaned into Leman's shoulder as she grabbed his hand and guided it a bit lower, causing Leman to blush now as his hand raced back to her waist.

"Don't tell me my big bad wolf is scared of little old me?" She cooed into his ear, pulling her head back to stare into his eyes.

"Never, my beautiful night sky." Leman answered, leaning down to give her a kiss which she gave back happily, pausing in place as their lips meet each other.

Suddenly, they heard clapping and cheering. Pulling their heads back, Leman saw they were alone in a circle of students and chaperones. They were giving them both applauds, hoots of good cheer, catcalls, and in the case of one purple mother, the Death Glare.

Blushing, Leman and Nyx bowed for their audience when Principle Celestia's voiced chimed over the speakers.

"I do believe we have our Prom King and Queen, my dear students."

"Indeed sister," Luna said from the stage, smiling at her older sister. "Would Leman Russ and Nyx Sparkle please come up here for your crowns."

Leman, blushing once more, linked his arm with Nyx as the two of them walked their way up to the stage with the student cheering them even louder then before, Twilight seemingly split between panicking, cheering, taking pictures and trying to cause Leman's head to explode with her look alone. The Little Mother, of course, was taking pictures as the prom photographer and father was smirking up a storm.

Leman smiled as the crown was placed on Nyx's head, barely aware of the one being placed on his head by a slightly annoyed Luna-annoyed by the fact he was tall enough that she needed to stand on her tippy toes to place the crown on his head.

Leaning over to Nyx's ear, he whispered a question to her as their hands intertwined with each other.

"Have a good prom Nyx?"

She gave him a peck on the cheek as they bowed, whispering into his ear.

"Best night _ever_."

And then she pulled him into a very long, very passionate kiss in front of everyone that caused one single mother to faint on the spot.

* * *

>Twilight stood next to Fluttershy and Emps, tapping her foot before sighing. She looked at Shining who was rubbing his face at what the kids did to get thrown into the holding cell.

"I understand it is _typical_ for teenagers to go to Makeout Point; I understand that." Twilight said, pacing in front of Leman, Nyx, Vulkan, Magnus, Konrad and the Dazzlings. "But what on _earth_ possessed you guys to seal a _car_ to go there?! You had limos!"

Nyx blushed, looking at the floor. "Sorry momma, but I just wanted to treat Leman and his brothers out for a night on the town. Besides, Auntie Lu- I mean, Vice Principal Luna doesn't mind when I borrow her car."

"Yes, when you _ask_!" Twilight countered. "Where did you even learn to hot wire a car!?"

"I read it in a book?" Nyx said with a weak smile, Leman chuckling before being glared at by Fluttershy.

"Regardless of the fact, I don't think Luna would have pressed charges if you had remembered to put the car in park, Nyxie-sticks." Shining said, eying the door for the eventual arrival of his extended family.

"I did!" She protested before blushing. "I just hit the gear shifter when we got out, it started going forward and..."

"And went off the top of Makeout Point, and into that old wooden library." He muttered, the specialized empty library in the shape of a tree was totaled along with the remains of the car.

Nyx could only groan in embarrassment, with Leman placing a hand around her shoulders as everyone else tried not to laugh.

* * *

>140.2 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Dash was sitting outside Sugarcube corner, resting her chin against a table as an exotic music flowed out of store. Twilight stepped towards the shop, to which Dash sighed. A ping echoed from the rainbow maned pegasus, to which Twilight quickly responded, being the only two loopers awake. She muttered, "We got a weird Pinkie this loop."

Twilight blinked. "She's not Cupcakes Pinkie is she?"

Dash shook her head. She continued to shake her head at every nasty, disgusting or downright evil version of Pinkie they ever encountered. After she finished, Dash pointed her hoof at the door, "Go see for yourself."

Twilight shrugged. "Sure. I could use a cupcake to wash away my last loop. Leah Clearwater wasn't even awake this time."

After opening the door, the purple pegasus saw Lyra and Bonbon dancing in a pair of dresses in the corner while a pony she recognized at the Apple family reunion was playing a fiddle. Twilight rang the bell, causing Pinkie Pie to appear in front of the counter, "Morning new pony I've never met before!"

Twilight nodded her head, "Morning. I just arrived in town to check that the preparations for the Summer Sun Celebration are completed and I felt a bit...peckish for a couple delectable confections."

Pinkie blinked, "Peckish, pony who hasn't giving me her name?"

Twilight looked a little bashful, having met Pinkie so many times she forgot to introduce herself, "Sorry. I'm Twilight Sparkle, Celestia's Personal Protege`. And I'd like to buy some cupcakes."

The pink pony's mouth opened wide, "Ooohhhh! That sound fancy! What's a protege`?"

The music had been going for quite a bit now and showed no sign of stopping. Twilight looked at them and sighed. "I'm the princess' student. What's with the dancers and fiddle?"

"That's sound swell! As for the music, it's what separates us from all the other cupcake shops in Ponyville."

This time, it was Twilight who blinked in confusion. "I'm sorry, other cupcake shops?"

Pinkie nodded. "Yepperoni!"

She leaned in close to Twilight, as if conveying a dark secret. "They're spread throughout Ponyville, just looking to take our customers."

Twilight quirked an eye at the pony. "Riiight. About those cupcakes?"

"Sure thing! What will you have?"

"Hmm...how about...a dozen Cloud Nines and another dozen Caramelicious."

Pinkie shook her head. "I'm afraid we're fresh out of Cloud Nines and Caramelicious is no longer being sold."

Twilight shrugged. "Never mind. How are you on the Lemon Meringue Pie?"

Pinkie held up a hoof. "Never at the end of the week, Miss. Always make it fresh first thing on Monday."

"Dang it. Well, hmm...what about Snickerdoodle?"

"Ah, well, we've been meaning to make some for two weeks for some special orders, but no Cinnamon Buttercream has come in."

Twilight gave Pinkie a skeptical look. "Yes...well it's not my day, is it. Do you have any Coco Coccoa?"

"Sorry."

"...Vanilla"

"Nope."

Twilight was catching a theme here. "Any cupcakes at all?"

"Ordinarily yes. But they were all bought up for a party for Diamond Tiara."

Sighing, Twilight nodded. "Ok. How about some cake? I enjoy a good red Velvet Cake."

Pinkie looked sheepish this time. "The competing Pastry shops bought the entire stock for the month. None for Sugarcube Corner."

"Do you have Chocolate cake?"

"It's not one of our most popular dishes in Ponyville."

Twilight looked shocked at that. "You got to be barking kidding me! It's one of the most widely sold cakes in Equus!"

Pinkie shrugged. "Not here though."

Rolling her eyes, Twilight asked, "What is the Ponyville favorite?"

Pinkie thought for a second, then replied with a big smile, "Fat Rascal!"

With a skeptical frown, the purple unicorn asked. "I...see."

Pinkie nodded enthusiastically. "Yes, It's unbelievably popular in these parts. I just sold some an hour ago. It's our number one seller."

A moment of silence pierced only by the music passed. "Is it?"

Pinkie reassured her it was. "Alright, then I'll have some...Fat Rascal."

Pinkie turned to the counters behind her, then turned back. "Oh yeah, that customer ordered the last of it."

With a nasty slap, Twilight's hoof met her own face. "Do you have any cake at all?"

"Of course I do. This is a pastry shop after all."

All the time, the music had been eating away at Twilight's mind. She turned around and shouted in the Royal Canterlot Voice. "WOULD YOU KNOCK IT OFF FOR A MINUTE! I CAN'T HEAR MYSELF THINK!"

As the music finally cut out, Pinkie patted Twilight on the back as the purple pony rubbed her horn. "You haven't asked me if we have any Princess Cake."

Twilight stared Pinkie in the eyes. "Is it any good?"

Pinkie shrugged and gave her a mischievous glance. "Could be."

Twilight nodded. "Ok...have you got any Princess Cake?"

Pinkie gave a flat no, to which Twilight muttered. "Of course not. That figures, it was the utter height of optimism to expect otherwise. Not much of a pastry shop, is it?"

"Finest in the town."

Twilight crossed her hooves and gave the Pastry sales pony a half lidded expression. "And what brings you to that conclusion?"

"It's so clean."

Twilight reached over and pulled Pinkie close. "You do have pastries here, don't you?"

Pinkie nodded. "Of course, silly filly."

Twilight looked Pinkie in the eye and cast a spell that would force Pinkie to tell the truth.

"Do...you...have...any...pastries...at...all?"

Pinkie tried saying something, but ultimately the response came out. "No."

* * *

>Twilight came out and sat down across from Dash, resting her chin against the table. "You want to try another pastry shop?"

"There aren't any. I've already checked a minute before you arrived at Sugarcube Corner."

"I'm taking a nap. We'll beat the evil out of Nightmare Moon tomorrow."

* * *

>140.3 (Gym Quirk; setup by Masterweaver)

Contrary to popular belief, most loopers did not know every individual native to their home reality.

Oh, there were exceptions of course. Sparsely populated loops tended to have high social interaction, and certain devoted loopers would take time out to at least make a census. Pinkie Pie had a particular chaotic spell that would automatically teleport her and her party cannon to any house if a resident she knew personally was having a birthday, and she'd spent whole loops tweaking the duplication effect and trying to meet every pony, griffon, minotaur, and other sapient life form native to Equestria. Still, for the most part loopers kept to their own, interacting with nonloopers only if they were close friends, family, or unawake loopers.

Granted, the Equestrians were a little freer in who they mingled with, out of some ancient herd instinct or simply the need for friends. Still, the majority of them didn't really know too many ponies outside of their baseline places of residence.

But the unending struggle to stave off boredom did result in impulsive behavior from time to time.

* * *

>All the pegasus known as Red Curtain knew was that there was a strange purple unicorn in his apartment, wearing a far far too wide grin, who had just promised to grant his every wish.

"Except sexual ones. I do have standards after all." The unicorn sipped her drink. "And all you have to do is be my friend for, oh... five, six years."

* * *

>All in all, Twilight did not indulge in these random acts of friendship very often. The amusement value was frequently offset by high levels of banality and frustration.

But every now and then, the rare and wonderful occasion of a genuine surprise did occur.

* * *

>"Would you be terribly offended if I declined your offer?" asked the middle-aged bespectacled earth pony mare.

"Um...What?" was Twilight's not-particularly-erudite response.

"Setting aside the farfetched nature of your claim and taking it strictly at face value, I would start by explaining that I am reasonably content with my life just now; any fleeting desires I may have would be just that: Fleeting.

"I suppose that, seeking proof of your claim, I could ask for a hayburger with cheese, no mayo. You would then either conjure one up with your magic, or more amusingly, proceed to my kitchen and cook one. Of course, as I have no hayburger buns, that option could prove problematic.

"Then I suppose I could ask you to cause my assistant to fall madly in love with me, but I'm certain that we both know that sort of thing never works out in the long run." She proceeded to point out the common problems and pitfalls involved with asking for wealth, fame, etc., making a point of stressing the Law of Unintended Consequences, matching the unicorn's own experiences quite closely.

Twilight stood mesmerized at the well-practiced cadences of a veteran lecturer.

"Essentially, I am fully aware of the comedic and ironic possibilities of the scenario you are proposing. Again not wishing to offend you, I am simply not interested in subjecting myself, or you for that matter, to such hijinks, Ms. Sparkle."

"Huh? You know me?" Twilight started to search through her loop memories for this odd pony.

"Not exactly. We do have an acquaintance in common, though," explained the mare as she went to a large desk piled with papers. She rummaged in a drawer and produced a business card.

_Dr. Genre Savvy, PhD

>Professor of Applied LiteratureCollege of Equinities and Esoteric Studies
>Canterlot University

"I attended the Manehattan Institute with Dusty Tomes; I believe he taught your 'Pre-Unification Unicorn History' classes at Celestia's School two or three years back. We've been fairly close for decades, and he has mentioned you a few times over the course of our correspondence. Pleased to make your acquaintance in person, Ms. Sparkle." The professor extended a hoof.

Twilight felt a genuine smile spreading across her face. "Professor?

Do you have some class syllabi I could look at? I find myself thinking I would greatly enjoy auditing your courses."

_There's probably nothing that I haven't already learned from experience, but it should be interesting to see how her formulation of the Laws of Narrative Causality compares with what Unseen University has to offer._

* * *

>140.4: (Gamerex27)

"Morning, Rarity!" Vinyl Scratch said as she cantered into the boutique. "Hey, is that giant mouse head ready yet? I was hoping you'd _Woken Up_ early, so you could finish it in time for-"

"HIDE ME!" Before Vinyl could collect the needed fabrics and threads sitting on a nearby chair, Rarity tackled her into a nearby closet.

"Ow! Ny think ny but ny tunge!" Vinyl moaned as she picked herself off the cramped floor.

"Tell them I'm not here!" Rarity hissed, as the din of a massive crowd started to make its way into Vinyl's flicking ears. "I _cannot_ deal with this again!"

"Who?" Vinyl asked, wincing as the pain slowly faded from her mouth.

"WHITE AND GOLD!"

"BLUE AND BLACK!"

"THE COLOR DOESN'T MATTER!" Rarity screamed on instinct, before she could stop herself. "THE DRESS LOOKS _FINE_ EITHER WAY! BOTH COLORS MATCH!"

"THE HERETIC IS HERE!" one of the voices yelled, as the banging at the door became louder. "BURN HER AT THE STAKE!"

"You _are_ Awake, right?" Vinyl asked over the roaring of the crowd and thudding at the front door. "Can't you take care of them?"

"They just keep coming back!" Rarity moaned. "Like cockroaches! No matter how many times I knock them out or paralyze them, they _keep_ coming back! _Nothing_ works!"

"Wait a second...aha!" Vinyl said, as she levitated the unfinished mouse head to the cabinet with her horn. "Here, put this on, and we'll sneak you out!"

The moment Rarity had shoved the hat onto her head, the door broke from its hinges, and was trampled to splinters by the herd of rampaging ponies barging into the building.

"YOUR DISGUISE SHALL NOT FOOL US, HERETIC!" the leader, a stallion with a paired question mark and exclamation point Cutie Mark said. "FOR YOUR CRIMES AGAINST _BOTH SIDES_ OF THE DRESS DEBATE, YOU WILL _PERISH!_"

"Sheesh, overkill much?" Vinyl muttered. "Hang on a sec."

She pulled a guitar out of her pocket, stood on her hind legs, and got into position to play a chord. "I WANNA _ROCK!_"

"**ROCK!**" the herd involuntarily yelled, as they were blasted off of their hooves by the sheer force of the power chord.

"C'mon, while they're distracted!" Vinyl whispered, dragging Rarity out the door. "What's going on, anyways?!"

"I Woke Up early," Rarity replied, "and I decided to make a dress based of something I'd seen in the Hub. But I never imagined it'd lead to a _civil war_ in Ponyville! I thought it was all in good fun before an Unawake Diamond Tiara tried to break my face when I said the dress looks like either color depending on the lighting!"

"That doesn't make any sense!"

"Things don't make sense all the time, and you don't see anyone complaining about that!" Rarity retorted, before running headfirst into a pillar.

"OWWWWwait, "she said, "there was _never _a random pillar here. So, that must be..." she trailed off, as she looked up.

Before both ponies, a gigantic version of an Unawake Sunset Shimmer (poorly disguised with Groucho Marx glasses) roared, teetering in place on her stilts and magically color-changing dress. "HAHAHAHAHA! MORE! MORE ARGUMENTS! MORE ARGUMENTS, SO I CAN TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE CONFUSION AND CONQUER THE WOOOOOORLD!"

"Seriously?" Vinyl asked, as she and Rarity prepared for battle. "Worst. Evil plan. _Ever_."

* * *

>140.5: (Bliss Authority)

"Good morning, Applejack! You look to be in one piece. Good to see ya after what the Sultai and th'Mardu have been up to - how many zombies did my favorite daughter and her soldiers bag?"

Applejack Awoke with a start. That voice couldn't possibly be -

She turned towards Bloomberg and stared. Hanging in the air above it, limned in white, were the ghostly forms of two ponies - one stallion and one mare; the former wore a Stetson, and both wore scale-mail barding and ferocious helms with carved faces.

"What's the matter, pard?" the stallion said, grinning. "You look like you just seen a ghost, sugarcube."

Applejack rushed over to the tree and hugged it. "Mom, dad, I missed ya," she said through her deep breathing.

"It's only been a few days at the front, girl," the ghost of Gravenstein Cider - the ghost of Applejack's father - said with a chuckle. "Come on. I know yer made of sterner stuff than that. You can outlast the bad times if we can."

She nodded, gritting her teeth. Applejack didn't know if she was going to hate this Loop or if she should spend it making up for lost time. "Sorry. Just a harrowin' experience. You know how them Sultai get," she said - hoping that her expression wasn't telling the truth her words omitted. "I gotta - I missed you," she said. "But now I gotta talk with some friends about my next step."

"Course. Make sure yah look after your brother, okay?" Apple Pancake's ghost said. "And you come back now. Still gotta teach you mah namesake."

Applejack blinked. "Can do, mom."

Then she consulted her Loop memories.

She was still Applejack, and she still ran an orchard with her brother and sister and her Granny Smith. But the Kin-Trees of Sweet Apple Acres housed the spirits of the Apple clan's dead. All of the Apple clan's dead. For she lead the entire Apple clan. Into battle.

She looked down at the barding she was wearing and saw an apple-shaped amulet - made of Kin-Tree Amber, with a cameo of Granny Smith carved into it.

"This is gonna be a long Loop," Applejack muttered as she entered the white stone castle that her loop memories indicated as her house.

"Eeeeeyuuuup." Big Mac offered her a mug of cider. The hard stuff. "Mah little sister, the Khan of clan Apple."

"Now don't you start too," Applejack said.

Winona turned her head to Applejack from her bowl of food - the one on the table - and grinned, tongue lolling. "Brothers tease, Khan," she said. "It may as well be a law of the Apple clan."

Oh right. Ainok were a thing here. Applejack took a deep pull from the mug of cider; she was really going to need it this loop.

(Applejack, the Foremost
>3WBGLegendary Creature â€” Horse Solider
>Whenever Applejack, the Foremost attacks, put a +1+1 counter on another target tapped creature you control.
>Each creature you control with a +1+1 counter on it has indestructible.
>"We'll serve our descendants well, but that's no reason to seek out death." >33)

* * *

>140.6 (Evilhumour with little bit from Masterweaver)

Twilight sighed, rubbing her face.

"I think Yggdrasil is running out of ideas of how to mess with my tree." She said to herself, looking at the fallen cut out of her home before rolling her eyes and leaving to get a drink.

Unfortunately, she had forgotten how bad an idea it was to test fate. The next loop, the tree transformed into a writhing tentacle monster that, for some reason, played the blues on a saxophone.

The ten loops after that were even stranger.

* * *

>140.7 (Evilhumour)

Twilight rubbed her face and looked at Pinkie Pie, Discord and the many queasy ponies around her.

It had seemed like a fun idea to deal with Nightmare Moon, by having her fall onto a trampoline that launched her back to the moon. Until Discord had made copies and hid them _everywhere!_

One moment Applejack was bucking a tree, the next moment she was on the moon coughing out moon dust. Rarity posing in her shop ended with her flying back with ice on her wings and a torn dress. One moment Rainbow Dash was snoozing on a cloud and suddenly she had to deal with the Federation asking her endless questions of surviving a warp seven face plant into the San-Francisco beach.

Somehow he managed to rig it that the Crusaders landed in a planet _full_ of tree sap after they went down a hill. The best, though, had to be her brother and sister in law celebrating their wedding night in deep space, still holding their bedsheets close to each other.

The worst though, had to be the 'misfire' when Tirek didn't soar through the sky but instead hit a flying Celestia -who would later report ended up in a bi solar system, which helped her improve her surfing skills- and rocketed towards Trixie's wagon as she was getting rid of her more dangerous explosions as she was trying to get back to her roots. He _then_, holding the ticking time bomb that was Great and Annoyed Trixie's home, landed face first into the Golden Oaks when Trixie's wagon finally exploded.

It took Twilight several _days_ to put out all the fires and rampant explosions, which finally gave her a chance to look at everyone and give them a lecture.

"-understand?!" She _finally_ finished her lecture, only to find herself as a tiny filly with a book fort around her.

The implications soon dawned on her and she groaned, placing her head forwards. Toppling her fort over, Twilight was suddenly airborne, with the curses that would get her filly mouth washed out as soon as Twilight Velvet and Nightlight pulled her out of the sofa.

* * *

>140.8 (Drachefly)

Twilight had thought it was nearly baseline - Celestia had closed the letter with 'take care', underlined, which was within the range of unusual variation with no far-reaching consequences, and the magic system was peculiar - until she arrived at Sweet Apple Acres. Each tree had a large bulging parachute-like sack over it, seemingly filled with balloons. But as she approached, she realized that the objects holding the sack up were apples.

"Since when do apples fall up?"

Spike, looking up with her, commented, "Actually, I think they're more like giant cherries."

Twilight's eyes widened. "Ooooooak. It couldn't be 'I Wanna Be The Guy'... could it?" Her horn lit up as she prepared the most intense and detailed danger-warning magic she knew. it took a few tries.

_None of the usual magic-detection magic works this loop. But, precognition is unusually strong. That'll do, I guess._

"'Oak'? And... what? Who is it you couldn't want to be? What are you doing?"

"Just... watch out. Don't touch the apples. Don't assume that things will stay put. If anything begins moving, dodge. Do anything I say, no matter how weird it sounds. And expect lots and lots of spikes."

"Well, I'm all set on thaaaaaaa-" He was suddenly catapulted towards her, but not before she'd teleported backwards a step. _I should have seen that one coming even without the precognition._

"What the hay?" He declared as he dusted himself off.

Twilight was frozen in place, looking into counterfactual futures, frowning. "All right. The moment I step off this rock, duck and take a step to the left. Ready? Two, one..."

* * *

>"It's all right sugarcube, you can make it. Just... jump."

Twilight eyed the extremely narrow, spike-lined passage skeptically.

"Honest."

_Ah. I guess I can._ She jumped. And landed safely.

* * *

>The manticore executed a three-paw landing once more, and this time landed directly next to Fluttershy. Before it could menace them once again, she reached out and pulled out the thorn. It waited a moment, then bounded away.

"Woot! Scared it off!" shouted Rainbow Dash.

Fluttershy corrected her, "The poor thing just had a thorn in its paw."

This produced confusion among most of the others. Applejack pointed out, "Wouldn't it be, you know, _dead_?"

Twilight facehoofed. Or nearly - she didn't want to risk an actual hoof-on-head collision.

* * *

>The trees didn't just shoot glares - they held up a rhythmic stream of fire, shooting three-meter-wide glowing orbs between them. Before Twilight could recalibrate her danger-senses to not just say 'don't go that way, period', Pinkie, of course, danced through the course with no difficulty.

"How did you manage that, dear?" inquired Rarity.

Rainbow Dash added, "Yeah, it's like you were passing THROUGH them."

Pinkie fell into song: "You see, when I was a little filly and I faced an evil clown, >the glowies and the shadows they would always make me frown,I'd hide in the corner, from what I thought I saw,
>But Granny Pie said that wasn't the way to deal with balls at all!She said, 'Pinkie, you've got to stand up tall
>Learn to turn off particle effectsYou'll see where they can't hurt you >just laugh to make them disappear!'"

Twilight began laughing, more from the abrupt insertion of the non-rhyme than from anything else; as she did so, the deadly core of the gigantic glowing balls was revealed, and they weren't actually that big. There was enough space between them that the path was a merely difficult timing puzzle.

* * *

>As they heard from Steven what had happened, Applejack muttered to Twilight, "Here's another monster from the Everfree, that can take a hit and _not_ explode_. 'tain't natural."

Twilight was going to say, "Did you know that Canterlot is not nearly as deadly as Ponyville?" but then she realized they were about to be faced with a problem.

Rarity, was of course, indignant at the offense to his appearance. "This will not stand! Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?" _I wonder what she's going to do now._

"Put me in a ball of force. All except my tail."

"Umm, what? I mean, okay."

And then, Rarity exploded in a gigantic fountain of guts. Stunned, Twilight passed the tail up towards the serpent. However, Rarity took over. "Now, now, I sacrificed one of my seven remaining lives for this. I'd like to have it _just so_."

"Sorry! I, ah, didn't realize the spawn point was so close."

* * *

>Twilight was used to a delay before the bridge straightened out. She wasn't used to it falling down halfway, then slowly, haltingly, jerkingly working its way back up.

"What the hay is going on over there?" muttered Applejack.

Fluttershy timidly eyed the spinning blade-like mists, "Do you think I should... check?"

Rarity said, "No, I don't think you'd make it through. The safe spot moves too fast for you."

Twilight channelled Lando Calrissian as she said, "We've got to give her more time." And then, quieter, "Come on, Dash, buddy?"

After six long minutes of waiting, the bridge was firm, repelling the gears, and Rainbow Dash appeared through the mists. She opened her mouth when Twilight interrupted, "RUN!"

The six dashed across the bridge, narrowly avoiding a volley of arrows from the forest. Almost to the end, she ordered, "STOP!"

A giant stone pillar thrust up and poked through the bottom of the bridge right in front of Applejack.

After a moment, Twilight said, "Proceed."

Once they were gathered on the other side, Rainbow Dash said, "Are we clear? OK. So, I'm hauling up the bridge when these costumed Wonderbolt wannabes show up, called themselves the Shadowbolts, and demanded I join them and abandon you. Then they asked..." she focused. "'Do you not decline to reject our offer to avoid being a member of the complement of the set of non-Shadowbolts? Yes or no. Opening your wings counts as consent to join the Shadowbolts.'"

Applejack's jaw dropped. "You got through that?"

She waved a hoof and blew the end clean. "Simple. I figured what they were doing and counted the negatives. I got through that in no time. Then they got annoyed and pushed me off the cliff, and loosened the bridge. So I had to grab it and come back up - with my wings closed. Pulling the bridge with me. With them flying around, distracting me."

* * *

>They entered the elements chamber. The way in had been eerily easy. Just as Twilight was about to reach the elements, a gigantic black keratinous wall slammed down in front of her, crushing them.

A bit of the roof collapsed, and Twilight looked up. Up Nightmare Moon's leg, which disappeared into the mists. "WHAT? All this, and we're only to the Mike Tyson fight?"

Nightmare Moon only laughed.

Rarity said, "We have bested your fruit, spikes, and..."

Rainbow Dash filled in, "... those guys!"

Twilight continued, "Now, we shall best you, Nightmare Moon!"

Nightmare Moon loomed closer. "No. Not Nightmare Moon. The Daughter."

Twilight's head cocked. "What?"

Nightmare Moon squinted. "Yes, now I recognize you. MOTHER. THE MANE. THE COLOR. THE CUTIE MARK."

Twilight just raised an eyebrow.

"Check your loop memories, mama. You know that none of this makes sense."

Twilight froze. She glanced around to the others, who had cracked wide grins. "Waaaaaaait. You mean it was all fake? But... Rarity! ... I didn't... oh."

Rainbow Dash laughed. "Why would _just Ponyville_ operate under video game rules?"

Twilight exclaimed, "Because it's near the Everfree? Trust me, this isn't... wouldn't have been the weirdest variant I've seen. How long did it take you to prepare this?"

Rarity put in, "Mainly, it was waiting for the right conditions. A variant with hard-to-detect magic, when we wake up early and have enough of us awake. We were actually about to set it off once, but then had a guest anchor and quickly canceled."

Pinkie raised a hoof. "I'm not awake. Say hi to me for me."

Applejack said, "Applebloom's going to be mighty disappointed she wasn't around for it, but I'm sure the crew got plenty of video."

Twilight sighed. "You guys."

* * *

>Ares mulled over the loop report Sleipnir had forwarded him.
Totally hacked together, but it might work... Hmm. Hmm. Nope.

* * *

>140.9 (KrisOverstreet)

"So, Bruce, how long has Pinkie Pie been wearing the Lasso of Truth?"

"About five hours."

"How long has Diana been trying to untie it?"

"About four hours, fifty-five minutes."

_"... and then I said, 'You can't use gouda in a cheesecake! That's silly!' But she wouldn't listen to me, and that's how we ended up with the Cheese Monster that Ate Ponyville! Well, almost ate Ponyville, I mean it doesn't really count if the buildings are all still standing and all, but 'the Monster that Almost Ate Ponyville' doesn't sound as cool! Don't you agree? It's really important that a monster's name sounds really cool. Poor Solomon Grundy, he doesn't get respect here because he has a silly name! He needs a more macho name, like, 'Grundy the Grinder!' Or how about 'Solomon Smash!' Oooh! Oooh! I know! 'Creature of the Cursed Swamp!' Nice and simple! Do you think you could get me to see Grundy so I can ask his opinion? I think he'll really like it! I wonder what else he likes? Do you think he likes cheesecake? I do! I love cheesecake! But not with gouda, because that's just silly!"_

"... so, poker night at your place, then?"

"No need. Alfred is sending up some cupcakes in a few minutes. That should lure her out of the lasso."

140.10 (Gamerex27)

"Mkay, _ths_ s jst _sylli_." Discord mumbled through his gag. "Hyyt d mi up cz I _stpd_ u frum blwing up a cti?"

Ignoring him, the pegasus guards hauled him in front of the throne, and promptly shoved him to the ground.

Finally managing to work his way past some of the binding runes, Discord turned his tongue into a pair of siccors, and cut the gag to pieces. "Pleasure to see you, _Celly_," he muttered.

The Princess beamed at him, but something..._sinister_ was in her eyes. "Discord. I'm surprised that it took you this long to wake up, with all the chaos those nasty humans are causing."

"_Nasty?!_" he said in disbelief, struggling to get up and falling back to the floor again. "They're a hell of a lot more _interesting_ than you ponies! I mean, how come I didn't go to Earth earlier? Have you _seen_ how wonderfully chaotic they are? I should buy a vacation home there! Maybe in the Bahamas, or Bermuda! Somewhere with a 'B!'"

"Leave us," Celestia said. Her guards bowed their heads, and cantered out of the room.

"Wow, not even a questioning order about leaving you alone with a spirit of chaos?" Discord asked mockingly, rolling his eyes. "Your little ponies are getting more and more _boring_ by the aeon."

"They _are_ newfoals," Celestia pointed out, a hint of pride in her voice. "They know how to follow orders."

Instantly, Discord's smile left his face. "Newfoals," he spat, grabbing his mouth and putting it back into its rightful place. "You mean those humans whose souls you remove and put all that icky harmony and friendship in their place?"

Looking left and right, Celestia's grin turned sinister, and she leaned in close to whisper to Discord. "I'm afraid that I don't know what you _mean_."

"Look," he said, "we all know you're going to kill me. Can you at least tell me what this is all about? Just between you and me?" Behind his back, he made the somatic motions for a charisma-boosting spell, working his magic.

Sure enough, Celestia laughed. "Oh, very well. Not like anyone else will ever know.

"Yes," she said, "I'm altering the newfoal's minds. Oh, they're still in there somewhere, I'd imagine, but not in control anymore. I suppose it'd be quite horrifying. But really, isn't it _ever_ so lonely_ with just one mind in there?"

"One mind?" Discord's eyes widened. "What...what are you talking about?!"

"You seriously haven't gotten it yet?" the being in front of him, who was certainly _not_ Princess Celestia, said. "You really believe everything you see?"

The alicorn was engulfed in a burst of green fire, burning away to reveal the queen of the changelings, Chrysalis.

"Oh my-CELLY!" Discord yelled, struggling back to his feet. "Your beautiful coat is gone! And you've turned into holey cheese!"

"No, you _foal_. _It is I, Queen Chrysalis!"

"But...why are you doing this?" Discord asked, horrified. "Aren't all those gooey pony feels enough for you?"

"In this modern age," she huffed, "there is more and more strife. So, I looked for a new food source, That happy accident with the humans' particle accelerator brought the continent here, and I seized my chance. I put Celestia into a coma, stuffed her in a closet, and took her place."

"That doesn't explain the ponification! How did you ever fool Celly's subjects into thinking the _nicest_ and most peaceful_ pony around would support _genocide?!_"

"A few changeling infiltrators there," she replied, "a few murders there, and such. Of course, the humans just _had_ to have too different neurochemistry for us to properly feed on them. So, naturally, I made a barrier to kill them off, and offered to turn them into ponies to escape death."

"But...that's diabolical!" he shrieked, making some very convincing tears. "Don't you have _any_ empathy?"

"You are one to talk of empathy," Chrysalis scoffed. "And besides, I do have empathy. For my subjects. What's a few murders and mind wipes here and there to feed millions of my species? But, I believe I've said enough."

"Have you, now?" Instantly, Discord's feigned emotions vanished from his face, to be replaced by a look of triumph.

"Er...yes," she said, suddenly confused. "I...believe I am supposed to give you some last words. Do you have any?"

"Oh," Discord said casually, "just five. And they are..."

Snapping his bonds like they were made of wet noodles, Discord gestured behind him, knocking over a nearby flowerpot to reveal the camera crew of Diamond Dogs filming the entire scene.

"Smile," he said, "you're on Canid Camera."

For a few moments, the entire chamber was totally silent. Chrysalis' eyes twitched. Twitched again. Her mouth opened, then closed.

Eventually, she was able to get one thing out. A high-pitched scream of terror and horror, as she realized exactly what Discord's plan had been.

"How much?" she shrieked, any trace of composure leaving her body. "How long were they there?!_"

"For the entire thing," Discord said smugly. "It was a stupid idea from the start. Yours, I mean. Kind, caring, and beloved Princess Celestia, suddenly becoming a genocidal and malevolent maniac? C'mon, you thought no one would see how hilariously out of character that was?"

As Chrysalis lunged at him out of desperation, he pulled out an oversized sledgehammer, and bopped her on the head. "I think I'll leave you here for the angry mobs forming on both planets to find," he said coolly. "Now, if you'll excuse me, I'm going to find Celly and go back to the good ol' days. Back when chaos was fun, and not all about killing and brainwashing."

* * *

>As soon as he left the hallway, he walked into the kitchen.

"Let's see here..." he muttered. "Aha!" he said, lifting up the fridge. "Always the last place you expect!"

As he yanked the comatose Celestia from underneath the fridge, he pulled out a cell phone. "I won the bet!" he said cheerfully, to the pony on the other end.

"For now, yeah," Twilight Sparkle agreed. "You beat the Doctor's record for 'least words to take down an oppressive regime,' but I'm going to kick your flank in this contest next time I end up with Brainwashlestia."

"Which one is that, again?" he asked, over the noise of police sirens and a screaming Chrysalis in the background.

"The one who was brainwashing everypony with the Elements of Harmony to eliminate suffering. Those things are hard to fight off, but actually fighting her was kinda sad, since breaking the spell on the whole world was easy once I'd fended it off in the first place."

"You going for four, then?" he asked. "Or do you want to step things up a notch, and go for three?"

"I guess we'll see when I'm in that Loop next (although I never want to go back there)," she said. "How about a drink with Fluttershy and I over in Paris to celebrate? No horrible French accent this time."

"Oh, Sparklebutt," Discord said, right before he vanished in a poof of smoke, "you know I can't promise that."

* * *

>140.11 (Bliss Authority)

Twilight Sparkle Awoke in both senses of the word and immediately regretted it. Her joints ached, she felt like she could swallow a lake from thirst without first Ascending, and -

Was she sunburned? And covered in furs?

She sprung to her legs - noting that she had all four of them, which was a small comfort - and took stock of her surroundings. A needle of sunlight was drifting in from the front flap of a tent; it reminded her of some of the yak and ibex handicrafts from just outside the Qilinese Empire. Among the possessions of whoever she had replaced were paper scrolls written in scarlet ink, a spear festooned with a dragon's skull (one that, thankfully, didn't look a thing like Spike), and a polished onyx octahedron. Her rations included daisy pancakes and dried noodles.

Twilight consulted her Loop memories, and then hissed in a breath. Apparently, this loop she would be playing the role of one Sparkhan Twi, the greatest expert in draconic magic across multiple worlds - and once thrall to an exceptionally dangerous dragon, Nicol Bolas. A dragon with what seemed to her to be a very familiar looking pair of horns - who wanted to steal the magic of multiple worlds, maybe blow up a few Kin-Trees while he was at itâ€¦|

She groaned, massaging under her horn. "Fused loop," she said. "Great."

It was then that she heard the deafening roar, and the bellow of a rhinoceros ("Krushok," her Loop memories provided) before that bellow guttered and died. Then squelching, and silence.

Twilight grabbed her spear in her will and set it to impale anything that entered the tent. Was that - was that a lion? Okay, granted, with all the tricks she knew from BASELINE, let alone from the loops and this plane's geomancy, she could take a lion. But she was, after all, a pony with something of a pony's instincts, and hearing a lion at her door was extremely unnerving.

She flung open the tent curtain.

The lion was there, pure white save where the blood of the krushok he was eating stained its nose and mouth red. It turned to Twilight, ears folded back and eyes widening even as the pupils contracted (without slitting; this was not a nocturnal cat). It lifted one paw towards Twilight.

Branch it. She was going to stop this fight before it began, using her in-loop powers. She drew on the ley-lines of two distant mountains from in the plane and used her spear as an extension of her horn, letting the fiery red mana twist around it and create an electrical arc.

"LIGHTNING STRIKE!" Twilight shouted. Huh. Must have spent too long in shounen loops.

The lion caught the bolt square in the chest and was physically flung back by it, and Twilight smelled the reek of burning hair. Then it recovered, rolling to land on all four paws, and snarled.

Then it bowed its head, closed its eyes, and _SPOKE._ In what had to be Bellepheric, no less. It raised one great, shaggy paw and conjured a pair of earth-ponies out of the pure, golden sunlight he traced with his claws.

They both drew their swords with their mouths and stood in defensive formation before the lion, eyes set and determined.

"Now that you've gotten that out of your system," the lion growled in a bass voice tinged with a Cloudsdale accent, "shall we skip the fight and introduce ourselves? Peace, Sparkhan Twi. Please tell me that you're Awake. Time is of the essence."

Twilight stared for a second, spear still pointed at the lion. Then she sighed, sitting down on her hind legs and swinging the spear fully upright in the same arc. "You've got some, uh. On your chin," Twilight noted.

The lion wiped his chin with the bottom of his paw and looked at the resulting bloodstain, then sighed before licking it off. "Sorry," he said. "I must look quite frightening to a pony. I'm not used to being a quadruped, or craving raw meat. It wasn't sapient, I made sure of that."

Root it. She was the Princess of Friendship, and she had all sorts of toys in her subspace pocket if things went south. "Yes, I'm Awake," she said. "Peace, lion. The Walk to the deserts of Tarkir has thrown me for a Loop."

"Quite understandable," the lion said. "I am Ajani, born of Naya. Theros is my home. Speaking of - you two can go home now," he said, dismissing the two summoned soldiers with a wave of his paw.

"This is normally a human-controlled loop?" Twilight asked. "I wonder why you're a lion instead, then."

"Because I am of the Leonin," Ajani said. "The majority of Planeswalkers are humans. I am an exception. My friend and partner who I Walked in with is currently an earth-pony. I suspect that a vampire associate of mine will be a bat-pony."

Twilight massaged under her horn. "Vampire. Associate."

"I respect what he does for the sake of the Multiverse far more than I hate what he must do to survive, yes," Ajani said. "He's an associate and an ally, not a friend."

"Gotcha," Twilight sighed. "Where are they now?"

Ajani shrugged, which was an interesting gesture to see on a lion. "Elspeth is out grazing - she found a plains full of clover, which she's going to bind for mana after - and Sorin is hunting. We were all hungry."

"Right."

Ajani started cleaning his paws. "By the way - allow me to state for the record that you're an excellent mother, judging by how well you've raised your daughter," he said.

She sat up. "You know Nyx? How?"

"She's saved Elspeth's life from an angry sun god a few times."

"Angry sun gods suck. Wait -" Twilight tilted her head at Ajani. "- We're fused with THAT world?"

"Dominara, known as Magic: The Gathering in the hub, yes." Ajani chuckled. "Forgive me my laughter - It's just that you're replacing - well." He smiled openly at Twilight Sparkle. "I can't WAIT to tell Sarkhan Vol of the Mardu he was replaced by a pony."

Twilight snorted. "Any particular reason why?"

Ajani laughed. "The Mardu are a horse-clan, that's why!"

* * *

>AN:

140.1: Certain relationship milestones.

>140.2: At least it wasn't the Dead Philomena sketch. (Wait, that's an actual episode.)140.3: Unfortunately, she meta stallion.

>140.4: Because of course there was.140.5: Crossover is Magic the Gathering. They're all quite a bunch of cards.

>140.6: Do Not Temp Happy Fun Tree.140.7: Moonshot!

>140.8: I Wanna Be The Filly?140.9: DC Comics, of course. Poor Justice League.

>140.10: ...actually explains a few things.140.11: Same deal as .5 - cardilicious.

148. Chapter 148

141.1 (Evilhumour)

Queen Twilight, Savior of Ponykind, Banisher of Tirek the Terrible, Mother of Equestria, Defender of All, and a lot of other titles, tapped Her hoof in annoyance. Her six daughters; Applebloom, Scootaloo, Sweetie Belle, Diamond Tiara, Nightmare Moon/Nyxie Poo, and Silver Spoon had done a _wonderful_ job in leading Her little ponies into a golden age after Her breakup with Discord ended up in a tiffle* that made Her rethink Her actions and let Her daughters start fresh on; in a fashion. She let them know of Herself; that She would brook no fighting between them. They would rule together and She outright refused to let any of them to know who was born first. She told them a few other dozen little rules; no banishing a sister unless it was outright required and She would come home _early_ to make sure, don't rule with an iron hoof, don't drink too much, don't abuse their rights as Princesses, the general stuff a mother and ruler would tell Her daughters before leaving to rediscover Herself.

What She _forgot_ to mention to Her five alicorn daughters and one draconequus was about _boys_. Her eye twitched as She looked over the last boyfriend, the one _damnable_ rugged alicorn stallion from another world, that was cuddling close to Her Nyxie-poo, with the other five _boys_ in similar situations with _Her_ daughters.

"So girls, want to introduce me to your boyfriends once again?"

* * *

>*Said tiffle resulted in new land formation, the Rebirth of the Three Tribes, the Reunification of Ponykind, the Era of SilenceDeafness, the Separation of the Tribes, the merging of the Three Great Herds, the Horrible Divide of the Eternal Herd, the minor intergalactic war with the Solar Republic, the Lunar Kingdom and the Everfree Nation against the Seapony Empire, the Rebuilding of the Unified Stable, which was toppled when Queen Twilight threw King Discord into the ruling capital city which dominoed into the toppling of the civilization and leading to the era of Wildness. After which, Queen Twilight turned the King into stone, gave birth to her daughters, brought forth Equestria and took off to rediscover Herself and possibly find someone who wouldn't forget their anniversary.Â°

Â°Among other things, like forgetting to take out the trash, leaving the toilet seat up, letting his chaos go a bit wild, and other little stuff.

* * *

>141.2 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"What the Bark are you doing?!"

One Twilight Sparkle watched in horror as the Crystal ponies smashed the blackened soot that had once been the remains of Sombra with sticks, bats, hoes, or anything they happened to be carrying at the time. A blue pony stepped forward, appearing sheepish, "We're just, letting off a thousand years of pent up aggression. You have no idea the horrors he inflicted on us what we were gone."

One of the crystal pony foals slammed his stick into the soot, which caused Twilight to snatch the gathered ponies' weapons out of their magic/hoooves with her own magic and shout, "You are better than this, better than him! Just go on with your life!"

Another whack on the ground caused Twilight to turn and see Pinkie with a stick in hoof. Twilight narrowed her eyes, "And what are you doing, Pinkie?"

Pinkie looked pleased. "Well, everyone else was hitting the pile of soot, I wanted to join in too. It looked like so much fun!"

Twilight muttered, "Pinkie, you are literally beating a dead horse."

Pinkie didn't even miss a beat. "Pony."

Neither did Twilight. "Whatever. You're one of the saviors of the Crystal empire, act like it, alright?"

"Okie-Doki!"

After the crowd dispersed, two unicorns wearing carny hats lifted the black soot. They grinned to one another as the one with a mustache spoke first. "You thinking what I'm thinking, dear brother of mine?"

The other one seemed almost giddy with excitement. "Indeed, dear brother of mine."

* * *

>Some Time Later

"Hey Twilight," Pinkie said as she poked her head into the purple unicorn's room.

Twilight replied, "Yes Pinkie?"

"You remember a couple days ago when you stopped us from beating Sombra's dead remains?"

Twilight rubbed her forehead. "I'm not going to like this, will I?"

Pinkie shrugged. "And you remember those brothers who tried cheating Applejack and her family out of their farm?"

Twilight groaned. "What did they do now?"

* * *

>Flim shouted. "Come one, come all, to the show of the century! Yes for just today, you can whack the evil, and dead, King Sombra!"

Flam continued. "Three bits a whack and no more than nine whacks at a time, but you can return to the end of the line for more whacking! Come one, come all!"

* * *

>141.3 (Evilhumour)

Addon to 84.20

As Emperor Guiding Light watched his son walk away with snigger still on his lips, the Captain of his Guards walked up to him. The pony went by the name of Little Kitten, which tugged on his mind for _some_ reason.

"My Lord?" The golden armor pony looked up at him with confusion on his face. "Does this weird stuff happen often in these loops that Lord Fenrir mentioned?"

The pony next to him had the rare privilege of the Emperor of Ponykind doing a double take with wide eyes. "Wh- what did you _just_ say?"

"I simply asked if this is a common occurrence in these loops my lord," the pony repeated his question, looking steadily at the now sweating alicorn that easily moved the sun.

"Yea- well, no, -actu-" Guiding Light shook his head, trying to get his thoughts in order. "You are the Captain-General of the Custodes, are you not?"

"Indeed my lord," the pony nodded his head. "Do you require any assistance my lord?"

"I-no- I - _Gah_!" The alicorn placed a hoof to his face, trying to calm and steady himself. "How _long_ have you been looping?"

"Only for about a hundred or so millenniums my lord," the pony responded as if it was the most natural thing in the world to have time repeat over and over again-then again, it was _their_ loop they were talking about. "Are you sure you are alright my lord?"

"Ye-yes, it is just a bit of a surprise to find out." He gave a weak smile to the pony next to him. "There are a number of materials I must go over with you now, but we shall be fine overall. This loop is relatively peaceful and tranquil, although if you have any questions or comments, please tell me now before we begin our lessons." Guiding Light smiled, gesturing with a wing to his private chambers.

"Nothing truly to report, my lord." The pony said with a nod of his head. "Although, I'm glad that my battle brothers don't run around naked and oily in this loop as my memories are informing me. Although, it seems to be a lesson that I have to frequently reeducate them on&#128;"

The Emperor of Ponykind could only groan as he facehoofed, hoping that whatever Lemon was dealing with was _far_ more mature and sane.

* * *

>141.4 (Evilhumour)

"Get back here Lemon!" Nyx shouted, chasing the yellow stallion across Ponyville with many turning their heads in confusion.

"Fluttershy told me about it and I want to see it _now!_"

"Never!" The earth pony jumped over several of the carts in the market street, landing nimbly on his hoofs with something pressed close to his chest as he ran towards the train station. "You'll need to pry it out my lifeless hooves-MEEP!" Lemon squeaked as Nyx teleported in front of him, causing him to rear back. Nyx used her magic to tip her boyfriend over into the fountain and grabbed the magazine before it was destroyed by the water. Using her wing to block the splash the sputtering stallion made, she took to the air as she looked at the pictures of Sour Punch that Photo Finish took.

Blushing and snickering, she had to admit that like his mother, Lemon made one _hell_ of a good model.

* * *

>141.5 (Ryuus2 with some of Wildrook's ideas)

Almaz sat quietly at his desk and pretended he was paying attention to the lecture his teacher was giving. Normally he would at least try to pay some attention, but he'd sat through this lesson so many times he could recite it by rote...while asleep. The only reason he was even here right now was because he Woke up at the desk and was too polite to leave in the middle of class if it wasn't an emergency. Instead, he mentally went over his plans for this loop...which amounted to "get closer to Princess Sapphire to try and get her looping."

"Alright class, we've got a new student today!" He turned to the door and shouted, "Get in here!"

What walked into the classroom was the single strangest creature Almaz had ever seen, and in this school that was saying something. It's entire body seemed to be a mish mash of different parts in a roughly draconic shape. Its head was vaguely equine with a cropped mane, its body was serpentine and covered in feathers, and it had a dragon's tail. On its left side it had an ibis' horn, birds wing, eagles talon, and bulls hind leg. Its right side had a deer's antler, bats wing, lions paw, and a dragons back leg. And every part was a different color, like a child's color by numbers picture. "Hello, I'm Discord! And I'm going to become this schools Number One Delinquent!"

Just then, another Discord drove by the classroom on a Vespa shouting, "Top Honour Student! Yeah!" before speeding away.

"I hope we all have a Looping good time!" Almaz's head snapped back and forth between the duplicated student and the extra capital letter added to the subtitles...that hadn't been there before. It said something about the nature of his universe that twin chimeras and spontaneous subtitles didn't warrant more than a surprised shrug from anyone in the class. Before anyone could ponder it too much, dual shouts from either side of the room quickly distracted them.

"Darn it, let me in!" Raspberyl shouted from outside the classroom as she banged her hands against an invisible barrier.

"Damn it, let me out!" Mao shouted from the desk he was cocooned to in the front row seat farthest from the door.

Almaz choked back a snicker. Neither of the demons was looping this time, but whoever had the balls to do that would certainly be in trouble when the two tracked them down. Turning back to his desk, he saw that Discord had taken the seat next to his and was presenting a claw to shake, specifically his right leg with his left paw. "Hello, Discord, Equestrian Looper and demigod of Chaos."

Almaz took the appendage with a queasy smile, not sure if he even wanted to think about how he was doing that. "Almaz, hero and Anchor of...I think he called it Disgaea?"

"Oh good, you've had the multiverse talk already. I was wondering when I didn't receive a ping back earlier."

"Yeah, someone named Blues gave it to me just a few loops ago. I'm still getting used to all the new terminology, and I'm not that good at sensing or sending pings yet." Almaz scratched his head in embarrassment. Then something Discord said struck him. "Excuse me, but, I thought Equestria was supposed to be full of horses?"

"Ponies mostly," Discord shrugged. "But we also have Griffons, Dragons, Sheep, Cows, Minotaurs, Chickens-just about everything you could find on a farm or in a mythology textbook. I myself belong to a uniquely elite breed of chaos spirits known as Draconequii. So elite, that there are only two of us in all the loops, and rarely both of us on Equestria at the same time." Once he was done pontificating from the stage that used to be his desk, he snapped his fingers and was back in a normal seat. "It's good you've already had the talk. If you have any questions, I believe Twilight Sparkle, Equestria's anchor and most accomplished bookworm, has replaced your librarian this loop."

"Er, will she be okay?"

* * *

>Meanwhile, in the Library.

"Hello, I'm the new Librarian, Twilight Sparkle. The library is for studying and reading. Troublemakers will immediately be removed from the premises."

"By who, you? Bwa Ha Ha!" An unruly freshman demon punk taunted.

"No, I leave that job to my assistant," she said matter of factly.

"And what's he, a bunny rabbit? Ha!" Another punk ribbed, getting guffaws from his friends.

"Actually, he's the giant dragon breathing down your neck." The punks turned around and came face to snout with a fully grown, unawake, Spike, who proceeded to snort out a plume of smoke that left the punks coughing ash. "Be glad it's not the rabbit; he's a lot less gentle." _Even when he's not awake, _Twilight thought humorously.

* * *

>"She can handle herself."

Not to be forgotten, Mao had finally broken free, and he and Raspberyl had started peppering their respective sides of the doorway with attacks in hopes of breaking through. Right as they were about to release some of their more damaging attacks, Discord snapped his fingers and the two blasted each other through the no-longer-there barrier. As they were getting up, the other Discord drove by again, and hit them both with lemon meringue pies. They immediately drew weapons and chased after the laughing chaos sprite.

Through his laughter, Almaz managed to pull a couple of cloaked surveillance drones out of his subspace pocket to send after them. This loop had just gotten a lot more interesting.

Later that loop:

"Pretty pony princess...chibi demon cutie...I cannot decide! I must hug them both!" Princess Sapphire shouted before leaping at the two cutest residents of Underworld Academy for a double glomp.

Almaz fought desperately to hold back his laughter as his drones recorded the scene. He'd heard it was decidedly hard to get dirt on the Equestrian anchor, and it couldn't hurt to have something for the Princess and Raspberyl down the line.

* * *

>141.6 (Evilhumour)

Rarity's ear twitched as she heard loud arguing and shouting outside her shop, faintly aware of the familiarity of the voices.

Without warning, an obsidian alicorn stallion flew into her shop, a grin on his face as he levitated a magazine over to her.

"-xy, _please don't!_" a yellow alicorn mare whined as she flew into the Carousel Boutique, landing with a pout and blush on her face.

"Sorry, Lemon-er Sour Punch, but this was _needed!_" The stallion grinned at her, puffing out his chest. "See how good she looks, Aunt Rarity?"

"Indeed." Rarity raised an eyebrow, a tiny bit surprised of much her friend's adoptive son was just as stunning as a model as she was. Then again the loops had a strange kind of humour. "And it is good that you brought her in, darling." Rarity smiled to the stallion of the moon, whom she often foalsat herself.

"Wait, what?" Sour Punch blinked, looking between the two ponies in front of her.

"I know, it's the _only_ way I can _actually_ _get_ her in something without having to search all of Equestria for her." Erebus huffed, rolling his eyes. "Do you know the last time I tried to do so, she hid for the _entire_ loop?"

"Tsk tsk, that won't do." Striding towards the back of her shop, Rarity used her magic to lock the doors and windows. "Would you be a dear and not buck down my walls? If you do, I will tell Fluttershy." She heard a chuckle from the stallion and a groan from the mare behind her. "Nor can you teleport out, as I have far more experience in magic than you."

"Bucking _tree_..." the mare muttered darkly behind her, the stallion laughing louder.

"Well, I _told_ you should have practiced your magic a bit more, but _noooo_." The stallion had brought the mare into the room with Rarity, the air filling with measuring tapes.

"Yah, yah," the mare grumbled, stepping onto the podium. "_Please_ no frills; my brothers will _never_ shut up if they hear about it."

"Oh darling," Rarity said, her smile inspiring fear in the heart of the anchor of one of the harshest Loops. "I'm going to make you _so _lovely!"

* * *

>141.7 (Evilhumour)

Nyx tapped her hoof on the ground, looking at sweating and panicking man sitting next to her.

"Come on, you can _do_ this!" She ignored the snickering they were getting from the Space Wolves, neither of them bothered to try and glare at the marines anymore.

"It's just so... _dainty_." Leman grumbled as he placed his hands on the wheel. "I mean, why can't I just drive a tank?"

"Because not everything is a Spruce tank!" She snapped, flapping her wings as the snickering started to die off. "Please, for _me?_"

The Space Wolves certainly did _not_ d'awww at the sight of the pony giving their king the puppy dog eyes nor did they glare angrily at their king for daring to say no to her. Leman _did_ blush at her big, beautiful eyes and turned his head towards the screen before sighing. "Alright Nyx, for _you_." He leaned up to give her a kiss on her cheek before cracking his fingers. "I mean, how hard can this driving simulation be?"

Later, Leman would learn to regret saying those words when he managed to drive his car into the ninth floor of a ten story building and then into a twelve story high building roof pool across the city to the amazement of everyone involved. Nyx just shook her head and slapped Leman with a pillow as to get him used to the concept of airbags.

* * *

>141.8 (Evilhumour)

The library door opened as two wolf cubs walked in, sniffing around. Twilight recognized the two as Geri and Freki, but why were they he-

All of a sudden, Freki leaped behind the sofa.

With a yelp, a yellow foal tried to run the other way but Geri was standing in his way.

"Traitors!" The foal shouted as Geri and Freki pressed into the colt, and dragged him out. "I don't wanna take a baaaaaaaaaaaaath!"

* * *

>141.9 (Gym Quirk)

Fluttershy Awoke to the sound of the bell on the door to Carousel Boutique. She peeked over the counter to see Spike dragonhandling a large birdcage toward her.

"Hello?" he said. "I wish to register a complaint."

The pegasus glanced around at the variety of cages and concluded that she was the proprietress of a pet emporium. She continued to crouch behind the counter.

"Hello, miss?" the dragon called.

Gathering herself, she stood taller and looked at the cage Spike was attempting to lift to the counter. "Oh. Hi, Spike. What seems to be the problem?"

"I wish to complain about this phoenix I obtained not half an hour ago from this very boutique."

She decided to let the loop memories provide details of the transaction. "Ah. The Everfree Red? What's...um...What's wrong with it?"

"I'll tell you what's wrong. He's dead. That's what's wrong."

"Are you sure he isn't just resting?"

Spike gestured at the pile of ash at the bottom of the cage. "No. I'm pretty sure I can recognize a dead phoenix, and that's one right there."

Recognizing the setup, the pegasus decided to play along with a mental shrug. "No. He's clearly resting. Remarkable bird, the Everfree Red; lovely plumage."

"The plumage is beside the point. He's stone dead."

"Nonononono..."

"All right. If he's resting, I'll wake him up." The dragon cupped his claws and bellowed into the cage: "Hey! Peewee! Up and at 'em!"

A yellow wing reached out and nudged the cage. "There. He moved," Fluttershy suggested.

"That was your wing hitting the cage," accused Spike.

"Oh...I guess you're right. But I'm afraid you may have stunned him with your yelling."

"Stunned?"

"Um...yes. The Everfree phoenix is easily stunned, you know."

The dragon regarded her with an incredulous look. "Fluttershy? Are you okay? I mean I got Peewee home from here just a little while ago and he burst into flame and is now just a pile of ash and soot."

"Well, he probably thought there was a timberwolf nearby or something. Remarkable bird, the Everfree Red. Wonderful plumage..." she repeated with quiet enthusiasm.

"Timberwolf? Seriously? Look. He's passed on! This phoenix is no more! Bereft of life, he rests in peace! His metabolic processes are now history! He's kicked the bucket, shuffled off his mortal coil, run down the curtain, and joined the great migration! THIS IS AN EX-" Spike trailed off, blinking, "...phoenix?"

The dragon was showing the tell-tale signs of a newly-awake looper.

"Fluttershy? Have we been doing the 'Dead Parrot' sketch with Peewee?"

"Sorry, Spike. I couldn't resist. Here. Let me bring him back for you. _Regenerate_."

As the druid spell took hold, the ashes reconstituted themselves into a small bird, who cheeped apologetically.

Any further discussion was cut off by the door opening.

"Fluttershy! We would have words with thee," declared a midnight blue alicorn as she strode into the shop.

"Oh. Hello, Princess Luna. What do you need?"

" 'tis about this possum you did provide us yestereve. We fear that he may have expired."

Spike regarded the motionless opossum on the princess' back. After stretching out with his Force senses, he shook his head. _I don't think the princess will appreciate the joke, Admiral..._

* * *

>141.10 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Celestia looked at the stars, a sigh escaping her lips as four particularly bright lights in the night sky descended behind the moon, causing the mare image to disappear. And then, the four stars started drifting back outwards. Celestia blinked in confusion. A very familiar voice echoed beside her, "Blast these stars. I look away from them for a second, and they go right out of place."

The white Princess turned to the pony next to her, a familiar navy blue alicorn with stars in her mane and a crescent moon mark on her flank. Afraid that this was a dream and that she would wake at any moment, the white princess reached a hoof out slowly, and touched her sister. Her throat dried up and she couldn't speak as Luna turned to her and tilted her head in confusion, "Uh, Tia, do you mind? I'm trying to get this just right."

Celestia blinked, looked at her hoof, then touched Luna again. This time, however, the moon turned a violet color. The night princess groaned in frustration, "Yes, yes, I'm here, I'm alive, you're not dreaming. Look what you made me do! Now I'll be stuck all night trying to fix this."

Luna started muttering minor tree curses as the color of the moon shifted to pink, then cyan, and then so brilliant white that it was basically daytime once again.

* * *

>141.11 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

The sound of metal rattled overhead as Twilight rested against the wall in a Canterlot Dungeon. Her hoofs were strung up overhead and around her were her best friends and the two princesses in equally dire situations. Each of the Unicorn's horns were covered in a magic inhibiting material, as were the Alicorns' horns as well. Dash looked to her hoofs and asked in a mildly annoyed tone, "Remind me again how we got into this dark situation?"

Fluttershy looked away, "Well, that one was actually me. Last loop was a stealth loop, and Rarity ended up going to Iron Will's seminar. Through a bizarre turn of events, Rarity felt empowered through his seminar and accidentally turned herself into Nightmare Rarity. So this loop, I wanted a break from Iron Will. With Mac's suggestion, Iron Will presented his seminar to Canterlot instead...mostly...the nobles I think..."

Applejack asked the most pertinent question in a dry tone, "Since we're all loopin' here, how'd they get us again?"

Rarity answered, "I think they put sleeping droughts in our drinks at Celestia's party last night."

The doorway opened a second later. Two pony guards lead in a shouting Blueblood, "Get your hands off me, peasants! I started this revolution, I should be the one leading it!"

One of the Unicorn guards must have finally had enough, as Blueblood's head glowed orange for a second, and then his shouting ceased. After being chained up and once the guards had left again, Twilight allowed the Force to flow through her, and sensed he was not dead. "Sleeping spell. This sounds like the French Revolution. Might be best to escape before things get any worse out there. They might even start cutting off the oppositions' horns soon if we don't."

With that, all the chains opened (except Blueblood's, who they laid out on the dungeon floor after pulling out his chains from the wall) as eight ponies landed on the ground. Six ascended a second later.

With one strike of her hoof, Applejack knocked the door off its hinges and issued the other ponies out. Celestia would go on to use this incident as means to put an end to the Nobility completely. Fluttershy, unfortunately, was tasked with handling Day Court for the loop as a small punishment for her part, but she accepted it humbly.

* * *

>141.12 (Bliss Authority)

The four Planeswalkers made an odd quartet as they made their way across the unforgiving desert of the Salt Lick Road.

On the ground, one earth-pony mare with golden hair and a mane split between green, blonde and blue, in full barding of Bantian articulated plate, loosely holding a shining spear of white steel that glittered with inner sunlight in a forehoof, sitting upright mounted on a great and regal white lion - and debating the merits of Theros stoicism with that lion.

Next to them, likewise armed with a spear festooned with dragon bones and Zendikari octahedrons, was a purple unicorn with a streak of red and another of blue in her violet mane, clad in furs and scale mail made painstakingly of real dragonscale - shed from willing donors.

In the air above them, soaring on great leathery wings, was an ashen batpony with milk-white hair and eyes clad in black armor, who was sucking the juice from a mango with his fangs as he flew with great gusto.

Elspeth, Ajani, Twilight Sparkle, and Sorin Markov carefully made their way across the alkali sands towards the site of Ugin Spykoranvellutar's Nexus - when they saw a flash of blue.

The very air around them detonated in an explosion of rainbows and deafening thunder as Twilight was knocked to the ground, a hoof on her throat.

A wild, ululating cry sounded in the distance: an orcish shaman, shaking a rattle made of pony skulls and dragon-bone. Suddenly, unicorns, earth ponies, orcs and goblins on the ground surrounded the four of them; pegasi and griffons circled them in the air.

A pair of carmine-red eyes bored hatred into Twilight's own, fluttering rainbow hair above it, blue wings spread. "Sparkhan Twi," the pegasus snarled. "Welcome back to the Mardu. Do you like what I have done with the clan you abandoned?"

Twilight quickly consulted her loop memories. Her 'friend's' name in this reality was Rainbow Helmdasher, and - oh. "Great khan of the Mardu, old friend," Twilight said as best she could through the weight on her throat. "Nothing I can say can erase the pain of your allies dying in the fire. All I can say is that my draconic power, my Spark, was not yet Awake. My own parents were caught in the flames, great khan Rainbow Helmdasher. I had to leave so that my power wouldn't endanger the clan. To say it threw me for a Loop was an understatement."

Rainbow Helmdasher's ears twitched. She smirked, and it was a cruel smirk. "So you just left? To dally with the Surprai and their meaningless wisdom? The Apples and their reliance on shades, memories, and the children of the orcs they kill? Or perhaps you went to the Sultai seeking forbidden knowledge?" She laughed, bitterly, then snarled again. "Traitor!"

Oh root and branch, she wasn't Awake. This was not good.

"Nice army you've got there," Elspeth said, her voice cool and calm. "Shame if something were to happen to it."

"Lame-o is bluffing," one of the griffons shouted. "Just kill them, Dash."

"In a moment, Gilda Razorclaw. In a moment. To lead is to bleed, and this is the blood I would spill." Her red eyes never left Twilight's. "I must have words with the disloyal. You have returned in fire, traitor. I would see you leave as ASHES!"

"Have you ever seen the Wrath of God?" Ajani said. "A great explosion, a fireball of sunlight to blot out the sky? It isn't a pretty sight. It is not a spell to use lightly or without forethought. And three of us know how to cast it."

"Or perhaps moreâ€¦ targeted destruction," Sorin said, landing on two legs to properly gesture with his fetlocks. "A taste of conjured hemlock, perhaps? Or perhaps the dread Rite of the Serpent, practiced by naga cultists in the swampy jungles of the Sultai? Perhaps a blade of pure void that annihilates the first creature it touches would suit. "

"Ixnay on the oomday ladeblay, Sorin." Elspeth hissed. "Therosian, base and Khanate spells ONLY. I don't want to risk Eiken in the morning."

"I thought that Doom Blade had been patched," Sorin sighed. "It's such a fun one. I suppose it's for the best, given how black their hearts are; having them removed won't help."

Gilda landed before him to point a talon. "You dare insult the Mardu?"

Sorin buffed his hoof. "My dear, I have faced vampire lords, werewolves, rakshasa, and world-eating horrors. Why should I be frightened of a griffin with more beak than brain?"

Gilda spread her wings and reared up rampant. "You're going down, milk dud!"

They heard the sound then, like the clattering of bowling pins against a great swirling ball of dragonstorm. The earth-ponies, unicorns and orcs around them went down in a crashing concussive wave, almost all of them with enough time to react clutching a vulnerable point and falling with wordless screams.

"WHO DARES!?" bellowed Rainbow Helmdasher.

A familiar musical voice that squeaked like bubblegum sounded throughout the Salt Lick Road. "I am the terror that prunks in the night!" it said with glee.

Sorin just raised an eyebrow.

A blur of pink and saffron sent one earth-pony collapsing in a heap before it bounced high in the air and hung there for a second, framed by the sun. "I am that little bit of sand that gets stuck in your shoe before it becomes a pearl of wisdom!"

Twilight started laughing, before Helmdasher applied a little more pressure. The other planeswalkers just boggled.

Well, Elspeth and Ajani boggled. "Really?" Sorin said with a sigh, shaking his head and chuckling.

"I am the cloud that rains on your hit parade, the enlightened master of the Way of Fun championed by the Surprai!" the pink blur said, landing in a fetlock-stand before Gilda - and taking her down as she twirled in a spinning kick. She pronked again, landing in a perfect Horse Stance in front of Rainbow Helmdasher, her necklace of white, red, and blue pearls bouncing off her barrel. "I am PINKIE NARPAI!"

"YOU!" Helmdasher snarled, drawing and swinging a sword in a single blinding motion - only to have it knocked up and away with a perfectly executed high block. Dash drew her other sword, lifting the oppressive weight on Twilight's throat and leaving her gasping for breath, and thrust; Pinkie gave ground in a flip kick that battered the blade away from her vitals. "Surprai lotus eating navel-gazer! I have words for you as well! Mardu - deal with the four interlopers while I handle Narpai!"

With a wild scream, the Mardu that could charged at the planeswalkers.

Twilight slammed her hooves on the ground and channeled red-hot mana from beneath the mountains of Tarkir, calling forth goblins of her own to defend her; her allies did likewise. Ajani summoned his lionine kinfolk and Elspeth an angel - which looked suspiciously like an alicorn with an Avacyn bident - using power from sun-drenched plains. And where Sorin gestured with his sword, skeletons clawed their way out of the groundlike bubbles from under a swamp.

Dash swung a forehoof at Pinkie in a single, bone-breaking punch. Pinkie smirked, and held up the frog of her own hoof - and channeled mana into it. Dash was thrown back by the force of her own punch, and Pinkie bounced over her - with a knife at her throat.

"Say it," Pinkie said. The Mardu hordes stopped to stare.

"Never," Dash hissed.

"Say it, or the Mardu die."

Sorin gathered up crackling void in his hooves to shape, just in case.

"Very well," Rainbow Helmdasher sighed. "Though it pains me, I must say -"

"HERE'S YOUR WELCOME TO TARKIR PARTY, TWILIGHT SPARKLE!" every single Mardu present - and Pinkie - yelled. Pinkie pulled a table set with an entire Quilinese banquet out of her pocket, and pulled a pair of chopsticks out of her mane. "YOU DONE GOT PRANKED, TWILIGHT SPARKLE!"

Twilight's jaw dropped, as did Elspeth's. Ajani facepawed, and Sorin sunk to his knees, clutching his head, laughing.

"Were you surprised, Twilight? Huh? Huh?" Pinkie said, bouncing in place. "One I knew Rainbow and Gilda were awake and she told me her loop memories we got an epic prank and party for you!"

"I am going to murder you in your sleep!" Twilight howled, though she was smiling.

Gilda was rolling on the ground laughing as Rainbow Helmda- Rainbow DASH offered her fetlock. Twilight took it and Rainbow Dash pulled her roughly up. "Oh, come on. The look on your face was priceless, come on. We set it up so that no one would get hurt and all the Mardu were in on the joke."

A goblin bounced and hooted. "We scare Twi Twi good! We scare Twi Twi and all Mardu laugh laugh laugh!"

"Welcome to the Equestrian Loops, kinda! Have some cupcakes!" Pinkie said, bouncing over to the Planeswalkers and handing each one a confection.

Elspeth bit into hers. "â€|This is Bant honey-cake," she said.

"And mine is filled with cherry syrup," Sorin remarked.
"Amusing."

"I come prepared," Pinkie Pie said, her voice solemn.

(Courtesy of Set Designer FoME:

Rainbow Helmdasher
>1RWBLegendary Creature â€" Pegasus Warrior
>Flying, hasteRainbow Helmdasher attacks each combat if able.

>Rainbow has indestructible as long as it's your turn.Whenever Rainbow attacks, defending player may sacrifice a creature. If he or she does, put a +1/+1 counter on Rainbow and prevent all combat damage it would deal this turn.
>42

Pinkie, Enlightened Jester 1URW
>Legendary Creature â€" Horse MonkFirst strike, hexproof

>Whenever Pinkie, Enlightened Jester attacks, exile the top card of each player's library. Until end of turn, you may cast noncreature, cards exiled with Pinkie this turn without paying their mana costs.
(Permanent spells cast this way enter the battlefield under your control.)"Within fun lies true wisdom. Plus, you know, it's fun!"_
>32)

* * *

>141.13 (Gamerex27)

"You...want to learn martial arts?" Rainbow Dash asked, tilting her head.

"Yep!" Pinkie Pie said, doing some stretches to make sure she wouldn't strain herself. "I can't think of any new recipes at the moment, so I'm gonna try something different this Loop!"

"...Pinkie, you can't learn martial arts just for kicks. There's a serious commitment you have to take for this. Years of training, and centuries of practice to make sure the muscle memory sticks in between Loops?"

"C'moooooon," she whined, "we're in a time Loop! We've got forever and ever to do whatever we want! And it looks like a lot of fun!"

"...alright, then," Rainbow Dash said, smirking suddenly. "Just remember: you asked for this. We'll start tomorrow."

* * *

>She was having the most wonderful dream: she had baked a cake as big as Equestria, with an oven the size of the Moon. It wasn't easy: she had used the most exotic ingredients, from Saddle Arabian cane sugar to golden egg yolks to love-crystalized, solid love taken from her own heart, that is. She put down the icing tube, satisfied of the murals of her friends partying, playing pranks on baddies, and beating up that nasty, mean, awful Naok-uh, the Fiend that they had fought in recent memory.

Slowly, and with great pomp and circumstance, she cut a piece of the cake no bigger than her hoof: everypony knew the first slice was the best, after all. She brought it up to her mouth, and-

"WAKE UP, YOU SLACKER! FIVE LAPS AROUND PONYVILLE, NOW!"

Pinkie jumped at least twenty feet in the air in surprise, leaping right out of her dream and back into the real world, just short of smacking her head on the ceiling.

"Hey, Dashie..." she muttered, a bit groggily, " it's a bit early for-"

"No buts!" her new sensei shouted. "Now, get going, unless you want to run ten instead! And no using toon physics, that's cheating!_"

* * *

>"She's been running for hours, and you haven't let her stop," Zecora commented as Pinkie Pie galloped towards them, panting heavily. "Isn't this a bit over the top?"

"It's not the exercise," Dash noted, "it's the discipline. Pretty much every martial art I know has some kinds of trials you need to do to learn the cool stuff-endurance tests like this, for instance. Annnnd that's the last lap," she finished as Pinkie stopped in front of them, before promptly collapsing into a boneless Pinkie Pie-shaped puddle of flesh.

"So...tired," she said, as she shakily rose to her hooves.
"Need...glucose...or...maybe...a...sugary...drink..."

"Okay, you get a ten minute break to eat," Rainbow Dash told her, ignoring the gasp of shock, "and then we start with the 'the floor is lava' test. No ascending to fly out unless you're really going to fall in, and yes, it's _real_ lava."

"But won't the heat of being near it boil her alive?" Zecora asked, as she removed a stamina potion from her Pocket and hoofed it over to the distressed Element of Laughter. "The convection alone will cause her coat to get skived."

"I...just...wanted to...learn how to buck bread into shape!" Pinkie panted before she chugged down Zecora's brew, wincing at the bitter taste. "I wanted to hit dough and say 'you are already bread' to cook faster!"

"You wanted to-" Rainbow Dash facehoofed. "Wanting to make a pun is a _really bad reason_ to subject yourself to this. Are you sure you don't want to stop?"

"I...need _something_ to do!" Pinkie Pie told her. "There's always a shortage of sugar this month, and I ran out of the supply in my Pocket, so I need _something_ new to do, or else I'll get _boooooored!_"

"Alright, then," Dashie said, shrugging. "Since you're my friend and all, I'll grab some hot coals instead of real lava. Not really traditional, but learning balance is better when you only risk second degree burns rather than fifth or so."

* * *

>141.14 (Filraen)

It was the first morning of a new Loop and a currently human Twilight Sparkle was making breakfast for her guests. She, along with Celestia and Scootaloo had Awoke the previous day in this seaside cabin and since it was getting pretty late by the time of their Awakening they decided to stay the night at the cabin, which according to their loop memories was Twilight's anyway.

_ 'Let's see, lettuce and tomatoes should be...'_ Twilight stopped herself at hearing someone coming from the bedrooms.

"Good morning," the usually-a-pegasus yawned to nobody in particular.

"Good morning Scootaloo" Twilight greeted back. "There's milk and coffee ready if you want some."

"Please." Scootaloo poured herself a cup and started drinking.

Halfway through her cup Scootaloo could feel herself a bit more awake
"Oh, that's better. New loop, here-!"

"Shut up!" Twilight's quickly hushed Scootaloo. "You'll ruin the surprise for Celestia if you shout that loud!"

"For Pr- Celestia? Are you cooking something for breakfast?" Scootaloo asked a bit curious.

"Not really." At Scootaloo's confused look Twilight elaborated, "she raises the sun everyday back in Equestria. How often do you think she can just sleep in?"

"Point."

* * *

>141.15 (Leviticus Wilkes)

The muffins, hot and fresh from the oven, looked delicious. Ditzzy smiled and gently took one between her hooves, and brought it to her mouth.

"Waitwaiteaitwaitwait!" The muffin shouted. Derpy blinked and stared at the muffin.

"Oh... My... Cylinders! I BAKED A TALKING MUFFIN!"

The muffin, perhaps thrown by the use of cylinders, shook it's body in an approximation of a shaken head. "Neigh young ma'am, you have not baked a talking muffin. You have baked the brilliant, the beautiful, the dazzling, the one-of-a-kind! You have baked... THE KAMINA MUFFIN!"

In the background, an Explosion wrecked Twilight's library, proceeded to climb out of the library, and argue with Discord over who had hit whom while driving.

The muffin turned magnanimously. "Kamina cake, if you prefer."

A second, smaller Explosion proceeded to wreck the town hall, exit the two hall, and argue with Discord and the Explosion over why their hot-tub and library tree were out in the middle of the road.

Bright Eyes squeezed her cheeks together and squealed.

* * *

>141.16 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Thousands of ponies stood in the fields surrounding Ponyville. All of them were arrayed towards Sugarcube Corner, wearing various bright and pink robes of all different shades. All had balloons of different kinds, some carried them on string, others wore them on their heads or around their necks. Among the most prominent members, patches of their fur had turned bubblegum pink or their manes had portions that were poofy and wild.

Sugarcube Corner itself was different from most loops. It was more like a cathedral, with a massive balcony that could be seen for miles, even in Canterlot. Upon the platform, there stood 6 ponies. One lowered her hoof, revealing a poofy haired Celestia who shouted,

"My little ponies, I bring you great news from our glorious goddess. She longs to address you before beginning her yearly Super Ultra Mega Deluxe Party! However, she is rewarding her personal student with a gift that takes time and preparation to complete. Before she addresses you, I present to you the Chosen of Laughter!"

Hoofs stomped as the entire countryside shook. Four of the cloaked ponies stepped forward, and as one they lowered their robes, revealing Fluttershy, Applejack, Rarity and Dash, all bearing the same bubblegum mane and pink coat. In addition, they wore their Elements of Laughter. Their hairstyles remained the same though. One by one, they addressed the gathered ponies. Fluttershy impressed on them the importance of Kind Laughter, where you build each other's jokes up and help them improve. Rarity spoke on the nature of Generous laughter, that pony kind must all go out of their way, giving freely in your quest to bring joy back to a sad pony's life once again.

Applejack lectured on honest laughter, the importance of being willing to tell the truth about a joke in the hopes that they might improve themselves. Finally, Rainbow Dash preached on Loyal Laughter, that even when a friend continues to make bad jokes, you must stand by them, that one day their jokes will be funny if you keep trying.

With that, the four ponies stepped back. Celestia took the stage again. "Thank you, Chosen. Now before the Pink One addresses you, I would like to welcome back into the fold my Sister, Luna, who has returned to her position as High Priestess of the Pink alongside me. She will be taking up her duties once again and will receive visitors during the Night Vigil. I will, as always, oversee the Day Ceremonies."

The fifth pony stepped forward and lowered her hood. The only difference with this Luna and baseline was her mane and coat had a streak of pink running through them. Almost as quickly as she stepped forward, she raised her hood and stepped back. Celestia looked back to the entrance to Sugarcube Corner, where the door was slightly ajar. Taking her cue from the pony within, Celestia nodded, "Now I may present you with the Warp Goddess of Celebration and Laughter, Pinkie Pie!"

Once again, hooves beat the Earth as one pony in a cloak stepped forward, following a leaping Pinkie Pie, who seemed ecstatic for some reason. "My super duper awesome ponies, I have the bestest news of all time! Today, I have decided on my final Chosen to join the ranks of her fellow chosen and bear the element of Magical Laughter."

Pinkie pulled out a necklace bearing a starburst. The cloaked pony lowered her hood, revealing an annoyed Twilight Sparkle, bearing the same bubblegum mane and pink coat of the other chosen. Pinkie quickly placed the element over her neck, then turned to the crowd and shouted in the Royal Canterlot Voice, "***PONYVILLE! THE SLEEPER, HAS AWAKENED!***"

Twilight could only facehoof. Sure, she had done this during each of her Chosen's inductions from her in loop memories, but it was still cheesy no matter how you looked at it.

* * *

>141.17 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Twilight looked between the bird glaring at Twilight, and the brothers that had replaced Flim and Flam this loop, "Pinkie's already done this."

The two looked affronted. "Please, we beat Pinkie at her own game."

The right one continued, "Too true, we bet Pinkie never tricked Tirek into eating one of our newest variations of canary pastries."

"Though you might want to lock it up and prevent your other friends from attacking it."

"It's a cucco after all."

Twilight's eyes widened in growing horror. "Wait...that...is a cucco?"

The two looked excited, "Oh yes! We've been working on upgrading our temporary cucco cream into a permanent one, and we made a breakthrough last loop."

"Wanted to test it on the baddest of the bad here before giving it to You-Know-Poo."

"Like we said though, as long as no one attacks him, there won't be a problem."

A shout echoed from above, "Look out below!"

Rainbow Dash came out of nowhere, completely out of control as she slammed the bird into the nearest house, through it and then through the next two buildings. As what sounded like a rooster echoed across Ponyville, Twilight suddenly found herself lifted in Fred's Magical aura while Dash was in George's. The two blazed through Ponyville, screaming. "RUN FOR YOUR LIVES," as cuccos started descending upon the town.

* * *

>141.18 (Drachefly)

Shining Armor woke, and in the exchange of pings, caught three others. _Is she one of them?_ His nervousness dissipated as Cadence teleported in. _Yes!_

She declared, for the benefit of the other officers, "A moment, captain?"

"Certainly, princess."

They withdrew. Through long experience they'd found this was too early to do any more than talk without lasting consequences.

He asked, "How many loops since we met last, for you?"

"One between. You?"

"One, and it... well, we've had some awkward moments in our time, but Rarity and Spike had an awful one."

Her eyes sparkled in anticipation. "Late awakening?"

"Right. So, Rarity was awake from the start as Sweetie Belle. She managed to get unawake Spike's attention, and they got married."

"Then..."

"Spike woke up. As Snails, of all ponies."

"Okay. Go on - that doesn't quite compare to our convolutions, yet."

"Right. So, Rarity set about getting her unawake self to finally return his undiminished affections. Just when it was working, Sweetie Belle woke up as Rarity."

"So did you have Rarity as her sister asking her sister as her to keep stealing her husband so she could be with her husband? That's counts as fairly weird by our scale. On par with you-as-Chrysalis and me-as-you."

Shining Armor nodded and went on. "The three of them took a while to decide what to do. They were secretly meeting so often that Snips got jealous of Snails' attention. He disguised himself as Spike to gather information. It. Was. Terrible. In the end, he was so pathetic they explained the loops and swore him to secrecy."

"That's pretty awkward."

"Especially since unawake Spike was listening in."

Cadence blinked. "I... I think we've only topped that once. So what did they do?"

"Didn't matter. He ran away, somehow found his way through the mirror, and settled in as Rarity and Sweetie Belle's _dog_."

She winced. "Okay, invoking the P-chan gambit wins."

"No. See, I had woken up as Sunset Shimmer. The awkward moment was after I'd confronted him, and he'd finished explaining, and _they_ too_ had overheard."

Cadence was stunned, trying to imagine the situation. Their time to talk without creating a disturbance ran out, so Shining Armor bowed and backed away.

* * *

>141.19 (DrTempo)

"HOORAH! Nice work, everypony."

_Another day for the Royal Guard, and another Loop._ Shining Armor thought to himself. It was a while after the Changeling attack, and the Guard had just defeated a remnant force. While his men celebrated, he saw a new recruit sitting down, removing her helmet. She had a frown on her face, like something was bothering her. Trotting over to her, he inquired, "Are you all right, Private Shimmer?"

The unicorn nodded. "Yeah. I was just thinking of something." Shining smiled, replying with, "I know you're Awake, Sunset. What's bothering you?" Sunset started crying.

"It's just...Compared to nearly every other Looper from here, I spent my first few several Loops in battles. I guess it changed me. Sometimes, I remember those I saw killed, and those I had no choice but to hurt badly..or even kill. One life for a thousand..." Sunset then sighed. "I guess I suffered a little shell shock. I think I might've first noticed it during my Loop with those Titans smashing everyone...It was so...dreary. I had to take down monsters who were simply poor souls who had become monsters. Even then...I didn't like it."

Taking a breath, she continued, "I felt at times that I had lost my way, but I remembered what Equestria is all about. I knew, no matter what, that to protect what one cherishes most, you have to fight. You guys have always strived not to fight unless needed, but I feel like I'm more violent."

Shining nodded. "I've known that for millennia. I get what you mean, though. It seems that you've never let the desire for battle cloud your morals. And Rarity did mention you had said something like this to her a while back."

Sunset nodded, sniffing. "I know. But I can still see those I had to hurt. I sometimes enjoy fighting."

Shining laughed. "It's all right. You want to test yourself. I understand that, too. Besides, with all the places you've ended up, I'm sure you would never forgive yourself if you just stood by and did nothing. Never lose sight of who you are."

Sunset smiled; she seemed to feel a little better. "You're right. Life is precious. I just have to remember the values I cherish, and I'll never become a monster." Grabbing her helmet, she then said, "Let's get back to work, sir!"

Shining nodded, thinking, _I know you've been through a lot, Sunset, and your early Loops weren't exactly peaceful. But you've never lost sight of your morals._

_Had I been in your shoes, I would be the same. __I hope._

* * *

>141.20 (Evilhumour)

Big Mac blinked as he was presented with a _very_ unusual sight from behind his bar. It seemed that they were in a fused loop with Warhammer again with the Adeptus Astartes pouring in, although the fact they were grinning and not firing on him meant something was up.

As they began to crowd the bar, one of them walked to him and smiled weakly. He recognized him as Bjorn faintly, rare as it was that he saw the looper as a human and not in his Dreadnought.

"Sorry Ser MacIntosh," the man chuckled weakly as he looked around. "Leman and I accidentally let it slip we've found something stronger the Fenrisian Ale and we're forced to share." He gave a backwards nod of his head towards the slightly uncomfortable Space Marines. "Is Lady Punch Awake?"

"Yes, I'm here," the mare smiled, walking out from the back with the Space Wolves shouting in joy at the prodigal alcohol maker's presence. "Let's see if I have anything that you boys can handle!" She grinned at the mock calls and eager took on their Primarch who was grinning from ear to ear.

They all later had the rare privilege of watching Leman Russ being drunk under the table by a talking, colourful pony who was only slightly buzzed by that point.

* * *

>141.21 (Evilhumour)

Leman Russ place a hand to his face and slowly counted back from five.

>My son, do you have **_**any*****-**_

"No Father, I do not know how she replaced Khorne, nor do I want to know."

* * *

>"MUFFINS FOR THE MUFFIN THRONE!"

* * *

>AN:

141.1: Oh, dear. The one thing worse than the Talk - finding it's too late to give it.

>141.2: Not this again. It's beating... uh, never mind.141.3: As we know, it's not.

>143.4: Rule 63 collorary one: everyone you know wants to see you under rule 63.141.5: Dis Gaea is kind of a cool bloke to get to know.

>141.6: collorary two: And they want more pictures.141.7: Leman cannot drive.

>141.8: One does have to wonder if he's playing up the childhood thing as a rest from his grim loop.141.9: Ah, this one's the Dead Peewee Sketch. (Also note anchor Tibbers.)

>141.10: Inverted controls.141.11: The Revolution Will Not Be Bona Fide.

>141.12: Cardponies the third!141.13: Because of course Dash has unreasonably high standards.

>141.14: Getting up after the sun's already risen not really an option for Celestia.141.15: Pick a name and stick with it, please.

>141.16: Pinkie Priest.141.17: Fear the twins. Or, rather, fear what they've done by mistake this time.
>141.18: Trek, I believe.141.19: Better to want redemption than to not want it.
>141.20: Space Drunkies.141.21: Oh.

149. Chapter 149

142.1 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

_After The Weasley Twins' Cucco Pastry Loop:_

Two familiar red haired teens found themselves waking up in a pitch black room, strapped to a pair of chairs. Moments later, a lamp flashed on, illuminating a pink haired girl sitting across from them. Her hands were folded as she gave them an uncharacteristically serious expression.

"Boys," She spoke in a serious tone, "I hear word going around about a certain pair of Weasley Twins who claimed to have 'beaten me at my own game.' That you turned Tirek into a chicken like I did, but with a pastry instead of magic."

The two shrugged. "Cucco, but who's nitpicking."

Pinky leaned in close. "Just because you gave one pastry prank, you think you gentlemen are the kings of pranks?!"

The twins looked slightly affronted. "No, we're the kings of pranks because we've been pranking before you were even looping."

Pinkie raised a hoof, "I will not let this go unopposed. I declare war upon you both!"

She then gave a cheerful smile as the room lit up, revealing a Hogwarts classroom with the words **PRANKS GALORE** written on the blackboard. The Weasley Twins' bonds vanished like magic as Pinkie stood and started pacing about the room. "A prank war. Looping Dash will keep score and decide who's the greatest prankster in the multiverse between the three of us."

The Twins looked around, "But Dash isn't even here."

Pinkie ran over to a door and pulled it open, revealing a strange looking house elf, "Silly Billies. I keep Dashes scattered all over Hogwarts, in case of Dash emergency."

Dash rubbed her face. "Pinkie, you could have just called me when you needed instead of making me wait behind this door for the last fifteen minutes."

* * *

>142.2 (Evilhumour)

Twilight was readying herself for an unAwake Nightmare Moon when a colt slammed the doors open, with a cape around his neck. Twilight's mouth dropped in disbelief at what was she was seeing, the rest of her Awake friend in similar positions.

"Who dares interrupt me?!" She shouted, standing on her hind legs at the blue colt holding a gun.

"I HAVE ALREADY BESTED THE MOON, THE APPLES AND THE SPIKES," he shouted, pointing the pea shooter at the alicorn. "I HAVE BESTED THE SIX CHAMPIONS AND DEFEATED THE FATHER!" He then fired miniature bullets at Nightmare Moon who was flying to avoid the powerful and painful shots. Twilight watched in awe as he avoid all her magic blasts and was actually close to defeating Nightmare Moon by all regards of her tired state. The colt suddenly ducked as an apple went sailing through the window, only to smash into Nightmare Moon's face, knocking away the Nightmare Taint from Luna.

Luna looked up in disbelief at her saviour. "W-who are you?"

The colt, with a cutie mark of the moon with a spike and apple on it stood on the stage, smiling at the princess. "I am the Guy."

* * *

>142.3 (Evilhumour)

"Dusk?"

"Yes Elusive?"

"Why are we Space Marines going to fight a daemon invasion without any of our usual powers?" The usual mare looper who was currently a male space marine asked a bit concerned, blasting away the damons with ease as Dusk was summoning mighty pskyer blasts to hold the tide back.

"More than likely because of the obvious joke." Leman muttered unhappily as he cut apart several of the daemons that were attacking with his chainblade. Being an average space marine was always odd to him as he felt so weak and powerless.

"Yeah, making up a new chapter just for us?" Applejack asked as he stood side by side the Anchor of the loop. "Ah thought Fenrir and Sleipnir were better than that!"

"Actually," Butterscotch said from the titan he was in. Everyone unsure of how exactly he got one this loop but everyone else was still glad that Leman was stopped from taking it as a joyride considering the horror stories that Fluttershy shared. "The Rainbow Warrior are an actual chapter and none of this is really made up." He then turned back and blasted an entire squad of daemons with a soft apology.

"Yeah, ah figured that were something screwy when Dashie was the captain instead of ya Twiliy."

"That's Chapter Captain Rainbow Blitz AJ!" Their in-loop leader shouted with glee in his blue power armor, the rainbow strip far larger than anyone else, as he punched apart several daemons. "I'm so loving this!"

"That aside," Leman muttered as he was smacked backwards by an exploding party favor. He hated being so weak. "Is no one else concern that we are dealing with an unAwake Chaos Goddess Pinkie Pie?!_"

* * *

>142.4 (Evilhumour)

Nurgle tilted his head as the goddess in front of him was _not_ Isha and rolled his eyes.

"Begone mortal," he grumbled, splashing her two tone hair with several of his less favourable maggots and diseases . "I care _not_ for you, only my love ... oh it's _you_ Cadence."

The usual pony alicorn chuckled weakly, brushing herself clean with her hand and using her magic to heal herself from his most lovely diseases that he had been working on for Isha. "Hello Nurgle," she smiled as she stood up as she regrew her wing. "I take it that you're keeping up your practice of creating new diseases?"

"Yes," he rolled his eyes, not feeling in his usual good mood, stepping onto some Nurglings as he grabbed some rotten fruit out of his subspace pocket and sending it back to health before throwing it at the fellow looper. "Although it was _not_ for the likes of _you_."

"Oh," the deity blinked as she caught the fruit and tentatively took a bite of it after using her magic to rid it of several horrifying diseases that Nurgle left on it, more than likely by mistake then intent. "For Isha, I suppose?"

Nurgle flashed his eyes to her and for a brief moment, Nurgle took some of his darker aspects of his rights as a Chaos God. As he choked the very air around him all forms of life and death, he remembered the first and only time Slaanesh had tried to tease him about Isha. Khorne had stepped in to stop the brutality he was unleashing onto the terrified Slaanesh and Tzeentch made several strides to make sure _no_ one ever made the same mistake the near dead Chaos God made again.

"Speak carefully," he said evenly, causing the looper to back up in instinctual fright. "The last deity of lust found it poor to joke about my beloved and I will not show you anymore leniency than I did to hir."

"I would _never_ joke about love, Nurgle." Cadence was truly taken back by Slaanesh's callous words and actions; already resolving to reeducate her fellow deity of love on their duties towards others. "If you want, we can talk about your relationship with Isha and I might be able to help you a bit."

Nurgle listened to her words and judged them to be honest. Nodding his head, he summoned two sofas for them and allowed Cadence a tiny bit of power so she could reshape herself into her normal equine self.

"Thank you very much Nurgle." Cadence flashed him a smile as sat across of him. "Even though I know, can you please tell me how did you two meet?"

Nurgle smiled as he thought back to his first encounters with his beloved to understanding pony across of him.

* * *

>142.5 (Ryuus2)

Lemon Rush felt oddly good this loop as he flexed his wings and came to a landing. He'd woken up in his mother's place this time, so he was an adult Equestrian for the first time in a while. He had a similar role to his mother as well, except he was known to handle the roughest beasts of the Everfree on top of the cuddlier ones. He was very surprised to realize that his loop memories included how to perform a spinal adjustment on a hydra and a deep tissue massage on a manticore, as well as the best way to fluff Angel's tail.

This loop appeared to be a mostly baseline Equestria. He opted out of being the Element of Kindness when Twilight came by, and instead stayed to calm the panicking crowd while Silver Spoon, currently Gilda's niece Silver Beak, filled in. The other Crusaders were apparently asleep, so she opted to return to Griffonia with Gilda to help her conquer the realm with mime. The only other obvious changes were an unawake Rainbow Dash who dressed in style, and that Ivory Scroll was taking a vacation this loop. Cheerilee had offered to fill in for her, citing a desire to expand her knowledge on bureaucracy for a later lesson. She had suggested Lemon fill in for her for some reason and he'd agreed readily enough.

As he walked in the door to the small schoolhouse he was ready for anything from an unawake Diamond Tiara's usual antics up to the Crusaders all awakening at once. He was not, however, ready for the four consecutive pings from four distinctly non-crusader foals. The grins on the three colts and one (probably) filly told him all he needed to know. The Chaos Gods had replaced the Cutie Mark Crusaders.

_ 'Welp,' _ he thought. _ 'We're doomed.' _

* * *

>After class let out, the four foals stayed behind to talk to their new teacher.

The first thing out of Lemon's mouth was not "So you're the Crusaders this time," or "be good or I'm telling your parents," or even "kill me now before you crash the loop with tree sap." It was instead, "where the Oak did you get that filly sized seifuku, Slaanesh?"

The pink furred unicorn col- fil-...uh, pubescent pony with the expertly coiffed baby blue mane and matching blue eyes in the white and blue patterned Japanese school girl uniform struck a pose. "Do you like it? Rarity Onee-chan made it for me based on a Neighponese design I liked," Slaanesh, currently Elusive 'I can be a Sweetie if you like' Bell, said.

"Before you ask, we don't know either," the light blue furred earth pony/unicorn colt with salt & pepper mane and purple eyes known as Gleaming Mind, otherwise Tzeentch, added. "Shi's apparently been like this since before shi awoke."

"This body is stupid!" Khorne grumbled hotly, flapping his tiny wings uselessly. He was currently a pegasus colt with red fur and eyes and a cropped black mane who answered to Bashaloo, but thanks to an incident with Granny Smith everyone called him Dot.

"Actually, Pegasi are the primary military force, due to their incredible speed, agility, and durability," Lemon said, hoping to head off any potential blood sports before they could begin. "They can fly, walk on clouds, and use weather magic to create and direct rain, sleet, snow, twisters, and lightning."

Khorne perked up at the list of combat maneuvers his new species was capable of. "Well, that's better--"

"Your wings are still too small to fly, though, so you can't reach the clouds to do most of that," Nurgle, presently a green furred earth pony colt with brown mane and yellow eyes named Apple Core, cut him off. "Now I must be off, I've got a new recipe to work on."

"You're not mixing up plagues in the barn, are you?" Lemon asked worriedly, memories of Nurgle's attempts to recreate the various strains of T-Virus flashing through his mind.

"No, no my dear boy. I'm working on a new recipe for apple beer."

"Beer?" he asked with puzzled relief. "I didn't think you'd be interested in that."

"Fermentation is all about one thing rotting away and something else feasting on its remains to grow. Imagine the possibilities!"

"...And now I cannot drink for a month. Damn you, Nurgle," he groaned. He glanced between them looking for cutie marks. He got three blank flanks and one skirt, but if he tipped his head just so much and blew lightly- He slapped his face -and made a mental note to never do that with a hoof again- before that thought could finish forming. Ignoring his bruised cheek and Slaanesh's grin, he asked a question that he knew he'd regret asking. "You four aren't going to start Crusading for your Cutie Marks, are you?"

"Suggoi! That's a great idea! You're so smart, Lemon-Sensei," Slaanesh cooed sultrily, shaking his hips in a way that made Lemon shudder instinctively for reasons he Did Not want to delve into.

At an unspoken signal, all four foals shouted in unison "CUTIE MARK CHAOS GODS! YAY!" then ran off.

Once they were gone, Lemon Rush responded in the only way he could. He fainted.

* * *

>Later that weekend, Lemon met Twilight for tea in her library. She had taken the occasion to thaw a pot of Fluttershy's personal blend that had been preserved in her pocket. It wasn't as good as the original, but it was about as close as almost anyone could get.

After a relaxing gulp of the tea, Lemon asked, "So, everyone knew that it was them but me, and you all decided to prank me with it?"

"Actually, none of us knew who they were for sure," Twilight explained. "Ivory did need a vacation, and Cheerilee did want to expand her course list. I was busy with research at the time, and suggested you to fill in because I knew you could handle anything the new foals could dish out, whoever they were, even if they did awaken. It was a surprise to all of us when it turned out to be those four. How are you handling things by the way? Is the Crusading too much for you?"

Lemon slumped into his seat. "I can handle the Crusading; it's not much worse than some of the stuff I've done as a foal. But somehow, they seem to be causing more trouble than they do back home," Lemon groaned. "Apple Core behaves himself, but I have to keep reminding him not to share any of the lunches he brings with anypony. Gleaming Mind keeps nominating himself for different positions and then delegating everyone else to do his work. He even tried nominating himself the teacher once, and I will admit that I took a small pleasure in putting him in detention for disrupting the class." He preened a bit at the memory. One did not often get a chance to so completely one-up the scheming god so thoroughly, even with all the foreknowledge the loops could provide. After another gulp of tea he continued. "Those two are reasonably well behaved, but Dot is always looking for fights or crashing into things because he can't get used to his body. Thanks for looking after him by the way. He's not causing too much trouble?"

"Not at all," Twilight said. Normally, when Scootaloo's parents were...unsavory, she would arrange to stay with Rainbow Dash (awake or not). But with the unawake Dash dressing in style this loop, it was felt that someone a bit more...forceful should look after her replacement this time. And since neither Twilight nor Lemon want to see the end result of leaving the battle god with the Timberwolf versions of Freki and Geri -and their honorary pack-mate Angel Bunny (not awake, thankfully)- for any amount of time, Twilight had volunteered to take him in.

"Actually, he and Spike have been spending a lot of time together. It's always so hard for him to make guy friends his age, and the two seem to have bonded over the whole 'honorable warrior' thing. They've even been working on that Dragon Code of his. I'm kinda looking forward to seeing how the Dragon Migration goes this time around." She grinned. It wasn't often she got to watch her unawake little brother teach those three bullies a lesson, and with Khorne's help -carefully monitored, of course- it looked like it would be a good show. "And Elusive?" Twilight asked curiously.

Lemon's slight good mood melted away immediately at the reminder of the current form of the god(dess) of sensation. He slumped forward onto the table with a groan. "It's Elusive that's getting to me the most. Shi keeps hitting on me, which is actually not that different, but the way shi works all the outfits into it and acts all innocent..." he trailed off with a shudder as he banished the thoughts. "I can't even put hir in detention when shi goes too far because shi always manages to pull out some kind of bondage gear from nowhere. First there were the shackles, then the straight jacket, and last time it was shibari and- Gah!" He smacked his head into the table to suppress the thoughts and the shivers they caused. Fortunately he was able to hold back enough to keep from splitting the table, and only set the tea service to shaking ponderously.

"I'm sure it's not that bad," Twilight said as she rubbed his shoulders with a hoof.

"I caught Rarity giving hir tips. She thinks it's romantic," he mumbled into the table. Twilight sweat dropped. "And the Shipping. Oh, the Shipping..." he half-sobbed.

Before anything else could be said, the sounds of stampeding ponies, splintering wood, and general chaos floated in through the open window. Ponyville being Ponyville, this could mean anything from a monster attack to a royal visit to Zecora grocery shopping, but it was most likely a Cutie Mark Crusade judging by the swirly eyed red and black foal covered in tree sap that flew through the window and crashed into the table in front of them. Lemon sighed the sigh of the long suffering, took a moment to compose himself, downed his cup of tea in a single gulp, and got up to go run damage control on his other students. Twilight chuckled at the predicament her fellow anchor had been placed in, then picked up Khorne in her magic and carried him off to the bathroom to begin the long but much practiced process of washing the tree sap from his coat.

* * *

>Three sap-coated foals sat staring at what once was a rather complicated bit of insanity. Well, two of them were staring, the third was too busy fussing about the sap plastering herhis/its clothes and mane.

"It should have worked! Why didn't it work?!" The light-blue colt ranted.

The green colt sighed. "I just don't know what went wrong."

The pink co- fi- one, was busily trying to think up a cleaning spell that could get rid of tree sap without damaging hir frou-frou princess dress. Hir mane would need professional help. "You'd better hope I don't need a shave to get this sap out of my mane, Gleemy, or I'm taking it out of your feathery backside when we get home." Just then she noticed Lemon trotting determinedly up the street towards them and hir personality pulled a 180, from feminine fury to coquettishly girlish innocence. "Oh Lemon-sensei! Can you please help me? I seem to have gotten very sticky with unusual fluids."

Lemon froze mid trot and resisted the urge to scream in mental and spiritual agony. Barely.

Shaking himself out of it, he put on his 'serious teacher' face. "Okay, what were you lot doing this time?" he asked, glancing at the large pile of wood, pipe, rope, and sundry materials that usually resulted from a failed Crusade.

Tzeentch puffed his chest out and began his duties as chief orator of the CMCG. Interestingly, this was the only position he'd granted himself that he didn't delegate to someone else. "We were trying to get our Cutie Marks in monster catching. To that end, we took apart a game Nurgle found in the HUB and rebuilt it at 100 scale size, taking several liberties and making modifications based off the work of Rube Goldberg."

Lemon face hoofed. This was a bad idea as it just made his headache worse. "...You tried building a better mousetrap?"

"Well..." Tzeentch hedged, until he heard a suspiciously lupine growl from his anchor/instructor. "In laymen's terms...yes."

"You- that- I- whatever," Lemon gave up with a sigh. "Just...go get cleaned up. And don't forget to come back and clean this up tomorrow."

Slaanesh stayed behind as the other two trotted off. "Sensei? Rarity Onee-chan left me a note to give you," shi simpered sweetly, presenting him the note from within hir blouse.

Being very careful to ignore the inviting way the blouse hung open, Lemon accepted the note. When he was done he froze again, this time in shock and dread. Rarity was out of town for the next few days. And she wanted him to look after Elusive.

Slaanesh used peeking at the letter as an excuse to saddle up to his muscular barrel, clearly being innocently inappropriate. Hir reaction was the complete opposite of the stallions. Shi started prancing all over the place like Pinkie Pie. "Yatta! Sugoi! Sleepover with Lemon-Sensei! Squeee!"

This time, Lemon didn't even try to stop the scream from escaping.

* * *

>Khorne lifted an ear as he thought he heard a scream. "Twilight," he grumbled as the mare ran the bath for him, "Did you hear that?"

Twilight tilted her head, listening. "I don't think so..."

* * *

>A few days later Twilight, currently a Pegasus, was sharing a cloud with Rainbow Dash and taking in the site of the bustling ponies below. "Still not ready to show them the new you?" Twilight asked Rainbow Dash a.k.a. the God Emperor of Mankind a.k.a. Empy.

The stylishly dressed blue Pegasus shook her head. "Not quite. I would have had no choice but to reveal myself had I awoken as Celestia as usual, but when I noticed I was a commoner, an impressive one, yes, but still a commoner...I decided to just relax and roll with it."

"Not to mention that it gives you the perfect chance to observe how Lemon is handling the loops without him knowing," the anchor said casually. Empy didn't rise to the bait. She just continued to watch her son as he wrangled the Chaos Gods out of their newest Cutie Mark Crusade -something to do with Zap Apple Cider- with a small smile on her face.

* * *

>142.6 (Evilhumour)

"Vinyl Scratch, get your flabby white flanks back here this second!"

Twilight blinked as Vinyl ran past her with fear on face as several large musical items went flying through the air.

"I've said I'm sorry Octy!" She whimpered as she ducked a guitar.

"And how many times have you've said that to me?!" Octavia shouted, bucking a violin overhead that landed directly in front of the panicking looper.

"Whoa whoa whoa!" Twilight shouted, teleporting in the middle of the two, Vinyl cowering in fear with Octavia picking up her prized cello. "What the tree sap is going on?"

"She forget our anniversary! Again!" the earth pony glared at the gulping musician. "You'd think after looping for so long she'd be able to keep track of our special day, but noooo!"

"Wait, you're looping?!" Twilight reared back in surprise. How did she miss this?

The musician in front of her sighed, and placed down the blunt instrument of pain and wonder. "No, I'm not. She just told me about them, again apparently, and how often we do become a couple." She blushed now, rubbing her beige hooves together. "It might be a bit hard to believe, but if you give her enough time she can be really romantic and sweet." She chuckled softly. "Like a few hundred years I'm willing to wager."

"Hey!" The looping musician poked her head out of scared heap that was hiding behind Twilight. "I'm not that bad!"

"Yes, you are when you just told me that you often forget to keep track of our anniversaries and then schedule a world tour around Equestria on this loops anniversary !" Her glared caused many other ponies watching the scene to gulp and take a step back.

"But it ends just before this loops anniversary Octy!" Vinyl whined back.

"Only by chance!" Octavia yelled. "You asked me, and I quote, 'Say, my sweet music loving and giving mare, what's this day on the calendar that has all this girly hearts around it? Heh, already marking the day when your DJ queen comes back-Octy, why are you so angry and reaching for the piano?'"

Twilight winced, and braced herself for a long friendship salvage mission. She had to bite back a genuine laugh; she had not done this before and it would be something new to write to Celestia.

* * *

>142.7 (Alex Prior)

**Twilight Tirek, Part One****

Twilight Awoke, and yet she didn't. If she were to strain her brain, it would occur to her that she was Wakening extremely slowly, and as such take appropriate measures. Alas, she did not. It was for such reason that it felt as if she was thinking through molasses.

Through the haze, she felt herself move, to sneak towards a shape. Twilight did not think to clear her head; she was barely able to think at all.

The shape resolved into a stallion; an intellectual returning from a library. As if hearing her, the stallion turned; his eyes widened. "Oh, _my_," he spoke, "Do you need some assistance?"

But Twilight didn't listen. Her gaze zeroed in on the load of books in the stallion's telekinetic grip; without hesitation, relying straight on instincts, she opened her mouth and _drained_ the tomes in the stallion's grasp.

Immediately, her head cleared somewhat. As such, she was able to realize a few things.

One, while she was quadrupedal, she also had hands.

Two, she realized that time had reset once again.

Three, she had just _drained_ books of their knowledge._

_ 'I don't think I'm a pony this time around.' _

* * *

>

"No, Tirek. I'm afraid I must call in another to stop-

Celestia Awoke mid-sentence, tripped over her own tongue and fell into a coughing fit. Her sister and her student were upon her side in an instant.

"Princess Celestia! Are you alright?"

Celestia looked into the concerned face of the red alicorn, and nodded. "I'm fine. I just threw myself in a Loop by accident." She surreptitiously checked the faces of Luna and Cadence, only for them not to show any signs of Awakening. Dogwood. She was on her own for now.

Celestia cleared her throat. "As I was saying, Twilight will be dealt with by Discord."

>Naturally, gasps greeted that statement.

* * *

>"...and that's the gist of your mission, Discord. Are you capable of it?"Celestia peered at the Draconequis. "Are you even, perchance, Awake?"

Said entity nodded with an entirely too large grin. The Princess massaged her forehead with a hoof. "Why am I even asking, of course you are. Were you just expecting an exposition, and how long have you been Awake?"

Discord held up two toes. "First," he curved one toe, "yes, and second," he curved the second, "since Silver reformed my unAwake self. She's been Awake since the beginning, by the way. Did you even check your Memories, or just the ones pertaining our resident Centaur?"

At Celestia's abashed smile, he facepalmed. "Of all the Loops for me to make sense for a change..."

* * *

>"What have you done?"

The stallion's whisper cut straight through Twilight's confusion. She looked up. To her horror, the books the stallion was frantically flipping through were blank. She had literally drained them of knowledge.

Twilight shook her head to clear it. "It does not matter what I have done," she found herself saying, "It's what I will be doing." Her mouth twisted itself to a grin. The stallion fled.

The centauress found herself expelling a breath. "A close one," she whispered. 'Library,' her mind supplied. 'I need to know more.'

* * *

>

Finding a treasure of knowledge had been devilishly simple. As he inhaled the books, she found her mind clearing more and more. She remembered Loopers. She remembered her Admin. She-

"I do hope I'm not interrupting anything."

She whirled around. There, leaning to a bookshelf, dressed in a sweater and wearing glasses, was Discord. He would have looked every inch the disapproving librarian were it not for the unusually large grin he was sporting.

"You see," he said, unhooking himself from the shelf, "I was just teaching my apprentice the finer nuances of chaos magic, when suddenly I received a most curious summons."

He grinned. "Apparently someone's been a bad girl."

Twilight narrowed her eyes. "Apprentice? Since when were you willing to teach anything to a pony?"

Discord feigned surprise. "Silver Spoon, a pony? But of course not! She's a draconequus like I am!" Out of a whim, he decided to test a little something. "Threw me for a Loop, it did."

The centauress inhaled sharply. "You are Awake?"

Discord blinked. He wasn't expecting that one; he'd felt no Ping from her. Out of curiosity, he sent one out and watched her stumble.

>"What was that?" was the demand he received, and if anything, it threw him into an actual loop.

"That was a Ping, Twilight. Remember? Similar to the one you do with your Elements?" Frankly, he was getting a little concerned.

Twilight massaged her temples. "Element Check, yes... Oak, everything's so fuzzy... I need to know more..."

The spirit of chaos could only roll his eyes. 'Might as well pull a baseline.'

* * *

>"Oh, hello, Princess."

Celestia smiled at her guest. "Good morning, Silver." She was lying on her bed. "You needn't worry about me; I simply had a rough Awakening this morning."

Silver nodded in understanding. Truth be told, her own had been rather intense, as well. Waking up just after using the Elements, then discovering the Element of Magic being Tirek himself? She'd had the shock of her life!

"So, what do you think of this Loop, Princess?"

"Celestia, please."

"Celestia. Sorry. Your unAwake self preferred to be called Princess."

Celestia nodded. "Completely understandable, Silver. Now, I suppose you are wondering why I called you here this morning?"

Ignoring the Draconequus' deadpan look, she soldiered on. "I need your help packing."

At Silver's questioning look, she smiled. "Our centaur fiend gains literal power from books this time around. Knowledge is Power, capital letters being the key here. Were she to drain all of them, she'd beat Tirek by several orders of magnitude."

"The villain Tirek or the plothead Tirek?"

Celestia rolled her eyes. "I know he's not very nice even as a pony, but you must specify. Do you speak of the centaur or the alicorn?"

>Her mouth twitched. Silver was also fighting a grin. At precisely that moment, a letter popped into existence.

Silver caught it, unrolled it and started reading out loud. It was short and sufficient.

_Celestia,

>Going baseline. Twilight's half-Awake; we need books to properly Wake her. She doesn't even remember her Pocket yet, and has forgotten how to Ping! Don't mind the empty libraries.-Discord >

>Silver blinked. "You said she got the power from knowledge, right?"
At Celestia's nod, she continued. "So what happens when you add Looping knowledge to that?"

Celestia rubbed her chin with a hoof. "Technically, she may gain enough power to Ascend. Practically, there's the Pocket, isn't there?"

"The one Discord said she doesn't remember yet?" deadpanned Silver.

The two Loopers exchanged a horrified look.

_"Ficus."_

* * *

>AN:

142.1: Because she felt challenged.
>142.2: I Wanna Be The Guy, this time.142.3: Technicolour Terror.
>142.4: There's something salvagable there.142.5: Slaanesh, stop assaulting the rating!
>142.6: Metacouple?142.7: ...books for the book lady?

150. Chapter 150

143.1 (Alex Prior)

"Twilight?"

"No, Rarity, I don't know why we're jellyfish. Stop asking."

"I was just going to point out that Rainbow was not one."

_'Oh.' _Twilight felt herself illuminate. "Sorry, Rarity. I'm just getting tired of Gag Loops."

As if on cue, Squidbow Dash swam by.

"Whoo! I'm an underwater turbojet!" She grinned an entirely-too-large grin. "U jelly?"

The jellicorns, naturally, responded by pelting pebbles at her.

* * *

>143.2 (Ryuus2)

Derpzilla was rampaging across town. Like any giant evil monster, she had just cornered two stallions and was preparing to smash them into paste.

"Hey, Griff? Remember when you said she couldn't cause any more destruction than normal if she tried?" The reddish one with a keyboard cutie mark asked.

"Yes Simmons, yes I do," the fat orange one with the Oreo cutie mark replied.

"You were wrong."

"Yes, yes I was."

"And now we're gonna die."

"Yes. Yes we are."

Just then, Pinkie Pie popped up right between the doomed loopers and the rampaging mailmare from inside a bush. She reached into her mane and pulled out a Muffin.

"Derpy, eat a muffin. You're not yourself when you're hungry."

Derpzilla sniffed the air and bent down to get a better look at the muffin. She then sucked up the muffin, and almost the three ponies in front of her as well. With a satisfied roar and a poof of smoke, she was back to her normal size.

"Feeling better?"

"Yep. Thanks for the muffin Pinkie. I really needed that! Can I have another one for Dinky?"

"Sure!" With the second muffin stored away in her mailbag, she flew off on a much less dangerous -and unintentional- rampage of destruction.

Just then, Nightmarity showed up on the other side of the block in full blown evil queen fashionista mode. Pinkie pulled an entire basket of fine pastries out of her mane. With a shout of "I've got just the sweet for this!" she charged off.

"Do you think they're pranking us?" Simmons asked.

Twilight walked up. "Actually, the three of us and Nyx are the only ones awake this loop," she said. "Pinkie's pastries are just so good this loop that everyone in Ponyville is addicted to them. So addicted that when they go into withdrawal, this happens."

"Huh. This has got to be one of the strangest variants I've even seen," Griff stated

"Meh. Everything was made of sugar once, including the ponies, and that didn't break my top ten. Now if you boys will excuse me, I've got a craving for mint chocolate chip to fulfill." She went Eternal Twilight and trotted past.

* * *

>143.3 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Two days after the Summer Sun Celebration, a finally Awake Twilight staggered into the bar with a groan.

"Anything I can get you, Twilight?" Berry Punch asked from where she was cleaning glasses.

"Something strong," the unicorn mare sighed.

"Bad Loop?"

"Let's just say I HATE having to fight against evil family members." Twilight sighed. "Or when King Sombra is anywhere in my family tree. And this last Loop? I had to deal with both."

Berry Punch shuddered. "Point taken. Dare I ask what happened?"

"Sombra was Mom's first husband and Shiny's father. I was from her second relationship. After our fathers both died fighting one another, Mom entrusted Shiny and I to different people to keep us safe from Sombra's loyal followers. Unfortunately, Shiny still wound up taking after Sombra a little too much, so after we were both grown up and met again, I had to fight him to knock some sense into him." Sipping her drink, she continued. "Then Sombra came back to life as this freaky zombie-thing, and Shiny and I made up and got rid of him AGAIN."

"Ouch."

"And it didn't help that I was the only one Awake."

"Really ouch."

"Thanks for listening, Berry." Looking around, Twilight's ears twitched. "Speaking of listening, where's Mac?"

"The Crusaders are all Awake, so they founded their group yesterday, and invited Ruby and Dinky to join them. And since I was Awake, Mac agreed to let me run the bar for a day while he spent some time with them."

"Of his own free will?"

"They're just playing this time, not actually Crusading." Berry smiled. "And since seven little fillies all gave him the eyes and asked him nicely, how could he say no?"

"Good point." Twilight paused. "Wait - seven? Shouldn't it be eight? I know I felt enough pings that six Crusaders should be Awake..."

"Nyx split off from Luna in the Castle of the Two Sisters and went back to Canterlot with her for a few days, since you weren't Awake yet. Something about planning for Nightmare Night."

"Ah. That explains it."

* * *

>143.4 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Twilight."

"Rarity."

"We appear to have an all-male version of the Cutie Mark Crusaders this Loop."

"So I noticed."

"I can understand Soarin' replacing Scootaloo, and Big Macintosh replacing his sister."

"So can I."

"But how did Prince Blueblood, of all ponies, wind up filling in for Sweetie Belle?"

Twilight watched as the three colts sped by, with Soarin' on a scooter, pulling a cart with the other two riding in it, Blueblood crying "Faster! Faster!" and Mac just holding on for dear life. Then she turned to her friend.

"The Loops work in mysterious ways, Rarity. The Loops work in mysterious ways."

* * *

>143.5 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight Awoke, in both senses of the word, with a yawn.

A quick check of her Loop memories told her this was a baseline Loop, and a quick Ping confirmed that most of her friends were also Awake. Getting out of bed, she headed for the bathroom to start her day. And as she went to the mirror to brush her mane, she froze.

The face that stared back at her was still recognizably hers, but wilder. Her coat and mane were long and shaggy, her teeth had elongated into fangs, and her hooves had shifted into paws, with long, sharp nails. A quick double-check of her physical self confirmed these changes were only in the mirror, and she sighed.

"SPIKE!"

A chuckle came from the doorway. "You rang?" the grinning dragon said.

She pointed to the mirror. "How did that happen?"

Another grin. "I ran into Leah a few Loops back. She told me about a special cleaning product for hard surfaces that she got from another Loop, and gave me a jug. I've just been waiting for the chance to use it."

"And what was this cleaning product called?"

"Wash-and-Werewolf."

Twilight looked at him incredulously. "Werewolf?"

Spike gestured at the mirror. "There wolf."

Twilight looked at her reflection again, and groaned. "Okay, ow."

Then she grinned. "Can you make it so Rainbow Dash sees her reflection with this?"

"Way ahead of you."

* * *

>In a nearby cloud house, a rainbow-maned pegasus, who was fairly certain she was still asleep and dreaming, stared at her reflection in shock.

"That's it," she muttered. "No more Manexican food before bed."

* * *

>143.6 (Evilhumour)

Twilight was wondering to herself, who had replaced Rainbow Dash this loop.

It seemed to be the perfect act, with her responding the same way whenever she had a chance to talk to the busy architect, who's cutie mark was not of rainbow lightning bolt but that of a rainbow hammer to which she bragged made her the best cloud builder in all Equestria as all of her buildings were 120% more awesome.

"Something wrong egghead?" The blue mare asked, looking over her shoulder at Twilight the pegasus, who was laying on a cloud, reading the latest book her looping friend wrote. The mare in question was working a Romane influenced structure with a splash of several other civilizations add in to make a very interesting summer home for her friends.

"No Dash, just thinking to myself," she said, watching the mare carefully. "And enjoying this book." She flashed a smile, going back to reading it. She was really enjoying, close to figuring out who had swiped the cursed jewel set of Arnubim.

"Glad to hear you're enjoying my book Twiliy!" The pegasus laughter was cut off the gasp from Twilight, both from the fact she was Rainbow Dash and she dropped her book down into the waters below. "What's wrong?"

"I just..." Twilight shook her head, trying to get her thoughts straight. "I thought someone was replacing you Dash for this loop."

"What? Why?" Rainbow Dash blinked, scratching her head before turning her head back to the home she was building. "Oh. That." Rainbow Dash flew over to Twilight and sat down on the cloud. "Twilight, you do know that I usually build my home in the loops, right?"

Twilight nodded her head, blushing, "Ye-yeah, I just didn't-"

"'spect me to spend a looping doing that?" Dash finished with the same smile she had before. "And before you say 'No Dash, I'm sorry for not thinking, blah blah blah'," Dash's grin grew as Twilight puffed her cheeks out, her blushing growing as Dash predicted exactly her friend was going to say. "It's fine. Not something I usually do and I wanted to see if I enjoyed it. Turns out it ain't so bad making new homes and designs." Dash puffed her chest out, rubbing a hoof against her barrel. "Not when you're the number one home builder in all of Equestria!"

Twilight laughed at the silly boast, with Rainbow joining her in with the carefree laughter between friends before Twilight managed to stop herself, and look apologetic to the mare with a short mane, done out of safety regulations despite working with completely safe cloud material. "I _am _ sorry I didn't _ask_ if you were yo-"

Rainbow Dash placed a hoof on Twilight's mouth to shut her up. "It's ok Twily, I'm a big mare and you made a simple mistake. No hard feelings as I _know_ ya didn't do it on purpose." She pulled the purple pegasus into a hug, patting her on the back as the mare opposite of her hugged back. "Now if you don't mind, I've got a home to finish!" With that, Twilight watched the mare with a rainbow tail fly off and finish the home she was building for her friends.

* * *

>143.7 (Alex Prior)

"You're not Fawkes."

The phoenix with red-and-yellow feather let out a confused warble. Albus Dumbledore blinked.

"Miss Shimmer?"

The phoenix nodded. Albus stroked his beard.

"I suppose that's a first, to us both I presume?" He was answered by a confirmative trill. The Headmaster shrugged.

"Might as well see where this Loop takes us, I suppose..."

* * *

>143.8 (Alex Prior)

"Alcohol."

"Water."

Mac raised an eyebrow as Twilight and Discord traipsed into the bar. Him becoming used to the stranger things was showing; after all, once he had panicked upon Discord demanding water. By now on the other hand, he barely blinked an eye. He delivered the drinks.

"Rough loop?"

Discord shook Twilight's head, earning himself a glare. "Nah. Merely confusing by my standards."

He stalled the oncoming question with a wave of his paw. "And yes, I have some standards; that joke's been done to death."

Sensing an opportunity, Twilight snapped up the train of thought before Discord could make it a replacement for the Friendship Express. "You know these 'Human in Equestria' loops that sometimes pop up?"

Mac nodded. Granted, it was mostly external Loopers forgetting to change shape, Sunset Shimmer getting caught in shenanigans, or a Loop-We-Don't-Usually-Think-About scenario, but actual humans did tend to show up every once in a while. "Eeyup?"

Taking on the initiative (and having a very serious 3D chess match with it), Discord continued. "This time, it was Discord in Equestria." Noting Mac's blank stare, he hurried on. "I know, I know, I'm always in Equestria, but that time was different!"

Twilight rolled her eyes. "Now please dig yourself out of that hole while I explain."

As the Lord of Chaos set himself to digging, Twilight elaborated. "Basically, the hapless visitor arriving through unknown means was Dissy here, and oak did that complicate matters with the local counterpart." She deflated. "This explanation isn't doing it justice, isn't it?"

Mac nodded. Discord popped his head out of the ceiling. "So... no free drinks?"

Mac shook his head. Slowly. The Anchor and the Draconequus exchanged glances.

"Dang."

* * *

>143.9 (Tangent)

"It's a trap!" Twilight exclaimed as she took to the air, for all intents appearing to get ready to blast Starlight Glimmer.

This was the moment. While Twilight still had several different plans she wanted to test on this scenario, she had recently had a loop where Cutie Marks had not been so easily removed (and an interesting result in that loop was that Starlight Glimmer had thus ended up as a reporter with a Cutie Mark of a star being weighed by a certain set of broken scales). Naturally, she had studied this effect and had crafted a spell to emulate the protection it provided while she waited for a set of vanilla solo loops to test it in. This was the second such, as the first had been used to troll Tirek after his escape from Tartarus, before he could get very far on his personal quest for power.

So Twilight permitted Starlight Glimmer to use her spell via the faux artifact, and her Cutie Mark did pull away from her flank...

Only to disappear from Starlight's aura so suddenly that the unicorn mage cried out in pain from the backlash as Twilight's Mark returned to its proper place!

"Ow!" Starlight winced as her singing horn sizzled and sparked from the feedback. "What? How!?"

"Interesting," Twilight observed. "After Tirek's rampage across Equestria, I thought it might be prudent to research or develop a spell to prevent Cutie Mark theft." Which was true, after a fashion. "Odd that the feedback effected you, instead of the Staff of Sameness though. The antitheft spell should only have caused feedback against the actual source of the spell it was blocking..."

Twilight let that sink into the thoughts of the villagers who had come to support their leader. Then, as if in after thought, she gathered some snow from outside the Vault cave with her aura and pelted Starlight's flank with it, revealing her Cutie Mark. "I suspected as much. Meadowbrook had only crafted eight major artifacts after all."

"Starlight!? How could you!? We trusted you!" Double Diamond cried out.

"Come on everypony! I wanna see you SMILE!" Pinkie Pie exclaimed as she sidled up to the vault and smashed it open, releasing all the trapped Cutie Marks. Which, incidentally, gave Starlight Glimmer enough of a distraction to get away in the resulting confusion.

Twilight briefly brought her hoof to the bridge of her muzzle. Even with a baseline vanilla solo loop, it was hard to predict Pinkie Pie...

* * *

>143.10

"Excuse me? I have a few questions to ask," Trixie said, flourishing her cloak.

"Oh, _dear..._" Glimmer muttered. "You're an extreme case, aren't you? I think you need some special-"

"Trixie was not finished!" Trixie interrupted loudly. "She merely wishes for a philosophical discussion on your fillosophy."

"Don't you mean philosophy?" her disguised marefriend asked, currently cloaked in the form of a pegasus with blue coat and mane.

And a cutie mark of a large red STOP sign. Just for the moment of confusion when ponies saw it.

"That," Trixie confirmed. She reached behind herself, and pulled out a pile of twenty-four short planks. "Now! Each of these planks is exactly the same as the other eleven! It is made from an identically-grown tree as the rest, planed to complete congruity, and delicately sanded!"

She reached behind herself the other way, and two dozen assorted bits of deformed wood crashed to the ground. "And these! These are most certainly _not_ equal! They are all different - this one is so thin it could barely support its own weight! That one's thick and heavy and far too short! And this one... this one appears to be a blancmange. Whoops!"

Trixie threw it away, not-so-coincidentally hitting Chrysalis square in the face with it. "Now-"

"Trixie!" Chrysalis snapped, rubbing cream and cornstarch off her muzzle. "What was that for?"

"Sorry, I didn't see you there," Trixie lied glibly. A few chuckles reached her ears.

Glimmer glowered at the ponies who'd slipped, and then back to Trixie. "Where are you going with this?"

"Simple!" Trixie said. "Here are some nails and a hammer. Build the tallest thing you can with those planks. When you are done, Trixie will do the same with the unequal bits! They mass the same overall, so which should work best?"

"The-" Glimmer stopped, realizing what she'd been about to admit. "The equal ones, of course!" she said instead.

"Good." Trixie stepped back, and let her get on with it.

* * *

>All things considered, Glimmer hadn't done too bad a job.

She'd used the planks to form a structural framework - hampered by how the diagonal struts weren't long enough, and the orthogonal bits too long - and made a bit of progress, but then she'd realized she could build something with tetrahedra instead and made a kind of pyramid nearly twice as tall as the length of a single plank.

"There!" she said, stepping back with an eye twitch - she wasn't very good at using a hammer, and it had showed. "Now you do it!"

Trixie whistled as she got to work. First she used the heavy, thick plank as a base, putting the tallest and thinnest one in the centre and having Chrysalis support it (with an annoyed expression).

Then she nailed the rest of the pieces of wood together, keeping a careful eye on how they flexed. The ones which were thin and willowy and better in tension were used as cross-struts, the ones with a thick cross-section were the compressive up-down support members.

As the town watched, a tower - wavy, wobbly, but unquestionably much higher than the tetrahedron - took shape.

"And there we have it!" Trixie announced. "Note the greater height! The way the different pieces of wood are used so their strengths compliment one another! And the lovely pretty flag at the top!"

"You'll pay for that!" Chrysalis called down, still at the top of the central spire. She was at least able to sit down on the conveniently provided chair, though.

"That's... well, that's stupid!" Glimmer snapped. "Of course if you can use their strengths together then they're going to do better!"

"Hey," a voice said from behind her, with a slight rasp. "Can we join?"

Glimmer turned, smile back on her face. "Of course! We welcome all - you're a griffin."

Gilda waved. "Yep. And he's a dragon."

"Roar?" Spike said, the sound echoing off the hills. This was especially impressive given he was still his usual baseline size.

"I've got all kinds of cool talents!" Gilda added. "Hey, watch, I can draw an equals sign in the air and make time slow down!"

Putting action to words, she swiped her tail across twice.

A strange, misty feeling spread out across the town for a moment, and when it was done Gilda was lounging in a deck chair. "Neat, huh?"

"Why can't we all do that?" one of the ponies asked.

"Shush!" Glimmer admonished. "I'm afraid we can't take non-ponies. This is a pony only-"

"We're just like anyone else!" Spike protested. "Isn't that kind of the point?"

"Er - well, that is..." Glimmer blinked, wrong-hoofed. She shook her head and refocused. "That doesn't matter! It's-"

"Hey, watch this, I can make it rain," Gilda added. With a flourish, she drew a blue tablet from thin air. "Fire in the hole!"

Glimmer was feeling so overwhelmed that it took her about three seconds to process that.

That was about how long it took for the Water-typed Judgement screaming in from the heavens to detonate overhead, releasing a huge wave of water that crashed to the ground all around her.

"Get out!" she snapped, stomping forwards. "You are disrupting our community! We're all-"

"Hey," Chrysalis said, lazily. "Nice cutie mark. I especially like how it's different from everyone else's here."

Glimmer paused. "What did you just-"

There was a long, low gasp from all around her.

"...oh, ponyfeathers."

* * *

>143.11

"I have had one of the strangest loops in a _long_ time," Twilight informed her friends, as they assembled in the library to handle Nightmare Moon, who had just declared the Night would - oh, you know all this.

"Strange?" Pinkie asked. "Fun? _Good_ fun? _Bad_ fun?"

"No, just... bizarre. Dissonant to what I normally expect." Twilight took a deep breath. "Right. So, it seemed mostly baseline, though that's a relative term when Smaug's moved into the Everfree and demanding kitten-themed cushions for his dread lair. And then we went to Starlight Glimmer's village."

Dash stamped a hoof on the floor. "That sounds like the kind of thing that's not bizarre at all, just simple!"

Twilight smiled. "Yeah, except that she didn't make a move. Well, more like it wasn't her village."

"Say whaaaaaat?" Dash asked, gaping. "Okay, spill!"

"She was just like any other pony there - she admitted she founded it, but she didn't have much to do with the running of the place. nopony did, it was all very model-anarchist-commune." Twilight shrugged. "Still all equal cutie marks, though - except for one, who had a pair of bricks and was building himself a house."

"Newcomer?" Rarity asked.

"Nope - next morning, I saw him with a plow cutie mark out in the fields, alongside someone with a corn cutie mark." Twilight rolled her eyes. "That's when I realized something was _really_ strange."

"Well, don't keep us in _suspense_, or anythin'..." Applejack drawled.

Twilight hesitated a moment longer, then dropped her bombshell. "The cave was a Cutie Mark Rental Station. Anyone could pick one up for the day, and Glimmer's normal mark was actually attached to that silly stick. I tested it - the stick was the thing that could move them around, not her any more."

There was silence for several seconds.

"...so... if anyone wanted ta build a house-"

"-they'd borrow the house building cutie mark," Twilight confirmed. "I was surprised too, it's a lot more sensible than the original setup while still being just as equal... anyway, that's probably not going to happen again any time soon, randomness of the loops and everything, but it seems like it _is_ a thing that happens - make sure to look out for it."

* * *

>143.12 (Evilhumour)

"-the night shall last forev-"

"No so fast, dear sister." Celestia flew into the room, with an unAwake Luna as Nightmare Moon making her usual speech blinking up in surprise. "I shall defeat you using something even more powerful then the Elements!" She landed in front of her sister with Twilight still Asleep, considering how big her gasp was.

"What, pray tell, sister will _you_ use to st-"

"Boop." Celestia placed her hoof on Nightmare Moon's nose, causing the mare to blink and shake her head.

"Wh-what was tha-" Before she could continue or rebuild steam, Celestia's hoof struck again.

"Boop." Celestia was barely holding back her grin now.

"Stop that you vi-"

"Boop." Celestia was chuckling softly at how flustered Nightmare Moon was, her cheeks puffed out.

"I _said_-"

"Boop. Boop. Boop." Celestia's hoof struck the nose each time, despite her sister's attempt to dodge her. Tackling her over, and sitting her on barrel, she leaned down and placed her hoof onto the nose once more. "Boooooooooooooooooooooo-"

"Oh that does Celestia, you wish to instigate another booping war, then you shall have it!" Nightmare Moon shouted, rolling Celestia off of her and reaching to bop Celestia's nose. Soon, the news broke out that Princess Luna had been saved by the Nightmare forces, and the two Princesses had accidentally destroyed a library in their playful romp of their boop war.

* * *

>143.13 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

**From the Inquisitorial Archives on Holy Terra, Written by Inquisitor Amberley Vail, on the Chaos Goddess of Friendship and Books**

Chaos Goddess Twilight Sparkle came to being around the same time as our Holy Emperor. When mankind was still young, they were led by the Shamans. However, spirits of chaos consumed their souls upon their deaths, preventing their reincarnation to continue to lead mankind. They came together and began researching a method to stave off the onslaught of chaos. This research project lasted for years. During that time, many Shamans formed bonds of friendship. Ultimately, they decided to merge their souls together and be reborn as one man, a new man, who would lead mankind at its head. This man would be the God Emperor of Mankind. Their efforts succeeded, but they unintentionally gave birth to a new Chaos Goddess.

Though mostly proving to be a benevolent goddess, followers are known for their extreme pursuits of knowledge and desire to befriend all. More radical worshipers would kill to obtain knowledge or befriend by forcible means. For more on these forces, see the Lesson Zero Cultists and the Tyrant Sun Militia.

The form Twilight takes is that of a pony, which bears a horn that can manipulate the warp at will as well as wings to carry her friendship to the furthest reaches of the galaxy.

Her home in the Warp is on Equus 9, where grows the Harmonious Kingdom Tree. She first manifested herself to her prized pupils, Celes Tia and her sister Luna, upon this world. Twilight brought about the falls of five chapters of Adepta Sororitas, her 'Bearers of Harmony.' Chaos has twisted and perverted the human forms of the chapters, taking the appearance of their pony goddess. Leman Russ is the most notable fallen Primarch and has taken the name, Lemon Rush in service to the advancement of Friendship and Knowledge.

Though not often found on the battlefield itself, the previously mentioned Lesson Zero Cultists often take up the shout when raiding the Inquisitorial Archives, ***BOOKS FOR THE BOOK THRONE.*** Cultists often wear the image of a tree somewhere on their body, shaped after the Harmony Kingdom Tree.

* * *

>143.14 (Tangent)

Celestia looked over the letter that had just arrived. The first she had received from an unawake Twilight after the Lesson Zero incident. There was a stealth anchor wandering around somewhere, she was sure, but she had yet to figure out just who it might be. A task made even harder by the fact that this was a slightly variant loop, with several ponies either being out of place, having different roles, or just plain not there.

Sure, Twilight had still (somehow) managed to gather five friends in Ponyville. All Unawake. And Tree only knew what the reason might be that events were inexplicably following their regular course, albeit not in an exact manner.

Rainbow Dash in Rarity's role was something she had seen before, so Celestia had no problems with it. Not even when she turned out to be the Element of Honesty (mostly from an apparent aversion to telling any lies besides polite social fictions, and even those only when appropriate).

Maud Pie being in Ponyville instead of Pinkie had been a surprise, but her staunch, dependable nature made her an excellent candidate for the Element of Loyalty.

Filthy Rich turning out to be a fine candidate for the Element of Generosity was something Celestia was sure Diamond Tiara would enjoy hearing about the next time they looped together.

Fluttershy being the Element of Kindness was no surprise to Celestia, but the fact that she was actually a pegasus from the village of Clydesdale, and thus actually a horse. A tall horse. As in an actual Clydesdale breed pegasus tall enough to force Celestia to look up to meet Fluttershy eye to eye. And yet still painfully shy. A veritable gentle giant in a world much too small for her.

Applejack was still a farmer, but this time her special talent more accurately reflected her name, as she was very good at making _jacked apple cider._ She was also the Element of Laughter in this loop. And a _horrible_ influence on Twilight...

Case in point being made clear by the letter she had just received:

_Dear Princess Celery,_

_Today I... Well... I don't remember what I did today._

_Or yesterday..._

_Or much of the past week, now that I think about it..._

_Oh yeah! Today (or possibly last week) I discovered that Applejack is also the name of a wonderful drink that Applejack can actually make! It's quite good, and I told her so, so she gave me a couple of jugs. You have to try some! It's... it's... EMPTY!? Both of them!? Already!? How could that possibly happen!?

_Well, I'm off to find out what happened!_

_Later._

_Your faithful... something, Twilight Sparkle_

_P.S. Spike here. Twilight needs an intervention. Again! Please send help!_

* * *

>143.15 (Evilhumour)

"-is this better?" Rainbow Dash Woke up on a chair with something heavy on her face, her vision blurred horribly against the wall with letters and numbers.

Buying time for her memories to quick in, Dash gulped and tried to shake her head no, but a set of hooves held her steady. "Remember Dashie, you need to hold still." A kind, caring voiced said to her, rubbing the small of her back.

"Sorry mom," the response was immediate, which told her she was a young filly again and she had a darn good feeling what was going on. "And not really..."

"How about this one?" With a click, her vision cleared up perfectly. "Is _this_ better?"

"Totally!" She smiled, with her mom patting her on the back. "A hundred and twenty percent better doc!"

"That's great to hear Dash," the eye-doctor said walking over to her and taking the heavy machine off with the hint of magic. "If you will give us half an hour miss Prism, we'll have your daughter's glasses made." Dash blinked at the sudden change in vision, her eyes watering up as she tried to focus in front of her.

"And knowing my little Dashie, back in the air now that she can see where she's flying too." Her mom said, hugging her close. "No more crashing into stuff for you little missy."

"Mom!" Dash blushed at that, with the doctor chuckling as the two pegasi left his office.

* * *

>143.16 (Evilhumour)

"Begone Discord, and never return!" Lemon shouted, blasting the draconequus with his half of the Elements, the bubble from the other alicorn holding him place. Together, the two sealed Discord into stone and looked at each other.

"Are you Awake?" They both asked each other; chuckling at their obvious answer.

"It seems that our Admins finally set this one up kid," Shining smirked, tapping the fellow alicorn's shoulder. "So how do you want to set things up? You take care of the offensive stuff and I'll take care of the defensive stu-"

"Actually, I do have some plans Shining," Lemon tapped his chin. "While I have ruled Fenris more times than I can count, I don't think my styles there can work here." Landing down with the Elements around them and Discord's statue, the yellow alicorn nodded his head. "I do have a few ideas in ruling this time." As Lemon began to share, Shining smiled and nodded his head.

"You do know if this works, Twily will be pissed that we thought of it first, right?"

"Bah, there are other mares that I am more scared of then Twilight," Lemon smiled as the ponies started to come to them. "Want to hit the lights?"

With a nod, Shining Armor raised the sun.

* * *

>"-a thousand years ago, the royal defenders Lemon Rush and Shining Armor defeated the horrible threat of Discord." Twilight looked up from the book, Waking up in the processes, staring at the two grinning alicorns stallion in front of her, the yellow one encouraging her onwards. "While the ponies of the past wished to make them the new rulers of Equestria, they refused. They claimed that while they would always be there for their little ponies, they would let them lead their own life, only to step in times of great need, turmoil. They would offer advice and suggestions to the Unified Parliament of Three Tribes over the years, leading to the eternal golden age of Equestria with all the advancement and science they brought forth. It is unknown where Equestria would be today if it were not for our guardians, but the massive, space sprawling empire of Equestria would certainly not be a..."

Twilight looked up at the two and _glared_. "Seriously?"

"The book lied a bit, Twily," Shining smirked, "We didn't _give_ them all the advance stuff, just pushed them in the right direction. We didn't interfere at all, doing our best to be there for our little ponies, but not _there_ for our little ponies."

Lemon smirked, patting her brother on the back. "Neither of us needed to go on a time out, we purposely had continuous conversations with our ponies to show we're still regular ponies and that we could be wrong so they didn't elevate us above each other and we were often knocked down a peg from time to time."

"So Twilight," Lemon walked over to her with Shining beside him. "Boys 1, girls 0 in a perfect prince/princess run."

Twilight simply used the book in her magic to chase the two, with the book striking their nose more than once.

143.17 (Evilhumour)

Twilight blinked, her mouth twitching slightly. The mare opposite her blushed, looking off to the side, pushing her glasses up her nose.

"Hey Twily," her friend said weakly, "A bit awkward to see _you_ here. Thought you'd be in Ponyville, trying to save your home and enjoying our usual level of crazy stuff."

"Yeah..." Twilight nodded her head. "I was there, -Spike subbed for you by the way- and things were more or less normal. Scoots wanted to learn more about pegasus magic this loop so I came to Cloudsdale library..."

"Really?" The mare opposite of her perked up, her normal smile on her face. "What are ya looking for? We've got several books on the different theories of pegasi magic, several history books, there's a _couple_ I've put on hold so I _can_ go through them and there's _so_ much more I ca-"

Twilight placed a hoof on the mare's mouth. "Easy there," she chuckled, flapping her wings. "Why don't you show me around _your_ library and _I'll_ promise I'll do my best not to crash into it."

Rainbow Dash laughed, patting the mare on the back. "Nice one Twilight." Her smile began to fall as Twilight wasn't laughing. "You're joking, right?" Twilight simply stayed quiet as she walked into the library, with Dash pushing her glasses back up as she followed her in. "Right?"

* * *

>143.18 (Evilhumour)

Twilight Woke up, in both senses, to someone banging on her door. Teleporting down as the library wasn't open today, she opened the door to see one of Celestia's advisers if her loop memories were being honest.

"Sparkle, do you know where they are?!" The mare shouted, grabbing Twilight and shaking her, the panic on her face was the same on the ponies in the street with Ivory trying to install some order.

"What? Who?!_" Twilight already had an idea but-

"The Princesses!_" The mare shouted, reaching out for Twilight but she teleported backwards, out of reach. "They're gone!"

"Oh no," Twilight tapped her chin, trying to think of what could have happened. "Did Discord statue break or -"

"We don't_ know!" She wailed, with the guards ponies around her trying to install order and trying hard not to panic either. "All I found was this!_"

She floated over a simple folded paper over. Twilight read it and felt her mane spring out of place already.

"Are you bucketing_ kidding me?!" She shouted as she reread the letter. "'Dear Daily Planner, Lulu and I are going out for the day. Don't worry, everything will be fine as long you don't panic. Hugs and kisses, Tia.'"

At that point, every pony glared at the mare and facehooved.

Twilight sighed, as she slammed the door closed and teleported back to her bed.

* * *

>143.19 (Evilhumour)

"Oh come on_!" Twilight shouted as they came back to Ponyville, with Dash patting her back in shared pain, pushing her glasses back up her nose. Tirek had attacked Cloudsdale instead this loop, and they had done their best to rally there quickly to save the pegasus community, with Dash saving all_ the ponies who lost their magic due to the centaur, ascending naturally in the processes. As the girls were attacking the centaur, he had smacked Dash's library' causing it to pop with lightening fanning everywhere. As Twilight soon learned, one bolt had arced all the way towards Ponyville before crashing into the Golden Oaks library.

"Wow, Twilight, I can actually_ feel your pain." Dash pulled Twilight into a hug. "Losing your library sucks_."

Twilight simply banged her head against the wall at the injustice of it all.

* * *

>143.20 (Evilhumour)

Princess Luna and Celestia, or Selena the unicorn and Sunny Day the pegasus looked at each other and then at the building in front of them. The pegasus pushed the unicorn forwards, with made her squeak in surprise.

"Come Selena, we've done so much in the loops, we can do this too!" Sunny Days smiled, bumping her sister's flanks. "I mean, I've seen what you've done in the loops and baseline, and this would be great for you."

"Sis, I-"

"We didn't agree to play hooky and told Daily Planner to cover for us today just so you can back out now Lulu," Sunny said, hugging her sister. "Now you are going to go in there, show off your paintings, get them appraised and then we're going to either celebrate with booze or drown out the memories with booze!"

"Tia," Selena whined, blushing as she looked around, the painting still rolled up behind her. "Promise to stay with me, no matter what?"

"Of course Lulu," the pegasus hugged her sister, tightly, whispering into her ear. "Now let's go inside, shall we?"

With that, the two mares went inside.

* * *

>143.21 (Evilhumour)

Rainbow Dash pushed her glasses up as she landed in Ponyville, making sure her ponytail was perfect as she made her way to Fluttershy. She hadn't meant to avoid her friends this loop, but running a library had been hard work along with dealing with some craziness that plagued her.

She also promised herself to avoid flying into Twi's home after bucking so many ponies out of her library; the pure insanity of it nearly drove to her snapping.

"-it's funny?!-" That was Gilda shouting, who was unAwake this loop. "That's the most ponyfeathers excuse I've ever head for doing something lik-"

"Okay Glida, quit i-tree dangit, not again!" Rainbow Dash shouted, forgetting once again not to fly too fast as her glasses flew off her nose when she went to stop her friend from doing something bad. She landed on the ground, trying to find her glasses without stepping on them for the fiftieth time. She could not afford another pair of glasses; the doc had really jacked up their prices after the twentieth time.

"Dashie?" Glida blinked, her blurry bulk flying over to her. "What's wrong?"

"My glasses, my glasses, I can't see anything without my glasses!" Rainbow Dash quickly facehooved at making that reference, blushing and glad no one was Awake to hear that.

"Don't worry Dashie, we'll help," Gilda patted her back gently. "Right you little brats?" She sneered over her shoulder at what she thought were DT, SS and the CMC, all moving around and trying to find her glasses. "In case you're wondering, this is the mare I was talking about. Miss Sonic Rainboom and never giving into bullies!"

"_Gilda!_" She blushed at the praise. "Stop _that_."

"Well? We've defend Flutters and every other pony from all those jerks that thought it was cool to pick on somepony that didn't have their cutie mark or wore glasses!" She sneered again, with Rainbow Dash grunting out her annoyance at her own friend's jerkish attitude. "Dash, I care too much to be subtle, you know that right?"

A orange blur ran over to her, holding something very familiar in her hooves. "Yeah, I know, but they're _foals_!" Taking her glasses and brushing them off with her wings, she thanked Scootaloo.

"Well, what do you expect from the Element of Brutal Honesty, _Velma?_" Gilda's smirk startled Dash horribly, causing her to jump back and meep loudly. Looking at all the five ponies, they had the same smirk on their face. "By the way, Twily told us about them _cute_ glasses you have on RD." Her friend reached over and pinched her blushing cheek, the looping CMC snickering now. Blinking, she was temporarily blinded from the pictures being taken.

Twitching, Rainbow Dash shot into the air. Leveling above the treeline, she looked at Ponyville and the library. Pulling in tremendous speed and pegasus magic, she aimed herself for the Golden Oaks to have a nice 'chat' with Twilight. She should be ready for her, after all, by how loud she was shouting her name.

* * *

>143.22 (fractalman)

Twilight rolled her eyes. This was hardly the first time a swimming pool had randomly showed up in the middle of Ponyville, though this was the first time it had been filled with water (naturally, she cast a battery of tests to make sure it was, in fact, just water with the appropriate amount of chlorine, and not some other substance that merely looked like water). She waded in, then calmly backstroked her way to the deep end, where Rarity was relaxing on a float.

"Er, Twilight?" asked Rarity.

"Yes, Rarity?" asked Twilight, as she rolled over and stood up, throwing a look look towards her friend.

"Erm...you might want to look over there..."

Twilight looked in the direction where Rarity was pointing.

"Pffftt...pffftt..." said the pink ball of fluff.

"So...Fluffle Puff sucked up all the water just by walking into the pool?"

"Quite."

* * *

>143.23 (Tangent)

_Look at how __**HAPPY**__ we are in out conformity! Nopony faster than the slowest pony among us, so nopony ever gets left behind (even if we can no longer complete our work in as timely a manner as before)._

_Sugar Belle is still our Baker. She makes muffins every day. She used to be the best baker around, but now everypony can cook just as well as she does. We don't miss the flavor. Really. The muffins have been kind of horrible since the last batch of inductees though. But everpony has the same level of cooking skill, and that's the important bit._

_Party Favor likes to make everypony happy. It is easy for him now 'our little village is HAPPY to be the same. He used to make all sorts of things out of balloons that no other pony could make, and he would use them to make ponies happy. He doesn't make them anymore, because nopony else could make things out of balloons. At all. Now nopony makes balloon items. Fair is fair after all. I miss the balloon items..._

_A new pony came to our little village the other day. She was lame. Starlight Glimmer decided to give her a private Unmarking, and sent the rest of us back to the village._

_Starlight Glimmer came back to the village alone. Apparently the new pony was so happy to be able to walk freely again that she decided to spread word of our lifestyle back in her home village. She sounds like she would have been such a nice pony to have as a neighbor..._

_~From the Journal of Midnight Glider, one of the few surviving documents found in the abandoned community known only as "Our Little Village." _

* * *

>Rainbow Dash put down Daring Do and the Staff of Sameness_, horrified. It wasn't often that she had the opportunity to read divergent Daring Do publications unless she wrote them herself due to replacing her favorite author, and they were usually fun reads, but from the sound of things, Starlight Glimmer had started her grand experiment a few years early this loop.

Checking the title of the next book in the series, _**Daring Do and the Cannibal Castle**_, _**Daring Do and the Trottingham Terror**_, and the oh so disturbing latest volume (that co-starred Applebloom on the cover) _**Daring Do and the Village of the Blanks**_, she sent out an emergency ping to gather Twilight and the rest of the Awake loopers at the Golden Oak library.

Horror fusion loops were... well, not quite the worst, but they were still something best to be prepared for...

* * *

>143.24 (Evilhumour)

Twilight Woke up in Eiken with the rest of her friends glaring at her.

"I-"

"Twilight. Dear." Rarity said sharply. "While we know how much you wish to save your home at least once a loop, you should know that Tirek seems to have a bullseye for it."

"Yes, which-"

"And if you'd asked us sugarcube, we'd help ya out." Applejack huffed.

"I know that, but-"

"I mean, it sucks to loose your home. I know, mine gets blown away from time to time." Dash grunted, a bit put off that she had the smallest chest among her friends along with the boyish haircut, wondering what Yggdrasil was trying to saying about her.

"I'm sorry to hear tha-"

"And as your friends, we'd love to help you find a way to retain it." Fluttershy smile was one of thinly veiled annoyance.

"Okay, but-"

"But that was a really silly plan, Twilight." Pinkie Pie said while eating a cupcake, her smile slightly smaller than normal.

"How was I supposed to know that it would crash the loop?!" Twilight shouted at her friends.

"When you turn everything in Equestria into the Golden Oaks, what did ya expect to happen partner!?" Applejack shouted, pounding her fist on the desk she was trapped in.

Twilight just groaned, burying her face in her hands as they began to deal with their punishment.

* * *

>143.25 (Crisis)

"Hey Twilight," Rainbow Dash spoke up as she entered the library, seeing her currently-still-a-unicorn friend examining the shelves intently, "what's up?"

"I'm having trouble finding a book," Twilight answered as she kept scanning the shelves as if the book she was looking for would have magically appeared in the last few seconds.

"Really?" Dash blinked. "Huh... thought you knew exactly where everything was. What's the book?"

"In Plain Sight."

"I asked what it was," Dash rolled her eyes, "not where it was. Seriously, what's the book?"

"In Plain Sight, like I said."

"Obviously not, or you would have found it already."

"No, the book is In Plain Sight, I just can't seem to find it."

"Look, if you can't find it then it's obviously not in plain sight at all."

"I think I know my books better than you do, Dash, and this one is definitely In Plain Sight, I just need to find it."

"Okay, okay, where'd you get it?"

"From the Hub, by an author named Michaels Fern."

"Okay, what's the book the guy wrote and where should it be?"

"In Plain Sight, like I told you. It should be right here on this shelf."

"Look, Twilight, it's kind of hard to help if you won't..." Dash trailed off as her exasperated raise of her eyes landed on a volume several shelves up from where Twilight was looking. Wordlessly, Dash flapped up and removed a hardback volume from the top shelf that read 'In Plain Sight' across the spine. She wordlessly flapped back down and stared at the book for a moment before looking Twilight straight in the eye. "Did you seriously just 'Who's on First' me?"

"Well, you did kind of walk right into it," Twilight chuckled as Dash hoofed her the book. "And I really was having trouble finding this. Thanks."

"Don't mention it. Like, ever."

* * *

>143.26 (Evilhumour)

Big Mac blinked as Vinyl slammed the door open, fuming mad with her ears upright.

"Where is your little sister BM?" She placed both of her hooves onto the counter. "I've got a little score to settle with her after what she did to me!"

Big Mac simply raised an eyebrow as he slid her a drink, silently asking her what his little sister did.

"Your little sister wanted to do some testing but lost the remote so she asked me for some help." Vinyl frowned as she slammed the drink back, sighing loudly. "She then grabbed my _ears_ and started squeezing _them!_ And it _worked!_"

Big Mac had to stop himself from laughing, a smirk almost appearing on his face. "Ah'll talk to her." He nodded his head.

"Thanks but that's not the real- GAH!" Vinyl shouted as she batted her ear, sending off miniature blasts of sonic into his booze collection, shattering many of the bottles. "The _worst_ part is that she left me in a weird state that I keep doing _that_!"

"Ah'll go talk to her _now_." He frowned, moving to close the bar. As the two of them walked towards the exit, he paused to give Vinyl a look.

"Oh no, you will _not_ do th-GEIK!" She meeped loudly as Big Mac leaned over and squeezed her ears, causing a low frequency blast of sonic waves to hit the door. With a loud _CLICK_, the bar was now locked. She huffed and blushed at the smirking pony. "You're going to tell _everyone_ about this, aren't ya?"

"Eeyup." With that, the two ponies left the cellar to talk to a certain little filly about personal space.

* * *

>AN:

143.1: They, indeed, jelly.

>143.2: Listen, sugar. (Red vs Blue crossover.)143.3: Family. Can't live near them, can't evil without them.

>143.4: The loud one, the stoic one, and the bossy one.143.5: Mirror, mirror on the wall, what the heck is going on?

>143.6: The best copy of Dash... is Dash.143.7: Adopt, adapt, improve. (Potterverse crossover.)

>143.8: That don't cotton with Mac.143.9: A glimmer of understanding.

>143.10: The Trix and Chrissy Show.143.11: That's the way to do it.

>143.12: Boops for victory!143.13: She writes about everything. Both shes. (40K crossover.)

>143.14: Yet another set of alternate mane characters.143.15: Contact lenses required.

>143.16: Flawless victory! (40K crossover.)143.17: Ah, sweet revengeance.

>143.18: That's the problem with perfect rulers.143.19: A certain amount of historical inevitability.

>143.20: Everyone feels inadequate about something.143.21: Zing!

>143.22: Where does that thing even come from?143.23: Ah.

>143.24: A target rich environment.143.25: It was right there! No, wait, that's the sequel.

>143.26: Sonic powers can kinda suck.

151. Chapter 151

144.1 (Bardic Knowledge)

_Looping Captain's Log, Stardate 42731.2_

_There had been no indication of a Variant or Fused Loop of any kind until we stumbled upon this strange planet. From what can be seen, the moon is seemingly locked into a position of permanent eclipse, which has turned the otherwise M-class planet into a frozen wasteland. This would have been little more than a curiosity if it hadn't been for the strange signal emanating from the planet._

* * *

>"What do you make of it, Mr. Data?" Picard asked.

"The signal is artificial in origin, but would not be noticed by the sensors as anything other than background radiation if not for our upgrades to the system," Data spoke freely, as the only other people on the bridge were also Awake. "If I were to hazard a guess, I believe the source is a form of magic."

"Magic," mused Riker. "Are we sure there were no pings, Captain?"

"Positive, number one. I'm still not sure this is anything more than a variant, however. Can you pinpoint the location of the signal?"

"Working on it now, Captain," said Geordi, at the science station. "Looks like it's definitely magic, Captain. The signal just got stronger, like it wants to be found."

"Which makes the question less about the kind of magic and more about whether its malevolent or not," commented Riker.

"True. Are you getting any sort of emotion from the planet, counselor?"

"Just one. There's something down there, but all I can get from it is intense sorrow."

Geordi turned around, "I think I've got it, Captain."

"Can you bring the location up on screen?" asked Picard, standing up and unconsciously tugging down his uniform shirt. A few button presses later, and the screen showed a top-down view of a ruined castle in the middle of a dead forest, all covered in snow. However, there was a light emanating from a cave in a ravine near the castle.

"I'm guessing that light is the location of either our figure of sorrow or the magic. Possibly both." Riker walked up to the screen next to Picard. "Captain, are you..."

"Getting the strangest sense of deja vu? Yes. This place feels familiar, but I can't quite place how. Maybe a closer look is in order. Mr. Worf," Captain Picard turned to his security officer, "who all among the crew is Awake this Loop, aside from those on the bridge?"

"Only Doctor Crusher and Wesley, Captain," answered Worf. "They have both asked to be left to their own projects when it won't interfere with baseline occurrences."

"Very well, we'll leave them to it. Will, call up the secondary command crew. I think all of us will be going down to the planet. I want a closer look at those ruins."

* * *

>After beaming down to the surface wearing environmental belts (they regulated the air and temperature of the wearer, but the force shield on them was too weak to stop even the weakest phaser blast, making them useless for more than recon on near-M-class planets), the away team of Loopers pulled out their tricorders. Except for Deanna Troi, who would have collapsed to the ground if not for Riker quickly grabbing her.

"Deanna?" he asked.

"The sorrow is much stronger here. It would have to be to be felt on the Enterprise, but the intensity..." After a few moments Deanna stood back up. "I think I've got a hold of it now. It's coming from inside the cave."

"Speaking of," said Data. "I believe I have discovered why the castle looked familiar. We have simply never viewed it from above before. This is the Castle of the Royal Pony Sisters."

"Equestria?" asked a stunned Worf. "But why would it be in this condition?"

Picard thought things over for a second. "I believe our answer lies within the cave. Shall we find a way down?"

After a few moments of searching, Data had managed to spot an ancient staircase leading down into the ravine from the other side of a broken bridge. Judging the ravine to be just shallow enough that he could land on the bottom with minimal damage, Data then volunteered to jump in and climb the stairs in an attempt to repair the old hanging bridge. Worf countered with a question of how he would managed to grab the broken part and fix it from the other side.

After a few moments of debate, it was decided that they would use Data jumping down in the official report, but lean on their out-of-Loop skills to repair the bridge more quickly. With that done, they carefully descended the snow-slicked stairway and walked into the cave.

Before them they saw a shining silver tree, the light pulsing softly as though it was losing power. And laying on the ground before them was a dark figure, covered in frost and barely, but noticeably, breathing.

Deanna was on it in a moment, tricorder out and taking readings. "She's obviously still alive, Captain, but her vital statistics are so low that she's basically in a coma."

"But you still feel intense despair from her?"

"Yes. It's as if she's shut herself in her own mind."

"Captain," interjected Riker. "If this is Equestria, then that's probably one of the princesses. Considering the state of the moon, I'd hazard Luna."

"Quite possibly, number one," Picard paused, seeing that Riker had more to say.

"Captain, according to what we know of Equestria, a thousand years before the usual Awakening point, Princess Luna went mad and tried to cause eternal night. I think that's what happened here."

"And in some variants, the alicorns are for all intents and purposes immortal, which would explain how Princess Luna is still here presumably a thousand years later. But what could have happened to Celestia?"

"Maybe we should ask her?" said Worf, pointing to the fallen alicorn.

Picard nodded. "We'll take up to the ship and let Doctor Crusher have a look at her. Hopefully she's got something close to baseline that can help heal her."

* * *

>Looping Captain's Log, supplemental. Though Beverly was slightly miffed to be taken away from her personal project, the state in which we had found Princess Luna got her attention quite rapidly, and she has been working on a solution for almost half a day. She feels confident that she can stimulate healing to counteract the nearly thousand years of degradation the princess's body underwent, but she is unsure what can be done to actually bring her out of the despair-fuelled coma.

The Looping Staff (plus Wesley) sat around the Observation Lounge table to discuss their discovery.

"I'm at my limit in this, Captain," said Beverly. "No matter what chemicals and medicines I try to use that can be explained away in baseline, even the experimental ones, I just can't get her to wake up."

"I've even tried some empathic projections to counteract it with feelings of warmth and belonging," added Deanna, "but that doesn't seem to be having any effect either."

"I might have an idea, Captain," said Wesley. "Since I heard that we'd found an Equestria, I pulled out my copy of the Hub-world's backup of their Loop. Maybe if we find the Elements of Harmony, they could have a healing effect on her."

"They seem to work in that way after a fashion, but aside from trying to find them, how would we use them? _Who_ would use them?"

"We've all had Loops where we've had one form of magic or another, so we could give them a try ourselves. Data would make a good fit for the Element of Honesty, and either mom or Counselor Troi could be Kindness."

Beverly shared a quick glance with Deanna. "Between the two of us, I think Deanna would fit a bit better in the 'Kindness' department."

"I think I see where you're going," said Geordi. "Worf is definitely Loyalty." The Klingon shifted in his seat at the notion. "And I think Commander Riker would work pretty well as Generosity."

"Really?" asked Riker. "How so?"

"You do tend to give of yourself when someone wants a piece of you," teased Deanna. "I've never known you to refuse a relationship, no matter how serious the other party wants it to be."

"But that still leaves us Laughter and Magic," said Beverly.

"The Element of Laughter isn't necessarily about laughing yourself or being funny," said Wesley. "In the season three finale, when Twilight becomes a princess, Celestia refers to it as 'optimism.' The others get that, too, using integrity, compassion, charity, devotion, and leadership instead."

Geordi smiled. "Well, Wes, you're definitely an optimistic kid. Maybe you should take Laughter."

"_Me?_" asked Wesley incredulously. Considering how he'd been in baseline, and how recently he'd Awakened, he hadn't quite expected something like this.

"And I suppose that leaves leadership to me," said Captain Picard. "Do we have any idea of the side effects using the Elements could have on the ship?"

"As far as we've seen in Equestria, the Elements can only be used as a force for good and balance," said Deanna. "Likely everyone will just be a bit more cheerful and healthy for a few days."

"Then I guess we'll have to give it a shot," Picard sighed. This would be a right headache to explain to Starfleet. Might have to fake some ancient writing to explain their knowledge away. "Let's all get a good night's rest, then we'll return to the planet to retrieve the Elements."

Everyone nodded their assent and left for their respective quarters.

* * *

>The next day, the chosen six met in the transporter room, to be beamed down to the same coordinates as before, as, according to the Loop back-up, the Elements were most likely to be found in the castle's ruins as stone orbs.

And they were, surrounded the beheaded skeleton of an alicorn.

"Looks like we know what happened to Princess Celestia now," sighed Captain Picard. "Let's just hope they'll still work."

"If the backup was any indication, sir, they'll respond to those who exhibit the virtues of the Elements," said Riker, who had caught up on the back up as well that night. "But you might have to give one of your famous speeches to start the ball rolling." Picard looked at the smirk on Riker's face and resisted rolling his eyes.

After collecting the Elements, Captain Picard wrote on the wall of the castle in a language not wholly alien to the Federation, but close enough that it would look like they had instead spent the time translating instead of transcribing. They amounted to a description of the six Elements, what they do, and how to activate them in a way that sounded ancient. Once the words looked faded enough to fool most archaeologists, they returned to the Enterprise and to Sick Bay, where Princess Luna lay.

Once they lay the stone orbs containing the Elements on the floor, Picard pulled out the "translation" of the wall's text. They couldn't put everyone out of Sick Bay for no reason, so they had to put on a show for the Department of Temporal Investigations.

"According to the ruins," he began, "we need to figure out a way to utilize these stones as the Elements of Harmony. With them we might be able to heal our guest from her coma. As each one requires a bearer, I have taken the liberty of assigning each to one of you. Though we've only been crew for a short time, it feels as though I've known all of you for years." The Looping staff shared a smile. "And so, hopefully, I've got these right."

"Commander Riker, though you can sometimes put on a facade of indulgence, in truth you are a very charitable man, giving freely of yourself and your reputation for anyone who has need of you. As such, I name you the Element of Generosity." One of the orbs glowed purple and floated in front of Riker. Heartened, the Captain continued.

"Lieutenant Commander Data. As an android, you have often been considered a curiosity in Starfleet. But your integrity and forthrightness has never wavered, making you a pillar we can all lean on in times of need. You, I believe, are our Element of Honesty." Another orb glowed orange and went to Data.

"Lieutenant Worf. You have been torn most of your life between your duty to your blood as a Klingon and your duty to Starfleet and its tenets, but your devotion to both and to this crew has carried all of us to greater heights than any one man could go on his own. You are the Element of Loyalty." The next one glowed red, which Worf appreciated.

Counselor Troi. There have been times that your position on this ship has been called into question, by yourself and by others, but throughout the hardship this ship has endured the compassion you have shown has kept us sane and safe. You are our Element of Kindness." A yellow-glowing orb floated before her.

Picard took a deep breath as he turned to the next-to-last member. "Wesley. When I first met you, all I could think of was that you were a child with no business on my ship." Wesley gave a chagrined smile. "Since that day, you have grown into a fine young man, whose optimism and heart have saved us all many times. So I name you Element of Laughter." The last orb glowed cyan and joined the others.

Then Commander Riker spoke up. "And then there's the sixth Element. The beings of the planet called it 'Magic,' but it spoke of being born when all the others came together. And, truth be told, we wouldn't all be here today if not for you, Captain. You are our Element of Magic." A sixth orb materialized from the air and shone before the Captain, before the lights of all the Elements grew bright enough to drown out Sick Bay.

When the light faded, each of the new Element Bearers had their communicators changed, becoming a jewel the colour the orbs had glowed for each one of them set in what seemed to be gold. Picard's own was slightly more elaborate than the others, however, with a starburst pattern in place of the usual ovoid.

On the bed, Princess Luna, now smaller and without any sort of mane, slowly and shakily sat up. Doctor Crusher and the nurses quickly checked her over to make sure she wasn't going to hurt herself in moving, then allowed her motion when it became obvious she was healed.

"Senan lf R?" she asked. Picard grimaced slightly. Apparently, though understandably, Ancient Equestrian didn't match any form of human speech.

"You'll be alright," said Deanna, softly. "You're on our ship and we've just healed you."

"Enlzng fn? Selq lan bhv- Qen Nznfnuqp!" She gasped on seeing the newly-coloured communicators. "Ehs grg bhv lyqrwlqn qen Nznfnuqp? Rp fb prpqna enan? Grg R ganlf rq lzz?"

"I'm afraid not. You are the only survivor of your planet."

Captain Picard's brow furrowed. "Counselor, can you understand her?"

"Yes, captain. I'm not sure how, but it's like I'm sensing the meaning behind the words, even if I don't know the words themselves. And she can understand me, as well."

"Huzb... pvawrwha? R- Pen- R-"

Deanna instantly moved to hug her. "Shh, it's alright. You're going to be okay. Rest now, please. I'm sure you must be tired from your ordeal."

"Uhqerux srzz cn htlb lxlru." Princess Luna looked to the floor.

"Now that's not true at all. As long as you're alive, there's hope."

"Cvq Celestia rp gnlq! Lug R grg rq! Ehs ylu qenan cn ehon?!"

"Because you're still here..."

As Deanna and Luna spoke, Picard leaned over to the others and whispered, "Perhaps it might be best if we leave them to it. We'll see them when they're ready."

* * *

>Looping Captain's Log, supplemental.

_In the end, Princess Luna managed to move on, and even restored the orbit of the Equestrian moon, though it would be a long time before life would begin again on the world, even with the help of our terraformers. When Starfleet heard of what happened with the Elements of Harmony, they not-too-politely asked us to give them up to them, with the intent of studying them. In response, we informed Starfleet Command that the Elements were no longer with us, having been returned to the Tree of Harmony at Luna's request._

_It was her hope that the Tree, with help from the renewed Elements, would be able to restore Equestria faster than simply ending the eternal night. That has yet to be seen, but the lack of castle-in-a-chest suggests to me that the Tree is devoting its full power to the task._

_After learning the English language from Counselor Troi, Luna decided that she was going to do her best to learn everything she could about this new world she found herself in. Maybe join Starfleet Academy someday. If she does, it will hopefully be around the same time as Wesley's return to the Academy, as he does every few Loops, and he'll be able to guide her there as a familiar face._

* * *

>144.2 (Gamma Cavy)

Twilight awoke reading the book of legends. The first thing she noticed, was that it mentioned two brothers who ruled instead of two sisters. _Buck_, she thought, it's one of _those_ Loops. Then she paused, as a passage about the elder brother caught her eye. .._.and as time passed the elder grew resentful of the fact that he was constantly mistaken for the younger of the two, and teased about his smaller stature. In rage he took on the name Mountain Height, and created immense monuments out of buildings, causing earthquakes as they rose, each monument proclaiming that he, Prince Mountain Height, was not short! The younger prince, Steel Soul, attempted to reason with him, but to no avail. And it was when Mountain Height attempted to embed the Elements of Harmony into his statue that they reacted, banishing him to the sun for a thousand years. _

Twilight frowned. Mountain Height's rampage was familiar somehow...

She sent out a ping, and felt two responses. Not the Element ping, but the basic Looper ping. So the princes â€" or some other presumably non-local loopers, but odds were it was the princes - were awake. But who were they...

* * *

>"...AND NOW WITH MY HEIGHT SURPASSING MY LITTLE BROTHER, NO ONE WILL EVER CALL ME SHORT AGAIN!" Mountain Height proclaimed from atop a statue of himself, golden mane flaming, before vanishing in a crackle of blue light, of the sort that only prince Steel Soul used to travel.

* * *

>The rainbow impacted slammed into Mountain Height, and a gold colored alicorn, who looked like a half grown foal, except for the mane aura of sunlight and blue sparks, was left behind. Blue light flared, and Steel Soul appeared. The Unawake Element Bearers hit the floor.

"Oh get up," the prince said, "and thank you all so much, you managed to knock some sense into my brother, Prince Full Metal." he turned to the other alicorn. "It's been ages since I've seen you Brother. I've missed you!"

"Yeah, me too Al. I mean Steel. Are there any new alchemists yet?" Twilight finally realized who the guest loopers were.

* * *

>During the obligatory Pinkie Party later, Twilight heard the princes catching up, then an argument broke out between Full Metal and the youngest prince, Fire Starter. It seemed Fire Starter had implied Full Metal was short. Twilight smiled. Some things apparently never changed, from what Silver had said about these three.

* * *

>144.3 (Masterweaver)

Twilight took a deep breath, steeling herself. "Girls... we need to talk about Starlight."

Rainbow Dash growled. "Oh, yeah. _Her._ Can we move freeing that village up to an early-loop event?"

"It wouldn't be that hard," Rarity mused, "just a teleport and a flash flood or some... other water based phenomena. Although that only exposes the problem and doesn't deal with the brainwashing aspect necessarily-"

Twilight shook her head. "I'm sorry girls but... for now at least... in some loops, we have to let her go."

There was a pause.

"Twilight, I'm sure you have a logical explanation for what you just said," Pinkie stated calmly. "I'm sure you are regretting having said that, and that you are going to explain why you have said that. And I'm sure we'll all reluctantly agree to the reason why you have said that. So please don't take it personally when _I_ say _this._ ARE YOU COMPLETELY LOCO IN THE COCO?!"

"No. See... I've run a few lonely loops completely baseline, and... well... in the baseline, I am pretty sure she gets away." The unicorn sighed. "And... in the baseline Discord betrays us, but then we get the final key. We can short circuit that nowadays, because we have the full picture, but I have no idea if Starlight is quote unquote supposed to do something that important in upcoming expansions and, since I don't know when exactly those expansions are going to be..."

"...ya have ta learn by experience," Applejack finished for her. She sighed. "Yeah, Ah can understand that. Don't like it, but Ah get it."

"Personally I don't mind letting the baseline run its course for a bit," Fluttershy quipped. "I mean, I've seen all the vengeance plans that some ponies who shall remain unnamed have been brewing in their spare time, but... we're supposed to be a sanctuary loop. If we let our anger and hate get the better of us, then... well..."

Rainbow snorted. "Yeah, yeah, I get it..."

"Sorry, but... who are you all talking about?"

The six ponies looked at one dragon. Twilight suddenly facehooved. "Right! You haven't been awake for the new expansion. See, there's this map that comes with the crystal tree palace..."

* * *

>144.4 (Masterweaver)

"Well, it seems you inspire all sorts of free thinking, don't you?" Starlight Glimmer twirled the Staff of Sameness in her magical grip.

Rarity gave a forced chuckle. "Well, w-we certainly didn't intend to cause any disruptions to your charming little-"

"Good." The unicorn pointed the forked poles at the gathered ponies. "Let's just make sure of that, shall we?" Her horn brightened, and magic shot out of the staff at the six ponies.

It was then that things went radically off script. First of all, the magic suddenly changed color and split up among the six mares. Any thought as to the abrupt color change was silenced when all of them suddenly began glowing, forcing the equal ponies to shield their eyes. When Starlight Glimmer finally managed to look back, her jaw dropped in disbelief.

"Oh mah gosh!" Applejack fluttered her wings and stared at her horn with wide eyes. "We are all alicorns now!"

Rarity gave her a brief glance-Starlight thought for a moment she could see annoyance on her face, but it was gone too quickly for her to be sure. "How?! How could this-what happened?!"

"The staff of sameness! It musta put Twilight's alicorninity into all of us!" Pinkie Pie bounced in place with a wide grin. "It's the only thing that makes sense!"

"But-" Starlight managed.

"Then how come these other ponies aren't alicorns?" Rainbow Dash gestured to the shocked Double Diamond.

"The elements of Harmony!" Fluttershy shouted. "They were connected to us, and so-"

"So the staff of sameness allowed you to rise to my level through harmonious symmetry!" Twilight finished.

"But-" Starlight tried again.

"Wait!" Applejack swung her hoof at Twilight, pointing at her flank. "You still have yer cutie mark! It is not an equals sign!"

"Huh, you're right!" Twilight glanced at it. "I guess it must be impossible for an alicorn to exist without their cutie mark!"

"But-!" Starlight insisted.

"You know, I think there's a lesson in that," the princess continued obliviously. "But right now I'm more interested in studying the staff itself!" She grabbed the stick from Starlight's lax magical grip. "I think I'll send this back to Canterlot so that they can study it! SPIIIIKE!"

An all too manly dragon strode confidently into the cave. "Princess Twilight, I heed your call. And I would like to be the first to congratulate all your fellow princesses!"

"Oh, Spike, your appreciation is most appreciated!" Rarity cooed, swooning onto the purple drake.

Twilight cleared her throat. "Be that as it may, we need to send this to Celestia immediately." She hovered the staff over to Spike.

"Very well! I shall use my postal flame to transport it!"

"But-!" Starlight objected.

The dragon breathed his green fire over the staff, sending it off. Twilight turned to Starlight with a grin. "Thank you, good mare, for your incredible discovery! I'm sure just as soon as we have found out how this happened, we will return and grant you the first official usage of the Staff of ascension!"

"BUT-!" Starlight cried.

"For now, though, I feel we must go. Ladies... AWAY!" Twilight lit her horn and in an instant all six alicorns and one dragon had teleported off.

"But- but- but- but-"

* * *

>144.5 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Bright lights appeared all around Sunset as she returned through the mirror. The entirety of the Royal Guard stood at attention, Pegasus whipping the wind into a frenzy around them while the unicorns were casting their brightest flash spell. Six familiar ponies stepped forth from the shadows. They halted as one and Twilight stepped out from the crowd. Her face seemed oddly serious, "Sunset, We know what you've been doing these last couple loops."

Applejack was glaring at her, "Sugarcube, ya got problems, and ya need to address it head on!"

Rarity put her hoof on Sunset's leg, "Sunset, dearie, I know all the places you've been and the things you've had to do, but we can help you. You don't know what that stuff can do to you."

Sunset looked down at herself, then to her friend, "But-"

Pinkie started bawling on the streets, "Please, Sunny, can't you see how much this is hurting you, hurting all of us?!"

Fluttershy stuttered, "Y-you should s-s-say n...no to that, Sunny. Think about your friends, about the influence you have over the Crusaders. They almost started doing it too."

That really confused Sunset, "Uh, wait, wha-"

Dash stepped forward, "Sunset, we've always been there for you, and we always will during your upcoming challenges."

Sunset would be touched if she knew what was going on, "I-um, Ohh...kaayy, bu-"

Celestia stepped forward, her face scrunched up in disappointment, "Sunset, I promise we will be there for you every step of the way. Don't hesitate to call on us to help with your problem. Twilight even promised to sponsor you at the meetings."

Sunset flared her horn and her mane caught fire as her confusion finally reached a boiling point, "ENOUGH!"

With that, the unicorns' horns' lights disappeared and the Pegasi started leaving the area. Sunset huffed several times, put out the flames on her mane and replied, "Look, I'm just visiting the human world for a burger every now and then, alright?! I just...have a stronger urge for meat this loop. It wasn't harming anyone."

Twilight patted her friend on the shoulder, "Oh Sunset, Sunset, Sunset. We have been watching the mirror for months. We know you've been visiting Canterlot High every night. Dash even followed you a couple nights ago. She had one of the Wiskey River BBQ burgers from that nice restaurant."

Dash gave a smirk, "Yeah, it was pretty good too."

Twilight's eyes turned wicked for a second, "And that's why Dashy is going to join you in your rehabilitation."

The blue pegasus' looked thrilled for a second before it took a downturn, "Yeah...wait, what?!"

Twilight silently thought to herself, And that's Dash and Sunset checked off the "Revenge for Destroying my Tree" list. Next up, Vinyl Scratch and her Wubbing my tree out of existence. _

* * *

>Sunset folded her hooves together as she sat by an equally upset Rainbow Dash. They were in a classroom being taught by a cow which impressed upon them the importance of eating egg based products. Sunset muttered, "Tonight, we blow this joint, spend the rest of the loop at Canterlot High, eating Chic-Fil-A and working on a potion to turn Twilight into a bovine. You with me?"

Dash nodded, "Oh, yeah."

* * *

>144.6 (katfairy)

* * *

>Fluttershy Awoke. It only took a few seconds for her to realize that she was at Cadence and Shining Armor's wedding, a few more to realize that Twilight Sparkle should have appeared with the real Cadence five minutes ago, and a few more after that to realize that it wasn't because they were both here. One of the Royal Guard was standing in as best stallion, and doing it with the polite expression of somepony who would prefer to be anywhere else but was too smart to let anypony see that. The rest of the girls were standing next to Fluttershy, dressed in their bridesmaids' regalia, but Twilight wasn't amongst them.

Then the Loop memories hit.

"Oh, no!"

Everypony turned to stare. Celestia broke off in the middle of her homily. Cadence glared. Fluttershy sent out a quick Ping, and got only two responses back; a quick check let her see that this was the real, if unAwake, Cadence. And she had been acting exactly like Chrysalis had in baseline. This was Not Acceptable. At one point, Fluttershy would have backed down and simply let events progress, but she'd been Looping too long to be that doormat anymore. No, this was not the time to let bad behavior slide, and she wondered why Twilight had. She'd have to be careful, though; if she was too assertive, it would look suspicious.

"Fluttershy?" Celestia was beginning to look concerned; good. "Do _you_ have a reason to stop this wedding?"

"Oh, no," she said quickly, voice soft but pitched just right to carry to the whole room. "He can marry her if he wants to. Althoughâ€¦ I can't imagine why he would. I mean, she's not very nice."

That started a bit of a fuss; she winced, but knew she had to keep going.

"Fluttershy, what are you saying," Rarity gasped.

"Hey, it was pretty nice of her to ask us to be bridesmaids after hers had to bail," Rainbow Dash argued. Applejack opened her mouth to say something, blinked, and closed it again, while Pinkie Pie just watched with huge eyes.

"Did _she_ put you up to this?" Cadence demanded. "I knew she was jealous, but to ruin my special day with her temper tantrum!"

"It's her brother's special day, too," Fluttershy pointed out. "Although now that I think about it, he's not very nice, either. After all, he never even told her he was engaged; she only found out about the wedding because Princess Celestia sent her an invitation."

"What?" Celestia clearly hadn't known that, and Fluttershy had to wonder what would have happened in baseline if Twilight had thought to mention that. "Fluttershy, I think you had better continue your explanation."

"Wellâ€¦" Fluttershy took a deep breath, then launched into her speech. "Cadence treated Twilight like an unwanted guest from the moment we got here, she lied to Applejack and threw away perfectly good food when she could have just as easily made an excuse and let somepony else enjoy the treats, she was rude to her bridesmaids and how is it that all three of them suddenly had emergencies at the same time? And Twilight said Shining Armor didn't want you to cast that spell on him, and you went ahead and did it anyway."

"I don't remember saying that," Shining Armor said.

"That's because she lied," Cadence said. "She just wants to make trouble so she can have you all to herself."

"Twilight ain't the one been caught lyin' recently, sugarcube," Applejack said. "And if she's so bound and determined to have her brother to herself, why's she been in Ponyville for the past year?"

"Darlings, it's just bridal nerves," Rarity said, but a dubious note crept into her voice.

"That ain't no excuse for actin' like a spoiled brat," Applejack retorted. "Reckon I let the glamour of bein' at a royal weddin' go to my head, but Fluttershy's right, and I'm plum 'shamed o' myself for letting my real friend down."

"I'm sorry; I didn't mean to cause a fuss," Fluttershy said. "But I can't be part of this anymore. I'llâ€¦ I'll just go. I think I'm going to find Twilight and apologize for not listening to her, and I just hope she can forgive me."

It was hard to walk back down the aisle with everypony staring at her. She'd gained a lot of confidence during the Loops, but stage fright wasn't something that just got better; the best she could ever hope for was being able to manage it. Which she could, with the occasional relapse. But at the moment, she was managing. It helped that she knew Twilight would forgive her, and probably wasn't even really mad. And it helped even more that Applejack and Pinkie Pie joined her before she'd even made it halfway.

Applejack was looking thoughtful, even slightly worried, but Pinkie had her head high, a determined expression on her face. There wasn't much that Pinkie took seriously, but friendship was definitely in that category. If Pinkie wasn't Awake, and it was never easy to tell even with the Pings, then she would probably think that she'd failed Twilight, and she wouldn't rest until she'd made amends. And neither would anyone else for miles around, because a penitent Pinkie was almost as noisy as an angry or upset Pinkie.

As the doors closed behind them, Fluttershy let out a sigh of relief before discarding her finery. Applejack and Pinkie followed suit, and the three looked at each other.

"Reckon Dash and Rarity ain't comin'."

"Oh, Dashie would never want to miss anything as exciting as what's probably going to happen once ponies figure out what just happened," Pinkie said breezily. "And Rarity's probably still in shock. I don't think we should wait; Twilight's gotta be real upset right now and she'll need her friends, ifâ€¦ if she still wants us as friends."

"Oh, Twilight wouldn't drop us just because we made a bad decision," Fluttershy said, eying the faintly deflated mane. "Especially if we apologize. But we need to hurry; she may have already gone back to Ponyville, and the next train's in ten minutes."

"That doesn't give us a lot of time, but if we ask as we go, somepony might know something. I didn't bring nothin' I don't mind leavin' behind; how 'bout you?"

"Nope!"

"No, I packed light. Oh, and here's someone to ask now." Fluttershy recognized Flash Sentry, currently in the uniform of a new recruit. It was almost a shame that he wouldn't end up earning his post in the Crystal Empire this Loop, but she was sure he'd do all right somehow. He was nice, fairly clever, and reliable, if a bit dull. More importantly, he was here and willing to answer questions.

"Twilight? Yeah, she left last night after that big blowup. She didn't seem too upset, if you're worried about that. More like fed up, and I can't say as I blame her. Uh, sorry. I shouldn't have said that." Flash blushed, rubbing the back of his neck, but Applejack shook her head.

"Might be some in these parts that don't take to plain speakin', but they're on the other side o' them doors. Twi had every reason to be fed up, and we're fixin' to apologize when we see her. But if we want to catch the train, we gotta get goin', so thanks for your help and keep your head down for the next few days, 'cause things 'round here are likely to get ugly."

Flash looked at the doors, looked at the piles of discarded clothing, and winced.

"I wonder if I can get emergency leave to visit my sick cousin in Vanhoover," they heard him mutter as they headed out, followed by, "I wonder if I even have a cousin in Vanhoover."

* * *

>They made the train with just seconds to spare, and returned to Ponyville with no further drama. Fluttershy wished it could stay that way, but wasn't holding out much hope. They entered the library to find Twilight having tea with Chrysalis.

"â€"only for a few more years, at least," Chrysalis was saying. "I'm glad Loops like this aren't too frequent, though. With Trixie working as a special effects artist in Manehattan and shackled up with that obnoxious fashion thief, I don't have much to do."

"Well, you could always help us with Sombra," Fluttershy offered. "I'm not sure Cadence will be much use this time around."

"Oh, hey, Fluttershy," Twilight said with a grin, eyebrows raising as she spotted Applejack and Pinkie. "No need to apologize, okay? I should have made myself clearer, and you should have listened to me, and we all handled things badly, okay? So let's just get that out of the way and get on with our lives."

"You sure, sugarcube?"

"Positive."

"Well, all right, then."

"Welllllllllâ€¦" Pinkie said, frowning. "Okay, but I'm still baking you a special sorry-I-ignored-you-because-I-wanted-to-party-with-somepony-who-turned-out-to-be-a-big-meanypants cake. Deal?"

"Deal," Twilight agreed, then cocked her head. "I may regret asking, but what kind of cake would that be, anyway?"

"Rose-flavored sponge cake with whipped cream and strawberries."

"Absolutely a deal, then. So what happened? Why did you leave? And where are Rainbow Dash and Rarity? Oh, and this is Chrysalis, she's a Changeling, and she's friendly."

The group sat and discussed the day's events. Thanks to Chrysalis' comments as they'd entered and Fluttershy's response, Applejack and Pinkie had to be told about the Loops, but both took them in stride. It was hardly the strangest thing they'd heard of, even at this point in baseline, so Fluttershy wasn't surprised by that. Nor was it surprising that they found the Loops less interesting than discussing the interrupted wedding; Loops were simply a thing that existed, whereas the wedding was current events. They were relieved to hear that the original Cadence was much nicer, though. Still, Fluttershy had a few questions.

"Twilight, how did this Cadence ever become an alicorn? She doesn't act like she knows much about love at all."

"Turns out this Loop, it's possible to be born an alicorn. It happens every few hundred years on average. They don't tend to be much more powerful than anypony else; the powerful ones are regular ponies who have ascendedâ€”that's done by using your special talent in a way that is basically the perfect expression of what that talent is. Like a pony whose special talent is singing ascended by helping to sing an entire world into creation while simultaneously reforming the greatest evil that world would ever face. Or a pony farmer who turned an entire desert planet into lush farmland." Twilight's last comments were directed at Applejack and Pinkie, who nodded. "I'm not entirely sure how Cadence ascended in baseline; I knew once, but I've forgotten. I've probably got it written down somewhere, of course, but it doesn't matter right now. I don't think this Cadence is capable of ascending; my Loop memories seem to indicate that she was always like this. I didn't realize it as a filly, but she was just being nice to me because I was Celestia's student and she had a thing for my brother. Now that I'm here and she's got him, she doesn't need me anymore. I hate seeing her like that, and since my last few Loops were really annoyingâ€”not bad, really, just annoyingâ€”I decided that if nopony listened in this Loop, I wasn't going to stick around. Now I kinda wish I had; I think we're probably missing a pretty good show."

"Just hope Rainbow Dash had enough sense to not bring popcorn," Applejack said, then looked up at a knock on the door. A hooded figure crept in with a familiar faint tingle of magic; Luna was Awake too, now.

"Sorry I didn't ping earlier," she said, "but Iâ€| well, Cadence is having some rather impressive hysterics, and nopony in the castle is going to be sleeping until she's done. Or until Celly gets fed up and sends her on a lunar time-out. I told my guards to let discretion be the better part of valor, then followed suit."

"That a fancy way o' sayin you noped on outa there?"

"Pretty much, yes. But Cadence is demanding all of you be arrested for treason, creating a public nuisance, and anything else she can think of. I'm not sure whether to hope she Awakens soon so that we no longer have to deal with this brat or hope that she doesn't so that she isn't humiliated by the memories of what her unAwake self has done. Celestia seems disinclined to grant these requests, but should she do so, I know some lovely islands that are just begging to be colonized, but are too far for a Pegasus to fly to. And from what I have seen recently, I do not think too many of your brother's men would be particularly keen on pursuit. I suspect the only reason none of them have used the term 'Bridezilla' is because none of them have heard it."

Chrysalis and Twilight snickered, and Fluttershy couldn't help a small giggle either. They settled back in for further discussion, but Luna couldn't tell them much more. The talk began to wander from topic to topic, and eventually they put the wedding out of their thoughts. Luna left at sundown in order to fulfill her duties, with a Pinkie Promise to keep an eye on them until everything was settled. The others settled into the library to await whatever news would come, hoping that Rarity and Rainbow Dash would return soon.

They were awakened the next morning by Rainbow Dash bursting through the door.

"You guys missed everything! Hey, who's that? Never mind, AJ wouldn't be sleeping with a that was going to come out wrong no matter what I said so just forget it. Anyway, Rarity's on the train but I didn't wanna wait to tell you what happened. Twi, your brother and Cadence are in serious trouble. Princess Celestia read 'em the riot act after Flutters and the rest left, and she said that the wedding was off until they could prove they were mature enough to handle the responsibilities of married life. Cadence threw an epic hissy fit, but your brother told her to shut up and that he'd warned her that treating people bad just 'cause she's a princess wasn't going to fly, then he apologized to everypony. And he said he'd sent you a letter just before Discord popped up, so that probably explains that and he feels kinda dumb that he didn't think to check to see you actually got it. Which he totally should, if you ask me, but I'll cut him some slack 'cause hey, he told Cadence to shut up. And then Cadence started up again, only twice as loud until Celestia blew her stack even worse than after that 'Want It/Need It' spell thing of Twilight's and now Cadence is being sent to a special school in Prance where she's gonna have to learn about the hard parts of being a princess, starting with manners. That's pretty close to being a direct quote, by the way. Oh, and has anypony seen Princess Luna? She was spotted flying away from the castle, and the night did everything it was supposed to, but nopony's seen her since yesterday."

"She's probably in my bed," Twilight said. "I told her I'd be staying out down here with these guys to wait for you and Rarity, so if she didn't want to go back to Canterlot, she could stay here."

Dash floated up, peeked into the bedroom, and nodded before floating back down.

"Yeah, she's there. I'll let her sleep. She probably lost a few hours yesterday. Oh, yeah, one last thing: I think Princess Celestia's planning on coming here to apologize for being so hard on you, even if you were a bit over the top with your accusation, 'cause Cadence isn't actually evil, just a pain."

Fluttershy wasn't the least bit surprised that a knock on the door came immediately afterwards. Spike, who was keeping out of the way and quiet, opened the door to let Celestia in. She entered quietly, with the odd mix of dignity and humility only an embarrassed goddess could pull off.

"Twilight Sparkle, I am—"uh, why is there a Changeling in your library?"

"Because keeping me in the kitchen would be silly," Chrysalis responded. Twilight rolled her eyes, but Celestia seemed to accept that as an answer. Or at least accepted that as an answer that wasn't likely to add to her list of problems.

"Yes. Well. Twilight, I treated you very badly the other day, and I did it publicly, so I feel my apology should be equally public. Although your accusations were perhaps a trifle excessive, I should not have simply brushed them aside. I should also have been more aware of just how out of hoof Princess Cadence had become. I am truly sorry that you have suffered any distress through my negligence."

"It's all right Princess," Twilight said. "I shouldn't have blown my stack like I did. Maybe if I'd asked you about the changes I'd seen in Cadence's character, we could have avoided all this, so at least some of the fault is mine. And I'm sorry for that."

"Thank you, Twilight. I'm sure Rainbow Dash has already told you of what happened after the wedding, but you may be interested in knowing that Princess Cadence is currently on her way to Madame Pleasance's Academy for Wayward Noblewomen. Your brother has promised me, and has informed Cadence, that he will not contact her while she is there, but that he will wait for her return, at which point he will reassess their relationship. Shining Armor seems truly fond of her, so it may be that he can see qualities in her that are escaping me at the moment. I hope so, for his sake."

"Nah, he's totally thinking with the lower brain."

"_Rainbow Dash!_" Applejack's eyes were almost popping out of her head, but Pinkie was nodding while Twilight and Chrysalis were trying not to crack up. Celestia was blinking fast enough to create a small breeze. Fluttershy hid a smile while trying to remain unnoticed.

"What? It's the truth!"

"Well, yeah, butâ€” ah, ponyfeathers."

"Rainbow Dash is right," Luna yawned from the top of the stairs, ethereal mane displaying some truly epic bedhead. "Oh, hi, Celly. Is all the drama done now? Or has it just moved here? If it has, I may send myself to the moon just to get some decent sleep."

Celestia opened her mouth, closed it, opened it again, closed it again. Fluttershy, feeling sorry for her, popped into the kitchen to retrieve a few things from her Pocket. A short time later, she gave the still-bewildered Princess a mug of Irish Coffee. Intersecting Looper shenanigans combined with Rainbow Dash being even more blunt than usual called for it, in her opinion, especially when they came on top of two very trying days. Celestia took it without a second glance and downed the whole thing in a single gulp.

"Oh, dear." Fluttershy backed away quickly.

"Uh, Fluttershy, please tell me you didn't make that with Klatchian coffee," Twilight said quietly. "Remember what happened when Berry Punch tried to distill it for coffee brandy? She was in Eiken for three straight Loops. And then there was Pinkie's tiramisuâ€”"

"Ummm... And I might have used Firewhiskey. And, um, the cream's from Petaybee. I thought she needed a good stiff drink; I didn't expect her to need it that badly. Um, should we, maybe, run?"

They looked at Celestia, whose eyes had glazed over. Her mane was trying to stand straight out in every direction, and her tail had curled. She was beginning to vibrate. And glow.

"Yes." Twilight said. "Yes, we should."

The next few seconds were rather chaotic, with everypony scrambling for the nearest exit, screaming for the inhabitants of Ponyville to duck and cover. The usual panic occurred, but everypony was safe when the blinding flash came, accompanied by the sound of a giant tree dissolving into splinters. When they could all see again, there was a glowing crater where the library used to be, crowned with an aurora. They crept up to it cautiously.

Celestia stood in the bottom of the crater, weaving slightly, both mane and tale now tightly curled. She blinked up at them, eyes askew.

"I just don't know what went wrong," she said, and fell over. There was a moment of silence, then:

"Fluttershyâ€”"

"eep."

Flutterdash took one look at Twilight doing her best Rapidash imitation, ascended, and flew away fast enough to create a Sonic Flutterboom. Suddenly it seemed like a good Loop for meeting new critters on the other side of the world, preferably in a deep, impenetrable jungle where nopony could find her.

* * *

>144.7 (Bliss Authority)

Rarity Awoke to the sound of her own maniacal laughter, blinked, and only survived the massive barrage of flaming pegasus feathers streaking at her in a brilliant display of pyrotechnics by resorting to instinct and loop memories. She dismissed them with a disdainful stroke, a sweeping outside block tinged with traces of blue magic (mistfire, her loop memories called it). Then she bowed to her opponent.

"I surrender, " she said.

The pegasus mare before her snorted, pawing the ground. "Yeah, pull the other one, Price Beyond Pearls," she said. "It's got a Black Lotus in it."

Then her mane and tail ignited, billowing red and gold flame.

Rarity rocked back up to a sitting position, blinked, then sent out a ping " making sure to frown as she did so so there was a visual cue.

The other pegasus' jaw dropped. Then her eyes narrowed. "Talk," she said. "You have ten seconds to explain who you are and why I should listen to someone Ganesha decided to put in Clan Happy Fun Naga."

"I assure you that I'm as revolted by who I replaced this loop as you are," Rarity said. She was going to need a stiff drink once she got back to a more regular Loop. "Ugh, is your world always this horrid baseline?"

The pegasus snorted. "Welcome to the scenic Sultai Brood of Tarkir. I'm gonna be honest here; if you don't like the enthusiastic violation of our most basic rights, there's not much else going on."

Rarity laughed nervously. "Yes, well. I can see why you'd want to kill who I replaced. Shall we start again with introductions? I am Rarity Belle, from the Equestria loops." She turned, politely presenting her Cutie Mark as she curtseyed.

"Yeah, I shall," the mare said with a roll of her eyes, twisting her hip to reveal a stylized red fireball for a Mark. "Chandra Nalar. Planeswalker loops. Loop memories peg me as Fire Brand, which I gotta say is a massive improvement from being Char the Magic Dragon."

"Enchanted," she said.

"Might wanna get that Naturalized," Chandra said. Rarity blinked. "Mind if I smoke some zombies while I explain what's going on?"

"My dear, nothing would give me greater pleasure. And afterwards, I can introduce you to my friends â€" at least some of them are awake. But first, I rather think if we're going to be fighting zombies, we should be dressed for the occasion, don't you?"

Rarity pulled a suit of full barding out of her Pocket. Then she grinned and ignited the plasma steel, and _she_ was wreathed in flames.

Chandra whistled. "Okay, I take back everything bad I've ever said about Equestria. I want myself four of those."

* * *

>(Fan of Most Everything)

Rarity, Herd Tyrant

2BGU

Legendary Creature â€" Unicorn Shaman

Whenever Rarity, Herd Tyrant enters the battlefield or attacks, put the top three cards of your library into your graveyard.

2, Exile two cards from your graveyard: Put a 2/2 black Zombie creature token onto the battlefield.

_"Sidisi was no threat to me, darling. What makes you think you are?"_

3/3

* * *

>(Bliss Authority)

Sidisi gingerly picked up a mango from a tray proffered by a bound earth pony servant, and took a bite from the most pockmarked segment of it in hopes of getting succulent flies and worms along with her fruit. Then she consulted the latest missive from the front, delivered to her via a scroll-case lodged in the skull of a traitor.

News from the front was not good. The too-clever-by half old rakshasa she had employed as her last vizier had assured her that he had measures in place in the event that Price Beyond Pearls attempted a return to the Jeskai for a sudden, yet inevitable, betrayal. She calmly allowed this vizier to answer her questions about how, precisely, Price had managed to escape these measures. And assured him that his battery of coercion, subtle mind control, and the witchweed at the base of her spine set to dissolve the moment she left Sultai territory were all quite reasonable precautions.

Then she dropped him into a moat full of crocodiles. There were only so many ways he could say 'I literally have no idea how she escaped' before she grew bored of his terror.

Since then, the little anarchist of a unicorn had been burning down her soldiers left and right - or rather, aiding and abetting a new factor, a clanless pegasus who went by the name of Fire Brand. Curiously, she had made no attempt to return to Jeskai territory, but it was surely only a matter of time before she went to them with her secrets. Secrets that were the Sultai's alone.

She snapped her fingers. Her earth pony servant turned in place, and she grabbed a smoked duck leg. No reason for the bad news to ruin her appetite, after all.

Then the orc ran into the building in panic. "Sidisi, my liege!" he said. "They are coming! It is not safe here!"

Sidisi rose, coiling around the impudent warrior in a flash. "You have interrupted my meal, orc. That is always a mistake. We shall discuss your penance once you deliver your message. Who are coming?"

"Price and Brand!" he wheezed through his constricted chest. "Price and Brand - and they led our foes to us!"

Sidisi's eyes went wide, and her pupils narrowed into thin slits. "The Jeskai? Here?"

"No, Khan! The Mardu!"

"What? Impossible! Not even the Mardu are that swift!"

It was right about then when the orc was struck right between the eyes by a hoof travelling at about mach 2. His ears sang like a temple bell, and with that he was out and on the ground.

Sidisi narrowed her eyes and drew two dao sabers, striking at the blue streak of a pegasus who had invaded her home in a cross-shaped slash. Price Beyond Pearls stood before her, along with a fiery-maned golden pegasus she didn't recognize; hovering before Price were her namesake, thirteen perfect pearls suspended in the air with telekinesis, both her weapon and her shield. Sidisi knew that she could conjure more whenever she needed to.

The flaming armor was new, though. No doubt the pyromancer had bribed her with it.

Sidisi made a subtle motion with her sword. No movement. She tensed for a lunge -

And a pearl was suddenly a fingernail's breadth from her eye.

"Ah ah ah, manners," the white unicorn said, strutting before her. "Attacking your guests? How terribly rude. Almost as rude as the way you treat your honored servants."

Fire Brand joined her side, flaring her wings and igniting her mane and tail. "Translated from Fancy," she said with a grin, "that means you drop the swords and surrender, and in return I don't make you explode twice before you hit the ground."

Sidisi knew more counter-spells than the Jeskai had forgotten. She snorted. "Idle threats."

The third one spoke - Rainbow Helmdasher, the young Mardu khan. "You realize that we're just the first wave, right? We've got enough of an army to smash through an Apple fortress - stones root, branches, boughs, and the freaking beast pulling it - if we have to."

"Lies," Sidisi hissed. "You would need thousands."

"Nope, just one. Who is really late." Rainbow Helmdasher frowned. "Where the heck is he, anyway?"

It was then that an enormous tortoise foot tore away the roof, and most of the back wall, of Sidisi's palace. She turned - and stared, upwards, at a shell the breadth of a fortress and a great snapping beak that could swallow her whole. A butter-yellow, pink-haired pegasus in the pelts common to an elder Temur was riding on its neck, and made a sort of delighted squeal more commonly associated with dog toys than living beings.

"Hey, Tank!" Rainbow Dash said, grinning. "About time you showed up, good to see you! Is Fluts treating you well?"

"Oh, you know Tank," Fluttershy replied, scratching him behind his ear. Well, his internal ear; being a tortoise, he didn't have an external one. "He is awfully hungry, though. And he wouldn't touch the zombies - although I guess I can't blame him."

It was then that Sidisi's bodyguards arrived, a full 12-man fang of naga sword-snakes, their rakshasa leader, and their zombie meat-shields. They surveyed the situation - then just as quickly turned around and headed back the way they came.

"KATRINA! RETURN TO BATTLE, YOU CRAVEN POTION-ADDLED COWARD!" Sidisi bellowed after them. "YOUR KHAN DEMANDS IT!"

"NOT FOR ALL THE WITCHWEED DOWN THE MARANG!" was the rakshasa's response, which actually managed to Doppler down in pitch with the speed of her escape. "BEI LIAO FOR NOW!"

Sidisi slithered towards the eastern wall, eyes firmly on the tortoise.

"We would like to negotiate the terms of your surrender, Sidisi." Price Beyond Pearls idly filed a hoof. "And the return of the Sultai clan to pony hooves."

Chandra grinned, sending an arc of lightning between her wings. "We can do this the easy way - or the Chandra way. Please say Chandra way; I haven't blown something up in _hours._"

_(In loving memory of Turdle McDurdle. RIP, Meandering Towershell.)_

* * *

>AN:

144.1: Problem solved? (Trek crossover)

>144.2: It is a touchy subject. (Full Metal Alchemist crossover)144.3: Fair point...

>144.4: Epic Troll.144.5: They don't eat sapient food. But even the non-sapient kind is rather upsetting to their friends.

>144.6: And sometimes, she's just kind of a jerk.144.7: Come join the pony side, we have phat lootz. (MtG cross)

152. Chapter 152

145.1 (Bliss Authority)

"Jace?"

"Nissa."

"Why am I an elk?"

"The same reason that I'm a unicorn. We're in a Fused Loop with Equestria."

"Well, okay then. As long as I'm an elk I'll have some wildflowers. Want some?"

"...I'll pass, Nissa."

* * *

>145.2 (Bliss Authority)

"You are too late to save him, Sparkhan Twi, great khan of no clan!" Nicol Bolas howled, turning his massive bulk over the fallen body of Ugin Spykoran and craning his neck. Crackling blightning pulsed from the black and red eye between the gap in his horns. "There is no magic on any plane that can save him! The future has been written, my little pony!"

"That's where you're wrong, Bolas!" Twilight said, leaning on her spear and trying her tree-damndest not to explode into giggles. All in all, the resemblance to Tirek was uncanny. "There is a magic that can bind you and save my TRUE mentor in Spike - the magic of Friendship!"

Nicol gave the collected loopers a glorious beat of sheer, stunned silence.

Sorin, Chandra, and Jace said at the same time: "What."

"You're kidding," Bolas said. "You're kidding, right?"

Twilight grinned. "Not at all!" She had been looking forward to this speech for the entire loop. "For we possess of the powers of friendship - we bear the legendary Elements of Dragons!"

"Man, what." Only Jace said it this time; Sorin Markov was too busy trying not to laugh, and Chandra had given up on not laughing the moment 'the powers of friendship' had left Twilight's lips.

"Impossible," he hissed. "I destroyed them long before your Sparks ignited, long before this moment!"

"That's where you're wrong, Bolas!" Twilight said, shaking with barely suppressed laughter. "For the - the Elements of Dragons -" she wheezed, then took a deep breath and continued on as if she hadn't missed a beat. "The Elements of Dragons are no artifacts to be shattered, no sorceries or enchantments to be countered, but a set of ideals that cannot be destroyed!"

She pointed to Applejack. "Applejack, who stood steadfast in the face of your draconic hordes and outlasted their attack, is the element of Endurance!"

And, lo and behold, a gleaming pearl in the form of a dragon's scale appeared in a golden torc around Applejack's neck.

"OH, COME ON!" Jace howled, which only caused Markov to burst out laughing. "SERIOUSLY!?" Meanwhile, Chandra bit her lower lip and grinned at the spectacle of Nicol Bolas boggling in slack-jawed disbelief.

Twilight pointed to Fluttershy. "Fluttershy! You held off their armies by awakening the ferocious bear within you, risking your mind and your life for the sake of your friends! You represent the Element of Savagery!"

An emerald on a claw-shaped charm materialized at her throat. "I didn't like it," she said. "But if nature must be red in tooth and claw, so must I."

"Pinkie Pie! You flummoxed his forces with harmless pranks before using your prowess in kung fu to disable his thralls!" She was cracking a smile; she had to hold it together long enough to finish the speech. Funny, how her foes never attacked her during any variation on it; was it like a Heartsong, that way? She'd need to research it later. "You are the Element of Cunning!"

A sapphire bindi in the shape of an eye appeared on her forehead - before Pinkie flipped her head up, did a hoofstand, and the torc fell into place around her shoulders. Which was quite a feat, considering its mouth was narrower than her head. "As Surprise wrote in the Analects of Fun: Tah-dah," she intoned solemnly.

"Rarity! Your willingness to use poison, the bodies of the slain, and to delve into the secrets of ancient magic from before the Mending for the sake of the greater good marks you as the Element of Ruthlessness!"

"What can I say? Classic counter-spells are simply more efficient." Rarity said - before backing up as an onyx in the shape of a fang twinkled into existence at her throat. "Dear me, I hope this thing isn't poisonous itself."

"Damn straight the old counter-spells are more efficient," Jace muttered, though he folded his arms and still looked like he was fuming internally.

"Rainbow Dash! The Sonic Rainboom you demonstrated during your raid on Bolas' forces proves that you exemplify the Element of Speed!"

A gleaming pair of ruby wings appeared, unfolding back around her throat. "What did I tell you?" she said, folding her fetlocks and leering at him. "You don't rule the skies, Bolas - I do."

That snapped the villainous planeswalker out of his fugue. "You shall die for insulting me, the greatest of planeswalkers, Nicol Bolas!"

"No you won't!" Twilight said, eagerly awaiting Bolas' straight line.

"Won't I? There were SIX elements! You bear merely five!"

Hook, line, and sinker. Twilight stared Nicol Bolas in his eyes and smirked. "Was it not written that a spark shall unite the five clans in the spirit of friendship? Do I not _bear_such a sparkâ€|planeswalker?"

Nicol's eyes widened. "No. IMPOSSIBLE!"

"Did I not unite the leaders of the five clans in the spirit of friendship?" Twilight said. "I am that spark, Bolas! I, both of and not of Tarkir, of and not of my time, am the heir to Ugin Spike's power!"

A crown - more like a helm - appeared on her head, with a nosegard sweeping down and five prongs sweeping behind it. In its center was a pentagon - a pearl at its top, and going clockwise, a sapphire, onyx, ruby, and emerald.

Chandra exploded into another fit of giggles at the sight, clutching her sides with her fetlocks.

"I am Sparkhan Twi, the Element of Magic - and of Friendship!" Twilight whooped. "And FRIENDSHIP IS DRAGONS!"

Five beams of light lanced out from five torcs - one of pure white, one of deep blue, one of void black, one of fiery red, and one of verdant green - and converged on Twilight's crown.

And she changed: the bones of her hooves splayed into claws, her back stretched and rippled, her wings - feathered, like a pegasus' - unfolded. And she grew to a scale that was a match for Nicol Bolas'.

"No! NO! NOOOOO!" Nicol cringed.

Twilight took a deep breath - then _exhaled_ the Rainbow of Light.

Nicol took wing, dodging it. It figured; taking out Nicol wasn't in the cards in baseline. But her healing breath of pure mana washed over _Spike's_ wounded form, stabilizing his mortal injuries.

"This is not over!" Nicol screeched. "Tarkir stands for now, but you have attracted the attention of beings that are infinitely your greater!"

"Let the Eldrazi come!" Twilight bellowed. "The Khans and Dragons will stand together against them, a force to make whole planes tremble!"

Nicol didn't dignify that with a response, instead choosing to Walk away from the plane of Tarkir. Twilight landed, shifting back into her normal form.

Or she tried, anyway. "Wings are a good look on you," Sorin remarked to his fingernails.

"Oh, HORSEFEATHERS," Twilight groaned, facehoofing. "Of course that made me go alicorn."

Jace sighed. "Twilight?"

"Yeah?"

Jace massaged his temples with the base of his frogs. "You didn't just bullshit all of the Elements of Dragons, did you? Because that's nowhere near baseline for us."

Applejack grinned at him. "The Elements of _Harmony,_ on the other hoof, are in jus' about every Equestrian loop. Ain't fused loops grand?"

"Of course they are," Jace muttered. "Wait - _are those Moxen!?!_"

* * *

>145.3 (AnonymousAsk, Evilhumour, GamereX27 Masterweaver, wildrook, Grammar Checked By Purrs)

* * *

>"DO YOU WISH TO SEE PICTURES OF THEIR FOALHOOD?" Nightmare Velvet asked Twilight's smiling friends. The unicorn in question started banging her head against the wall.

This loop was just... ugh. Having her own _mother_ be the nightmare was problematic enough, but having her be this overbearing... She was considering ending the loop early.

"WE DEMAND GRANDCHILDREN!" The mare shouted, looking at the blushing purple unicorn. "AND THAT THOU GOEST ON A DATE AND BRING HOME A PONY!"

Shining and Twilight face-hooved. At this point, they were glad she wasn't Looping in that form, or else she'd realize they couldn't. One rampage was enough.

"I have an adopted daughter," Twilight pointed out. "And Spike is arguably my son-"

"FROM WHENCE DID THEIR FATHER COME?!"

"Mom, I told you already, _I'm asexual!_"

"WE KNOW NOT THIS STRANGE TERM! WE ARE STILL DISPLEASED AT THE LACK OF VISITS!" The Nightmare shouted, giving her best _look_ to the unicorn. "ARE WE AN EMBARRASSMENT TO THEE?"

"It means...oh, never mind. She's adopted!"

"SPEAK NOT OF THAT IN FRONT OF MY GRANDCHILD!"

"Look, Grandma, it's fine!" Nyx objected. "I knew about that all along!"

Shining groaned. '_She was never this bad when I first dated Cadance!_' he thought. '_OR when Chrysalis posed as her._'

The Nightmare's eyes drifted to her elder child. "Dear son, hast thou practiced the safe method with your betrothed?"

"MOM!" Shining yelled.

"We are still awaiting an answer, dear son." The Nightmare frowned and walked closer. "Do we need to have the talk?"

_"MOM!"_ Shining now squeaked, blushing from ear to hoof.

Chrysalis blinked as she, Trixie, and Sunset were looking at the Nightmare Velvet debacle, the latter two gaping.

"And now I'm glad my Baseline self never succeeded," she said. "Schadenfreude aside, this much pressure would make the hive antsy."

Nightmare Velvet turned to face the three. "What dost thou mean?" She looked at the three, the black mare gulping loudly.

"Ehehehe..." Chrysalis muttered. "Uh...LOOK, THERE'S SPIKE AND RARITY!"

Nightmare Velvet simply looked at the mare. "We shall talk later, mare, about what thou did to my family." She then turned to look at the drake and mare. "But We must inquire to Our other son's betrothed."

"Ummm... Well... I..." Spike tried to talk but could not even complete a phrase. He whispered to Rarity, "_Please, help me!_"

Rarity looked up at Nightmare Velvet and smiled. "It is a pleasure to meet you, mother dear," she bowed, smiling. "Your dear son has been the perfect gentledrake, caring and honest to me."

Thunder roared as Nightmare Velvet looked to Rarity. "Thou are not taking Our son away, I know you want Us to drop Our guard but We are watching you."

'_That's the idea, darling,_' Rarity thought.

"Trixie and I are going to go find the Elements," Chrysalis said to the two siblings.

"Agreed," Twilight replied. "I'd rather face five Tireks than a Nightmare version of my own mother."

"Hey Nyx, I brought you some flowaaaaaaaaaaaaa..."

The yellow pegasus who had just arrived stared at the scene in front of him for a moment.

"...You know what? No. I'm going to turn around, wait for the giant rainbow, and then walk back."

"You weren't nearly this scared when we took down Khorne together!" Nyx shouted at the retreating colt.

"I'm sorry, it's an irrational phobia! I can't handle this at all!"

"Mom, you're kinda scaring my friends," Twilight said honestly, looking at Shining and Spike to join her, which they did while grabbing their significant others. Nyx dragged Lemon back as Twilight turned to her mother again. "We won't leave you but please, we don't want to hurt you either. You need to let go of the nightmare force. You've got a granddaughter here to spoil rotten and her coltfriend to scare."

Nyx glared at her mom for but stepped forwards with wing tightly around Lemon. "I'm dying to hear all the stories about mama, like how she got stuck in the cookie jar-"

"You told her that?!" Twilight shrieked, glaring at Shining and Spike, with everypony laughing, the Nightmare included.

"Mom," Cadence smiled with Rarity, both of them nodding their heads. "We have so many stories to share with you, about your precious foals and what they've done."

"Please," Rarity reached over and hugged Nightmare Velvet, the rest of the family joining her. "Please come back to us."

As the extended family hugged their matriarch, soon a giggling, crying happy mare under a pile of her loved ones.

* * *

>145.4 (fractalman)

After a prank involving poison joke and heart's desire backfired, Zecora found herself in a swamp. After spending a few moments failing to identify the local flora, she concluded she wasn't anywhere on Equus.

She sighed, and set to building herself a shelter for the long haul, which included planting some seeds from her Pocket.

* * *

>Yoda blinked as he beheld the zebra. He blinked again as he realized the zebra was stirring a pot. He blinked a third time as he realized it smelled really, really good.

"Teach me how to make that, will you?"

Zecora chuckled. It was just simple bean soup, though the bean was not native to the planet.

"Master Yoda, small and green let me teach you about this bean"

"Good at plants, are you? Perhaps teach each other, we will."

"To learn a little something of the force

What can I say but 'of course'?"

* * *

>145.5 (AnonymousAsk, fractalman)

Twilight was in the town hall waiting for Nightmare Moon, trying to decide between throwing water balloons at her until she surrendered, or challenging her to a magic duel.

As she was thinking, she looked around and noticed that Fluttershy was not around. Just then Nightmare Moon appeared and began to talk, but just before Twilight could decide, a very familiar manticore appeared.

"What?" Asked Twilight and Nightmare Moon as every head looked to the manticore.

The Manticore looked around and all the ponies except Twilight, her friends, and Nightmare Moon began to run; shortly afterwards, Applejack grabbed Rainbow Dash by the tail and dragged her out, Rarity fainted in her couch, and Pinkie smiled and jumped around like nothing was happening. Twilight noticed Nightmare moon's horn beginning to glow, so she readied a shield spell to protect her friends. Just as she was about to complete the spell, she heard a voice.

"Sebastian! There you are! I've been looking all over for you!" Said Fluttershy, appearing from behind the manticore and hugging him.

Nightmare Moon's spell stopped as she was surprised by the unexpected apparition of the yellow pegasus and how she was hugging the manticore.

"Fluttershy? How did that manticore get here, and why were you looking for him?" Asked Twilight

"Oh, eheh...it's just that almost every loop, poor Sebastian ends up with a spine in his paw so I was going to let him stay in my hut tonight, but then Angel Bunny began to throw a tantrum and before I knew it, Sebastian was gone..." explained Fluttershy.

"Umm... Hello? Dark Alicorn returned from banishment after a thousand years? Yoohoo!" said Nightmare Moon, but neither Twilight or Fluttershy seemed to notice her.

"Well...it was good of you Fluttershy, but you could at last give me a warning next time." Said Twilight.

"Of course. Now, Sebastian, say sorry to Twilight and to Nightmare Moon for disturbing them." Said Fluttershy to the manticore.

The manticore made a puppy face, then pounced Nightmare moon and began to lick her mane, to her utter befuddlement.

"There, that's better. Miss Moon you can continue." Smiled Fluttershy nodding her head.

"Well...I...I forgot where I was..." Commented Nightmare Moon, a little confused and grossed out, as she tried to pry the oversized kitty away.

"I think this is the moment you realize that a bunch of ponies just stayed up all night, and so you don't need to bring about eternal night to make them appreciate it." Said Twilight.

"It is...? I don't really remember that being part of the plan, but if you could please call off your manticore..."

* * *

>145.6 (RowanEx)

Twilight took a peek on a video which caused other Loopers to snigger or chortle, and to her surprise, it was quite one of the embarrassing but cute moments in the baseline.

What bothered her however, how in Yggdrasil did they get the time to record that small video?! Did a Guest Looper went with her 6-Looper-Stealth Loop which also was last loop and decided to spread a joke?

Or the CMC was actually Awake that time except for Nyx and decided to snoop for it... Impossible. It must've been someone else.

* * *

>Rarity noticed Twilight locking herself in the library for quite a time ever since she Woke up for this Loop, and decided to take a peek of what she has been doing. Once she got to a window, her eyes were probably deceiving her, or not. She then proceeded not to laugh as she walked back home.

"That expansion sure did mess her up," she said on her mind, "especially for the _Pancake_ Princess!"

Rarity froze for a second before bursting into laughter.

* * *

>Nyx played the video on her PADD.

Twilight cuddled the pancakes before suddenly a loud noise woke her up.

'I'm pancake!' she turned back into the group while raising a pancake stuck in her horn, 'I mean, awake.'

A few sniggers were heard, causing Twilight to head towards a window and took a peek outside, only to see nothing. She turned back to the other five who were trying not to burst into laughter.

'Don't tell anypony about this,' she warned."

Nyx blinked once, stared back at Twilight, blinked twice, then proceeded to laugh much to Twilight's disappointment.

* * *

>145.7 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Twilight?"

The purple unicorn heaved a sigh. "Yes, Rarity?"

"Have you ever had any loops where the Cakes ran a waffle restaurant rather than a bakery before?"

"Ee-nope." Twilight looked around. "This is the first time that I know of. I'm not complaining though, they're actually very good at it. Even with the more... out there dishes."

"Quite." Rarity took a bite of her daisy-and-waffle sandwich. "Mmm. We'll have to ask Pinkie how their baseline selves are with them next time we see her Awake."

"I'll make a note of it." Twilight pulled her PADD out of her pocket. "I've been meaning to ask her about all the different versions of Sugarcube Corner she knows of anyway."

"Part of your general research on loop variations?"

"To quote Big Macintosh, eeyup."

* * *

>145.8 (Filraen)

When Diamond Tiara Awoke she didn't realize it. Her world was a sea of perceptions she couldn't understand because, while conscious, she couldn't process any of them. Light? Touch? Sound? Magic? She didn't understand those concepts, or how she needed to understand them.

She also never realized when she lost consciousness.

* * *

>As time passed Diamond Tiara started getting some flashes of... something, a comforting sound that she knew by heart.

"...ra."

It took time, how much Tiara didn't know, to understand they were voices and what the voices sometimes were saying was her own name. But the effort she spent to get this realization was too much and she fell into unconsciousness again.

* * *

>'In the middle of nowhere, having the impression of being Awake for some time but no loop memories. What the pine is happening here? Maybe if I had a landmark or something...'

Suddenly a yellow road appeared below her, whatever direction was below right now.

_ 'Well, that's convenient.' _ Tiara thought but when she tried to stand on the road she realized she didn't have hooves. Or hands, claws, tentacles, flippers... or a body for that matter.

Then she had a realization _ 'Wait, am I dreaming or something? Only one way to find out.' _ Trying to focus on Zecora's lucid dreaming techniques Diamond Tiara created her usual earth pony form, then changed to human, dragon, changeling, zombie and her surprisingly often used lately boxing kangaroo form before becoming her usual filly form again.

Testing her magic Diamond Tiara realized she had a little bit, but her connection to it was muted somehow (or she had low reserves right now, she could be in a coma) and her Element of Generosity reacted the same way. With her options cut off, unable to ping and not knowing if she were going to remember this dream once she wakes up Diamond Tiara decided to meditate and prepare her mind to when this dream ends.

* *
*

>Light.

Sun.

Hungry.

Voice.

Name.

Taste.

Voice.

Light.

Voice.

Name.

Voice.

Voice.

Voice...

"...doctor..."

Worry!

Diamond Tiara suddenly recognized the voice, and knew exactly what to do. Pushing her magic as far as she could do Diamond Tiara called the Element of Generosity upon her.

* * *

>Honeybuzz knew there were good and bad days, and she had to enjoy the good to make the most of them while suffering the bad. She had married a wonderful pony of a husband, had their little foal together, an earth pony like herself, and enjoyed their time together. She only hoped she could get out more with her daughter to play, but today was one of those lucky days. She even caught up with her bee friend at the park.

They had already returned home however, as it was getting late and the cold wasn't good for either of them. Now they were both resting on top of the bed waiting for her husband's arrival. She didn't have to wait much as soon enough there were sounds of him arriving to the house.

"Darling, I'm back!" Filthy Rich said as he entered the bedroom.

"Welcome home, Dear." After kissing each other Honeybuzz continued. "How was your day?"

"Good enough. We finished polishing the details for the next harvest production of Zap Apple jam with the Apples. And yours?"

"Not that bad all things considered. I managed to get outside to play with Tiara after lunch and after that it looked like she was hungrier than ever, I just finished nursing her." She didn't mention how she almost never got out of their home, and not for the lack of will. Her body had become tired even since she gave birth to their daughter, nights sleeping never becoming restful again, to the point Honeybuzz almost never had the strength to leave home.

Filthy Rich knew all of that and more, like the other reason his wife had to leave home today. "And what did the doctor say?"

"Doctor Stable gave me three months left" _to die_, was left unsaid but both understood it. Silenced reigned for a moment until the dam broke.

"Rich, what I'm going to do?!" Honeybuzz cried as she threw herself into Filthy Rich's embrace. "I want to go with you to leave Tiara to school her first day! I want to be in her cute-ceaÑ+era telling her friends their music it too loud! I want to be in her wedding! I want to grow old with you..."

"I'll tell her stories of the wonderful mare who is her mother," Filthy Rich eventually said. "I'll make sure she won't ever forget-"

His words were interrupted by two things happening at the same time, or maybe one which had two effects. A sudden sphere of light took up most of the room, creating winds which made all the knick-knacks in the room flutter around, surprising Filthy Rich and Honeybuzz enough to fall towards the wall.

Eventually the light and winds ended, and in its place the translucent image of a filly remained, wings flaring as if helping to keep balance on her four legs, horn lit. The alicorn -an alicorn!- seemed to be around the age one usually gets their cutie mark. Her eyes were looking carefully around the room: the walls, the bed, Filthy Rich to finally fixing her sight down on Honeybuzz, who was still on the floor with her back to the wall, before saying a single phrase.

"I ask of you: are you my Mother?"

Time seemed to stop until Rich finally spoke "D-diamond Tiara, is that you?"

"Yes, dad. It's me, your daughter." The alicorn said as she softened her face into a smile and used her head to point to the bed, where even after the whole lights and wind act the small form of Diamond Tiara was in her bed, and with that a ton of revelations that were being screamed at Honeybuzz were realized.

Both her daughter on the bed and the translucent alicorn had same coat and mane color.

Diamond Tiara had sprouted wings and a horn much like the translucent figure possessed.

Both had the same position: wings flared, horn lit with the same magic color.

Both had a necklace, her little foal was using it to look like she was standing on her four hooves on the bed and the standing alicorn was wearing it.

Everything coming together to the realization of the translucent alicorn looked unmistakably like and an older version of Diamond Tiara.

"But how?" Honeybuzz asked as she approached her filly on the bed.

"Wait, Mom!" Diamond Tiara said, halting Honeybuzz's approach. At her surprised look the alicorn elaborated: "I'm concentrating really hard for this spell and I don't want to disrupt it. But as of how, it's a really long story but the short version is that I really wanted to get to know you Mom."

Torn between going to her daughter but being unable lest she stop talking with her Honeybuzz could only have tears fall down her face. "Thanks to let me know you before I-"

Diamond Tiara interrupted her mother with a single phrase, "I know," and then closed her eyes as if concentrating. The image of the alicorn flickered from a moment, raising Honeybuzz's fear before stopping and opening her eyes again.

Filthy Rich, however, noticed something extra had happened. He grasped one of the three bottles that suddenly appeared on the bed, it had a big number one on its side. "What are these?"

"Those are three potions, containers of powerful spells, Dad." Tiara answering almost in a lecturing tone... which Honeybuzz supposed was appropriate for the situation. "Mom, you should drink them in order: the bottle with a number one has a potion of Remove Curse, which should work with almost all magical maladies. The potion in the bottle number two has a powerful Remove Disease spell which is good for non-magical diseases. The bottle number three has a potion to Cure Serious Wounds, either by injury or disease."

The explanation seemed to make Honeybuzz stop breathing. Could she... be healed?

At her stunned look Diamond Tiara blushed and looked at the floor sheepishly, "I wanted to be thorough."

Honeybuzz couldn't hold it any more she stood and ran towards her grown-up child's embrace, only to pass through her and fall to the floor.

"Sorry about that Mom, but this is only an illusion. It helps with my focus but I'm really on the bed."

Maybe it was the happiness of talking to her foal, maybe the absurdity of Diamond Tiara suddenly becoming an alicorn, or the hope that she could stay alive long enough to get to know her daughter. But now being on the floor, after foolishly passing through a ghostly image of her foal, was too much for Honeybuzz.

She started laughing.

Laughter and tears of relief and happiness and hope and love of an inexplicable miracle that had happened in her own bedroom, a miracle that may just allow her to enjoy the two most precious treasures she had in her life. A moment later three more laughs sang along with hers.

Eventually the laughter stopped and Honeybuzz returned to Filthy Rich's side, as the illusory image apparently couldn't move.

"Mom, Dad, I can't keep the spell for much longer."

"Will you be all right, my princess?"

"Yes Dad," Diamond Tiara answered as her image flickered. "I'm not sure how conscious I'll be after I end the spell but I'll certainly remember this. And if not, please show me the bottles."

Filthy Rich nodded.

"Mom, Dad, when I can cast the spell again or can talk normally I promise to tell you my story. But I want you to wait for me, both of you."

Honeybuzz answered with a conviction she forgot the last time she felt "We promise."

A relieved smile crossed Diamond Tiara's face and her image was no more; however, just after the image vanished they could hear her voice sheepishly saying one last thing.

"... and sorry for the bedroom."

And then everything ended, this time without any wind or lights. Only with a little alicorn foal sleeping in the middle of the bed hugging a necklace too big for her.

* * *

>145.9 (AnonymousAsk, RowanEx)

Twilight Sparkle and Spike looked around the sea of red stones then at each other.

"What?" Twilight asked.

"Nothing," commented Spike, "it's just that sooner or later Luna might do this, and thank Yggdrasil we're not in the sun."

"How did you know it was going to end like this?" the mare asked.

"Of course, it was going to happen sometime," commented Spike as he looked up to Twilight, "We used the send to the moon joke way too many times on almost everybody. It's surprising Luna lasted that long. Even Celestia suggested to stop swearing by her name."

"Well, true, but-"

"No buts, next time, let's send things somewhere else," he interrupted.

"Okay," Twilight replied, "so what are we gonna do now here in Mars to pass the time?"

Spike thought for a few seconds before an idea entered his mind. "How about a colony?"

Twilight looked around before nodding in agreement.

* * *

>145.10 (Masterweaver)

"PANCAKE DISCUS?! CELESTIA, WHY IS THIS ON THE LIST OF EQUESTRIAN GAMES?!"

"Well, it's not like we haven't done anything ridiculous before, Twilight. Wife tossing is almost a regular sport now."

"AAAAARAAARRRAARARARARARAAAAGH!"

"Luna overturned solar surfing, though. Something about a lack of viable competitors. Such a shame, really."

* * *

>145.11 (Masterweaver)

Twilight felt the spiked collar on her neck as she looked into the mirror. "Huh, this manestyle again..." She adjusted her denim jacket and walked out to her motorcycle.

Whose tires were made of pancakes.

"...you know what, I'm just going to roll with it."

"Well said, my faithful student!" Discord rolled up on another pancake-tired motorcycle, peering over a pair of kamina shades. "Now come, the Waffle Twins are returning from space tonight!"

* * *

>145.12 (Evilhumour)

Lyra leaned her head against the bar and sighed.

"Something strong, please, we've got a roaring headache from our last loop stuck in our head." the looper with yellow eyes looked up at Big Mac. "This is Seapony Lyra speaking to you so you know when I am saying the last loop was crazy."

Big Mac raised an eyebrow but before he asked, the pony in front of him picked the glass up and continued to speak.

"We were seaponies and we were the second most insane thing in the ocean!" Lyra dropped the glass onto the counter, shuddering. "Those damn Narwhals out sung us, out fire powered us, out insaned us, out seaponied us!" Lyra quivered. "It was horrible and we cannot get their damn song out of our head!"

With a thud and splash, the pony in the bucket fell onto her back with Big Mac blinking his eyes in shock. It seemed that there was something that could make a seapony say it was too crazy now and he wasn't sure how to take it.

Picking up Lyra's drink and throwing it back, he decided that it was certainly not going to be taken soberly.

* * *

>145.13 (Evilhumour with the help of Purrs)

Zecora smiled to herself as she prepared to welcome the anchor to Equestria. She had been planning this for a while now, and she wanted to see how he would take their version of his holiday. Clearing her throat, she directed Cheerilee and her students into their appropriately decorated town and began to sing to them all.

"Colts and fillies of every age"

"Wouldn't you like to see something strange?"

Nyx picked up the tone, flying in as her adult self and landed beside the singing zebra.

"If you have some time to kill"

"See our town of Ponyville"

From the house they were hiding beside, Diamond Tiara led several foals dressed as pumpkins in the next chant. The anchor's smile was growing by the moment.

"This is Ponyville, this is Ponyville"

"Ponies laugh in the dead of night"

Luna flew into the town from her moon, the greatest smile on her face as she basked in the adoration the citizens Ponyville were giving her.

_ "This is Ponyville, everypony knows the drill_

_ Trick or treat till the neighbors gonna die of fright_

_ It's our town, everypony laugh_

_ In this town of Ponyville"_

Vinyl trotted onto the scene, shaking her mane in her elaborate costume to the utter delight of the stallion beside them.

_ "I am the one hiding under your bed_

_ Teeth ground sharp and eyes glowing red"_

Flashing a wink, Vinyl joined their growing group as Lyra appeared in her human costume.

_ "I am the one outside the windowpane_

_ Fingers like snakes and spiders in my mane"_

All of the ponies gathered so far broke out in a joint song of _ "This is Ponyville, this is Ponyville"_

Flying in as a pegasus, Sunset flashed her sharp fangs as she sang her part of their song.

_ "Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville!_

_ In this town we call home_

_ Everypony hail to the librarian song"_

Ivory Scroll walked onto the scene with a fantastic costume that made it appear she had two faces on her head.

_ "In this town, don't we love it now?_

_ Everybody's waiting for the next surprise"_

Everyone, even their visitor and the non looping ponies, sung the next part with pride in their voices.

_ "Round that corner, Pinkie hiding in the trash can_

_ Something's waiting now to pounce, and how you'll..."_

Rarity, Applejack and Fluttershy jumped out of the Carousel Boutique, singing loudly to the eternal delight of their friends. The first was wearing something quite risquÃ©, the second was a quite realistic timberwolf, and the third was using her druid powers to make it seem as if she were melting.

_ "Scream!_

_This is Ponyville_

_Red 'n' black, slimy green"_

Applejack leaned into the foals around Cheerilee, snarling softly to get them laughing in playful fright.

_"Aren't ya scared?"_

Flying in with their own weird magic, Discord and Silver Spoon caused a bit of draconequus magic to fall around them all.

_"Well, that's just fine_

_Say it once, say it twice_

_Take a chance and roll the dice_

_Ride with the moon in the dead of night._

Spike, changed into a skeleton form for this event sang his lines in a mighty tone:

_"Don't you feel the chill? Don't you feel the chill?" _

Berry Punch, a hoof around her daughter, fulfilled her part.

_"In our town of Ponyville!"_

Pinkie Pie, dressed to the nines, bounced her way to their visitor, her smile greater then the one painted on her face.

_"I am the clown with the tear-away face_

_Here in a flash and gone without a trace"_

A very large red ghouly pony showed off his pipes on the condition that no one would ever tape this.

_"I am the fear in the back of your brain_

_I am the wind blowing through your mane"_

An alicorn mare flew across the moon, doing what little singing she needed to do.

_"I am the shadow on the moon at night_

_Filling your dreams to the brim with fright"_

With that, Celestia, dressed Nightmare Moon, flew off before her voice would crack.

Everyone followed the zebra alicorn with joy and wonder as she led them deeper into the town.

_"This is Ponyville, this is Ponyville_

_Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville!_

_Ponyville! Ponyville!"_

The three founders of the Cutie Mark Crusaders bounded onto the scene, their smiles meeting all of the other ponies' save their visitor.

_"Tender lumplings everywhere_"

_Life's no fun without a good scare"_

The Empress of the Crystal Empire and her Royal consort, both dressed as corpses and their legs around each other, chimed in.

_"That's our part-time job, but we're not evil_"

_In our town of Ponyville"_

Rainbow Dash unleashed her own singing as they neared the imposing tree in the center of the town.

_"In this town_"

Ivory did not miss her cue from the pony dressed up as the grim reaper, replying with _"Don't we love it now?_"

_Everybody's waiting for the next surprise"_

_All of the present mane six, started to sing together, side by side._

_"Twilight Sparkle might catch you reading a book_"

_And scream like a banshee_"

_Make you jump out of your skin_"

_This is Ponyville, don't you feel the chill?_"

_Won't you please make way for a very special mare?_"

_Our mare Twilight is Queen of Golden Oaks_"

_Everyone hail to the Bookworm Queen now!"_

Everyone broke out into song in perfect unison, heads pointed to the full moon above them. A pony exploded out from the foliage of the Golden Oaks Library, flying around in the air as the crow reached its climax.

_"This is Ponyville, this is Ponyville_"

_Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville! Ponyville!"_

Applebloom, Scootaloo and Sweetie Bell sang as Twilight landed in front of the entire town, wings bent low before she stood up in front of their special guest.

_ "In this town we call home_

_ Everyone hail to the friendship song! "_

With that, there was a shout of joy and thunderous applause, none louder than from Pumpkin King himself.

* * *

>145.14 (Tangent)

**By Any Other Name:** 1.1 _The Awakening_

Twilight Sparkle Awoke suddenly amidst the hustle and bustle of a crowded kitchen full of ponies, only two of which she immediately recognized as Mr. and Mrs. Cake. Which made sense, as from what she could tell, she was in the large kitchen of Sugarcube Corner.

"What's up, Pancake? Are you okay?" One of the extra ponies asked in a concerned tone. And then the memories hit. This was yet another name error loop, this time replacing her entire name with Pancake. Only _this time_ her name actually made sense within the context of the loop itself! As Pancake, she was the youngest of four sisters, the other three being Flapjack, Waffle, and Syrup, who ran a semi-mobile restaurant catering to lumberjacks and miners. She herself had set out on her own years ago to get out of her sisters' shadow and had ended up in Ponyville, staying with the Cakes.

"I'm fine, Waffle," Twilight replied. "I'm just glad you three could come help with the Summer Sun Celebration. Plus, it'll be nice having a family visit once all the hubbub is done and over with." A quick ping brought back a pair of returns. Magic and Loyalty... Spike and Trixie would be her guess, it made most sense. Apparently Trixie was taking her place as Princess... Dawn de LumiÃ"re?

Huh...

Interesting, apparently Twilight wasn't the only one with an alternative name this loop. Princess Dawn de LumiÃ"re was how Princess Celestia was known this time around, with the only other difference according to her new memories being the bright golden half-sun Cutie Mark. And Trixie was most likely taking Twilight's place as her student, with Spike as her assistant.

"Okay, that's the second time this morning you've spaced out, Pancake," Flapjack stated drily. "I know you want to impress us with how successful you've been in Ponyville, but you've been running yourself ragged ever since you got the spot as Head Caterer for the Summer Sun Celebration. Take a break. Go see your friends. As much as we missed you, we don't want to see you back in the kitchen for another hour, okay?"

"Aheh-heh," Twilight laughed nervously. "Okay, okay, I'll take a break! Be back in a bit!" And with that, the Anchor currently known as Pancake headed out of Sugarcube Corner...

* * *

>145.15 (Kris Overstreet)

Fluttershy looked up, and up, and up at the anorexic-looking armor-plated quadrupedal giant robot... thing. Similar robots rested in giant containment bays to either side, different mainly in color; brilliant white armor on the left, darkest blue in the middle, vibrant pink on the right.

"This is Alicornion Unit One," declared the stallion who had replaced her father for the Loop. "We created the Alicornions to defend Canterlot-3 against the threat of the Nightmares, as foretold in the Ghastly Gorge Scrolls."

"Er... that's nice," Fluttershy said hesitantly, "but why show this to me?" She waved a hoof up and down at the midnight-blue titan half-submerged in the holding tank next to them.

"Because you are the Fifth Element," Dark Clouds said firmly. "Only those who are Elements can pilot an Alicornion. And you are going to pilot Unit One into battle against the Fourth Nightmare."

"Into battle? Oh, no, no I couldn't!" Fluttershy insisted. In fact she could and she had, much more often than she cared to remember, but she didn't care to admit it given any option. She never enjoyed it... well, hardly ever.

"If you refuse to pilot Unit One," Dark Clouds growled, "I will have no choice but to send the First Element into battle." He pointed to a hospital gurney, where a pony almost completely swathed in bandages, gauze and plaster casts lay almost motionless. A single tangle of pink mane stuck out from a gap in the wrappings.

"Let me at 'em!" Pinkie Pie said, trying to sit up, then falling back onto the gurney with a groan of pain.

Fluttershy gave Dark Clouds a capital-L Look that was more than halfway to the capital-S Stare. "I refuse to respond to your emotional blackmail," she said. "I will not pilot Alicornion."

"Fluttershy, you suck," Dark Clouds said. "Now get in the robot."

Fluttershy raised an eyebrow. "And how many Loops have you been waiting to unload that one, Gendo?"

"Dark Clouds," alias Gendo Ikari, smirked. "Who says I've been waiting?" he asked. "This is my first time with pony pilots, though."

"Besides," said Pinkie Pie from her gurney, "it had to be you, right? If we'd chosen Rainbow Dash, she'd have said yes before Gendo could tell her the unit number of the robot!"

* * *

>145.14 b

(Tangent)

**By Any Other Name:** 1.2 _Moon Pie Madness_

Twilight Sparkle (or Pancake, as she was known in this loop) had barely set out from Sugarcube Corner when she was accosted by a panicking pink pony her in-loop memories identified as Moon Pie, an Earth Pony with long straight hair. Moon Pie had always been fascinated by the moon and the night sky, and had left the Pie family rock farm years ago to pursue her education after she got her Cutie Mark, a full moon surrounded by five stars. She had recently graduated and had been stationed at Ponyville's Golden Oak Observatory, where she slept through most of the day and spent most nights gazing at the stars.

Pancake was one of the few Ponyville residents to keep in touch with her after Skittles (oh, Twilight was so going to tease Rainbow Dash about that one after all those Pancake jokes!), Ponyville's Premier Party Planner, hosted Moon Pie's Welcome to Ponyville party last year. Moon Pie, for her part, always welcomed any of her friends who came to visit with a warm smile and a pot of tea, inexplicably showed up at the door bearing a bowl of herbal broth if any of her friends was feeling under the weather, and tried to attend any event important to her friends if she possibly could. It was odd to know a version of Pinkie Pie with so few friends, but all the same rather heartening that Moon Pie valued those few friendships so dearly.

"Pancake!" Moon Pie yelled in Twilight's ear as she shook the purple pony. "I know you're super busy, but can you help me? Please?"

"Calm down, Moon Pie. What seems to be the problem?"

Letting go of Pancake, Moon Pie took a few deep breaths as she tried to settle her nerves. "I was just finishing up my research notes this morning when the mailpony came with a royal notice - Eventide Twinkle, Princess Dawn de Lumi re's personal student, is coming to Ponyville tomorrow to inspect the preparations! She's going to be staying at my observatory! I don't have any spare rooms set up! What if she's a meanie? What if she kicks me out of my own observatory? I heard she has a dragon! Dragons eat gems and crystals! What if he eats my lenses!? I don't wanna pay to replace my lenses again! Whaaaaaaa-aaaaa-aa-aahhhh!"

"There there, Moonie," Twilight patted Moon Pie's mane as she soothed the panicking pink pony. "I only have an hour free this morning, but I can drop by this evening to lend a hoof. In the meantime, why don't I help you find Skittles, Gemstone, and Apple Cider? I seem to remember that they didn't get any specific assignments for the Summer Sun Celebration preparations. I'm positive that at least one of them will be free to help you out."

Moon Pie sniffed and smiled tentatively. "Do you really think so, Pancake?"

"I'm positive," Twilight nodded with a reassuring smile. "And even if they are busy, I'll still be by this evening to help out. It shouldn't be too hard to clear out a room or two and set up guest rooms."

"Thank you so much, Pancake!"

* * *

>145.16(Masterweaver)

Nyx walked up to her friend and put a hoof on her shoulder. "Apple Bloom, normally I don't go into other looper's dreams without permission. But the last expansion got me curious, and I headed into your unawake self's head."

Apple Bloom paused, giving the alicorn an odd look. "...Yeah?"

"You. Are one. Screwed up filly, you know that?"

The earth pony frowned. "Okay, what happened?"

"I'll give you the memory tonight, don't you worry." Nyx patted her gently and walked on. "Right now, though, I need to get your brother to open his bar."

"Oh come on," Apple Bloom cried, "it couldn't have been that weird! You've got to have seen stranger things than... whatever you saw!"

"There was this time Pinkie was stealthing and I dreamskipped into her head," Nyx muttered. "Took me five loops and three targeted obliviations to regain my sanity. This, though, I need a drink for." She gave Apple Bloom a look. "Let me repeat that: I survived a looping Pinkie Dream, and I need a drink for this."

* * *

>145.17 (Masterweaver)

"So wait, she's a... hairdresser?"

Apple Bloom nodded. "Yep, here it is, black and white." She handed the letter over to Scootaloo. "Babs has apprenticed under a master barber."

"...huh." The pegasus checked both sides of the paper. "You know, I know we don't pay as much attention to her as we should in these loops, but... She never struck me as a mane stylist, ya'know? Not that I think she'll be a bad one," she quickly reassured, "it's just that... I dunno, she felt a little rough-and-tumble, if that makes sense."

"Surprised me too, first time I went through this expansion." Apple Bloom shrugged. "Meh, if it makes her happy, Ah don't really care. Point is, we should celebrate."

Sweetie Belle walked in at that moment, glancing furtively behind her. "Sorry, I just had to shake off Snips-I don't know why, but he has a real hard crush on me this loop!" She mock gagged. "I know he can be a decent guy, but I'm just not interested... what are you two staring at me for?"

Apple Bloom cleared her throat. "Sweetie Belle... what is Snips' special talent anyway?"

* * *

>145.18 (Masterweaver)

The two cuttlefish stared each other down.

Around them, four other cuttlefish (and one purple sea cucumber) shuffled awkwardly.

The currents of the water around them filled with tension.

Eventually the cucumber coughed, or did something resembling a cough. "Girls... it is traditional, it's best if you get it out sooner rather than later-

He backed off at the matching glare. "Right, sorry. I'll just be over here."

The purple cuttlefish snorted, turning back to the white one.

Streaks of sunlight filtered through the ocean.

Finally, the white cuttlefish sighed. "...Twilight?"

"...Yes, Rarity?"

* * *

>145.19 (Original concept by AnonymousAsk; beta-read and revised by Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Something isn't right.

Twilight looked up at the empty stage for the Summer Sun Celebration. She and most of the other resident Loopers had gathered there in plenty of time for Nightmare Moon's arrival. Except it had been over half an hour since the corrupted alicorn was supposed to show up, and she simply was. Not. There.

And all the pings she'd felt had been accounted for by ponies she'd already confirmed were present. This was concerning.

"Twilight?"

"Yes, Ivory?"

"Do youâ€ know if they're planning something?" The mayor looked as concerned as Twilight herself.

Twilight shook her head. "If they are, they didn't tell me."

Nearby, a loud belch suddenly interrupted. "Ughâ€ excuse me." Spike looked embarrassed. "Twilight, mail for you!"

"Thank you, Spike. Hmmâ€ what? She WHAT! Tree-damn it!" Twilight groaned.

"Darling? What is it?" Rarity looked at her in shock.

"Here. Read this." Twilight passed the letter to her.

"Ohâ€¦ my." Rarity began reading aloud.

_My dearest student Twilight Sparkle, _

_Luna and I have decided to take a vacation loop. Please don't search for us, we'll be perfectly fine._

_Signed, _

_Princess Celestia _

_P.S: I leave Equestria's leadership in your capable hooves while we're away._

Twilight looked at her friends.

"Errr... Any of you want to... help me?"

"Sorry Darling, Spike and I have a little date in Trottingham, maybe another time." Rarity truly looked apologetic as she and Spike hurried away.

"And I've got... farm work to do," Applejack added as she backed up.

Twilight looked to the others.

"Gilda told me she was going to give me a tour around the Griffon Kingdom," said Rainbow Dash.

"I did? OW!" The griffon looked indignant. "Sheesh, Dash, that hurt! What'd you do, get steel elbow implants?" Suddenly realizing that eyes were on her, she grimaced. "And yeah, I did, so we need to go." She and Dash flew off.

Twilight looked around again. "And... everypony else took off when I wasn't looking. Guess it's just the four of us, girls." She looked rather expectantly at the three Crusaders.

"Sorry, Twilight. We... really don't know how to run a government." Sweetie Belle spoke.

"And we have a big crusade we need to get to," Scootaloo added.

"So... bye." Apple Bloom looked more than a little embarrassed as she backed away from her fellow Element of Magic.

The three hurriedly left, leaving Twilight to sigh.

"So much for the magic of friendship THIS loop," the lavender unicorn muttered. "Especially since they did such a good job running Equestria during my self-imposed exile the last few times I left them in charge. Oh well. Time for backup plan H."

Half an hour, Twilight and a confused white alicorn were standing in the courtyard of Canterlot Castle.

"Er... Twilight Sparkle, you said your name was? Where are we, and why are we unicorns? Well, winged unicorn, in my case."

Twilight smiled. "Welcome to your new kingdom, Principal Celestia. It's not too different from running Canterlot High, just country-sized, so... have fun!" With that, Twilight teleported out, leaving a still very confused neo-alicorn by herself.

Meanwhile, back in Canterlot High...

Vice-Principal Luna looked just as confused as her sister, even if she was a world away. "Sunset Shimmer? Wasn't my sister in her office a few minutes ago?"

"Yes, but she had to leave. Something about an emergency only she could handle, and that you're in charge until she gets back."

"Oh. Well... why were you here?"

"Mr. Cranky Doodle asked me to deliver the morning's attendance records for him."

"Ah. Well, thank you, and I suppose you'd better get back to class then."

Sunset nodded, then sighed after she left. "Twilight, if you're going to pull something like this, I wish you'd at least give me more than two or three seconds' warning."

* * *

>145.20 (Evilhumour, gamerex27, and masterweaver)

"-and one, two three, and one, two, three," the woman's voice cut into Vinyl's mind as she Woke up with a jolt, nearly falling on her face. "Miss Melody, are you alright?" the woman asked to the snickering of other girls around her.

"Ye-yeah," she blinked as she pushed herself up with her hands, sending out a ping while she waited for her loop memories to kick in. "Peachy." she gulped as she looked to her right to a very uncomfortable sight.

It was herself in those black slim tights that showed her legs off too much, with a top that pushed her chest in places she wasn't comfortable being so high and she was wearing ballet shoes. The final nail of how totally unwubural loop was going to be was her hair; brushed, washed and groomed to perfection, the natural blue mess was in a _ponytail!_

"Good, Victoria, we wouldn't want our lead girl to hurt herself before the recital, now would we?" the woman smiled at the girls around her. "Now let's continue, shall we?" Tapping her pointer against the wall, the teacher began to call out, "And one, two, three..."

* * *

>Vinyl nearly jumped out of her skin as the girls began to join her at the lunchroom table, all equally unhappy.

"He-hey girls," she weakly waved to them, trying to rub a hand through her hair but it was too well brushed and straight for her to do that. "How are ya-"

Rarity _glared_ at her as she placed down her salad, taking time to be gentle with her _very_ developed muscular hands. "I Woke up while slamming someone into the ground, their feet in my _face!_" she hissed, squeezing the metal table with worrying ease.

"At least you Woke up to something _awesome_," the girl next to Rarity muttered, the very picture of feminine beauty with her gorgeous dress and makeup. Her long, rainbow hair was _actually_ glistening in the air and not even her pouting ruined her flawless face. "For once, I don't loop in as a tomboy and I get _this!_"

"At least y'all got somethin' _easy_ to deal with," the older of the three grumbled. "Ah'm the professor of the high fancy math an' Ah've got to give a _big_ lecture in thirty minutes and my _dang_ loop memories won't kick in!"

"It could be worse," the fact that Pinkie Pie was smiling at less force than usual was more surprising to the four of them than her suddenly sitting in the middle of them. "I mean, you could be like me; born without the ability to taste food. Although, I think Luna Waking up the electricity factory is bad too. Or the fact that Celestia found out she's the night manager of a fastfood restaurant. Or that Fluttershy is the CEO of a massive hunting company. Or the fact that Twilight is a meany politician that cut the budget to the schools and personally bulldozed the Golden Oaks library. So," Pinkie Pie stood up, all of their food in her arms. "It could be a lot worse. Bye!"

The girls watched her jump off the table and dash off into another room before Vinyl blinked and looked down. "Did she just-"

"Eeyup." the professor muttered darkly.

"_Wonderful_." the girls sighed, their stomachs grumbling in protest at not being fed.

* * *

>"Boooooored," Discord moaned, slamming his head against his desk. "_So. Boooooored."_

"All you have to do is fill out my paperwork and make appointments for me," Twilight grumbled, tearing down the proudly-framed portrait of a smiling, Unawake Twilight at the controls of a bulldozer next to the destroyed, "wasteful" Golden Oaks. "At least you're not stuck in a position where you were doing _everything_ you hate in other people_ before you Woke Up." Muttering, she changed the channel on her office's TV, going from a proud Unawake Rainbow Dash posing on a fashion show runway to Unawake Rarity in skintight clothing, grinning viciously as she held a scholarship for contact sports at a prestigious local university in one massive hand and a wrestling trophy under her thick, muscular arm in another on the local news interview. "This is like Sleipnir's playing a _really_ bad joke on all of us."

* * *

>They're all looking at are they all looking at me?!

Chrysalis broke out in a cold sweat as she Awoke in front of a podium in Canterlot High's auditorium. She glanced down at her speech notes before her, reminding her of her successful acting career, and her motivational speech she was to make to her alma mater. In front of. Thousand. Of. People.

Bitting back her screaming changeling instincts to get the buck out of there and hide, she swallowed the lump in her throat and reluctantly began her speech.

* * *

>It was a little known fact that Derpy Hooves was a workaholic.

Well, Workaholic was a tad extreme. She didn't need to be constantly working, after all. But she didn't react well when she didn't have employment of some sort, even if it was purely voluntary. She needed to do things with her own two hooves, she needed to know she was contributing to society. Even just raising Dinky was enough.

So awakening as a pampered, layabout heiress with parents that deliberately ensured she would be maneuvered away from any sort of work was more than a little stressful.

She could keep herself from destroying things, though. At least until she could contact "auntie Twilight." She could. She just had to breathe calmly and... and not get mad when the butler refilled her lemonade, that was his job after all... she could just lay back and get a tan, like normal rich people, and she could keep her hands from claspig into tight fists as the vague insults of countless loops echoed in the back of her mind reminding her of her weak eyes or broken brain because really those were the exception, not the rule, and she didn't destroy Town Hall as often anyway and she was a mature and fully responsible mare-

...okay, so she had just crushed the lemonade glass. Deep breaths. Focus on something else.

* * *

>Cadence rubbed her forehead as she ducked the latest thrown chair; grumbling at the stupidity at being a talk show hostess of The Caddy and Maccy Talk Show hour. Signalling to her co-host Big Mac that she was taking five, she moved to get off stage, dimly aware she was leaving Big Mac in a situation where he needed to be talking a fair deal but she did not care. She hated this kind of garbage when they had access to TV; all the relationships ruined at the lies and cheating revealed by the careless hosts and very little done to fix it. Sighing as she stormed into the hallway and into her private dressing room, she flipped on the TV and hoped that there would be something better than being world famous for destroying rela-

Blinking, she saw their was breaking news that an international master thief was reported in the area she was in. Turning her head at a scraping against the floor, she saw a very annoyed Shining Armor looking at her.

"Not. A. Word." he said through clenched teeth as Cadence put the dots together.

Nodding her head, she held her husband close, running her fingers through his hair to calm him down as well as herself.

* * *

>AN:

145.1: Culinary options. (MtG cross)

>145.2: Some things are impossible to take seriously. (MtG cross.)145.3: Oh, gods. A Nightmare Parent.

>145.4: Sometimes it's nice to just sit on top of a pole and go "ommmm...". (Star Wars cross)145.5: It's hard being interrupted during public speaking.

>145.6: Some things are impossible to live down.145.7: Ah, so you're a Waffle mare?

>145.8: Out of the mouths of babes.145.9: Variety is the spice of life.

>145.10: See remark about living things down.145.11: Yggdrasil likes pancakes.

>145.12: Being outinsaned can be worrying.145.13 Skellington cast. (Crossover with e.g. Nightmare Before Christmas)

>145.14: This is just getting silly.145.15: Gendo, oh no! (Crossover with Neon Genesis Evangelion.)

>145.16: Caution. Do not approach dreams of elder goddesses, even part time ones. They have a habit of being strange.145.17: Shave and a haircut, two bits.

>145.18: There's a formula to these things.145.19: Musical authorities.

>145.20: Today is Opposite Loop.

153. Chapter 153

146.1 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Spike awoke cleaning the library as he often did just before Twilight would enter and announce her plans for the loop. Oddly enough, the Library seemed a bit messier than usual, with books laying scattered across the room. He put his feather duster under his arms and pondered how Rarity would appreciate another trip on the cruise liner he kept in his subspace pocket. His pondering came to an end when the door opened, issuing Twilight, with her eyes twitching, "Pack your bags, Spike, we're vacationing on the moon this loop."

This surprised the dragon youngling. "Wha-why Twilight?"

Twilight levitated Spike onto her back and teleported to Ponyville, then Canterlot Castle, and finally the Griffon Kingdoms. Derpies, Derpies everywhere. Derpy had literally replaced everyone but Twilight and the dragons. When studying her memories, Twilight realized she was born with a genetic mutation which made her different from all the Derpies. Each one had retained their cutie mark and personality, but they all had Derpy's destructive, accident prone quirk. Literally, Equestria constantly destroyed and rebuilt itself every day. Further, Celestia had also been replaced by Derpy, and surely Luna had been as well. Her return would probably herald the destruction of the planet as they knew it.

Spike was quick, pocketing several gems he had saved. Within moments, they were gone.

* * *

>146.2 (Gamma Cavy)

Twilight!" Dash screamed. Twilight looked up. "You have to help me! It's horrible!"

"What's horrible?" Twilight asked.

"This loop! All pegasi can only hover like bees!" Dash's speech was broken and distraught. "And fly slowly! The princess is the only one who can fly the way we should!"

This setup seemed familiar. Twilight puzzled, even as she patted Dash soothingly.

Oh. A thought clicked into place, with the memory of a long ago loop. Only hover like bees. Click. A loop where the laws of physics were enforced. Click. The princess, whose wings were larger, could truly _fly_.

"Dash, I know what the problem is," she began, and was nearly bowled over by a distraught pegasus.

"What is it?!" her friend's eyes were bloodshot.

"The magical field that saturates Equestria this loop is too weak to support flight with wings that are too small to generate lift." Twilight explained. "Celestia can fly because her wings are five times larger than those of a pegasus."

"What good does that do me!" Dash snarled.

"Ascend, and go for your full alicorn state, the one you have in Sisters loops."

There was a flash, and five seconds later Dash, full alicorn, with large wings, hugged Twilight and took off.

The resulting rainboom destroyed the upper half of the library.

* * *

>"Dash, why didn't you think of ascending yourself?"

"I panicked. Loop memories just stated that this was the way it was, and the princess is supposed to be able to fly because she uses special magic from having lived so long."

* * *

>146.3 (fractalman)

Once upon a time, two sisters controlled the weather. The younger sister ensured it rained whenever we started to dry out, the other ensured the sun came out whenever we started to get too wet.

After a sibling spat got out of control, the older sister grabbed the Elements of Slime, only for both to be banished. Since then, we have had to control the weather ourselves, which is extremely exhausting.

However, it is said that after a thousand years, they shall return. What will happen then, none can say.

* * *

>Twilight Slimemold closed the slime-proof book with a psuedopod. She both chuckled and shook her head, flinging a piece of goop away in the process.

* * *

>"Wahoo! We're Smooze this loop!" yelled the pink eyeless blob known as Pinkie, as she spread herself out over Jellycube Corner. "Now I understand why the Smooze likes to Smooze so much!"

"I have to admit, this is more awesome than I expected." said a rainbow puddle with one eye-stalk.

Twilight chuckled, and then rolled two of her five eyes when Pinkie started singing the Smooze song.

* * *

>146.4 (Evilhumour)

Thor had to bite back his laughter from what he was seeing.

While it was often Odin fought against Surtur, and the fire demon would spend his time regaining his strength and power to fight Odin once more, Odin was oddly quiet about the battle this loop. He had to dig long and hard to discover the truth, journeying into the Frost Giant's land to where the blade would be.

Only to find _something_ else and who would be playing Anchor for this loop.

Smashing the ice around looper, he helped her to her hooves.

"I suppose it _is_ true," he said as she glared at him, daring him not to say the words. "Surtur will wield Twilight, the end of the gods."

"Very funny Thor," the purple pony muttered, covering herself with her wings. "I'm surprised that this hasn't happened before."

* * *

>146.5 (Gamerex27)

"Twilight?" Spike asked, as he Awoke. "Nyx? Where is everypony?"

"Down here!"

"Huh?' he asked, looking around. No matter where he looked across the room, he couldn't see anyone.

"I _said_ down here!"

Spike looked down. Slowly, he brought his paw up to his mouth, in an attempt to stop himself from laughing.

"Yeah, yeah, laugh it up," the olive-sized Twilight muttered.

"My _Little_ Pony?" Spike asked, still holding in his laughter.

"C'_mon_, you barking _tree_, didn't you make this joke _already?!_" Twilight groaned, cursing out Yggdrasil. "Okay...looks like everypony is no bigger than a small fruit this Loop. Like a grape. The Princesses are the size of grapefruits."

"So...does that mean...?" Spike asked, his eyes lighting up.

"Yes, we may be able to trap all the villains in hamster balls this time," Twilight confirmed, as she climbed up Spike's body and settled on his shoulder. "Now, my loyal assistant, to the pet store!" she declared.

* * *

>146.6 (Kris Overstreet)

The leaves fell in showers from the trees, aided by of dozens of earth ponies and their stamping hooves.

Pegasi heaved and towed and bundles of heavy clouds full of snow, fresh from Cloudsdale.

And in the town square of Ponyville the Great and Powerful Trixie pattered around her wagon in preparation of a show... a process which, Twilight Sparkle and Rainbow Dash noted, paused every two or three minutes while Trixie took an extended and longing look up at the great pegasus city in the sky.

"I told you you shouldn't have told her what my unAwake self did in baseline," Rainbow Dash grumbled. "Now without Chrysalis Awake, she can't think of anything else. Her tour stops trail along after Cloudsdale, have you noticed that?"

Twilight sighed and nodded. "Do you think we should let her, then?"

"Hey, you told me I didn't cause any permanent damage when I did it," Rainbow Dash shrugged. "So long as there's no explosives in it besides magic, I don't see a problem."

"Okay, then," Twilight nodded. "You go tell her. I'll issue a proclamation delaying the official start of winter for two days.

Celestia should trust me for that long, at least."

While Twilight Sparkle flew off to compose an official princessly edict delaying the solstice on the legal principle Principitrix Crede En Me, Dash circled down to the stage under assembly. "Trixie," she said, "how are you feeling?"

"Oh, Trixie is well enough," the showmare said lightly. "Trixie has conducted herself well. The performance is all, you know... no matter how small... no matter how few attend..."

"That bad, huh?" Rainbow Dash hovered more closely. "We've noticed you're not on your A-game. Twi and I had a talk, and we've decided... you officially have permission to weaponize winter."

"Beg pardon?"

"Oh, come on, don't pretend. We know you want to. You've got until sunup day after tomorrow to deploy your best snow bomb on Ponyville. No chemicals, no nukes, just magic."

Trixie's lip quivered. "But... Trixie doesn't want to be a problem..."

"Look," Dash snapped, getting a little annoyed, "the three of us are the only Loopers here, and Twi and I are giving you a blank check. No consequences, no reprisals, no lectures. Just go get it out of your system already!"

A twinkle appeared in the Great and Powerful Trixie's eyes. She began to tremble, then to quiver, then to bounce like a jumping bean around her little wooden stage. Her rapidly rising squeal of delight blended with an ominous hissing sound apparently coming from her tail. Dash, having experienced this with Pinkie Pie many times before, cleared out of the area.

"WHOOPEE!" With a flash of light and a series of multicolored explosions, Trixie rocketed into the air, the ballistic arc of her flight aimed directly at Cloudsdale's weather factory.

Thirty-six hours later, just before dawn, a large steel-gray ball of concentrated weather magic, complete with guidance fins, the words FAT MAN stenciled on the side, dropped out of a much larger cloud.

It wore a Santa hat.

* * *

>146.7 (Gamerex27, Evilhumor, Dave ID)

"WHAT?!" Ivory Scroll screamed. "That...that...this is so imbalanced!_"

"If ya wanted a balanced game," Applebloom said, smiling, "ya shouldn't've played Chaos!"

"'When you flip this card, lose the game?!'"_ the mayor repeated. "Argh...that's it."

"What's it?" Discord asked, putting some more bits into the pot.

"I'm making an expansion to this," she growled. Snatching the game rules off the table, she put her player token and set of dice back into the box, watched it turn into a bunch of grapes, then snorted. "_Someone_ needs to fix this. I think I'll take my vacation now to figure all this out."

"...Are you even allowed to make expansions to the game?" Sweetie Belle asked Discord.

"It's _Chaos!_" the spirit of entropy said, half-offended. "Of _course_ you can! What fun is a game when you just use the same rules over and over!"

"Or ya just hide some cards in your mane and cheat like hell!" Vinyl grinned.

"Yeah, you can do tha-wait, _what?!_" Discord squeaked. "You'd cheat at my own game?"

"How is it cheating when there are no rules?" Sweetie tilted her head, causing him to sputter in anger.

"It's the spirit of it! It's random to the extreme, and cheating adds a sense of order!"

"I saw you pull a punchcard out of your eyelid." Vinyl pointed out.

"...I _made_ the game!_"

* * *

>"Wadda ya mean I'm _banned_ from playing the game?!" Vinyl shouted at the cottage door, where a pouting Discord was floating. "Well _feh_, I can still play it if I want and I'll do it rig-huh?" she blinked as Ivory hoofed her a scroll as Shining Armor stood next to her. Opening it up and quickly reading it, her jaw dropped to the floor. "You're _suing_ me?!" She squeaked as Shining Armor began to direct her to a more private and secure location.

"That'll show her." Discord smiled as he whipped his tail at Angel, launching the rabbit into the sink.

"And that'll show him, jerk who stole my cookies."

* * *

>146.8 (AnonymousAsk, fractalman)

"_This_ day is going to be perfect... The kind of day I've dreamed since I was small..._" Began Chrysalis when-

*Knock Knock*

The sound of someone knocking on the door surprised her for a moment, after which she smiled, got back in character, and glanced in the mirror one more time.

"Coming!" She shouted as she went to the door with a smile.

As she opened the door she was surprised to see one of the flower fillies in the door-a little white filly to be precise.

"So, what can I do for you?" Asked Chrysalis with her false smile.

"Um, I wanted to ask you a couple of questions for my school paper, the Foal Free Press. Me and my friends decided to interview famous ponies to increase the sales. I know you are very busy but it will be only a couple of minutes," said the filly, looking at the disguised queen.

Chrysalis looked at the filly, considering: she could send the filly to the caves, but then she'd have to find another flower filly, and the disappearance of the bridesmaid and Twilight Sparkle had already begun to raise awkward questions. No sense getting discovered prematurely.

"Please let me in...please..." The little filly looked at the Changeling Queen with puppy eyes until she broke and let her in.
"Wow, these are very cute suits and dresses"

"Um, yes of course..." Answered Chrysalis as she considered simply hypnotizing the filly into leaving her alone.

Chrysalis closed the door and sat down in front of the mirror.

"So, let's begin the interview. The first question is simple: do you like short names? Maybe Chrys, Chryssie, or Chrysti?" asked Sweetie Belle as the Changeling Queen looked surprised.

"Well...I...that's a strange question, but my lovely husband usually calls me Caddy." said Chrysalis as she tried to remain calm.

"Of course. But tell me, Queen Chrysalis, how many children do you have?" Asked Sweetie Belle.

"Chrysalis? I...don't know what you are talking about. Don't tell me that Twilight spread lies about me?" Chrysalis was panicking; it was all she could do to look mostly calm, a trace upset, and a trace confused. Her voice betrayed her, however.

"Oh, don't worry, this interview is actually very secret, only a few ponies read the foal free press anyways." commented Sweetie Belle with a cute, innocent smile.

"Of course, but I don't know where that strange idea came from, you foals sometimes have a too hyperactive imagination" Smiled Chrysalis, laughing nervously, still hoping that the situation could be salvaged.

"Oh, come on Chryssi-can I call you that? OH! I know! I'll reveal my own true form so that you can feel safer!" said Sweetie Belle as she began to glow. Suddenly a pair of wings appeared on her sides.

"Wh...What? An Alicorn! But how?" Asked Chrysalis, all semblance of calm gone.

She tried to think fast. Sure, the alicorn was just a filly, but she needed every scrap of love she could hold in case she had to get into a fight with Celestia or Luna. Not to mention, this filly had known who she was, and didn't seem to think it was a big deal; who knew who else knew!

"So. Let's talk about your plan. I'm assuming you plan to put us all into cocoons, but what then? You realize you'll be discovered, right? Even if you replace everyone, all it takes is for one changeling to slip up, and then you'll be discovered anyways. And how do you plan to control the sun? Do you even know the spell to move it? If you don't move the sun, you'll be discovered for sure."

"Well...I..." stammered Chrysalis as she began to realize that her invasion plan wasn't quite as solid as she'd originally thought.

"Even if you managed to conquer Canterlot, or all of Equestria, there is still the matter of the dragons, the minotaurs, the griffons, the zebras...Equestria has plenty of allies who would be rather perturbed at the idea of being stuck into cocoons. Can you really hold off against all of them? What happens if all the chaos of battle weakens the seal on Discord's prison? It took the Elements of Harmony to beat him last time." continued Sweetie Belle, but the changeling queen was already out cold.

Chrysalis proceeded to dream of her children being trampled by ponies, roasted by dragons, torn apart by griffons, as then spit-roasted by Discord atop a dragon flame. Her nightmare only got worse as Sweetie Belle continued to list off the things that made Equestria a death world.

* * *

>Meanwhile, Twilight was waiting with Rarity and the real Cadence in the reception hall.

"Are you sure it was a good idea to send Sweetie Belle alone to meet Chrysalis?" Said Rarity.

"Don't worry, she's Awake." Said Twilight.

"It's not _her_ I'm worried for."

* * *

>146.9 (fractalman)

Discord chuckled as the purple alicorn approached his throne. "So, a pretty pony princess wants to play? Well, let us play snake!"

He snapped his fingers, and Twilights legs appeared in the air next to him.

They promptly glowed, and started to kick him.

"Hey! Stop that!" exclaimed Discord, before snapping his fingers again, returning the legs to Twilight. "Alright, lesson learned, don't take your legs. Hmâ€|I know, let's play keep away with your horn!"

He was rather perturbed when the horn glowed and floated out of his paw and over to Twilight.

"This is kind of fun" Said Twilight with a smile. "What other games would you like to play?"

Discord glowered. "That does it, I'm turning you into something edible and eating you."

He snapped his fingers, and Twilight turned into a small purple jawbreaker. A small purple jawbreaker that started to giggle. "Oooh, ooh, I know this part! This is the part where I keep my powers as an alicorn, only they're concentrated into a jawbreaker sized package!"

* * *

>When Celestia and Luna arrived with the Elements of Harmony to seal Discord away, what they saw, combined with the chaos magic in the air, made their jaws drop off and land on the ground.

"OW! OW! PLEASE! STOP! I YIELD!" yelled the draconequus as he got the literal stuffing beat out of him by a giggling, flying purple dot.

* * *

>146.10 (Evilhumour)

Cadence sighed, looking at the young, dreamy stallion in practicing his forms over and over again.

"-nd I do not know how to talk to him Aunt Luna," Cadence whined, rolling her head around as said princess Woke up.

Luna blinked and smiled to herself. This was something that she had been desiring to do for quite some time.

"Worry not, dear niece, auntie Lulu has it covered," Cadence head shot upright, worried that her aunt would do something bad if she called herself 'Lulu'.

"It will not be over the top, will it?" She asked with some fear in her voice, to which Luna simply walked over to the young alicorn.

"Trust me, my dear Cadence, we shall be subtle as the night."

* * *

>There was a sudden CRASH as the window above exploded, causing all the cadets to hit grass in fright. Shining Armor blinked as pink and blue object landed in front of him, turning out to be Princess Luna holding a wide eyed Princess Mi Amore Cadenza in her hooves.

"**GREAT AND NOBLE SHINING ARMOR, OUR DEAR NIECE WISHES TO MEET WITH

YOU AS SHE HAS LONG ADMIRERD YOU FROM AFAR!*" Luna shouted without going into the royal canterlot voice _somehow_, with a straight face as the mare in her hooves face became a few shades more pink with her eyes turning into pinpricks. "***AS WE KNOW THAT YOU HARBOUR THE SAME FEELINGS FOR OUR DEAR NIECE, WE FELT IT PRUDENT THAT YOU TWO SHALL MEET FORMALLY.*)" While still holding Cadence, princess Luna tapped Shining Armor's nose with her wing. The stallion in question had his coat turn pink from blushing, his eyes mirroring the mare above him. "***YOU TWO SHALL BEGIN TO COURT EACH OTHER, TAKING THE STEPS SLOWLY. WE ADVISE YOU TWO TO SHARE INFORMAL NAMES AS A FIRST STEP!*)"

There was a dreadful silence as everypony looked at the two young ponies in question with Luna still managing to keep a diplomatic face.

Squeaking, the stallion cadet tried to cast his eyes downwards before the blue wing held his head upright.
"MynameisShiningArmorbutyoucancallmeShiny."

"MynameisMiAmoreCadenzabutyoucancallmeCadence." the young alicorn mare squeaked out in response.

"**HUZZAH! YOU TWO HAVE BEGUN TO TALK!*" Without any warning, Luna dropped her niece to whom the stallion gallantly caught with his person. "***WE HAVE DONE OUR GOOD DEED OF THE DAY!*" With that, Luna flapped her wings, ascending into the sky. "***IF YOU TWO NEED ANY HELP DO NOT HESITATE TO ASK AUNTIE LULU!*" And then faster then Celestia was when cake was involved, she was gone, leaving two very awkward ponies looking at each other.

* * *

>146.11 Haystuck, Part 1

(Bliss Authority)

Your name is TWILIGHT SPARKLE and oh boy, DO YOU LOVE BOOKS.

* Ping the other Loopers.

Good idea. You get a METRIC BALE OF RETURN PINGS, followed by a friend request on the FriendPrank network.

* Consult loop memories.

Oh, son of a birch, this is a fused loop with SBurb, isn't it? You can tell on account of your LOOP MEMORIES insisting that you're part of Celestia's beta test group for a game called SBale.

* Be the Anchor.

Your name is JOHN EGBERT and you are inexplicably a tiny pastel colored horse.

(Alex Prior)

* John: Mental Breakdown.

You gallop in a circle in obvious PANIC. You have never had such a STRANGE and SLIGHTLY FRIGHTENING Loop before, and as such it is only NATURAL for you to exhibit some DISTRESS.

(Archeo Lumiere)

Check Loop Memories ==

Your loop memories tell you that your name is Grinning Twister, and you do a double take as you realize that your name has the same initials as your old Chumhandle. You decide to check what your loop memories called FRIEND PRANK, to see if your friends are also here.

Be the other male. ==

(Alex Prior)

You are suddenly the other male.

Your name is Tenebrous Glasses, this time around. You are for some reason a MALE PEGASUS with an obsession with MUSIC and SUNGLASSES. You live in a CITY made of CLOUDS. You find this situation ODD.

What will you do?

You decide to check your FRIEND PRANK account. Inwardly, you are rather CONFUSED at the mess you find yourself in, but you are such a COOL COLT that you just DON'T REALLY CARE.

ONE (1) FRIEND is online. THREE (3) PRANKSTERS are also online. You decide to contact your friend first.

turntechGodhead [TG] began pestering ghostyTrickster [GT].

TG: john

TG: please tell me you are Awake

TG: this is sorta starting to weird me out a little

GT: dave!

GT: yes i am Awake

GT: now this may seem like a weird question and all

GT: but are you a pastel horse now?

TG: yes i am a gog damn horse

TG: but i am such a cool damn horse like you won't believe

GT: really? ok then this is not just me then

TG: of course it's not just you

TG: what kind of a doofus are you

TG: i bet the whole gog damn world is pastel horses right now

TG: later dipshit

TG: i have music to do turntechGodhead [TG] ceased pestering ghostyTrickster [GT].

GT: wait!

GT: damn

* Be John again.

(Archeo Lumiere)

You are once again Grinning Twister. In your confusion, you decide to check your room for any CLUES to what is going to happen later in the loop. A quick look around your room shows you that you still maintain your passion for TERRIBLE MOVIES, although you also notice that your PIANO is in your room, unlike usual, when it was in your dad's office. You also just realize that your computer was somehow typing both yours and Dave's typing quirks perfectly, despite having A SPEECH-TO-TEXT system. You also observe that there is a circle on today's date on the calendar, with the words SBALE BETA written next to it. This reminds you that along with your fellow Homestuck Loopers, you also have SEVEN OTHER FRIENDS on Friend Prank trustyScribe, adamantJumper, friendlyShaman, revelryDeclarer, rubyBlazer, saltedViridian, and precociousPastry.

* Be one of the girls you've already met face to face.

(Bliss Authority)

Your name is ROSE LALONDE and you are clearly in a very special pastel equine hell.

Your LOOP MEMORIES apparently peg you as the roommate of one MAPLEHOOF, and as a student at CELESTIA'S SCHOOL FOR GIFTED UNICORNS. Apart from these minor details, your ELDRITCH TOMES, VIOLIN and KNITTING SUPPLIES remain intact, although the devil is in the details - you seem to possess several albums by one OCTAVIA PHILHARMONICA MELODIA, and for some reason a POINTY WIZARD HAT WITH SILVER BELLS ON IT.

Also, who are these strange people on your FriendPrank friendlist? Not Egbert, he's strange but not that strange. No, you mean this trustyScribe person of indeterminate gender.

== Be the trustyScribe.

You are now Twilight Sparkle again, and you're looking through your FRIENDS LIST with some dismay when one tentacleTherapist tries to call.

(Bliss Authority)

* Be the party pony.

Pinkie Pie rolled her eyes. "Wow, the text parser thing is obnoxious. Are you done?"

John scratched the back of his head. "Sorry! That kind of happens in my loops."

(Alex Prior)

He peered at the pink pony who had suddenly appeared in his room.

"Are you timey sorta pony around here? It's just that you are doing the same disappearing stuff Dave is doing. Not that I think it's bad or anything," he backpedaled just in case.

He thought for a moment. "Although I should probably warn you about the sudden occasional shifts in perspec-

* You are now Rose again.

The Seer of Light smiled to herself. It seemed the commands were still a thing this Loop; it was the little things that gave her comfort. She decided to contact trustyScribe for now.

tentacleTherapist [TT] began pestering trustyScribe [TS].

TT: Hello?

TT: May I ask for your name, race, and gender?

TT: If it's not too much of an inconvenience, of course.

TS: Oh, hello! I'm Twilight Sparkle, unicorn, and female, in that order. May I ask yours?

TT: I'm Rose. Unicorn, also female. Now that that's out of the way, what do you know of Yggdrasil?

TS: Yggdra- Oh! You're Awake?

TT: Yes, that is correct. I presume I am speaking to a Looper then?

TS: Anchor, actually. Twilight Sparkle, Equestrian Loops. Nice to meet you!

TT: You as well, miss Sparkle. But for now I must leave you. I must verify the status of the rest of my friends.

TT: Goodbye.

tentacleTherapist [TT] ceased pestering trustyScribe [TS].

Rose ended the conversation deep in thought. Equestria, hm? She'd have to see about that. First though - an encounter with Maplehoof would have been inevitable.

* * *

>146.12 (Bliss Authority)

Adagio fought back the urge to laugh. They had it. They had them! One more verse and this entire school would be theirs, and there was nothing the foals could do to stop them -

_ "Voice of silver," _Sonata sang.

It took Adagio a half second to realize she couldn't rhyme with that. It took her another beat to glare at her, and with that, the spell was broken. The students in the open-air auditorium looked back and forth at each other, blinking - actually thinking about the lyrics -

"Sonata," Aria growled, "That wasn't part of the song."

"It was so, look!" Sonata held up a page of sheet music.

Adagio snatched them from her hands, scanned them - then facepalmed. "Sonata," she said, "This says 'from Pinkie, with love' on the bottom."

It was about then that the theremin cut in.

Adagio glared at the group gathered on the hill opposite them - just as the drumroll started.

The speakers on Vinyl's car came to life, and Twilight - grinning from ear to ear - started to sing.

_ "When they come on strong_

_ with a siren song_

_ Who you gonna call?_

_ VERSEBREAKERS!_

_ When a funeral_

_ Becomes funk and soul,_

_ Who you gonna call?_

_ VERSEBREAKERS!"_

Adagio ground her teeth as the theremin solo picked up speed.

Sonata, being Sonata, sang along. _ "I ain't afraid of no song!"_

* * *

>146.13 (Evilhumour)

Twilight smiled to herself, enjoying the nice wintery da-

_ PHAW!_

Shaking herself clean of the snowball that hit the back of her head, she began to look around for the culprit when _PHAW!_

Spinning around, she began to reach for her magic and _PHAW! PHAW!

PHAW!_

"Okay, that's it!" she shouted, pushing herself upright and looking around the empty field she was in. "Where are you!?" she then quickly sent out a blast of magic to cancel out any spells hiding the guilty party only for

_PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!PHAW!_

Screaming in defeat, Twilight quickly teleported herself away.

A few seconds passed by until the ponies began to come to the center of the clearing. The tallest of the four of them looked at the sole stallion among them and dipped her head, her mane dyed to match her coat like the rest of them had done so.

"Report."

"Total success Celestia," the nephew said to his aunt, smirking up a storm. "I don't think Twilight had any clue to what happened."

"If you call freezing my flanks off for this prank a success, then yah, it was perfect." the DJ muttered grumpily.

"Well darling, if you had listened to me before running off, I could have made you something to make it easier for you." the last said with a smile on her face, still unhappy that she had to dye mane white.

"Why I-"

"Ladies," the stallion said, stepping the middle of them, "Before we get into any kind of fight, let's get back home before Twily figures out what happened and nails us."

With nods from all of them, they teleported back to the respective homes at prank well played.

* * *

>Twilight grumbled as she stood on her balcony, trying to enjoy the nice winter night. After being attacked by mysterious snowballs, she had to deal with snow raining from above in a clear day, snowballs attacking her from the lake, and she was sure Pinkie Pie had somehow managed to get an unAwake Derpy to hit every tree branch she was under.

Rubbing her nose and holding the cup of hot chocolate, she looked up at the night sky, the wide moon, the odd cloud above her, the twi-

"Wait, what?" Twilight blinked, staring up at the cloud before realizing one thing. That was no cloud, it was a massive snowball!

_**PHEW!**_

**THUD!**

"GAH!" Twilight shouted, sticking her head and hooves out of the massive snowball, flailing helplessly, spotting the faint outline in the sky of three familiar ponies. "LUNA, NYX SPARKLE, AND CHRYSALIS, ONCE I GET MY HOOVES ON YOU, YOU ARE _SO_ D-"

_**CRACK!**_

"GAH!" Twilight shouted, face down as her balcony could not take weight of the snowball, leaving Twilight fuming in white rage.

* * *

>As the friend looked out from the cafe, they had to ask themselves if they had went too far with their pranks. By the exploding geyser of snow and fire, they were close to saying yes.

* * *

>146.14 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Erâ€| Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Would you mind terribly helping fix up the automatic repair spell on the walls of the Boutique? I'm afraid it'sâ€| not functioning at the moment, so I've had to make some hurried repairs of my own. But as you can see, it's just not the same." Rarity gestured to the crude patches on her walls.

Twilight blinked. "Okayâ€| I'll help, but why do you have an automatic repair spell on your walls?"

"Because this loop, I have an older brother. And he's never quite learned how to use doors. Or he has, but chooses to ignore them." Rarity looked quite put out at this.

"Doorsâ€| oh. Oh no. Please tell me I'm thinking about the wrong stallion."

"I'm afraid not, darling. It'sâ€|"

There was a loud crash as a section of wall fell in, causing Twilight to flinch.

"YEAH! HEY, LITTLE SIS! WHAT'S UP?"

Rarity flinched. "My blood pressure."

"THAT'S TOO BAD! I BET A NICE, DEEP-TISSUE MASSAGE WOULD HELP!"

"Erâ€| no thank you, dear. I'll settle for my usual routine the next time I go to the spa."

"OH WELL. SEE YOU LATER!"

There was another crash, and another hole in the wall as Bulk Biceps, the only pegasus in a family of unicorns, left the building.

Twilight looked at Rarity. "Your next spa session is on me. Right after I replace your boutique with a replica made of adamantium."

"That's not quite what I had in mind, but I suppose it would workâ€¦" She sighed. "At least my little sister this loop isn't nearly as troublesome."

Twilight raised an eyebrow. "From the way you say that, I'm guessing somepony's replacing Sweetie Belle."

"Exactly. In fact, she's staying with me while our parents are on vacation, and I'd like to have this fixed up before she gets home from school."

"Not a problem. So, who is she?"

Rarity told her.

Twilight's eyebrow raised higher. "I see what you mean. And if you don't mind, I'd like to meet her when she gets in."

"Not at all, darling."

"Good. Well, time to get to work."

Several hours later, the Carousel Boutique had been completely redone (even if it looked exactly the same as before, sans the repair patches), and Twilight and Rarity were chatting inside over some tea, when Rarity looked at the clock.

"Well, it's time. She should be back from school any minute now."

Right on cue, there was a knock at the door. "Rarity?"

"Come in, darling."

The door opened, and a small head peeked in. "If you have company, I can go somewhere else."

"It's quite all right, darling, don't be shy."

"Allâ€¦ all right."

With that, Twilight watched in pleasant surprise as a cyan-maned unicorn who was normally an Earth Pony shyly walked in. "Umâ€¦ hello."

The lavender unicorn smiled. "Hello, Coco. It's nice to finally meet you."

Coco Pommel blushed. "Niceâ€¦ nice to meet you too. Andâ€¦ I gottagodomymhomeworkbye!"

Rarity shook her head. "Poor dear's even shyer as a filly than Fluttershy was in baseline. But I do care for her so."

Twilight just smiled and hugged her friend. "I know the feeling."

* * *

>146.15 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"HEY TWILIGHT!"

The lavender unicorn winced. "I'm right here, Rainbow Dash, you don't have to yell."

"I know, but... I'm so excited! My last loop was a really, really fun one."

Twilight smiled at her friend's enthusiasm. "All right, what happened?"

"Well, you know how Photo Finish is my mom some Loops?"

"Yes."

"Well, it happened again this last time. Except this time, I actually shared her interest in photography. And I think I'm gonna keep that skill, because I got some really, really good ones I just have to share. Here, take a look at this!"

Wordlessly, Twilight accepted the photo. Then, as she looked at it, her eyes widened. "Is that..."

"Your tree coming to life and kicking Tirek's plot back to Tartarus? Yep, it is."

Twilight smiled again, wider than before. "Thank you, Rainbow Dash. Thank you."

* * *

>146.16 (RowanEx, few edits from BIOS-Pherecydes, idea from AnonymousAsk)

"Uh... Fluttershy?"

"Yes, Twilight?"

Twilight couldn't help noticing the stripe of red on her friend's otherwise pure pink mane.

"How do you feel about... well, about all of this?" she nervously asked.

Fluttershy looked at Twilight, taking a moment to consider the question. "Well, not much has changed, other than the possibility of ruthless killing, but it's not that bad. I was lucky Spy was Awake too, at least I kept most of who I was."

And to think that Princess Luna recruited the RED Team to get you back... Twilight thought. "So, what are your plans today?"

"Anything that can help remove the less pleasant memories from before I Woke Up..."

"You and me both," Spy added beside her before he faced Big Mac. "Tell me, will Brain Bleach even work for this particular moment?"

"Um... maybe." Big Mac looked at Fluttershy, before heading to get a batch.

The masked human mercenary suddenly shuddered as he remembered one of the things Fluttershy said a few days ago. He did love the times when he and Fluttershy were visiting Teufort, learning her parents this Loop were war veterans, and Soldier's odd secret about cute things. Although "Uh, Spy?" Fluttershy asked, "have you ever wondered why Engineer, or Daddenji as I apparently called him this Loop, was banging his head?"

Right. "Hub-version of this loop's references," was his answer, which sounded bad in his French accent. "Although, let us move. We have unfinished business to do."

* * *

>146.17 (RowanEx)

Twilight Sparkle Woke up on her room reading a book about the history of dancing. She checked her memories and her flank.

"Oh. That makes sense."

* * *

>Vinyl Scratch watched Twilight dance a variety of dances. "It's really, really awkward to see Twilight dancing," she confessed.

"Woohoo! This loop is my favorite!" Twilight shouted as she continued dancing, then she stopped after the CMC entered her studio. "Alright girls, Twilight Time!"

Rainbow Dash looked at Vinyl over a cloud, before staring back at Twilight. "I agree with you."

Still, they couldn't help smile to see Twilight have a dance cutie mark and enjoy the loop as a dance instructor. Although it couldn't get any worse when Tirek came and destroyed her dance studio, the Golden Oaks Studio...

* * *

>Meanwhile, Applebloom Woke up very late into the Loop that OHYGGDRASILNO-!

She then found herself outside Twilight's dance studio which was blazing in flames. Her memories then came along as she noticed the Golden Oak Library and protected it by kicking off any burnt wood that dared to destroy it too. Vinyl Scratch and Rainbow Dash then carried Applebloom to safety.

"What's with this Loop?" Applebloom asked.

"You're Awake this late?" Rainbow Dash questioned back and Applebloom nodded. "Anyways, Twilight's an awesome dance teacher this Loop, and since her studio was her home, and well, you know what happened."

"At least I get to see the Library live for the day," the filly commented.

* * *

>As they evacuated, Twilight had beaten Tirek in a dance contest. The next day, Twilight had to move to the Library because she lost her home that Loop. As awkward as it seemed for a dance instructor, she still enjoyed it.

* * *

>146.18 (Evilhumour)

Twilight sighed, placing a hoof to her face.

"And what we did learn today?"

"...that I should wake up my girlfriend, ask her help to prepare a breakfast for my mother, and-GAH!" The yellow stallion jump backwards as the squirt bottle splashed water in his face as the ebony black mare glared at him.

"Dear, try that again without being an arse," Nyx walked past her mother and looked at her boyfriend. "Apologi-"

"But Nyxie, you were up last night for the other plans, and I wasn't going to wake you up for something as simple as this!" Lemon protested.

"I know, and I thank you for that sweetie," Nyx leaned over and gave him a peck on the cheek before booping his nose. "Now say you're sorry properly." She fluffed her neck out, pointing to Twilight which gained her some giggles from the stallion.

Calming himself, he looked at the purple mare. "I learned today I should be willing to ask for more help, that a recipe is there for a reason and I should not experiment unless I am sure, and I should always keep a fire extinguisher on hoof."

Twilight smiled and nodded her head. "Just one question, Leman, before you and Nyx go for your other plans." She dared a look outside, the giant mother's day cake monster being held back by a very eager and slightly scary Celestia, with Pinkie Pie narrating the whole fight. "You said you were making pancakes this morning. How the buck did you go from pancakes to that?!_"

Lemon blushed as Nyx began to snicker, her boyfriend's inability to cook never ceased to amuse her. "I honestly have no idea how that happened."

Twilight sighed as she waved them off, receiving a hug and a kiss from her daughter and potential son in-law, and began to prepare herself for how the loop would take her tree away in `_this_` time.

* * *

>AN:

146.1: The Book of Derp has only one word. "Run."

>146.2: You now have to handle physics.146.3: Gloop.

>146.4: Dang puns.146.5: Speaking of puns... (I can only assume that helpful but tragically misguided engineers designed everything.)

>146.6: This is known as a "Winterpocalypse".146.7: Chaos is serious business.

>146.8: A free press is the only safeguard against tyranny. But it can be pretty tyrannical itself...146.9: This is called "Using whatever body parts you happen to have".

>146.10: PROBLEM SOLVED!146.11: I have no idea. (Homestuck crossover.)

>146.12: Oh, sheet. (Music.)146.13: White on white, black on black, purple on fire.

>146.14: Caution: well meaning strong goof present.146.15: Revenge!

>146.16: Apparently adoption can bloom on the battlefield... (Team Fortress 2 crossover)146.17: "Danceoff, bro!"

>146.18: Lemon is your stallion for conquering a planet with a squad of men. Cooking? No. (40K crossover)

154. Chapter 154

147.1 (Filraen)

Pinkie Pie was deep in thought. After all this was an important decision, one on which her fate for the rest of the winter hung. Immutable to even the surprisingly catchy tune in the background, blue eyes looked at the two options in front of her.

"Take the muffin, Pinkie!"

On her right there was a freshly baked strawberry muffin cooked with an extra hint of vanilla in the formula, its sweet aroma taunting her nose with the promise of deliciousness.

"No, the cookies are better."

On her left there was a plate of chocolate chip oatmeal cookies. With a quick observation Pinkie decided the cookies had about 25 chips per cookie, which in her experience made the best combined flavor on each bite. After all chocolate chip cookies were more than the sum of cookies and chocolate and that was the magic to its success.

Truly, it was a most important decision. After all, choosing the proper snack was a critical part of a meeting with her friends on the last day of winter.

"Hey, Pinkie! Have you decided yet?" Rainbow Dash shouted from her seat at Sugarcube Corner.

"One more minute!" After deciding on the cookies Pinkie Pie joined her friends at the table.

"What took you so long, sugarcube?" Applejack eventually asked her pink friend after finishing her pastry.

"We couldn't agree and I had to make the deciding vote." Pinkie answered as if it was the most normal thing in the world.

"'We'? But you were alone there."

"No, silly. I was with her." And with that Pinkie Pie raised her hand to point to her right shoulder.

Suddenly something appeared from Pinkie Pie's hair and stood on her shoulder. It was a small figure, a quadruped, apparently with the same kind of hair as Pinkie and no bigger than her hand. "Hi everypony! I'm Pinkie Pie, I'm Big Pinkie's pinkie angel!" The small figure said to the other four humans at the table. "By the way, why you didn't choose the muffin?"

Ignoring how low her human friends' jaws were hanging the human Pinkie Pie grabbed a cookie and gave it to the small figure on her shoulder. "Because I can share these you you, silly."

Silently, Fluttershy was quickly getting over her surprise by being captivated by the adorable image of the little Pinkie eating a cookie too big for her. Had she had a spare thought, however, it would have been about how she hated being seated by the window and being unable to get to the pony Pinkie Pie.

Meanwhile the human Pinkie Pie had grabbed another cookie and put her hand by her left shoulder. "I haven't forgotten you either!"

Another quadruped appeared, this time not was a Pinkie Pie lookalike, much to Rarity's silent relief; the world wasn't ready for two Pinkie Pies, much less three. The newcomer was a black winged unicorn, about the same size as the pony Pinkie Pie, who hovered a bit in place before landing on Pinkie Pie's left shoulder and accepting the cookie. "Thanks, Pinkie." But before she started eating the cookie she turned to address her human audience. "Hello, my name is Nyx. Today I'm Pinkie Pie's... dark angel. Please don't call me devil, I'm not evil thank you very much."

Snapping from the sight and deliberately ignoring the small voice shouting how impossible this all was, even for Pinkie Pie being Pinkie Pie, Applejack looked at the winged unicorn. "You sure you ain't going to cause trouble?"

"Don't worry, Applejack. I'm covering here just because Pinkie Pie asked me" Nyx said while pointing to the other equine before showing her food. "If you want to check for yourself you can always join the dark side. We have cookies."

* * *

>147.2 (RowanEx)

(A Late Mother's Day Tribute)

Twilight entered the library, exhausted from an unusual request Nyx asked. She then noticed something.

One, the library is unusually messy.

Two, there were traces of glue and paper all over the floor, sticking on Twilight's hooves as she walked cautiously.

Three, why did Nyx request a bag of red gems?

Her questions were answered as Nyx poked from the stairs holding a card which she accidentally dropped and somehow flew towards Twilight.

"Nyx, come here please." Nyx gulped as she went closer to Twilight who was reading the card. Twilight then looked at Nyx and pulled her into a hug.

Nyx then pulled out a few of the red gems and with Twilight, they carefully glued the gems into position.

On the card was the words, "Happy Mother's day!" along with a crude drawing of the filly and Twilight together, the gems forming a heart.

* * *

>147.3 (Crisis)

Twilight sat in the rather odd waiting room of the Pie clinic, thinking about why she was doing this.

_"Hey, Twilight? You still having trouble dancing?"_

_"Kinda, why dâ€"_"_

_"Great! Do you want to try and fix that?"_

_"Uh... yâ€"_"_

_"Excellent! My family runs this super-duper-awesomazing clinic this Loop! Be there this time tomorrow and we'll get you all fixed up!"_

On the one hoof, this was Pinkie Pie. Which meant that whatever solution she had in mind likely involved shenanigans Twilight would spend the rest of eternity trying to live down. On the other hoof, she was really curious as to whether or not they'd work despite that.

"The nurse will see you now," Marble Pie, or was it Inkie Pie this Loop? Twilight couldn't remember, announced from the receptionist desk and Twilight stood up and walked through the door the other mare pointed towards.

"EEEEEEEE!" Pinkie's squeal made Twilight's head ring as she closed the door. "You really came! This is gonna be awesome! Now," Pinkie pulled out a clip board from her hair, "according to this you claim an inability to dance, true?"

"Uh, yeah," Twilight gave her friend a level gaze, "you know that alrâ€"_"

"Tut-tut!" Pinkie scolded. "The proper procedures must be observed. Now, when was the last time you tried to dance?"

Twilight sighed. "Three weeks ago at Vinyl's rave. I bruised seventeen ponies before they banned me from the floor."

"Ach!" Pinkie blurted in a bad accent. "A most serious case! I need ze closer look!" Pinkie then drew out what looked like a pair of those cheap x-ray glasses one ordered from the back of a magazine and put them on before staring at Twilight intensely. "Attempt to dance please."

"What, now? I meaâ€"

"Yes, now. I can put on ze music if you like, but I am needing to observe ze movements of your muscles and bones to determine ze cause."

"Ooooookay..." Twilight hesitated before beginning to do her best attempt at dancing, jerking and spasming as usual while Pinkie hummed at regular intervals and took notes while simultaneously dodging Twilight's limbs and peering at her intently.

"Ach!" Pinkie exclaimed eventually, causing Twilight to stop. "Zis is quite serious indeed!"

"What?" Twilight blinked. "Did you actually find out what's wrong wiâ€"

"Your Rumba vertebrae... It is out of alignment!"

"My whaâ€"

"Yes, yes! Quite possibly ze worst case I have ever been seeing! Or not seeing! Dear, dear... Normal chiropractic measures will be insufficient to correct zis... No, I am afraid zis requires... ze surgery!"

"Now wait a minuâ€"

"Twilight," Pinkie dropped her bad accent to stage whisper, loudly, at Twilight, "trust me, the more over the top I play this, the better it works."

Twilight groaned mentally. It was worse than healing with shenanigans. It was healing that ran on shenanigans. But... she still wanted to be able to dance for real. Even if it was just for one Loop. "Alright... I'll agree to the surgery."

"Zen we operate at once! Sign here please..."

Twilight signed the document Pinkie presented to her. The moment she finished the last letter of her full name, Pinkie screamed at the top of her lungs.

"ANASTHETIC!"

"Local or general?" Twilight asked curiously while trying to shake the ringing out of her ears.

"Hold still please," the stoic voice of Maud Pie sounded from behind her.

_ 'Of couâ€" '_

Twilight's mental sigh was cut off by a sharp blow to the head rendering her unconscious.

* * *

>147.4 (Evilhumour)

"Hey Dash, can I ask you something?" Vinyl looked up at the cloud where the rainbow tail was hanging tantalizing in front of her, begging her to bat it around, tug it like a kitty cat or even nom on -

"Uh sure, I guess, but are you Awake Vinyl?" Dash grumbled, shaking Vinyl out of her weird cat like mindset. She had no idea what just happened, and she was a bit worried she was getting a bit too bored.

"I wouldn't be bugging you if I weren't feeling Loopy." Vinyl rolled her eyes, watching the tail swing out of her reach, although if she pounced with her wub ho- "Okay, I seriously need to ask the Big Guy about this!" She muttered to herself, blushing as she shook her head clear.

"What was that Vinyl?" Dash blinked, looking down at her with confusion on her face.

"Uh, nothing at all Rainbow Dash!" she chuckled weakly, blushing as she rubbed the back of her neck. "I was certainly not thinking weird cat thoughts about your tail Rainbow Dash!"

Dash raised an eyebrow at this before backing up slowly. "Okay... what did you come here for?"

Vinyl sighed, kicking the dirt while she removed her glasses. "You know in the loops that we, you me and Flutters, sometimes don't have parents?"

"Yeah..." Dash rubbed the back of her head, looking to the side as the mare brought up this topic. "I do get paired up with that rainbow stallion being my dad from time to time, but if I have to guess you don't get that that often?"

"No..." Vinyl sighed, rolling her eyes before squeezing into herself. "Some of the times I just get one parent, and even then, they're usually not really there for me." Vinyl gulped before squatting low, leaning against a tree. She wasn't aware she had been walking but the solid trunk was good for her. "I mean, they are usually really supportive of me but at times..."

"They're real pieces of work?" Dash asked, looking at her square in the face with a concerned look on her face.

"Yeah," Vinyl nodded her head, trying to look to the side, but Dash's look held her in place. "At that's not even counting the orphanages I've looped in as a little fil-"

"Hey, orphanages are usually bad by narrative causality from the get go, we _all_ know that." Dash pulled her into a hug, smirking a bit. "So let me guess; a slew of bad parents when you were Awake with Octavia not being available for you talk to made you want to chat with someone that deals with fluid parents details?"

"Yeah." Vinyl nodded, leaning into the hug, wiping her tears on the mare's coat. "That _and_ Flutters isn't Awake and Big Mac isn't looping either."

Dash huffed at that, before burying a hoof into the blue mane. "Oh, so I'm your last choice, eh?"

"Gah!" Vinyl protested weakly, trying to break away from noogies. "Stop that!" She giggled, flailing as Dash continued to noogie her.

"Not unless you tell me what the whole deal with my tail is about Vinyl Scratch." Rainbow Dash then stopped and _stared_ at the unicorn pinned under her strong arm and wing.

Vinyl simply gulped at this, knowing that things would be getting awkward fast.

* * *

>147.5 (Evilhumour)

Part Six of One Crazy Week

Twilight groaned as she walked down the path to her home, tired and emotionally aware. It would have been better if she was emotionally drained from everything Chryss and she did but _noooooo_ the changeling decided to do the right thing before sending her off and refill her with _all_ of her borrowed emotions from their tests. She had experienced all of her emotions at once so she was very happy, very angry, very nervous, very calm, very excited, very scared, very bored and almost either _other_ emotion she could think of!

Mostly, she was _very_ frustrated and annoyed at everything, mostly the fact that she had to walk home with the array of different paint still on her coat which would take a _very_ long time to wash out now and she _still_ had this collar around her neck and the cork on her horn. Pulling in her wings, she remembered Chrysalis testing if she had been properly drained of her anger after being told she took hundreds of pictures for blackmail. Luckily for the bug, the test was a complete success as Twilight could not have cared less.

Glaring at the rising sun, and cursing it, she missed the dust up ahead in the street. She did _not_ miss when the familiar wagon pulled up in front of her, with a snickering blue mare that was desperately trying to stick to her lines.

"I, the Great and Powerful Trixie," she snickered, causing Twilight's eyebrow to twitch several times. Blinking, she noticed several ponies leave the back of the wagon who were vaguely familiar to her. "Wish to have a magical duel with the mare known as Twili-" she coughed, hiding back a snort of laughter, with the other ponies biting their lips. "For a seat within Celestia's School for Unicorns!" She shouted, throwing a blind flare in front of her, which reminded Twilight that despite Chrysalis's attempt, there had been some side effects besides the whole overload of emotions at the end. Headaches. And this one was a zero point seven on a Pinkie filled with the super sugar invented by professor Membrane scale level of immediate pain and annoyance.

"Trixie, why the spruce are you bothering me about this?" She groaned, trying to facehoof but her damn collar blocked her. "Can you not talk to Celestia about th-

"BAH!" Trixie shouted, causing Twilight's ears to fold back. "Trixie wish to prove that Trixie deserve this place, and how else can Trixie do it if not by defeating her most prized and trained student in a magical duel? My, the only reason that Trixie can see that her student recently turned alicorn would refuse is," she gasped, playing to the surprised crowd of professors now noticing the purple unicorn they recently saw had wings now. So being an alicorn was ignored when she was covered in paint, wearing a stupid collar and a cork on her horn? "Is nothing more than a fake!"

Growling and grinding her teeth, Twilight tried to deal with sensibly so she could get home and hide the entire day away.
"Trixie..."

"Is completely right, Princess Sparkle," a tall, beautiful mare said walking towards them. She was odd, now that Twilight focused on her. She had only been present on Saturdays if her loop memories were correct, she claimed her umbrella cutie mark was related to weather magic but she could not remember actually seeing it now and- "If you cannot prove you can defeat miss Lulamoon here, then we will have no choice but to expel you from the school, cut off your funding, and have you repay us for your trickery."

"Wait what?!_" Twilight squeaked, her mind still trying to understand what exactly was going on. The mare didn't have that power over her school life, did she? And why did she agree to Trixie's pl-

"That sounds fine to Trixie, Miss Saturday." the blue mare in front of her smiled as she removed her hat and cloak from her person. "On the count of three, Twilight!"

"Wait, I don't-" Twilight sputtered, trying to take control of the situation. The mare Saturday had to have something to do with this fused loop she was in. She needed to-

"Two," Trixie's horn was glowing, forcing Twilight to focus back in front of her.

"Trixie, stop, I can-" She started to back up, unsure if it would be safe to use her magic now or if she had to wait longer.

"One, go!" Trixie shouted as she fired a stunning bolt of magic that caused Twilight's coat to puff out as it made contact.

Twilight was dimly aware as she ran from her friend, that Saturday would be no day for rest for her.

* * *

>147.6 (Scorntex)

Vinyl Scratch Awoke.

That came as something of a relief, as the last thing she remembered was noise, explosions and fire. In her defense, she'd been really drunk at the time, and the last truly conscious thought she had was "here, hold my dri-", and then it all turned into a noisy, fiery blur.

Actually, she still felt kinda drunk-y. Or hungover. Which explained why her eyes hurt so much.

_So, it's gonna be like that, is it, Loop?_

She tried getting up... whichever way up was. Then she became aware of the Purple Blob and the Blue-Purple Blob. Or, as she realised when she focused, Twilight Sparkle and Trixie (who was holding a martini glass... and grinning).

"Vinyl." Twilight said, once she more-or-less solidified (though Vinyl was going to have to ask her to stop swaying so much).

"Frugl." Vinyl responded, not daring to nod, due to the serious alarms from her stomach.

Twilight Sparkle frowned. This wasn't a "quest" thing, was it? Vinyl didn't feel up to quests, unless it was an Aspirin Quest.

"Do you remember what you did, last Loop?" Twilight asked.

Vinyl tried to convey, without saying anything too long or incriminating, that she didn't remember her last Loop at the moment, to say nothing of her Loop Memories (there was a voice that sounded like Octavia somewhere behind the alcohol fuzz, though). Twilight seemed to get the general gist.

"Well, no matter." Twilight sighed. "Because there are those who did."

Vinyl nodded. Well, she tried tilting her head slightly. Her neck really hurt for some reason.

The word "Trixie" came to her attention, and she looked in the general direction of Trixie. "wh s hre?" she managed to get out.

"_Schadenfreude_." Trixie said, far too loud, before sipping her martini glass. "Cheers." She boomed.

"I suppose I could explain..." Twilight said, "But I think this might be more effective."

"This" turned out to be several images, a large amount of which featured Vinyl, alongside several disreputably rich looking people, the sort of rich where they'd lost the ability to wear tasteful clothing, yet somehow managed to make it look _good_. Quite common among these photos were two things: musical instruments, and two words. "_Disaster Area_".

Vinyl looked at the photos, then at Twilight, then back to the pictures.

"Huh." She eventually managed to produce.

"Yes." Twilight hissed. "As it turns out, getting as drunk as you did, and talking Disaster Area into playing the greatest hits of Queen with you is not a good idea, by any metric."

Vinyl blinked. Then she felt a hoof impact against her. It was Trixie, gently patting her.

"Don't feel down. The supernovae were spectacular to watch." She grinned.

Through the lifting haze, Vinyl noted the use of the plural. She felt her jaw drop. Twilight just looked increasingly annoyed.

"Yes. I was _getting to that part_." She stated. Then, she removed something from her pocket. It looked like a slide projector. Vinyl was now just sober enough to feel afraid. She took full advantage of it. Especially once she noticed the door to her room was closed. Suspicion told her it was most likely locked.

"So, we're going to have a private seminar." Twilight said. "It's called _What Vinyl Did Wrong._"

Vinyl felt something nudge against her. She looked down. It was a bottle.

"When the time comes." Trixie hissed, "You'll know what to do with this. _Good luck._"

And with that, the showmare teleported away, leaving Vinyl alone with Twilight, and her slideshow. And the bottle.

* * *

>147.7 (Evilhumour)

Twilight blinked as she tried to say something with nothing coming out of her mouth. Tilting her head, she tried to access her loop memories when Pinkie Pie bounced over.

The purple pony tried again to say something when Pinkie Pie flapped her gums in her usual rapid fashion, before holding up a large card with fancy writing on it.

_'Twilight, you know how we are sometimes a cartoon in the hub word?'_

Twilight tried to yes before remembering that there was no sound. She then blinked and facehooved.

She opened her mouth, spoke before taking the card into her own hooves.

_ 'It's one of_ those _loop variants, isn't it Pinkie?' _

Pinkie Pie nodded her head before bouncing away, with a grin on her face.

* * *

>147.8 (Evilhumour)

"-and while I am very pleased with your work, my faithful student, I have an important task for you this upcoming summer sun celebration." Spike read the letter as he Woke up. "I wish you stay at the palace and pay more attention to your studies?" Spike blinked and pulled back at the latter to reread it, letting his loop memories kick in-Oh _tree sap_!

Sighing, he left the empty room to find the party queen and hopefully get Twilight back to the palace before Celestia caught her breaking her curfew _again_. That, and hopefully get some blackmail material with Twilight 'The Rave Queen' Sparkle dancing up a storm.

* * *

>147.9 (Evilhumour)

"Gilda?"

"Yes Dashie?"

"We agree to _never_ speak of this again?" the pegasus looked at the griffon behind her.

"Agreed." Gilda nodded her head, walking alongside her friend, spitting out multicoloured hair from her mouth. "So how are you going to explain your tail to Rarity? She'll _flip_ if she sees it all short like if you cut it and the bite mark would be kinda obvious if you leave it as is."

"Gilda, once we agree to never to talk about you pouncing my tail and nomming on it, you do not talk about two seconds later!" Dash shouted, turning her blue coat red.

* * *

>147.10 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Celestia thought she had appeased the Pink Cultist. She had even had her birthday party, which Pinkie had baked the cake for. It was Luna who had scared one of her cult preachers in the street, and Luna had apologized for it profusely. Why and how did this happen? Not the countless clones of Pinkie that surrounded her tower, that was easily explained by the mirror pool. No, why were the all Alicorns? Her eyes traveled around the room, noting that abnormally wide grin and the presence of horns and wings.

She picked herself off the center of the floor, where she had curled up into a ball, shivered in fear and wished they'd all go away. Her horn glowed as an ink well, feather and paper floated over. Twilight would know. This called for another letter.

* * *

>Dear Twilight Sparkle,

**Am I dreaming? Have I died and gone to Tartarus? Is this a new level the architects have designed and implemented, the Pink Level of Hell? Surely you would know why I am sitting in the middle of my tower with my windows and doors locked, surrounded by dozens of Alicorn Pinkie Pies. Have you been sneaking in to Canterlot's Star Swirl Wing again? Did she throw a Mega Ultra Deluxe Super Duper Massive Party? I know that was her life goal, but she Pinkie Promised to warn me before she did, so why am I surrounded by ascended Pinkie Pies? **

**Please tell me this is all a dream or that last evening was even more exciting than Zecora told me. Tell Pinkie she's not allowed to use the Mirror Pool ever again, with or without wings. And if this is all a dream or hallucination, tell her anyway. I can only fear what torment Luna is experiencing with so many Pinkies around.**

**Princess Celestia**

Twilight turned to Pinkie, who looked a bit put out, "Might have gone overboard in my prank."

Twilight didn't say anything as she pulled out volume 3 of Things Pinkie is No Longer Allowed to Do in the Time Loops and thumbed it to chapter 5, regarding the Mirror Pool. She pointed a hoof at the top which read, _'When using the Mirror Pool, never combine ascension and clones. It never ends well.'_

* * *

>147.11 (Gamerex27)

"THE NIGHT! WILL LAST! FOR-"

"_What_ do you think you're doing?"

Nightmare Moon paused mid-gloat, and looked around, furious. "Who _dares_ interrupt me?"

"No, _you_ interrupted _me_!" said a mare as she walked out from backstage. Who looked _exactly_ like Nightmare Moon. From the armor to the Cutie Mark to the reptilian eyes to even the few stars in her ethereal mane clustered a bit too closely together, in the way some strands of hair would be out of place on somepony's mane. "I have no idea who _you_ are! I'M Nightmare Moon! _I_ will be the one to bring Eternal Night, not _you_, _impostor_!"

"You...you dare!" Nightmare Moon sputtered, her composure momentarily lost. "_I_ am Nightmare Moon!"

"No, I am." the other alicorn said, as her eyes narrowed. "Do you see _this_?" she said, pulling a mirror from backstage and shoving it in front of her. "Your mane is off! My mane-the mane of _the true_ Nightmare Moon-is black with white stars! Yours is _blue_ with white stars! Such an obvious pretender!"

"You foal!" the first dark alicorn hissed. "Who are you to decide what ou-my_ true mane color is!"

"Neither of you have the right to decide that! Because _I am Nightmare Moon!_"

The crowd, frozen in a mixture of awe and confusion, gasped as a third Nightmare Moon touched down on stage, this one having a tail several inches higher on her backside than the other two.

"What is-who are-no!_" the first Nightmare Moon ranted. "You must be illusions sent by my _beloved_ _sister_ to discredit my rule!"

"_You're_ the illusion!" the second mad Luna shouted, shoving herself into the first Nightmare's personal bubble and right into her face.

"I have _no idea_ who the two of you think you are," bellowed the third Nightmare, "but _I_ am the true Nightmare Moon! If you don't get out of my sight in the next five seconds, I will trap you in the sun right alongside Celestia!"

"You should make room for three, then," said a fourth Nightmare Moon (this one with a shorter horn) as she materialized on the stage in a burst of dark magic. "Because you are _clearly_ all impostors! _I_ am Nightmare Moon!"

"WHAT THE HAY IS-ENOUGH!_" the first Nightmare Moon screamed in the Royal Canterlot Voice. "Your lives are forfeit! You will all die here, never to witness my glorious night for your crimes!"

"It's _too bad_, then, that _you_ must die, too," said a _fifth_ Nightmare Moon as she climbed up on stage, apparently having hidden in the stunned crowd for several minutes, glaring at them with eyes a _tad_ closer together than her counterparts. "Because _I am Nightmare Moon!_"

"No, _I_ am!" screamed the second.

"Foals! Clearly, I am the _true_ Nightmare Moon!"

"What nonsense you all spew! Clearly, _I_ am Nightmare Moon!" the second yelled. "Do you not _see_ this polished armor and _obviously_ correct_ mane?"

"This is all a load of road apples!" screeched a _sixth_ Nightmare Moon as she walked onto the stage from the back of the theater. "You are all _liars_! Ah'm-er, _I_ am the true Nightmare Moon!"

"AAAAAAAARGH!" the first Nightmare Moon screamed, falling onto her haunches and clutching at her aching head with her forehooves. "_WHAT THE BUCK IS GOING ON?!_"

"Heeeey, everynightmare calm down!"

As one, the Nightmare Moons cut off their arguments and glared at the small pink pony who had stopped their debate.

"Now, I'm not totally sure what's going on," Pinkie Pie said cautiously, "but clearly there's only one way to figure out who the real Princess Luna is!"

"...and your method is..." the fourth asked.

"A NIGHTMARE MOON TRIVIA GAME!" Reaching into her mane, Pinkie pulled out a scoreboard, a large table, and five alicorn-sized chairs. "Whoever answers the most questions about Nightmare Moon's life, routine, body, brand of mane conditioner she uses, and all that other stuff will be crowned the real Nightmare Moon!"

"That makes no sense!" yelled the fifth Nightmare.

"Do you have a better option?" the third asked her. "Even though you are all obviously impostors, we are evenly matched in terms of strength. It is fitting that the true ruler of Equestria shall be determined by wits rather than looks."

"...fine," pouted the first Nightmare Moon as she sat down. "Let's get this farce over with."

As they sat down, nopony noticed two of the Nightmares locked eyes, and one mouthed a set of words to the others.

And even if they could read lips, they would have had no idea what "Best. Prank. Ever,"    would mean in this context.

* * *

>147.12 (Evilhumour)

Vinyl grinned to herself, banging her head as she played her wubs in the club, thrilling the crowd. It was good to get back to the basics, remind herself that was not only Vinyl Scratch, the best musical pony out there, the wub queen, the Looper Whose Own Awakening Had Been Dubstep, but DJ-PON3, the best DJ in all of Equs-

"THERE SHE IS!" A voice shouted out, causing the crowd to stop dancing and stare at the Captain of the Royal Guards run into the crowded room with other Day Guard unicorns running beside him. Before Vinyl could even react, she was in Shiny's pink shield bubble as the guards around him began to issue command to the crowd. Shaking her head, Vinyl tried to look at the furious Shining Armor but she tripped over her own hooves and landed splayed out on her belly as Shining Armor carried her out of the club she Woke up in and into the wide carriage, already being lifted into the air by bat ponies.

"Hey Shinny, what gives? You Awake over there? You know you don't go taking away mares to unknown places, right?" Vinyl tried to push herself upright when Shining gave her bubble a spin that made her land on her back. "Oooph!" Grunting, Vinyl rolled herself to a normalized position and glared at the stallion in the moving carriage. "You know, I wasn't going to tell Caddy about this impromptu abduction but if you do that again, I'll sw-"

"Vanilla, you promised not to say anything about that!" Shining Armor blushed, looking to the side.

"Vanilla?" Vinyl blinked, sending out a Ping, and only getting a faint one in return. Shining showed no reaction.

"Sorry, _Vinyl_," Shining rolled his eyes, shaking his head. "I forgot you don't like the name your _mom_ gave you."

"My mom?" Vinyl blinked again, trying to get her loop memories quicker, as the carriage stopped moving.

"Yes dear," Celestia poked her head into the carriage. "Vanilla Scraffington Solaris, you have such a _beautiful_ name," Celestia said while pressing her hooves into her cheeks. "Now while I do not mind you going out to practice your special talent, you _do_ know that I would prefer if you had somepony with you to make sure nothing goes wrong."

"_Mom._" Vinyl said reflexively, blushing and looking to the side before the Princess pulled her head back to face her.

"Now now, a princess does not pout, and girls that sneak out past their bedtimes are grounded for a week." With a smile, Celestia bopped her nose.

"But _mom!_" Vinyl protested louder only for Celestia to hold her mouth shut with her golden magic aura.

"Now now, none of that." Celestia shook her head, wrapping a wing around the DJ. "Now come with me, I'll take you back to your room as our dear friend here would like to visit your cousin again."

"_PRINCESS!_" Shining squeaked, looking at the ruler with a low hanging jaw.

"And can you two make sure you soundproof your room?" Vinyl shuddered as Celestia began to direct her out of the hanger and into the castle proper. "Hearing you two play your little games is _not_ something I want to hear when I'm trying to go to sleep!"

Shining simply turned a rosy red, blushing from horn to hoof as the two princesses left the room. As soon as they were out of earshot, Celestia gave her a look with a raised eyebrow.

"So dear, when are you going to stop making fun of them playing Candyland together?" Celestia whispered downwards.

"Once it stops being so funny to see him trying to tell his guards that they're just playing a board game and nothing else." Vinyl grinned, her bright red eyes catching Celestia's pink ones.

"_That's_ my girl." Celestia chirped out, puffing her chest out in pride as they turned down the private wing of the castle, laughing loudly together.

* * *

>147.13 (Idea by AnonymousAsk, Rewrite and cleaning by BIOS-Pherecydes)

It was another normal day in Ponyville and Nyx was helping Twilight dust and re-order the Library's shelves.

"Mommy, can I...?" Nyx began to ask, but was immediately cut off by Twilight.

"No!"

"But..." Nyx began again.

"No!" Twilight repeated.

"You don't even know what I was going to ask!" Nyx protested.

"The same thing you asked this morning, and yesterday and at every available moment all last week. No Nyx, I know you want one, but you cannot have Sebastian as a pet." Twilight said sternly.

"But why not? I will train him, and feed him, and go walking with him and..." Nyx pleaded, but Twilight stopped her again.

"First of all, how are you going to train a Manticore?" she asked.

"D'uh, I'm a powerful filly alicorn and the reincarnation of Nightmare Moon, not to mention your daughter. Plus if I have any problem the crusaders could help me." Nyx replied confidently.

"Of course they could." Twilight answered with a sigh. She could hear it already. _'Cutie Mark Crusader Manticore Trainers Yay'_

"But I think you're forgetting we live in the middle of Ponyville? This is not a good place to try training a manticore as a pet, what if something were to happen?" Twilight questioned.

"But... But... Fluttershy has Angel and he's way more dangerous." Nyx retorted, trying to convince Twilight despite her mother's reasoning.

"But Fluttershy is an expert in animals and Angel Bunny is not as dangerous as a Manticore." argued Twilight.

"Do you really think anything is more dangerous than Angel Bunny?" Nyx asked in disbelief.

"I... Okay, point taken... But a Manticore is still not a good pet. You're just a filly, what if there's a problem?" Twilight asked.

"Im not _just_ a fiily, I'm the reincarnation of Nightmare Moon... and we have a problem almost every week, how much worse could having a pet make things? Please Mommy, pretty please?" Nyx begged Twilight with puppy eyes.

"Sorry Nyx, That's not going to work on me, I'm already immune. If you want a pet, just ask Fluttershy for one, but don't disturb Sebastian or any other beast from the Everfree." Twilight stated, putting her hoof down once and for all.

"So... If it's in Fluttershy cottage and I ask Fluttershy you will let me get one pet? Thanks mommy, I love you!" Nyx said quickly as she ran out the door.

"A NORMAL PET!" Twilight shouted after her daughter's retreating figure.

* * *

>147.14 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

**The Unsung Loops: Celestia's Cake****

Luna felt just slightly bad doing this, but it was just too much fun. The Lunar Diarch had commissioned a single hallway in the castle with a podium at the end and an observation station warded with notice me not charms to avoid detection by the research subject. From there, she could put a wall, blocking access to the podium. She had tried glass, cardboard, plywood, and now she was on steel. She placed the catalyst on top of the podium, removed the cover and slid the steel blockade into place. Finally, she hid inside the observation station and waited.

She didn't have to wait long as the door to the hallway was gripped in a white magical aura and torn off its hinges. A familiar White Alicorn galloped right through the steel barrier, destroying it as if it were tissue paper, and gripped the catalyst in her mouth. She looked both ways, and trotted off to eat her cake in peace.

All the while, Luna was giggling quietly in the observation station.

* * *

>During Discord's release, Luna waited with a box that supposedly held the Elements of Harmony. "Tsk, Tsk, not as good with your hide and seek anymore, are you my dear Luna?"

The box vanished from Luna's hooves, leaving her with a bouquet of fish on her back. Luna closed her eyes and watched the already scrambled scrying spell she had placed on the box:

_Discord gripped the box and flipped it open, revealing a full on Cheese cake. Since Luna was never much of a prankster, Discord held the cake for several seconds, scanning it to figure out the cake's secret. Only for a familiar White Alicorn to land a few feet away, grip Discord in her Telekinesis and fling him all the way to the moon. She trotted up to the cake, gave a look one way, then the other, and walked away to a private place to eat it in peace._

* * *

>Luna watched with morbid curiosity as a changeling landed on the wedding cake and splattered it to pieces. The Diarch shook her head, "Oh, you shouldn't have done that."

She looked to her fallen sister and shouted in the Royal Canterlot Voice, **"TIA, THEY'RE STEALING THE CAKE! THE CHANGELINGS WERE THE ONES STEALING YOUR CAKES THIS WHOLE TIME! CHRYSALIS EVEN ADMITTED TO IT!"****

Celestia's eyes opened, fire burning in her eyes as the power of cake empowered her to stand once again. When her eyes landed on the ruined wedding cake, a great cry rang out throughout Equestria, expelling the invaders and sending them all the way back to the badlands.

* * *

>(Eons of Loops later)

Celestia covered her face in embarrassment as Luna and the other loopers laughed uproariously. Applebloom had set up her memory to video device she used to show DT previous loops, and Luna had commissioned the mechanically inclined pony to build a movie theater in Ponyville for a "movie night."

Trixie raised a hoof, "Trixie asks, can you compile several memories together along with a musical number?"

Applebloom asked, "What did you have in mind?"

Trixie looked at her hooves, "Oh, just all of Golden Oak's more spectacular destructions played to the 1812 Overture."

Rainbow and Pinkie raised their hooves too, "Could we have one?"

Twilight facehooved, "My friends, everypony."

* * *

>147.15 (Idea by AnonymousAsk, Rewrite and cleaning by BIOS-Pherecydes)

It was a week after Shining Armor and Cadence's wedding, and Twilight was talking with Celestia when suddenly the doors of the throne room opened and Chrysalis appeared.

"I have had enough Celestia, I demand you stop with your anti-Changeling spell and the hunting of my hive!" Shouted Chrysalis, surprising Celestia and Twilight.

"Chrysalis? After what you did at the wedding, you have the nerve to appear in front of me now and attempt to give me orders?" Celestia stated in outrage.

"Yes, I demand equality, I and my children deserve to be treated like any other pony!" Chrysalis shouted back with equal offense.

"That is what you want? After what you did at my niece's wedding? What of your crimes, are you prepared to face the consequences of your actions?" Asked Celestia, only to be surprised as the changeling queen nodded acceptance.

"Of course, if you will stop hunting my children you may scold me as much as you wish." Chrysalis responded, staring into Celestia's confused gaze.

"Scold? For your crimes you and the other changelings will be imprisoned in the Canterlot Jails." Celestia retorted.

"Jail? Ha! On what charges?" Asked Chrysalis

"Umm... We can start with your mind control of my brother and the flower girls." Twilight responded, having finally recovered her wits from the unexpected entrance.

"An offense which is punishable by a scolding, which you can begin" Chrysalis responded calmly.

"What? No! Such a crime is punishable by imprisonment." Celestia corrected.

"That's incorrect. Need I remind you Celestia of the incident involving your student? Does the name Smarty Pants mean anything to you? Your student brainwashed almost half of Ponyville! Your punishment was telling her it was wrong. If you were to punish me with jail time, you would also have to do the same with her." Chrysalis countered.

Celestia felt as if she had been struck.

"Uh...Yes well, What about your attempted invasion and the chaos you caused? My little ponies even now still have nightmares about the events of that day." Celestia said.

"Three words Celestia... Grand Galloping Gala." Chrysalis replied in a deadpan tone.

Again, Celestia felt as though she had been hit.

"Well... Err..." Celestia began hesitantly.

"What about kidnapping Cadence and trapping Celestia in a pod? Attacking the royal family." Twilight accused confidently.

"Meh, your friend Rarity also attacked a member of the royal family, and when she told Celestia she just laughed." Chrysalis commented uncaringly.

"But that... That is..." Twilight spluttered angrily, before Celestia interrupted her.

"Enough Twilight... She come here to be punished, and she is going to be punished, now leave us alone." Celestia said firmly. Unhappily, Twilight nodded and exited the room.

As the doors closed leaving Chrysalis and Celestia alone they both turned to look at one another, before breaking out into laughter.

"Sometimes is good to see that face on Twilight. I was surprised by your entrance, why didn't you tell me that you were Awake?" Celestia asked after she recovered.

"I wanted it to be a surprise, also this way I could see Twilight's surprised face when she lost." Chrysalis answered with a smile.

"You know that it is only because we have a Stealth Anchor and she isn't Awake this loop that you won, right?" Celestia asked.

"Maybe... I had a few comments about Nightmare Night and King Sombra as well, but I didn't want to give her spoilers." Chrysalis replied.

"I see... Well... Twilight is waiting while I 'scold' you, so what do you want to do for the next hour?" Celestia asked curiously.

Chrysalis pretended to think about that for a moment before smirking. "Think about how to prank Twilight?" she suggested.

"Think about how to prank Twilight." Celestia agreed with a matching smirk.

* * *

>147.16 (Alex Prior)

"THE LIGHT WILL LAST FOREVER!"

Twilight yawned at the latest Celestia mock-up. So far, her mentor had been possessed fifteen times. THAT. DAY.

Celestia going Nightmare had lost its novelty rather quickly. The first time it had happened, she'd blasted her with the Elements rather quickly. The second time she'd shrugged it off as readjustment issues and given her counseling. Third time she'd been a bit worried. It wasn't until the seventh time that she'd realized it as the Loop quirk it was. She was rather embarrassed at her slow reaction. Oh well.

"Are you even listening, you moonlover?"

Twilight groaned. "You're decaying. Do knock it off, will you? This is getting ridiculous."

The flaming mare puffed herself up. "You dare?!"

Twilight nodded. Yep. She dared all right.

"I will burn off all your coat," threatened Celestia.

"That's nice."

"I will use you as a pillow."

"Nice to hear."

"I will send all your bananas to the moon."

"Good to know."

"...Your brother's pregnant."

"I'll send him a card."

"...can I go surfing?"

"Sure."

"Thanks!"

The gleaming mare shed her armor and took off to the sun. Twilight shook herself out of her stupor.

"Wait, what?"

She growled. "That... Sunbutt was Awake the whole time, wasn't she?"

Twilight started pacing. "If she wanted to go surfing, she should have just ASKED, but noooo, she has to go Nightmare every. Fifteen. Minutes. Every. SINGLE. DAMN. DAY!"

She threw her hooves sunwards.

"CEEELEEEEEESSTIIIIIAAAAAAAA!"

* * *

>147.17 (Masterweaver)

Ellen Ripley looked at the strange, flippered form writhing out of her crewmate's chest. "...What?"

The green creature shrugged. "Yeah, this is new to me." She glanced at the face of the woman she was crawling out of. "Oh come on!"

"Ah... do you and Lyra know each other?" Ripley managed.

"Yeah. We're the same person." The creature sighed. "Long story..."

* * *

>147.18 (Gamerex27, Masterweaver)

Twilight Sparkle Awoke. As did Spikelight, Applespark, Rainbow Sparkle, Sparkle Pie, Fluttersparkle, Twilight Rarity, Princess Sparkle, Princess Twilight, Derpy Sparkle, Bluesparkle, Twilight Bunny, Sunset Sparkle, Lemon Sparkle, and many, many more.

Slowly, every single pony in Ponyville left their houses and stared at one another.

"Remind me to yell at Mikasa sometime," muttered Rainbow Sparkle.

"It's not her fault that this glitch popping up," Fluttersparkle pointed out. "It's just named after her."

"Sooo...now what do we do this Loop?" Sparkle Pie asked. "I mean, from what I can tell, everypony in Ponyville is us. I-we-whatever have had Lonely Loops before, but never like this."

"Run experiments?" Twilight Sparkle Prime suggested. "I mean, we've got five years to work with this, and these circumstances can't really be duplicated. Anyone have any ideas?"

* * *

>Dear Princess Twilight:

_Today I learned that it's surprisingly easy to play pranks on yourself when there's more than one of you. Just because you have similar ways of thinking, doesn't mean that you always know what you're going to do to yourself. This is actually helping me to understand my own thought process a lot better, so I can get to know myself on a whole new level! Sometimes, an outside perspective can really help with this kind of stuff._

_Your faithful double,_

_Twilight Sparkle._

Response:

_Look, you don't have to be so formal with me. Pine's sake, I AM you! And we'll get all the memories of all ourselves merged together at the end of the Loop, so I'll-we'll-know this either way!_

_Also, I don't think the replacements extend beyond Ponyville and Canterlot, nor do I know how this all happened before we all Awoke. I'm getting rumors from the Twilight Guard that some other places think I'm a cult leader inducting other ponies into the Cult of Twilight. That doesn't really make sense, since there's no shapeshifting or mind altering affect on the town itself._

_Also, please ask Luna Twilight-or Princess Sparkle, whatever-to put the moon back into its normal orbit. It's not supposed to be a hoofball, even if she did shrink it down to use in a game._

_Signed,_

_Yourself._

* * *

>Sparkle Pie galloped into the library. "Prime, we've got a breakdown in progress, Sugarcube corner."

"Right." Twilight Prime saddled her bags. "What's the issue?"

"Cupcake Sparkle just found out she's pregnant."

Twilight Prime blinked. Then she blinked again. "...right, the... twins, and, and Twilight Cake was her husband pre-awake. Yeah, I can see how that would be an issue." She galloped out the door.

* * *

>Tirek came to Ponyville expecting an easy feast, from the banquet of stupid, weak ponies.

He did not expect an entire town filled with countless copies of one angry alicorn, all of them pointing their horns at him and blazing menacingly with magic.

Naturally, Tirek did the only thing he could do in that situation.

He screamed like a little filly, turned tail, and ran all the way back to Tartarus, locking the door behind him.

* * *

>147.19 (Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Well," said the sorting hat, "this is... unprecedented."

The miscellaneous Lyra smiled as she summoned an extra chair at the mental round table between Sweetroll and Human. "That's just because you're not looping. I'm sure some other DIOD people have been to Hogwarts before."

"Mmmm, perhaps. But it does put me in a bit of a conundrum." The hat accepted the seat with a grateful nod. "I could, I suppose, sort you individually, but that would be confusing to outside observers. Or I could sort you all at once, but that wouldn't be entirely fair..."

"Ooo! Wait! Wait, wait!" Seapony bounced up and down in her chair. "So, I'm Griffyndor, right? And Misc over there can be Ravenclaw, mad scientist-"

"And you know, as a human-conspiracy theorist, I've obviously got the ambition and cunning to be Slytherin." Unicorn Lyra ran a hoof through her mane. "Matches my coat too."

Human Lyra frowned. "Hey, wait, does that mean I'm Hufflepuff?"

"You are pretty hardworking compared to the rest of us," Sweetroll pointed out.

"That's because I don't live in a magical world!"

"Alright, so you're a squib and I'm a Hufflepuff!"

"HEY!"

The sorting hat cleared its throat. "Nevertheless, the point is made. You could all fit into separate houses-"

"And that's exactly what we're going to do," Miscellaneous Lyra said with conviction. "You are going to sort us into all four houses at once." She grinned broadly. "It'll be a great prank!"

The sorting hat sighed. "Well... you are fairly unique. I suppose I can go with that..."

* * *

>"Gryffindor! Hufflepuff! Ravenclaw! Slytherin!"

"Oh, are these all the houses I am in?"

"Slytherin! Ravenclaw! Hufflepuff! Gryffindor!"

"I'll do my best to honor all four!"

* * *

>Luna and Lyra stared at each other in silence.

Ron coughed. "Ah... what are they doing?"

Hermione palmed her face with a sigh. "Telepathic conference. That's eleven personalities talking to each other at once."

"...Right, I'm making a runner. If anybody asks, Sirius kidnapped me."

"He hasn't escaped yet Ron."

"Bugger."

* * *

>"And how did you get sorted into all four houses, young lady?"

"Oh, I'm actually five people."

Cornelius Fudge sputtered. "Five-Five people? That's preposterous! No one person can be five people, and there are only four houses anyway!"

Lyra grinned broadly. "Well, one of us is a squib. The rest of us are magical though, pureblood, halfblood, muggleborn, and another muggleborn."

Her grin broadened as the minister continued his sputtering. She couldn't resist Veritaserum, but she could send it straight to her pocket from her tongue, a skill she'd developed that one time Bonbon was a mad scientist.

* * *

>"Miss Heartstrings," Dolores Umbridge said, "you will write down 'I do NOT have multiple identities' onto the parchment 500 times...wait, what is that?"

* * *

>Harry heard the explosion and face-palmed.

"Seapony Lyra?" Ron asked him.

"In the same room as Umbridge," Harry replied. "Really, anyone who goes up against a Seapony without expecting overkill deserve no sympathy at all."

* * *

>Bellatrix sneered as the girl fell, green smoke rising from her chest. Voldemort would be quite pleased to know that another of Potter's scumblood allies had fallen-

"NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!" The girl sat up, glaring as tears poured from her eyes. "YOU BASTARD! YOU KILLED SWEETROLL!"

The death eater had a moment of shocked confusion before the witch was on her again.

Hermione coughed. "Wouldn't the Sweetroll personality return next loop?"

Lyra blinked. "Oh. Oh yeah, that's right!" She shrugged, absentmindedly delivering a high-kick to Bellatrix's chin. "Still pretty traumatic though."

The other young witch held up a finger, paused, then shrugged. "I'm not going to question it."

* * *

>AN:147.1: Shoulder alicorn?
>147.2: For me it's kind of "early", I'm a Brit.147.3: Toon surgery.
>147.4: Twitcha twitch.147.5: Continued havoc.
>147.6: If Trixie approves, then you may have overdone it.
(Hitchiker's Guide cross)147.7: *piano music*
>147.8: That's one strange variant.147.9: Catlike reactions.

>147.10: It's a long series.147.11: The tried and true method.

>147.12: Miss Interpretation.147.13: This is my... normal pet. He is called... Mann t. Core.
>147.14: Movie Loop.147.15: Royalpolitik.
>147.16: Nag for victory.147.17: Ew. (Aliens cross)
>147.18: It's all sparkles all the time!147.19: Best of all four worlds. (Potterverse cross.)

155. Chapter 155

148.1 (Masterweaver)

Vinyl cleared her throat. "Hey there Dash."

"Hey Scratch." Rainbow leaned on a post. "Wassup?"

"I was kinda wondering why there's caution tape around the library." Vinyl waved a hoof at the yellow border. "I mean the Summer Sun Celebration hasn't even started yet."

The pegasus blinked for a few moments, before dragging her hoof down her face. "Riiiiiiight. I forgot you're a younger looper. Okay, so... you know how Equestria is all sunshine and rainbows compared to other loops?"

Vinyl shrugged. "Sure, I can dig it."

"So what do you think would happen if, say, a nonlooping version of Pinkie Pie was dropped into ultra-grimdark-gorefest three thousand?"

"She'd snap like a twig and become a megadeath mistress of balloon strangulation," Vinyl replied without hesitation.

"Yeah. Us loopers, we're a lot harder to shake, but..." Rainbow shrugged. "Sometimes we just get stuck in loops that are plain _wrong._ Not harmful, mind you, just so opposite us that it... What I'm saying is Twilight's in a really delicate mindset right now, saw some twisted things, and we're working her back to sanity." She gestured at the tape. "So no books for now."

"Huh, okay." Vinyl rolled her eyes. "I mean, her daughter's dating the anchor of that ultradark loop, I'd of thought she'd gotten thicker skin, but... whatever. What loop was it, anyway?"

"Addams Family. Like, original comics Addams Family." Rainbow Dash shivered. "It would be so much easier if they were just _evil..._"

* * *

>148.2 (Masterweaver)

"Nnnnnnnnnrrnnrrnnrgh." Rainbow glowered at the pegasi milling about the cloud confusedly. "ALRIGHT! HER NAME is Clear Skies, HIS NAME is Open Skies, and if I hear any more of this Who's On First routine I am going to just straight up dock your pay!"

"But-"

"No buts!" _Every_ loop, every loop she had to deal with this. Why were pony names so prophetic?

* * *

>148.3 (Masterweaver)

"Oh, my beloved subjects," chuckled the dark alicorn, "It's been so long since I've seen your precious, little sun-loving faces."

Rainbow Dash snarled. "What did you do with our Princess?!" She tried to dart up to the stage, but was held back by Applejack gripping her tail with a roll of her eyes.

"Why, am I not royal enough for you?" the armored pony asked. "Don't you know who I am?"

"I know who you are!" Twilight shouted.

The alicorn smiled at her.

Twilight smiled back.

The alicorn frowned. "...yes?"

"Yes what?"

"You said you know who I am."

"I do!"

"So...?"

Twilight tilted her head. "...You asked if anypony here knew who you were. I said I did."

The alicorn blinked at that. "And... you feel no need to introduce me?"

"OH! Right! Sorry, that was rude of me. Everypony, this is Luna, Celestia's little sister." She held up a paper. "The princess said she's been on a forced vacation for a while so she wanted her to have a chance to do the whole sunraising thing. Welcome back party, as it were."

"Ooo! Ooo! I like parties!"

Luna frowned. "First of all, we are known as Nightmare Moon. Secondly, I seriously doubt mine sister would truly acquiesce to such a shift--"

"It says right here: 'Gone surfing, let Luna run things for a week.' There's a little footnote about keeping the moon moving so she can get killer waves--"

"--and thirdly_ We have never risen the sun before and we certainly don't intend to now!"

"Aw, don't be like that," Pinkie chirped, having somehow appeared next to the alicorn. "Here, have some welcome back cake!"

Luna blinked, staring at the plate in front of her. "Did... didst thou just make this right now?!"

"Of course not, silly filly! I keep cake everywhere, in case of cake emergencies!"

The mayor cleared her throat. "Miss Twilight, I was not informed about this change in ceremony."

"Yeah, I was going to tell you, but I got caught up in Pinkie's Welcome To Ponyville party, one thing led to another..." The unicorn smiled awkwardly. "Wow, this has been a comedy of errors, hasn't it?"

"Doth nopony remember the threat of eternal night?" Luna demanded, trying to regain her position.

"Wasn't that Tirek's gig?" Applejack asked, letting Rainbow go. "Ah mean, that's what all the stories say--wait, are ya dating him or something?"

"What is this... dating?"

"Lingual drift," Twilight supplied, "it's like courting but more general."

"What?! Us and-?! No! Never!" Luna gagged. "The very idea!"

"So... what yer saying is you're here to protect us from Tirek getting eternal night."

"I-! No! We are the princess of the night, we are Nightmare Moon!"

"Oh come on," Pinkie said with a grin, "Nightmare Moon is just a pony-based evolution and collation of various prime figures in autumnal holiday tradition! She isn't real or anything. You're obviously real, so you can't be Nightmare Moon. Quod Erat Demonstrandum!"

"But-"

"Look," Twilight interjected, "we're kind of holding the record here for, well, longest sunrise, and if we keep doing this the other nations might very well go to war with us. I can understand if you're a little thrown off from your forced vacation, Luna, but-"

Nightmare Moon let out a scream of frustration.

* * *

>148.4 (Masterweaver)

"Whoa."

Fluttershy flicked an ear, turning to see a green mare with red braids dripping down her head. "Um. Hello. My name's Fluttershy." She held out a hoof with a smile, idly wondering what was going on in Ponyville-Twilight had told her that Discord planned a visit during this most recent expansion, deliberately coinciding with her Breezie Trip, but she seemed to have it in hoof.

"Tree Hugger." The mare stared wide-eyed at Fluttershy. "You're... really bright."

"Um... thank you?"

"Your aura, I mean. I've seen blissed out ponies of all colors, but you..." The mare waved a hoof. "It's like your vibe has been beating for longer than the universe. Radical."

"I... I don't understand-"

"Your chakras! Your energy, it's almost..." Tree Hugger stumbled forward. "It's righteous. You are... so enrapturing. Are..." She bit her lip. "Are you, um... the soul of reality incarnate?"

Fluttershy blinked. "I... don't think so...? I'm just an ordinary pegasus who, um, may be the chosen bearer of the Element of Kindness, but I'm mostly just an animal caretaker."

Tree Hugger winced. "Ooh, don't bend your waves like that. You're more. You're so much more... I don't know. You... you're so bright. I can't stop looking."

"...I, uh..." Fluttershy blushed a bit. "Are you... saying you're attracted to me?"

"What? Oh, no no, sorry. I don't think our auras mesh." The earth pony tapped her chin. "Or, well, they could maybe, but yours is so bright mine would be vanished... You need to find another universe soul, if that's what you're looking for. I know better than to try to harmonize with somepony so... ancient."

The pegasus blinked. "Ancient...? Oh! Oh, you must mean-" She glanced around, then leaned toward the earth pony. "Talk to me later, during the closeup. I'll explain everything."

"I got you. Can't let the unenlightened know, it could wreak havoc." Tree Hugger hit her hoof against her chest and stretched it out with a lazy smile. "Blessings be upon you... not that you need them."

* * *

>"So you're saying that this whole time, your stoner friend has been loop aware?!"

Fluttershy waved a hoof. "Well, it's more like _looper_ aware, and only in the loops where she actually has the aura vision... thing going on. I just explain things to her when she does."

"And you never thought to tell anyone?" Discord clutched his chest. "I'm shocked, I really am!"

"Well, she's..." Fluttershy paused for a moment. "Like you said, she, ah... likes recreational drugs, and... would you have believed me?"

Discord flipped a coin. "Heads yes, tails no." Unfortunately the coin hatched into a smarginofigus which swam out the window. "Huh. I guess I don't actually know."

"Yeah..." Fluttershy shrugged. "Well, in this most recent expansion my nonlooping self asks her to the gala and, apparently, she spotted Twilight right away. Scared the heck out of her for a few loops before I Awoke and explained things..."

* * *

>148.5 (Evilhumour)

Gleaming Shield blinked at the latest person invading her wedding and _sighed_, placing a hoof against her face. How did her unAwake self miss _this_ one?!

"I'm just as surprised as you are Gleaming," the drake said, shrugging his shoulders, after pinging in time. "I went over my loop memories and I'm _still_ not sure how I fooled everyone. I mean, I wasn't even a _mare_!"

Gleaming Shield rolled her eyes at this silliness as the dragons began to invade, with Twilight bringing in a _furious_ alicorn mare. Gleaming Shield _knew_ she was in for a _long_ talk tonight.

* * *

>148.6 (Gamerex27)

Twilight rubbed at her snout. "Right...explain...explain what's up with your part of the Loop, again?"

"Nyarlathep casts a curse on Sumaru City that makes rumors become reality," the mare in front of her, here named Hopeful Heart, said. "No matter how crazy it is, or how impossible, if enough people believe it, it becomes true."

"That...that sounds _incredible!_" Twilight whispered to herself, her tea having long since grown cold. "Imagine all the _possibilities you could do!_ Experiments with dimensional technology without crashing the Loop! So many new fields of magic you can create with just a few words! So-"

"It also caused the Nazis to resurrect themselves in the city, and for Maya to get killed, fulfilling a rumored prophecy that the world would be destroyed," her companion, a brown-coated pegasus, here called Hot Ride (to his chagrin) told the Anchor.

Twilight abruptly stopped mid-sentence, as she went over the implications of this curse again. "Oh. It's...it that dangerous?"

"It can't do anything to Yggdrasil, since no one in town knows about it," the stallion said. "You'd need to spread a rumor about the Tree for anything to happen at all. Still, Masakado slapped a Read-Only label on it, just to be safe."

"Tatsuya..." Maya said, sighing. "You're over-reacting again. I don't think the curse could do anything to Yggdrasil at all: it's not powerful enough."

"You can never be too sure," Tatsuya replied. "Still, that thing usually follows us around wherever we end up in the Loops."

"Which is why you tried to spread a rumor saying that the Pies sold weapons in this bakery along with food and drinks," Twilight said. She waved her forehoof, gesturing around the ordinary-looking cafe. "Yeah, I don't think that's ever gonna hap-"

"Here you go."

Before Twilight could finish her sentence, Maud Pie wheeled up a silver platter on a dessert cart to them. Grabbing the top of the tray in her mouth, she lifted off the cover to reveal, not food, but a stash of weapons.

"What," the Princess of Friendship simply said.

"One katana modified for wing use," Maud continued, hoofing it over to Katsuya, "one pair of hoof-mounted pistols," giving these to Maya, "and one military-grade horn enhancer," she finished, dropping the sharpened metal casing next to Twilight's slice of pie.

"_What._"

"Thank you!" Maya said, sliding the guns onto her hooves.

"By the way," Maud said, as she reached for the other tray, distributing the groups' lunches, "I heard that the gates to Tartarus broke open and demons are running loose everywhere. It'd explain why so many places were on fire lately."

Twilight's face turned a little pale, and she facehoofed.

"Don't worry," Maud said, as emotionless as ever. "It's just a rumor."

With that, she cantered back to the kitchen.

"See what I mean?" sighed Tatsuya. "Guess we better get on it. After lunch, I guess."

"By the way," Maya asked as they dug into their food, "I did hear some more Pings other than you before. Do you think your friends know about the curse?"

"I can only hope not," Twilight said, in between bites of her hay burger. "Ginkophyta knows what they'd do with it."

* * *

>"Ah really hate ta' do this," Applebloom muttered, "but...ya said rumors are becomin' reality?"

"Yes," Twilight told the Cutie Mark Crusaders, "even the really dangerous ones. And what's the best way to get information out?"

"...Internet?" Scootaloo asked.

"Doesn't exist in our Loop."

"Newspapers?" she tried again.

"Exactly," Twilight said, nodding. "I need you girls to start up the Gabby Gums column again, so that we can get the good rumors out and discredit the bad ones."

"Basically, you need to be our rumormongers, too," Tatsuya added. "Tell us what you hear off the streets, so we can know which ones to spread. Maya's a journalist in Baseline, she'll help you find a big publisher."

"Got it!" Sweetie Belle's eyes glinted, and the Cutie Mark Crusaders huddled up.

"CUTIE MARK CRUSADERS RUMORMONGERS, YAAAAAAY!"

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

A few seconds later, there was a mighty THUD as one of Twilight's window exploded, as a rainbow mess known as Rainbow Dash crashed into her home again.

Frowning, Twilight reached to get her squirt bottle and newspaper when the pile groaned.

"Uuugh, sorry Twily," her friend whimpered, clutching something in her hooves. "But I really need your help."

"What's wrong Dash?" Twilight started to run towards her when Dash started to twitch and held up a hoof so quickly that there was a sonic boom inside her home. Thankfully, Twilight's magic was quicker.

"Rumor around I'm the fastest there is," Dash groaned, rolling over onto her side, clutching a bucket to her chest. "And anytime someone moves, I move faster." That was as far as Dash got before filling the bucket with her lunch. "I cannot believe I am saying this, but I am going way too fast," Dash whimpered, her mouth still deep inside. "Please tell me you have something your lab that can help me."

Twilight nodded her head, and responded in the affirmative as she used her magic to slowly carry Rainbow Dash down the stairs and into a special sensor depriving bubble with the promise of soup, blankets and clean buckets for the mare suffering motion sickness.

* * *

>(Bliss Authority)

Pinkie scratched her chin. "So that rumor about Discord bringing the Smooze to the Grand Galloping Gala-

"-is a FANTASTIC idea!" Discord grabbed her fetlock and shook it vigorously before swimming off through the air. "Thanks, Pinkie!"

Tatsuya just glared at Pinkie.

* * *

>(Harosata)

"Hold on! I need to check a rumor!" Pinkie dashed out of the house.

Tatsuya looked around the room.

"I'm back!"

"Gah!" Tatsuya picked himself up from the floor. "Pinkie, where did you go?"

"Oh, I heard a rumor that I show up when someone makes a Pinkie Promise, so I just had to show up and see if that's true." Pinkie explained.

"A Pinkie...Promise?" Tatsuya tried to decipher what Pinkie said. "Wait, if you show up at a place you're rumored to show up, isn't that a self-fulfilling prophecy?"

"Hm, you could be right. I'll check that rumor again!" And Pinkie ran out of the house again. Tatsuya blinked and turned his attention to Twilight.

"Earlier, I did hear rumors that your friend is a bit...funny."

"It's actually a fact."

* * *

>(BIOS-Pherecydes)

Twilight was really starting to hate this Loop. It had seemed like a simple trip to the market until she had noticed the empty streets, only then recalling the issues that the residents of Ponyville had with Zecora before getting to know her. Combined with Nyarlathotep's curse it had resulted in the sight in front of her.

Directing a swarm of Parasprites and surrounded by ominously moving shadows the Zebra mare stalked forward, her cloak moving in a non-existent wind. However before Twilight could move to cut off the apparent threat she was distracted by a hit from the Element of Generosity from directly in front of her. Relaxing, she gave a rueful grin and went to greet her friend.

"Hey Zecora, how are you? Uh... other than the whole witch thing I mean."

"Hello Twilight, I am doing quite well

Although this Loop is rather odd, as I'm sure you can tell."

Twilight nodded agreement. "So do you want me to try and counter the rumors going around about you?"

Zecora smiled, but shook her head.

"Thank you but no, as there is no need

I am quite enjoying being the Witch of Everfree.

The Parasprites are of an unexpected aid

And there are many new potions I wish to have made."

As if to illustrate her point the swarm of replicating creatures returned at that moment, each loaded with various items from the surrounding shops.

"... I hope you remembered to pay for those."

* * *

>(BIOS-Pherecydes)

"The reputation of Team Garash echoes far and wide, its leader a cake of spirit, a kick-crust paragon of glucose density! Dig the crumbs out of your wrappers because I've got something to say! He takes the blazing oven in his bare hands and endures the searing heat. A desserts dessert sustained by strength of will. When you hear of the great Kamina Muffin they're talking about me! You'd best remember that! Who the hell do you think you are? Isn't your whisk the one that will pierce the heavens, the earth, and through to tomorrow? **Go beyond the impossible and kick reason to the curb!** That's how

Team Garash rolls! Don't forget. Believe in yourself. Not in the you who believes in me. Not the me who believes in you. Believe in the you who believes in yourself. **Giga Pudding Breaker!**

As the small army of desserts crashed a hole in the roof of Sugarcube Corner, Bright Eyes and Pinkie gave each other surprised looks. This was not what they expected when they started spreading those rumors about magical cakes being the source of Celestia's power.

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

"Luna, stop laughing, and get me the BUCK out of here!" Celestia shouted, placing her hooves on the side of her throne and tried again to lift herself upright.

Luna shook her head, still laughing to herself. "Dear sister, if anything, this should serve as a wake up call to your cake addiction."

Celestia simply flailed her hooves in the air, trying to reach her sister's body, her wide flanks still wedge into her throne.

* * *

>(BIOS-Pherecydes)

It was times like this that Twilight really wished she had fingers, so that she could try and ease the migraine she was certain she could feel forming. Standing in front of her were two familiar forms, one of whom most certainly hadn't been part of the Loop previously.

"Let me see if I've got this right. You-" she said pointing at the normal pony Lyra "somehow managed to start a rumor **with the voices in your own head** and thanks to the nature of your glitch it actually caused Yggdrasil to set up a Mikasa Glitch mid-Loop."

Lyra nodded sheepishly.

"Right. Which explains the fact we now have your human self running around the middle of Ponyville, and cedar knows how we're supposed to explain that."

The aforementioned human blushed and awkwardly rubbed the back of her head with a laugh, inadvertently causing a mild panic from the spectating ponies at the sight of her incisors.

Twilight's felt her mane begin to frazzle and her eye begin to twitch, before taking a calming breath and turning around.

"You know what, you figure it out."

Ignoring the protests from the duplicated Looper, she headed off to find something to calm her nerves.

'I need to find something to read. I wonder if I can start a rumor that Daring Do has a new book coming out tomorrow.'

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

"Lyra!" Dash shouted, rolling over the purple unicorn. "Get your seapony self under control!"

"Hehe!" the mint green mare chuckled to herself, using the bubble as part of her large, weird bicycle made half with water and half of the magical bubble holding the rainbow mare. "Shoo bee doo, this is so much fun!"

* * *

>(Harosata)

"I'm back. Twilight!"

"Ga- I should stop doing that." Tatsuya grumbled as he looked at Pinkie. "Did you find anything useful?"

"Well, I heard some rumors, but I don't think they have anything to do with whatever's spreading the rumors. Let's see..." Pinkie began to count the incidents on her hoof. "There's a rumor that Trixie defeated an Ursa Major, a rumor that the Flim-Flam brothers make the best cider, a rumor where Celestia is pulling all the strings in Ponyville, a rumor that Cheese throws the best party..."

Tatsuya snapped to attention. "Wait, what was that part?"

"I don't believe it either. I mean, I'm the reason he's a party thrower in the first pl-"

Tatsuya shook his head. "The part about Celestia pulling the string."

Pinkie blinked. "What's so interesting about that?"

"Look, if she's pulling the strings, either she's controlling the power behind these rumors or she's using the effects of these rumors for her own gain." Tatsuya started to head out. "Either way, it's worth checking."

"Not really." Applebloom said as she popped in, her bow occasionally tugging in the direction of Canterlot. "If you happen to see Rarity, you probably don't want her to see her boutique."

* * *

>(Gamerex27 and Wildrook)

Maya cantered down the street, mentally reviewing the notes from her latest interview.

She stopped in place, then backpedaled, tripping over her clumsy four legs in the process.

Looking up, she could see a very annoyed Rarity, hanging by a gigantic spiderweb-esque structure covering her boutique. It twitched constantly, as if drawn by a magnet. Her makeup was running down her face, as if she had been crying, but it was dry when Maya galloped over to her.

"Aren't you usually the type to scream about this?" Maya asked.

"I did," Rarity said, hoarsely. "For several _hours. _But everypony was too worried about that zebra from the Everfree to leave their homes and _help me_." The Unawake mare dramatically sighed. "Oh, for a brave stallion to come to my rescue. Or anypony, really."

"I'm afraid I'll have to do," Maya said. "Give me a second. _PERSONA!_"

Again, she summoned Artemis in a burst of light. But a mere second after she did so, she began to consider exactly _how_ a frightened and stressed mare would react to seeing somepony summon a ten-foot tall, white, hairless minotaur out of nowhere to tear everything near her to shreds.

Rarity tried to scream, but found that she just didn't have the voice for it anymore. "_Where's my fainting couch when you need it?!"_

* * *

>Several minutes later, a disgruntled Rarity hobbled down from the window, gently eased down by the Goddess of the Moon. As Artemis vanished, she swayed in place, then clutched at her nose with a hoof. "My word!" she said. "What...what is that revolting smell?!"

Maya sniffed at the air, and instantly mirrored Rarity's action as she recognized the very distinctive smell. "But...that's impossible," she choked out, as her eyes started to water. "Only the Inaba girls should be able to make that!...Did someone spread a rumor to make their cooking worse?!"

* * *

>Eventually, the mares had staggered their way over to the Golden Oaks Library, staring down the sheepish Cutie Mark Crusaders.

"I know Sweetie Belle's cooking was bad," Rarity growled, "but that odor is REVOLTING! What were you three trying to cook?!"

"Curry," Apple Bloom muttered.

Tatsuya and Maya cringed.

"You didn't," the red stallion muttered.

"That confirms it," Maya sighed. "Right...Tatsuya, could you find some other pegasi to make a storm to blow that smell away? It's bad enough dealing with our usual curse: no need to add Mystery Food X to it all."

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

"On one hoof, I am _really_ angry at you for getting that gossip out, Dash," Twilight muttered at the bubble where the sick mare was slowly recovering, drinking the soup that Pinkie Pie made for her. The rest of their friends were trying poorly not to laugh, with Dash too ill to do so. "To the point I am tempted to roll you around town, or start a rumor that you always dress in style."

Twilight 'sighed', 'looking' at the bubble. "On the other hoof, I cannot do it as it would be really mean and I cannot do it because I don't have an **ELM** _ body anymore!" the purple egg shouted, wobbling angrily, causing the mares around her to laugh out loud. Apparently, rumors that had been put through a round of Chinese Whispers/Broken Telephone worked as well in this loop._

* * *

>(Wildbrook)

"Well, I'm not exactly the one walking on eggshells here, Sheldon Sparkle," Rainbow Dash replied, too ill to make a wittier retort.

"'Sheldo-the chick stuck in his egg from that one farm Loop?" Spike asked. "That was eons ago: no one's going to remember that!"

Twilight rolled away and looked at Tatsuya on the sofa.

"You're in my spot," she said. "Best incubation area."

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

"Where is Pinkie Pie?!" Luna thundered in the middle of Ponyville. "We have traced the source of the rumor that our moon is made of cheese to her, and We wish to have words with her!"

Said mare simply stayed in the background, nomming the stolen moon cheese with a grin on her face.

* * *

>(Harosata)

Looking at the time, Maya remembered a rumor that she had heard. "Luna? Are you awake?"

The Moon Princess gazed up. "Hm? I am. What do you need to ask of me?"

Maya looked at her from many angles. "Just how are you awake?"

"Is this a trick question?" Luna had to ask.

Tatsuya studied the princess. "Now that you mention it, she is awake."

Twilight looked back and forth. "Okay, what are you guys talking about?"

"Princess Luna sleeps during the day, and yet she has gone to investigate the rumors around the princesses." Maya explained.

"Princess Luna, how did you make yourself immune to that rumor?"

"Well, it is simple. When one thinks of the day, they think of the sun, which is controlled by my sister Celestia." Luna explained as she pointed at the bright ball in the sky. "And so, I merely place my moon into the sky even if Celestia does not move her sun..."

"And they think it's night even when the sun is out!" Twilight realized the logic. "Or at least nopony knows what to call that sort of time of the day. But still, I'm surprised you found that loophole, Luna. How did you think up the solution?"

Luna blushed. "To be truthful, Izzzzzzzzzzzz..." THUD!

Maya poked the fallen princess. "Princess? She's asleep."

"Huh. Guess there's no need to see if that rumor is true." Twilight concluded. "But for the rumor to take effect, something must have happened to the moon..."

"But what?" Tatsuya asked.

"Urp!"

"Ergh...Okay, that's getting old." Tatsuya frowned as he turned to Pinkie, who had a lot of cheese crumbs on her mouth.

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

Cadence blinked as she watched Blueblood hold the door for the next mare that passed by, humming an innocent tune as he gave a generous tip to the beggar on the street.

"Okay..." Shining said slowly, watching the scene with his wife. "I don't know what's worse; the rumor that Blueblood being an actual prince charming is working or the fact seeing him act so good is so disturbing."

"Me neither dear," Cadence muttered as he began to lead away Octavia away, charming the mare. "But I think Vinyl is going to be a bit mad to find out he stole her date."

Shining scoffed and rolled his eyes, "Well, it wouldn't be Blueblood if he didn't do something jerkish, even when he is behaving himself."

* * *

>(Masterweaver)

"Oh mah leaves."

Scootaloo leaned in the door. "What is it, Apple Bloom?"

The earth pony just shook her head and hoofed over the newspaper. On the front page, Cadance was giving the camera an awkward smile as she wrapped one hoof around Filthy Rich, and Diamond Tiara stood in front of her practically beaming with glee. 'Local Stallion locates long-lost daughter!' the headline blared, with 'Local filly actually a princess!' right below it.

Scootaloo stared at the paper in shock. "...Diamond started this rumor, didn't she?"

"She's a decent social manipulator, when she puts her mind to it."

The pegasus bit her lip. "...you know, uh... if she were awake I wouldn't suggest this, but... what if we pitched an article about Filthy Rich loving Screwball?"

* * *

>(BIOS-Pherecydes)

Angel Bunny wasn't sure whether to be please or irritated with the current Loop. On the one paw he now received the respect he deserved from the weak ponies his owner insisted on dealing with on a daily basis. On the other paw the current rumor around Ponyville was that he was secretly a Demon and Fluttershy had accidentally bound him to her service during a trip into the Everfree.

Eh, whatever, he decided as he roasted a carrot-kabob with a quick burst of Hellfire.

* * *

>(Harosata)

Pinkie hopped over to Fluttershy's for a quick visit, though if she were anypony else, the Ursa Majors in the backyard should have been an indicator.

"So...you can't talk because everypony says you're that one quiet pony."

Nod

"And you didn't fly to Twilight's because they also say that you don't?"

Nod

Pinkie flipped through a notebook. "And they also say you're a vampire pony, you become a raging beast if someone even hurts a dragonfly, and you have a cockatrice's stare. Is that true?"

Nod

"Huh, that explains the blindfold. I thought that was part of your dragon wrestling costume."

* * *

>(Gamerex27)

As Maya sat on Twilight's egg, she heard a knock at the door. Turning around, she summoned her Persona Artemis in a burst of blue light, opening the door to reveal a diamond dog with a fiery red coat, looking confused.

"Hi, Sunset," Twilight muttered. "You Awake?"

"If I wasn't, I'd still be at Canterlot High," she said, smiling. "But...what's up with the whole 'rumors magically coming true' thing? I figured out pretty quickly what was going on, and I..." she shifted in place. "I spread a rumor that the Dazzlings couldn't really sing, and had to lip synch all of their music. Next thing I know, all of their magic stops working and I've solved the problem before it even started."

"That...that's actually pretty clever," Twilight said, chuckling. "As for what's going on...some entity from these guys' Loop put a curse on Ponyville and Canterlot that makes rumors become reality. And since the portal is in Canterlot..."

"...it extends to Canterlot High, too." Sunset concluded. "So, uh...why am I a diamond dog and not a pony? I remember being a pony in my Loop memories before I first went through the mirror."

"I've...seen the show-the backup of your universe in the Hub-with Jun," Tatsuya admitted. "Up to the first half of season 4, at least. And they use human curses there, right?"

"Uh...they don't show it in the backup, since it's aimed at foals, but yes..." Sunset trailed off.

"So, if there were rumors about you being a bitch-"

"They came true," Sunset Shimmer said, facepawing. "Not sure why I was still human on the Other Side, then," she mused, not noticing how Tatsuya twitched at that phrase, "but it makes sense. Mostly."

"So, is the curse coming from this side, or your side?" Twilight asked, being unable to see how Tatsuya twitched again.

"This side, I think," Sunset replied. "I mean, it was strong enough on the other side, but I think the source is coming from this side-"

"Can we PLEASE STOP TALKING about this side and the other side?!_" Tatsuya snapped.

The egg and the dog stopped talking, and looked at Tatsuya.

"It...bad memories," he said, sighing. "Should we ask the Crusaders to see if they can find the source of the curse?"

"They're not that magically inclined," Twilight told them. "It would be best if Sunset and I looked for it with you guys. At least, when I FINALLY BUCKING HATCH!" she screamed, shaking in place as Maya's body heat still failed to get her out of the egg. "Tatsuya, some fire would be NICE!"

* * *

>(Gamerex27 and Evilhumour)

"Sooooooo," Scootaloo started, as she pulled some notes out of her saddlebag with her wing. "Rumors. What have you girls got today?"

"There's the rumor that Celestia is coming to make a personal investigation into all this craziness," Sweetie Belle told them. "Personally, I think we should run it: it'd help get her out of that 'all Celestia's cakes go right to her flanks' rumor Luna made that's got her stuck in her throne."

"'Kay, that's one," Scootaloo said, jotting it down. "What else?"

"There's the rumor that AJ is a stallion in disguise..." Applebloom started.

Before she could say anything else, she was cut off by a loud, very masculine scream from the direction of the Apple farm.

"...annnnnd it looks like it kicked in," she finished. "That's something Ah'd like to counter, but we've got bigger problems now. Put it on the list, but low priority."

"Speaking of that," Scootaloo added, "there's also a rumor about your family switching from growing apples to oranges."

An even louder, angrier scream came from the farm.

"...sh-he-whatever-is less upset about a gender shift than her crops changing?" Tatsuya asked, confused.

"'S a matter of pride," Applebloom said, grinding her teeth.

"Big Mac, once Ah get my hooves on ya, Ah SWEAR Ah'll buck you into being a mare!" the stallion with three oranges cutie mark shouted, chasing after he-er, his grinning big brother, past Twilight's window.

"We need to fix that, pronto," Applebloom added. "Otherwise, the family reunion comin' up soon will turn into a riot."

"Got it," the pegasus said, writing that down too. "Speaking of problems, the demonic invasion from Tartarus. How should we deal with that?"

"Demons aren't that hard to deal with," Maya said from the corner of the room, still sitting on Twilight's (now sleeping) egg. "Maybe you could interview me or Tatsuya on how you can just Contact them."

"Contact?" the fillies asked in unison.

"Think normal demon negotiation from Amala," Maya continued, "but you don't need to bribe them. Just use your special talent when you talk to them-singing, impressions, fortune telling, fashion tips, lessons on friendship, magic tricks, seduction, torture-

"Wait, _what?!_"

"-Long story," Maya explained. "Kaoru can go over the top sometimes."

"...and what about Tirek?" Sweetie Belle asked. "I mean, if the rumors are strong enough to bend reality, and if all the demons are out of Tartarus now, we should spread one that could deal with him."

"Hm..." Applebloom tapped her hoof against her chin in thought. "...why don't we tell everypony that there's a monster from Tartarus that's _givin'_ ponies magic rather than stealing it?"

"...really?" her other Crusaders asked.

"It's weird enough to be interesting and spread, and helpful enough that we don't need ta worry about Tirek getting too powerful from rumor magic or anything." Applebloom's grin widened further and further as she went on. "It's _genius!_"

"That's one for the front page!" Scootaloo exclaimed, writing it down in italics. "It's a great plan! It's _foalproof!_"

* * *

>(Masterweaver)

"...and that's basically what's going on," Vinyl finished awkwardly.

Octavia nodded thoughtfully. "Well, I... I thank you for being honest with me, miss Scratch, but... if I am not completely incorrect, we weren't actually dating at the start of this, ahem, loop. And now we are, and I cannot figure out why-

"Yeah, uh, you know how I mentioned variant loops?" Vinyl glanced around. "This is a variant loop. Well, technically it's a crossover loop, but-the point is, for whatever reason, if enough people believe in some rumor or other, the universe adjusts itself so that rumor is true."

The gray mare stared at her.

"Which isn't to say I'll be taking advantage of the situation," Vinyl assured her quickly. "In fact, putting this on the record: You are the leader in this relationship, you decide what happens when, I'm just going to follow you."

Unfortunately for the unicorn, she didn't notice the other pony passing by with an interested look. Within the week, the rumor mill had taken her sentence so far out of context that the tabloids were screaming. But, all things considered, she could live with the more interesting results.

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

"But-" the white pony started to protest when the earth pony flicked Vinyl's nose with her black tail, eliciting a blush on the white mare.

"Vinyl, I have read my journal. Not once was I under you," Octavia grinned, leaning over to the unicorn's face. "So for your attempted lie I am going to have to punish you."

Vinyl was ready for anything physical that the mare could do to her. She was not ready for Octavia to steal her glasses and run off with a laugh.

* * *

>(Gamerex27)

"Apollo!"

With a snap of his hoof (which he still was not sure how he did), Tatsuya summoned his Persona in a flash of light, rekindling the fire burning under Twilight's egg.

"Between that and Spike's mail thing," Sweetie Belle commented, as she glanced back to Spike sending out their papers to the local distributors in a blast of magic fire, "we're lucky Twilight doesn't have smoke detectors."

A loud crash outside Twilight's house brought their attention to a nearby window, where Iron Will and a demonic Minotaur with a skull nose wrestled and clashed outside.

"Hang on, let me help," Maya said, hopping off Twilight and heading outside. "Stay clear: it's weak to Ice magic!"

"...speaking of magic..."

The Cutie Mark Crusaders turned to Tatsuya, who pointed to the egg Apollo was incubating. "My Persona felt it start to-"

A crack formed in the egg. And another. And another.

"Ah," Scootaloo said, in a deadpan tone, "the miracle of childbirth."

"Oh, shush," Twilight said, as her egg continued to break open. "You haven't had to be a biological mother before. This is nothing."

With that, she bucked her egg open.

"Finally!" she cheered, stretching out her back and shaking her mane free of egg shell, "I'm out of the moss-damned thing!"

"...Uh..." Applebloom started, then trailed off. "Twi? The rumor...don't look like it's worn off yet."

"...what do you mean?" she asked. "I'm out of the egg!_ Isn't that enough?"

Tatsuya shared an uneasy glance with the fillies, then pulled a bicycle out of his Pocket. "Not really," he said, turning the mirror to face Twilight.

She looked in the mirror. She wasn't sure how she looked in the mirror, given that she had no eyes, but she did so anyways.

The egg-headed Twilight looked to Tatsuya. Looked to the Crusaders. Then back to the mirror.

"I. Hate. This. Curse," she moaned, cradling her eggshell in her hooves.

* * *

>(Evilhumour)

Without any warning, Scootaloo suddenly let out a loud cluck of surprise, causing everypony to turn and stare at her.

The orange chicken blinked, looked at her reflection and then facewinged.

"Of course this would happen..." she muttered under her breath.

Berry Punch, the mare rumored to be the town drunk, took several steps into the Golden Oaks, stumbling with every step.

"Izzz hates thess stuupid loop!" the mare slurred, hiccuping before spinning around and passing out on the chicken, snoring loudly.

There was a sudden gush of air, causing the egghead pony, the flailing chicken and several ponies to look up at the gryphon trying to scowl at them but failed to really do so.

"Gilda?" Twilight asked, somehow using sight behind sight to see her friend. She looked odd, a bit stiff yet loose at the same time-

"Gilda, why are ya a giant plushie?" Applebloom asked, tilting her head.

Gilda grumbled, squeaking as she walked into the library. "Rumor had it I was a really softie and then it turned into I was an actual one!" Squeaking, Gilda sat down on the makeshift nest and began to shift around to get comfortable, squeaking as she did so. Looking at the snickering crowd, she frowned at the. "Laugh, and I swear I will SQUEAK you!" Gilda threatened, holding out a claw to the ponies around her. Blushing Gilda, simply fluffed her wings out and prepared to deal with this loop.

* * *

>(Harosata)

Somepony knocked on the door. "May I come in?"

"Um, I guess?" Twilight looked as a stallion walked in. "Dr. Hooves?"

"Is that with a W or just the plural of these?" Dr. Hooves held up his hooves. "And before you ask, I am the Doctor according to my memory, but I haven't figured out if these rumors brought me to this Loop or if I am just a pony who suddenly have knowledge of Looping. Anyway, I figured that the Anchor would be trying to find the source of this rumormonger phenomenon, so I came to help."

Tatsuya might have heard of him. "The Doctor? Isn't that the Looper who always gets shot by a-"

A laser zapped Dr. Hooves and turned him into ash. One glance outside, and they saw what looked like a giant salt shaker disappear into the horizon. The pile of ashes seemed to huff. "Well, I can safely assume the rumors don't have to come from Equestria."

* * *

>(Gamerex27 and Evilhumour)

KNOCK. KNOCK.

"Nh. G'way," Trixie moaned, swatting at the air with a forehoof.

Whoever was at the door of her wagon just keep knocking, however. They seemed very insistent.

"The Great and Powerful Trixie needs her beauty sleep!" she muttered, as she slowly climbed out of bed and carefully crept towards the door.

"Go away!" she said, as she slammed the door open. "The Great and Powerful Trixie does not...entertain...loiterers..."

She shrunk in on herself as the massive, alicorn sized beast towered over her. The mix between a pony and a minotaur-a centaur, if Trixie remembered her mythology correctly-stood at her doorstep, clad in a red and white hat and matching uniform which did not contrast well with his coat.

"Ho ho ho!" he said, slapping his plump belly in what she could only assume was a bizarre greeting custom.

"...Who are you?!" Trixe asked, her bravado suddenly leaving her in the presence of a giant bucking monster with horns that were way too sharp_.

"I'm Santa Tirek!" he said jollily. "Miss Trixie Lulamoon, I'm pleased to inform you that you're on the nice list after you made amends for your Alicorn Amulet episode!"

"How do you know abou-"

"Here is your present!" With that, Santa Tirek grabbed Trixie, and magic formed in his palm. In the span of a few seconds, ridiculous amounts of magical power poured into the comparatively tiny unicorn's body, and Tirek shrunk just a little bit.

"There you go, miss!" he said, putting the twitching Trixie down, not noticing that her coat and Cutie Mark were a lot brighter than usual, and oversaturated with color. "Happy Hearth's Warming Day!" he said, as he galloped off into Ponyville.

"But..." Trixie said, shivering as the magic coursed through her, "it's not-"

With a shriek of surprise, the excess magic fired from Trixie's horn, in a beam of sheer destructive power that would have made her Awake self proud.

"Um..." Trixie said, as she stared at the part of the Everfree Forest she had just annihilated, with a surprised zebra witch staring at her from the new hole in her house. "Trixie is...I'm sorry! I don't know what's going oooooooooon!" she blurted out, as another jet of magic erupted from her mouth, this time, and propelled her into the sky with the sheer force of the blast.

* * *

>"Something has gone horribly wrong," Tatsuya noted as he took note of the various fires, wrecked buildings, and bemused ponies all over Ponyville.

"'What could go wrong?' ya said?" Applebloom grumbled, as her friends sheepishly avoided her glare. "Honestly, ya haven't figured out by now to never say those words?"

"Everypony slips up sometimes," Sweetie Belle could only say.

"It could be worse," Maya noted, as she watched an annoyed team of weather pegasi chasing after a unicorn shooting herself into the stratosphere. "No one's been hurt or killed yet, and it's nothing that can't be fixed with some carpenters and hard work."

"-do you MEAN, 'I'm on the Naughty List!'" Twilight shrieked in the background, near the house/library they had arrived at on the way back from the press conference in Canterlot.

"I am most displeased with you, young Egg Sparkle. You have been very naughty and I had to give you a lump of coal." Tirek said, turning his head as he noticed the library was now on fire. "Ho ho uh oh."

As Tirek galloped off again, Twilight turned to stare as her home burned to the ground. Again.

If she still had eyes, they would be twitching like mad.

"I can't take it anymore," she announced, turning to face the group. "We're going to the Collective Unconsciousness, we're finding Nyarlathotep, and we're bucking that buckler's face in until he lifts this bush-forsaken curse!"

"'Bush forsa-'" Tatsuya trailed off. "...Alright, then. Let's get the portal ritual ready."

* * *

>(Gamerex27)

"...Where are we, exactly?"

"The collective unconsciousness of all manki-uh, marekind," Maya replied. "This is where everything we fight and face in our home Loop comes from."

"Including Shadows?" Twilight asked, staring off into the distance with her egg-head.

"Including Shadows," Tatsuya confirmed. "Why do you ask?"

Twilight just pointed ahead with a forehoof. From behind one of the pillars of the gazebo they found themselves in walked herself. The being was a dead ringer for Twilight, save for her normal, not-eggy head...and her piercing, yellow eyes.

She opened her mouth to speak, and-

"No!"

Shadow Twilight stopped, and stared at them.

"I get it!" Twilight hissed, walking up to her Shadow Self. "I KNOW what you are! All of my darkest secrets, right? I know. I know that I'm afraid that I'm not me anymore, after all these Loops! I KNOW that I'm afraid I've become a different mare after all this time, and I KNOW that I've gone crazy and done some terrible things!

"But I'm not alone! I've got dozens of my friends here with me in the Loops! No matter what happens, I won't lose myself like other Loopers! Not with my friends by my side, to keep me going! So, could you get out of our BUCKING WAY?!"

The Shadow uncomfortably shuffled in place. "Uh...I was just going to ask why I was here."

If Twilight had had eyes, she would have blinked in confusion. "Huh?"

"I mean, you already know all that," her dark self stated. "I had a whole speech like that planned out, and you just admitted all that before I could get going. Even in your mind, you're already going through everything else you're worried about, everything else you'd hide, and are agreeing with it. There's...nothing for me to say."

"...So...uh...why did you come out in the first place?" Twilight asked.

"I have no idea. I think Nyarlathotep, or whatever's doing all this, was expecting you to reject me and drew me out of our body," Shadow Twilight said. "Guess he didn't know you changed already, huh?"

"But you did," Twilight said, smiling with a nonexistent mouth. "Because you're me, and I'm you."

"...right again," Shadow Twilight said, chuckling. "Hope you don't mind this," she said, as she faded in a swirl of blue light.

"Mind wha-" Twilight stopped herself as she looked up.

The pure white coat. The crescent moon horn, with one on its forehead and one pointing backwards off its head. The strong defined jaw.

And the eight legs.

***"One who soars above their herd to guide thy friends,***" he announced, "***I shall fly with you. I am Sleipnir Lokison, of the Star Arcana. From the sea of thy soul I cometh, and to there I return. For I am thou, and thou art I."***

With that, the Persona dissolved in another burst of blue light, and floated down to Twilight's eye level as a simple card, no bigger than her hoof. It held the image of a faced star on it, and was labeled "XVII."

"...Maya," Twilight said slowly. "Tatsuya. Why is the representation of my true inner self a stallion?!"

"A Persona's gender doesn't always match the wielder," Tatsuya explained. "Lisa had the god Eros, Ken had Nemesis, Naoto had Sukunu-Hikona..."

Twilight sighed. "Alright, then. Let's find wherever this curse is coming from and break it."

* * *

>(Gamerex27)

"No luck?" Scootaloo asked as the three ponies (and current Diamond Dog) emerged from a portal. The lack of any kind of battle wounds made it obvious that they hadn't found their culprit.

"Nyarlatheotep's not here," Twilight replied, shaking her literal egg head. "The collective unconsciousness of equinekind isn't too different from humans', but that's not a factor here, or he's just not showing up. There isn't some god, eldritch abomination, or curse causing all this. Whatever it is, it's mare-made."

"I'd bet on Star Swirl," Sunset added. "He got up to some crazy stuff, even in Baseline. I remember reading that much before my, uh, 'evil jerk' phase started."

"You know," Rainbow Dash said, wheeling herself over (as slowly as possible) to the group in her magical bubble, "I thought of something. Curses like these-I think I saw something like this in a Daring Doo book once-in a Variant where she had different adventures. They can be broken by contradictions."

"Really?" Sweetie Belle asked. "What kind of rumor would cause such a stable and massive spell system to break down and implode on itself?"

"Hm..." Applebloom muttered, pacing in place and ignoring the way her bow was still being pulled towards Canterlot (she'd already been forced to close the window to stop it from flying all the way there before it got ripped off her head. "How 'bout, 'the spell causing rumors to literally become true has been broken?' Ya think that would work?"

"Worth a shot," Maya said, shrugging. "Back home in Sumaru City, most people didn't know that rumors were becoming true, since they worked retroactively. But here, a lot of ponies-Loopers, mostly-already figured it out. So it might work."

"Alright, I'll put it in our next-"

Suddenly, Sweetie Belle was flattened by a throne falling from the...ceiling?

Wedged into it was an annoyed Princess Celestia, her bulging, massive flanks wedged snugly into the sides of her chair.

She stared at the strange pony with an egg for a head. It only took her a few seconds to notice that she had her student's Cutie Mark and coat color, and quickly made the connection.

"Twilight," Celestia said, giving her a sad smile and sighing. "...Can you see me?"

"Yes. Not sure how, but I can."

"Do you know what's going on?' she asked. "One second I'm sitting in my throne in the middle of another boring meeting with nobles, then the next my flanks grew so big and rapidly that I was stuck in the seat." She tried in vain to pull herself free again, with even her mighty magic failing to get her away from the trapped throne. "On the other hoof, they stopped laughing after they were turned into donkeys a few seconds later. You should have seen how they lost their minds when they realized they had to pick things up with their mouths_ like 'peasants.'"

"Told you that saying all nobles were to be punished as asses wouldn't work," Maya said, grabbing some yen from Tatsuya's outstretched hoof. "What did you expect with that?"

"Still worth it," he said. "They tried to have you thrown in a dungeon when you asked if the budget cuts and his new mansion were connected in that interview. I...should have phrased that better."

As Tatsuya and Maya continued to talk in the background, Twilight explained what was going on with the curse on Ponyville.

"I see," Celestia said. "That would explain why the moon vanished, why Luna fell into a coma until I decided to just make it a new moon night on my own initiative, and why Tirek suddenly became a 'good guy' and made several houses burn down by giving ponies more magic than their bodies could handle. Especially to earth ponies, who can't channel it in the more direct ways pegasi and unicorns can. And why I'm here all of a sudden. A rumor I was coming to visit...a bit more literal than I would have liked."

"Issue's out," Spike announced as he sent the last of the papers away in a burst of flame. "Since it's mostly local, enough ponies should get their hooves on it in time to get it going in the next hour or so."

"Help." From under the throne, Sweetie Belle's hoof extended, trying in vain to push the seat off her.

"You're still alive?" Scootaloo asked.

"The throne's hollow underneath," Celestia explained. "It's a good place to hide my cake stas-er, I mean, to put petitions and bills I don't read. No, that sounds _awful_ too...Wait...you should be a _lot_ more worried about your friend's safety than 'mild surprise,'" she realized, her eyes narrowing.

"Time Loop," Applebloom explained before Celestia could go on the warpath. "Hey, could y'all get Sweetie and Celestia out of the throne while Ah explain it to her?"

"Method 7 works best when she's under stress like this," Twilight recommended, even as her horn started to glow with purple magic. "Remember to use the slide projector."

After several painful and _loooong_ minutes, Maya, Tatsuya, Twilight, their respective Personas, Sunset, and Scootaloo managed to both yank Celestia out of her throne (albeit with some painful-looking bruises dotting her coat) and get an annoyed Sweetie Belle out from under the chair.

"Wait a second," Twilight said as the group celebrated their victory. "I...I think I feel it!" she said, as her tail perked up. "I can feel the spell breaking!" She suddenly stopped, her egg turning stark white. "I can fe3l*$%^&#&-

* * *

>"I can feel the Loop crashing," Twilight finished, as she Awoke in the usual Gen 3 punishment Loop. Grumbling to herself, she plucked the post-it note off of her horn and read it.

_Reality is not a toy for you to mess with as you wish. Consider more carefully how you dispel such magics in the future._

_From the desk of Taira no Masakado, Admin of Amala (condolences for such not needed)._

"...you know," Sunset said from behind her, "I heard a rumor that Rainbow Dash always dresses in-"

"Don't. Even. Start," said mare hissed, trying in vain to find some way to make the elegant and beautiful cocktail dress seem less frilly.

* * *

>148.7 (Midnight Crescent)

Twilight walked into Mac's bar, and did a double take. She thought she was used to the eccentric visitors.

But a half-pegasus, half thestral? Even now, that at least stood out...

"Hello, Twilight Sparkle," the newcomer said, as they idly stirred the drink in front of them. "I wondered when you might show up..."

"Uhh..." the anchor replied, struggling not to stare. "You seem familiar, but I'm pretty sure I'd remember you..."

"Oh, I think you know my big brother much better than me, and it has been quite some time since we last met..."

"Still not ringing a bell, I'm afraid."

"Your brother's wedding?"

Twilight thought on that, before her face screwed up in confusion. "...Chrysalis, why didn't you answer the ping? And I didn't think you had brothers..."

The other mare's face swiftly met the bar. "Spike's Wedding..."

Twilight's eyes widened in realization, as the hints from the conversation finally clicked into place. "Wait, Hel?"

"Well, that took longer than expected..." the Admin said with a smile, as she raised head back from the bar.

"Wait," Twilight asked, a thought occurring to her. "Don't admins usually come in... unchanged?"

"Normally, we want to be recognised instantly."

"...So why not now?"

"Two reasons: Firstly, I just wanted to see what I'd look like. I must say it's not what I expected..."

"And the second?"

Hel's smile transformed to a smirk. "I needed a drink, and, thanks to my brothers, there's never any left for me. This seemed like as good a place as any..."

Twilight thought long and hard. She'd personally seen how fast Sleipnir could go through mead, and his brother's reputations suggested they'd not only go through more, but probably wouldn't hold themselves back either.

"Mac..." she said, taking a seat next to the Admin. "Give me a special reserve. And keep them coming," she added, before shrugging her shoulders at the look Hel and Mac gave her. "I've not got anything better to do this loop..."

* * *

Lara Croft ejected the spent clips from her handguns as she started to feel the tremors from the incoming tyrannosaur.

_No idea why these still work on something that big..._ she thought, as she slid in fresh clips. _But I'm not complaining..._

When the creature finally came into view, a look of confusion spread across her face. After all, the tyrannosaur didn't usually have giant frills on it's back. It also wasn't usually some strange combination of purple and green.

At least those were things she could accept.

The giant fake mustache, however...

"I'm not sure whether I should shoot you," she said to herself. "Or just let you eat me and start again...again."

"Ehh, I'm not really big on eating things that disagree with me..." Spike quipped back. "And Fluttershy'd probably go mental if she found out I'd even tried..."

Lara's eye twitched, and her arms fell to her sides. "You can talk!?"

Spike looked down at the irate treasure hunter. "Well, yeah..." he said, before slapping a claw into his face. "OK, I thought I knew the answer, but now I'm not so sure... does time repeating sound familiar to you, or are you just crazy?"

"I'm starting to think it might be both..." Lara replied, sitting down on a convenient rock. "I am talking to a dinosaur, after all..."

"Dragon."

"...Sure, let's go with dragon. Why not?"

"And how about Yggdrasil?"

"The World Tree," Lara said, an eyebrow raised in a combination of interest and confusion. "What does Norse Myth have to do with this?"

"Well, looks like I get to give this speech," Spike said, a grin spreading across his face. He reached behind him, pulling a scroll out of thin air. Seeing Lara's twitch return, he laughed sheepishly. "It's been awhile, kinda need the summary..." he explained, before scanning down the page.

* * *

>Spike rolled the scroll up, replacing it into his Pocket, before turning back to his audience. "...Any questions?"

Lara sighed before responding. "...No, although I'm still reserving the right to think I'm crazy."

"You're not the first, probably won't be the last..." Spike said, shrinking down to an appropriate size give her comforting pat on the shoulder. "Look, I get this can all be a bit intimidating at first. If there's anything you want me to do, let me know. Otherwise, I'll just let you get on with whatever it is you do around here..."

Lara sat in thought for a few minutes. "Look, the way I see it, I'm either crazy, in which case why not do what I want..."

"Which is a dangerous mindset to have..." Spike said with his arms crossed. "As I _just_ finished explaining."

"...Or you're telling the truth," Lara continued as though Spike hadn't even interrupted. "Which means this'll be a rare opportunity to make things a _lot_ easier on myself."

"How so?"

"Tell me..." Lara said, before pausing. "Spike, was it?"

The dragon nodded.

"Tell me then, Spike..." Lara repeated, a smirk spreading across her face. "Can you fly?"

* * *

>Lara Croft and Spike watched as Marco Bartoli transformed into a dragon.

"Let me guess..." Spike said, his voice thick with sarcasm. "My turn?"

"Well, if you insist..."

Spike rolled his eyes, before dropping into the arena like room. He very quickly grew to match his opponent's' size. However, while Marco's first blast of dragon fire merely washed over Spike's scales, the return volley had a very interesting effect...

"Is the knife meant to glow like that..." Spike yelled over the ominous rumbling. "I don't feel like it's meant to glow like that."

"No, it's not..." Lara replied. Then everything flashed white.

* * *

>When Lara opened her eyes, she could tell things weren't quite right. Looking down she realised why.

_Alright, those things are ridiculous..._ she thought to herself, before turning round at the sound of heavy footsteps behind her. A very short girl with a familiarly coloured mohican had stormed up to her, and looked ready to breathe fire. Or at least vent smoke from her ears...

"Just so you know, if I ever visit your world again, I am _not_ listening to your ideas..."

* * *

>Neith stared at her screen in disbelief, before her head collided with her keyboard. Repeatedly.

"Less than ten iterations, and she's already gotten herself in Eiken... What did I get myself in for?"

* * *

>148.9 (Evilhumour)

"Say again?" Gilda blinked, looking at the letter in her claws again before looking up.

"It is clear as day," the griffon god-emperor, not Empy but simply a blowhard that inherited that title, snarked out. "The pony princess is gone, and the prophecy has come true."

Gilda sighed, looking at her pure white coat and feathers with red outlines. "Yes, I know that once the ponies fall, the griffon will rise. But what does that have to do with me?" She did her best not to whine, but she still did and her mother nipped her ear, regardless of her supposed holiness.

"Show respect Gilda!" Her mother snarled out, her claw ready to cuff her if she talked back.

"Sorry mom," Gilda grumbled, rubbing her ear. "Oh great God-Emperor of Griffonkind, what does have to do with me? And why do I have a letter requesting my presence at nations summit?"

"Well, young Gilda," the massive griffon puffed his chest out, "The prophecy was a bit mistaken, as it turns out. Celestia's former student Twilight examined the ancient text with Nig-I mean, Princess Luna, and it seems that once you were spotted, she was going to give up the duty of raising the sun to the chosen griffon of white and red, you." Pointing a talon at her, he grabbed the letter and fluffed it out to read it. "We need to go the other species so we can work together how everyone gets enough time in the sun."

Gilda faceclawed, sighing at the massive work Sunbutt just unloaded on her. She was also pissed that she was alone, as no one else Pinged back once she Woke up. Dang stealth anchors...

"I'm so going to need a strong drink for this." she muttered, but not soft enough as her mother nipped her ear again.

"Gilda Freewing, did you just say you want to drink?!_" Her mother screeched, reminding Gilda that she was currently a minor this loop.

The god-emperor of griffons merely blinked and slowly slinked away from the chosen one being read the riot act.

* * *

>AN:

148.1: Twilight Sparkle is currently "touchy".

>148.2: Luckily Blue Skies works somewhere else.148.3: It's just logic.

>148.4: If you can see power, and you look at an Anchor... usually you then have trouble seeing much of anything.148.5: It's not quite the most outrageous deception.
>148.6: I heard this one took a long time. (Persona 2 cross)148.7: #LokisdottorProblems.
>148.8: Whoops! (Tomb Raider crossover)148.9: She can, at least, perform.

156. Chapter 156

149.1 (Evilhumour)

"What are you doing?!" Twilight shouted, grabbing the stick out of Sweetie's hoofs that almost hit Rarity.

"What are you doing, darling?" Rarity grumbled, grabbing the stick back. She wasn't wearing any of her makeup and hitting herself with the stick made things better?!_ "This is from a variant, darling."

Twilight blinked, and then sighed heavily before hitting the wall with her face. "A beauty stick?! Seriously?!_"

"Well, it's better than the ugly stick that I found, Twilight," Rarity shuddered. "And I swore to never to speak of the party sti-"

"**YOU BROKE A PINKIE PROMISE!**" A voice thundered, as Twilight did the most sensible thing possible and teleport herself to the moon for safety.

* * *

>149.2 (Evilhumour)

Celestia watched the last pony leave the Day Court with a small sigh. Another long day, another long loop she couldn't dodge paperwork by dumping it on other ponies. Still, as she reached under her throne, the rewards would be gra-

With a loud meep, her throne buckled, throwing her into the now large pond around her dais. Before she could react, the roof above her retracted as she was suddenly catapulted clear across Canterlot and Equestria and straight into the middle of the frigid ocean water. Spluttering out, she found a water proof note stuck to her hoof.

_I ate your cakes Tia_

_XOXO_

_Lulu_

Celestia blinked, hearing a pop above her head. Looking up, she saw a water balloon fall and splash into her face.

* * *

>149.3 (Gamerex27)

"Blah blah blah, Elements of Harmony, Luna in the Moon, make friends," Twilight muttered to herself. "Same old, same old."

Granted, she had picked up on a Generosity Ping shortly after she Woke Up, so it wouldn't be a Lonely Loop, but she had been having a lot of vanilla, Baseline Loops for a while now. She was suddenly reminded of how boring the Loops can be at times.

Pouring herself another cup of wine, she sipped it in her magic grip, glancing at the ponies around her enjoying the festival.

"Hello, dear."

"Hi, Rarity." Twilight smiled. "Any plans for this Loop?"

"Well, Spikey-Wikey is Sleeping, so we can't go on any dates," she said, shrugging. "I was just thinking of working on some of the more esoteric designs I dreamt up. Tell me, do you think anypony would be willing to wear a dress made of a black hole?"

"That...sounds like a bad idea," the Anchor said bluntly, scratching at an itch near her horn with a forehoof. "Wouldn't wearing it devour the entire solar system?"

"Magic, darling," she reminded her. "And besides, it-"

Suddenly, as the sun went down, everything froze. Twilight found herself totally unable to move.

As she casually pondered what Nightmare Moon was doing this time, and which spell she would use to break it, she saw a blue box with a black center appear in the corner of her vision.

Slowly, agonizingly slowly, letters appeared one by one on the box.

"W-H-A-T A -H-O-R-R-I-B-L-E N-I-G-H-T-"

Whatever you are, Twilight internally growled, finish up already. My nose itches like crazy!

"T-O H-A-V-E A C-U-R-S-E."

Everypony suddenly went back into motion. As Twilight furiously scratched at her nose, she noticed how the local ponies didn't react with anything beyond a mild flinch at the interruption. "What was that?"

"You haven't checked your Loop Memories?" Rarity asked. "That's been happening ever since Celestia and Luna took over moving the heavens. Discord's last laugh. Whenever the sun goes down, time freezes for about thirty seconds and we see that. And when it comes up, we get 'THE MORNING SUN HAS VANQUISHED THE HORRIBLE NIGHT.' More of an annoyance than anything else. It's odd, to see what ponies can get used to."

"...o...kay, then," Twilight said, sipping her wineglass again. "I've had weirder Variants. But-"

"HA! HA! HAHAAAAHA! _HA!_ I AM FREE!"

Nightmare Moon's voice interrupted Twilight's thoughts, as the crowd gasped in surprise and terror.

"What have you done with the Princess?!" the usual voice demanded.

But Nightmare Moon looked a little..._different_ from her usual self. Her eyes were wild, her coat was matted and knotted all over her body, and her ethereal mane had frayed to the point where it looked like she had tried to lick a live power wire.

"She's _GONE!_" the crazier than usual Luna declared. "_GONE_, I tell you! 'Just get used to it,' she said! But how can I when that _accursed voice_ insults my _beautiful night_ every! Single! _DAY?! So now, the NIGHT SHALL LAST FOREVER! AND NOPONY SHALL INSULT IT EVER AGAIN!_"

"Wait..." Applejack said lowly. "Yer tellin' us the reason you foalnapped the Princess and... uh... wanna make night go on forever is...because you're annoyed by _the Sun Box?_"

"The thing that _everypony's_ known about since they were a foal?_" Rainbow Dash asked. 'Sheesh, for a princess, you've got really thin skin! It's not _insulting_, just annoying! Like how you molt every once in a while! Just something you need to deal with before getting on with your life!"

"You _don't_ understand!_" the crazed Nightmare continued, spittle flying from her mouth over the crowd. "You can _never_ understand! My night, forever belittled by a force nopony can ever stop! All ponies, frozen in place for half a minute_ while disasters go on! Storm clouds, unmonitored during the stop as their lightning burns homes to the ground! Uncontrolled unicorn spells devastating the countryside while their caster is indisposed! Earth ponies...okay, I don't know how this affects earth ponies, but it _must_ be bad!"_

"Um..." Fluttershy objected, "...we found solutions for those a long time ago. We just...stop working for a few seconds before the stop."

"SILENCE!" the Nightmare cackled, laughing again. "AND NOW, TO ENJOY MY GLORIOUS NIGHT! WITHOUT THAT BUCKING VOICE **FOR ONCE IN MY BUCKING LIFE! AHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH!*"

With that, she vanished in a poof of dark magic.

Twilight sighed. "Elements as usual?"

"I suppose so," Rarity said, shrugging. "I wanted to see if I could incorporate mine into a new hat, anyways."

* * *

>149.4 (fractalman)

Pinkie Pie jumped, then smacked into a shimmering cyan barrier.

"Interesting." Said GLaDOS. "Calling my barriers anti-fun walls has made them impervious to you."

There was a pause.

"Nevermind. Calling them anti-fun walls only provides a mild inconvenience for you. "

* * *

>"Pinkie Pie, I would appreciate it if you did not violate locality while taking my tests" Said GLaDOS.

"Why is that a big deal? The portal gun violates locality, and you said I could use my powers 'cause you wanted to study them!"

"The portal gun violates locality in limited ways. It cannot be used to arbitrarily skip the entire test."

"Ohhhhhh. Okie Dokie!"

* * *

>149.5 (Masterweaver)

(With apologies to all native Hindi speakers; I used google translate.)

"Twiliiiiiiight, I'm back from the breezy watching!"

Fluttershy slipped through the front door, giving the alicorn a wide, friendly, mischievous grin. Twilight took one look at her face and sighed. "Alright... what happened this time?"

"Oh, nothing out of the ordinary. I joined the crew in watching the breezies, volunteered Ponyville as a mid-route pass, met up with Tree Hugger and invited her here, and-"

"Wait wait wait. You brought Tree Hugger here _this early in the loop?!_" Twilight groaned.

"Oh, when I told her about you, she really wanted to meet you! In fact, she's right outside."

The alicorn gave out a resigned sigh, shelving the galleyfrayian textbook she had been reading. "Alright... let's get this over with. Tree Hugger? Do you want to come in?"

For a few seconds, there was silence.

"...Oh, right." A relaxed, detached voice floated through the door. "I was just feeling the ki flow of this tree, it's so unique."

"Turns out that feeling tree flows is part of her cutie mark story six times out of seven," Fluttershy whispered to Twilight. "It's alright, Tree Hugger! Twilight's ready for you!"

The green mare meandered through the front door. "Good to know. I hope that I..."

Her voice trailed into nothingness gaze fell on the purple alicorn giving her an unamused look. Her eyes went wide, the pupils dilated until they covered almost the whole surface.

Twilight blinked. "Um... are you all right?"

Without warning, Tree Hugger fell prostrate before her.

"Brahmā́ṭā, ā kā mahāna ātmā, maiā́ tārā sam'mukha hā sakatā hai aura vinamratāpārvaka mā'rā apanā kā āud'dha itanā kārā rāpa mā́ maiā́ apanā ābhā mā́ snāna hā sakatā ki pāchanā kārā li'ā sam'mānita kara rahā hāmī..."

"I-what?"

"Maiā́ tumhā́ karanā kārā li'ā brahmā́ṭā, ā kā ānādāra ātmā sunā," Tree Hugger chanted with her face downwards. "Kyā āpa mujhā batā'ā!"

"Um, Tree Hugger?" Fluttershy lowered her head. "Twilight usually casts a translation spell when she encounters foreign languages, and she... doesn't speak Hindi." She glanced up. "Is it Hindi in this universe?"

"I... don't know, actually, I'll have to check-Tree Hugger, what are you doing?" Twilight asked.

"I only wish to feel the vibe of your aura," Tree Hugger humbly explained. "You are the Soul of the Universe..."

"What-No I'm-Look, just because I'm Equestria's anchor doesn't mean I'm some sort of core of reality!"

Tree Hugger slowly lifted her face. "It... kind of does."

"No. No it doesn't, and also stand up. I'm not going to be worshiped for being randomly selected for this job."

The earth pony reluctantly got to her hooves. "I am sorry, Great Soul of the Universe. I allowed my eagerness for your presence to color my view of what you would wish. But I stand ready to listen to your wisdom; let your reverberations purify my inner self."

Fluttershy winced. "I... I'm sorry, Twilight, I meant for this to be just 'this is an awkward situation' kind of... thing, not..."

"No, it's alright... Look, Tree Hugger. I'm old, well traveled, and educated. And that... is basically it, that's where all my wisdom comes from."

"That is also true of mine. Age, observation, and learning." Tree Hugger bowed her head. "You have so much more, though, though your own life."

"O...kay, I can see where you're coming from there-Look, the point I'm trying to make is that I am not a god, and I don't like to be worshipped as one."

Tree Hugger stared at her. "You're so bright... so bright. Even if you aren't a god... you are _amazing_." She took a breath. "I... I can try to hold in my feelings, around others, around the unenlightened... but..." She shook her head. "You _are_ the Great Soul of the Universe. I cannot deny that to myself."

* * *

>"...so now I have a semi-loyal cultist-type pony sometimes," Twilight grumbled as she sipped her drink. "Anything new with you, Mac?"

The red stallion shrugged. "Learned ta throw mah voice."

* * *

>149.6 (Evilhumour)

Shining Armor blinked he Woke up to his wedding day, with a black chitin mare gasping loudly next to him as the door slammed opened as another Chrysalis stood in the doorway, with Twilight propping her up.

"Get away from my Shiny you monster!" the changeling shouted, as the mare next to him flashed blue and revealed to be a wicked looking Cadence hissing at them.

"I will not let you ruin _MY_ glorious day!" with a shout, thousand of crystal ponies began to invade.

Biting back a sigh, Shining took the measures to eject the invaders for this wedding, catching the smirk on Twilight's face knowing she won't let him live this down any time soon.

* * *

>149.7 (wildrook)

The doors to the bar opened, revealing Twilight and Zecora looking like they went through Tartarus on Equestria.

"Due to the extremity of our plight," Zecora said to the stallion, "five servings of our usual poisons for tonight."

Big Mac cringed. "Eeyup," he muttered, looking at Berry Punch, who got the idea as they sat down at the counter.

"What happened to you two?" Berry Punch asked them.

Twilight groaned. "Let's just say that I now appreciate King Aspen's life of solitude," she muttered. "More so than usual because he doesn't attack unless something threatens the Everfree."

"But where we Looped into was quite a pain," Zecora replied, "when the Princesses, the Caribou have slain."

Big Mac cringed. Not a lot of words can be said about what happened...but from what's been happening, it sounded like they were beyond "Bureau-Level" bad loops, from what he can tell.

Berry Punch looked at the two. "I know Twilight can go Alicorn," she said, "but remind me, Zecora, can you do the same? Because you might need it..."

"When one can manipulate the plant life," Zecora replied, "you tend to avoid a lot of strife. Diluting certain materials in your being, it would be a blessing to gain horn and wing."

Twilight winced. "And I REALLY am glad you managed to find a loophole in their whole Magic Immunity gimmick, Zecora," she replied, the Zebra smiling.

"The forest is the best place to hide a tree," she replied. "When living in the one next to Ponyville, the most dangerous predator...is me."

* * *

>149.8 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

The door to Fluttershy's cottage shook violently, before a hole opened up from a familiar orange hoof. Fluttershy arrived moments later, with Angel Bunny giving a withering glare at the mare who had damaged her home. Applejack leaned back and gave an uncomfortable laugh, "Uh...Ah'll fix that right up. Sorry, 'Shy."

Fluttershy waved her off, "Oh don't worry. I've been meaning to get the door replaced for awhile now."

Applejack shook her head before a positively boiling expression appeared on the farmer's face, "Is that no good, varmint, Discord, around?!"

Fluttershy shook her head, "I'm sorry, but no. He left this morning on an all expenses paid cruise around the world on his flying whale. It was the nicest flying whale I ever met."

Applejack grabbed her hat and threw it on the ground, "Consarnet! That varmint turned my apple orchard into a potato orchard!"

Fluttershy put a hoof to her mouth, "That's awful!"

She patted her on the shoulder, "Well, you could use this chance to improve your potato cider."

The farmer threw up her hooves and stomped out the door.

* * *

>149.9 (Evilhumour)

As Applejack swam in the waters, she could swear she was hearing music.

_Dunnu_

Her ear flicked, head turning around. She did hear something!

_Dunnu_

But Dashie was off to the side and there was fin sticking out of the water...

_Dunnunnnunnnunnu-_

"Lyra, if ya are trying to sneak up on me, it'd help if ya didn't sing the theme to Jaws." Applejack said deadpan to the water in front of her.

The mint green seapony poked up her head and pouted. Swimming away, she muttered "Shoo bee doo," under her breath before swimming after an unobservant Dashie, who let out a loud shriek as the seapony grabbed her rear hoof.

* * *

>149.10 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

**The Unsung Loops: Klingon Language****

"Fluttershy! May the blood of your enemies fertilize your fields."

Cheerilee's eyes were twitching. This was definitely one of the craziest loops she had lived through. Worse, Twilight had just shrugged and decided to go with it.

"And may you die gloriously in battle...if that's OK with you," Came Fluttershy's reply. It was all spoken in the native language of the warrior race from Star Trek, the Klingons. It wouldn't be so disconcerting if they actually acted like Klingons, backing up their statements.

Fluttershy's kind eyes landed on Cheerilee, which momentarily put her at ease. And then Element of Kindness opened her mouth, "Cheerilee, let us drink from the hollowed out skulls of our foes as we dine in honor tonight, if it's not too much trouble."

Cheerilee gave a weak smile and a nod, but couldn't bring herself to reply. Thankfully, she was saved from responding when Rainbow Dash slammed against the library window. Cheerilee muttered, "The wind does not respect a fool," before shoving a hoof in her mouth and looking around. Fluttershy just nodded sagely, as if she conveyed a deep truth of life. Twilight was holding in her giggles at Cheerilee, who just shook her head and walked away.

* * *

>Things finally came to a head when she saw Diamond Tiara commenting on how the Crusaders should drown themselves in their own blood, and the crusaders standing up and telling her they would tear her lungs out. DT stepped back a bit at being outnumbered, then muttered that fools and their heads would soon be parted. Cheerilee stepped over in preparation to end this nonsense, when the crusaders said, "Death is an event that should be shared together!"

The other two shouted out war cries together, and something inside Cheerilee snapped as she started screaming, running all the way to Twilight's Library. She opened the door and slammed it shut. Spike walked through one of the hallways, spotted Cheerilee and asked, "Have your battles wounded you? Will you die gloriously in battle soon?"

Cheerilee screamed, "Twilight!"

* * *

>Eons of Loops later

Spike looked from the movie projector to the teacher and asked, "What was up with that loop anyway?"

Cheerilee sighed, "Twilight and I did some research in Canterlot. Apparently, a Klingon Bird of Prey had crashed into Equestria millennia before Celestia or Luna arose to power. It became Equestria's primary language, and none fully understood the implications of what they were saying. Except for Twilight who was awake and rolling with it, everyone thought they were wishing each other a wonderful morning, inviting me to lunch or something else non harmful."

* * *

>149.11 (Evilhumour)

One Crazy Week Part Five

Twilight groaned, shaking herself out of the crater she had been blasted in by that damnable paintball blast. Once she figured out which the girls did it, she was _so_ going to send them to the Moon for a _very_ long time out.

As she stood, she realized several details as her sleep deprived brain put several facts out of order.

Two, there was Changelings coming to take her to the hive to meet the Queen. Six, she was about to pass out from exhaustion of running around yesterday, avoiding the paint warfare from above and crashing a great distance away after tripping over several paint mines a once. Three, Chrysalis was Awake, she could feel the un-accounted-for Kindness. Five, the paint she was covered in seemed to be a magical dye mixture, which meant she'd be this colourful eyesore for a _very_ long time. One, she was in the badlands. Four, she still had that damn collar.

Shaking her head, as the mental list reorder itself, Twilight smiled to herself as her thoughts were now in proper order and promptly passed out for a nice, long sleep.

Or it would have been if she had not been woken up immediately, feeling slightly drained of her anger for some reason. She _should_ be angry, being woken up in a strange bed after dealing with a snake destroying her home, nearly losing her home to the bank, getting swept away at sea and forced to wear this humiliating collar and being bombarded by paint constantly for twenty four hours.

Wait, _why_ was she in a strange bed again and why she wasn't she scared?

"Oh good, you're awake Twilight," Chrysalis smiled, clapping her hooves together, as she stood in the doorway. "How are you feeling? Angry at the situation?"

"...no actually, I'm not," Twilight blinked, confused. She should be feeling something hostile considering what the last four-five days had been like, but she was feeling completely indifferent to the whole matter. "Why am I not angry and why can I not get angry?" Twilight was reminded that being calm when you are angry is scary, and she learned that being calm while you are incapable of being angry is even more terrifying, considering how much the Changeling Queen gulped.

"It was something someone showed me, a trick to harvest emotions," Chrysalis said, trotting over to her. "While Doctor Friday's methods a bit much for me, that book she had did offer us some ideas in doing what her magics does in a less harmful way. I think our first test was a success Twilight, all things considered."

"First test-did you take my anger away?" She would have liked to snap, but she simply could not draw out the emotion fully. At the same time, she felt a trickle of the burning anger coming back to her and soon she could lecture until the next day. "Wait, all things considered?"

"Yes, and while your magic is being repressed by that adorable cork and collar, the test worked perfectly on you and I do know how to scale back for other ponies." Chrysalis smile grew, which should have worried her but she wasn't- "Would you like to help me test for the other emotions?"

"Sure, okay." Twilight said without a second thought before looking unamused at Chrysalis. "You took my worries too, didn't you?"

"Yup." The smile was reaching the ears now, her crooked horn glowing.

"So I wouldn't complain about this."

"Exactly."

"You do know once I get my magic back and full control over my emotions, you are going to be spending several years on the moon for this, right?"

"I'd be surprised if you didn't send me to the moon Twilight," Instead of Chrysalis's magic reaching her, it placed a piece of paper of Twilight's lap with a lot of notes. "Would you mind taking notes as we proceed? I'd like to make sure that this process is not harmful."

With the prospect of learning something new about magic, taking notes of the first true experiment of its kind, Twilight could only nod her head as the two of them spent the day exploring Twilight's emotional being.

* * *

Celestia looked down at her hoof.

She looked over her cards. Her sister looked back at her, her eyes peering over the neatly assembled card hand in her magical grip.

"Okay," Celestia said. "Turn two. I play Lorewalker Cho,"

A magical representation of the Pandaren appeared on their life sized battlefield, bowing to the Dirarch of the Sun before turning to Luna's side of the field.

"Very well, then." Luna placed down a card. "I play the Coin I am entitled to as the second player to gain a temporary mana crystal, and summon King Mukla into play."

A gigantic gorilla materialized on the field.

"A five/five creature on turn two," Celestia noted. "That's worrying. But," she said, as Mukla threw two cards at her, "I get two Banana cards for it."

"Ah, but if you use them, Cho will just give them right back to me thanks to his ability," Luna said, grinning. "Sister, you have been hoist by your own petard."

"The game's only just started," Celestia said, grinning.

[br]

"Don't touch the Terminal, Spike," Twilight said. "It took forever to get a good copy of the Demon Summoning Program, and if you step on the summoning circle, you may end up fusing with the demon I hired, and then it'll be uncomfortable for everyone."

"Hired?" Spike asked, as he walked into the room. "How do you _fuse_ a demon, any...ways..." he trailed off, as he saw Tirek sitting on his haunches inside a giant glass tube, reading a newspaper.

He looked up at Spike, and shrugged. "It's a living," he simply said to the dragon, turning back to the sports section.

Twilight mouthed the word "Variant" to her Number One Assistant. "Now, what happens to you when you get fused, Mr. Centaur?"

"We just head back to Tartarus, and the new demon you call forth inherits out skills and power." Tirek rolled his eyes, as he flipped to the comics page. "I fail to understand why you little ponies _insist_ on calling it fusion when it clearly _isn't_!"

"-play Faceless Manipulator to create another Lorewalker Cho! And...I feed him a _banana!_" they heard Celestia say from outside.

"Two can play at this game, dear sister," Luna said in response. "I summon my own Lorewalker Cho. Then, I play a Faceless manipulator of my own to make a _fourth_ Lorewalker Cho!"

Spike's face fell. "Oh...oh no."

"And I _feed_ him a _banana!_"

"Gah! That's four Bananas I get. I end my turn, and-YES!
DEATHWING!"

"...Oh, dear, sister, you've hit your hoof limit, I'm afraid. You can't have more than ten cards in Hearthstone in your hoof at the same time. You must discard your Deathwing."

"No, we need to stop them!" Spike yelled. "Quick, Twilight, find Pinkie Pie and have her bring the stuff she needs for banana cake along!"

"They're just _playing a card game,_" Twilight said.

"No, you don't understand!" he yelled. "I played it with Ysera! We had two Chos of our own, and we spammed Coins at each other! We ended up _drowning in money,_" and we had to pause the game until we could walk back to our bodies and resurrect! They'll flood Ponyville with-"

"Have. Some. Bananas," Celestia said in a dangerous tone. "You _MOTHERBUCKER!_"

With that, bananas began to spill forth from the Princess' playing field, littering Twilight's floor with the fruit.

"EAT THEM!" Celestia yelled, laughing evilly. "EAT YOUR POTASSIUM!"

"NO! Luna yelled back. "WE ARE ALLERGIC! _YOU_ HAVE THE BANANAS!"

More and more bananas began to pour into the room, pilling up to Twilight's barrel height.

"Okay, we _do_ need to stop them," Twilight muttered. "Sorry, Mr. Centaur, we'll continue this later. We need to have an intervention for Celestia and her banana obsession!"

* * *

>149.13

(Gamerex27)

Deconstruction:

"-the point where I would show you a graphic on the smart board, but the wires for that are still broken."

Twilight Awoke mid-class. Human with technicolor skin, ridiculous hairstyles, looking like her friends...no doubt about it, this was Canterlot High, alright. Around the time she first came here.

"Hey, uh..." Rainbow Dash raised her hand. "Miss Cheerilee, _what happened_ after that big brawl, anyways?"

"I'm...not supposed to speak of it, Miss Dash," the teacher replied. "If you _must_, I'm sure your classmates would be happy to inform you. Anyways, since I can't continue with the lesson, that's all for today. You're all dismissed."

As the students began to pile out of the room, Twilight grabbed her bookbag, then started for the door. Hm. Looked like a minor Variant where her Unwake self actually enrolled in classes for some time.

"-gonna help Fluttershy at the animal shelter?"

If Twilight were in her usual body, her ears would've perked at that statement. That was Applejack...talking to Rarity? But they were supposed to be feuding at this point in the Baseline?

"I'll have to stop at home to get changed first," Rarity said, smiling, "but yes, I will. Speaking of the weekend, has everyone else said if they'll be coming to the movies with us?"

"Eeeyup!" Applejack said, getting up from her seat with her friend. "Dashie's headed there after her game, Pinkie said yes before Ah even finished askin' her, and Fluttershy's goin' too."

"Wonderful!" Rarity said, grinning. "I'll pay for it all, of course."

"Yah don't hafta-"

"Applejack," she said, stopping the farmgirl. "Of course I do. I have to make up for everything Shimmer tricked us into doing. If that transfer student hadn't..." she sighed, shaking her head. "Best not to think about it. Now, what did you say Applebloom invented?"

As they continued talking on their way out, Twilight followed them out, her legs running on autopilot. They never got back together until she herself exposed what Sunset did, so some other Looper had to be at work here.

She sent out a Ping. Before she could even take a breath, she got a loud one: a piercing magical signature that thrummed around her soul, and made her stumble in her steps. After that, she got a Kindness response and one with no Element, these ones at normal volume, and a bit closer to her.

"Hi, Twilight." Turning around, she saw Fluttershy behind her, beaming. "You feeling Loopy?"

"As always," she said, with a mixture of amusement and bemusement. "...you remember Sunset's plans being derailed before we Woke Up too, right?"

"I do," she said, nodding, "but I can't seem to remember how, or who did it. There's something there about a transfer student breaking her mind control spell and managing to fight her to a standstill in spite of her magic, but that's it. It's a bit chaotic in there."

"Did someone say chaotic?" Discord asked, popping out from inside a nearby locker in the form of a teenage student. "I have to say, I've never seen such an exquisite aura of chaotic magic ever! It's still floating everywhere after whatever big fight went down!" He patted his hand against a nearby wall. "Why, the place is practically _oozing_ entropy!"

"Okay, _that_'s a mental image I never needed to see," the Anchor replied, grimacing. "That aside, do you guys want to find this guy? I heard a _really_ loud Ping before, like someone was shouting in my ear right next to me. Unless this is some kind of superhero-ish Variant or something, another Looper _has_ to be at work here."

* * *

>Slowly, the trio approached where they had heard the Ping: in front of a row of lockers around halfway across the school. Hesitantly, Twilight sent out another Ping. The intense, overwhelming response came from very close to her. And the only other person there besides the three of them was a boy inputting the combination into his locker.

"...Hey," Fluttershy said, hesitantly. "..You were the one who-

"Beat the crap out of Shimmer and stopped her from brainwashing everyone in town?" the boy confirmed, without even turning around. "Yeah, that's me. Funny how no one ever seems to consider that maybe, _just maybe_, some tricks don't work on everyone? A magician doesn't have to show their secrets for someone else to figure them out."

"...well, that's nice of you (I guess)..." Twilight said, "...but you were kinda risking your life there."

"I'd just come back next time," he replied. "Loops and all that. It _was_ you who sent out the Ping, right?"

"Uh...yes. You _may_ want to be a bit more _careful_ about checking for Loopers. If you're wrong about that, people will think you're crazy."

"Can't say I give a damn what anyone else thinks," the boy said, snorting. Wrenching his locker open, he knelt to the ground, rummaging around in his backpack. "'Sides, it was worth it to see the _look_ on her face when she realized every single one of her _perfect little plans_ were falling to pieces."

"...Ah, so we've got a vigilante on our hands, then!" Discord said, grinning and slapping the boy on his back.

The force of the impact ruffled the student's shirt, causing the hood of his sweatshirt, which had previously been propped up as if by a hook, to fall flat against the shirt. Revealed in its stead was a small, jet-black unicorn-like horn, growing from the the boy's neck.

Fluttershy and Twilight suddenly went very, very still.

"Not really," the boy said, turning around to reveal a young man, dark haired and of Asian descent. Also, with a gauze patch over one of his eyes. "I...I know what it's like," he admitted. "What she did to those girls. I know what it feels like to have your friends ripped away from you, to see everyone you know turn against you and hate your guts. I know how it feels to be alone. Damn if I'm ever gonna let that happen to anyone else, ever again."

"Even if you get your eye poked out for the rest of the Loop?" Discord asked, not noticing his friends' sudden freeze-up. "I mean, those things don't come cheap in magic-less worlds. You have to get a tooth removed and have a doctor jam it into your eye socket to grow again, and that's just gross!"

"Steal her phone, show those girls how she screwed them over, then beat the living shit out of her when she tries to mind control everyone into her own personal army." the boy said, shrugging. "Not hard at all. Even if I get an eye gouged out from her fingernail, it's worth it. As if I'm gonna let one little bitchy witch stop me."

"...Naoki?" Fluttershy said, in a barely audible voice. "Naoki Kashima?"

"Yeah, that's my name," he said, as he started walking past them. "Hey, you're one of those girls the redheaded bitch was trying to screw over, right?...I feel like I know you from somewhere. Before this Loop, I mean."

"...Naoki, it's me. Fluttershy."

Naoki froze mid-step. For several seconds, he didn't move. Didn't even breathe.

Eventually, he forced himself to turn around, and looked Fluttershy square in the eye. "...hey," he said, after a long period of silence.

"...Are you feeling better no-"

"Yeah, I'm fine," he said, cutting off Twilight mid-sentence. "You heard all about it, right? The Edit? What we saw, what we did? It's gone now. I dealt with it. We dealt with it."

"...I'm sorry!" Fluttershy blurted out, tears welling up in her eyes. "It's...it's our fault. If we knew that it wasn't the Nightmare Force, it wasn't a ghost, but your Shadow, we would have been-"

"The hell are you apologizing for?!" Naoki snarled. Catching himself, he gave her a sad smile, then sighed. "All you did was try and stop a crazy bastard who tried to kill you and everyone you love," he said softly. "You weren't the one to lose all self-control and give in to every worst part of himself. You didn't have a virus eating away at your soul. You didn't have your sanity snap like a twig and kill everyone you see for so many Loops after that."

"And you weren't the one who almost Ascended after everything was said and done, just to make it end. You weren't the one weak enough to give in. It was all me."

The inhabitants of the hallway were dead silent for a few moments.

"It's my fault," Naoki stressed. "All of it. I'm the one who owes you an apology. So...I'm...I'm..." he tried to say, then sighed. "I'm sorry. For everything I put you through. Your friends, your daughter, your world, yourselves...It's all on me. There's no evil spirit to blame, no angry, vengeful god out to make my life hell...just me, and my mistakes. All you did was try and stop my Shadow-try and stop me," he corrected himself. "Get over it. You're not the ones at blame here."

"Naoki-"

The demon sighed. "Look...look. I...need some time to myself," he finally said. "Just 'cause I get way more Fused Loops now, doesn't mean I've got to live a normal life in...ever. I just want to get the year done, graduate, do...whatever you're supposed to do after that, I forget what, all that stuff that happens in normal life.. It's not that I want to be normal or anything: I just need...I need a break."

"If...you really need to see me again," he said, turning his gaze away and walking away, "I'll be here. No way I'll be in your own world. Not for a long time."

With that, he turned the corner and walked away.

Both Elements of Harmony were silent for a few seconds.

"What the hay just happened?!" Discord suddenly said, breaking the awkward silence that had fallen over the group. "I have no idea what any of that was about! At all! You've never been this down since the Molestia thing!"

"...It's a long story," Twilight finally said. "...It's good to know that it's over with..."

"But it still feels like it's our fault," Fluttershy whispered. "We should have been able to figure out that the Shadow was messing with his memories. That it made everything we said and did so much worse. We should have known."

"Like he said," Twilight replied, "there's nothing we can do about it now. Hey...why don't you take a break? Go to those movies your Unawake self was going to see with the girls?"

"...alright," Fluttershy said, wiping her eyes. "I will. There's not much to cry over anymore, anyways. I...heard the stories about The Edit, and how the Amala Loopers did all that. But..." she sighed. "No, he's right. We shouldn't brood over what went wrong, especially if he did deal with the problem like he and everyone else from Amala said they did. I guess...as long as I can remember that, I'll be fine. See you later."

"Wait."

Discord grabbed Fluttershy by the shoulder, pulling her back to himself and Twilight.

"Look," he said, with an almost never seen before, actually serious expression on his face, "if whatever happened almost made you cry, I'm not letting this slip by. I want to hear what happened. No one messes with my friends and gets away with it! I'm the only one allowed to mess with my friends!"

"...Alright, meet us at lunch, then," Twilight said. "This is going to be a long story."

* * *

>"It's lunchtime, we're all sitting comfortably, and the food surprisingly isn't terrible today," Discord rattled off, frowning. "You promised to explain what happened between you and Short, Pale, and Horny. I probably should have made you Pinkie Promise it, come to think of it," he muttered.

"...no, I can talk about it," Fluttershy said, sighing. "It happened millions of years ago. It was painful, but..."

"It's alright, Fluttershy," Twilight said, taking her friends' hand in her own. "If you don't feel comfortable going on, I'll pick up for you."

"No thanks," she said softly. "I was there, so I need to talk about it." She took a deep gulp of her water, then began. "No matter how much it hurt. It started during a normal Loop-a bunch of other Loopers were Awake, but Twilight wasn't. After she did her checklist for the festival, I went into town to do some errands. This young colt ran into me, but he said he was sorry: he was in a rush to meet with his friends."

"What does that have to do with-"

"And then he Awoke, and hit me so hard I went flying into the Everfree."

Discord abruptly stopped his question in the middle of his sentence. "...Oh."

"I managed to calm him down by Pinging him," she continued, "but he was surprised by that. He said he'd forgotten we were Looping, since he didn't get out of his Loop much, and went off instinct from when we first met." She paused. "...in a Bureau Loop."

She took another sip of water. "Apparently our Bureau selves personally converted his friends and he...did not take it well. He wasn't in a good mental state when we met-pacing, really deep breathing, twitching eyes and legs. He looked like he was ready to just...collapse. Or just stop."

"I take it he didn't want your help, since all this happened?" Discord asked.

"Not after the Bureau." she said, nodding. "That was a big reason why he didn't want us helping him...but it may have had something to do with pride, too. He refused to let us help. Vehemently refused. So, I sent him through the Mirror-here-so he could cool down as a human. We aren't supposed to force help on someone who doesn't want it, so I just helped him find some place quiet." She paused for a few moments, trying to find the right words. "That was a big mistake. He needed help, even if he didn't want it. From us, from anyone...he was on the edge. And, from what I gathered from Loopers from local sub-Branches, something happened here that snapped his last nerve."

She opened her mouth to continue. "Antheee-" she stopped. "Twilight, can you..."

"...alright, I understand," Twilight said, nodding.

"No, I'm fine," Fluttershy said hoarsely. "I'm...just not used to talking for so long, and my throat's dry." She smiled slightly, rubbing at her throat. "Could you keep going for now?"

"Uh...alright." Passing the Bearer of Kindness her untouched glass of water, Twilight picked up the story. "I wasn't personally there for this, but I think I can tell the rest well enough. So, the girls met up with the other two Loopers from his Branch-one was only on his dozenth or so Loop-and then everyone started seeing fireworks on the Moon. Everypony thought it was for the festival. It became clear it wasn't when of those flashes of light brought Luna's nearly-dead body to the stage. She had enough time to choke out a warning to Celestia, and...died.

"Then Naoki showed up out of nowhere and threw Celestia into a black hole. He also shoved my Unawake self into his Pocket. He looked worse than before-hang on..." Twilight grabbed a pencil from her purse and started doodling on a napkin. "I really need to brush up on my drawings one of these Loops," she said, apologetically, sliding it over to Discord.

The spirit of Chaos picked up the napkin and stared at it. "Yeeesh," he said, staring at the mangy, unkempt, and blood-splattered pony with skeletal wings and a horn poking out of his neck rather than his brow. "That doesn't look good. I'll fix that."

"Wha-" Twilight was cut off as Discord snatched away her pencil and started drawing on the napkin.

"Done!" he said, sliding pencil and paper back. "That, Sparkle, is how you draw."

Twilight glanced at the moustache, top hat, and cane Discord had drawn on Naoki's image, and failed to suppress a few giggles. "That makes it a bit less scary," she said. "Anyways, he started ranting and raving about how all our lives were nothing but a happy dream, and he would show us a nightmare and kill us all, and so on. AJ figured out pretty quickly that he was possessed: twitching in place, constant spasms in his body, echoing voice, all of that. And also that 'Naoki Kashima is dead. There is only the Fiend.' That was kind of a giveaway. So they lured him into an open space where he couldn't hurt anypony, and went to go grab Trixie, since she was the only Element of Magic Awake there. Priority one was an exorcism: try and use stunning and restraining spells on him long enough to Element Blast him."

"When Dashie and Trixie got back," Fluttershy continued, "he'd started drawing Equestria into a pocket dimension called a Domain. We went in there, and found him. He...uh...was wearing Celestia's coat like a cape (though it looked kind of fake, so it was probably an illusion), and he trapped us in a Heartsong. A really dark Heartsong. He...sang about how everything was meaningless, we were no different from him, the usual villain stuff. Something in the last line of the song gave Nyx an idea, so she jumped into Naoki's mindscape while we fought him. Eventually, we wore him down to the point where we could hit him with the Elements. We nailed him..."

Fluttershy was silent for a moment, as she took another sip of water.

"They didn't work?" Discord guessed, shifting uncomfortably in place.

"They didn't," Fluttershy confirmed. "We hit him around a dozen times, but they didn't really do anything noticeable, aside from sapping at his strength."

"That makes no _sense!_" Discord exploded, making the two women sitting across from him jump slightly. "When _I_ went through my evil phase, they turned me to stone! They blasted the Nightmare out of Luna? How come _they_, of all kinds of magic, _couldn't_ do anything?!_ Why couldn't they get rid of _one_ little possessing spirit?!"

"Because I _wasn't_ being possessed."

"...Hey," Twilight said, tapping her fingers together.

"Hey." Naoki sat down at the table next to Discord, and drummed his fingers against the table. "I guess I should explain. The thing in control...it _was_ me. A part of me, anyways. You ever been to the Persona Branch?"

"You don't need to dance around the issue. Just tell him."

"I need some _context_ first, Purple," the Demi-Fiend said, rolling his good eye. "Anyways...there's something in psychology called a Shadow. It's...everything negative about you. Every repressed thought, everything about you you don't want to admit, every darkest secret, every bit of self-doubt and loathing squeezed into a corner of your mind. In that Branch, your Shadow can _exit_ your body and try to kill you. My Branch is closely connected to theirs, since we're all in Amala, so things cross over...But, my Shadow was different. It _was_ part of me._ It _knew_ it couldn't kill me. Not with the Loops going on. So, it tried the next best thing. To _break_ me.

"It grabbed control of my body-something to do with me losing all hope and Ideal Energy, according to Suou when I asked him about Shadows, it happens sometimes-and did everything they told you about. The thing is...it didn't even let me _see_ was really going on. It screwed with my senses, made you guys look like _massive_ douchebags who were trying to kill me for _daring_ to disrupt your Sanctuary. Locked away all my good memories, made every negative emotion I had kick into overdrive. Once Nyx got to the center of my mind and broke the Shadow's hold on me...it used the last bits of its energy to blow my body up. It ended the Loop."

The table fell silent, as Naoki took a bite of his burger, and Discord pondered this all.

"So, the Elements couldn't do anything...because the Shadow was part of you, and not some ghost grabbing your body for a joyride and a night on the town."

"Yeah," Naoki confirmed. "You can't run away from your own Shadow. It's like the shadow the sun casts on you: if you try to get away from it, it follows you just as fast. Try to get rid of it by shining a torch-or Magical Bulls_T MacGuffin, I guess-on it, and the shadow's still there. You can't make your problems go away, in the blink of an eye, by just firing a flashlight at them. There's no easy way out."

"Getting rid of the dark part of you leaves you nothing but an empty, giggling dumbass, since it's got the good things about you that you hide away too. And stuff. There's only one way to get rid of your Shadow. To face up to it yourself. And I was too much of a coward to admit when I was beaten, and that's where all of that came from. And you know what came next. Rampage across Loops, me killing a...a lot of people, I tired myself out of it and tried to Ascend, I got stopped, then the Edit. Heavy stuff."

"But, hey," he said, grinning, "when your kid brought her MacGuffin of Honesty into my head, the leftover energy broke down those fake memories the Shadow put in. I saw what you guys-here and some of the other, older Loopers I fought like the Original 7-really did. You didn't give up, you didn't take the easy way out and just kill me: you kept on fighting no matter what, to try and stop my Shadow. It reminded me: just because my Loop is pretty much the worst place ever, there are worlds and people worth fighting for. So I fought to get out, and I won."

"...and this is the part where you tell us about how terrible your Loop is, and how you're so alone even with Fused and Variant Loops?" Discord said, glaring at Naoki. "Seriously, haven't we had enough dark stuff today?" He snapped his fingers, and the lights in the cafeteria briefly shined brighter, blinding everyone. "Let's get back to the jokes and fun!" He munched on Naoki's burger.

"I could save it for-" Naoki blinked, and looked at his empty hands. Then he stared at Discord eating his food. "Crafty bastard," he said, chuckling.

"Knew I'd could break the ice!" Discord said, pumping his fist as he opened the burger and poured some ketchup on it, as Twilight rolled her eyes and Fluttershy stared at him disapprovingly.

"See, now you're ruining perfectly good food," Naoki said mockingly, reaching for his food, only for Discord to yank it away.

The foreign Looper crossed his arms, then smirked. "Those Variants you're talking about? Never had a single one."

Discord froze mid-bite. "Huh?"

Naoki grabbed his food back, and planted it on his plate. " Gotcha. Seriously, though. I said, I never had any Variants back home. And before the Edit, I had so few Fused Loops I can actually count how many there were, out of billions of Loops. For billions of years, I was trapped in my Home Loop. Almost totally alone, since Pixie was the only other Looper for a long time, and she was Awake about one in around a few thousand Loops.

"Home's a hell of a place to be stuck, too," he went on. "The world ends in the first half-hour, and there's no way to stop it. Trust me, I've tried everything. Six billion people, wiped out in the blink of an eye. A few of my old friends, ones I'd known since childhood, survive...and then go insane and fuse themselves to demons in a gambit to take part in remaking the world. Either they end up dying after being attacked by one another or by the asshat who orchestrated everything to get his perfect world, or I have to off them, since it's my destiny to break a never-ending cycle of destruction and creation by killing all the candidates that can make a new world. Now, it hurt like hell, but the first time through, I put that behind me, since it was more important to break the system that caused all of this than to grieve over what I lost. Then the Loops happened, and I got a second chance. So I tried to save them. And failed. It started again, and I tried something different. And failed. And again. And failed. And again. And failed. You get the picture."

"No matter how many times I try to think about it, I still can't get it," Fluttershy said, staring down at the table. "How can a world push people around that much? How can an entire universe be a giant bully?"

"The universe is broken. You know that's what the Loops are, right? Not some way to live forever and have fun. It's a desperate attempt to hold Yggdrasil together before it falls apart. Some places were hit a lot harder than others, and mine was pretty bad off." Naoki finished his burger, and sighed. "Hell, even after the Edit-even after Masakado helped us rip that glitch causing all the railroading and dark crap out of our codes, I can't save my world or my friends. I'm not there too often, anyways, 'cuz I'm usually in Fused Loops. The Junkyard, Dante's place, Mikado, anywhere. I just...made new friends."

"So that's what happened," he concluded. "I was too stubborn to just give up on my friends or my Loop-to leave a lost cause-and it drove me crazy, which lead to what they were telling you about. No one knew anything was wrong because I didn't tell anyone. I told myself that whining about it wouldn't fix anything, for billions of years, but I kind of took it to an extreme. Guess I thought that would admitting that I couldn't change anything would mean I admit defeat. Stupid, I know. It's my fault, yeah. But it's beyond all of us. I don't think any of us even thought about it until we bumped into each other."

"Y...yeah," Fluttershy said. "It was all a long time ago, and after we heard about the Edit."

"It's all in the past," Twilight said. She looked at Naoki. "Right?"

"...Yeah, it is." he said, getting up. "Thanks for the food."

"The fo-" Discord quickly glanced down at his plate, seeing that his noodles were gone. He glared at Naoki as he dropped the chopsticks back on the lunch tray. "You're not supposed to do that back!"

"Whatever." He started walking for the door.

"Naoki. Wait."

He paused mid step. "What?" he asked, turning around to see Twilight also stand up. "Is Sunset back in school or something? You want me to beat her up again?"

"No." The other Anchor smiled. "We're...we're seeing a movie later tonight."

"A movie," the Demi-Fiend echoed.

"It's been out a few days," she continued, "so there should be a few seats."

"You're asking me out?!_" he asked, in disbelief. "Look, all that stuff is water under the bridge, but I'm sure as hell not gonna go out_ with you!"

"I didn't mean it like that!" Twilight glanced back at Fluttershy, who nodded approvingly. "I just thought you might want to come with us. You said_ you never got out of your home Loop until the Edit, so you probably haven't gotten the chance to enjoy other places' cultures yet."

"...me." he said. "You're asking me_. Me, the guy who went insane and tried to kill all your friends. Me, the guy who infected your Unawake self with a hate plague that made you try to eat your daughter_. Me, the guy who broke your Sanctuary's perfect record by being too stubborn to save?!_ Me, the guy who almost Ascended before I got knocked out of the ritual and saw the thing_ behind all the shit I've been through?"

"...um...yeah," she said. "You said_ all of that was in the past. Were you lying to us?"

The two stared each other down for a moment.

"...now I know_ you're doing this on purpose," he growled, scratching the back of his neck (and horn). "'Cuz if I don't_ come with you, that'd mean I learned nothing about what I went through. You can't let the past drag you down. You have to **move on**." He thought for a few more moments.

"...it's a chick flick, isn't it?"

Twilight nodded.

"...alright, sure,_" he said, giving her a small smile. "I don't care if it's Twilight, or M.D. Geist, or Evangelion, or anything at all. I haven't had popcorn in millions_ of years. Should be a nice way to wind down."

* * *

>"A nice way to wind down?!" Twilight echoed, as she ducked under the seats. "You could have told_ me there were demons in the mall and all over town after Sunset tried her coup!"

"I thought you knew!" the Demi-Fiend yelled from his seat several rows back, as he grabbed a worm-like parasite from his Pocket and swallowed it. "_Everyone_ knew! Why'd you think everyone stopped using their phones in class?!" he asked, wincing as the Magatama re-wrote his entire biological makeup to give him immunity to the fires burning all around them. "'Cause they had to put the _Demon Summoning Program_ on their phones to _survive walking home_ after Shimmer's takeover! They didn't want to text their friends in class and blow them up with a Agidyne spell by a misclick!"

"At least no one's died yet!" Fluttershy added, as she carefully pulled a druid's staff out of her Pocket for battle.

"Not 'fer lack of tryin'!" Applejack shouted, punching a demon in the face.

Rarity shrieked as she was hit by a fireball, the Harmonizer on her phone stopping her body from turning to ashes in a single hit. Then she looked down and screamed. But not because it had taken off a good chunk of her HP.

"_That was my third-favorite dress, you charlatan!_" she yelled, sending the offending demon flying through a door with a spinning kick.

"I bet they won't even refund us the tickets," muttered Twilight. "I never go to the theater here because the guys running it are _jerks_. I didn't really want to be fighting tonight: I really _did_ want to see that movie."

"Can't always get what you want," Naoki said, rummaging around in his Pocket. "Hey, geniuses, have you tried _negotiating_ with them?"

"It's a full moon!" Rainbow Dash shouted as she uppercutted an oni and blasted another out the exit door with a wind spell. "They _never_ listen on a full moon!"_

"Well then you should've planned the movie night better!" Naoki yelled back.

But, in spite of the dangerous situation, he couldn't help but grin. After fighting for trillions of years on end, one couldn't help but find some enjoyment out of it. Like some kind of Stockholm Syndrome with his home Loop, he supposed.

Out of the corner of his eye, he saw a demon sneak up out of nowhere and punch Twilight in the face. He had to actively suppress the reflexive feeling of triumph at seeing the genocidal mons-_normal_, real version of the pony_ get nailed square between the eyes. Perhaps that was a reaction that would never go away. And judging by the guilty looks Fluttershy (and to a lesser extent, Twilight) had been shooting him through the entire movie, maybe they would never be at ease around him. A gulf that could never be filled in.

But, if he'd learned anything from his journey, it's worth a shot. And it was a gulf that'd already been jumped.

Ponies or no, he'd beaten his world at its game. He was free. Time to enjoy it.

* * *

>149.14 (Kris Overstreet)

"So, why did you call us all together, Pinkie?" Rainbow Dash asked.

The party pony, uncharacteristically serious, looked at the four other Element Bearers. "I think we might have gone a bit too far with all the pancake pranks on Twilight," she said.

"I didn't think the library built into a giant stack of pancakes was that bad," Fluttershy whispered.

"Perhaps I was a bit, er, insensitive that Loop where we replaced the Elements with the Elements of Breakfast," Rarity admitted.

"I don't care what you guys say," Rainbow Dash retorted, "replacing every anvil in Equestria with stacks of pancakes that only turn soft and splatty when air-dropped was a brilliant gag! And in a thousand loops Twilight will agree!"

"Of course she will!" Pinkie agreed. "But not right now! Right now we've managed to do what Tirek destroying her library couldn't- what the Imperium of Man couldn't- what the Morrow's Days couldn't. We've broken Twilight Sparkle. I mean, really broken. Really, really, really broken, like a broken thing that's broken."

"Let's go see for ourselves, then," Applejack said, not mentioning the recent Loop when she'd made sure her Apple relations had all made pancake and waffle-related apple dishes for the Summer Sun Celebration... for Celestia's chosen overseer to sample.

* * *

>"She's gone through eleven platefuls so far," Spike said, pointing to the immense stack of pancakes sitting on a plate on a small table next to Rarity's drama couch. On the couch lay Twilight Sparkle, alternating between quiet woeful sobs and extremely vocal eating noises as she took each pancake, dripping with blueberries and syrup, and ate them one by one. "So long as I keep her supplied with pancakes she's quiet and kind of lucid, but when I take them away the waterworks come on full blast."

"Er... hello there, Twilight darling," Rarity said, stepping a bit closer. "Are you feeling well?"

Twilight looked up at the ponies from the couch. "Oh hello, Rarity... Applejack... Dash, Fluttershy, Pinkie... all my closest _friends..._" Twilight's voice broke on the last word, and tears ran down her face. "WAAAAAAHHH _om nom nom nom..." Each wail of horrible sorrow was interrupted by the momentary calming influence of an incoming pancake.

"Excuse me," Spike said, "I better hurry and make another batch before she runs out." He scampered to the kitchen, leaving the girls alone with the apparent basket case on the couch.

"Twilight," Pinkie said, waiting for the unicorn's mouth to be occupied before speaking, "I think we all have something we want to say to you."

"Er, yeah," Applejack said, stepping forward. "We're all powerful sorry 'bout all those pancake gags we pulled on ya. Guess we jus' couldn't help ourselves, and we shoulda."

"We really did rather run it into the ground," Rarity said.

"And we were unforgivably thoughtless about your feelings," Fluttershy added.

After a prolonged silence, something lifted Rainbow Dash's rump a foot higher into the air. "OW! Er, yeah, we were outta line, Twilight," she muttered.

Twilight paused in reaching for another pancake. "It... it's just so hard _om nom nom nom..._... knowing that even my closest friends keep harping on one little incident _om nom nom nom..._ one stupid, meaningless incident _om nom nom nom..._ again and again and again and AGAIN and AGAIN _om nom nom nom..._" Another pancake cut off the rising shriek of Twilight's whining.

"And we're never, ever going to do that joke ever again! Pinkie Promise!" Pinkie sat up on her haunches and raised a hoof in oath-taking.

"Cross our heart," Applejack said.

"Hope to fly," Rarity said.

"Stick a cupcake in my eye," Fluttershy said.

After another pause, and another pointed pink reminder applied to a cyan posterior, Rainbow Dash rushed through a mumbled repetition of the oath.

"Girls," Twilight gasped, for a moment overcome... and then the moment passed. "But there'll still be Celestia and Luna and Leah and Leman and SkyNet and Donut and Anakin and Mikasa and Naruto _and Hiccup and WAAAAAAAAAH om nom nom nom..._"

"No, no, no they won't!" Pinkie said hurriedly. "We'll tell 'em to stop! We'll Pinkie swear 'em to stop! Won't we, girls?"

The others agreed, even Rainbow Dash, who this time didn't need a reminder. (Which was good, since she'd run out of unkicked flanks.)

"P-p-p-promise?" Twilight whimpered.

In unison the other five ponies went through the Pinkie Promise chant and dance again.

Instantly Twilight smiled. "Well, that's settled then," she said in a perfectly normal voice. "And I'm going to hold you to all of that." She rose from the couch, striding off, adding, "Now if you'll excuse me, I need to clean out twelve super-stacks worth of masticated pancakes from my subspace pocket. I never thought I'd ever use that eating-contest cheat I learned from Ranma... but this one was worth it."

The front door shut behind Twilight, leaving five perplexed ponies to stare after her as they slowly realized they'd been royally had.

At this point Spike emerged from the kitchen with mega-stack number thirteen. He froze as he saw the empty couch and the unfinished stack next to it. "Well, of all the- I can't believe- I don't- well, what am I supposed to DO with all these?" he shouted.

"I have a couple of ideas..." Rainbow Dash growled.

"Pinkie Promise," a certain party pony hissed, eyes glowing dangerously red.

"... but I think I'll keep them to myself," Rainbow Dash said hurriedly, backing away.

* * *

>AN:

149.1: Most of the time they're just all pain sticks.

>149.2: Prank War!149.3: Game mechanics? (Castlevania elements)

>149.4: Tests are to be complied with. It's more difficult and hence challenging that way. (Portal cross.)149.5: Speaking of being able to see power.

>149.6: Crystal clear.149.7: Teamwork.

>149.8: Some things you never live down.149.9: It's irresistible.

>149.10: Readers! May your eyes implode from amazement! (Star Trek cross.)149.11: Twilight's a sucker for experiment. (Days series)

>149.12: She's gone... no, not saying it. (Shin Megami Tensi and MtG elements)149.13: A boatload of horrible incidents have happened in the past. (Shin Megami Tensi cross)

>Note - the reason the full version's not being shown here is that Gamera and I were unable to reconcile certain differences about whether the Admins would have been able to intervene and prevent the kind of problems he considered necessary for the plotline. It will be available elsewhere in another set of loops - the ones focusing on Naoki.149.14: And something light and fluffy to finish on. (Pancakes.)

157. Chapter 157

150.1

"I must enquire, fair alicorn," Zecora began as she followed Cadence through the castle.

"...something something morn?" Cadence replied with a grin.

"...indeed, that was my rhyme. But please, give me more time."

A smirk. "Don't worry, I'll let you finish in future. Anyway..."

here's what I wanted to show you."

Cadence pushed open a set of double doors with a flourish, and Zecora peered through.

She beheld a stupendous orrery of rune-inscribed metal wheels, stone obelisks, hovering crystals and softly glowing liquids. Even as she watched, it shifted visibly, and one of the vials turned a striped black-white before beginning to glow.

Something went _parp_, and the whole assembly shivered into life â€" the multi-axis metal rings rotating independently at the five foci of the structure, and energies began to crackle along the angular runes inscribed thereon.

"...oh, this will cause trouble later," she said slowly. "That's the Dating Simulator."

"That's right!" Cadence grinned. "And I thought it could solve a problem of yours!"

"What problem might that be," the zebra asked, already making plans to skedaddle. "For there is none I see. I seek no special somepony, and that is about the only-"

"Let me show you," Cadence interrupted, and kicked a switch.

There was a _clunk_ as the device dropped into a faster, more advanced mode. The wheels spun faster, the energies became more intense, and a bright light scanned across Zecora before vanishing.

Dried leaves burst into the air from what looked like a potpourri dispenser, and were snatched up into the whirling ring system. An eerie keening developed-

And then there was a _BONG_.

A cup clattered out of a chute next to the confused Zecora, and steaming black liquid arrived in it in precise drops.

"Cup of tea?" Cadence asked.

Zecora blinked.

"Sorry," the alicorn added, smiling. "But I just wanted to see the look on your face. I've actually been repurposing the Dating Simulator for some time, trying to salvage the scanner section and rework the rest. Try the tea."

"I see. I think I'll have the drink," Zecora said, and sipped it.

She smiled, her eyes unfocusing slightly. "That is an excellent blend. Just the thing for a long day's end."

"Exactly," Cadence agreed. "When in _beverage_ mode, it detects the exact drink preferences of the pony using it... although at the moment it only makes tea."

"A flaw, it's true," Zecora admitted. "But why would you-"

Cadence interrupted again, and Zecora shot her a grateful look for doing so on a rhyme. "It's for two reasons, Zecora. First â€" this is about as far as I can take the project. I'm no good at the potions side of things, about the only other thing I can make it do is dispense love potions... but you're the expert, and it's much better that you have it. Even just as something to tinker with every now and again."

Zecora nodded, understanding.

"And second..." Cadence smiled slightly. "It requires the operator to use unicorn magic to charge the arrays. I thought this might help you get used to your ascension â€" I know you don't use it much, and I think this would be a good way to encourage you."

Another nod. "I see. A gift of daunting price â€" though perhaps others would not be so nice. This machine does blow up a lot... I think of it you're happy shot."

"Really?" Cadence frowned. "That's the rhyme you're going with?"

Zecora shrugged. "They can't all be three out of three."

* * *

>150.2

_Okay, here goesâ€"|_

Harry coughed.

The girl looked up. "Hello!" she said, smiling. "How can I help you, Harry?"

"Pretty simply, actually," Harry replied, rummaging in his pocket. "Do you know what this is?"

"The diary?" Hermione's replacement nodded. "Yes, Twilight warned me about it almost as soon as she knew I was looping. Why do you ask?"

He placed it on the table. "I was wondering if you'd indulge me in an experiment. You see, this isn't just a copy of Moldyshorts... it's a sixteen-year old teenage boy copy of the git."

Cheerilee nodded, showing she was following along. "And?"

Harry smirked. "I just wondered what would happen when it was used as someone's school notebook for a few years."

"Okay," Cheerilee said, looking a bit apprehensive. "If you're sure it's okay..."

"Of course I'm not sure, that's why it's an experiment," Harry pointed out. He saw she still wasn't sure, so deployed the weapons-grade argument. "Think of it as a learning experience."

She nodded, and smoothed out her Ravenclaw robes. "Right."

* * *

>Diariddle was not a happy soul fragment.

The dozy little second-year had by this point written almost two thousand pages of notes into him, and she barely seemed to have noticed that the words were vanishing!

She hadn't even read any of his attempts to send a message, either, and without that he had hardly any means of influence whatsoever.

Suddenly another stream of information began to project itself into his increasingly crowded mind. It seemed to be close-spaced notes about how to set up a railway schedule capable of serving an area somewhat larger than Britain with minimal delays or service gaps, including how to compensate for expected breakages and how to organize the switch from coal to diesel to electrified to â€

_IT DIDN'T MATTER!_

Tom Marvolo Riddle had been a fascinated, eager student. But only a very few people in the entire multiverse could be that interested in that many topics for that long, and Riddle was not one of them.

_Why can't she be normal and write about boy trouble..._

* * *

>"...so, long story short," Cheerilee finished with a shrug, "I managed to load it so full of information that some of it came leaking back out."

"Oh, really?" Twilight chuckled. "What kind of things?"

Cheerilee's reply was a sibilant hiss.

Fluttershy looked up from her tea. "You've got a very strange accent..."

"I think it's Scots," Cheerilee said, wincing. "You're right, Parseltongue in a highland brogue is just a bit too much..."

* * *

>150.3 (Wildrook)

"So," Celestia muttered, "what's this about the Dual Nightmare?"

"Bit of a new expansion on my game," Discord replied. "Instead of just one of you turning into Nightmares, it's BOTH the Sun and Moon. I got the idea from when I Looped in Kirby's Home World during the Milky Way Wishes crisis, and I thought...why not apply it to you two, only you're bringing total discord to Equestria?"

Celestia then glared. "But Nightmare Star?" she asked him. "Aren't you applying logic that the Sun is basically a Star?"

"Nightmare Star, Solar Flare, to be honest." Discord then thought about it. "That's the other thing I wanted to ask you, though...I was thinking on working on more expansions for this game, and so far, all I could come up with is Slendermane, Gummy on Drugs, and finally...well...you when you let go and unleash your true power. So far, the themes happen to be Eldritch Horrors, Realistic Design, and the concept of the Alternate Reality, and I was thinking...why not EXPAND the game so that everyone else in the Multiverse is applied?"

Celestia blinked. "I'm sorry," she said, "I must have heard something crazy. Are you asking me for permission to run a business for Chaos? With Paperwork, card design, and a semblance of order?"

Discord nodded. "And yes, I'm aware, but Order and Chaos are always two sides of the same coin. You must HAVE Order...to create Chaos. Why else do you think I'm asking for permission from the highest state of authority within Equestria personally?"

Thinking about it, she admitted, in his own twisted way, that he had a point. She's played a few rounds of game night with most of Twilight's Family, and while she knew that Anything Goes, it relied on thinking outside the box.

She then gave out a smile. "I'll allow it," she said, "on a few conditions."

"I'll try to see if I can find a few ways around them," Discord replied, "but name them and see if we're thinking along the same wavelength."

"One of them is that you do not just get Twilight and her friends involved with production, but myself and every other Looper in Equestria, even when they start Awakening. We all have our respective fields in the Loops, so we might apply ideas that you may or may not like."

Discord then blinked. "You knew that I was going to ask Fluttershy and the others, weren't you?" he asked her, who replied with a nod. "Well...I've still got a bit of an issue with Vinyl, but I can see what I can do."

"The second thing I ask...is to release the Expansions bit by bit. Too much of an influx would cause panic."

"Somehow, I get your point."

"Third...and this is for advertising purposes...if we have Guest Loopers and are Awake at the time, you bring them in for a beta run of the game as long as the rest of us are Awake."

Discord thought about it. "Considering that Awakening in Yggdrasil is rather spread out," he said, "when the opportunity arises, I'll see what I can do. Might have to see if Eight-Legs is willing to come in for a game or two, but as of this moment, I'm rather pleased with this outcome. What do you have to bring to the table?"

"Star Swirl and I have been around the different Mirror-verses, so I may have a few things to bring to the game. Besides...I'm up for a rematch after the last time you brought in Old Mare Heartstrings in card form."

"You were the one who brought in Walpurgis Nacht, or whatever it's called. I just retaliated with the best card I had in my hand at the time."

* * *

>150.4 (Evilhumour)

"Hey, Twilight, lookie what I learned to do!" Vinyl's shout was barely heard over the wubs being played. "This is the coolest thing I've ever done!"

Running outside, Twilight looked around for the white unicorn when all of a sudden the wubs got very loud. Listening to instincts honed from dodging many Rainbow Dash tackle hugs, she hit the dirt as something sailed over her, blasting her with music. Tilting her head up, she saw Vinyl floating in the air with the biggest grin on her face.

"I learned how to channel the wubs through my entire body now, and I just figured out how to get it through my hooves at the same time now!" She smirked as she flew down again, causing Twilight to roll over to avoid the mare. Unfortunately for the purple mare, it was right into a big mud hole. "Whoops, are you okay Twili-GAH!" Vinyl shouted as she fell from the sky into the same mud hole Twilight was in. "Still have to learn how to properly control it and junk, but soon, I will be able to fly by the power of wubs itself!" Hugging the purple mare tightly and covering her with more mud, she pushed herself out of the mud with her musical hooves, splattering the last clean space on Twilight with mud.

Twilight simply sighed, shook her head and made her way to the spa before she would begin to deal with getting revenge.

* * *

>150.5 (Evilhumour)

Spike blinked as he saw his fourth most favourite white mare pounding the Golden Oaks door.

"Um, Vinyl, what can I do for you?" He blinked slowly as the mare paced back and forth. She was for some reason wearing a sock on her horn and several of the cutest booties he ever saw. "Why did Rarity put sound proof boots on you and why are you wearing a sock on your horn?"

"Your wife decided after I used a bit of my rocking wubs in her shop that I needed a time out." She snorted, looking to the side. She then held out a hoof to stare at a boot, tilting her head. "These boots are kinda awesome..." She then smirked. "Tell ya wife I like them!" Bobbing her head, she turned around and started to strut her way towards the train station.

"Okay..." Spike blinked. Frowning, he called out to the mare. "Wait, why are you wearing a sock on your horn?"

Vinyl paused, blinking at him. Tilting her head, she looked upwards and blushed. Shaking her head clear of the sock, she used her magic to put the sock into her saddle bag. "I forgot I still had this on from last night! Thanks Spike! Bye!"

Spike blinked, scratched his head and closed the door.

* * *

>150.6 (Wildrook)

"Oh, you are kidding me," Twilight muttered as she looked at the candidate running against Starlight Glimmer.

And by candidate, she meant the Villager with a leaf with a hole in it for a Cutie Mark.

As for what happened...well...

(Five minutes earlier)

Starlight Glimmer growled at the man with the cutie mark as he's countering her moves with his own.

She was about to ask where the bowling ball came from before she got hit by it...but as she tried to get up, she noticed a tree heading for her as she tried to dodge out of the way.

"What in the name of Grogar's up with you?" Starlight Glimmer yelled. "You're just pulling things straight from your person..."

"I have pockets," the Villager replied. "Helps when I'm dealing with every-day life."

She then growled as she brought out the "Staff of Sameness." "You won't be accessing them for very long once I'm through with you!" As she launched her magic at the Villager, she then smirked as she got ready for impact...

...but there was nothing to be heard.

"Where's the impact?" she asked herself. "There's supposed to be a drain of your magic as your Cutie Mark is ripped from your body."

"I told you," the stallion replied as he had brought out balloons while floating. "I have POCKETS." He then brought out the very same magic she tried to hit him with and launched it at her...as she felt her own Cutie Mark rip out of her person and placed onto a slab of rock.

(Present day...)

Twilight and the others are flabbergasted at this turn of events.

"Now I'm jealous," Pinkie Pie replied. "Why didn't I think of that?"

Twilight face-hooved. Whoever this Villager was, he had managed to equalize Starlight Glimmer...but the thought of how it was done was driving her mad.

"Well, he's got my vote," a yellow Earth Pony with a seashell Cutie Mark replied as the Villager chuckled at the praise.

* * *

>150.7 (Wildbrook)

In the Cutie Mark Gate, a skeletal pony and a colt with a big nose had heard the ranting of an egomaniacal villain.

"But really," she finished, a little annoyed at the two, "taking their Cutie Marks is a kindness so they don't have to suffer their inequality to idiots like you...so now who's the villain?"

"Y...you," Billy said, totally lost.

"What?" the mare asked him

"I mean, Twistar..."

"Starlight," the skeletal pony said, dreading where this is heading.

"Nightlight, I didn't understand a word you just said." The big-nosed pony tried...and failed...to explain himself. "I mean, for all I know, you're trying to be like my best friend, who could think of better plans than you do..."

"Okay, no!" Starlight Glimmer, in her rage, said as she tried to get rid of the Cutie Mark of the big-nosed pony.

"And to top it all off," Billy said, "you're not exactly Mandy-levels of scary." That made her eyes widen.

"And apparently, this is happening. SKULL HEAD, why the heck is this pony resisting the effects?"

Skull Head, aka, Grim, had shivered. "He isn't," he said. "You already stole his Cutie Mark."

"What are you talking about?"

He then pointed at the wall of Cutie Marks...that cracked?

"...That should not be possible. Why is it cracked?"

"Because, if you should know, Big Nose's stupidity IS his special talent...and because of your theft...well...I'd start galloping if I were you, mon."

And that's when the world weSHOPUJAGINFGIJIGPAND98REWEQIGPHU-

* * *

>Twilight Awoke with a start as she looked at herself...and groaned.

"Loop Crash?" Rainbow Dash asked her.

"Yeah," Twilight said, "and I have a good idea who was the cause of it."

"Billy?" Pinkie Pie asked her, walking in the classroom.

"Billy."

* * *

>150.8 (Kris Overstreet)

Ash looked down at the purple unicorn and said, "This is not my fault."

The purple unicorn glared up at him.

"No, really, this is NOT my fault!" Ash waved his hands- well, his hand and chainsaw- in frustration. "After this many Loops I know the damn words, right? But just as I was saying them this great big horsefly or something bites me on the ass! Through my pants! And, well, it throws off a guy's concentration just a little bit!"

"What did you actually end up saying, then?" Twilight Sparkle said, not giving the S-Mart employee any benefit of the doubt.

"Um... well, I said the words."

"What were the sounds you made, Ash?"

Ash shuffled on his feet. "Klaatu Barada Niieeiiiygh," he mumbled.

"What was that again?"

"Klaatu Barada Niieeeeiiiygh!" Ash snapped, the last word coming out remarkably like a horse whinny.

"Thank you. That's all I wanted," Twilight grumbled, "just an explanation for all of this." She waved a hoof at the vast army of evil, glowing-eyed undead Twilight Sparkles marching towards the castle while the two of them hid behind a tree.

"Just so we're clear," Ash persisted, "not my fault."

"I never said it was," Twilight Sparkle said.

"No, it totally is," said an evil Sparkle, who chose that moment to dangle down from the branches above. "By the way, boo."

Ash reacted true to form- which is to say, screaming followed by bloody mayhem.

* * *

>"... and that's why I'm spending this entire Loop in your cellar," Twilight told Applejack. "I'm drinking until I stop seeing myself getting bloodily dismembered from a third-person perspective multiplied by about ten thousand."

"But Big Mac's not Awake this time 'round," Applejack said. "All we got's our special reserve cider."

"All you had, you mean." Twilight shook the dregs out of the little cask next to her into a mug and drained it. "Unless you let me tap into your Pocket's reserves..."

Applejack sighed. "Th' royal fruit sake's been pilin' up on Shojiki lately. Can't pass it 'round without non-Loopers askin' questions, so I might as well let y'all have some."

"Some?" Twilight asked.

"You ain't gonna drink it all, no matter what you think!"

"I dunno..." Twilight levitated a full cask from the stack against the cellar wall. "I have a LOT to forget..."

* * *

>150.9 (ToaMataNui5000)

"Oh Sunset..."

The unawake fallen protege was not expecting a voice to follow her out of the mirror portal. Let alone one that was incredibly clear and so amusingly singsong in tone.

"I'm respecting your privacy by knocking, but asserting my dominance as Equestria's newest princess by coming in anyway!"

**BOOM!**

The reflective glass and stone of the statue's base was blown outward into the school's front lawn. Luckily, the impact winds knocked Sunset out of the way of any major damage. When the dust settled, she saw Twilight Sparkle, gripping a battering ram under her left arm, grinning deviously. Spike hung dangling off of the battering ram's end, his paws barely registering a grip. It was enough to make Sunset drop her jaw all the way to Tartarus and back.

Meanwhile, Pinkie just popped out of nowhere as usual, gripping a sign that read '7 out of 10.'

* * *

>150.10: (ToaMataNui5000)

Starlight Glimmer, casually flipping her branch as she walked, confidently trotted into Twilight's crystal palace. Despite her recent failure pushing her over the edge, she regained her cool after eavesdropping on a option for an easy comeback; An alternate dimension residing within a mirror. All she had to do was neutralize whatever allies the of the purple alicorn resided on the other side, and BANG! Instant army to equalize Equestria.

She was so caught up in her confidence, she initially failed to notice how unnaturally easy this "break-in" was. Not only was it broad daylight, but there were barely any guards roaming the castle halls. "Meh, must be her overconfident trust that no one would harm a princess, especially Little Miss Friendship." She rolled her eyes and chuckled, "All hail the almighty idiot, mares and gentlecolts."

As her horn picked up an incredible source of magic, she hooked a right into Twilight's experimenting room. Starlight had to admit, she was impressed with what was there. Twilight would have certainly served as a wonderful asset, perhaps even more, if she and her colleagues hadn't been blinded by their backwards interpretation of equality. Dwelling on it no more, she spotted her prize; The mirror portal, hooked to an inactive magic generator, which she booted up like it was filly's play. Smiling deviously, she prepared to leap in, "This is gonna be fun..."

Oh how very wrong she was...

Starlight groaned as she regained consciousness. Every part of her body ached like she had been forced through a taffy puller. She slowly opened her eyes, taking note of the stubby, furless appendages replacing her forehooves. She then noticed the two sets of footwear, and followed them upward until getting a good view of their owners.

"Wonderful, another one from your world," the blue haired male said with a hint of sarcasm. "This one a friend, at least?"

"Eenope, this is the enemy that Twilight recently encountered." The yellow one responded before turning to face Starlight, "Look, we're kinda busy trying to redeem a trio of sirens here, so do you mind coming back later?"

As Starlight struggled to her now two feet, using the statue as a crutch, she grinned. "No need to leave. In fact, I'm here to solve all of your problems for you."

"I doubt you're a mechanic, sweetie. But if you say so, let's see what you got?" The boy raised an eyebrow.

Taking the bait, Starlight thrust her stick towards his chest, where his cutie mark laid exposed. Of course, it did nothing. Confused, she tapped his chest again, receiving no result. Eyeing the cutie mark on the other girl, she tapped the branch to her. Nothing. Continued lack of results started to break her mental stability again. "Why isn't it working!"

"Performance anxiety?" The man quipped. "I mean, I get that all the time before going on stage, so I know how you..." Starlight jabbed the stick into his chest, his sentence cut off by groans of pain. Obviously no longer in the mood, Sunset kicked the branch out of the air, caught it as it fell, then snapped it in half and threw the pieces at the light purple newbie.

"News flash, Little Miss Communist: Magic doesn't work the same way on this side of the mirror as it does in Equestria Prime." She got closer to Starlight, causing the flabbergasted woman to slightly wince. "And another thing, I've been down the same road as you, wanting total control over everypony. So take heed and don't even retry."

As Sunset turned to walk away, Starlight screamed, attempting to tackle the yellow human. Unfortunately, she stumbled over something, and the cruel mistress known as gravity took over. She fell face first into the ground. At least lacking a snout made it less painful. She rolled over to see Flash sticking out his leg. "Oops, sorry cutie." As he waltz over to join Sunset, he continued with, "I'd usually gladly help out strangers, but I'm busy chasing a different purple pony right now. So yeah, have fun adjusting."

"I never thought you could willingly be that cruel, Flash."

"Meh. Call it side effects from the Dazzlings' brainwashing. And if she really did all that Twilight described to you, she's lucky if anyone else doesn't give her worse."

"Even if the Dazzlings and I did essentially the same thing?"

"Different case. She fled from punishment and a chance at redemption, while you four took it." Flash smiled before adding, "That, and you four are much more attractive and adorable."

"Easy there, Tonto. But thanks as well."

* * *

>150.11 (ToaMataNui5000)

"Twilight?"

"Yes Rarity?"

"Why are we being escorted around our human counterpart's world via limo like esteemed guests?" She took a sip of her complimentary wine. "Not that I mind at all, but still..."

"Sunset is surprisingly good at international government peace negotiations. Fitting considering she was supposed to be in my position."

"Touche, darling."

* * *

>150.12: (Gamerex27)

Rarity rubbed at her horn with her hoof. "Right...Mitsuru, dear, please explain to us what happened with Starlight Glimmer."

"We didn't do a damn thing!" Akihiko said, pumping his forehoof. "The moron did herself in with her spell!"

"My pony name is Great Seal," Minato said, sighing as he slipped his headphones back on, struggling for a bit to get them onto a comfortable position on his now non-human head. "Names here tie back into your talent, right? What'd she expect, when she took away my 'talent?' Guess she was too dumb to realize that she'd break the seal."

"In all fairness," Aigis said, rubbing at her flank (and, for the first time, regretting how human/equine she had become over the Loops: enough that the Cutie Mark removal spell worked on her), "she had no idea of what removing your Cutie Mark entailed. Death-or, at least, the personification of such-being trapped inside a mortal being is an outside-context-problem for the ponies of this world."

"Look, girls-and guys-" Starlight Glimmer said, in a decidedly more masculine tone of voice, "we can talk this out! Maybe go out for some drinks? Catch a movie? Go to some hot springs and take off our-no, _stupid Ryoji,_ girls don't like that!"

The furious townsfolk didn't seem to care that this hypocrite who had been keeping them imprisoned for so long had done a total 180 in personality (and gender identity, and apparently normal identity), and marched towards her/him with their torches and pitchforks nevertheless.

"She's possessed," Twilight sighed. "That much is obvious. But...how? And by who?"

"Aigis, if you would," Mitsuru asked, looking at the mechanical pony.

"Very well, then." Aigis removed a screen projector from her Pocket, hooked it up to herself, and started playing a slideshow.

"When Minato-san was a young boy," she explained, "he was unfortunate enough to travel to Tatsumi Port Island. Tragically, the personification of destruction and death, who had been summoned to the island through a series of fairly convoluted events, had broken free of its bonds in an evil cultist-slash-scientists' laboratory, and rampaged across the city, killing his parents. I managed to defeat it, but only by sealing away one thirteenth of its incomplete form within Minato-san."

"That's why Ryoji's here," Minato explained, walking up to the Cutie Mark Vault and breaking it open. "Since he was locked inside of me for most of our Baseline, he sometimes ends up Looping along with me."

"I take it by the lack of panicking that he has mellowed out after all these Loop?" Rarity asked.

"He was _always_ pretty mellow to begin with," Akihiko admitted, as the Equal Cutie Marks were knocked off all their flanks and replaced by their normal ones. "He was only gonna end the world 'cause he had no _choice._ And because the Chairman of our school who tricked us into killing off the other parts of Death was _an asshole._"

"Okay, and your Cutie Mark symbolizes how good you were at sealing away Death both within yourself and protecting people from it with the 'Great Seal' thing," Twilight concluded, noting Minato's Cutie Mark was, appropriately enough, a shield marked with an overlaying skull and rosary. "And when she stole your Cutie Mark, she let Death out as your friend Ryoji to rampage. I get that. But why is he _inside her now?_"

"I do not know," Aigis admitted, as Starlight/Ryoji desperately projected a magical shield and battered his/her way through the angry townsfolk. "A reasonable explanation was that, since Starlight was drawing some of the magic into herself by the nature of her spell, Ryoji was forced into her body as a side effect of Minato-san's Mark being stolen."

"H...hi" Starlight/Ryoji panted, galloping over to the other Loopers, breathing heavily as the townsfolk gave chase to them. "Maybe...we can finish the recap later? If they get to me, they might kill this body, and I never like ending the world...or Loop."

"You could've avoided that if you waited to wash the paint on your butt off," Akihiko muttered. "You didn't see her memories at all?"

"I never meant to get stuck in her body!" Starlight/Ryoji objected. "I didn't want to pry! And the paint really itched! And we really should pick this up when we get out of here!"

Nodding, Twilight teleported them all away in a flash of light, reappearing in the map room of her castle.

"That...was different," Mitsuru sighed, flopping down onto her haunches. "I doubt that removing our talents would have stopped us from using our Personas against her, but it's always possible if that spell functioned like a Magic Bind or Silence spell."

"I...you should probably go back to them," Starlight/Ryoji told Twilight. "They may end up hurting themselves or others trying to find her...me..."

"You usually don't see a spirit of death being so...compassionate." Twilight remarked, smiling.

"A little bit of him rubbed off on me," Starlight/Ryoji said, smiling in turn as he/she pointed to Minato, "and-"

Suddenly, Starlight/Ryoji's eyes widened, almost popped out of his/her head, and he/she grabbed Twilight by her mane. "KILL MEEEEEEEE!" the composite being screeched in Starlight's normal voice.

Then, just as suddenly as it happened, his/her expression returned to normal, and he/she released the other(?) mare.

"Er...sorry. That's never happened before," the composite being spoke in Ryoji's voice, scratching the back of his/her head with a forehoof. "I'm not trying to traumatize her, but being connected to the Appriser of Nyx (um, not your Nyx) isn't wearing well on her mind."

"Is it that," Minato asked, "or is it seeing your fantasies?"

"Uhâ€¦" Starlight/Ryoji thought, blushing a little. "Maybe more of the latter. I should probably take a cold shower so she can stop screaming about the-"

"Don't want to hear it!" Twilight interrupted, ignoring as Mitsuru muttered about perverts and "Executions" in the background. "It'd probably be better if we can just separate you two: it'd make all this a heck of a lot easier. Rarity, any thoughts?"

"I may have a ponikin lying around in my Pocket," Rarity mentioned, as Twilight regained her composure, and straightened her mane. "You may be able to enter into there so we can deal with Glimmer properly."

"That would be good," Minato said. "But, you might need to end up sticking her in a mental ward instead."

"Amala," Twilight said with a sigh, grabbing a bottle of absinthe and passing it around.

"We don't have to deal with all of the really bad stuff from the other Linked places that badly," Akihiko admitted as he took a swig from the bottle, "...but I appreciate the booze. Gives me some carbs to burn for my next workout. Any more monsters to beat up?

* * *

>150.13: (Bliss Authority)

The white-coated, black-maned unicorn strode through the door of the Carousel Boutique with the tight-lipped expression of somepony - or someone - who did not gladly suffer a waste of time. At first glance Rarity thought she might have been military from her uniform: a closer look at it clarified that it was inspired by a Japanese boy's school uniform, but cut and modified for a sleeker look.

Interesting.

Rarity bowed (as best as a quadruped could, which involved craning her neck down). "Welcome to the Carousel Boutique, where everything is chic, sleek, and magnifique. My name is -"

"- Rarity Belle," the unicorn cut her off. "One of the elite five guardians of this world, as led by the example of Twilight Sparkle. Enforcer of this Loop's status as a sanctuary to all who respect its tranquility." The stranger reared up on her hind legs, towering over Rarity, and resting her fetlock on the hilt of a sheathed katana. "Peerless in the crafts of war, peace, and tailoring - this last of great personal interest to me." And her expression curled upward, if only a little bit.

Rarity frowned. "I believe you have me at a severe disadvantage, darling. How did you know I was looping? And what, pray tell, is your name?"

"My Loop memories tell me that I am named Pure Cloth," the stranger said. "But you may remember me by another name. Satsuki Kiryuin."

It took Rarity a second to remember. "From the Loops with the living clothes!"

"Just so," Satsuki said, a very slight smile on her lips. "You will forgive me if I wasn't displaying my usual composure, but you have to understand that meeting you in the role of - how does my sister put it? - "Disco-Mom, Winner of the Gendou Ikari Lifetime Achievement Award for Parenting" -" She paused to allow Rarity time to titter. "- was not doing my mental state a favor."

Rarity waved her off. "It happens all the time, dear," she said. "Now, what may I do for you?"

"Prevent untold suffering in my loops," Satsuki said, betraying no emotion save a twitch of one great bushy eyebrow in the prefix to a frown. "I would have you redesign the Peerless Uniforms so that they need not rely on Life Fibers. We will need our source of Honnouji's titanic power to be shot through with threads of an alien life-form that thirsts for blood, and is in thrall to a dark God."

Rarity managed a weak chuckle. "I can see that as a bit of a design flaw."

Satsuki looked directly into Rarity's eyes. "My Peerless Uniforms are very much double-edged swords. It is past time I corrected that. Too many of my fellows in too many Loops have died when the Life Fibers in their uniforms betrayed them."

Rarity nodded. "I will see what I can do."

Satsuki nodded. "Without even asking for payment..." she stopped, and closed her eyes, to float in a suitcase with her TK and snap it open; it contained several paper rolls of gold bits. "As to be expected from a paragon of Generosity. Take your time," she said, her expression shifting to a fierce smile. "You have until the Loop resets."

* * *

>Ragyo Kiryuin had to admire the suddenness of Satsuki's betrayal, but she had known it was inevitable and planned for it. Still, there was no way that her daughter could plan for Mind Stitching - or for the Life Fibers of the Peerless Uniforms to turn against their masters with a snap of her fingers, a feat she could manage even while bisected and crucified. It was sort of a shame that such a beautiful flower as her daughter needed to be trimmed when the First Life Fiber awoken, but she would not cry for her.

Wait. It hadn't worked. Ragyo snarled and snapped her fingers again.

"Third time's the charm! Charming charming charming~!" Nui said. (As for how she heard the tilde, she hadn't. Nui was standing under a word balloon as she spoke. Ragyo didn't question it; she was unnerving, but she was loyal. The perfect daughter.)

"Oh, and by the way. Dear mother." Satsuki smiled. "I now certain that you didn't notice, but the new Ultimate Uniforms no longer rely on your tainted gifts," she said. "Thank you very much for bringing me the other half of the Rending Scissors, Nui. ELITE FOUR! TAKE THEM!"

"AT ONCE, MILADY!" Gamagoori screamed, as was his wont. "THREE-DIAMOND ULTIMATE UNIFORM, BONDAGE REGALIA MARK TWO!"

Wait. Three _DIAMOND?_ Ragyo's eyes went wide as she realized just how badly she had been outplayed.

* * *

>"So this is the power of a Three Diamond uniform," Aikuro said. "Made entirely by the power of human ingenuity. It is almost as fearsome as the technology of the Nudists."

Ryuuko snorted, swallowing a bite of her Mystery Croquette. "Wouldn't say it's HUMAN ingenuity, 'zactly. We called in some help from a friend."

Aikuro raised an eyebrow at her. (And peeled off half of his shirt, but it WAS Aikuro.) "Anyone I would know?"

"Depends. Were you awake when Disco-Mom was really into purple and green?" Ryuuko said, grinning.

* * *

>150.14: (Evilhumour)

The Doctor frowned as he sat on the edge of the TARDIS, staring down at Equus in low orbit as he tried again for the billionth time to get down there!

"It's not been a billion times, Doctor," Twilight rolled her eyes, already predicting his rant after hearing it for so long. She was busy with Applebloom to try and figure out what magical aspect was preventing the TARDIS from landing. "And I think we're getting close to cracking the case of the magical interference."

'Right right, just doing boring non moving stuff," he grumbled. This body was too energetic to stay still for more than five seconds and the ponies destroyed a large number of his fezs too.

"Ah've got it!" Applebloom shouted, bring the two over to the filly at the monitors. "It seems to be that an overabundance of Earth pony magic producing a magical resonance interfering with the TARDIS's landing programs." Squinting, the filly tapped the screen showing an image of Applejack bucking a tree, with apples falling into buckets. "There! That's the resonance that's stopping the Doctor from land-Oh come on!" the filly shouted.

"Of course. Of course an apple a day would keep the Doctor-

"Don't say it!"

* * *

>150.15: (BIOS-Pherecydes)

Twilight stared in disbelief at the sight in front of her. Moving forward cautiously she hesitantly placed a hoof against the incredible sight in front of her, trying to convince herself it wasn't an illusion of some kind. She was met with the reassuring solidity of the Golden Oaks, against all odds reborn from the ashes after Tirek's defeat. Turning to face the grinning mare beside her she had only one question.

"How?"

Pinkie Pie giggled at the look on her friend's face. "Silly filly, trees are alive aren't they? So I thought to myself, what would happen if I activated one of my Peppermint Pylons before that nasty old Tirek blew up the Golden Oak Library? And poof, instant repair! Now you don't have to worry ab-"

Pinkie's words were abruptly cut off as she was caught in a tackle, Twilight having pulled her into a hug.

"Thankyouthankyouthankyouthankyou!"

Pinkie just grinned as she enjoyed having made her friend happy, which made her happy.

* * *

>Two days later Twilight was busy drowning herself in alcohol as Big Mac looked on sympathetically.

"So let me get this straight. Pinkie managed to figure out a way to guarantee that the Golden Oaks survives, but now it gets destroyed like every half hour?" Rainbow Dash asked quietly from her table, where she and Applejack were watching as Twilight attempted to drink her weight in Cider.

"Eeyup. So far Ah reckon it's been knocked over twice, struck by lightnin' five times, blown up a good dozen times and Ah think Discord accidentally melted it once."

Dash winced. "Yeesh, the Loops Really don't like Twilight's tree huh?."

"Eenope."

* * *

>150.16: (BIOS-Pherecydes)

Twilight Sparkle found herself experiencing her most common of Awakenings as she peered languidly upon her tome in which was set forth the mythical tale of the founding of the land of Equestria and the eventual disagreement which had led to the degeneration of the Princess Luna into the befouled shadow known as Nightmare Moon. Blinking ponderously as she assimilated the collected scraps of knowledge inherent within her memories, she found herself beset by an immense urge to soothe the pain within her temples.

'Wonderful. This particular reiteration of events is destined to be prolonged and arduous,' she ruefully reflected to herself.

Swiftly gathering the various items which lay strewn about herself she set about traversing the distance between herself and her, with luck, equally Awakened assistant. As she withdrew she mentally composed her dispatch for the Princess Celestia.

_'My Dearest Teacher,_'

_'My continuing studies of pony magic have led me to believe that we are upon the precipice of disaster! For you see the mythical mare of the moon is in fact _Nightmare Moon _and she is about to return to Equestria and bring with her eternal night! Something must be done to ensure this terrible prophecy does not come to pass. I await your quick response._

_Your faithful student, Twilight Sparkle._'

Twilight momentarily paused as she was assailed by an unmistakable sense of familiarity. After a moment of rumination she groaned in dismay. Save for a minute change in wording this was nearly identical to her own baseline self's original missive. Apparently she was naturally inclined to Purple Prose.

"Small wonder Rainbow Dash referred to me as an Egg-head." .

* * *

>150.17: (BIOS-Pherecydes)

"Rarity?"

"Yes... Vinyl? Hmm, Usually this gag is with Twilight."

"Gag?"

"Nevermind, you were saying?"

"Why are we marshmallows?"

"I really don't know dear."

* * *

>150.18: (BIOS-Pherecydes)

"And we'll have the best night ever! At the Gala!"

As the magic of the Heartsong died down, Twilight Sparkle took a moment to review her plans for the night. She had so far played everything baseline just for this event. She, Princess Celestia and Discord were the only ones Awake that she knew of, although there had been a few distant Pings at the start of the Loop that had failed to show themselves. The goal for tonight was to have the Draconequis arrive and try and drive the nobles to distraction, made all the more amusing by the fact that Discord had promised not to actually engage in any of his usual shenanigans. However all of her planning abruptly died a fiery death as a terrifyingly familiar nasally voice shouted out over the crowd.

"That was awesome! Let me try, let me try, I wanna try!"

Twilight's pupils shrank to pinpoints as she desperately sought the speaker. Not now, any where but here in the middle of the largest gathering of Equestrian citizens since the Summer Sun Celebration.

"No mon, some one stop him before it's too late!" a heavily accented voice called out, but not in time. Twilight felt a chill as the magic which had recently dispersed once again rose in time to another Heartsong. Only then did she manage to lay eyes on the speaker. Him.

Taking a deep breath Billy opened his mouth and began to sing.

"This is the sooong that neeevvvveer ennnnds!"

* * *

>Princess Celestia, ruler of Equestria and Keeper of the Sun, breathed a soundless sigh of relief as she stepped into the magically enforced, blessed silence of Big Mac's bar. She was unfortunately still singing, but at least she couldn't hear it. Like everypony else, ever since the Gala Incident (as it had come to be known) she had been caught in an ever expanding Eternal Heartsong. Even those normally resistant to the musical magic such as the Dragons and Griffins had been affected. For Tree's sake even Discord himself had fallen victim, apparently there was a difference between Chaos and Pure Entropic Stupidity, and as the nominal ruler of the one responsible for it she had been dealing with the backlash for days. As such it was a tremendous comfort to finally have the time she needed to get well and properly drunk.

Signaling to the Apple stallion she was rewarded with a generous mug of alcohol which she made quick work of. Her second glass she was content to nurse for the time being. The longer she could avoid returning to the sounds outside these simple walls the better.

**Heaven â€" Local Yggdrasil Command Office**

Sleipnir frantically typed on his custom keyboard as he attempted to patch the newest outbreak of the Heartsong Glitch. Several others were equally active as they worked, trying to contain the contaminated code before it spread to yet another part of Yggdrasil. This shouldn't have been an issue normally, each Branch of the World Tree being typically isolated when not being actively worked on, but no one had ever considered that someone would actually be stupid enough to start a Musical Number with a song that by definition wouldn't stop.

As a result almost every Loop where spontaneous bursts of song occurred with any frequency had been hit by Billy's actions and even now new reports of confirmed cases were coming in. If it weren't for the possibility that he might crash it Sleipnir would've already demanded that Billy spend a few Punishment Loops in the Ren and Stimpy universe. However the last thing anyone needed was to have THAT world start looping.

With a few final keystrokes the Patch was finally finished and set into place. Now it was just a matter of damage control. Grimacing, he executed the program. _'I hope you can forgive me Twilight.'_

**New Loop**

Twilight Awoke in front of a familiar book. So far so good, after the last Loop a trip through Baseline was just what she needed. Quickly packing her studying material into her saddle, she hurried off. In front of her she noticed Twinkleshine and friends approaching her. _'Well why not. It's been a while since the last time I attended her party. And Oak knows I need to relax after what happened.'_

Having resolved herself to accept the invitation when it was offered, she abruptly stiffened as the horribly familiar sound of a particular moron's Heartsong came clear. "No. No. Nononononononono. NOOOOOOOOO!"

Frantically galloping past the trio she checked her Loop memories as she should have done from the start. The result was a nightmare. The entire world was still trapped in Billy's Heartsong and had been for all of recorded history. Communication occurred using mime and hoof code. And worst of all, she was the only pony immune to the effects.

With a pop Twilight teleported to the only place in Equestria free of the musical magic, the Everfree Forest. This Loop could go to Tartarus.

* * *

>(Sunset Shimmer's Journal)(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

This Loop was...harsh for me. I had found myself in the Loop where humanoid giants called 'Titans' have all but destroyed humanity, and mankind is struggling to survive.

The place is such a death world that the Anchors here are actually 3 people: Eren, the warrior who can transform into a Titan, Armin, the tactical genius, and Mikasa, the master swordswoman. If any of them die when there're no other Anchors, the Loop crashes.

At first, I chose to go through the academy without using my array of skills. The main method used to fight the Titans was a device which allows easy building swinging. Darn thing is clunky, though; I'll take flying with ki any day of the week. The day the Anchors and I graduated from the academy, the Titans attacked, and...my squad was slaughtered. If I hadn't chose to hold back, they would have lived. I knew that doing so was not an option with lives on the line.

I unleashed my wrath on the Titans. Though they only have one weak point that must be hit to destroy them(otherwise, they regenerate from injury), my skills allowed me to easily strike down Titan after Titan. Only after the battle was done did I hear a shocking truth from Armin.

Each Titan had been human; forcefully transformed into mindless beasts. I was sick to my stomach. Had I become a monster myself, not caring anymore? Had I lost sight of my morals?

I challenged the three Anchors to a fight to hopefully clear my mind. Their experience easily beat my vast amount of skills and abilities; after all, 'those who have practiced one move thousands of times are better than those who know thousands of moves', to paraphrase something I had read somewhere.

They helped me feel better about what had happened; as they said, I had ended the suffering of those poor souls made into monsters against their will. If I was a heartless monster, Eren said, I would've just destroyed anyone and anything in order to win. With my conscience cleared, I aimed my sights on three other people who could transform like Eren could, but were harming other innocent lives.

I was sorely tempted to kill the three traitors, but Mikasa said they were following orders from an as yet unknown other enemy. I pitied them; in all this, they were doing that they thought was right. The traitors were left to the tender mercy of the Anchors, and I meditated on things.

Despite Loops like this, I haven't lost sight of my morals. I admit that I may be a good bit more willing to use violence than other Loopers from my home Loop are, but I have been on some battlefield or another for ages.

Twilight, I hope you'll understand what I went through when I finally get home, and how it's affected me.

* * *

>150.19: (Heliomance)

The Redguard trudged up the last few steps leading to the barrier.
"Lok!"

The swirling air dissipated, and he walked through. The dragon that awaited him as he reached the summit of the Throat of the World was different to normal. A little smaller, more silvery in colour. He waited for it to land, going through the motions of baseline. He was struggling to find a point in life, with these endless repetitions. At least he was a human this time. He couldn't remember what race he had been originally, but he always felt more comfortable as man than mer or beast.

"Drem Yol Lok. Greetings, wunduniik. I am Silonahnaak. Who are you? What brings you to my strunmahâ€| my mountain?"

Huh. The voice was very definitely female. That was a new one.

"Silonahnaak - that's not the normal name. Translates toâ€| Silver Spoon, I think? You a visitor to Nirn then?"

"Not the normal name? Would I be correct in thinking you are in a tiid kenlok, a time loop?" The dragon frowned for a moment, and cleared her throat briefly, before continuing in a lighter tone, her speech now a more normal pace than Paarthurnax's measured cadence. "Oh, that's better. That speech tic was really starting to annoy me."

"Yes, I'm Looping. Actually, I'm the Anchor, so I'm told. I'd give you my name, but I'm afraid I don't remember it. Most just call me Dovahkiin, or Dragonborn."

"Ah, that's tough. Sorry to hear it."

The Dragonborn shrugged. "It is what it is. I cope as best I can. So how about you? What's your home loop?"

Silver Spoon smiled. "I come from Equestria. It's a nice place, very friendly."

"Oh, ponies, right? I've been there once. How are you finding being a dragon?"

There was a disconcerting sound of the sort that would make lesser men quail. After a moment, the Dragonborn realised that the dragon in front of him was laughing.

"Oh, this isn't even close to the weirdest shape I've been. I'm an old hand at strange bodies," she assured him. "My race data was in a corrupted section of Yggdrasil â€" the loops don't actually know what species I am, so every loop I end up in a different body."

The Dovahkiin blinked. "Youâ€| wait, you too? Iâ€| I didn't realise there were others like me! The same thing's happening to me, I can't cope with it! It's driving me mad, I can't even remember what race I started out as! How do you cope? How do you manage to live not knowing what you're going to wake up as next time?!"

Silver Spoon settled down into a more comfortable position, and gestured for the Dragonborn to come closer. "It took me a long time, and I never did stop finding it annoying, but the most important thing is to be able to hold on to who you are despite the changes. I had friends who helped me â€" if you want, I'd be honoured to be your friend, and to do the same for you."

For the first time in many, many loops, the Dragonborn smiled. Hesitantly, weakly, true, but he smiled. He'd like that, he thought. That sounded good.

* * *

>150.20: (wildrook)

"RAINBOW MIRIAM DASH!" Twilight yelled.

Dash cringed as she looked at Twilight. "What is it this time?" she yelled.

"Please tell me you never authorized an energy drink in your image," the purple Alicorn replied.

Rainbow Dash blinked as she looked at Twilight. "Not to my knowledge. Why?"

That's when an orange filly on a scooter rocketed past the two, leaving a sonic boom in her wake.

"Because THAT!" Twilight yelled, noticing her library get ripped out of its roots.

Rainbow Dash cringed as she looked at the carnage. "Let's get her before she re-creates Double Rainboom. I REALLY hope she doesn't get kidney failure from this."

* * *

>150.21: (fractalman)

"Opalescence? Where are you?!" called Rarity.

Silence.

She sighed, and headed out to see Fluttershy.

* * *

>Fluttershy shook her head. "No, I'm afraid I haven't seen Opalescence. I did notice that one of my fish went missing while I wasn't looking."

* * *

>"Have you seen Opalescence?"

"Eeno, " said Big Mac.

* * *

>"Sorry, Rarity, haven't seen her the whole loop. How long has she been missing?" asked Twilight.

Rarity only sighed.

* * *

>"Pinkie, I need as many bags of flour as you can spare."

"One wheelbarrow of ninja kitten finding flour coming right up!"

Before she could stop herself, Rarity asked, "However did you-"

"That's easy! Kittens make the best ninjas, because nobody ever suspects them!"

"Thats...oh, nevermind."

* * *

>150.22: (Evilhumour)

"Now Sunset, I am not sure if your mother has given the _Talk_, but I feel it is time you learn of it," the yellow mare Awoke as a pony, seated next to the white alicorn mare who didn't respond to the Ping. "You see, you are going to start going through _changes_,"

"I'm okay, I already kno-" Sunset muzzle was closed by Celestia's golden magic, a powerful wing holding her in place.

"Your body will start to feel awkward and lanky, you will be growing fur in places where there was no fur before," Celestia continued on obliviously as Sunset well used to the Talk. "The pain you will feel at first might seem scary, and trust me, _every_ mare is worried about the amount of blood that comes out but trust me when I say it is _completely_ _normal." Celestia gave a light laugh. "It's even better then dealing with estrus as it is a one time thing!"

"Wait, what?" Sunset blinked, snapping her head to the side, and looked at the mare confused.

"Now now, let me explain you what it is going to be like growing your wings first, my precious student, and then I will give the Talk about the miracle of life later!"

* * *

>150.23: (Evilhumour)

Vinyl blinked at the box in front of her and then at the grinning mare in front of her.

"Uh...Rares, what is this?" She pointed to the box in front of her with her hoof, wondering what the mare was planning.

"Why dear, it's a gift!" Rarity smiled a bit too much, making Vinyl feel if she was about to be made a punchline again.

"Uh...thanks, but why?" Vinyl blinked, lifting the box with her magic, pushing her glasses back up her nose.

"Why it's mother's day, dearie," Rarity smirked as Vinyl did a double take. "I mean you do replace my mother from time to time so I felt it would be appropriate to give you something for all those loops."

"Ha. Ha." Vinyl glared at the mare opposite of her, opening the gift. "I also tend not to be there for you as I know I would be a poor moth-the tree?!" She held up a very well made vibrant shawl up at the calm mare.

"Well yes, mother dear, I felt it would be nice for you to wear in your extended age." Rarity simply continued to smile, delicately drinking her tea to the fuming mare.

"If we are to examine our ages, then it should be you that should be wearing this, squirt." Vinyl's snark was cut off when Rarity began to snicker before lifting another gift up. "What's this?"

"Your actual gift, Vinyl," Rarity leaned over to give her a hug. "I meant what I said before Vinyl; I do appreciate the times you are my mother and I felt it would be nice to give you a gift for all the times you have been there for me."

Smirking, Vinyl hugged back, saying her thanks and opening her gift.

* * *

>150.24: (Evilhumour)

"Ow ow ow ow ow!" Lemon grunted as Fluttershy tugged his ear, dragging him out of the gala as Discord did his best to console the badly beaten and scared green slime monster. "How was I supposed to know that this Smooze was goo-OWWWWW!" That was all he got out before Fluttershy tugged harder, getting the yellow stallion out the ballroom, the door slamming shut behind them.

* * *

>150.25: (OathToOblivion)

_"Twilight, are you ready?"_

"Ready as I'll ever be," the purple unicorn Anchor nodded, finishing writing things down in a notebook and shutting off her telekinesis.

_"Very well," _Mewtwo said, hovering closer. He raised a hand up into a ready position, his psychic energy flashing around it. _"Now, attempt to remove something from your subspace pocket,"_ he told her.

"Right." At that, Twilight decided to pull out OWL out of her Pocket. As she made the connection to her Intelligent Device, she tried to pull it out.

_"**"Disable"**_ Mewtwo snapped, firing off a pulse of psychic energy. Twilight froze. Suddenly, the act of trying to pull OWL out felt as though she was grabbing something on the bottom of an Olympic-sized pool from the very top. And it was filled with molasses. While she was covered in butter.

Gritting her teeth, Twilight poured more and more of her power into trying to pull it out of her Pocket. The strain was evident on her face as sweat poured down it. Mewtwo grew slightly concerned at this. _"Twilight," _he started.

"GOT IT!" Twilight roared, finally pulling OWL out of her Pocket and panting in exhaustion. ...That's what I'd like to say, but in actuality, OWL went flying out of her Pocket and almost beamed Mewtwo in the head if the Genetic PokÃ©mon hadn't raised a hasty Protect shield.

There was a brief pause, before Twilight blushed red in embarrassment. "Sorry," she apologized.

_"It is of no concern. Accidents happen in the course of science," _Mewtwo shrugged, handing OWL back to her telekinetically. _"Still,"_ he added, _"this proves that Disable, at least, cannot actually prevent use of the Pocket, but simply makes it very hard to access. Not quite what we were expecting,"_ he mused, pulling out his own notebook and jotting some notes down.

"But that was only one type of power nullifier. We need to test the rest," Twilight surmised.

Mewtwo nodded, as that was exactly what he was thinking. _"I believe BlackWarGreydon knows of a few other versions. I've only ever stuck with Disable, so-" _He shrugged, feeling the point was clear.

"Oh yeah, by the way," Twilight remembered, "everything okay with you two? That kind of bond can be tricky between those from different loops."

_"It is all fine. Thank you for asking," _Mewtwo nodded. He was about to suggest something else, when he was interrupted by a certain few noises...

"Fun! Fun! Fun! Fun!"

"GAH! Annoying pests! **TERRA DESTROYER**!" And a large explosion was then heard.

Twilight facehoofed at this. "I thought I told Pinkie not to go by the Mirror Pool!" she said in exasperation.

"Evidently, BlackWarGreymon does not approve either. We should probably do something about that before he ends up destroying the town in a fit of anger," Mewtwo said, going for the door.

"Not like it would be the first time," Twilight grumbled, before the pair went outside.

* * *

>150.26: (Evilhumour)

It began with a delivery being late and a mare tripping in the air. The cake was protected threefold; one by newton's first law of motion, two by Pinkie Pie's own special talent keeping the cake intact before it reached its destination, and third by narrative causality taking interest in the flying cake.

Out, out of Ponyville the cake flew and towards the mighty mountain city. It flew straight in a grand arc that would have deemed it to land short of shining city of Canterlot if not for a varied number of factors, but the primary factor was that the cake was given a boost of speed to grow its arc when a trio of sonic rainboom were performed the exact distance away to keep it falling from its plate and splattering the ground with its tasty goodness. Said sonic rainbooms were rainbow coloured, butterfly coloured and scroll coloured, oddly enough fitting descriptions for the ponies in question. The arc was also helped by the fact that narrative causality was now paying far more interest in the high flying cake now, taking a proverbial break away from Ponyville, which caused a purple mare to turn her head in confusion to why the fire that was consuming her tree suddenly poofed out of existence but she did not question it.

The cake was now falling, falling with great speed. There was nothing that could save its arc outside miniature rocket boosters coming out of the side of the plate to boost it up. Pinkie Pie had mistaken the plate the cake was currently for the rocket kind, as she was usually prepared for this. Alas, the cake was about to strike in capital of Equestria, looming above a noble party. With a whizzing above, a stallion with a white coat and a golden mane, otherwise known as Prince Blueblood, looked up in time to see the cake nail him square in the face, knocking him backwards into the buffet table, which caused the food to fly in arc that only narrative causality could have prescribed as all the food landed on Blueblood's face, the multilayer cake smashing into his face before the punch bowl drenched him completely.

The odds of this happening were astronomical, to be fair, but when you had a certain wall eyed mare in the equation, then anything was possible.

* * *

>AN:

150.1: Passing the torch. Or teapot.

>150.2: Worth experimenting.150.3: Of course Discord occasionally comes out with expansions. Sometimes he comes out with contractions.

>150.4: Inspired By Keldeo.150.5: Put a sock on it.

>150.6: New Leaf seems to have a lot of ponies today. (Animal Crossing.)150.7: Run. (Grimm Adventures of Billy and Mandy.)

>150.8: No, the other Ash. (Evil Dead.)150.9: Not bad.

>150.10: I presume they swapped villains for a bit.150.11: Summat diplomatic. Sorry, a diplomatic summit.

>150.12: Whoops. (Megami Tensei)150.13: For creatures normally not involved with clothes, ponies offer a new perspective. (Kill la kill)

>150.14: Groan. (Doctor Who.)150.15: Something really has it in for that tree.

>150.16: Purple pony, purple prose.150.17: Mellow ponies. Marsh mellow.

>150.18: Dangit. (Grimm Adventures again.)150.19: Ah, a new friend.

>150.20: Scootasonic.150.21: Of course they do.

>150.22: Oh, the other talk.150.23: Looper families are... variable.

>150.24: It's so hard to keep track.150.25: Good to know. (Mewtwo from Pokemon.)

>150.26: A surface-to-surface ballistic guided cake.

158. Chapter 158

151.1: (Evilhumour)

"Thor?"

"Yes Sleipnir?"

"I have a question for you, dear cousin." The Admin's eye twitched as they watch the loop around them.

"Go ahead and ask, dear cousin," Thor answered a bit nervously, wincing as another building exploded in the distance.

"How did Derpy pick up your hammer?" Sleipnir ducked as the grey mare flew over ahead, holding the mystical hammer in her hooves.

Thor stood up and brushed the grass from his body. "I'm fairly sure that it is quite obvious; the looping maiden has proven herself worthy enou-"

"_She's not Awake right now!_" Sleipnir shouted as a massive bolt of lighting almost hit them.

"Ah." Thor blinked, and looked at his uncle's second son. "I have no clue then."

Sleipnir could only facehoof like a horse with four front hooves could do.

"This is your fault," Thor added.

"How?" Sleipnir asked. "I mean, I only invited you to have dinner with us somewhere I like. You're the one who hung Mjolnir on the coathookâ€|"

"I saw it in the Marvel loopsâ€|" Thor muttered.

* * *

>151.2: (Evilhumour)

Twilight Sparkle face twitched, her mane springing out in every direction. It had seemed like an almost perfect baseline Loop until this moment.

"Well, I am sure we can find another place for you Miss Sparkle," the pony opposite of her said slowly, watching the scared reaction of the other ponies around her and the terrified princesses. "Maybe I can take you on as an assistant and let you stay in the guest room?"

"I-I..." Twilight Sparkle shook her head, gulping a bit. "Thank you, but I'm sure that I can find my own place to work here, Miss Page Turner." She hated to say this next part. "I feel that if I did so I'd be overstepping my bounds if I do so." It pained her to say that. Turning her head to Celestia, she sighed internally. "Princess Celestia, if you don't mind, I would like to stay with my new friends until I find my place here in Ponyville."

"Of course Twilight," the Princess smiled, seeing how close Twilight was to snapping. "But I don't think you should dismiss Miss Turner's offer so quickly. You might find working in a library to be enjoyable."

Grinding her teeth, Twilight nodded her head and let herself be dragged away from the confused owner of the Golden Oaks.

* * *

>151.3: (Evilhumour)

Nyx looked to the mare next to her and frowned.

"What? This was your idea," the mare next to her huffed, rolling her eyes as she applied the make up.

"Yes, I know but I didn't expect this!_" she sneered, doing her own make up.

"Jealousy doesn't suit you, Nyx," the yellow alicorn mare smirked, shaking her flanks slightly. "Besides, remember that Empress Celestia made me to be the perfect alicorn mare warrior. Can't help if I am so pretty!" She puffed her mane up as she left the bathroom, leaving Nyx scowling at her looping boyfriend's head.

* * *

>151.4: (Evilhumour)

**{Rarity, We have a question for you.**

"Yes Skynet?" Rarity looked at the computer that was in a strange form.

**{Do you have any knowledge to why We are in this form this loop?}

"That's my line darling," Rarity looked at the bee shaped Terminator, before sighing. "But I do not know why nor do I know why I am one too." She sighed, fluttering her wings around the metal hive that was flying in space, replacing the Borg cubes of the Star Trek Loops.

**{We are also concerned that our main source of power is from the Cutie Mark Crusaders harvesting honey and tree sap. We are also concerned as it is very effective towards delaying Captain Picard. This universe does not make any sense.}

"Tell me about it," Slaanesh muttered, walking over to the group. "No lust in this freaking loop, just pure love for all things honey. I've never felt this way over a foodstuff before and it's so weird!" The Chaos God flailed before falling onto Rarity's fainting sofa, muttering about feeling dirty.

"No," Alan Grant muttered, walking over to them. "What's weird is that our god is freaking Waspinator!"

"Could be worse," Terry McGinnis muttered in a bright yellow bee styled batsuit. "Just don't know how."

* * *

>151.5: (Evilhumour)

Alan Grant Woke up on the helicopter as they were flying over the damnable island filled with the damnable dinosaurs that would make his life a living hell in a short while. With a sigh, he turned his head to look at the monster when he saw something that made him jump.

"-hold, Equestria Park!"

Blinking, Alan Grant saw a multitude of differently coloured ponies running around- except for a pink one that was bouncing- and he knew instantly that this was either going be one peaceful loop or one aggravating loop.

* * *

>151.6: (Midnight Crescent)

Now the books don't work...

Twilight Awoke in the midst of reshelving day, and decided to take a break. After checking her loop memories to find no changes from baseline, except for the new radio station on the outskirts of the town, Twilight sent out a ping, before calling Spike down the stairs to help.

Given that he was longer and taller than her, she figured one of the responses had come from him. "You had a chance to check who else is awake yet?"

"Looks like it's just Nyx and Luna for now. I'm assuming they've got something up their sleeve, given Nyx isn't already here..."

"Yeah, but she's not telling me what..." Twilight said, letting out a sigh. "So, ready to go to work?"

Spike rolled his shoulders, and moved towards one of the piles of books. "Sure, let's go."

The pair moved around the library, tuning out the odd word that came through the bursts of static from the radio as they finished the day's main task.

"_Saturday... Library... Unknowable..._"

It took them longer than expected. So much, in fact, that Spike had to retire before they'd even finished. Twilight shook her head and yawned as she finally slid the last book into a space she wasn't quite sure should be there, before turning off the radio and heading upstairs to bed.

* * *

>Twilight blinked herself awake, looking around the room in confusion. The bedroom of her tower didn't seem quite right today, but she shrugged it off, rising and shaking her mane from her eyes.

"Spike, you up yet?"

"Yeah, Twilight..." the drake replied, stretching out as he climbed to his feet from his basket, before stretching out to his preferred size. Looking round the room, he paused for a second. "Twilight, you got any idea why we're back in Canterlot?"

"No idea, Spike..." she replied, sighing as she did. "One minute I was going to bed..." she started, but trailed off, as she realised all she could remember was going to bed, but the details were fuzzy. "Well, I went to bed somewhere else, then woke up here."

"Pretty much the same as I got then..." Spike said, scratching his chin in thought. "Teleport to Ponyville?"

"Teleport to Ponyville," she echoed in agreement, nodding her head. "Ready? In 3...2...1..."

* * *

>Twilight and Spike arrived just outside Ponyville in a flash of lavender magic.

Spike took a few seconds to look around. "Nyx not joining us?"

"She said she wanted to spend some time with Luna this loop,"

Twilight answered, crossing the bridge into the town proper. "She'll probably drop in at some point."

"So, we don't have anything important to do for a while..."

"Let me guess," Twilight said, stopping him mid-sentence. "You'll be helping Rarity?"

"Am I that obvious?"

"You really want me to answer that?"

The two shared a laugh as they walked down the main road.

Spike stopped first, turning to face Twilight. "How about you?"

"I'm going to try and figure out what happened last night..." Twilight said, before pausing to think. "Maybe Applejack will let me work in her treehouse..."

Spike raised an eyebrow. "Why in the treehouse?"

Twilight shrugged. "I just feel like I should be working in a treehouse..."

* * *

>As the moon rose into the middle of the night's sky, Applejack walked up the ramp to her old treehouse, sitting next to her muttering friend. "Somethin' troublin' ya there, sugarcube?"

"I'm not sure..." Twilight replied, shaking her head clear. "My memories all fuzzy, but I can't figure out why, and I've tried to every spell that might undo it, but they don't seem to have done anything..."

"Alright, Twilight," Applejack said, hooking a foreleg around her friend steering her down the path towards the farmhouse. "It's near enough midnight," she started, only to be interrupted by the first chime of an unseen clock tower. "Scratch that, it is midnight, and yer obviously tired. There ain't no way I'm lettin' ya teleport back t'Canterlot like that. I know we ain't got much room up at the farm, but it's better than nothin'..."

Twilight considered this, until the final ring of the bell tower. "Or I could just go back to the library..."

"... Y'know, I'd plum forgotten you were staying there..." Applejack pulled her hat down over her eyes, her cheeks glowing red in embarrassment. "Darndest thing..."

* * *

>Twilight pulled a book from the shelves as she sat down with her morning coffee. She was relieved that the strange events from the previous week seemed to have just passed over without any after effects.

Her telekinesis rolled the book around, while she tried to find a title on the oddly plain cover. After a full minute's search, she rolled her eyes, and moved to open the cover. Which didn't work.

Raising an eyebrow she tried to increase her magic output slightly. But there were no changes.

Scanning the book, she found that it was in fact all one piece - the pages inside were one mass, which was also firmly attached to the cover. Nothing to turn or open.

Puzzled, Twilight took the next book off the shelf, only to find it was exactly the same first. As were the rest of that shelf. And that bookcase.

Once she had discovered all the books in the library, even the ones in her room, were in the same condition, her eye had developed a twitch.

Which was not helped by the rest of the town attempting to hammer down her front door, asking if she knew why their books weren't working too.

* * *

>When Spike and Nyx finally managed to talk Twilight out of her Episode, it was decided that they would run the library for the next month. Spike decided he could handle the sorting, while Nyx would deal with lending and collecting the late fees.

Meanwhile, Twilight was to spend most of her time either sleeping, or at the spa with her friends.

All in all, it seemed to be a fair arrangement.

* * *

>After all the previous events, Twilight wasn't too shocked when, towards the end of her tenure, Nyx walked into the library, very obviously weary eyed.

Twilight raised an eyebrow as her daughter carried straight on, walking straight into the table, knocking the wooden bust down onto her head. "Nyx, are you OK?"

Nyx shook her head. "Ponies are checking books out by their dreams now..." she said, her eye twitching as a few choice images flashed back to the front of her mind.

Twilight winced as she started to realise where this was going. "Pinkie Pie?"

A nod confirmed Twilight's suspicions. "Even Unawake, her mind is a beautiful, terrifying, mind bending... experience..." Nyx elaborated, waiting a few seconds before speaking again. "Is Mac Awake yet, Mom?"

"I think he Woke up a day or two ago..."

"Alright, I'm gonna go to the bar. Either I drink until I forget all this, or until Mac runs out of Brain Bleach..."

Twilight thought about stopping her for a second, before deciding on a more appropriate response. "If things get any weirder this loop, I may join you..."

* * *

>"I know it was you..." a voice yelled, echoing through the mostly deserted station. "***Now get back here!***"

"My dear Twilight Sparkle..." another voice replied from outside the booth's door. "I am a prankster, a trickster, and a swindler of the highest order. I am NOT suicidal. So why do you think I would be so stupid as to mess with your books?"

"**That's just what you want me to think, Discord! Now hold still...**"

Cecil gently moved his microphone back round to his face as the week's weather report concluded. "Dear listeners, it has come to my attention that an irate equine with a mane made of fire has been running rampant through our small town's radio station, chasing some sort of serpentine chimera. From what I've been told, their antics have already accounted for Angelina the intern..."

As Cecil paused, more of the insanity from outside managed to leak into the recording booth.

"Well then. Enough talk," Discord said threateningly. "Have at thee, worthless curd!"

Twilight stared at the jar he was brandishing at her. Her cold gaze then turned back to the Draconeus' face. "***I happen to like lemon...**"

"...Oops?"

Shaking his head to free it from the captivating distraction, Cecil picked up where he had left off, realising some clarification was in order. "Now, as Angelina was a dust bunny, I'm not entirely sure whether she would have had a family for me to offer our condolences to, dear listeners, but if the theoretical family of the dust bunny intern does exist, I'm sure that they did indeed love her, and are saddened by their loss..."

Another pause as he checked the stations itinerary for the next slot's programming allowed yet more of the external events to drift in.

"You're... ridiculously... determined..." Discord panted. "But you don't... really think things through... when you're that angry, do you?"

Twilight pulled up in front of him, her eyes glaring, and her coat darkening to a more familiar shade. "What do you mean?"

"Come now, Sparkle. You of all ponies should know by now..." Discord said, his smirk spreading wider than his head. "That when I'm involved," Discord started, before clicking his fingers. Discord vanished, a small discord puppet falling into place where he had been. His voice now echoed around the whole station. "Things aren't always as they seem..."

"..." Twilight blinked at the puppet for a few seconds, before her twitch returned. She ground her teeth, before throwing her head back and practically roaring. "DISCORD!"

Cecil took a few breaths, holding the cough button as he attempted to stop the brief bout of chuckles in time for his farewell. "Stay tuned for 3 hours of watching paint dry - an exclusive interactive entertainment programme. But, for now, goodnight, dear listeners, goodnight..."

* * *

>151.7: (Evilhumour)

Part One of Learning to Fly by Wubbing.

"Okaaaaay, let's do a quick catch up Twi?" Vinyl blinked as she stared at the lake in front of her. "I thought you were going to help me learn to use my wub hooves so why are we here?"

"We're here for a reason Vinyl," Twilight said, holding a checklist in front of her. "Before you can start flying properly with your sonic propulsion hooves, we need to do some basic tests and experiments beforehand."

"And crashing into a pond is a lot better then into the ground, trust me." Rainbow Dash said from her cloud, watching the scene carefully. "So let Twilight do her egghead tests with your wub hooves and I ll swoop and save your flanks if things get out of control."

"Sounds good to me," Vinyl shrugged, rolling her neck. "So what's first on the old listie Twi?"

Twilight's left ear flicked at the nicknames being used but she moved past them. "Air resistant goggles?"

Vinyl took off her purple tinted glasses, reached into her subspace pocket and swapped out an equally tinted pair of goggles. "Got it. Next?"

Twilight's right ear twitched but she did her best not to say anything. "Padding?"

"One sec-"

"Eeeeyup!" Dash grinned at the frowning Vinyl. "Oh come on, you know I was kidding."

"Yeah, since all this?" Vinyl patted her sides, her hoof going in deep. "Is just fur. Unlike some ponies, I don't need to work out to get a slim bod-GAH!"

Vinyl and Dash squeaked as Twilight squirted them both with her squirt-bottle. "Let's stay on track, please?"

"Spruce Twilight, that is bucking cold water!" Dash grumbled, flying quickly into the sky to dry herself off while Vinyl started to vibrate in place.

"Yeah, what did you do, go to the north pole or something?" Vinyl grumbled as her long coat was now puffy.

"Yes, actually. This bottle has a miniature portal inside that is connected to the original pony lands to a river that flows despite the sheer drop in temperature and the roaming Windigos. The glass itself is indestructible so it can handle the water inside of it."

"Wow, really?" Vinyl and Dash both leaned in close to look at the bottle.

"Of course not," Twilight snorted in soft laughter, shaking her head. "It's just from the tap with a couple of ice cubes tossed in."

"Oh har har." Vinyl grumbled as she slipped on a full body padded suit. "You're a riot Twi." Vinyl made a face before she shook her mane. "Great, I've got knots in my fur. Rare's is going to kill me, and then she's going to drag me to the spa." It had been pretty funny to see their unAwake friend drag her mother around, and acting the more mature of the two while throwing a lot of guilt around at Vinyl.

"Better you than me Vinyl," Dash grumbled, settling down on the cloud. "I hate ponies touching my hooves."

"So what do I need to do Twi, hover in place?" Vinyl asked as she began to emit her wubs and begin to float.

"No Vinyl, not just yet!" Twilight shouted, tossing her list to the side as she began to run over to the unicorn mare, ignoring Dash pulling out the popcorn bag.

"What?" Vinyl shouted, walking around in place and lifting a hoof to her ear. Or at least that was her intention, but as she broke the stable and equally distributed propulsion of her body weight on four hooves to three as well as moving on to her face, she was suddenly rocketed sideways. Flailing with her hooves in the air, she was sent into a corkscrew fashion towards the lake. With a splash, Vinyl hit the water horn first and started to paddled in the water before Rainbow Dash flew over, plucked her out of the water and begun to lecture her.

"Vinyl Scratch, do you have any idea in how stupid that was? You should never break up your flying format unless you have years of experience to back you up!" Grumbling loudly, the pegasus began to move Vinyl's legs back into place, with Dash bending Vinyl's knees. "Look, normally you'd keep your legs tucked for flight but for your wub hooves you would need to keep them bent for a good take off before straightening them out. And don't you dare think about doing any fancy twist or turns just yet missy, as we will need to a lot of exercises to get you floating steadily before we can have you flying properl-OH MY BIRCH!" Dash suddenly shouted, placing her hooves to her mouth in horror.

"What? What's wrong Dashie?!" Twilight blinked, getting ready to run over to her friend, Vinyl staying in place.

"I'm starting to sound like you." Dash's laughter was quickly picked up by Vinyl's snickering. Which was squashed by Twilight squirting the mare with a deadpan look on her face. Shaking her mane after squeaking by the cold water, Dash rolled her eyes at white mare standing beside her.

* * *

>151.8: (Evilhumour)

Luna Awoke on her Moon noticing two things.

One, Nyx was not present. She was in complete control of her body and mind, without a trace of the usual Nightmare force.

Two, Celestia had built something odd outside her moon prison. It was a massive wooden construct, with a large metal clump in the middle on the long side of it-

"Oh you have to be KIDDING me!" Luna shouted as she face hoofed. Surely her sister wouldn't-

**BANG BANG**

"**LUNA, I AM RESPECTING YOUR PRIVACY BY KNOCKING BUT I AM ASSERTING MY AUTHORITY AS YOUR OLDER SISTER BY COMING IN ANYWAYS!**" And with that, Celestia destroyed the door she created by using a very familiar tree as a battering ram.

* * *

>151.9: (Evilhumour)

Sleipnir coughed out his coffee when his mother told him of the latest virus and the fact that Skuld was reportedly flipping mad.

"But mom, I didn't create a virus!" he shouted, running over to his brother's terminal as he could not check his own branches for the so-called 'equine' virus.

Ignoring his brother lying on his side as his girlfriend was scratching his ear, he looked at the helpers going over the terminals as his brother was enjoying his 'break'.

All of the people were equines of some kind and he had no idea why!

"I honestly did not believe you had it in you," Skuld growled at him from the doorway, holding her hammer lose in her hands. "Nearly everyone is reporting that their loops have a sudden abundance of horses everywhere!" Stepping over the gulping form of his little brother, she leaned into his face. "Unless this is a masterful prank by the loopers, you are in so much trouble!"

* * *

>Twilight pulled out her list of people that destroyed her tree and checked off Sleipnir's name.

"Was it really worth it Twilight?" Spike asked her, raising an eyebrow at her.

"Indeed." Twilight smiled at getting even with another person. It took considerable effort, a lot of favours being called in, and Loki and several other Admins being in favour of pranking Sleipnir and Skuld but it was totally worth being stuck in Gen 3 to get back at losing her tree.

* * *

>151.10:(KrisOverstreet, Filraen)

Rainbow Dash swooped just under the low ceiling beams of Mac's cellar-based bar and dropped onto a stool next to Gilda. "'Sup, Gils?" she asked.

"Not much," Gilda shrugged. "Last Loop I joined the Wonderbolts. Unfortunately, this guy Troubleshoes- you heard'a him? Well, last Loop he had a thing for air shows instead of rodeos. Turns out he makes a decent ground support horse, given a push in the right direction."

Rainbow Dash shifted on her barstool. "Um, yeah," she muttered. "Speaking of loop expansion stuff... during the last one the Cutie Map sent Pinkie and me on a mission, and we kinda met you..."

"... the map led you to Griffonstone, didn't you." The crest of Gilda's feathers slumped.

"Yeah, it did!" Rainbow Dash snapped. "What WAS that? What happened to all those defeat-the-emperor, all-hail-Gilda-the-new-queen things?"

"Variant Loops, I suppose." Gilda sighed. "I really enjoyed those. It was nice to see home the way it should have been... instead of the miserable dump it usually is now.

"I didn't want to believe it at first, you know Dash? Sure, it was a variant that happened every now and then. But lately it had been happening really often." Gilda flashed her own Element of Brutal Honesty before continuing. "And I can't lie to myself for too long. You know that." Dash nodded her agreement. "And I can't even blame old Eight-Legs because I know it isn't his fault!" Gilda growled, pounding the bar for emphasis.

"Well, yeah," Dash shrugged. "You know you could have asked any of us for help, right? Get your home town back on its feet, and all that?"

"Dash, come on!" Gilda groaned. "I didn't want everypony to see what a cruddy hometown I came from! I'm sure you can understand that, right? Remember those times when Cloudsdale was a bunch of scudpaper shacks on rained-out stratus clouds?"

Dash considered this. "Yeah, it wasn't a place I really wanted to show either."

"Besides, there aren't many griffons I wanted to introduce you to anyway," Gilda added. "You know, I managed to bring the Idol back a couple times?"

"So did I, the first Loop I went there," Rainbow Dash muttered.

"Pawnd it, didn't they?"

"Yep."

"They always do. Look, Griffonstone's not something you can fix in the Loops," Gilda continued. "Oh, for fifty or a hundred Loops it's fun to go all Mareshal Plan on the place, go from hovels to palaces, and then it gets boring, just like everything else in these cruddy Loops. And of course everything you do gets wiped away with the Loop reset. Just let it go, okay?"

A tankard of cider appeared in front of Rainbow Dash. She took several slow swallows from it, using the time to think about it. "I'll try, Gilda," she said. "But I can't speak for the others."

"I know already. Pinkie Pie has tried to fix it a few times," Gilda grumbled. "She's experimented to see which baked good makes griffons friendliest. One time I saw her making hushpuppies. That backfired. Made the other griffons even more selfish and mercenary. One of them even wrote a book that began infecting the ponies with that attitude-Grover Shrugged, or the Fountainbeak, was the title." Gilda shuddered at the memory. "Dash, you don't ever want to see a Randian griffon. You just don't."

"Um... riiiiight." Rainbow Dash tried not to lean away from Gilda on her stool.

"And well, Sparkle of course. She has more reasons to be bored than us anyway," Gilda said. "At least her last try helped her vent, I think."

Rainbow Dash remembered the state of Griffonstone's "library" and flinched. "What did she do?" Dash asked.

"Well, the Loop before last -for me at least, who knows how many Sparkle had since- she was still in Punish the Infidel for Crimes Against Books mode," Gilda said. "I think one of her first edicts as a Princess was to commission the construction by forced labor of Book Fort McHennerly. Before that, she told me, she'd had them conscripted into the University of Canterlot, lock, stock, and kitten. Last Loop she wasn't quite so Eternal-Twilight-y, but she was still a bit tetchy about the whole thing."

Rainbow Dash nodded and finished her cider. "So, you doing anything for the Summer Sun Celebration this Loop?"

Gilda smiled her little wicked smile. "Can't make it, Dash," she said. "I've got a coven meeting tomorrow night. Turns out I'm a Shadowbolt this Loop." She finished her own drink and got up from the barstool. "Better bring your A-game tomorrow night, loser." With that the griffon flapped her wings and flew towards the darkest shadow in the cellar, vanishing into nothingness.

Dash tapped the bar with her hoof. "Same again Mac," she said, "and keep 'em comin'."

* * *

>151.11 (Evilhumour)

Twilight ducked as Perfect Fyre fire bended at her, with Honour knocking it away from the golden oaks library thankfully. It was a fused loop with the Avatar branch, with Twilight replacing Aang as the alicorn, the one that could use all types of magic and was destined to save the world, if not for the insane princess in front of them.

"Sister, this is _madness_," the pony with a scarred left eye shouted. "I will _not_ let you take alicorn pony to father!"

"And how do you propose _that_, dear brother?" Fyre sneered. "I am _far_ better at firebending and I doubt you can deflect my lightning."

"I did not wish to do this," Honour said, reaching into his subspace pocket. "Here, _catch_." Like most ponies, when told to catch, the pony princess of the Fire Nation caught the muffin in her hooves.

"Is _this_ your master plan brother?" She began to laugh, not noticing the ponies around them begin to back up in fear as a shadow began to descend towards the unicorn. "A muf-"

***"MUFFIN!"** With that as her only warning, Perfect Fyre was tackled straight through the library, with the air bending master Derpy Hooves unleashing her awesome and terrifying powers for her beloved treat.

Twilight looked at Honour with an eye twitching, with the two seaponies snickering loudly from behind her. Boomerang and Water Whip were being a lot subtler than Blind Bandit, who was rolling on the ground in a fit of laughter.

* * *

>151.12: (Evilhumour)

Twilight blinked at the odd blue toucan that was replacing her owl this loop, who was nibbling on a cracker.

"Ok, Tzeentch, what did you do?"

The toucan tilted his head to a weird angle before sighing.

"I might have made a deal with someone that I should have not made a deal with..." The blue bird muttered.

"Who did you give future knowledge to?" She sighed, wondering what the Chaos God did that made him admit it was a bad idea.

"In my defense, I only Woke up _after_ I gave Wily knowledge about some of the fun stuff back home," Tzeentch sighed, "And before you ask, the Warp gave me the knowledge of the future to when I _would_ Wake up but not to _why_ I had that strange knowledge nor _why_ it would be a bad idea. The Warp can mess up my plans. Also, next time you see those two android Anchors, tell them it is not _my_ fault about dealing with the Master Primarchbots or the God Emperorbot thingy." He huffed, pecking at the cracker in his talon, looking out of the cage he was in. "Could have done it so much better if _I_ knew what I was planning..."

* * *

>151.13: (Filraen)

_...as time went on, the younger sister became resentful. The ponies relished and played in the day her elder sister brought forth, but shunned and slept through her beautiful night. One fateful day, the younger unicorn refused to lower the moon to make way for the dawn. The elder sister tried to reason with her, but the bitterness in the young one's heart had transformed her into a wicked mare of darkness: Nightmare Moon._

_She vowed that she would shroud the land in eternal night. Reluctantly, the elder sister harnessed the most powerful magic known to ponydom: the Elements of Harmony. Using the magic of the Elements of Harmony, she defeated her younger sister. However after the battle the victor was so overcome by guilt that she exiled herself from Equestria vowing to return only when her sister returned too or she was directly contacted to return. For that event she left a magic relic..._

"... which as of today still lies at Canterlot Grand Cathedral," Twilight Sparkle finished reading. "Well, that's a new one."

* * *

>After promising Moondancer to go her birthday party as long as nothing else happened, an answer that was apparently beyond from what was expected from Twilight, the Anchor decided to go to the Grand Cathedral to investigate this discrepancy with baseline. If anything it was going to be different from the last hundred or so baseline loops.

The Cathedral reminded her some of her own Royal Sisters loops where she had not sufficiently discouraged alicorn worship: huge, ostentatious, but hopefully open to all public during daytime. Apparently that big valuable relic was inside a treasure chest, which in turn was sealed in a powerful ward.

... though in a second thought, the most interesting thing about the ward wasn't that it was powerful nor that the ward didn't have any traps associated. It was the fact that the ward had magic, chakra and ki in its construction and it was needed knowledge of all of them to disable the ward. It was effectively a lock only Loopers could open. Who would do that and why? Twilight received no answer when she tried pinging earlier.

The ward wasn't even that complicated to disable, as if whoever placed it wanted it to be opened... and there was a book inside the chest. The book was one Twilight recognized: with a sun mark on its cover it was one of the books Celestia gave to Sunset to communicate with her even if she was in the world beyond the mirror.

If that meant Celestia was Awake... no need to guess, better ask her directly. Twilight had the book with her now anyway.

_Hello... Celestia, are you there?_

It took a minute or two before receiving an answer

I am Celestia. Who are you who write to me?

_It's Twilight Sparkle. And yes, I just Awoke earlier today._

This time the reply came almost immediately.

Twilight? Thank pineness. Sorry about everything, I had to leave in a hurry.

_No problem, Equestria seemed to go reasonably well all things considered, if my loop memories are reliable. What happened to you, though? It doesn't seem like you to leave Equestria just like that._

There was a problem when I Awoke. Sorry to ask, but is this the eve of the 1000th Summer Sun Celebration after the battle with Nightmare Moon?

_According to the banners in the temple, it seems so._

Temples to Alicorns?

_Yes_

Urgh... now I really don't want to return to that. Anyway, I Awoke almost one thousand years ago during the battle with Nightmare Moon. To be precise when I Awoke I was using the Elements to banish Luna...

_Celestia, what are you not telling me?_

... I may have missed the moon when banishing Luna.

_WHAT?_

It was an accident! The typical moment that it takes to orientate in a new Loop was just the moment when my pre-Awake self was supposed to take aim!

Twilight...

Twilight, are you still there?

_Sorry Celestia. Was too busy laughing and taking a photo of the page for future blackmail._

Oh, you...

_I'm fine now. Back to the matter at hoof, I suppose after the banishment you left Equus to follow Luna?_

Exactly. Even if it took a millennium it may be time well spent if I could redirect the spell back to Equus, or any planet for that matter. No such luck yet though. I said that I was going to bring Luna back but I left the book in the hopes you'd contact me with it.

_That makes sense. Do you need some help?_

That'd be lovely. I'm quite lost to be honest, I can't recognize any constellations around here. If you could make a big flare using the elements it'd be really useful, and with a bit of luck I can use it to break the banishment spell.

_Right. The Elements are in your castle in the Everfree?_

Last I knew they were, but that was a thousand years ago.

_All right, I see what I can do. I'll keep you updated._

Thanks Twilight, and good luck.

Closing the book Twilight sighed. Well, better hurry to Ponyville. She only had until the end of the Loop to find Celestia and she had a thousand year head start.

* * *

>151.14: (Heliomance)

Applejack stood, tossing an apple in her forehoof as she looked down at the centaur rampaging through Ponyville.

"So, somethin' Ah saw in a Hub loop recently got me t' thinkin'." She nodded to Shining Armor, who raised a powerful shield spell over the group. "How many apples does it take t' defeat Tirek?"

In one smooth movement, she lobbed the apple high in the air, spun so she was facing away from Ponyville, and lashed out with her hind hooves as the apple came down. There was a deafening crack, a blinding flash, and the air between them and the magic-draining centaur seemed to explode. Tirek himself went flying, sailing through the air back to Tartarus. When their eyes and ears cleared, the recently evacuated Ponyville was all but gone, flattened by the shockwave. Applejack looked a bit smug.

"One, at sufficient velocity."

* * *

>151.15: (masterofgames)

Rainbow Dash lounged on a rock atop the cliff overlooking the village of 'Our Town'. Twilight sat nearby on a lawn chair with sunglasses and a smirk.

"Okay, I see what you did here." Dash commented to Twilight, gesturing to the town. "The whole Battle Of The Bands thing started with a song about competition, and standing out, and proving who the best was. This is a fitting punishment in _theory_. But I'm seriously starting to feel bad for them."

Twilight took a long, leisurely sip of her drink. "Spike wasn't Awake. They kicked him. I was feeling vengeful." she shrugged, basking in the screams of rage and frustration from a certain house down below.

_"Nopony likes a winner."_

"Make it stop! MAKE IT STOP!"

"Let us out of here!"

"Like, why are you two complaining? Come on, read with me! It isn't half bad!"

"AAAAAARGH!"

_"Apathy means happiness."_

* * *

>151.16: (masterofgames)

Twilight checked off yet another item from her list as she walked to Fluttershy during the Gala. "Nice work! I'll admit I doubted you, but you're winning my little challenges left and right." she grinned.

Fluttershy smiled softly as she half-hid behind her mane and glass of punch. "It's not so hard really. I did minor in psychology a long time ago after all, back when I got my P.H.D. in Adorableness. I just have to know how he thinks through a filter of jealousy a little."

Twilight giggled. "Well let it not be said I can't see the use of a degree or two. Now, next on the list is getting Discord to turn the recording of Octavia's music into a Mare-iachi dubstep. Think you can do it?"

"I'll start discussing large hats and spicy food with Tree Hugger, just as soon as we hit the pause between songs." Fluttershy winked.

* * *

>151.17: (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"Shepard, this is Sombra we're dealing with. I don't think we need a liberating army to deal with him," Twilight pointed at the massive Army the Mass Effect looper had assembled. Dragons, monsters of enormous size, Discord, the variant griffon empire's army, Luna, and about half the Equestrian Army stood on the borders of the shimmering city. Not to mention the assembled loopers, including Trixie checking her supplies of high powered explosives, Vinyl making some last adjustments to her Wub Cannon, and Sunset practicing with her keyblades.

The Captain of the guard checked his weapons that were custom designed for pony use and replied, "I'm not usually married to Cadence. Even when I take your brother's position as captain, he's always been married to the princess. And since I'm married to her and am under orders to free the Crystal Empire, I want to be prepared."

Twilight looked back at the city, "Prepared for what? It's like you expect to run into a nest of Reapers in there."

With a click, Shepard finished adjusting his weapons belt and slid the final thermal clip into place, "That's about the sum of it."

Twilight turned back to the male Earth pony, who shrugged, "Lately in every fused loop, I've been running into Reapers at the center of all my missions. Replacing Solid Snake? Instead of running into a Metal Gear, I find a mini reaper. Battling Andross in the Lylat System? After shooting him down, his remains animated like a reaper endoskeleton. Star Wars? Palpatine was a reaper puppet from beyond dark space and the invasion was a year away. Resident Evil Universe? Zombies replaced by husks along with dragon's teeth. Hell, my last loop at Freddy's, the animatronics were reaper embryos! I'm not taking any chances this loop."

Little did Twilight know they were walking headlong into a nest of reapers in stasis, buried in the core of Equestria, and Sombra was the overseer of the sleeping reapers and would one day awaken the eldritch machines to wipe clean the galaxy.

* * *

>151.18: (fractalman)

The timberwolf was confused. One moment, it had been in the forest, hunting a rabbit; the next, a purple flash and it was in some...place, a place that defied description by its simple mind.

It took a step forward into something soft and...good-smelling? Yes, good smelling. Maybe it would be a comfy place to take a nap?

_Yes_, it decided, so it curled up and took a nap.

* * *

>The - unawake - Celestia stared at the timberwolf sleeping on her cake.

"I really need to stop pulling all nighters."

She never noticed the small camera recording her reaction, nor the subtle wards set up by her student to ensure that nopony got hurt if something went wrong.

* * *

>151.19: (Rowan Ex)

(Doors Loop)

**Room #0/Golden Oak Library**

Twilight came out on the other side of a white door, panting. The other Loopers who noticed her was confused, as well as what the door was. Sleipnir then came and looked at Twilight before closing the white Door, locking it, and burning it.

Twilight raised a hoof and stared at her Admin and asked, "What in Yggdrasil's glitches was that?"

"A glitch," Sleipnir replied, "somehow, the door threw you into something like the elevator loop, and..." He looked around. "How was it? We've been trying to solve that glitch but since you were in we can't just do it."

Twilight looked up and began to tell her adventure which started with the white door...

* * *

>Room #1

Twilight looked around after buying a mysterious white door and entering it, and immediately saw herself in a small forest, with another white opened white door in front of her. She looked back, and instead of the library she saw the same room. She then faced the other door and ran towards it.

* * *

>Room #2

This must be a glitched variant as there was the door again, and the room changed into a white room. She checked her subspace pocket, took a camera, and began heading towards the next...

* * *

>Room #3

... only for her to quickly return it to her subspace pocket. Twilight looked around and immediately ran to the next door after the sight of zombie ponies.

* * *

>Room #4

"Okay, this is getting ridiculous. GET ME OUT OF HERE!"

* * *

>Room #5

Twilight stopped for a while in this room where a chair and a cup of tea and rested for a while. She looked at the next door before thinking what to do to escape these Nesting Doll-like glitch that always remind her of that Elevator Loop...

* * *

>Room #6Crossover with Left 4 Dead**

Twilight saw what the room had and was shocked to see Rochelle staring at a suspicious white door which she immediately pulled away and placed it right in front of her door, which caused a few zombies to arrive.

"What was that!?" Rochelle demanded in shock as she began to shoot the incoming horde.

"I don't know," Twilight replied as she entered the white door.

* * *

>Room #7

Twilight looked around the dark room before she heard a buzzing sound which caused her to go up, down, and into the next door.

What?

* * *

>Room #8

Twilight paused for a while and sat under a tree in the room while gazing at the doors. She looked around to find Applejack and Rainbow Dash, with Dashie falling to the ground. The Anchor chuckled a bit before headed towards the next room, tripping midway.

* * *

>Room #9

"Twilight!?" called Vinyl, "how in Yggdrasil did you got here in the first place?"

Twilight looked around, saw Vinyl and Octavia and flinched. She looked around then headed towards the next room. She was heard muttering "my bad, my bad," afterwards.

* * *

>Room #10 (mariic)

Twilight found herself outside a house somewhere in Ohio, and the entrance to the house was the door out of this room. She opened the door, but a shotgun blast barely missed her head. The G4 Anchor turned around to see the gunner, an overweight Sandusky film school dropout who shouted, "Get the f$# off mah property!" Twilight didn't needed to be told twice, and she dashed through the door.

* * *

>Room #11Crossover with Quantum Leap** (mariic)

Twilight nearly ran into a stick figure, who asked her, "Door glitch?"

"Door glitch." Twilight replied, nodding.

The Quantum Looper just muttered, "Oh boy." and they both ran through the next door.

* * *

>Room #12Crossover with Postal** (Awesomedude17)

"Postal Dude."

"Twilight."

"Why do you have a gunshot wound to the head?"

"Shot myself."

"Why?"

"Forget my hateful wife's rocky road."

"...Have you considered psychological help?"

"Maybe."

"Why are you here though?"

"Probably the same reason you are."

"Son of a birch." Twilight muttered.

"At least Al Qaeda isn't on your ass."

"What?"

"Bye." The Dude left through a door quickly, and a bunch of people who looked like Osama Bin Laden rushed through another door.

"Excuse me, did you see a trench coat wearing infidel?" One of them asked in a horrible Indian accent.

Twilight pointed to the door The Dude left through.

"Thank you." The group quickly left, and Twilight took out a vile of brain bleach.

"Note to self, Paradise doesn't make sense."

* * *

>Room #13

Twilight found herself going up into the next door, and looked at her left before entering the door. Seeing that she was in a DS did solve her slight confusion.

"What's gonna be next?" she asked to herself, "maybe Trixie?"

* * *

>Room #14

"Trixie alright," Twilight muttered as she shot a stun spell towards an Alicorn Amulet-using Trixie to find her way out. She saw the next door and hopped to it, only to be kicked by Trixie.

"Ow! Hey!" Twilight casted another stun spell.

* * *

>Room #15Crossover with Tomorrowland**

"Oh." Twilight muttered as she took her PADD from her subspace pocket and attempted to find anything about the place. She faced her six to find a teenage young lady and an old man.

She slightly shifted and hid her PADD as she steered towards the next door which had a "NO ENTRY" sign on it. She opened it, and looked at the two again.

She then asked, "Time been repeating?" They both nodded.

"Who are you and what kind of creature are you?" the man, who introduced himself as Frank Walker, asked.

Twilight decided to not leave the room for the moment for a quick explanation of the Loops. After the two have thought it well, they saw Twilight leave through the door.

"So that meet-up with Delsin was a Fused Loop," he commented.

"Mhm," said the girl, Casey Newton, looked at the door and locked it, "at least we proved that we're not crazy, after all. I wonder how we'll going to relay that message if they're really a universe away."

They looked at the door again and opened it, only to find that it was just a broom closet. It got Frank to think about it again.

"How did she do that?" Frank asked to the air before closing the door.

* * *

>Room #16

Twilight found herself floating towards the next door, catching a glimpse of who was using magic to move her toward the next room;

An unAwake Princess Pinkie Pie.

She was glad that the next room didn't have something like that, for the next room...

* * *

>Room #17Crossover with FNAF**

"Nopenopenopenopenope-!" Twilight said, quickly dashing towards the next room.

Four animatronics and two humans looked at each other before shrugging back into their conversation. Mike had no idea what has happened however, as he looked at the two white doors.

Freddy raised a sign. _"What was that for?"_

"We're not in a Fused right now, right?" Phone Guy asked.

"Not exactly," Mike replied, pointing to the doors.

* * *

>Room #18

Twilight saw herself watching Nyx watching the Pancake accident. Nyx then looked at her double that looked at Twilight which caused her to head towards the next room.

* * *

>Room #19

TwilightSparkle posted at #Room19:

This room is very weird. Apparently to unlock the door I must post something.

* * *

>Room #20

Twilight saw herself on Mac's bar and went up and got herself some apple cider. Mac looked at the two doors and asked what the doors are for.

"I bought a Door and entered it," Twilight replied, "now I'm stuck room to room and I have to face challenges or relax."

"Do you think ya can escape them?" Mac asked.

Twilight looked at the bar entrance and goes outside, only to come back from the white Door she came from. "Nope. Oh well, into the next room..."

"Good luck, ya need it!" Mac shouted as she entered the next room.

* * *

>Room #21

Twilight saw herself walking towards the next door as a parade was held to her right. It was a peaceful regular parade dedicated for Princess Celestia, so she began to take pictures.

* * *

>Room #22

Twilight saw herself saw herself as she saw herself saw herself. She Pinged, and nothing came back in return, in which she was glad off. She quickly headed into the next room, unaware that something else was happening with that room and the next...

* * *

>Room #23Crossover with Doctor Who**

The Doctor was banging his head into his TARDIS as his companion, a humanized Awake Derpy Hooves, made Twilight encounter duplicate herself as she was pushed by the time clones towards the next door.

"What did you do Derpy?" Twilight asked, stopping herself from entering the exit door.

"I..." Derpy looked around. "...one of those things, I guess."

Twilight facehooved as she was finally kicked into the next.

* * *

>Room #24Crossover with RWBY**

"Oh, hi Blake!" Twilight greeted. She looked at Nora and saw the connection. "Oh, that makes sense now. Gotta go!"

The aforementioned Loopers waved back as Twilight passed by. Nora tried to follow her only to be stopped by Blake who destroyed the door after a warning passed by their admin.

* * *

>Room #25Crossover with Quantum Conundrum**

Twilight shook her head a lot of times before passing to the next door.

"Damn it, Ike," she muttered to the air, "why does your eyes do that when I look at itâ€|"

* * *

>151.20: (Filraen)

_Dear Celestia,_

_Today's letter is about my previous Loop. It was a lonely baseline loop, except that we seemed to hit yet another expansion period. The most noticeable points of the extra time were Matilda and Cranky Doodle Donkey's wedding finally being here and a bugbear attack. The interesting part came when I didn't realize the bugbear attacked the same day of the wedding. We girls totally missed the ceremony trying to get the monster out of Ponyville and I wasn't particularly worried because I thought the wedding was the next day. A mystery for another loop I guess._

_In the end we (Applejack, Rarity, Rainbow, Fluttershy, Pinkie and myself) ended seeing the ceremony from the window outside Ponyville's Town Hall. While not going into much detail (you were there and I think you'd appreciate not telling spoilers) the ceremony had two main high notes. First, I knew intellectually Cranky had literally searched for decades finding Matilda and the ceremony showed that: so many who Cranky had crossed paths with in his travels._

_The other point was that you were there and for once you weren't the center of attention, not even a non-incognito guard present. The only who could count as part of the Royal Guard was my BBBFF and even he was invited. And as you expect, he was crying the whole time._

_I won't lie and claim I wasn't a bit disappointed by arriving late to Matilda and Cranky's wedding but it was their day and there will be other loops. I still remember the time Chrysalis was Matilda's maid of honor the loop she earned her Element of Kindness._

_That reminds me: there was a random changeling in the wedding undisguised. That seemed strange but we decided to leave him alone since he wasn't attacking or anything like that. In fact everything pointed for him only attending the wedding._

_Hopefully for them that wedding is something they get to do every loop, and I'm both expectant and a little nervous on what Pinkie Pie will do for them next time she's Awake. And with a little luck next time we can get to the wedding on time._

_Your friend,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>151.21: (Filraen)

_Dear Celestia,_

_Last loop I got reminded to be careful what I wish for. Remember how I had mentioned about the wedding between Matilda and Cranky Doodle two loops ago? Well, last loop still had a wedding all right but it seemed like it was a variant. Or at least I hope their wedding was baseline and last loop's wedding is the variant._

_In any case, I present my most important finding from last loop: the need to implement protocols for Discord grade destruction the next loop Derpy isn't Awake and gets married with Trouble Shoes._

_At least knowing that loop ended with Cranky and Matilda' wedding makes me think last loop didn't end crashed by Derpy and Trouble Shoes' marriage... I hope._

_Your friend,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>151.22: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Ding-dong_

_Now, who could that be?_ Twilight wondered to herself as she opened the door. "Hello?"

And was promptly tackled across the room by a giant blue pillbug.
"HUGS! HUGS FOR EVERYPONY!"

A few minutes later, staggering to her hooves and shaking her head, Twilight looked around in confusion. The insect was nowhere to be seen.

"Okay." Pulling a scroll and quill out of her Pocket, she made a note. "Not even remotely in the ten weirdest things to happen to me, but it's definitely up there."

Meanwhile, a few blocks away, a certain draconequus was still giggling to himself while a plum-coated mare and a carnation-coated filly watched him.

Ruby Pinch, confused, looked up at her mother. "Mommy? What is Mr. Discord laughing at this time?"

Berry Punch smiled at her daughter. "I think he had a fit of the sillies earlier, dear."

"Oh."

* * *

>151.23: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight looked. And stared. "Somehow, I just know Pinkie is involved in this."

"Involved in what?"

Uncountable loops of experience or not, Twilight proved she could still be startled by almost jumping out of her skin. "Gah! Pinkie?"

"The one and only! Except technically there's always at least two of me 'cause of that mirror world, and that's not even counting--"

A hoof covered her mouth. "Pinkie. Focus."

"Right. So, what's up?"

Twilight pointed. "_Why_ is there a cupcake the size of a house in the middle of town square?"

"Oh! Remember a while back when we went to the Hub, and you bought all those books? Including their latest edition of the Guinness Book of World Records?"

"Yesâ€|"

"Well, I borrowed it and saw they had a listing for the World's Largest Cupcake, so I decided I could do better."

Twilight looked at the house-sized cupcake. "And I'm guessing you did."

"Yeppers! The one in the book was only three feet tall and four feet, eight inches around. And I even followed the rules that said it had to be made all in one piece, without any kind of internal supports, so it would qualify for the record."

"Oh my."

"Yeah, that's about what the judges said when they first saw it."

Twilight sighed. "Pinkie, tell me something. Where in the multiverse did you get an oven big enough to bake something that big?"

Pinkie held out a familiar Acme Corporation catalog. "In a Looney Tunes loop."

"Somehow, I'm not surprised."

* * *

>151.24: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Morning, Twilight!"

"Good morning, Derpy." Twilight smiled as she accepted her mail from the unAwake blonde pegasus. "How's Dinky?"

"Oh, she's doing just fine!"

Twilight nodded and watched as her friend left. Then she opened the lone letter that had come for her, and her eyebrows raised again. And again.

"Why," she asked nopony in particular, "Do I have the feeling this is going to be one of THOSE loops?"

A day later, she got her answer. Tirek had just released the others from their bubbles, and was getting ready to drain Twilight of her magic, when the ground started rumbling.

Tirek looked around. "Whatâ€¦ is that noise?"

Twilight just pointed.

Tirek looked in the direction she was pointing, and proceeded to scream like Prince Blueblood.

A few minutes later, when the dust had settled, Twilight sighed. "Well, that's one way to defeat Tirek. And it certainly explains the letter I got yesterday."

"What letter is that?" Rainbow Dash asked, having overheard as she and the others hurried over to Twilight.

"This one." Twilight handed it to her.

Rainbow Dash read it, and raised her eyebrows. "'The bunny rabbits is coming!?' Who the hay sent this?"

Twilight shrugged. "I don't know, but they got here just in the nick of time."

Rarity spoke up hesitantly. "Er, Darling?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Why do I have the feeling Angel Bunny is behind this?"

Twilight sighed. "Personally, I'm more interested in knowing where whoever did this got a herd of oversized rabbits. Let alone trained them to stampede."

There was a loud groan from nearby. "If you're quite finished," Tirek growled, "I'd like to go back to Tartarus now."

Twilight's horn sparked. "Not a problem. Just give up your stolen magic first."

"Fine! Anything, as long as it gets me away from thoseâ€¦ things." The oversized centaur shuddered. "If I'd known there'd be days like this, I never would have left home."

"There, there," Fluttershy said as she patted his head.

Tirek just groaned again, though whether it was from pain or embarrassment was hard to tell.

* * *

>151.25: (fractalman)

Rainbow Dash glared figurative death beams at the sign of the Rainbow Factory. However, just before she could grab something out of her pocket to aid in its disassembly, she heard Scootaloo call out.

"Hi, Dash! I'm ready to head back to Ponyville."

Dash stared blankly at the grayscale filly.

"Uh, Dash, are you OK?"

Dash blinked as her loop memories kicked in. "Yeah, I'm OK, squirt. I just need to check on a few things, and then I'll be riiight back."

* * *

>"So yeah. This loop's Rainbow Factory doesn't kill anypony. Instead they just stick a vacuum cleaner to your side and suck up the color, the same way the crusaders vacuumed the color out of a rainbow in baseline. No uncool body disposal chutes or anything. They also pay ponies a couple bits for their time, and Scootaloo's been saving up to get corrective wing surgery."

"That's a relief." said Twilight. "Are there any studies on the rate at which ponies regain their color?"

Dash tapped her chin. "Not that I know of, but it takes Scootaloo about a week or two to get the nickname 'Patchaloo', and another week after that to regain all her color."

* * *

>AN:

151.1: Sometimes the admins come down to spend time somewhere.
Sometimes they regret it.

>151.2: So the library wasn't going spare this time.151.3: Lemon
Rush, female edition.

>151.4: We are the BZZZZZZ. Our BZZZZZZ resistance BZZZZZZ BZZZZZ
BZZZZZZ honey. (Multicross.)151.5: Ponies will find a way.
(Jurassic Park.)

>151.6: I'm not entirely sure myself.151.7: Idea obtained.

>151.8: They do like doing that.151.9: Twilight has not got any direct power. She has connections.

>151.10: Dash does make a small mistake here. Gilda became the Empress.151.11: A true warrior uses all things. Even a muffinphile pegasus. (ATLA cross.)

>151.12: Wily is dangerous. (Megaman and Warhammer 40K mentioned)151.13: Whoops. Missed...

>151.14: Enough speed lets one apple defeat anything.151.15:
Ouch.

>151.16: I think at some point they're going to try to get him to turn Flutters into a tree.151.17: Fear the Reaper? (Mass Effect.)

>151.18: Teleport a timberwolf.151.19: Doors does not mean the band.

>151.20: Happy ending.151.21: Not as happy an ending.

>151.22: Why not?151.23: Takes the cake.

>151.24: Rabbiting.151.25: A greyer take?

159. Chapter 159

152.1 (Scorntex)

_Long ago, there did live a third Princess, Pinkamena Diane Pie. So great was her command of the culinary arts that she found herself assailed by those seeking her guidance. In her desire to some simple peace and quiet, Princess Pie did retreat from the world of mortals, hiding in the calm and distant part of the world._

_One day, a traveller, seeking to learn all that was learnable, managed to locate the hiding kitchen-palace of Princess Pie. Said he unto her: _"Oh, princess fair and slightly scary, I wish to learn from thee. Teach me the ways of the unsurprised Pinkie Pie._"

_The Princess did gaze upon him, and spoke thus: _"Lo, fair Bruce Wayne. It hath been far too long since I last saw thee. Why dost thou seeketh me, when thou art already skilled in the art of prepardyness._"

_The traveller did scowl. _"That's not a real word._"

"_Who art the Princess here?_" _Replied the most radiant smiler in all the land._

_The traveller did concede this point, and right he was too, for her pink-nesses' qualifications was inescapably clear. _"I seek knowledge thou might have in the hopes there may be something new I may learn._"

_Concurrent to this did he add, _"A decision I regret further with each passing moment._"

_And lo, did her bounciness declare unto him: _"Nay, brooding lord of Bats! I shalt not teach thee! Unless... unless thou maketh me a sandwich!_"

"A sandwich?" _Asked the traveller. Her most refulgent partiness did confirm this._

"A sandwich. The ingredients matter not, only that is must meet acceptable standards of tastiness and snackaliciousness! Thou hast one day to prepare unto me this sandwich, and if it should pass mustard, I shall tell thee what I know... eth_."

_The traveller did depart. Long of hour did he labour to prepare unto Pie the sandwich of acceptableness, until the appointed hour came upon him._

_Presented unto her randomness did he the sandwich. And she, oh loveliest of parties, examined it._

"Ick!_" _She did instantly decry. _"What hast thou done to this poor sandwich? What catastrophic culinary crimes have you inflicted, to create such a misshapen abomination?"_

"Tisn't that bad..." _The traveller did protest. A single glare from her highness stopped this._

"This is no sandwich! What it is, I have no words, for the realm of such things as these are beyond my ken! And it smells like something that slithered forth from Hogwart's privies!_"

_A thunderous look crossed her muzzle, and with a clear voice she spread forth her wings. _"Thou hast failed thy appointed task, Bruce of Wayne! Thou hast failed bad! And I shall not teach thee my secrets, not now nor ever, for thou art unworthy of my knowledge! Leave this instant, and take that... thing with you, before Gummy tries to eat it._"

_Without a word, the traveller turned upon his hooves and left, never to be seen again._

* * *

>There was utter silence in Big Macintosh's bar. After several minutes, Twilight Sparkle spoke.

"Pinkie?"

"Yuh-huh?"

"Did any of that actually happen, at all?"

Pinkie Pie nodded. Twilight Sparkle's expression didn't change in the slightest. Pinkie just giggled.

"Well, I may have jazzed it up a teeny, tiny bit." She grinned. "Brucie didn't really come looking for me, and I wasn't living in a cave. But I was really a Princess that loop. And the sandwich was pretty bad..."

After a few seconds Twilight sighed, and took another swig from her drink.

* * *

>152.2 (Evilhumour)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #1****

"Okaaaaay, let's do a quick catch up Twi?" Vinyl blinked as she stared at the lake in front of her. "I thought you were going to help me learn to use my wub hooves so why are we here?"

"We're here for a reason Vinyl," Twilight said, holding a checklist in front of her. "Before you can start flying properly with your sonic propulsion hooves, we need to do some basic tests and experiments beforehand."

"And crashing into a pond is a lot better then into the ground, trust me." Rainbow Dash said from her cloud, watching the scene carefully. "So let Twilight do her egghead tests with your wub hooves and I'll swoop and save your flanks if things get out of control."

"Sounds good to me," Vinyl shrugged, rolling her neck. "So what's first on the old listie Twi?"

Twilight's left ear flicked at the nicknames being used but she moved past them. "Air resistant goggles?"

Vinyl took off her purple tinted glasses, reached into her subspace pocket and swapped out an equally tinted pair of goggles. "Got it. Next?"

Twilight's right ear twitched but she did her best not to say anything. "Padding?"

"One sec-"

"Eeeeyup!" Dash grinned at the frowning Vinyl. "Oh come on, you know I was kidding."

"Yeah, since all this?" Vinyl patted her sides, her hoof going in deep. "Is just fur. Unlike some ponies, I don't need to work out to get a slim bod-GAH!"

Vinyl and Dash squeaked as Twilight squirted them both with her squirt-bottle. "Let's stay on track, please?"

"Spruce Twilight, that is bucking cold water!" Dash grumbled, flying quickly into the sky to dry herself off while Vinyl started to vibrate in place.

"Yeah, what did you do, go to the north pole or something?" Vinyl grumbled as her long coat was now puffy.

"Yes, actually. This bottle has a miniature portal inside that is connected to the original pony lands to a river that flows despite the sheer drop in temperature and the roaming Windigos. The glass itself is indestructible so it can handle the water inside of it."

"Wow, really?" Vinyl and Dash both leaned in close to look at the bottle.

"Of course not," Twilight snorted in soft laughter, shaking her head. "It's just from the tap with a couple of ice cubes tossed in."

"Oh har har." Vinyl grumbled as she slipped on a full body padded suit. "You're a riot Twi." Vinyl made a face before she shook her mane. "Great, I've got knots in my fur. Rare's is going to kill me, and then she's going to drag me to the spa again." It had been pretty funny to see their unAwake friend drag her mother around, and acting as the more mature of the two while throwing a lot of guilt around at Vinyl.

"Better you than me Vinyl," Dash grumbled, settling down on the cloud. "I hate ponies touching my hooves."

"So what do I need to do Twi, hover in place?" Vinyl asked as she began to emit her wubs and begin to float.

"No Vinyl, not just yet!" Twilight shouted, tossing her list to the side as she began to run over to the unicorn mare, ignoring Dash pulling out the popcorn bag.

"What?" Vinyl shouted, walking around in place and lifting a hoof to her ear. Or at least that was her intention, but as she broke the stable and equally distributed propulsion of her body weight on four hooves to three as well as moving on to her face, she was suddenly rocketed sideways. Flailing with her hooves in the air, she was sent into a corkscrew fashion towards the lake. With a splash, Vinyl hit the water horn first and started to paddled in the water before Rainbow Dash flew over, plucked her out of the water and begun to lecture her.

"Vinyl Scratch, do you have any idea in how stupid that was? You should never break up your flying format unless you have years of experience to back you up!" Grumbling loudly, the pegasus began to move Vinyl's legs back into place, with Dash bending Vinyl's knees. "Look, normally you'd keep your legs tucked for flight but for your wub hooves you would need to keep them bent for a good take off before straightening them out. And don't you dare think about doing any fancy twist or turns just yet missy, as we will need to a lot of exercises to get you floating steadily before we can have you flying properl-OH MY BIRCH!" Dash suddenly shouted, placing her hooves to her mouth in horror.

"What? What's wrong Dashie?!" Twilight blinked, getting ready to run over to her friend, Vinyl staying in place.

"I'm starting to sound like you." Dash's laughter was quickly picked up by Vinyl's snickering. Which was squashed by Twilight squirting the mare with a deadpan look on her face. Shaking her mane after squeaking by the cold water, Dash rolled her eyes at white mare standing beside her.

(BIOS-Pherecydes)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #64****

Hovering gently an inch above the earth, Vinyl grinned in triumph. Sure she was tied to a dozen trees in every direction; and okay she was being held in place by a giant boulder; admittedly, the chains were probably a bit much, but hey... progress!

(Evilhumour)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #95****

Applejack facehooved as the white blur went sailing past her, sneezing again out of control on her wub hooves.

"Vinyl, if ya are allergic ta crabgrass this loop, _why_ did ya come here to practice your wub hooves?"

"I don't know! I regret everything!" Vinyl shouted and sneezed herself into a tree, with apples hitting her square on her head before the last one landed square on her horn, with the apple pierced cleanly in the middle of the core.

Vinyl grunted before muttering she did not like apples before laying flat on her stomach. She then proved how fast an unicorn could move in front of an angry earth pony family clan.

(BIOS-Pherecydes)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves - Attempt #108****

"Uh... hey, Rainbow? Old buddy? You sure about this?"

"C'mon Vinyl, even Snowflake can do this. In Baseline for tree's sake!"

Twilight watched dubiously as Vinyl nervously adjusted her glasses. She was currently strapped into the Dizzitron from the Wonderbolt Academy and obviously didn't like it.

"Are you sure she's ready for this?"

"Hey no problem Twilight. Vinyl is almost 20% as cool as me. She can totally handle this. Are you ready Vinyl!?"

Staring down at the ground which was entirely too far below her, she rapidly shook her head. "No. I want to get down."

"Awesome! Here we go in three, two, one! Fire!"

Rainbow pulled the lever and the Dizzitron began spinning rapidly, quickly picking up speed to the sound of Vinyl's screaming, before snapping taut and launching the terrified mare into the air.

"Vinyl, use your Wub Hooves!"

The DJ apparently heard Twilight's cry as a loud pulsating beat filled the air. Unfortunately she couldn't seem to figure out which direction to aim and as a result ended up doing a wild corkscrew over the air of Ponyville, accompanied by an epic dubstep. And just barely heard beneath that the sound of Vinyl's screaming.

Twilight's and Rainbow Dash's heads bounced back and forth as they tracked Vinyl's 'flight' through the center of Ponyville, wincing simultaneously at the several near misses, before she finally came to a landing in the local swimming hole; dousing the Apple family as they relaxed in the water.

"Eh, heheh. Okay so maybe she wasn't ready."

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves - Attempt #248****

"Let's try something different you said. All you have to do is catch a falling crystal you said. Nothing could go wrong you said."

"Okay Vinyl, I get it." Twilight said with a sigh as she stared out over the remains of what used to be the Crystal Kingdom. "Using a power based on vibration in a city made of crystal results in a literal Cascade Failure."

"Waahaaaaa! It's all gone! This is The. Worst. Possible. Thing!"

Twilight grimaced as she watched her friend summon her fainting couch. "I'm not sure if it's better or not that Rarity isn't Awake this time."

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves - Attempt #291****

"I believe I understand your plight

You wish to end your wild flight

But sadly I cannot offer advice

You must search elsewhere for a helping device."

"oKaY. ThAnKs, aNyWaY."

Vinyl grimaced at the sound of her broken voice. An unplanned landing had set her down dead center in the middle of a field of Poison Joak. It would take Zecora an hour or more to brew the antidote and in the meantime she was totally tone-deaf. Worst landing ever.

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves - Attempt #321****

Hanging shakily about a foot above the ground Vinyl gave a tentative grin. "Hey, I think I'm starting to get the hang of this."

From a nearby bush Pinkie Pie burst out in a cloud of confetti. "Yay. Now I can throw you a 'Congratulation on Learning to Fly' Party!"

"Gah!"

Blinking at the trail of broken foliage which showed where Vinyl had gone, Pinkie smiled sheepishly.

"Oopsie."

(Dave ID)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves - Attempt #420****

"Vinyl, maybe we should take a break, especially since you freed Discord, Sombra and Tirek at the same time, and are basically kaiju now." Twilight said as Tirek gave a left hook to Sombra, who promptly hit Discord with a blast of dark magic, who kicked Tirek in the knees.

"Yeah, we should."

(Evilhumour)

**Experimental Log: Wubs Hooves- Attempt #432****

"Okay, this was a bad idea from the start, I'll admit." Dash blinked as she watched Vinyl flash by again. And again. And again. And again.

"I DON'T CARE WHAT YOU SAY, TURN OFF THE BUCKING PORTAL BEFORE I PUKE AGAIN!"

(BIOS-Pherecydes)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #555****

"Cutie Mark Crusaders: Catapult Makers YAY!"

Twilight very calmly turned around and, very calmly, ran for her life.

_'nopenopenopenopenopenopenope._

(Evilhumour)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #652****

"I'm sorry Luna!" Vinyl called over her shoulder, looking at the irate former mare of the moon and then at the former celestial body in the sky. "Please don't banish me!"

(BIOS-Pherecydes)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #701****

Vinyl stared at the various wires attached to the sensors attached to her body, all of which led back to a large computer beneath Twilight's Library.

"So, what's this thing supposed to do exactly?"

"This will let me measure your oscillation and vibrational frequencies and allow me to find a correlating pattern. Then I can use my magic to create a neural feedback which should allow you to precisely determine how to utilize your Sonic Propulsion Hooves to achieve directional thrust and momentum without exceeding your ability to control them."

Vinyl stared. She opened her mouth, then closed it. Then she stared some more before shaking her head rapidly.

"Right. Okay, sure. Go ahead."

Twilight beamed and turned on the analysis device.

* * *

>"Okay, this is totally not my fault."

Twilight didn't respond, being too busy staring at the remains of the Golden Oaks.

(Codelyoko22)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #805****

"Vinyl, I know you wanted to learn how to use those Wub Hooves as quickly as possible, but couldn't you have waited till the next dame loop?!" Rochelle yelled as hordes upon hordes of infected ponies rushed toward them.

"How was I supposed to know they would attract this many?!" Vinyl yelled back.

(Evilhumour)

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #901****

"TRIXIEIBUCKINGHATEYOUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUU!"

Vinyl shouted as she was sent flying by the low level rockets the showmare had got from Jeb Kerman.

"It was rocket fuel, what do you expect!_" Trixie yelled back as she was flying alongside the panicking, wub hoof flailing mare that had a rocket strapped around her stomach.

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #902****

"LYRAIBUCKINGHATEYOUUUUUUU!"

Vinyl screamed as she was sent flying out of the ocean, holding onto the noise rocket for dear life.

"We're seaponies! If you weren't expecting overkill from us, you get no sympathies from me!" Lyra shouted upwards at the white mare.

**Experimental Log: Wub Hooves- Attempt #999****

Vinyl panted, throwing herself onto the shore with a thud after half halfheartedly levitating the water out of her coat for the umpteenth time.

"Girls," Vinyl wheezed on her back, too tired to care about the latest camera that Dash had set up this time. "I'm bu-" She coughed, and spat out some water before rolling her head on the grass. "I'm bushed." Letting out a very equine-like whine, Vinyl took off her goggles before rubbing her nose before letting out both a tiny snuffle and a tiny beam of sonic waves at a tree. "I've got water in places I didn't know I had and I've been a seapony!" Vinyl then rolled onto her stomach and groaned. "I'm either going to walk home, or push my well toned flanks all the way home and to fir with Octy yelling at me for getting mud in the house again but I'm done for today and this loop!"

"Wait, I've got one more trick up my sleeve!" Twilight shouted, as she reached into her subspace pocket. "Where is it, where is it?"

Vinyl, chest heaving, raised an eyebrow at the mare who was pulling more and more stuff out of her pocket, with the objects getting larger and more worrisome.

With a grunt, Vinyl pushed herself to her hooves, her legs very strong now from repeated attempts to fly with her wubs hooves and was preparing herself for a mad dash home when Twilight let out a shout of victory.

"Here, for test one thousand, let's try this!" Twilight said smiling, holding the most unwubural thing in existence.

With a heavy sigh, Vinyl began to turn and walk away when Twilight teleported back in front of her.

"Vinyl? It's a metronome, why are you walk-?"

"Twi, I know exactly what it is. After endless loops dealing with my parents trying to teach me 'proper' rhythm and timing opposed to my wubs with them, I know how to build one in my sleep now." Vinyl grunted, resting her head against a tree. "Do you know what it is like to hear it for hours on end until everything you play matches its damn beat and then the quack of a doctor decides to get even with you for biting his leg by switching the tempo when you show off to your parents. Of course my parent's can't hear the change but I can, and it's very hard to suddenly play to the new beat when you've been forced to play by the other beat and then your parents and the bucking doctor start yelling at you for being stupid and unable to follow a simple tick tock!" Vinyl then shook her mane. "I'm sorry Twi, but I don't care if it would stop the loops and fix Yggdrasil but I am not listening to another metronome if I can help it."

"Well..." Twilight dragged out, a bit uncomfortable with how things had just turned. "I do have an idea that can still work without them!"

"Huh? What are you talk-"

"Vinyl, close your eyes and listen to me."

"Okay!. Vinyl shut her eyes, ears flickering with annoyance.

"Now I want you to focus on your inner beat."

"What? My heartbeat?" Vinyl turned her head and began to open her eyes when Twilight shouted again.

"Vinyl Scratch, eyes _shut_ and _no!_" Twilight sighed heavily. "Close your eyes and ignore _everything_ but my voice and your inner beat! Don't say anything else, do anything else but focus on your inner beat!"

Vinyl did her best not to snark, and to follow the instructions. Closing herself off, she drew into herself and search for that musical beat that gave her endless creativity, the one that she _always_ head banged to. It was hard, pushing away beats that were inspirations from the odd loop here or there and the ones that came from songs that got stuck in her head for several loops, _thank you very much Pinkie Pie!_ With her lips moving and horn glowing, Vinyl began the slow process of deleting music from her mind.

Slowly, she had whittled them down the beats to two remaining; one she instantly recognized as the... _Hub_ Wub, yeah that was a good name for it and...something _else_, something she didn't recognize or remember ever hearing. It was really odd too, so slow that she almost missed it but when she _did_ focus on it and listen for it to playback, the sound it made was nothing like she heard before. Placing it in the examine later pile in her mind, which if anypony ever saw would have an instant coronary in how messy it was, she focused on the first beat and felt herself begin to relax.

"...vinyl?" With heavy eyes, Vinyl was aware that a nerdish pony was calling for her. "did you get it?"

"_Yeah, I did Twi._" Vinyl's cheeks grew red as autotuned herself without meaning it again. "_I got the Hub Wub._"

"Hub wub-that's a terrible name!" Twilight grunted before facehooving, her sonic echoes that she let out by mistake painted the image with perfect timing. "Never mind, I want you to now imagine that there's a speaker attached to the ..._Hub Wub_, okay?"

Vinyl let out a chirp to let Twi know she did, and her inner Vinyl was _begging_ to crank it up to eleven already.

"Good, now I want you to move the dial to two." With a sonic chirp of annoyance blasted in front of her, Vinyl did exactly as she was told, and move the dial up slowly- "Okay, that's two, okay?"

Vinyl almost opened her eyes in confusion, but she was focused on the Hub Wub so she imagined that this was a two, whatever _that_ meant.

"Good, now double that to four, please." Vinyl did the same as did before, waiting for the beats to match what she did before, mentally marking it as four. For the next little bit, Twilight called out different numbers between one and ten, with Vinyl quickly becoming adept at moving her Hub Wub at the different levels, with quarter numbers thrown in that pitched her speaker in all directions. Finally, Twilight stopped calling out the numbers with Vinyl stuck at one. "And now...go for it Vinyl, go for eleven."

With a smirk on her face, her inner Vinyl grabbed the dial with her body, and used her weight to turn it up all the way to eleven, dumping herself to the ground in the process.

Holding herself steady at eleven, Vinyl was listening to her Hub Wub when she heard a lot of clapping.

Blinking, she opened her eyes to see all her friends on clouds around her, cheering for her as she in the middle of the sky with her wub hooves!

Already, Vinyl started to panic when Twilight shouted, "Ten!" Instantly, Vinyl lowered herself down several feet and kept herself stable for a few second before Twilight shouted out nine. Then Vinyl realized what was happening and called out ten to herself, with point twenty five to move herself forwards. Smiling, Vinyl began to move the dial in her head, flying in low circles before forcing herself upwards with a blast of music in the center of everypony.

"WHOO HOOOOO!" Vinyl shouted, doing a little victory jig before she caught herself at ten, and forced herself back up to her snickering friends.

"There's still more technical stuff you need to learn Vinyl, but congrats," Dash smirked as she flew over to the unicorn mare. "You can now fly with unmatched style!"

"YEAH!" Vinyl shouted as she grabbed her glasses from her pocket and placed them on her face. "Drinks are on me girls!" With that, Vinyl dived bombed her way to Mac's bar before everypony realized they forgot one thing. "OH SWEET BUCKING HELL, HOW DO I LAND?!"

Applejack sighed as Vinyl totaled the old barn, and then gasped as an anvil went sailing through the sky before crashing into a certain library in the middle of the town.

* * *

>Experimental Log: Wub Hooves-Landing Attempt
#1

"Twilight?"

"Yes Vinyl?"

"Are you still mad about me sending an anvil through your house?" the mare gulped, holding onto the side tightly.

"Why would you say that Vinyl?" Twilight asked as she held out a paper to log the results.

"Because despite you saying this will help me learn how to land with my wub hooves, I really doubt that a catapult you just threw together is really safe." Vinyl gulped, looking at the bucket she was in.

"Oh I didn't make it, I borrowed it." Twilight answered truthfully.

"Oh that's good, I gues-" Vinyl sighed in relief.

"I borrowed it from the Cutie Mark Crusaders."

"Wait what?!" Vinyl shouted before Twilight threw the switch, screaming before she hit the forest, which triggered an treesap esque mudslide into town that destroyed the Golden Oak Library. As Vinyl flew over to facehoofing Twilight, she landed in a loud plop of tree sap. Staring directly at Twilight, Vinyl then shook herself clean like a dog before wubbing away from the shouting mare.

* * *

>152.3: (Scorntex)

"THE NIGHT SHALL LAST FORE-..." Nightmare Moon stopped dead. The ponies before her had stopped looking afraid, or confused, and had...

No, she was clearly seeing things. And hearing things.

They couldn't actually be dancing, surely. Well, she presumed it was dancing. Though what the loud music (again, she presumed it was music) and the flashing lights had to do with it, she'd no idea. And none of them seemed at all surprised by this, as they danced in time to the strange sounds.

"Where is that music coming from?" Nightmare Moon declared. "ANSWER THY TRUE RULER! And wh-... why am I dancing as well?"

Indeed, Nightmare Moon's legs were also begin to move with a will of their own. She could feel it. Some ridiculously powerful enchantment washing over her.

"And why can't I stop?!_"

Twilight Sparkle allowed herself a satisfied grin. Nightmare Moon was contained, as was a potential panic on the part of Ponyville. She'd been... more than a little sceptical when Smaug had given her the phial she held, and the user's manual that came with it. Variants were one thing, but someone in Arda somehow having the means to generate an instant disco?

And yet here everypony was, dancing to a disco that had just suddenly happened when she'd opened the phial. Even Princess Luna herself.

"Well, I think we can call this test run a success." Twilight noted.

"Twilight, help!" She heard Spike call out. Instantly she looked toward her un-Awake companion, who was also dancing (surprisingly well, actually), despite the look of utter terror on his face.

"I can't stop boogying!"

Ah. Twilight thought. That explained why Smaug had been grinning so much...

* * *

>152.4 (Alex Prior, Detective Ethan Redfield, Drakohahn, Evilhumour, Gamex27, Hvulpes, Masterweaver, Midnight Crescent, ScornTex, wildrook, Zerorock41)

(This series of snips would be split up, but I didn't have individual attributions)

"THE BIGHT! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!" Nightmare Moon declared, grabbing her surfboard and heading into the newly created Bight of Ponyville to catch some waves.

* * *

>"THE SPRITE! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!" Nightmare Moon declared, as she turned every water supply in Ponyville into lemon-lime, fizzy soft drinks.

* * *

>"THE WRIGHT! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!"

Defense Attorney Always Right (otherwise known as Phoenix Wright) sighed, "Yeah yeah. Just get it out of your system now."

* * *

>"THE FLIGHT! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!" Nightmare Moon declared, as she looped passed Ponyville for the fifth time.

* * *

>"THE MIGHT! WILL LAST! FOREVER!" proclaimed the muscular alicorn on the stage, shooing off her sleek abs. "And you could be this fit too if you purchase the Lateral Unified Natural Augmentation Home Gym! Yes, with the L.U.N.A. home gym, you'll be showing off a perfect body in as little as two weeks! Send your orders to MareMoon incorporated, half off for a limited time only!"

"YEAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAH!" Bulk Biceps yelled.

* * *

>"TWILIGHT! WILL LAST! FOREVER!"

"Luna, put me _down._"

* * *

>"THE TWILIGHT... SAGA! WILL LAST! FOREVER!"

Leah face-palmed. "Yeah, I don't see that happening," she muttered. "We don't have baseline extensions..."

* * *

>"THE SIGHT! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!" Nightmare Moon declared, as she created a beautiful aurora borealis over Ponyville with a simple spell. As the ponies ooohed and _ahhhed_ over the sight, Twilight rolled her eyes.

"Luna, you're getting a bit carried away with the pun-"

"NEVER!" Luna cackled. "THE PUNS ABOUT THE NIGHT! WILL LAST _FOREVER!_"

* * *

>"THE FIGHT! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!"

Twilight rolled her eyes. She then ducked as some debris went flying by.

"You're running out of material, Luna."

"YOU GOTTA FIGHT!" Pinkie sang. "FOR YOUR RIGHT! TO PAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAARTY!"

"No more Beastie Boys for you," Twilight muttered, face-hoofing. "And that's not even part of the pun!"

* * *

>"THE PLIGHT! WILL LAST! FOREVER!"

Twilight rose an eyebrow. "What plight?"

"The plight of inflation." Nightmare Moon gestured around the room. "How expensive were these banners?!"

* * *

>"THE KITE! WILL LAST! FOREVER!" The alicorn on stage announced, looking through the window at the sea of kites outside.

Every Awake Looper in the Town Hall face-hoofed.

"Stop, Luna." Twilight pleaded. "Just stop..."

"AAAAAAUAAAAAAAAGH!" Pinkie shouted, pointing. "THE TREES ARE EATING ALL THE KITES!"

* * *

>"THE BLIGHT! WILL LAST! FOREVER!"

Applejack glared out at her withering farm and turned her stink eye to Luna before ascending. She pointed her newly formed horn at Luna and shouted, "It better not!"

Luna shrunk in on herself as she coughed, "Uh...Well, perhaps I was hasty."

She cast a spell, causing all the trees to resume their healthy look. Applejack looked at the farm and smirked, "Thank ya kindly."

Luna coughed again, hiding a laugh and whispered, "Thou might not wish to thank myself so soon."

* * *

>The moon diarch was long gone when Applejack discovered her apples were now pear trees. She took a deep breath before screaming in the Canterlot Royal Voice, "LUUUNNNNAAAA."

* * *

>"The Wight will last forever! The fright will last forever!"

"Buck." One of the sanitarium orderlies muttered, as he and several of his co-workers wrestled the alicorn princess into a straitjacket. "Why do we always get the really crazy ones?"

"Could be worse." Another groused. "At least she's not biting."

Luna stopped mid-ranting, and blinked innocently. "Would that help?"

* * *

>"THE NIGHT SHALL LAST-Gah! Put me down this instance! No in the pool, away from the pool, no no no no GAH!" The mare shouted as she leap out of the freezing pool, shivering. " I promise to cut back, okay?!"

* * *

>"THE BOOZE! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!"

"That's not even a rhyme for night!" said Spike, before being kneed in his ribs.

"Shut up Spike! Our new perfect leader has spoken!" said Berry Punch with a growl to the dragon before glowing at the alicorn and then endless bottles of alcohol.

* * *

>"THE NIGHT...SHALL RAVE...FOREVER!" Nightmare PON3 yelled as Octavia face-hoofed at the makeshift night-club in the Mayor's Office.

"Dear Celestia, Vinyl," she muttered.

* * *

>"CANS HAZ NITES 4EVER?"

"Okay, who introduced Nightmare Moon to Lolcats?"

* * *

>"THE TIGHTS! SHALL LAST! FOREVER!" Nightmare Rarity declared, as she conjured spandex uniforms and clothes over everypony in Ponyville.

"Thou art taking this pun _too far_!" Luna complained, wincing as she tried to get rid of the wedgie the cursed garments were causing on her flanks.

"Pot calling the kettle black, darling," she simply said in reply, as she observed the crowd of ponies beginning to complain in unison how the clothes were rubbing up against their fur, or how it didn't match their eyes, or such. In her opinion as a fashionista, it was fine.

* * *

>152.5: (Masterweaver)

"What are you fillies doing here?!" Celestia shouted as she landed. "There are two massive golems fighting right over there!"

"Ah know. They asked us ta keep score." The yellow earth pony adjusted a dial on the goggles she was wearing. "Also, technically speaking they aren't golems."

"What?"

The white unicorn rolled her eyes. "You see, Vinyl Scratch recently figured out how to use sonic vibrations to make sculptures, so she went around boasting about being the fastest carver. Applejack heard about that, though, and being an earthbender kinda got riled up. So they were going to have a sculpture making competition, but then AJ's little sister here suggested they make something more complicated..."

Celestia blinked as one of the stone giants piledrived the other. "But... You... Honesty... This is incredibly dangerous!"

"Which is why big sis made sure ta do it away from civilized areas-hold on." The yellow filly suddenly grew wings and a horn. **"Don't think Ah didn't see that, AJ! Repairin' a leg mid-session is a twenty point penalty!"****

"Yeesh, I'd of thought Vinyl would be the cheater," the unicorn quipped.

Celestia stared at the madness in front of her. "Did... did you just... she became an alicorn."

"Yeah, that..." Sweetie rolled her eyes. "Look, Celestia, I'd explain, but we're kind of busy right now. I think Twilight's available though, knock on her door three times and she'll tell you anything."

* * *

>152.6: (Masterweaver)

"Rarity?"

"Yes Twilight?"

"Why is Cheerilee leading a citizen's revolution against the tyrannical forces of Canterlot this loop?"

Rarity put down her picket sign and sighed. "Twilight, as much as I love this gag, this is a serious situation."

"I can see that," the other unicorn replied, gesturing to the screaming crowd of protesters around the castle. "I'm just not sure what it is that has everypony so riled up."

"Cutie Mark-based Employment is legally enforced this loop," Rarity explained. "Since Cheerilee's cutie mark is flowers, it is quite literally against the law for her to teach."

"Wait... seriously?"

"Mmmhmmm." Rarity picked her picket sign up. "Why are you here, anyway?"

"Oh, Celestia sent me out to 'break up the crowd.' But I think I'll just fail at that and go have a few words with her." Twilight shrugged, lighting up her horn. "It's a good thing she's not Awake, or I'd be really upset..."

* * *

>152.7: (Masterweaver, Midnight Crescent, wildrook)

"So why am I the game master again?" Shining asked. "And seriously, why are we doing this? We've been to Oerth..."

"You've got the head for numbers, all of us are better actors, and we're doing this to screw around and have fun." Cadance pulled out her character sheet with a manic grin. "I rolled up a half-orc monk!"

"A... what?" Trixie tilted her head. "I don't think that's actually legal, can half-orcs be monks?"

Chrysalis rolled her eyes. "Her husband's the GM, best not to question it."

"Then I'll be playing a Dwarven Rogue," Trixie said, before seeing all the blank stares. "What?"

"You do realize that involves being quiet," Shining Armour asked in response. "So no explosions, or illusions."

"Well of course I do." Trixie replied in a huff. "It's not like I actually have to do it myself. Besides, Trixie has been a master thief before," she said, smirking at the Royal couple. "She has experience, as you both well know..."

"Ok," Shining Armour conceded. "But why a Dwarf?"

Before she could respond, Trixie found Chrysalis' hoof in her mouth. "She's just going to give a long speech about nothing," the Changeling queen said, rolling her eyes. "So I'll skip to the real reason is she just wants to do the female Dwarves with beards bit."

"...Spoilsport..." Trixie whispered, handing a character sheet over to Shining Armour before slumping down in her chair.

"Fine," Shining said, "but as long as we don't tip the Henderson Scale of Plot Derailment up to 9000, I won't consider the team-killing option."

* * *

>152.8: (Masterweaver)

Anakin Skywalker stared out of the cockpit in disbelief. "I... I'm sorry, what did you just say?"

"It's all a big city. The whole planet--"

"This planet is named Equestria?"

The pilot laughed. "Yes. Funny story, that, the pre-republic natives are actually miniature horses..."

* * *

>152.9: (Gym Quirk)

Twilight stumbled into Mac's bar. "What do you have that's barely safe for Alicorns?"

"I think I have the ingredients for one of Trixie's Jaegerbombs," offered Berry.

"That'll do for a start." The Anchor lurched to a stool and slumped down, chin on the bar, forehead massaged by a hoof.

"So how bad was it?" asked Mac.

"Four words: Pinkie Discord Mirror Pool."

"Ouch."

Berry held an energetically fizzing mug with a digital countdown timer in front of the unicorn. "You need to ascend, hon."

"I'll think about it. Just give me the drink."

* * *

>152.10: (Masterweaver)

Cheerilee groaned. "Why is this even here?"

Berry Punch leaned out from the kitchen, absently washing some dishes in her telekinetic grip. "What's up this time, sis?"

"This loop, teachers are required to fill out license renewals every five years. Something about ensuring only legitimate teachers stay in business or something, there was apparently a series of scandals way back when involving tutors..." The mare let out a groan. "And part of the required info is my sexuality."

Berry shrugged her wings, levitating the dish to the drying rack before descending back to her usual earth pony form. "Just put down asexual."

"Not an option." Cheerilee held the paper up. "It's homo, hetero, or bi."

"Wait, what?"

"Nothing on tribe, nothing on out of pony species, nothing on frequency... just homo, hetero, or bi." Cheerilee rolled her eyes. "I mean, I consider myself a low-libido heterosexual with some bisexual tendencies and a preference but not requirement for romantic partners, but can I write that all out? Nooooooooooooo."

Her sister gave the paper a look. "So... just fill in the hetero option."

"Yeah, that works for me, but it doesn't work for everyone." Cheerilee started scribbling in the bubble anyway. "You know what? Later this week, I'm going to go talk to the mayor about this. Get it changed."

"First the cutie mark revolution and now this." Berry sighed. "Cheerilee... sis... promise me you won't let doing the right thing make you into a self-righteous jerk."

"Of course I won't! I'm not some..." The teacher paused. "There's this phrase they use in loops with internet..."

"Social Justice Warrior?"

"That's it, that's the one. I'm a Social Justice Teacher, not a warrior. I think." Cheerilee frowned. "...you know what, just... let me know if I go too far, alright?"

* * *

>152.11: (Masterweaver)

Lilo dragged a hand down her face. "This again...?"

"Hey," Nyx protested, "it's not like either of us planned this!" She wagged her lower arms, her antennae twitching in concentration. "Huh, you know, I thought that having six limbs normally would prepare me more for this, but the flexibility of these things-

"So now all of Jumba's experiments are going to be ponies." Lilo threw up her hands. "Which means I'm going to be the obviously girlygirl who collects magical talking ponies because, oh why not!"

"Hey, I got a lot of pings," Nyx pointed out. "That means a good portion of us are Awake. Look, all we have to do is run it baseline till they get dumped all over the island, then we can start poking around to find the loopers and get them to help us do... whatever it is we're supposed to do."

* * *

>152.12: (Masterweaver)

"...what."

The grey pegasus took a deep breath, held it for a moment,

and...

"My mother wanted to name me Bright Eyes but she was so high on painkillers when I came out that the doctors thought she said Ditzzy Doo so that was what they put on their birth certificate but mom still called me Bright Eyes all the time so when I went to school I was confused when grown up ponies called me by my legal name and a lot of the foals around me started teasing me by calling me Derpy Hooves only I decided I liked Derpy better than Ditzzy since Ditzzy sort of implied I was airheaded which i'm not I'm just a bit strange thinking so at one point I tried to get my name legally changed to Derpy Hooves so I could take the insult as a badge of pride only there was a paperwork snafu and my full legal name became Derpy Ditzzy Doo Hooves but I didn't really care and then later I was given the false cover identity of Bubbles as part of a witness protection program but I spent so long in it that it became an official identity and then most recently I was elected the Muffin Matron Mare in an Equestria-wide voting ceremony and it's usually shortened to Muffin but it's really more of a title anyway."

Twilight stared at her. "That... that is the craziest variant I have ever-

"Actually," the pegasus interrupted, "all that happens more often than not. I mean, some loops parts of it are missing, but..."

"...you mean to tell me you have-" Twilight ran some quick calculations in her head. "-around _five_ names in _baseline?!_"

"I think so. Could be damaged code or something."

* * *

>152.13: (Alex Prior, BIOS-Pherecydes, Dave ID, Detective Ethan Redfield, Evilhumour, Masterweaver, Midnight Crescent, wildrook

Rainbow slammed her mug down. "Okay, okay, I got one. Variants. Weirdest mother you ever had?"

Apple Bloom rolled her eyes. "You."

"I had Tirek as my mother for a loop." Twilight sighed. "And before you ask, no, my house was _still_ destroyed at the end of it."

Rarity sighed. "Applejack."

"Wait, what?"

"You were actually a pretty good mother, Applejack."

"But you and me, you were mah daughter one loop?"

"You're surprised?"

"Err, well... Shoot, ya got a point there."

Celestia grimaced. "One Loop, Luna and I were the children of The Tree of Harmony."

All conversation came to a stop. Twilight managed to find her voice first.

"Wha..."

Luna slammed an empty glass down, gesturing for Mac to refill it.

"That was not even the worst of it. Our father was Discord."

Applejack slammed down the rest of her drink. "At least that's a magic tree..."

Luna raised an eyebrow. "What do you mean?"

"One loop, our family literally grew on our trees..."

Big Mac and Applebloom's eyes widened and twitched in unison.

"Eeyup," Applejack continued, pulling her hat down over her eyes. "Bloomberg..."

"The bogbug tree," Chrysalis grumbled with a shudder. "Apparently Star Swirl locks up some potent evil in a tree in the middle of a bog with mounds of dead ponies floating in the water, and then some unicorn comes along and tries to destroy the tree, but the evil whatever flows into the insect-infected bog from the hole in the tree and suddenly evil insect zombies that eat love."

Everypony stared at her.

"I absolutely hate that variant," she continued. "Because guess who comes out first? And it means that we're all naturally evil, it's..."

She shuddered again. Trixie put down her drink and wrapped her hooves around her with a gentle nuzzle; Chrysalis managed a small smile.

"...I'm not sure that technically counts as a parent," Rainbow Dash mused. "Origin story, yeah, but the tree didn't do anything to actually raise you, did it? You just come into being-

"Rainbow Dash if you don't shut up right now you're going to be the focus of my next firework display," Trixie stated very calmly.

The "human" of the group sighed. "Bonbon was our mother and Octavia was Vinyl's mom."

Applebloom frowned. "Tha's nuthin'. One Loop Ah was mah own mom."

Applejack patted her sister on the back. "Mikasa Glitch?"

"Eeyup."

Discord entered the conversation, then stepped out of the conversation and into the actual bar.

"I don't think I ever had a mother in the Baseline. For me any mother is unusual. However there was this one time when I had Maud Pie as my mumsy dearest. Can you imagine? Me the Spirit of Chaos, the son of the least chaotic pony in all of Equestria!"

"There was the time I was literally born from the world's first DJ table," Vinyl mused.

"Wait, what?"

"Yeah, strangest thing. She even taught me how to do this!" The unicorn happily began to dance a most righteous disco.

Twilight blinked. "I just-how did-you can't just-!"

Lt. Redfield of the Resident Evil series waited until he had several deep mugs of the local swill before replying, "Albert Wesker, both born from a female and as a clone created during his time at the Spencer Manor."

The rest of the bar loopers winced in sympathy, except one, an iguana named Leon that had replaced Gummy, "That's pretty bad, but I was once his and Claire's child by birth. Thank God you weren't awake for that one."

"Slaanesh." Leman shuddered. "Dear _TREE_ there was not enough booze to erase _that_ horror from my mind!"

Nyx rubbed her snout against her boyfriend, "Awake or asleep?"

Leman hugged her close, shuddering. "I don't know and I don't _want_ to know!"

"I recall Twilight Velvet was my birth mother that one time," recalled Celestia. "There was a Stealth Anchor. Twilight called me the 'coolest big sister ever!'"

She sighed.

"You were so adorkable."

Luna scowled. "I remember that one. _My_ mother was Nightmare Moon, and wasn't _that_ the greatest family. There was way too little CAKE, or would have been if somepony-we-shall-not-name hadn't STOLEN them all."

Interestingly enough, both Celestia _and_ Nyx gasped. "You were _Awake_ for that one?"

Twilight facehooved.

"Sleipnir." Everypony stopped and looked at Scootaloo in awe. Their eyes were demanding more information from the slow drinking filly. With a long sip and exaggerated sigh, the filly continued. "It was a weird variant, but you know how Loki is Sleipnir's mom? Following in the family's hoofsteps in that loop."

"Wait, who was your father?" Sweetie Belle asked.

"A male Hel." Scootaloo blinked and paused, tapping her chin. "I think; there were a lot of male figures around the time I was conceived according to grandma Loki, some of who I am not allowed to say." She then tipped her head at the real Sleipnir who was simply burying his head into the table.

Spike sighed and pointed at Rarity. "Remember that Games of Thrones loop?"

Rarity shuddered and hugged husband at that memory being brought to the forefront.

"SCP-504," a male voice said, revealing Sasuke in pony form. "On the upside, I have a disdain for Dane Cook and I learned my Tomato Stand CAN be used for combat...only for bad jokes."

As soon as Rainbow Dash opened her mouth, though, Sasuke glared.

"Don't you DARE use THAT joke. You know, the one used against Nazis in the Monty Python Branch?"

"How'd you even..."

"Hub Loops."

"Figures," Dash muttered. "Other than that, well...there was a Herd Loop...and my Mom was Firefly, but I was raised by the Wonderbolts."

"Again?" the others asked her.

Dash rolled her eyes. "Never said which generation," she replied. "It was one of those Variants where Generations were mixed...and I was raised by Captain Firefly."

Twilight then hovered over her, almost sparking. "Tell me everything!" she yelled.

* * *

>152.14: (OathToOblivion)

It was another bright and shining day in Ponyville. Twilight and Spike were exiting the Golden Oaks Library, just shooting the breeze.

Twilight sighed in disappointment. "I was really hoping the others would be Awake this Loop. I needed to talk to them about something important."

"Gee, thanks," Spike said wryly. Twilight flushed at her unintentional insult.

"Sorry, Spike," she apologized to her number one assistant/brother/son/whatever.

"Eh, it's fine. Anyway, last Loop I was over at Anakin's place, and he told me something interesting he'd heard from Oshawott. Basically, it-" Spike was cut off when a metallic arm came out of nowhere and clutched him around the midsection and pulled him away.

"Spike!" Twilight yelled in concern, whirling around to see who it was. What she saw was so distracting that she stopped everything. And so did everypony else nearby. What do you say when you see a giant cat-shaped hot air balloon? Only...something about it looked familiar to Twilight.

"Listen, is that a purple unicorn I hear?" a white pegasus with a long red mane asked from within the balloon's basket.

"It's speaking to me loud and clear," her companion, a white unicorn with a short blue mane replied. He was fiddling with something within the basket.

"On the wind!"

"Past the stars!"

"In your ears!" their final companion, a cat that was walking on its hind legs, stated, having finished locking Spike in a pink cage of sorts. Then they continued on with a flourish.

"Bringing chaos at a breakneck pace!"

"Dashing hope, putting fear in its place!"

"A rose by any other name is just as sweet!"

"When everything's worse, our work is complete!"

"Jessie!"

"James!"

"And Meowth, now dat's a name!" And then suddenly it clicked for Twilight just who they were.

"Putting the do-gooders in their place..."

"...we're Team Rocket!"

"IN YOUR FACE!" Meowth crowed, before hitting the button on a remote he had. From the basket, twin rocket engines extended, sending the balloon rocketing away.

Twilight blinked once, then twice, then immediately panicked. "Hang on, Spike!" she yelled, summoning her Element, ascending, then flying after the balloon as fast as she can.

* * *

>While Team Rocket made like their namesake and rocketed away, Spike was not very impressed. "You guys know I can get out of here any time I want, right?" he pointed out.

"Ha! That's what you think! Tell him, Meowth!" Jessie declared.

Meowth, however, did not like this idea. "Why me?! I'm steerin' dis thing! Make James do it, he's not doin' anythin'!"

"I'm keeping an eye on our incoming pony princess! I can't do it!" James shot back.

"Grrr-! Fine, I'll do it!" Jessie seethed, before turning back to the amused dragon Jedi. "All right, this is how it works! For starters, that cage is made out of pure Pixie Plate!" she announced.

Spike blinked. "Pixie Plate?" he asked in confusion.

"That's right! Arceus's Fairy-type Plate, courtesy of a certain Togepi! And as everyone knows, Fairies are immune to Dragon stuff! In other words, you can't use any of your dragon abilities in that cage! And as for your little Jedi tricks, we've coated the thing with miriskin!"

Spike quickly grew a deadpan look. "Miriskin is a hoax. Only living ysalamari can block the use of the Force," he pointed out.

James grinned, and turned around to look at him. "Ordinarily, but we obtained it in a variant where that's not the case!" he rebutted, waving his hoof back and forth in an imitation of a wagging finger.

"The cage is also built so that you can't use your little size-shift thing either. You'd crush yourself! You're not getting out of that cage until we let you out!" Jessie declared.

"Or we blast off..." Meowth added under his breath.

Spike shook his head. They really had him backed up in a corner here. Just, one thing was still confusing him. "Why are you guys even doing this anyway? You're obviously Loopers, considering you have miriskin, and whatever a Pixie Plate is. So..."

At that, the Looping Rocket members all grew somber. "When we first started Looping, we were a tad frustrated with how we never won in baseline," Jessie began.

"We figured that there was nothing wrong in trying to be the good guys, since we are pretty good at it. But..." James continued, before pausing.

"It jus' wasn' us! We're good at bein' good, but we love bein' bad! It jus' took us a while to remember!" Meowth summarized.

"Well, to be more accurate, we're bad, but we're not _evil_, if that makes any sense," James mused.

"Okay, but why kidnap _me?_"

Jessie shrugged. "Practice." She would have elaborated more, when James paled on seeing what was coming up behind them.

"Uh, Jessie? Meowth?" he squeaked out.

"Wat?!" Meowth asked in irritation, before the other two Rockets turned around. Then they too paled.

Seeing the Rainbow of Light flying right at them would probably do that to anyone. The Rainbow slammed right into the balloon, causing a giant explosion! While Spike's cage was caught by Twilight, the other three went flying in a completely different direction.

"Looks like we'll have to go back to the drawing board," James sighed.

"GAH! I thought we only look bad in comparison to the twoips!" Meowth raged.

"That's it. We're using a cloaking device next time," Jessie snarled. But then the three grinned, because they knew what was coming next. And as much as it tended to annoy them, there was a bit of nostalgia involved with it. So...

"LOOKS LIKE TEAM ROCKET'S BLASTING OFF AGAAAAAAAAIIIIIIIN!"

***twinkle***

* * *

>152.15: (Bardic Knowledge)

Sunset stared vacantly into the Equestrian distance, a glass of cold tea by her seat on Twilight's balcony. She'd stopped by after Discord's return and resealing, which was unusually late for her if she were coming by at all in a Loop.

"So, what's on your mind?" asked Twilight, coming up beside her.

"It's not much, really, just an odd encounter." Sunset replied, taking a sip from her tea before continuing. "I Awoke while still dating Flash, as usual, but this Loop I thought I might stick with him. Eventually, though, I was introduced to his uncle. One he doesn't usually have, by the way."

"Which means Variant or Fused," Twilight nodded in understanding.

"I'm pretty sure it was Fused, though the old man wasn't Awake. Anyways, we were having a chat with his family, when 'Uncle Haggard' looked incredibly deep into my eyes - which was creepy enough - then said that he couldn't see himself in my eyes. According to his son, Sea Bridge, he was getting a bit strange in his old age, manifesting in an obsession with unicorns, of all things."

"Wait. Are you talking about...?"

Sunset floated a book out of her Pocket. "The Last Unicorn, by Peter S. Beagle. Yeah."

"Whoof."

"You said it." Sunset put the book away before draining her glass. "Almost makes me wonder if we'll meet with that unicorn some day."

"...you know, I think I've never _met_ her, but... I'm pretty sure I've _been_ her..."

* * *

>152.16: (wildrook)

"Dis-COOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOORD!" Twilight yelled.

Discord appeared behind Twilight. "What did I do this time?" he asked her.

She then thrust the bottle of shampoo towards him...annoyed.

"You didn't apply it on yourself, did you?" he asked her. "Because it CLEARLY states that Unicorns, Pegacorns, and Alicorns aren't supposed to use this."

"No, but that's part of the problem," Twilight replied. "Well, two parts, due to asking what a Pegacorn is, but the main problem is THAT." She then pointed to a yellow Luna declaring she was a banana...like on Celestia's off unAwake Loops when she has a banana obsession.

"What do you want me to do, make the warning more prominent? Or put it INSIDE the bottle? The warning is emphasized."

Twilight gave him a look that spelled doom to those who walked past her. "Put more emphasis, then. I'm going to see if I can reverse the whole thing before Luna turns the moon into liquid portal conductors."

Discord blinked. "I thought you were going to say cheese for a minute there."

* * *

>152.17: (Vadrigar 1994) (MLPHalf-Life)

Twilight was a happy unicorn. Last loop she finally received the finished version of a large book she and Hermione had co-written that detailed how the loops worked for newer Loopers, and with everything in the loop looking normal so far, she intended to spend a nice, peaceful baseline loop reading the finished product.

Those plans went out the window when Rainbow Dash decided to fly through her window.

"Uh, Twilight, there's a pony near the Everfree, and he's swearing up a storm. Stuff about "where are my fingers" and such, so I figure we have a new Looper on our hooves."

"Doors, Rainbow. Doors still exist and millions of years haven't changed that. And why don't you talk to him? Work on your diplomacy while I read."

"Nuh uh, after Naoki I've made sure that you're the first to talk to Loopers we've never met. Especially the ones that are swearing about fingers."

"Oh, good point. Alright, I'll go talk to him, and you let everyone who's Awake know we have a visitor."

Rainbow Dash saluted and flew back out the perpetually broken window, and Twilight made her way to the edge of the Everfree. It wasn't hard to find the Looper, she just followed the yelling until she saw a bright orange pegasus, with glasses and a crowbar cutie mark. He saw Twilight approaching and glared at her, seemingly ready to yell again. She cut him off before he was able to do so.

"Hello, I'm Twilight Sparkle, Anchor of the Equestria Sanctuary Loop. And your name is?"

The Pegasus stopped glaring, and seemed to think for a second. Twilight guessed his Loop memories were coming in, so she waited patiently.

"My name is, uh, Doctor Freemane, I guess. Why do I have a different name here? My name should be Gordon Freeman."

"Well Gordon, anyone who Loops into Equestria is turned into a pony and given a unique name. Some Loops do that by default."

"Wait, I'm a PONY!? Is THAT why I don't have fingers?"

"Well technically you're a pegasus, but yes, a pony. I'm guessing body transformation is new to you?"

"The Loops themselves are still kinda new to me. I've had some fused ones and had the Loops explained, but I'm still trying to ease my way into this nonsense. Most of the time I'm a human in a research facility fighting for my life for days on end, next thing I know I might be a kid in a forest with a talking fairy, I might be in a test course for portals looked after by an A.I., or I might be a freaking pony!"

Twilight was beginning to understand why Gordon swore so much. Having a stressful Baseline took its toll, and waking up in completely unfamiliar locations in the middle of doing that over and over again can wear anyone down. Thankfully, she was already thinking of dozens of ways to help decompress Gordon, and with the help of her friends she was sure they could help him out.

"Well, don't you worry Doctor Freeman, this is a sanctuary Loop, which means this is a Loop of total relaxation for you. As long as you don't hurt anyone, feel free to do whatever you like."

"Learning to walk properly would be a nice start."

* * *

>"Hooves are awful."

"You've mentioned this. Three times."

"I'll stop mentioning it when they cease to be awful. How am I even supposed to pick things up? I've seen several objects in your world that are designed for fingers."

"Use your mouth. I would say use your wings to help, but you'll need practice for that."

Twilight was leading Gordon to her home, trying to keep him from being too loud and annoying anyone nearby with his, frankly, blunt comments about the town. She only hoped that he wouldn't freak out Spike, who wasn't Awake.

"Okay, here, we're at my house. But I should let you know--"

"This is a tree."

"Gordon, I have someone else living with me, please don't startle him when you--"

"How do you live in a tree? Shouldn't all the hollowing out and stuff inside of it make it collapse?"

"The short answer is magic. Now, I have a little brother, he's not Looping, please don't startle him."

"Why would I startle him? It's not like he hasn't seen ponies before. Unless you keep him in the basement and stop him from coming into contact with anyone ever. Do ponies keep slaves?"

While Twilight had heard and seen her share of disturbing things in her travels, Gordon's mind immediately going to child slavery still startled her. She reminded herself to have him go to a therapy session with Fluttershy, who, thankfully, was Awake. She was going to tell Gordon off for saying such things, until Spike walked into the room.

"Hey Twilight. Who's your friend?"

"Spike, this is Doctor Freemane. Doctor, this is Spike."

Spike walked over to shake Gordon's hoof, but Gordon took a step back, glancing at Twilight with apprehension.

"Um, hi? Do you bite? The last time I saw something that looked like you it tried to kill me."

Spike, thankfully tuning out the last part of Gordon's statement, looked excited at what he had said. He leaped forward at Gordon, who flinched and looked ready to punch him.

"You've met other dragons?! When? Where? What were they like? How big were they?"

"Spike, can you go over to Rarity's for a bit? I need to talk to Doctor alone, please."

"But Twilight, he said he met other--"

"Spike, he hasn't met any dragons, he's just confused. Go help Rarity for a bit, and I'll meet you later so we can head over to the Summer Sun Celebration."

Spike looked a bit disappointed, but went to help Rarity nonetheless. Only then did Gordon speak up.

"Okay, what was that? Did it say it was a dragon?"

"A baby dragon, yes" Twilight responded. "Please don't do anything to upset him, he's still a child. Now then, is there anything you wanted to do before tonight?"

"But, dragon, what?"

"Gordon, I'm sorry, I know you're full of questions, but the Summer Sun Celebration is in less than twelve hours. During the celebration, an exiled princess who's taken the name of Nightmare Moon will try to trap the world in eternal darkness and enslave it. She's a pushover by now, and we usually let visiting Loopers choose how to take care of her. Any ideas?"

"Getting rid of an threat? Oh yeah, just let me get out my rocket launcher and we'll-"

"Wait, rocket launcher?!"

"You said "threat" right? Why, is she larger than you? No problem, I have some experimental laser weapons that should blow her to bits."

"NO! Gordon, she's the sister of our princess and she's just possessed by evil! This has to be a non-lethal solution. We usually just prank her somehow and then get rid of the evil inside her. Can't you think of anything like that?"

Gordon looked lost in thought, and it was dawning on Twilight how used he was to just killing whatever threatened him. Hopefully, getting him used to pranking his enemies would get him out of this mindset.

"How long is it until the celebration again?" He asked.

"You have a little over seven hours. Look, if you can't think of something safe, we can just fall back on what my friends and I usually do."

"No, I'm getting an idea. Show me where she shows up, I may be onto something. Also, how much do ponies weigh, on average?"

* * *

>"The night shall last FOREV-"

"CANNONBAAAAAAAAAAAAALLLLLLLLLL!"

* * *

>"YOU BROKE HER SPINE IN THREE PLACES!"

"YOU SAID NON-LETHAL! AND YOU HEALED HER, DIDN'T YOU?"

"YOU COULDN'T HAVE POSSIBLY KNOWN I HAD HEALING MAGIC!"

"HEY, I SAVED THE WORLD, DIDN'T I?"

"BY BREAKING PRINCESS LUNA'S BACK! SHE WAS PARALYZED AND CRYING!"

"WHO'S PRINCESS LUNA?!"

* * *

>AN:

152.1: Batpony? (DC Comics)

>152.2: Trying to put theory into practice.152.3: Dragondance.

>152.4: All the groans.152.5: Games ponies play.

>152.6: Marksism. (Planned economy, see? More than just a pun.)152.7: Game night.

>152.8: Capital of the Galactic Republic. (They've still got Celestia though.)152.9: Gargle blasters.

>152.10: Sometimes there's just not the right option on there.152.11: Written on page 626 of the thread. (Lilo & Stitch)

>152.12: Name troubles.152.13: Another mother.

>152.14: Team Rocket, of course, normally do this. (Pokemon)152.15: "Meet" is a strange term.

>152.16: Oh dear.152.17: Life, half-life.

160. Chapter 160

153.1 (Masterweaver)

**Glitched Up Harmony****

Vinyl rolled her eyes, maneuvering around the detritus in her foyer. "Alright, alright, I'm coming! Hold your horses... snrk." She opened the front door... and burst out into a wide smile. "Cheerilee! 'Sup girl, didn't 'spect you to come round!" Her eyes darted left and right. "I don't have to take remedial classes do I?"

"Relax, Vinyl, I'm not going to force responsibility onto you this loop." Cheerilee shook her head with a smirk. "I had enough of a hard time teaching you when you, Octavia, and Lyra were all crusaders."

"Huh. Wasn't awake for that one." Vinyl grinned broadly. "You'll have to show me the pics sometime."

"I'll dig them out later. Actually, I was hoping you wouldn't mind teaching me about the maintenance of amplification speakers." The schoolteacher shrugged. "Part of the whole 'learn everything' plan..."

"Yeah alright. Not right now though, kay?" Vinyl gestured to the mess behind her. "Octy's coming down from Canterlot for the Summer Sun celebration so I need to clean up before she gets here. Mostly I'm just dumping junk into my pocket so I can organize it later..."

Cheerilee chuckled. "Only you would use your pocket as a dustbin... Speaking of which, have you told Octavia about the loops this loop?"

"I teleported a letter and her journal to her. Put a little 'notice me' charm on the letter, just so she'll read it..." The unicorn rubbed the back of her head. "Actually, I've had a weird feeling ever since I wrote that letter. Something seems a little off. Maybe I should talk to Twilight..."

The earth pony shook her head. "Derpy used her scrying bubbles to track the pings this loop. We've got a guest anchor, her pony name is Moon Bunny and she's replacing Trixie." She shrugged. "She wanted to take her time coming to ponyville, be a real traveling showmare."

"Huh." Vinyl tilted her head. "Derpy has scrying bubbles now?"

Cheerilee waved a hoof. "They're basically crystal balls she makes out of... spit."

"Neat. So who is awake?"

"Me, you, Derpy, the mayor, Lyra, and Sunset."

"Yeah... maybe I'll ask Sunset when she gets into town..." Vinyl bit her lip. "I dunno what it is, but something is really bugging me this loop... So, anyway, what's our plan for Nightmare Moon?"

"Well, Lyra called dibs. Apparently she wants to pretend to be a seapony from the moon and..."

* * *

>"NNNNNNnnnnnnnnnnrnrngngngngnn."

Derpy Hooves peered around the doorframe. "Problems, Scroll?"

"Look at this. Just look at the laws my unawake self passed." Ivory passed the document to the grey pegasus. "See how she plotted the municipal district?! This is going to bite me in the flank." Her head hit the desk. "I'm honestly tempted to let Nightmare Moon rampage through it so I can fix it up later..."

"Huh, I... have no idea what I'm looking at." Derpy shrugged, putting the paper back on the desk. "Look on the bright side, after tonight you'll be able to spend some time with that sea serpent again."

Ivory rose her head and frowned. "Steven isn't actually the kind of fellow I like. Don't get me wrong, he's a good man, but... well, unless he's half drunk he's just a touch too gentlemanly for my taste." She rolled her eyes. "And he's high maintenance. Do you know, one loop he single-handedly caused a market collapse in toiletries?"

"Oh, high maintenance boyfriends are terrible," Derpy agreed. "There was this time where Dinky's father was actually prince Blueblood. I mean, the money was good and he was actually pretty skilled, but apart from that!"

"You have my sympathies. Honestly, I think some of my best loop flings have been outside Equestria."

Derpy chuckled. "I get you. Did I ever tell you about the time I replaced Arwen?" She sighed happily. "I mean, Aragorn wasn't Awake, but it was still... mmmm."

"I can imagine. I have fond memories of Tom myself."

"Tom the boulder?"

"No, Tom Riddle."

The pegasus blanched. "You dated _Voldemort?!_"

"What? No!" Ivory Scroll waved her hooves. "No, nonono. This was before he became a dark lord. I mean, we broke up later, amicably enough I suppose..." She sighed. "I was a little upset when he did turn to the dark, though. Thought I had changed the timeline enough... I may have published all his embarrassing teenage secrets rather publicly in the Prophet, though."

"Oh... he couldn't have been happy about that."

"The death eaters tried to track me down, yes." She smiled maliciously. "They were expecting a helpless muggle-born pencil pusher. The look on Bellatrix's face..."

Derpy grinned an evil grin. "Oh, that had to have been good. Shame I missed it." She glanced at the clock. "Darn it. I should probably head out to pick up Dinky. I mean, I could just teleport but then ponies would ask questions..."

"No, I understand." Ivory sighed, turning back to her desk. "At least I should have most of this cleared up by the celebration..."

* * *

>Lyra winced as two ponies with highly frazzled manes suddenly appeared beside her. "Whoa, whoa, what the oak?!"

"Sorry, couldn't get to the train." Sunset Shimmer shook her head, glaring up at the city hanging off the mountain. "The royal guard decided that I needed to be captured at all costs."

"Why?"

"Well, _obviously_ the 'ex-student' of princess Celestia has to be a fugitive, because why else would Celestia dismiss her unless she was completely evil?!" The unicorn took a moment to magically style her mane with a grumble. "Apparently they've been pinning every other unsolved crime on me. So now I'm a serial killer, drug dealer, foal molester, jaywalker-Seriously, what the actual fuuuudgebuckets?!"

"I'll admit I was a little worried when you burst into my home," the other mare finally managed. "You have built up quite the boogie-mare reputation, and if it hadn't been for that journal Vinyl teleported to my table... Speaking of which, I'm actually amazed you managed to teleport us both down to Ponyville after all of that." She sighed. "I hope I'm not pinned as an accomplice or anything like that... No offense meant, miss Shimmer, but a regrettable portion of my career has to do with image and, well, you can see my problem."

"No, it's fine Octavia." Sunset rolled her eyes. "Just so you know, the real reason I was dismissed was basically 'I threw a hissy fit and jumped into another world.' Which isn't that different from baseline."

"I know how bad a bad rep can be," Lyra said with a sympathetic nod. "Especially pre-loop reps, you know? Being known as 'that crazy mare' really makes life difficult."

Sunset blinked, looking at the other unicorn with concern. "Lyra..." she said slowly. "...you are crazy."

"Well, yeah, but I don't want to be treated like it!" The mint green unicorn huffed. "It's not like I'm a psychopath or anything, I just have more than one me. I can function normally in society."

Octavia rose a hoof awkwardly. "Ah, more than one...?"

"She's got five selves because of a glitch." Sunset turned to Lyra. "It is five, right? You haven't gained another Lyra in there?"

"Well, five and a half," Lyra admitted. "Siren Lyra is part of Seapony Lyra, but not. It's complicated." She rolled her eyes.

"See, that doesn't help with non-loopers. When you say things like that, ponies are going to think you're crazy."

Octavia snorted. "Like how you burst into my home, shattered a window, told me that you jumped out the window, and then ran upstairs?"

"Yes that." Sunset nodded firmly. "Exactly like that. Did you tell the guards I jumped out your window, by the way?"

"I... yes." Octavia sighed. "I mean, I had no idea what was going on- are you going to fix my window, by any chance?"

"Yeah, sure, later." Sunset waved a casual hoof. "Point is, if you don't want to be treated crazy, don't act crazy."

"But it's my pre-awake self that was acting crazy!" Lyra whined.

"...Point."

"What do you two even-whatever." Octavia flicked her tail and stormed off. "I'm going to find Vinyl. She's the kind of crazy I can understand, at least..."

* * *

>"Octiiiiiii!" Vinyl cried, wrapping a warm hoof around the frazzled gray mare. "You made it! Just in time, too, I think the celebration is starting in a few minutes."

Octavia shook her head, a small smile on her face. "Well, I'll admit I had a bit of trouble getting here, but here I am." She glanced around nervously. "So... is it true?"

"The loops? Yeah." She held up her hoof quickly. "Just so you know, though, we've got a guest anchor so Twilight's not Awake. Which basically means I don't know her this time."

The earth pony rolled her eyes. "Right, right. Another promise you can't keep."

"Hey now! Give it a couple months!" Vinyl leaned in conspiratorially. "I can get you to see her very soon, if you can stand horrible dresses. And I mean hideous, stupid enough that even _I_ can't see them as anything but zwonky."

"...would I have to be wearing them?"

"No, thank Yggdrasil! I'd never purposefully subject you to that torment!"

"Thank Celestia for small favors..." Octavia said, letting out a relieved sigh. Her eyes started to wander around the crowd of ponies walking toward the town hall. "There is, uh, something I don't understand."

"Yeah?"

"When I read your letter, you mentioned something strange. I didn't get a chance to do more than flip through the journal you sent..."

Vinyl Scratch chuckled. "Come on, Octy, out with it."

"...Vinyl, what is the Mare in the Moon?"

Vinyl blinked. "What are you talking about? It's the pattern of..."

She froze, her hoof pointing at the familiar white disc in the sky. She had expected to see the silhouette of a unicorn's head formed out of black splotches on its surface, but instead... Instead they made the image of a pair of almost serpentine horns on a square face. Vinyl's eyes widened as she dove into her loop memories, trying to recall Nightmare Night-but instead came forth with a holiday where all the little ponies dressed up as dragons, and left candy at the hooves of a centaur statue.

"Oh _fascicle._"

"What?"

The unicorn twisted on the spot, gripping the gray pony's shoulders. "Octavia, find a basement and lock yourself in. If anypony knocks, ask them who Nyx is dating, and if they don't say Leman Russ _don't open the door._"

"I'm sorry, what did you just-?"

"CHEERILEE!" Vinyl bounded away, rushing up to her fellow looper.
"Cheerilee, the moon!"

Cheerilee gave her fellow looper a glance, looking up. "Vinyl, I don't see what _oh sweet Ficus!_"

"I know! Can you get the foals somewhere safe?!"

"The stars are already moving, Vinyl! I'll try, but-"

"Excuse me," Octavia interrupted, "but what exactly are you two talking-"

"Octy, please, round up whoever you can and get them to safety!" Vinyl was already galloping toward town hall. "I've got to warn the mayor!"

"I... Cheerilee, right?" Octavia turned to the other mare. "Why are you worried?!"

"Twilight's not awake," Cheerilee muttered. "Most of the older Loopers aren't either... This could go badly. Very badly. I hope Vinyl gets to Ivory in time..."

"Why? What's so important?! WHAT'S GOING ON?!"

The schoolteacher looked at her grimly. "The Summer Sun Celebration is about to have an unexpected guest."

* * *

>Ivory Scroll ran a comb through her mane, checking her appearance in the mirror as she adjusted her glasses. She wasn't vain, exactly, but a town executive had to present a certain image to the public, and that meant being well groomed and presentable. With a final ruffling of her cravat, she trotted out to the stage accompanied by the now all too familiar fanfare.

Hmm. Maybe next loop she could change the tune to some light metal...

"Fillies and gentlecolts," Ivory projected with a small smile, "As mayor of Ponyville, it is my great pleasure to announce the beginning of the Summer Sun Celebration!"

She felt her heart warm up as the ponies in the crowd cheered. Her eyes roved around-there was Twilight, nervously standing in the center of the crowd, and-ah! Derpy was hovering over Lyra and Sunset, chatting amicably about some loop nonsense, she was sure.

Clearing her throat, Ivory turned her attention back to the crowd in general. "In just a few moments, our town will witness the magic of the sunrise, and celebrate this, the longest day of the year! And now, it is my great honor to introduce to you the ruler of our land, the very pony who gives us the sun and the moon each and every day, the good, the wise, the bringer of harmony to all of Equestria..." She paused dramatically, giving the two mares on the upper level a few seconds to get ready. "...Princess Celestia!"

The birds gave their chorus as Rarity tugged back the curtains, revealing an empty balcony. Ivory Scroll rolled her shoulders as the crowd began to chatter among themselves, trying to figure out where Pinkie had ended up-even in baseline loops, even unawake, that pony could end up doing almost anything. And there she was, wrapped midway up a pillar and cleaning her binoculars.

"Remain calm, everypony." Ivory kept Pinkie in her peripheral vision as she spoke. "There must be a reasonable-!"

Vinyl burst through the town hall's doors, closely followed by Cheerilee. "IVORY! MOONSWAP! MIDNIGHT CASTLE!"

The unicorn paused for a moment, realizing all eyes were on her.

Then she shrugged. "Okay, you know what? Screw secrecy. Time is broken, I've been here before, and everypony needs to clear out _now._"

As if to confirm her words, a pillar of fire suddenly burst into being on the upper balcony. Thick black hooves stepped out, bulging red arms snapping forward as powerful red hands ripped the railing out. "BEHOLD, PATHETIC PONY SCUM! I HAVE RETURNED!"

Welp, Ivory thought to herself, that scuttled her plans for the loop. "Everypony head for the nearest basements or other shelters! Guards, ensure the civilians are escorted to safety!" Reams of spell paper burst from nowhere, surrounding her and lifting her into the air. "Tirek, I am suing you for destruction of public property!"

The centaur slammed down to the first floor, cracks forming under his hooves. "You think you can match me, little pony?! I AM THE EPOCH OF ALL THINGS MAGICAL! I! AM YOUR **CHOSEN **_**TYRAAAAAAANT**_!"

Ivory Scroll dodged a blast of fire and sent her stacks of paperwork on him. "YOU! ARE! VIOLATING! ZONING! LEGISLATION!" _Drat. That sounded more epic in my head._

"Auntie Leelee, what's going on?!" Ruby Pinch shouted as she gripped Cheerilee's leg. "The mayor is doing weird things with paper and that scary red ponything is spitting out fire beans and I can't find my momma anywhere-"

"Beams, sweetie," Cheerilee absently corrected, letting her eyes dart around the panicked crowd as a stray bolt of magic hit the wall behind her. "It's fire beams-" Her eyes lighted on an overturned table in the center of the room, or more specifically the foal huddled behind it in a desperate attempt to avoid being hit by one of the many stray bolts of magic. "Shrub."

"What?"

"Um, never mind." The teacher hunkered down behind the buffet, pointing across the way. "You see Dinky over there?" Her niece looked over and nodded, wide eyed. "Well, we're going to have to go over there."

"What?!"

"I know you're scared, but she is too, and I'm going to find a way to get you both out of here." Cheerilee leaned down. "You've known me all your life, Ruby. You know I wouldn't ever put a foal at risk. I promise, I will keep you safe."

"I... I..." Ruby whimpered for a moment. Then she shut her eyes tight. "I trust you, auntie Leelee..."

"Eyes open, Ruby, it's easier to dodge that way." The teacher lifted her neice's chin. "Look, after this is all done, we'll all head over to sugarcube corner and I'll get you a big plate of cookies, okay?"

"O...okay."

"A wise pony once said that bravery is not the absence of fear, but the willingness to act despite it."

Ruby opened her eyes, peering around the table at the red-skinned centaur fighting a pony in a paper mecha. She watched him set the walker on fire and swallowed hard. "...I think we're about to be very brave, then."

"Heh." Cheerilee smiled to herself. "Yes we are... On the count of three, we run to Dinky. One... Two... three!"

Mare and filly darted across the intervening space. True, it was only a few feet, but with the panicking ponies and Tirek's bolts of power shrieking through the air, it was almost a war zone. The only thing missing was the actual army, Cheerilee mused as she dodged under a magical blast. She nudged Ruby out of the way of a panicking mare-

"GYIAGH!"

Cheerilee fell to her side with a pained gasp. Ruby snapped her gaze around. "AUNTIE LEELEE!"

"I'll... I'll be fine!" Cheerilee tried to push herself up, but collapsed with a wince. "It was just a little fire beam to the ribs. Nothing to be upset about!"

"But auntie Leelee-!"

"Get to Dinky for me, alright?" Cheerilee forced herself to smile and waved the filly out. "Go on! Behind the table, you'll be safe there..."

"Dinky!" Derpy cried, gliding over the crowd rushing through the wall she had just bucked down. "Oh dear Druantean Dryads- Dinky! Are you alright?!" She wrapped the foal up in her wings.

"I'm scared mommy..." The unicorn hiccuped. "What's going on?! Who is that big mean horse-ape thing?! Why is the mayor fighting him?! Where's the princess?!"

"Oh, it's... it's all so complicated, I can explain later-"

"Miss Derpy!" Ruby cried, hopping for attention. "Auntie Leelee's hurt!" She skittered up to them and pointed at where the teacher was groaning. "We gotta help her!"

Derpy let her eyes rove around the town hall quickly, realizing there were still a large amount of panicking ponies rushing for the exits, before her gaze fell on a mint unicorn. "LYRA! I need you to get these two out of here!"

"Gotcha!" Lyra whisked up a couple of hands with her magic and grabbed the two fillies. "Come on, we've got things in hoof!"

"But auntie Leelee-!"

"I'll take care of her, Ruby, don't you worry." Derpy gave the filly a reassuring smile before turning back to her daughter. "Now you be nice for miss Lyra, okay? The mare's completely crazy, but she's got a good heart."

"Hey, I'm only, like, seventy five percent crazy! At most!" Lyra plunked the two foals on her back, rearing up. "Hold on tight girls. CHAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAARGE!" She rushed through the broken wall with the gurgling battle cry of the seaponies rippling out of her throat.

Derpy let out a breath as she saw her daughter leave the battlefield, but couldn't help rolling her eyes with a small smile. "Never change, Lyra..." Glancing carefully at the ongoing battle-and noting that Sunset was now hopping from paper platform to paper platform swinging her keyblade at the increasingly frustrated centaur-she snuck over to Cheerilee. "So, you're not looking that well."

"Oh, don't you worry about me," Cheerilee reassured with a wince. "A little death and I'll be just fine."

"Sorry, but we have a parent-teacher conference this week, and I'm not willing to put it off a loop. Hold on-" Derpy turned sideways and concentrated for a few seconds.

"Dinky made it out alright?" Cheerilee asked. "I saw her hiding behind a table-Fsssscccc!"

"She and Ruby are with Lyra. That mare's good with kids." The bubbles in Derpy's flank suddenly rolled upward, gaining irises and pupils which began to rotate as they peered at the fallen teacher. "Ah... hmm. Ah, that would do it."

"What... what are you doing?"

"Hindsight with X-Ray vision," the pegasus explained simply. "You've got a couple of broken ribs, you've pulled a shoulder muscle, your magic is running over time to patch the damage, and your barrel's covered with second degree burns."

"...Derpy, you are a mare of many talents," Cheerilee muttered. "This one is incredibly creepy."

"To be fair, I could have just used my normal eyes, but more eyes means more accuracy." Closing the eyes in her rump again, Derpy leaned down. "I can't do much about the muscle, but I can heal the burns and then set the bone."

"Heal the burns? Oh, sweet oak, you're talking about-!"

The pegasus started running her tongue over Cheerilee's barrel.

"OH ICK! Aggh-gaaargh, auugh, not there I'm ti-hi-hi-hickilish there-!"

* * *

>"Now stay out here where it's safe, you two." Lyra grabbed Dinky and Ruby off her back, placing them on the ground. "I need to go back in and make sure everypony makes it out safe."

"But miss Lyra-!"

"Ut ut ut! Bonbon can look after you, she's great with kids."

"WHAT?!" cried a cream mare with dual-toned mane. "I am not!"

"Well now's as good a time as any to learn. Just think of them as two little mes!" And with that, Lyra galloped back into the town hall.

Bonbon paled, meeting the eyes of the nervous fillies with a weak chuckle. "So, um... how about we hide at my candy store while this blows over?"

Ruby glanced back at the building. "I... I think we should go to my house, so my mom can find me if she..." Her voice trailed off.

"...yeah, um. I'm pretty sure she's going to be fine." Bonbon awkwardly patted Ruby's head. "Lyra probably knows what she's doing in there."

* * *

>Do we have any idea what we're doing?

Seapony shrugged. _Nah, human, we're just winging this._

_Okay, just checking._

Unicorn Lyra temporarily took control of the eyes, looking around the room. _Okay, I see Sunset and Ivory fighting Tirek, Derpy is licking Cheerilee for some reason-_

_Healing spit,_ Miscellaneous chimed in. _Remember that Middle Earth loop?_

_Oh yeah, that's right! Smaug drop kicked that steward guy, I remember now-_

_You know, I'm not the one usually doing this, but __**focus people!**_

_Good call, Sweet Roll. Oh, and there's Vinyl, trying to convince... oh no, it's the flower trio and a few dozen panicking ponies._

Unicorn Lyra sighed, trotting over. "Hey, Vinyl, what's the sitch?"

"WE'RE ALL GOING TO DIE!" Roseluck cried at the top of her lungs. "HORRIBLE SCREAMING DEATHS OF FIERY PAIN AND AGONY!"

"There's a big double door across the room!" Vinyl protested. "And Derpy knocked a hole in the wall _right there!_"

"THE TOWN HALL IS COLLAPSING!" Daisy yelled.

"IT'S GOING TO FALL ON OUR BURNING BODIES!" Lilly added.

"HORRIBLE AGONIZING BURNING SPLINTERY DEATHS IN A COLLAPSED TOWN HALL!" Roseluck screamed.

"Dammit, why are ponies so skittish?!" Vinyl turned to Lyra. "I can't seem to corral this lot at all-"

Sunset suddenly slammed into the ground next to them, releasing a little groan. "Okay, so my mega attack just pisses him off... I'm taking five." She waved her keyblade in the air with a weak cheer. "Go mayor, kick his flank...!"

"OH SWEET CELESTIA HE KILLED... uh... WHOEVER THAT IS!"

Lyra pushed Vinyl to the side. "Right, let me handle this. PONIES! LEND ME YOUR EARS!"

"WE'RE DOOOOOMED!"

Lyra rolled her eyes. "Yeah, no. See, this is all just a floor show."

"I'M TOO YOUNG TO wait what." Roseluck gave Lyra an incredulous look. Vinyl was giving her an equally unbelieving expression, but it was thankfully hidden behind her tinted glasses.

_Human, what was that about?_

_Had to get their attention. Um, I don't know where to go with this-_

_Let me._ "See, Celestia wanted to do something to honor the mayor, cause she's worked her flank off with organizing all this, but she didn't feel something like just giving her a ribbon would be enough."

_Good story, Unicorn._

"But the wall-" Roseluck protested.

"This old building was on its last legs anyway," Lyra explained casually. "The mayor figured a little 'destruction' would just help get the paperwork through quicker, bribed the performers."

"But there's only one centaur up there-"

"What, you think he's responsible for the lightshow?"

"And the mayor _just turned into an alicorn-!_"

"All politicians can do that," Lyra interjected quickly.

_Sweet Roll!_

"They usually don't because the bills pile up," she continued. "You know, a few thousand years of groceries, plus the whole fine on using cosmic forces-It all adds up."

"But Celestia-!"

"Tenure."

"What?"

"She has tenure."

"How does that make any sense?!"

"Look, what makes more sense: A magical centaur nopony but a DJ's ever heard of kidnaps the princess and starts tearing down the town hall while the mayor makes paper missiles and ascends into an alicorn, or this is all just one big staged performance by a really bored Celestia?"

Roseluck opened her mouth to speak-

"Huh." Lilly glanced at Tirek. "You know, for a performer, that centaur seems to not care for keeping his audience safe."

"He's drunk," Lyra replied. "We're holding an intervention. It'll be a bit personal, though, so it would be best if the bare minimum of ponies were here." She waved at the hole in the wall. "Would you all kindly file out? Single file, please, no pushing or shoving."

Daisy shrugged. "Yeah, alright. Come on, ponies, show's over." Over the baffled half protests of Roseluck, the crowd of ponies calmly walked through the hole in the wall; a number of them complained over frighteningly hyperrealistic magic effects.

"You can't honestly believe the nonsense this mare is spouting out! That, that, that's a big red centaur and our mayor is an alicorn and there's paper everywhere and-"

"Roseluck?" Lyra put a hoof on her shoulder. "Go home."

"BUT-YOU-THIS IS-!"

"Home. _Now._"

Roseluck stared at her for a moment. Then she huffed, spun around, and stormed out the door. "Why am _I_ the only sane pony in this town...?"

As the last non-looper exited the building, Sunset Shimmer pulled herself up and gave Lyra a dazed look. "I was kinda out of it for that, but... did you just do what I think you did?"

"If what you think she did was lie through her teeth and convince a panicked Ponyville populace that this was actually a floor show, then yeah, she just did that." Vinyl shrugged. "You know, I didn't think that would work."

Lyra shrugged. "Luna Lovegood once gave me a good piece of advice: 'if you can't lead them with logic, baffle them with bullshit.' That's all I was doing."

"Baffle them with..." Sunset's eyes snapped wide. "Jiminey Cricket! Lyra, you're a genius!"

"Part of me is," Lyra allowed with a confused look.

Vinyl quirked an eyebrow. "...'Jiminey Cricket'?"

"...My first loop was Kingdom Hearts."

"...Still. Jiminey Cricket?"

"...oh shut up."

Vinyl put up her hooves. Lyra snickered.

Sunset rolled her eyes and jumped forward. "TIREK!" she shouted, pointing her keyblade dramatically. "Your reign of terror is at an end!"

The centaur laughed, backhanding Ivory as she tried to strike him from behind. "Brave words from a _foolish _pony. You CANNOT **HOPE **to stand against my _**POWER**_!"

"That's where you're wrong!" the unicorn replied, sweeping her keyblade around in a grand gesture. "For we have the very _power_ that defeated you so long ago! The Elements of Harmony stand ready!"

"Hah! A great fool you are! There are no elements here!"

"Oh really?"

With a dramatic twirl, Sunset pointed her blade. "Vinyl Scratch, who blurred the whole truth to all of Ponyville, represents the spirit of... Honesty!"

"Wait, is this what we're doing?" Vinyl asked. "I'm not saying no, but... hey, where's my shiny gem thing?"

"Ivory Scroll!" Sunset continued without pause, swinging her keyblade around. "Who dropped everything to protect the citizens of her fair town, represents the spirit of... Loyalty!"

"Huh. I suppose taking Tirek one on one is rather like miss Dash-"

There was a sudden splintering sound as a stone globe crashed through the wall and clonked Vinyl on the head. "OW! Hey!"

"Cheerilee! Who dove in front of a beam of fire to save the foals around her, represents the spirit of... Generosity!"

"I'm alright now," Cheerilee added as the mayor casually caught the second stone globe coming through the wall. "Just in case anypony was wondering."

"Derpy Hooves! Who showed concern for the terrified foals and assured their safety before tending to a wounded pony, represents the spirit of... Kindness!"

"Wait, both of those were kind acts!" Derpy protested as she dodged the orb rushing toward Cheerilee. "It's not like I could have done both at-dang it, I could have cloned myself couldn't I?"

"Lyra Heartstrings! Who calmed down a crowd of panicked ponies by weaving an incredibly ludicrous and unbelievable story, represents the spirit of... Laughter!"

"BOOYAH! Oh hush up Sweet Roll, don't take all the credit." Lyra rolled her eyes as Derpy caught the fourth orb flying through the wall, but there was still a big smirk on her face.

"Your speech matters little in the long scheme of things!" boomed Tirek imperiously. "You only have access to four of the-"

Another splintering sound resounded through the hall, and Lyra jumped in the air to snatch her own orb.

"...five of the six Elements!" The centaur scoffed, gathering power between his hands. "And NOW you ALL shall **PERISH!**"

"You forget, Tirek, there is a legend!" Sunset raised her keyblade skyward. "'When the five elements are gathered, a spark shall make the sixth appear!' That spark is the spark between us all, the spark of camaraderie, of mutual respect and care, of glorious accord! It is the spark of friendship, and today, this friendship shall summon the final and most elusive element of harmony: MAGIC!"

A great light poured out of each of the five stone orbs, wrapping around the ponies holding them and causing them to glow with blinding power. Tirek shielded his gaze as a beam suddenly shot from each of them, converging on the tip of the keyblade that Sunset held aloft and spiraling down to the pony herself. She shut her own eyes as the essence of harmony flowed through her; when she opened them again, they were shining white. Sparks danced between her ears and around the necks of the other five, taking shape for the briefest of instants-

Six streams of colors flew up, twining round and round in the air until they formed a glorious rainbow. Tirek cried with rage as it wrapped around him, but soon enough the sound was overcome with the explosive hum of Harmony.

"Whoa. What a trip!" Vinyl swung her mane around, glancing at the orange eighth notes hanging from her neck. "I can see why Twigang likes these baubles. Wait, aren't we all supposed to be unconscious?"

Lyra shrugged helplessly. "Don't ask me, I don't pay attention to how these things work." She looked at her own torc and rose an eyebrow. "Huh. I was wondering how my Mark would look as a gem. I mean with the strings and all, it's not very solid-"

"Solidness isn't a mandatory aspect of the Harmony Gems." Derpy gestured to the pink bubbles wrapped around her neck. "But yeah, that is some impressive gemcrafting. Kindness, huh? I guess I can see it..."

"Did you really have to lick my flanks?" Cheerilee grumbled, absentmindedly rubbing the purple bloom resting on her chest. "I'm pretty sure you have some other form of healing spell."

Ivory Scroll sighed, letting her wings and horn disappear with a flash. "I have a red scroll around my neck, how long until I become known for Faustian bargains? Still, I suppose this was a good idea."

"Indeed it was." With a melodramatic flash, Celestia appeared in the middle of the town hall. "It is good to see that you..."

She paused, staring at the gathered ponies.

"...Ah... pardon my rudeness, but where is Twilight Sparkle-?"

"I'm a Magic bearer."

Celestia's eyes widened as they fell on the yellow unicorn sitting stunned in the middle of the town hall. "Sunset? Is... is that you?"

"I... I'm a Magic bearer." The unicorn rose a hoof to the tiara on her head, nervously removing it. "I... I have the Element of Magic..."

"Oh... Oh my, Sunset, I..." Celestia stepped forward. "I haven't seen you in so long. I-"

"Magic," Sunset continued, ignoring her. "I... this... if, I shouldn't have, it, not worthy, she should-"

Derpy rolled her eyes, walked up to the hyperventilating unicorn, and slapped her.

Sunset blinked in shock for a few seconds, before taking a deep breath. "...I needed that. Thanks." She turned to Celestia and cleared her throat. "Oh, uh... hi."

"...Hello." Celestia twitched a wing awkwardly. "Sunset, I... I just want to say I'm-"

"Sorry, right now I'm going through a lot of emotions. Can we reconnect later?" Sunset gestured to the stage. "I'm sure that Tirek needs you more than me right now..."

Celestia blinked. "Right. I... suppose I should talk to my husband-"

"Right, we've hit too much information." Lyra stood up, brushing her chest off. "Everypony, Looper cool-off party at Vinyl's place."

"What?! Why my place?"

"You've got records, and likely booze." The mint unicorn tapped Sunset on the head. "Besides, we need to work together to get this mare straightened out before she panic attacks Ponyville into oblivion."

"I'm not panic attacking," Sunset said, annoyed. "I'm having an existential crisis."

Ivory Scroll rolled her eyes. "Be that as it may, I need to file a lot of paperwork for this... mess. And I suppose explain things to Celestia..." She glanced behind her. "After she's done making out with Tirek."

"Why don't you unicorns go set things up? Me and Derpy should head out and check on the foals." Cheerilee started trotting for the hole in the wall.

Derpy nodded, flying out after her. "We should probably go find Twilight as well. If she's not Awake, she could be halfway to the Everfree by now..."

* * *

>Vinyl flicked on the lights of her front room, leading Sunset in with a gentle hoof. "Lyra, could you go to the basement and tell Octavia that Nyx is dating Leman Russ? It's a codephrase."

"Yeah, alright." Lyra walked in, looked around for a couple of seconds, then awkwardly rose her hoof. "So... where is the basement?"

"Through the kitchen there, it's the trapdoor in the pantry."

The mint unicorn saluted, walking briskly in the indicated direction. Vinyl pushed Sunset onto the couch, sitting down next to her and adjusting her shades. "How're you feeling, filly?"

For a moment, Sunset was silent. The crown between her forehooves tilted, its sun-shaped gem catching the light and refracting patterns on her face.

"...This... this shouldn't have happened." She put the jewelry down. "We should have spotted this was a variant, even without Twilight. And we're loopers, we should have been able to take on even a variant Tirek without using the elements. But I, I had a stupid idea, and I jumped on it."

"And it worked." Vinyl picked the crown up. "Look, I'm not going to lie, I don't fully understand how these thingies are supposed to function, but... they run on friendship, right? They wouldn't have worked if we really hadn't considered each other friends. You didn't manipulate us into doing the things you said we did. What happened happened, and we're all better for it."

"Better?" Sunset let out a weak chuckle. "Stronger, maybe. But better? I just robbed this Twilight of her destiny."

Lyra walked back in, leading a confused gaggle of ponies through the room. "So it's all over now, just head on out and go check on your homes. Miss Cheerilee should be bringing foals along if any of you are missing them-" Her eyes fell on the two other unicorns. "Um, Octavia, could you make sure everypony heads out? I think I need to..." She waved at Sunset vaguely.

The gray mare glanced over, her eyes widening. "Oh. Is this a... _thing?_"

"This is a _thing,_ yes."

"Alright. Ahem, just keep moving, everypony!" Octavia beamed nervously, making regular gestures with her hoof. "Nothing to see here, just move along..."

Lyra rolled her eyes, walking over to her fellow unicorns. "So what's up?"

"Sunset's depressed 'cause she thinks she stole Twilight's destiny," Vinyl reported.

"PFFFFFFT-"

Lyra barely managed to hold back a snicker as Sunset glared at her.

"Stole her destiny? Sunset, just because we get magical tramp-stamps doesn't mean our destiny is set in stone! So yeah, Celestia was trying to work Twilight into being, well, the proto-princess from baseline, but that doesn't mean she's going to just drop dead if things take a different turn. Heck, you might have just freed her from a heck of a lot of stress! And if you're really that worried, just take her under your wing. Trust me, Twilight will be fine."

"I guess..." Sunset rolled over, resting her chin on the couch's arm. "I mean, I know we can work overtime to keep her from going into a downward spiral, that's our duty as loopers, but... if it were just that, I could put it all aside."

As the last of the ponies exited, Octavia made a move to shut the door. However, a pegasus of a slightly lighter shade of gray managed to glide in just before it clicked shut. "Okay, I got Twilight and the others out of the Everfree. They're Celestia's problem now." She paused, glancing around. "Um, Octavia? Between you and me, this celebration party seems to be kinda low-key."

"From what I can gather, miss Shimmer is having a crisis of conscience because of her being..." Octavia frowned. "...Excuse me if this is an odd-sounding question, but, ah, are you feeling, well, _loopy?_"

"Yes, Octavia, I'm a looper. And so are Cheerilee and the mayor."

"Right. Just checking..."

Derpy trotted over to the trio of unicorns, frowning as she saw the expression on Sunset's face. "Oooooooh, I know that look. That's the look Dinky gets when she's forced to do something she doesn't like. Is this about the element of magic?"

Sunset rolled her eyes. "Oh gee, is it that obvious?"

That got a chuckle out of the pegasus. "You sound just like my little Sparkler sometimes... Sunset, you should know better than anyone that nopony is going to force you to use that thing. And more importantly, you should realize that just because you had a bad history of handling power before, it doesn't mean it'll harm you now. You've learned from your mistakes, become somepony so much better than you were... you're not just a teenager anymore." Derpy giggled again. "No matter how much you sound like it."

"Hey, I Wake Up as a high school rebel most of the time. You're lucky I'm not boycrazy." A brief smirk flickered on the yellow unicorn's face, but the frown quickly returned. "Yeah... high school rebel. Saboteur of relationships. That's me..."

Octavia was standing awkwardly off to the side, watching the group and rubbing one of her legs, when there was a knock on the door. She turned and opened the door quickly, just managing to dodge as a unicorn foal ran past her. "What in the-?"

"Sorry about that." Cheerilee gave her an apologetic smile. "I just thought after all the foals had been returned, it would be good to get Dinky to her mother ASAP. She was so worried-" The mare giggled as the foal brought her mother down with a running tacklehug. "I hope you don't mind that I brought her here."

"Well, no, this is Vinyl's house," Octavia replied. "I just pay the rent," she added under her breath.

"What was that?"

"Ah, I assume you want to help with miss Shimmer's self-confidence issues? That seems to be what all you 'Loopers' are doing."

"Oh, dear, is she still on about that?" Cheerilee frowned, walking over the couch.

"I'll just stand here, I suppose. Serving as a doorpony." The gray mare shut the front door. "Since that's such a good use of my skills."

Sunset glanced over at Dinky and Derpy play-wrestling on the floor. "Huh. Well, those two seem pretty happy."

"Mmmhmm," Cheerilee agreed. "While we were coming over, Dinky asked who was brave enough to help take on Tirek, and I mentioned that you were the new bearer of Magic. Do you know what she said? She said you had to have a heart almost as big as her mother's. Risking your life to save everypony in Equestria... well, I don't know about you, but she thinks that anypony who would do that has the soul of a true hero."

"Really?" The unicorn smiled faintly. "She said that?"

"Mmmhmm. From the mouth of babes, as the saying goes."

Octavia frowned as another knock came from the door, opening it quickly. "Let me guess: another looper?"

Ivory Scroll smiled at her. "The last one, it looks like. Well, aside from our guest anchor, but she shouldn't be around for another few weeks."

"I see. Well, do come in, make yourself at home I suppose--"

"Don't worry, miss Octavia. I will personally ensure that the shenanigans are kept to a minimum." The mayor gave her a reassuring pat on the shoulder as she strode into the home. "Everypony, I've explained the situation to Celestia and she has agreed to handle damage control for the day. I also explained that while Sunset Shimmer is eager to reconnect with her, we... would insist on waiting until tomorrow at the very least."

Sunset lifted her head up. "We?"

"But of course. After all, it was obvious how much your... actions were weighing on you. What kind of friends would we be to make you go to her alone?" Ivory adjusted her glasses. "But for today, let us all simply relax and enjoy each other's presence."

"Good call!" Vinyl cried, standing up and walking over to Octavia. "First order of business, though: My mare is feeling neglected because of all the looper shenanigans so I'm going to take her to the bedroom for a little private time and reassurance."

"V-Vinyl!" The mare blushed brightly. "I'm not-well, I mean I might be a little, but-You didn't have to blurt it out!"

"Element of Honesty, babe, it's just how I roll. Help yourselves to the kitchen!" With that, the DJ dragged the cellist up the stairs.

Dinky frowned. "What did she mean by 'private time'?"

Cheerilee and Derpy both facehooved, the pegasus letting out a little groan as Lyra burst out laughing. The mayor rolled her eyes. "I'll go whip something up for us to eat. You lot explain all this to the filly."

Sunset smiled at the antics around her briefly, before examining the crown she was still holding between her hooves. For a moment, she considered the gem with a deep frown.

Then, she lifted it back on her head.

The fit... was actually... rather nice, come to think of it.

* * *

>153.2 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

**Big Mac On Campus****

Big Mac had had more than his share of unusual beginnings to a Loop, ranging anywhere from the time he died saving a boy from a car right after Awakening to the time he caught a pet tiger using a tuna fish sandwich, and quite a bit in between. (For some reason he had a tendency to Replace the local Anchor whenever he Looped somewhere new, and judging by what little of his surroundings he saw he doubted he was in Equestria.) However he was pretty sure this was the first time he had Woken Up a half second before being run over by a girl on a bicycle. Sitting up he barely took the time to notice that he was a human this go around before he moved to help his accidental assailant.

"Are y'all alright?"

"Owww... I'm sorry. I didn't mean to crash into you like that, but I was feeling dizzy. I have anemia so sometimes I get a little lightheaded." the pink haired girl stated as she looked up at Macintosh, who immediately recognized her, with an embarrassed blush.

"Are ya feeling a bit Loopy Miss...?" he questioned leadingly, not taking any chances.

"Oh, I'm sorry! My name is Fluttershy Akashiya. It's nice to meet you. I feel much better now." she said with a small bow. Straightening, she averted her eyes from his gaze only for them to widen suddenly.

"Ah! Your cheek, you're bleeding!"

Pulling out a small handkerchief she moved to clean the small cut, before seeming to go into a daze.

"Oh, the scent of blood. I...I...can't - I lose control when I smell that scent. I'm sorry. I can't help it, because I'm a Vampire."

Before Big Mac could even attempt to process that, the Unawake human version of his friend had closed the distance between them and using surprising strength pulled him in close and bit at his neck. He stiffened, but didn't push her away. His Loop memories didn't say anything about Vampires being a common thing in this Loop, but he had dealt with partial pictures before. Whether he was going to turn himself was uncertain, he wasn't sure how Vampirism worked here, but either way it was too late to do anything now and Unawake or not he refused to hurt his friends. Besides it didn't actually hurt all that much, he wasn't the type to overreact to something like this.

Once she had finished her macabre snack, Fluttershy pulled back with a sigh. "Oh thank you, your blood was very tasty. I know I don't really look like it, but I'm actually a Vampire. I hope you don't hate me."

Mac nodded his understanding, the previous events and her words beforehand had made that perfectly clear.

"Its fine."

"Thank you so much, you don't know how much that means to me. I was feeling lonely since I don't know anyone here, but now I feel so much better. If you're willing I'd like to be friends."

Well that was simple enough.

"Ah'd like that Miss Fluttershy."

* * *

>Halfway around the world Twilight Sparkle Woke Up. Taking a quick peek into her Loop memories, she quickly summed up the main points. She was now, and always had been, human. She was a student at Canterlot High. She was apparently taking Fluttershy's place in their group of friends, the pink haired girl and her family having moved somewhere far away almost a decade beforehand. Applejack and the Apple family were also gone, having left only a few years later. AJ's place in the group had been filled by Sunset, who had apparently Awoken shortly after exiting the Mirror and had thus managed to avoid hurting anyone.

"Huh. This is different."

"It's a good different though, or at least mostly." Realizing she had been in the middle of a conversation with Sunset, Twilight nodded.

"True, and wherever they are Fluttershy and Applejack are able to take care of themselves. So, do you have any new plans to try and redeem Sonata this Loop?"

Sunset grinned.

* * *

>Shortly after reaching the campus which had been their destination the pair had been forced to part ways, Mac heading to his homeroom while Fluttershy went to speak with the Headmaster. Currently Mac was taking a look around the classroom where he was seated. To his surprise he actually recognized two people with him. The first was a human version of Blueblood, currently reclining arrogantly in his chair looking for all the world as if everyone around him was beneath his notice. In other words, exactly the same as usual. The second was standing in front of the class giving a speech. Not unexpected considering she was the instructor.

"Hello everyone, and welcome to Youkai Academy. I am your homeroom teacher Cheerilee Nekonome. I'm sure you all are already aware of this, but this is a school for monsters."

Mac perked up at this. Explanations were always good to have whenever certain things didn't match up with in-Loop memories, and the existence of Vampires definitely counted.

"As of now, the world is under control of the humans. In order for us monsters to continue to survive we have no choice but to continue to live alongside them. Therefore at this Academy, you will be studying 'How to coexist with humans.'" the energetic teacher emphasized this by pointing dramatically to a large, if poorly drawn, diagram which took up the majority of the blackboard.

"For that reason, school rule number one is that all students must maintain their human disguises at all times except for in extreme circumstances. School rule number two is no student must ever tell another what their true form is for any reason. Do you all understand?"

"Feh, Such ridiculous rules. Hey Teacher, wouldn't it be simpler to just eat any humans we found. That's what I would do."

Cheerilee frowned and took a look at the seating chart. "You are...Blueblood Kamiya correct? Well there's no chance of that happening, because everyone here both teacher and student are monsters. No exceptions. This school is sealed within a powerful barrier, if any humans did manage to find their way inside... they'd be killed on the spot. Or something."

...Well shoot. That complicated things. According to his memories he was completely human, so how did he even end up in a school like this anyway? Taking a harder look at his memories he soon found the answer. It looked like this was actually a fused Loop, and not a different one entirely like he had thought. His family had moved around a lot over the years and as a result his education had suffered. Therefore after they had settled in Japan he had had difficulty getting into a local high school. His father, and it was always nice to have a chance to see him and his mother again, had found a flyer advertising the Youkai Academy and before he knew it he had been on the bus.

Somehow Discord had managed to be weirder as a bus driver than as the Spirit of Chaos.

Any further thought on the issue was cut off by the sound of the door sliding open. Standing in the entrance was the familiar figure of Fluttershy, her bag held in front of her as she gave an apologetic bow.

"I'm sorry I'm late. I got a bit lost after the Entrance Ceremony."

Cheerilee waved off the pinkette's apology with a smile. "Oh its no problem. Come up and introduce yourself."

Big Mac watched as Fluttershy moved to stand in front of the class, and gave her introduction. He could have done without the whispered muttering which followed however. Yes she was attractive, he would have had to be blind not to see that and more stubborn than Applejack not to admit it, but even so the class was behaving as if they had never seen a pretty girl before. Of course as the only calm person in the room he stood out from the crowd and as a result was easily noticed by Fluttershy from where she was standing. Big Mac was quickly reminded of the fact that however much she looked like her, this was not the person he had known for thousands of Loops as she all but flew across the room and grabbed him in a flying hug. Much to the dismay of his classmates.

* * *

>There was always something just plain uncomfortable about Waking Up in a relationship with one of his friends, and it was rarely a simple effort to explain the situation in a way where there were no hard feelings. Walking down the hallways with a Vampire version of Fluttershy pulling him along beside her while clinging onto his arm was quickly bringing up the same awkward sensation and the resulting death glares from the surrounding students didn't help the issue. Nor did the fact that technically he was a completely average human in a school of monsters.

Although he could always take care of any problematic situations that came up using the few abilities he had kept from other Loops, he preferred to leave that as a last resort and rely on in-Loop abilities unless provoked. Which, again, left him at the tender mercies of a hostile student body. A fact of which he was keenly aware, especially as he felt a spike of Killing Intent just as Blueblood stepped into their path.

"You are Fluttershy Akashiya correct?"

Without bothering to wait for an answer, Big Mac abruptly found himself dangling a foot off the ground by his lapel. Immediately he forced himself to push down the surge of green which made to overtake his sight, although he did allow himself to grip his attackers wrist hard enough to draw Blueblood's attention. He responded by throwing him down the hallway into a nearby vending machine.

"Please enlighten me as to why a Lady of such beauty as yourself would associate herself with a person like this."

"Macintosh!"

Fluttershy attempted to rush over to Mac's aid, but was pulled up short by Blueblood's grip upon her shoulder.

"Wouldn't someone like myself be a far more superior option than a weakling like this. Why don't you and I go somewhere and get to know one another a little better."

This suggestion was made with a sleazy grin, which Fluttershy luckily remained unaware of due to her focus on where Mac was getting to his feet. For his part, Mac was trying to decide whether he might actually need to utilize some of his abilities. Blueblood's strike was unfortunately similar to some of the attacks he had had to deal with as the Hulk, and if Narrative Causality had taught him anything it was that the first enemy was always the weakest. Which meant if things continued to escalate, he might find himself running out of other options sooner rather than later.

Unaware of her Looping friends thoughts Fluttershy, as politely as possible of course, brushed aside Blueblood's hand and rushed to Mac's side; grabbing his arm and pulling him behind her as she fled.

"No thank you. I'm sorry, but I'm having fun with Macintosh." she called back over her shoulder as she ran, not bothering to look back as she did so. As a result she completely missed the white knuckled fist Blueblood made as she so easily ignored him, as well as the dark look on his face which promised ill things to come.

* * *

>After their impromptu race through the halls the duo found themselves recovering on the roof of the Academy. In the distance the moon shone out over the cemetery and the red ocean waters, while overhead the sun beamed down brightly allowing them to take in the full sight of the school grounds. While the view wasn't exactly the most interesting to Big Mac, Fluttershy appeared to enjoy it;

monsters apparently had odd ideas of what a pleasant environment was supposed to look like.

"That was scary, are you sure you're alright Macintosh?" Fluttershy said, flittering worriedly around him as she checked for injuries.

"Ah'm fine, just a bump on th' head. An' Ah told ya, Ah'd prefer ya ta call me Big Mac."

"Oh, I forgot." she punctuated this by tapping her fist gently against her head with a sheepish smile. "I was just so worried. Blueblood hit you really hard."

"It's fine, nothin' ah ain't dealt with before." Mac denied. "So that's th' power of a monster here huh?"

Fluttershy giggled and patted Big Mac on the back playfully.

"You're silly Big Mac. You act as if this is your first time seeing a monster."

Mac chuckled ruefully from his new position on the ground. '_Not even close. An Ah definitely need to brush off some a mah Loop skills.'_

Standing up and dusting off his uniform Mac turned to face Fluttershy who gave him a blinding smile.

"Let's keep having fun. We should check out the rest of the Academy."

Big Mac nodded agreement and the two headed off. Not long after, having explored the rest of the campus they found themselves in front of a large decaying property which looked as if it was ready to be torn down.

"This is the dormitory where we'll be staying. Isn't it wonderful, such a dignified building; so full of character. It's perfect for us monsters."

Taking another look at their apparent home for the next several years, or however long the Loop typically lasted, Mac gave a deadpan stare. Again, monsters' taste in architecture was odd. That aside, after looking closer he could see that despite outward appearances it did seem to be rather sturdy; and from what he could see through the windows the inside looked more normal than the entrance would suggest. Still, disregarding the housing situation for now, something else was bothering him.

"About that, ya'll look perfectly normal ta me. Ya don't really seem like a monster, an I don't feel comfortable calling ya one."

Fluttershy smiled and gestured to a small Rosary hanging around her neck, and uncomfortably close to her cleavage for Mac who quickly averted his gaze.

"Only right now. I know I don't look like a Vampire, but that's all because of this Rosary. If I remove it though, then I take on my true form, a super scary Vampire. My real self caused me to be all alone, so that's why I wear this protective seal. Normally Vampires are hated and feared, so I've never had any friends before I met you."

Mac frowned.

"That don't seem very fair, yer a real nice gal an ya shouldn't have ta hide who ya are to fit in. Don't ya worry none, Ah promise ya I won't ever hate ya and Ah ain't afraid of ya neither."

Fluttershy's eyes widened, tears gathering in the corners, before Big Mac suddenly found himself on the ground again; pinned by the happy pinkette as she stared gratefully down at him.

"Thank you so much, I know we'll be best friends forever."

Mac just blushed brightly as he took in his situation. A cold shower would have been nice right about then, especially as the gaze of the young woman above him grew unfocused and she began to draw closer.

"You know, until today I've never had fresh blood before. I always had to drink from transfusion packs. You're my first. I'll never forget that, the taste, the sensation..."

"Wait, wha?"

Before Mac knew what was happening, Fluttershy had already bitten him again.

* * *

>The next day Mac headed out early so that he could take a look around the campus. Despite the appearance of the Dormitories, the rest of the school looked rather normal. Ignoring the nearby cemetery and nearly dead trees of course. Some of the other students, his classmates he supposed, were also moving about the pathway and Mac was able to overhear some of their conversations. Nothing overly abnormal stood out in most of them, although he made a mental note to avoid the Biology Club in the future.

Walking towards the school as the traffic began to pick up he saw an unfortunately familiar figure leaning on a nearby tree. His attempt to ignore Blueblood was unfortunately unsuccessfully as the Loop's version of the stuck up noble grabbed him by the shoulder.

"Hold on there Casanova. You had a lot of fun yesterday with Fluttershy Akashiya..." he stated arrogantly, before grabbing Mac by the coat and slamming him against a nearby wall. "And you're going to pay for it today."

Mac once again felt a rush of energy surge into his body, accompanied by a primal roaring in his ears, however eons of experience allowed him to control how much of the power he allowed himself to tap into and he simply gripped Blueblood's wrist tightly. Blueblood hissed as the bones in his arms began to bend under the force being applied, and slammed Mac harder into the tree.

"You're not as pathetic as I had thought. Your true form, what is it?!"

"Ah'm human." Mac replied tersely, not willing to lie. Having the Element of Honesty as his little sister probably had something to do with that. However his efforts to control his inner beast added a bit of edge to his normally laid-back tone as he tightened his grip, and Blueblood bones audibly groaned under the pressure. Blueblood grimaced before throwing him to the side.

"Bullshit! No pathetic human could be that strong. Don't screw around with me!" he roared as his fist bulged hideously and he slammed it into the wall, demolishing it. Mac stared back unaffected by the casual destruction; He had seen and done far worse.

"Tch. Whatever. Don't go near Fluttershy again. If you even talk to her, you're dead."

Watching as Blueblood left, massaging his arm, Mac sighed. Around him the remaining students avoided his gaze and quickly moved on, obviously not believing his words any more than Blueblood had.

Standing to his feet Mac examined his uniform for damage, and seeing that other than being a little dirty it was still fine turned around to resume his interrupted exploration. Only to come face to face with a stunned Fluttershy, her hands held in front of her face as she stared in tearful disbelief.

"You can't be... you were just lying right? You can't be a human, you just can't!"

Unfortunately Mac's silence as he tried to come up with a way to explain without lying seemed to push her over the edge, and without another word she turned and fled.

"Ah, Fewmets."

* * *

>Fluttershy ran through the forest at the edge of the campus unseeing, her eyes blinded by tears as she recalled memories of isolation and bullying from the past.

_ 'No! No way! The first friend I ever had... I finally thought I had made a friend! But all along he was a human! It's not fair. It's not fair! Why?!'_

Collapsing against a tree she pulled her knees in close and wrapped her arms around them, as if to protect her from the painful memories as she sobbed.

_ 'I hate those humans! They were always so cruel, as if it were better that I had never existed.'_

Her mind replayed the harsh words and actions from the students at her previous schools. They had been so mean, calling her names because they didn't believe in monsters; making her into an outcast just because they thought she was weird.

Abruptly she paused as she remembered Big Mac's words from the previous day.

Macintosh was her friend. Her first and only friend. He had said that no matter what he didn't hate her. But when when he told her his own secret she had run away from him. She... she was a terrible friend. How could she just leave him like that? She wasn't any better than the humans from before.

So what if Big Mac was a human? He was her friend and that was all that really mattered. If he could accept her for being a Vampire than she would do the same. Wiping her eyes she stood determinedly. She had to go back. She had to make things right. Even if... even if Big Mac didn't forgive her she had to try.

However upon turning back to the school her way was blocked by a familiar blonde figure. "Well now, what a surprise. Why is such a beautiful woman like you all alone?"

Moving closer, casually invading her personal space without a thought, he grinned a twisted smile before grabbing her wrist and yanking her into his arms. "Why should you be alone, when you can be with someone like me?"

Fluttershy struggled against Blueblood's grasp, his breath far to close to her face and his arms holding her even closer against his chest. Her writhing managed to loosen one of her own arms and she pushed against him, trying to get away.

"Let me go! Please."

Blueblood laughed, a sickening mockery of a sound as he leaned in closer. "Truly your beauty is one of a kind. Far superior to any of those humans I've taken. I must have you as my own!"

"NO!"

Fluttershy lashed out, her nails gouging a trail down Blueblood's face and causing him to recoil. She quickly scrambled out of his reach. However instead of becoming angry Blueblood laughed even harder.

"Yes, perfect. That's just how I like my women. I can't help myself, when I get like this I can't hold back. I can't even hold my human form."

And indeed, giving truth to his words, he had begun to grow; his school uniform beginning to strain at the seams as his body swelled. His arms bulged grotesquely as they tore his shirt and jacket into tatters, while his shoes were reduced to scraps as he became too large for them to contain any longer.

Finally the transformation was complete and he stood tall, having shed the illusion of humanity and revealed his inner beast. He was easily ten feet in height and at least half that in width. Both of his arms were easily as large around as Fluttershy and were slightly longer, nearly reaching to the ground and topped with savage claws. His torso was packed with wiry cords of dense muscles and as well as bony protrusions.

Gone was the cultured appearance which he had done his best to maintain in class, replaced by a feral savagery. His teeth had come together into sharp points, clearly that of a carnivorous predator and his eyes had lost any semblance of civility which they had held, replaced by cold cruelty and inhumane hunger made all the worse by the intelligence guiding it. Worst of all however was his tongue, which had extended by more than a foot and moved in a manner which screamed of cruel intent.

In the span of a few moments Blueblood had become a horrific monster, his true self. Towering over Fluttershy's stunned form he grinned a bestial smile, filled with teeth and malice. "I'm going to enjoy removing that spirited attitude."

A small part of Fluttershy's mind identified Blueblood as an Orc, a half-breed monster with mixed heritage. The rest of her mind however was preoccupied with screaming in terror.

* * *

>Mac frowned as he moved through the underbrush, trying to follow the trail left by Fluttershy in her rush. Even if she wasn't the Fluttershy he knew, that didn't mean he wasn't still her friend. Friends never left each other when they were troubled and it didn't take Mac's experience as a bartender to tell that this version of Fluttershy was clearly troubled. Mac wasn't the type of pony, or human, to leave that be if it was something he could help.

"Dangit, where'd she run of ta?"

Of course, she could have made it easier. Any further musing however came to a screeching halt as the sound of a piercing scream echoed through the forest. A familiar scream.

"Right. Ferget this."

Reaching into his soul he found the barrier which held his inner beast at bay. Then he tore it open. Moments later the only thing in the area was a trail of shattered trees and upturned earth as a hulking creature tore through it's surroundings towards the source of the cry.

* * *

>Blueblood was having a wonderful time. By pure chance he had managed to come across the current target of his attention. Even better, they were completely alone with no one to hear her scream anywhere around. Grabbing the terrified woman by the arms he lifted her into the air, bringing her close to his face; his tongue caressing the side of her face in a warped parody of a lover's touch.

"What's the matter Fluttershy? Why don't you transform? Aren't you going to fight back?" he taunted.

Mustering her nerve Fluttershy gave him a glare. "It's against the rules to reveal your true form."

Blueblood threw his head back and laughed before returning his attention to his captured prize. "We're not in the school right now, their rules don't matter."

Fluttershy's eyes widened in fear as Blueblood's widely grinning face moved closer to her own and she began to struggle harder. Luckily for her before her captor could complete his action a large figure appeared out of the forest and struck him in the jaw, causing him to drop her as he stumbled under the blow.

Fluttershy stared up in numb horror as a second behemoth stood over her with fist outstretched.

* * *

>Upon reaching the clearing where he had heard Fluttershy's shout Mac tore through the surrounding trees. The first thing he saw was a figure which bore an eerily similar appearance to Abomination, from the Loop where he had first Replaced the person who's power's he was now using. Less than a second after that he recognized the person hanging from the figure's grip. The sight resulted in only one thought in Mac's mind, one which both halves of himself fully agreed upon.

_'Mac Smash.'_

Moments later he had crossed the distance and planted his fist firmly into the unknown enemy's face. Forcing himself to stay in control he turned to check on Fluttershy, and seeing that she appeared to be unharmed returned his focus to his recovering foe. Not that he was willing to give him time to do so.

"Wha th hll?"

That was all Blueblood was able to say around his sore jaw, before Mac charged him again with an uppercut. This was immediately followed by a hay-maker, before he grabbed him by the arm and slammed him into the ground. Not giving his opponent a second to get his bearings he grabbed him by the ankle and spinning around twice, launched him over the side of the hill toward the roadway.

Only once he had made sure his enemy was down, did he turn back to Fluttershy who flinched at his gaze. Breathing mildly heavy he approached her, frowning as she shied away.

"Are... ya'll... alright."

Mac was beginning to regret not spending more time actually practicing with his abilities, rather than just his control. Although it did make it easier to ignore the cries of his darker half to go finish what he had started.

"M-macintosh? But... but how? I thought you said you were human?"

Mac grimaced. "Long... story. Tell... later."

Reaching down he lifted Fluttershy from the ground, his current size allowing his hand to almost completely fit around her waist. Once on her feet, Fluttershy tentatively reached forward to place her hand on Mac's arm. Turning to stare into Mac's eyes, her own widened as she caught sight of something. At the same time Mac's senses yelled at him and he turned quickly to face the furious form of Blueblood as he charged him.

Reaching behind him without looking, Mac tried to move Fluttershy out of the way just as Blueblood came into range with roar. Two things happened then. Firstly Blueblood's fist came crashing into Mac's chest, pushing him off balance as he rolled with the attack. Secondly Mac's hand caught against the Rosary Fluttershy wore, and with an unheard clink, tore it off.

As Mac regained his footing, he was just in time to watch as Fluttershy was replaced by a more mature silver haired woman with fangs and crimson eyes. Eyes which were glaring death and bloody murder at Blueblood. With a wordless snarl she tore across the ground, closing the distance between her and her target almost faster than Mac could follow. Only his experience allowed him to watch the brutal beating which occurred, and even as fast as his power allowed him to move in the scant seconds which it took him to cross the area she had managed to deal an almost obscene amount of damage.

Placing himself between the barely breathing Blueblood and the murderous woman Mac held his ground, even as she stalked towards him. Coming to a stop directly in front of him, glaring up into his eyes she growled.

"Move."

Despite the seething hate put into the single command, Mac held firm. However he couldn't reason with the unknown woman as he was, and so even knowing the risk he forced back the raging tide of emerald fury within his mind. Soon he had once more returned to his Loop-normal self.

"Ya'll need ta calm down."

If anything Mac's words only served to increase the woman's anger, her eyes flashing.

"I don't know who you are, and right now I don't care. I have put up with this event more times than I can count, and I have long since had enough. This may not be the Saizo I know, but his actions are the same."

Mac frowned. If this was a baseline event for this person than he could understand why she might be more than a little upset. Even still. "That may be true, but if'n ya'll keep try'n ta kill him Ah'll have to stop ya."

The woman smirked. "I have no intention of killing him. Death is too good for the likes of beasts like this and I would never soil my hands on someone so pathetic. Despite how it may appear, I can assure you that he will recover from his injuries."

Here she paused to glare at Blueblood. "However I have no intention of allowing him to walk away without a permanent reminder of his arrogance."

Mac's frown grew. One the one hand he wasn't sure it was a good idea to let this woman deal with Blueblood, however on the other hand his actions and intended actions were unforgivable. And if this was something that occurred every Loop for this woman than her anger was more than justified. In the end it was the thought of what he would do if someone like this were to ever try something like this against Applebloom that made up his mind.

"Ya'll give your word ya won't kill 'em?"

The woman nodded, and with a grimace Mac stood aside. The native Looper strode over to stand over the surprisingly recovered Blueblood with a cold look.

"You who thought he could take by force that which belongs to only one man."

Lifting her leg high into the air she slammed it down hard. Mac winced and subconsciously crossed his legs as Blueblood's eyes shot open and he release a high-pitched scream which lingered throughout the area for several seconds.

Tossing her hair behind her neck elegantly, she turned away dismissively. "Know your place."

* * *

>Shortly afterwards the two exited the woods, neither having spoken during their trip. Only once they had left the treeline did the still unknown woman turn to face Mac with a considering gaze. "Since Tsukune isn't here I'm assuming that you're also a 'Looper' then."

Mac nodded in response.

"I see. My name is Moka Akashiya. I'll admit that this is still new to me, knowing that others are dealing with this as well. I was only recently informed of the nature of the Loops. Unfortunately I have not had an opportunity to speak with Tsukune yet and inform him of what I have learned as for the time being I appear to have been made into a Traveling Looper. Catching up for lost time I suppose."

Reaching into her Pocket she pulled out a small mirror. "I can only hold a few items at the moment, but this is by far one of the most useful. A variant of an item from the Baseline."

Moka turned her gaze to the mirror which released a flash of blinding light. When it cleared Mac was surprised to see the unconscious form of Fluttershy being cradled in Moka's arms. "She does bear a resemblance to my Outer self."

Standing without trouble, despite the sleeping girl in her arms Moka smirked. "Very well, if Tsukune will not be present in this Loop then I suppose I shall just have to make do. First things first, I believe we'll need to speak with the Headmaster about securing quarters for myself. Afterwards I would like to know more about what to expect from a more experienced Looper."

Mac just nodded agreeably as they walked back to the campus. If Moka was new to this, the least he could do was help her adjust. The last thing anyone needed was a misunderstanding like had happened with his own Awakening. Besides, this Loop didn't seem so bad. What was the worst that could happen?

Mac paused.

"Ah, Fewmets. Me an' mah big mouth."

* * *

>AN:

153.1: Somewhere, Twilight is hiding. Probably.

>153.2: Being schooled. (Big Human On Campus.)

161. Chapter 161

154.1 (wildrook)

"Pinkie, did you just make pancakes on Twilight's head?" Applejack asked her.

"She's cheaper than the stove," Pinkie said, smiling.

"Twenty bits says that you get a diamond two weeks after sticking a lump of coal up Twilight's..." Rainbow Dash started before getting cut off by a glare from the purple Alicorn in question. "Oh, you were listening?"

"You whispered that to me," Twilight said.

* * *

>154.2 (wildrook)

Lemon then looked at the green mass wearing the blue hat to Discord's Orange and cringed.

"Something the matter, Rush?" Discord asked him.

Lemon shook his head. "Nothing," he said. "I just find it odd that the Smooze is green instead of purple."

The Smooze gave him a look and just bubbled.

Discord just looked at Lemon and translated, "You're talking about his estranged cousin. He never talks about THAT one for good reason. It's just...depressing to the point where it isolated itself into a volcano."

That's when an explosion was felt through the airship wreckage, two Earth Ponies and an unconscious Daring Do nemesis were seen piled onto the ballroom floor.

"NOT AGAIN, GRANDDAD!" a voice yelled. "This is why we don't let you on anything that can fly!"

"Well, how ELSE was I supposed to get rid of an immortal demigod thingy?" another voice replied. "Seriously, Jotaro, it's not easy piloting a plane with no fingers and a Stand!"

Ahuizotl was seen in pain from the airship crash as two ponies were arguing about the results of the landing...much to the flabbergasted looks of the onlookers, especially Rainbow Dash and a certain brown Pegasus, the former poking the man.

"Joestars," Leman and Discord muttered.

"And we're nowhere NEAR an active volcano," Discord added.

* * *

>154.3 (Gamma Cavy)

Well this was odd. Twilight had been many things before, but a living set of repeating explosions was not one of them. She was a Twilight Magic, her loop memories reported, and Spike a living lighter, dearest companion of the small explosions of Explosiva. And they were ruled by Luna-tick, eternal fountain of stars, who stood proof against the dreaded Infernal Blaze, whose light made them pale and dwindle to nothing.

This wasn't quite the strangest variant, but it was the strangest one she'd seen since the one where Alicorns were living fusion reactors, and ponies silicon based lifeforms. And how was she seeing with only explosions for a body?

Wait, bigger question. _Was Trixie awake?_

* * *

>Some loops later.

"...And that is how Trixie got her medical license," the showmare finished proudly.

The other occupants of Mac's bar just stared.

* * *

>154.4 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Cheerilee walked into the bar, where Mac was cleaning glasses. "Hard cider, please."

"Bad loop?" Twilight asked from where she was sitting.

"I replaced you."

"Oh."

Cheerilee hung her head. "Being a unicorn made for an interesting loop. And learning from Princess Celestia was fun. Even having a different Element wasâ€| different. But near the endâ€| well, you know how you get when your tree gets destroyed?"

"Ye-esâ€| "

"Turns out I freaked out just as badly when my school got blown up. It was empty at the time, but stillâ€| arrrgh!" She snagged the glass from Mac, and took a drink.

Twilight nodded. "I'm sorry to hear that."

Cheerilee sighed as she continued to sip her cider. "At least I got a good picture out of it." She rummaged through her pocket and pulled one out. "Here."

Twilight's eyes widened as she saw Tirek completely wrapped in duct tape and being used as a pinata. "Wow."

Cheerilee blushed. "I couldn't help myself, I was just so mad!"

"I understand completely," Twilight said, placing a comforting hoof on her friend's.

* * *

154.5 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight looked up from her drink as a large group of looping ponies approached her.

Rainbow Dash spoke up first. "Er, Twilight, we... have to ask you something."

"It's somethin' that's been botherin' us since that expansion with the yaks, and..." Applejack faltered.

"Oh, fine, I'll ask. Twilight, darling, WHY in the name of all things green and growing are you afraid of quesadillas?" Rarity asked. "It just sounds so... silly."

Twilight sighed. "All right, I'll tell you. But I have to warn you, I don't know if this is from baseline or a variant."

The others nodded.

"You remember what Diamond Tiara was like in baseline? Er, sorry to have to use you as an example, Diamond."

"It's not a problem," Diamond told her. "I know I was Ponyville's biggest little bully. And believe me, there are times I wish I'd have a mini-me loop so I could biff the other me one in the snoot for the way she acted."

"I wouldn't go that far, but you were pretty bad," Twilight acknowledged. "But at least some of my loops, when I was first starting out as Celestia's students, I had classmates that were just as bad." She shuddered. "That's also part of why I was so terrified she'd send me back to Magic Kindergarten, because it meant dealing with those kinds of ponies all over again."

There were nods of assent. "Ah can understand that," Applejack put in. "At least some variants of me had to deal with bullies who teased me because of mah parents bein'... well, gone."

"And Fluttershy and I had to deal with bullies in our school too," Rainbow Dash added.

Twilight nodded back. "Anyway, at least one loop, one of my classmates decided to play a really, really mean prank on me. She offered me a quesadilla, and I accepted. Then I took the first bite, and it felt like my mouth was on fire."

Fluttershy gasped in horror.

"I found out later she'd stuffed it with the hottest peppers and other spices she could, and that's what caused the burning sensation. At the time though, I was too panicked to think clearly. It was almost as bad as the day I took the entrance exam, though at least I didn't have a magical surge like I did that day. Fortunately, Princess Celestia showed up and helped me out. And afterward, the filly who'd done it to me got suspended from school for a month. But ever since then, every time I see a quesadilla, it reminds me what happened then, and I start to feel that burning sensation all over again." Twilight looked up. "So, that's why at least some variants of me are afraid of quesadillas, because of the bad memories."

Looks were exchanged.

"Well, I guess that makes sense," Rainbow Dash decided.

"Yep. Fortunately, I'm getting past it. And I think these are helping." Twilight pulled something out of her Pocket. "Chupaqueso, anyone?"

"Ooh, sounds yummy!" Pinkie smiled as she took one. "And... TASTES yummy too!"

"Glad you liked." Twilight raised hers. "Cheers!"

"CHEERS!" And then there was a round of loud munching and slurping as the girls enjoyed their fried cheese treats.

* * *

>154.6 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Dear Celestia,_

_I just got back from an...interesting loop, and it's one I felt I should share, in no small part because of the lesson I learned. It doesn't necessarily have to do with friendship, but it's still important._

_It was a human variant, and I was the only one Awake, as happens far too often. Unawake versions of you, Luna, Trixie and Nyx were all there too. According to my Loop memories, Nyx and I were your daughters, and Trixie was Luna's daughter, and therefore our cousin. Our dads, whomever they were, had been out of the picture for a long time, so Momlestia (my personal nickname for your in-loop incarnation) and Luna were raising us by yourselves. Unfortunately, though they loved us, they weren't always the most reasonable people at times._

_Now, I have to tell you about this version of Trixie. She was brilliant, but forgetful. Everyone was always reminding her "Your book, Trixie," or "Your keys, Trixie." Or a lot of similar phrases. Supposedly, she was so busy being brilliant inside her own head that she didn't have time to remember the little things, like her luggage, which she was supposed to bring to the car when we were going on a long trip (apparently, someone forgot to say "Your suitcase, Trixie" before we left, so we had to go back and get it). Some friend of the family had offered us the use of their cabin in the woods for the weekend, so off we went._

_It turned out it wasn't so much a cabin as a big house deep in the woods. There was also a barn nearby. The day after we arrived, Momlestia and Luna decided it would do us some good to go on a little nature walk, and while we were out there, Trixie had to be reminded to take off her shoes before we went wading in a small creek we found._

_After getting back from that, Nyx, Trixie and I explored the house a bit, and I got the creeps when I found someone had scrawled a message on a wall in one of the extra rooms. It said, "Beware the Sentinel". I showed it to Momlestia and Luna, but for some reason they both decided I'd done it and was just trying to scare them and Nyx. Which, of course, I wasn't._

_We went out on another nature walk, and Trixie nearly forgot to bring her lunch with her (we were planning on finding a spot to stop and have a picnic). Exploring a different part of the woods was, again, fun. But I couldn't help feeling like something was watching us._

_When we got back, both Momlestia and Luna got mad at me because Trixie didn't have her jacket, which was somehow my fault. I think my exact response at the time was "What do I look like, a walking memo pad?" And that made them even madder, so I went to my room and stayed there until dinner so we'd all have a chance to calm down._

_After dinner, Momlestia and Luna went off to the nearest town (which was several miles away) to pick up some supplies and left the three of us by ourselves. We mostly read and played Monopoly for a while, but eventually I heard something scratching outside. I tried to warn Trixie and Nyx, but they didn't believe me (Nyx apparently took after Momlestia that way), still thinking I was trying to scare them. Trixie finally stuck her head out, and saw something big roaming around, which scared her, but finally convinced her I was telling the truth._

_Since it was coming to the front door, we decided to duck out the back and hide in the barn. Unfortunately, it was locked, so we couldn't get in, and decided to run around the front of the house when the creature came out the back, which it did. We made it inside, locked the doors and went upstairs to hide. That didn't stop the creature: it had Trixie's jacket (which I pointed out to her), and could use it to smell where we were, like some kind of enormous scent-hound. We heard it come through the front door, stomp up the stairs, and finally start banging on the door of the room we were in._

_When the door came in, we were finally able to see the Sentinel of the Woods. It was massive, it was hairy, and it was scary._

_Then it looked at Trixie, and spoke:_

_"You forgot your jacket, stupid."_

_It threw the jacket at her, turned around and stomped back down the stairs._

_Which is why, until the loop's end a little over a year later, nobody ever had to remind Trixie about her wallet, or her jacket, or anything else, ever again._

_After all, if you leave stuff lying around, you never can be sure just who might bring it back._

_Yours truly,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>154.7 (Evilhumour)

Twilight looked at the object in front of her and the beaming ponies next to her.

"...Is something wrong Momma?" Nyx blinked, looking at the object on the plate, poking it with a fork with nothing ripping out from the fabrics of space and time. "Doesn't _seem_ dangerous."

"Please Twilight, I worked _really_ hard to make it without cheating or going off script." Lemon muttered. "I'd ask Nyx but I feel she'd say anything I'd cook would be good since I took all those lessons."

"Right..." Twilight winced as she levitated the meal up to her mouth. With clenched eyes, she bit into the quesadilla and chewed for a few seconds before bolting to the bathroom.

"There there Lemon," Nyx patted her boyfriend, who was hanging his head low. "There's always next time. We can keep on trying until you get it right and Mamma promised us she would help!"

"You're right!" Lemon smiled as he went back to the kitchen to make more of the simple meal.

* * *

>154.8 (Evilhumour)

Twilight stared at Celestia and the diner she found herself in.

"This is not going to be some horrible joke about quesadillas again, is it?" Twilight was wary of her looping mentor, a massive prankster even in baseline.

"Of course not Twilight, that's for the Grand Galloping Gala... Possibly." The princess flashed her a smile. "This is a simple lesson that is long over due."

Levitating a hayburger to her mouth and taking a bite, Twilight asked what kind of lesson only for a newspaper to hit her on the nose and a squirt of cold water in her face.

"No Twilight, we do not speak with our mouths full."

Frowning, Twilight gulped her food down her mouth, using the next hayburger to wipe her face. "Are you really-"

Again, the Equestria Daily descended onto her nose with the cold water of the squirt bottle splashed into her face. "No Twilight, we do not use food as a napkin."

With a sigh, Twilight faceplanted into the table, only for Celestia's golden magic to lift her head up so she could bonk her nose again and dump the rest of the water from the squirt bottle onto her head. "No Twilight, we do not vacuum up our food."

Twilight went to protest this but she found that she did indeed have a hayburger halfway into her mouth.

Thus began their renewed lessons from days long passed, with one mare passing the wisdom to another over the food of champions.

* * *

>154.9 (Evilhumour)

Celestia turned her head to see Luna fly to her tower, with a massive grin on the alicorn's face.

Judging by the smell, she had been in a barn with a lot of hay and sniff, it was the Sweet Apple Acres if she was smelling the apples correctly.

Sniffing again as she flew around her sister's tower, she picked up the faint scent of musk from a stallion and a grin that big usually meant a pony got intimate with another. As she watched her sister fly away with a bulging saddle bag, it was likely the ponies in question were up to no-

"WAIT WHAT?!" Celestia's mind finally caught to her as Luna disappeared over Ponyville. Her sister and Big Mac were a couple? She had so many ponies to tell now!

* * *

>"Thank you so much, dear friend." Luna blushed as she arranged the special items for this special moment, her body quivering in anticipation. Her eyes glanced at the stallion aiding her in this most precious of moments and then a blush rushed against her face.

"Ain't nothing Luna." Big Mac plainly said as he reached down for the sweet pie he had been smelling all night. "Before you start, you want to eat?"

"Oh, how kind of you." Luna smile continue to grow as she brought a piece to her mouth, her tail twitching as she ate the loop famous Apple family pie. "And how kind of you to tell me of this location." Flaring her wings out, she looked at her blank canvas and began to paint, with Big Mac watching his friend bring her latest masterpiece to life.

Turning his head, he saw his little sister run towards him, probably asking why Luna was here and what not. Although that shocked look on her face did worry him a bit.

* * *

>154.10: (Evilhumour)

"Ah don't believe it." Applejack muttered, looking at the passed-out Rarity, unable to handle the horrors going in front of her.

"GO! GO! GO! GO!" Dash chanted with the other yaks.

"_TIME!_" Pinkie Pie shouted, with cheers ringing out from both parties.

"Ha! I ate thirty nine apple pies! How many pies did little purple princess eat?" The yak prince boasted, looking at his opponent.

"I ate _forty_ pies." Twilight grinned, her face covered with the remains of the pies of the pies she had devoured in the impromptu eating contest.

"What?" The prince reared back in surprise.

"Forty pies, that's as many as four tens." Twilight grinned, placing a hoof into his side.

"And it was _terrible!_" Rarity moaned before passing out again.

The yaks stared at their neighbours from the south and then they began to laugh.

"I think this is the start of a wonderful friendship, princess." The yak prince's grin grew, elbowing her slightly. Twilight recognized that as the early signs of affection but what was the worst the could happen in a few months?

* * *

>"And with this union, our two nations will be one!" The yak king boasted, with Twilight stealing more glances at the clock for the loop to end, with her friends doing their best not to laugh their flanks off and with the yak prince, still smitten with her, leaning in to kiss his bride.

* * *

>154.11 (ToaMataNui5000)

"I OBJECT TO THIS UNHOLY MATRIMONY!" The double doors were slammed opened to reveal a certain blue-haired, orange pegasus with a frown on his face. The whole wedding crowd let out a round of gasps before falling into silent murmurs.

It was Shining Armor who immediately broke said silence. "Flash Sentry! Why aren't you wearing your armor? Or at your guard post?"

"There he is! The doppelganger that looks like me!" Flash's voice was somehow heard from the halls beyond the double doors.

"Aw crud..." The first Flash grumbled before facing the groom and bride. "I'll be back for you, Twily!" And on that note, he fled back into the halls.

"Hey! Get back here, you face-stealing scum!" The second Flash yelled, which was then followed by the distant rumble of multiple guard yaks and ponies growing even quieter. Once again, awkward silence returned to the wedding hall.

"Okay, him learning how to walk on four hooves that fast is ridiculous enough, but HOW DID HE EVEN FIND OUT ABOUT THIS WEDDING IN THE FIRST PLACE! LET ALONE GET PAST THE MIRROR PORTAL!" Twilight's eyes twitched slightly, caused the yak king and prince to back up slowly. _'I mean, I'm actually very grateful, but still, HOW?'_

And meanwhile, among her now laughing friends/bridesmaids, Sunset chuckled particularly trollishly.

* * *

>154.12 (Evilhumour)

Lyra looked at Candy Cane and sighed.

"Okay, this was a mean prank." Lyra shook her head as they watched Twilight run away from the quesadilla virus Nurgle created, placed in key locations by Tzeentch, perfected by Slaanesh and honed to fight by Khorne. "Care to stop them and save Twilight?"

"Sure thing," the pony sighed as Twilight took flight to dodge the attacking quesadillas, which grew wings to chase after her. "I'm going to have to inform Leman about this. He _does_ care for Twilight like a second mother; anyone who hurts the mother of the girl he loves is _not_ going to last long."

(Masterweaver)

"ALRIGHT. That's enough."

Pinkie Pie was quite visibly annoyed. Maybe it was the eyebrows, just slightly tilted over each of her twelve eyes. Maybe it was the frown, curved downward around a maw of sharklike teeth. Maybe it was the way she snorted from each of her three noses, or how she kicked at the ground with one of her eighteen legs, or how her ninefold ears were laid back against her skull.

There was also the fact that she'd transformed into one of her more chaotic avatars, but that was rather besides the point considering just who she was talking to.

"Nurgle, I am ashamed. Using your skills to create living quesadillas just to torment Twilight _psychologically?_ Your love is meant to come through in physical pain, not mental pain, otherwise it isn't really love! This is by far one of the worst-quality things you have EVER done."

Nurgle buzzed his wings awkwardly. "You... you're right, Pinkie. I was going through a dead spot creatively and... well, I have no excuse."

"Tzeentch! Basically, the same thing. Quesadillas? Tortillas with melted cheese? If it were used in a subtle assassination plot, maybe, but this plan is blindingly obvious to a six-year-old! You have got to shape up, mister!"

The raven-headed god harrumphed. "You just don't see the subtleties of the plot I put in motion-"

"And Slaanesh! Slaanesh, you didn't even spice them up at all! You just made sure they could stay alive long enough to jump into a pony's mouth! I cannot BELIEVE you missed this opportunity to overwhelm the senses, you're practically a little brother to me, Slaanesh, and you MISSED this!"

"Hey! I object! Brother is a gendered term and-" The god of overwhelming passion withered under the glares that they received.

"And you. Khorne. What in the WARP were you thinking, training them to fight? THEY DON'T EVEN HAVE BLOOD! THEY AREN'T EVEN MEAT PRODUCTS! This was a waste of your time!"

"I just thought... you know, with the jumping to their death and all..." The fourth god fidgeted on his throne of (gopher) skulls.

"Now then. What's going to happen is this: You are going to APOLOGIZE to Twilight Sparkle, you are going to ROUND UP all the quesadillas you made, you are going to give them all to ME so that I can find a PROPER use for them, and then you are going to spend a whole month _**ON THE ROCK FARM WITH MAUD.**_"

The four gods shivered in terror. "No!" Slaanesh cried, clutching at Pinkie's hooves. "Not her, she's just so, so... _boring!_"

Pinkie frowned. "Do you want to go for _two_ months?"

"NO! Nonono, no." Tzeentch grabbed Slaanesh and pulled them back. "We heard you. Um... Sorry, Twilight. The Quesadilla thing was..." He swallowed, gagging a bit. "It was-ugh, It was... Itwaspoorlythoughtout oh good warp those words taste so _awful!_"

* * *

>154.13 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Twilight stepped out of her treehouse and picked up her morning newspaper. Her eyes scanned the town, in case Tirek had gotten loose early. The flower ponies were always a good indication that something was wrong (and quite a few things that weren't), but they were mostly watering their flowers. She couldn't help but notice though that they were giving her pitying and sad looks every now and then. Since it was too early in the morning to ponder their looks, she shrugged and returned to her house.

After pulling out a small record labeled Octavia's 9th, she started it up and rested on the ground while opening the newspaper. And then, her eyes bulged at the title:

TWILIGHT SPARKLE, DEAD AT 18

TELEPORTATION INVARIABLY FATAL, WARNS LEADING SCHOLAR

She kept reading, until finally she came to the end. Her horn flared as she shouted, "SPIKE, GATHER THE GIRLS!"

* * *

>Overnight Stringer thought his plan to generate a sensational story was genius, draw in hundreds, thousands of new readers across Equestria. But then, he was cornered by Princess Twilight Sparkle and her five friends. The five stood behind her, looking angry and bored. Twilight, meanwhile had given him a three hour verbose lecture on the pitiful state of modern media, the importance of checking facts, how disappointed his ancestors would have been with him, and so on and so forth. Worse, the Princess had cast a type of attention grabbing spell along with an insomnia spell that wouldn't let him sleep.

She finished her lecture with, "And that, is why our media center is in Canterlot now, instead of based in the Griffon Lands. Honestly, insisting that I would invade the griffons because I commented that their mountains are beautiful and that I'd like to visit someday is preposterous. You learned your lesson today?"

Stringer's eye twitched as he jumped at the chance to escape, "Yes! I got it. I'll be sure to print a retraction later, please no more lectures, I beg you."

He even got on his belly and bowed his head. Twilight nodded, channeling her inner Rarity in reply, "See that you do. Honestly, saying I'm 18 when I'm 17, it's absolutely scandalous."

She started stepping out when Stringer asked, "W-wait, what?! What about the teleportation spell kills and spawns a clone at the desired location?"

Twilight gave a small laugh, "Oh that made me laugh all the way here. Keep it if you want."

The girls followed Twilight out. Once they were outside, Applejack stepped forward, "Uh, Twi', you sure ya wanna let him keep printin' that phony article?"

Twilight rolled her eyes and smiled, "Please. No scholar worth his or her mind would ever believe that. The other newspapers will print articles countering the Canterlot Times' article, and they'll be forced to close within a year's time."

"And if they try an' use yer quote as a reference to prove it true?"

Twilight conjured a pair of shades for the Mane Six, surrounded Stringer's Office in a magic barrier, and unleashed a flash of light throughout the building. With that, Twilight removed her glasses and said, "No pony except Stringer will ever remember we were here. I'll just deny all allegations that we were ever here."

* * *

>154.14: (Evilhumour)

"Okay, tell Trixie why she is here again?" Trixie huffed, blowing her mane out of her face. "Trixie was trying to help you get over your silly fear!"

"I know that Trixie and I promise as soon as I can, I'll get you out of tartarus." Twilight patted her friend on the back. "It's just that when your illusions failed and I saw I was about to eat a quesadilla instead of a hayburger, I panicked a bit."

"...Twilight, you banished Trixie to Tartarus with more spells and runes than Tirek here!" Trixie tilted her eyes to the side, unable to move her entire body, gesturing to her roommate. "Trixie also has an itch on her nose that she cannot scratch because somepony overreacted!"

"Again, I panicked."

* * *

>(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

I landed in the Grand Line this time. This world is one where pirates are all searching for a legendary treasure called 'One Piece,' said to make the one who finds it rich beyond their wildest dreams. The Anchor here, Luffy, ate something called a Devil Fruit; fruits that grant those who have eaten them special powers and abilities. In Luffy's case, he is basically made out of rubber. He can't swim, though.

Moving on, Luffy and his crew are a band of misfits, but they are true friends. Kinda reminds me a bit of Equestria's values, honestly. They are willing to do anything to help each other.

They accepted me as a crew member almost instantly when I met them as they were journeying to fight the madman called Crocodile in one of their many adventures; they understood why I feel I have to make up for my past, but they were more than glad to befriend me. I was glad to have them by my side. I really couldn't learn anything new here, but I could hone my skills a lot.

We had a lot of adventures together. I'm glad to have met them. Once again, I have seen what friendship means.

I want to think I'm totally different from the cruel person I once was, and when I return to Equestria, I'll be glad to put what I now know about friendship to good use. I have a lot of things to atone for, after all.

* * *

>154.15: (fractalman)

"Welcome to Equestria" said Twilight. "I understand you might be hungry, so I've prepared two tables of food: one with all my own favorite dishes, and one with our best efforts to recreate your own cuisine, should you not find equestrian dishes to your liking."

The Yaks walked over to the former, and gulped down several hayburgers, a daffodil sandwich, and a couple bowls of celery soup.

"Taste strange, but good!" said the Yak prince.

* * *

>Alas, the very next loop, the Yaks were upset by, of all things, how salty the hayburgers were. A quick series of teleports confirmed that, like Ponies, Yaks had salt licks and enjoyed them.

* * *

>Several loops later in the hub:

"I had no idea Yak tongues were so sensitive!" said Twilight as she watched the Yaks complain about the taste of equestrian snow.

"Well, this certainly goes a long way towards explaining why we've been having so much trouble with the Yaks." agreed Rarity.

* * *

>154.16 (Evilhumour)

"What, you going to cry again?" The adult bullies from flight school usually didn't bother Fluttershy anymore, as they were usually _very_ childish from her long time looping. Of course, as they tried to box her in, there was always exceptions.

"Please, let me go by." Fluttershy said, her eye darting upwards.

"Oh yeah, who's going to make us Flutter_cry_?" The bullies laughed to themselves, thinking themselves clever.

_THUD THUD THUD THUD_

"Hello, my name is Lemon Rush," a giant, yellow earth pony stallion grinned viciously at the pegasi. "These are my brothers." Nodding his head at the gigantic towering red unicorn stallion, Lemon continued his introductions. "That is Big Maroon." Pointing his head to the somewhat equally tall and terrifying green earth pony that was holding a massive warhammer in his mouth. "That's Forging Fire." Finally, he nodded his head to the dauntingly large scowling bat-pony who was baring his fangs. "That's Corn Curse."

Leaning downwards to the scared senseless pegasi, Lemon whispered into their ears. "We're four of her nineteen _sons_. Now what were you saying to our dear mother?"

In a sign of clear intelligence, the pegasi bullies took off into the sky with speeds that would have made Rainbow Dash a bit jealous.

Fluttershy simply shook her head at her sons actions, embarrassed in how overprotective they were to her and told them such as they walked her back to the cottage where Butcher Nails was wrestling with the Ursa Minor again.

* * *

>154.17 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Everything was going perfectly. Shining's sister and her friends didn't realize that her precious babysitter had been replaced by the Queen of all Changelings. She stared into the Mirror, about to start singing about her ultimate victory when someone knocked on the door. By how quietly it sounded, there was no doubt it was Fluttershy. The disguised changeling opened the door and gave her an irritated look, "What do you want now?"

Fluttershy hid her eyes behind her mane, "Oh, um, I'm sorry, but one of my animal friends said she was a close personal friend of yours. She's waiting outside the building."

Chrysalis sighed and pointed, "Very well. Lead on."

The two stepped out the door, and Chrysalis abruptly froze in terror. Before her was an oversized...dragon...lizard perhaps...with a mouth that could eat a dozen ponies in one bite. The dragon lizard growled out its delight, "Cadence! So good to see you!"

The queen gave a shy grin, "Uh, right! It's been so long since we last saw each other...who were you again?!"

The waved her off, "Oh, you remember me. It's Roxy! We met at in the park a long time ago! You gave me some dating tips."

The Dragon leaned in really close with her teeth showing, "_Remember?_"

Chrysalis nodded enthusiastically, "Oh, yes right! How is your...relationship with..."

Chrysalis stopped when the realization hit her that she had no idea who Roxy was dating. Roxy was helpful, "Godzilla. Haven't seen him in a bit, but I'm sure I'll run into him before long. Maybe we'll go on a nice stroll through the city."

If this Godzilla was as big as Roxy, there might not be anything left of the city when they were done. Worse, the Queen couldn't feel anything from this beast, so she had no idea what Roxy was planning. Chrysalis gave a terrified grin, "Well, I got to get back to getting ready for my wedding. Bye!"

The door slammed closed. A moment passed, then Roxy looked down at Fluttershy while the pony looked up at the T-Rex. Roxy asked, "How did I do?"

Fluttershy beamed, "You were great! A little more on the teeth and maybe a growl or two and she'll be running before the Wedding begins, I have no doubt."

* * *

>154.18 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

Celestia gaped at the sight in front of her. Luna hung over the stage on a circular rock that looked suspiciously like the moon. And considering the moon was missing from the sky, the Alicorn was inclined to believe that that rock was indeed the moon. To add to the surreal nature of the sight, Luna spinning end over end on the moon and shouting the whole time, "Whee!"

And this had been going on..._for ten minutes!_ Celestia shouted in frustration, "Sister! Get off the moon, put it back in the sky and let me do my job!"

The solar diarch pressed a hoof to her mouth in surprise at her own outburst. Luna stopped rolling for a second and gave a puppy dog look, "Aww...do I have to?"

* * *

>154.19 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

The streets of Canterlot hustled and bustled as it always has, with many different but familiar ponies going about doing their business. One pony, however, was different this time around. Fancy Pants had been replaced by a chocolate coated earth pony with a stylish mustache and a small afro style mane. The pony was an oddity, always seen wearing his trademark blue shirt, navy cape and pants, as most ponies usually forewent clothes except on formal occasions. He practically oozed charm as he showed a purple alicorn into his business establishment. He held out a single hoof at the three floored building and declared, "Welcome, princess Sparkle, to Bespin Mining and Transportation."

Twilight gave a nod, "Thank you High Roller...or should I call you Lando, or Mr. Calrissian?"

Lando held up a hoof in placation, "I have most calling me Lando here. And Mr. Calrissian sounds like this one eyed commander of the Imperial Dreadnaught I knew at home. Let me show you around."

The building had a grand foyer along with two stairways, one leading upward and the other down. He pointed at the downward one, "This leads to the underside of Canterlot, where we mine rare minerals used in construction of the guard's armor and equipment. We released the formula for crafting durasteel to the local blacksmiths. Sometimes, we run across rare gas deposits, which we siphon off and deliver to pegasi to reinforce their cloud cities in case of inopportune squalls escape the local weather teams over the oceans or Everfree Forest."

He looked at the princess and gave a knowing grin, "I understand it that your friend, Miss Dash, has purchased some for improving her own home."

They strolled through the mines while showing his safety regulations he follows. After completing the tour of the mines, she was lead back up the stairs and into the foyer, where he went out one of the back doors. Several Earth Ponies stood, hitched up to their loads, which was floating via anti-gravity technology, "I borrowed the designs from my universe back home, reinventing the hover technology for pony use. The carts weigh practically nothing. Even a filly could transport this to Ponyville, though that would be highly irresponsible for a respectable businesspony like myself."

Twilight quirked her eyes, "If it weighs nothing, then why don't you have larger loads."

The business Pony gave a knowing grin, "Supply and demand, my dear. We usually only get small orders outside Canterlot, except for the Pegasi. But there, our supply is limited, since we don't know when we'll run across gas pockets."

Lando issued her back into the building and towards another room filled with unicorns, "I have several of the brightest minds in Canterlot crafting a surveying spell, that will map the entirety of Canterlot Mountain. Perhaps, you'd be willing to lend us your services."

Twilight gave him a smirk, "I would like that, except that the less reputable side to your company prevents me from doing so."

Lando's quirked an eye. His smile didn't even twitch, showing that he was very good, "I don't know what you mean."

Twilight shrugged, "I'm sure there was a very good reason for a highly valuable bust of King Sombra being found at the border to griffon lands in a Bespin Crate."

"I have many shipments sent to the griffon lands, and all of them are scanned by one of Captain Armor's Lieutenants. If there was a smuggled artifact found in one of my shipments, it happened after it had left Canterlot."

It was Twilight's turn to quirk an eyebrow, "And the fact that you hire quite a few former black marketeers?"

"I believe in giving people second chances, a fresh start at life. You yourself have given quite a few former rebels a second chance yourself, with Nightmare Moon, Discord, Trixie and many more."

Twilight gave a small, "Hmm..." but said nothing further. Lando lead her to the roofs, where he showed Twilight the third portion of his business, "And here, we prove that we do not discriminate against anyone. We have Pegasi also handling the aerial transportation aspect."

Twilight nodded, "This is all very impressive."

She then gave him a serious expression, causing the mood to shift slightly, though Lando was largely unphased, "Supposing you were in the business of transporting relics in a...shall we say, less than legal way, remember to check your artifacts. Some of them can destroy Equestria after all."

Lando shook his head, never losing that cocky smirk, "I don't know what you mean, Miss Sparkle. Here at Bespin Mining, we believe that safety is the number one priority. Without Equestria, we couldn't turn a profit. Besides, I would never participate in such a shady venture."

The businessman showed her down the stairs and asked, "Since the tour is over, how about a game of Sabacc?"

Twilight was led into a small room off to the side where a table and a deck were set up. It even had a card dealer. The Princess smirked, "My Sabacc is a little rusty. You mind going a bit easy on me?"

Lando chuckled, "Commander Shepard already tried that one awhile ago, it didn't work then and it won't work now."

Twilight pouted a bit, but the two played well into the afternoon. Fortunes and oddities from many loops were won and lost in that game, but Twilight had still made a new friend. Life was good.

* * *

>154.20 (Evilhumour)

Rainbow Dash blinked as the door opened to Fluttershy's massive cottage; the extra size needed for all the colts under her care to both run around, sleep and burn off their excessive energy. Fluttershy stood there, the proud Little Mother to all nineteen foals and one evil looping bunny that the colts were running from.

Shaking her rainbow mane, Rainbow Dash walked up to Fluttershy and spoke softly.

"Fluttershy, I am one of your oldest friends and what I am about to say may seem harsh but it is need."

Fluttershy blinked as Rainbow Dash took her hoof and gently patted it with her own. "Wh-what is it?"

"You have got to learn how to say No." A twinge showed her smirk for a moment but Rainbow Dash forced herself calm and collective. Already Fluttershy was drawing back in shock and embarrassment. "Most ponies only have three or four foals, not nineteen."

"Rainbow Dash!" Fluttershy tried to rear back, but Dash was holding onto her hoof tightly. Her hold on her smirk was, alas, very loose.

"If you have any more foals, you'd be a mother of a nation!" She started to snicker at her friend's face; a mixture of outrage, embarrassment and some amusement creeping in.

"Hey that's our Mother you're talking about!" Lemon shouted with Angel Bunny on his head, the two of them in a middle of a battle, with his other brothers putting away their bets in front of their looping mother. "Come on guys, let's get her!" With that, a mighty roar was heard as all of the ponies raced for the doorway and the blue pegasus standing in it.

"Gotta fly!" Dash shouted as she ascended to alicornhood as she tried to escape the wrath of nineteen colts with Fluttershy holding her sides as she laughed at the ridiculousness of being the Little Mother to all the Primarchs.

* * *

>154.21 (Masterweaver)

The difficulty in keeping one's mind after being bucked off a bed while waking up in both senses of the term could not be understated. Nevertheless, Applejack had reacted quickly, rolling away from the attacker and snapping to a standing position-

"Aw crabapples, this is a mini-me loop ain't it?" The mare sighed as her eyes fell on the panicked pony standing on the bed. "Look, Ah'll explain everything, just calm down-"

There was a knock at the door. "Applejack? What's goin' on in thar, young'n?"

"Just fell off the bed, Granny!" Applejack turned to her shocked duplicate, putting a hoof to her lips, before looking back at the door. "I'll be out in a minute!"

"Ya'll had better, the whole family is already up and waitin' on ya!"

A slow clip heralded the departure of the Apple Family matriarch. Applejack nodded to herself, walking up to the bed and puttin' a small pamphlet at her duplicate's hooves. "This'll explain the basics. As soon as ya get the chance, meet me in the west orchard-look for the tree with no bats."

"But-"

"You've got a Summer Sun Celebration to prepare for, filly!" Applejack insisted, pointing at the door. "You'd best get your work done afor' anypony questions where ya are!"

"Who the hay-?"

"West orchard. Meet me there, after you've got everything ready." Applejack opened the window, pulled out a grappling gun, saluted, and swung out.

Left behind, Applejack blinked at the window for a moment or two. Then she turned her gaze down to the pamphlet.

"...What in the hay is going on?!"

* * *

>154.22 (Masterweaver)

"So, Pinkie, how do I put this..." Twilight rubbed the back of her head. "In the last expansion, me and the girls stumbled on your, uh, 'party cave'. Is that... is that baseline?"

The pink pony giggled. "Oh, that old thing? Yeah, back when I started working with the Cakes I put a lot of my party stuff in the basement, then after the parasprites destroyed it I budgeted a few secret passageways when rebuilding sugarcube corner, and then Spike broke through and I just went whole hog. Of course that was before I started looping," she added quickly. "Nowadays I just use my pocket as a portable party planning post for practical and preposterous purposes."

"Waaaaaaait, wait wait wait, hold on. You have a party base _in your pocket?_"

"Uh-huh! Let me show you!" With lightning fast speed, Pinkie Pie grabbed Twilight, jumped into her own tail, and-

Twilight's eyes went wide. She stood at the center of a room shaped like a cyan cupcake liner, if that cupcake was as big as Canterlot Castle. Hanging off the walls in haphazard tetrominos were hundreds upon thousand of files, attended to by a series of flying robots made out of what seemed to be baking products; one wall was dominated by a massive screen, currently showing a map of Equestria with various pinpoints flashing in magenta cross-hairs. The floor was littered with a collection of half-constructed machines, uncoiled streamers, oddly bubbling potions, scattered confetti, the occasional weapon of mass destruction, and a number of perfectly prepared pastries. At the center of the room was a round table with a selection of hovering, custom-made holographic keyboards, each operated by what Twilight recognized as chaotically-formed duplicates of the pink pony pranking alongside her. Occasionally, one of the robots would slip out one of the slits spaced evenly in the side of the liner; through them, Twilight could see various signs like "Balloon-making Factory," "Armory of Amusing Armaments," or "Baking Ovens 856-1097," all covered with odd forms of caution signs. Her eyes drifted upward to where she would expect a ceiling-

"NO." Pinkie grabbed her face and pulled it down, sticking a pink plastic visor on her head. "Up _there_ is the Eye of Parties, a chaotic energy source for this whole operation that also serves as a pretty neat ceiling light. Few mortals can look upon it and stay sane, and as the Anchor you have a responsibility to protect your sanity at all costs." She jabbed a hoof into Twilight's chest. "So DON'T. LOOK. UP."

Twilight blinked, nodding after a couple of seconds. "You're the boss here. This place... this is amazing! You have all this in your pocket?"

"Uh-huh! This is the Cupcake of Creativity, where I put my party plans into place and passage. A lot of failed tests happen here, but also a lot of fun successes! And of course party plans," she added, gesturing at the file cabinets on the walls. "All of the party plans, everywhere."

"By Everfree," Twilight breathed, walking up to the table. "This is like your own personal batcave."

"Yeah, me and Brucey have a bit of a prepared plot competition going on whenever we meet up." Pinkie walked up next to her, nudging one of her chaotic duplicates to the side. "We kinda try to outwit each other and whatnot; I mean, he's the older looper, yeah, but I've got chaotic powers which give me an edge."

Twilight couldn't help but smile. "Let me guess, he's in the lead?"

"...yeah," Pinkie grumbled. "But only by two points!" she added quickly, grabbing a rolled-up fabric from a passing robot and unrolling it on the table. "I've got a plan, see, I just need to figure out how to imprint my own circuitry on one of his batarangs. Now, I could go the easy route and stick it in one of the high-tech ones, but he'd probably find that on a routine check. So I'm trying to figure out if I could maybe sneak it onto one of his basic metal 'rangs..."

"You know, I'm not sure that would help at all," Twilight pointed out. "I mean, even if you somehow stick your own circuitry on a batarang, which isn't something I'm ruling out, you'd need a supercomputer capable of interfacing with it in order to make any use of the thing.

"Oh I have one of those!" Pinkie pressed a button and gestured toward the white pegasus now on the massive screen. "You remember Surprise, EDI's daughter from that time you had me code a digibomb?"

"Hi auntie Twi! Isn't granny Pie's places so cool?!"

Twilight nodded faintly. "It... it sure is." She cleared her throat. "Well... this has been fun, Pinkie, but I need to get back to the library-"

"Say no more." Pinkie grinned, grabbing a multicolored hammer. "I'll get you there in a jiffy!"

* * *

>Amethyst Star jumped in surprise as a purple pony dropped out of nowhere. "Gah! What-Twilight Sparkle? Where did you come from-?"

Twilight grabbed her face and pulled it in. "I have looked into the abyss. And the abyss has looked into me."

"Wh-?"

_"Pinkie Pie is more organized than either of us, Star."_

* * *

>154.23 (Evilhumour, Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Hey Bonbon, I know you're an ex-secret agent. I know that because _I_ am stuck in a time loop. Well I say I, I mean we, there's five-ish personalities in here. Anyway, I just want you to know that I don't care about anything you did before, I love you no matter what you are, and you can always feel comfortable around me. Well, I'm off to go help some of my fellow loopers play a prank on Nightmare Moon, see you at the celebration!"

Lyra kissed the shock-frozen Bonbon on the cheek and waltzed out the door.

"...Psych ward," Bonbon muttered. "DEFINITELY the psych ward."

Lyra then walked back into the room, rolling her eyes. "Sorry, the gals want to give you a kiss too."

* * *

>154.24 (Masterweaver)

"Me love this pony treat!" Prince Rutherford declared, stamping his hoof. "Yaks will be friends with ponies, if ponies give yaks Quesadillas!"

Twilight's eye twitched.

* * *

>154.25 (Masterweaver)

Twilight Sparkle had had just about enough of this expansion, and she'd only gone through it three times.

Oh sure, the embarrassing secret about her irrational fear had been exposed-and probably would be to her looping friends, eventually-and yeah, she didn't like having to repair a crystal palace, but what really got her-what really got to her was the yak prince. The way he insisted everything be so-so. The way he demanded that his homeland be replicated with exact precision. The way he destroyed everything when a small problem arose.

And then, there was-

"We declare WAR!"

Yeah. That.

Twilight smiled, oh so serenely. "Just so we're clear: your declaration of war is official?"

"YES!"

"And you're making it right here. Right now."

"YES!"

"Well then." With a flash of her horn, a series of enchanted manacles bound themselves around the yaks' legs. "As my first act in this war, I hereby capture you and declare you prisoners of war. Furthermore, a message will be sent to Yakyakistan about your frivolous excuses for battle, your dishonorable conduct during combat, and the children you wounded in your undirected rage."

"What?!" The prince tugged at his chains. "Me no hurt child!"

Twilight flicked a wing at Spike. Even not looping, he was quick enough on the uptake. "Oh, uh-AH! My leg, aaah!" He clutched at his foot and fell to the stage floor. "Oh somepony, please, PLEASE!"

"Oh, and legally speaking that particular child has been adopted into my family, so there's that." Twilight grinned broadly. "I wonder how the chieftains will react knowing exactly how deplorably their prince fights?"

"You spout lies! Me am very honorable fighter!"

"You've yet to demonstrate it," the alicorn replied calmly. "As a matter of fact, I have half a mind to march up to the king of Yakyakistan and demand compensation for your behavior today. He would be so disappointed to hear about all of this..."

The prince glowered at her. "Pony princess fight dirty."

"Oh, I'm not fighting right now. I'm _lecturing._ Believe you me, you do not want to see me _fighting._" She leaned in close. "Of course, we could avoid all of that, you know. If you didn't actually declare war, if that was just a slip of the tongue, then I'd have no right or reason to inform your father how you behaved. I wonder what the history books will say about that..."

"...Me..." The prince sighed. "Me am ending war with ponykind. Me declaration was made in anger without thought."

"And I am very grateful for that." Twilight vanished the chains holding him prisoner. "I apologize for making you feel uncomfortable, prince Rutherford. Perhaps we can continue our discussions more amicably from now on."

The yak frowned at her. "You one to talk..."

* * *

>154.26 (Masterweaver)

"Apple Bloom?"

"Yeah sis?"

"Care ta explain why our big brother is a livin' fireball now?"

Applebloom winced as a tree caught fire. "Ah put up caution signs durin' the experiment, Ah swear!"

They watched as Big Mac continued stoically doing his chores.

"...think we could make fried apple slices?"

* * *

>154.27 (Masterweaver)

"So... what did you just give Fluttershy?"

"Oh, just a slip of paper."

Epona crossed her arms, tapping a hoof as she gave her husband a flat stare. "Right. Of course you did, Lokison. So, what did you _write_ on the slip of paper?"

Sleipnir smiled awkwardly. "Oh, just... a series of characters in no particular order-"

"Sleipnir Odinstead, stop being coy with me and tell me what the code is for."

The eight-legged stallion sighed. He glanced over each one of his shoulders carefully, letting his eyes rove around the ceiling and the floor. Then he leaned into his wife's ear to whisper.

"It's a gate code."

Epona gasped, shoving him back. "A-?!"

She looked about warily, searching the room for cameras before she pulled the stallion close. "Sleipnir," she whispered harshly, "the gates were sealed eons before we even started the loops! And there was a good reason for it, too!"

"I know, I know! And it's not like I told her what it was!"

"But still, you gave her a gate code! Even if she doesn't understand it she could figure out how to use-"

"Epona, look." Sleipnir folded his ears back. "Ever since the Crash and Billy happened, I've... been noticing things. Maybe I'm being paranoid, maybe it's just a bunch of weird glitches, but... what would happen if somebody from, say, the Lovecraft pantheon tried to stage a coup right now? With Yggdrasil running as it is, we could be undermined before we even noticed."

The anthropomorphic horse rolled her eyes. "Please, the only subtle one in that lot is Nyarlathotep. We'd notice long before he tried anything-"

"I just used that pantheon as an example," Sleipnir whispered quickly. "My point is, there are some admins and more than a few MLEs that might... try something. And normally I'd be all for a glorious war, or even a cunning battle in the shadows, but..."

He put a hoof on her slightly bulging stomach. "The fallout could be... too much for me to bear."

Epona wrapped a hand around the hoof and sighed. "Sleipnir, your intentions... I can see why you're making contingencies, I know, but if you got caught doing this-"

"I told Fluttershy to only open that slip of paper if the time ever came. She swore nine separate oaths not to do it before, all of them mystically binding. She can keep this a secret."

His wife let out a slow breath. "Alright... so you covered your tracks pretty well. But what do you think she can do, even if... she opens the gates?"

Sleipnir flicked an ear backward. "If a coup does come, they'll target us. The Admins. Maybe they'll attack the loopers at some point, but they wouldn't expect them to be able to escape the loop without breaking that reality. And... well..." He bit his lip. "Bearers of Kindness are omniglots, and I'm pretty sure that computer coding counts-"

"Oh, so you're setting her up for guerrilla warfare using Yggdrasil code?" Epona bit her lip. "That... actually makes a lot of sense."

"I just hope I am being paranoid," Sleipnir muttered darkly.

"...Hey." Epona hugged him tightly. "Either way... I'm here for you."

Sleipnir sighed, returning the embrace. "And I you."

* * *

>154.28 (Masterweaver)

"FIX THIS!"

"Vinyl, I'm trying, just let me focus!"

"I don't see that horn glowing, Lyra!"

"Look, I need to figure out the spell I cast-when you jumped me with that DJmobile of yours, I might add-so I can do the proper reversal-"

"I don't care about the technobabble! YOU TURNED OCTAVIA INTO A CELLO! That's... ironic and all, but it's not funny and she's probably panicking! FIX THIS!"

* * *

>154.29 (Masterweaver)

"Derpy, I need to talk to you."

"Yeah Twilight? What is it?"

"Amethyst says that she was the best organizer in Ponyville before I came along, right?"

"Uh-huh. My little Sparkler is such a life saver."

"So... is she the reason Winter Wrap Up never gets completed on time in Ponyville until I come around?"

"Actually, no. Her plans are almost always immaculate, but the other team leaders only ever read their parts and there's no communication and, well, as much as I hate to admit it my daughter can be just a touch stand-offish which makes it so a lot of ponies just tune her out."

"...huh."

* * *

>154.30 (Masterweaver)

"Pink princess as perfect picky as Yaks! Yaks name pink princess honorary yak!"

"Yeah, about that," Twilight drawled, pulling the real Cadance from behind a door. "_That_ Cadance is actually an impostor and a member of a shapeshifting race known as changelings. _This_ is the real one."

"What?! Pink princess is trick! YAKS DESTROY!"

Cadance's jaw dropped as she watched the ensuing destruction. Twilight just smiled. "It's the little things you learn to appreciate."

* * *

>AN:

154.1: They don't have a genuine Rapidash.

>154.2: Yeah, things just happen sometimes. (JoJos Bizarre Adventure.)154.3: She's also qualified on biologicals.

>154.4: School's out. Permanently. (I don't know who the anchor was.)154.5: Tasty.

>154.6: Sometimes the lessons are a bit of a stretch.154.7: I can't tell if this is progress or the opposite. (It's not Progress, though.)

>154.8: Well, a Princess must have good manners.154.9: Of course it was being misleading.

>154.10: Yak it to me.154.11: Yes, she somehow got in exactly the same situation twice. This is not just a continuation. (As far as you know.)

>154.12: She can keep them in line.154.13: Absence of evidence.

>154.14: They're kind of getting obsessed with this.154.15: Iterating yak food.

>154.16: Do not irritate the Mother of Primarchs.154.17: Meet Roxanne. She's that T-rex from Jurassic Park. The whole eating people thing is behind her.

>154.18: A different way of mooning on stage.154.19: Card Shark?

>154.20: Rough housing means complete havoc.154.21: Imagine what it's like for Celestia.

>154.22: Pinkie's pocket is a bit less scary than her mind.154.23: Non loopers get no chance to learn to take things in stride.

>154.24: Diplomacy involves sacrifices.154.25: Overwhelming force in overwhelming quantity. Also overwhelming smug.

>154.26: Grilled Mac. (And cheese?)154.27: Emergency measures.

>154.28: Excessive violins.154.29: In spite of themselves.

>154.30: Yaks have impulse control issues.

162. Chapter 162

155.1 (Masterweaver)

"Rarity?"

"Yes Twilight?"

"I can get why you'd make clothing out of doors, since I know you like a challenge. _But why the birch is your line so popular?!_"

"Well, it's a long story involving social engineering, professional manipulation, and a touch of lucky coincidence, but the long and short of it is I'm famous enough that everypony wants something Rarity."

* * *

>155.2 (Masterweaver, Valentine Meikin)

"I'd like a lactose-free quesadilla please..." Twilight requested, for everyone's head to shoot round, as she ate the baked tortilla, burped lightly, wiped her mouth, then walked off.

"It was that simple?!" Pinkie declared, "No wonder she waves off milk..."

"OK, Who here now feels really embarrassed?" Rainbow Dash asked, for several hands to go up, "Next time, Ask for the full story... Right."

"Waaaaaaait a second." Pinkie tapped her chin. "She's eaten hayburgers, and I know they have cheese. And the whipped cream I put on the pancakes also has dairy. And then there's all the cupcake icing-"

"Whoa, hold on, wait, what?" Rainbow tapped her hooves. "Time out. What?!"

"She's not lactose-intolerant!" Pinkie insisted. "I just know it!"

"Then... then what was that?!"

* * *

>Trixie bumped hooves with the purple unicorn. "That is going to screw with their heads for weeks!"

"You know this plan wouldn't have worked if Pinkie wasn't there." The purple unicorn shifted into a black changeling queen.

"Oh pish posh. Twilight deserves it after throwing me in tartarus."

"...point."

* * *

>155.3 (Masterweaver)

"Hold up, Pinkie, why didn't ya'll tell ever tell us Twi was afraid of Quesadillas?"

Pinkie sighed. "Well, it was just me and Twilight looping when I found out, and I maaaaay have told your non-looping selves to get them to help, and that maaaaay have actually made the situation so much worse that Twilight hunted me down, chained me to the side of the library, and made me Pinkie Pie swear not to ever tell anypony about it." She shivered. "This was way_ before _I was a chaos god of parties, mind. It... the whole situation kind of stuck with me."

Applejack rose an eyebrow. "Chained ya to the library?"

"Like I said, early early loops. She was a little more Magic Kindergarten paranoid back then."

* * *

>155.4 (Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Thanks, you guys!" Moondancer glanced about nervously. "Is... is Twilight coming?"

Minuette winced. "Well... er... you see-"

Suddenly and without warning, there was an explosion right in the middle of the party. Well, it looked like an explosion until the fireworks cleared way, leaving behind a strikingly posed unicorn dressed in an outlandish cape and hat.

"The GREAT and POWERRRRRRFUL TRRRRRRRRIXIE has come bearing a message from one Twiiiiiiilight Sparkeeeeeeeel!"

Moondancer blinked as the strange blue mare suddenly jumped forward. "I-wha-who are you?"

"I am the GREAT and POWERRRRRRFUL TRRRRRRRRIXIE! Consort to queens, purveyor of explosions, and showmare extraordinare. And YOU! Are one Moon-danz-_er_, if I am not mistaken?"

"Um... y-yes?"

"TWILIGHT SPARKLE! Sends her most apologetic and deepest of condolences. When she heard of your gathering, partay, soiree, she so desperately wanted to come, but alas!" Trixie swooned onto Moondancer's back. "The princess herself has called her away to Ponyville, there to stay in hopes of researching ancient artifacts of untold power."

"She..." The pale unicorn sniffed, adjusting her glasses. "She's not coming?"

"Tis true," Trixie replied sadly. "BUT FRET NOT! She sent you gifts fourfold!"

With a wave of her hoof, the showmare produced three individually wrapped giftboxes. "HERETO! Is the first gift, gathered and forged by her lifelong assistant. Though its contents are humble, they come from the claws of a dragon, and rare is that with which they part. HENCEWITH! Is the second gift, selected from her library by Twilight herself! If parting possessions from dragons is difficult, you and I know that only the greatest throb of her heart can convince Twilight to give away one of her precious tomes. HOWFORTH! Is the third gift, tickets and money so that you may move to Ponyville on your own initiative! Though she be forced to relocate, she wishes not to abandon, and so provides these as a token partial in hopes of ensuring you remain in the same district of citydom!"

"Flair for the dramatic, this one," Lemon Hearts murmured. Twinkleshine nodded in agreement.

"Oh. Oh wow, these are-wait." Moonshine narrowed her eyes. "You said four gifts. There are only three boxes here..."

"Indeed, for the fourth gift requires no box. In point of fact, Twilight Sparkle has hired your party an entertainer! Whom, you might ask? Why, none other..." The unicorn struck a pose. "...then I! THE GRRRREAT AND POWERRRRFUL TRRRRRRRRRRRRRRIXIE!"

Moonshine frowned. "Does your 'entertainment' all consist of pointless ego stroking?"

Trixie grinned like a maniac. "Let me show you how to make thermite."

* * *

>Halfway across the world, Gilda shivered. "Why do I have the urge to strangle a certain showmare right now?"

* * *

>155.5 (Masterweaver)

"...so you see my problem, right Lyra?"

Lyra nodded. "Yeah, Moondancer would take the party very seriously. She's got the same perfectionist streak you do, Twi. Maybe you should go to her party from now on."

"But then I have no excuse to send the letter to Celestia, and she has no way to send me to Ponyville, and-"

"Whoa, whoa whoa. Twilight. This is Celestia we're talking about." Lyra held her hooves apart. "Even as a friendly teacher, she has a habit of placing ponies in situations with minimal information, and expecting them to figure out things on their own. Factor in that she would have basically spent a thousand years planning on how to heal Luna, and I can't think of any reason why she wouldn't seek you out at the party."

"Well, maybe. Maybe she'd just Spike-mail me. Or it could be one of those variants where she's planned everything to the letter-"

"Look. Here's what you do. Go to Moondancer's party with Spike. If he's not awake, and Celestia doesn't draco-fax you in time, just fake a draco-fax to yourself with the whole 'Summer Sun celebration, make friends, yadda yadda' schpiel. Then apologize to Moondancer-maybe ask her to look over your house, or come with you or something-head to Ponyville, and run it baseline from there. If anyone gets suspicious about how you know stuff, say 'I read about it once' or something." Lyra shrugged. "See? It's easy. Moondancer doesn't feel rejected, you still go through the Nightmare Moon thing, and if you do need to go back to Canterlot to reassure Moondancer you can just talk to Minuette to get 'interested' or whatever."

Twilight stared.

"...What?"

"I never thought you would have good advice!" The alicorn coughed. "Well, I mean, good friendship advice. Which isn't to say you aren't a good friend. It's just you're kind of... uh... crazy."

Lyra chuckled. "Sometimes, it takes the crazy to see the situation in it's fullest."

* * *

>155.6 (Masterweaver)

Twilight had thought the loop was running baseline. Oh, sure, she was doing her usual 'loop-plus' actions to sidestep most of the baseline issues, and yeah that did include a lot of trips to Canterlot to talk with Moondancer, and it did seem that the bookish unicorn was actually opening up and becoming more confident, but...

_"Crysssstall slaaaaaaves-GAH!"_

"No, dear. Crystal ponies." Moondancer levitated the squirt bottle meaningfully. "I'm sorry about this, Twi, my fiance can be a bit of a hooffull."

"Fi...fiancee."

"Yes, well, I summoned him a few months back from some old black magic tome, we got to talking, he proposed last week..." The unicorn sighed. "But now the empire's back and he's misbehaving again-"

_"But-but-crystal sssslaves!"_

"NO, Sombra. You don't get to laze about."

Twilight could only stare in shock as the black miasma grumbled and turned away from the train station. What in the what...?

* * *

>155.7 (Masterweaver)

Pinkie Pie entered the bar with a sag in her step, sidling up to her usual stool without her usual enthusiasm.

Macintosh rose an eyebrow. "...brain bleach?"

"...nah. I'm good. Just..." The mare sighed. "I'm not sure you're the pony I need to talk to about this. But get me something anyway."

The stallion nodded, reaching for one of his denser drinks-

-but his hoof was slapped away by a frowning Berry Punch. "Trust me on this, she needs a very specific drink." She turned back to Pinkie, pulling out ingredients from her pocket and mixing them together in a light wineglass. "Here you go, Pinks, one Momma's Bad Day."

Pinkie gave a weak smile as she accepted the drink, sipping at the straw. "Wow... this is just how I'm feeling. How'd you know?"

"It's something you pick up on after a while."

"Yeah... that makes sense." Pinkie took another sip.

"So, who was it? Sombra? Discord? Tirek?"

"Nah, my last loop wasn't in Equestria." Pinkie took a deep breath. "My kid was the Joker."

Dead silence filled the bar.

"...yeah, that's what I figured you'd say." The mare shook her head, sipping at her drink again. "I mean... even if he was a maniacal mass murderer, he was still my kid, you know?"

* * *

>155.8 (Masterweaver)

"...Okay. Twi?"

"Yeah, Dash?"

"When we get back to Equestria, I'm going to tell them Haycartesing Daring Do into one of her own books leads to Eiken."

"It was _your idea!_"

* * *

>155.9 (Gamerex27 ,Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Oh princess!" Starlight called, waving Twilight over. "We just wanted to say thank you again for doing this for us."

Twilight, not for the first time in the last three hours, silently congratulated herself; having the foresight to cast a spell that would prevent her eyelids from twitching meant that most of the awkwardness wasn't outwardly projected. "Oh, I'm just happy I could help."

"And I'm really happy you did! When Rekky here proposed, he was worried that Equestria wouldn't recognize us." The unicorn leaned up and kissed the centaur full on the lips. "Admit it, big guy. You were wrong."

"Alright, alright, you got me." Tirek held up his hands and laughed amicably. "But really, Glim-glim, if it weren't for you I'd probably still be on my silly little quest for vengeance."

"And I'd probably still be plotting to force equality on Equestria," Starlight replied. "Funny how the world works, isn't it?"

"I'm happy for you two," Twilight said, her eyelid noticeably not twitching at all. She really needed to use that spell more often.

"Really. I am."

"My most sincere thanks, your highness." Tirek bowed-and Twilight was again reminded that he was still only the size of a pony right now. "Were it not for your efforts, I've little doubt Celestia and Luna would have taken me from my one true love." He looked deep into Starlight Glimmer's eyes, slowly pulling her in for another loving makeout.

"Just-just helping out. I, I... I should go." The alicorn turned around and trotted quickly toward the buffet table.

Rainbow Dash sidled up to her. "Okay, Twilight, I'm only going to ask this once. What the hay."

"I don't know, Dash. I just don't know."

Dashie stopped to think for a moment, then smirked, turning to one of the wedding guests and opening her mouth to make a snide joke.

"No," Cadence said flatly.

"...Huh?" the other mare asked, confused. "But, you of all ponies-"

"Too busy being baffled by all this to admire this wedding," the Princess replied, tilting her head yet again as the happy couple threw the bouquet into the crowd. "Also, they're evil-most of the time-so I really can't be happy for them, especially after everything they did to you.

"I mean," she said, sighing, "I hope they're happy and all...for all the scant few months the Loop lasts for, but this is not the couple for me."

Chrysalis grinned. "So the love goddess finally found the unshippable ship."

"Oh shut up."

"SECOND unshippable ship," Twilight muttered, surprising Chrysalis. "Four words, My Little Equality Unicorn."

Both Twilight and Cadance shivered at the memory of THAT Loop., Within the castle, Trixie cringed while trying to work on her latest trick. Within Equestria High, Sunset cringed as she nearly missed a note during rehearsal.

Derpy frowned. "This might be cliché, but... I don't get it."

"Let's just say that we objected due to their plans being WAY too similar," Twilight replied, "and the only method we could use was explosive overclocking. And Sunset learned the art of Trinity Limit. Funnily enough, the name was last minute, but the anagram was FOOF due to how the entire castle couldn't contain it."

"You, Trixie, and Sunset," Dash said. "Blowing up an entire Loop because the two were not only going to wed, but they were going to commit equality and genocide. And you three decided, 'Buck that Loop' and gave out your objections."

"And I was forced to bind them in holy matrimony," Cadance muttered. "Next thing we knew, we were in Eiken."

"No, I mean, who did she marry?" Derpy asked. "Equality unicorn doesn't tell me a lot. There are a lot of people in the multiverse that want some twisted form of equality."

"...Celesto," Twilight and Cadance said, the name itself like a poison in their heads.

Shining recognized the name and cringed. "You two should have came to us sooner," he said, as a fellow victim of that variant.

Derpy frowned. "Is... is that a guy from the katamari loop? I've never heard of him before."

"Derpy," Rainbow Dash replied, "as your friend and sometimes wingpony, there are some variants you should be relieved at for not knowing until now. The setting of My Little Unicorn and the stuff the Star Trek Anchors would break Prime Directive for stealing the name 'Starfleet' and using it for mass genocide as well as Celesto being a three-horned unicorn that looked traumatized by Twilight's voice and wanted racial cleansing with her at the forefront of his EMPIRE is one of them."

Twilight sighed. "That's just the abridged version," she said. "The full story is worse. MUCH worse."

* * *

>155.10 (Masterweaver)

"...huh."

Spike sighed. "That's the 'I don't know what to think' huh, isn't it?"

"Yeah." Twilight held out a letter. "Shining actually remembered to tell me he got engaged this loop."

"...huh."

* * *

>155.11 (Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Hey girls!" Nyx jumped into the clubhouse with a huge grin. "Guess what?! I got a new pet!"

She eagerly presented the billowing cloud of fear smoke. "And the best part is, it's baseline! Me and Tanty will almost never be apart!"

Rarity cringed as she looked at the fear smoke, but was relieved when Nyx called it Tanty. "I thought its name would be Larry," she muttered.

Nyx blinked. "Wait, Rarity? I thought-" She looked across the fillies and sighed. "So this is a reverse-sibling variant?"

"Looks like, sugarcube." Applejack adjusted her bow. "Never could figger why Bloom loves these things-"

"Anyway, yeah, its full name is Larry Tantabus Shadowfright, but-"

"You do realize that's literally a manifestation of Luna's guilt, right?" Rainbow pointed out.

Nyx frowned. "And I'm literally a manifestation of a split personality brought about by envy. I don't see what the big deal is."

"I thought Luna made that after she was purified," Rarity noted. "How exactly did you-?"

"No matter how she's purified, an unawake Luna will feel guilty and this little guy usually happens. A little bit of dream magic, a quick in-and-out dive, and boom."

"...and what if she's looping?"

"Haven't tested that yet."

* * *

>155.12 (Dave ID, Masterweaver, wildrook)

"Larry!" a male voice yelled. "LARRY! Where are you, Larry!?"

Normally, in Ponyville, pony names and pet names are more creative to their owners on their best judgment.

"LARRY!" a white unicorn male yelled, galloping through the area.

When Shining Armor found out about Nyx's pet, however, the full name does raise questions.

"THIS ISN'T FUNNY, LARRY!" Shining Armor yelled.

Cadance and Twilight Sparkle were quite surprised...then Twilight face-palmed.

"Shiny," Cadance, the only one who hasn't heard, asked, "who's Larry?"

"Oh, Twily," Shining Armor replied. "Cadance. You guys haven't seen a fear cloud, have you?"

"Fear...cloud?" Cadance asked them.

"He's referring to Nyx's new pet," Twilight said. "How do you lose a fear cloud?"

"I don't know!" Shining Armor yelled. "I've never even thought of a fear cloud as a pet! LARRY TANTABUS SHADOWFRIGHT!"

That's when screams of terror were heard from the Academy of Gifted Unicorns.

"Oh, found him," Shining Armor muttered. "Twily, I might need assistance."

Twilight groaned. "I'll find the others and see if Moondancer's not traumatized," she said.

"Am I the only one not getting the full story?" Cadance asked them.

"We'll explain later," Twilight replied. "We forgot it was Sleep Study night at the Academy."

* * *

>"Bad Tanty!" Nyx sprayed the fear cloud with her squirt bottle. "Bad! We do NOT give nightmares to ponies who do not deserve it."

Moondancer was flabbergasted as she watched the chaos unfold.

"What in the name of Celestia..." she muttered, looking at the fear cloud.

"Moondancer, this is Larry Tantabus Shadowfright," Twilight said. "Larry, this is Moondancer."

"That thing has a NAME!?"

"Long story. VERY long story!"

"It involves a nightmare!" Pinkie Pie said.

"Pinkie, why are you here?"

"Somepony here made a Pinkie Promise, and I'm going there right now. Oh, gotta go!" Pinkie disappeared.

"Is that normal?" Moondancer asked.

"It's actually pretty low-key for her."

Moondancer just sighed with resignation. "Is everyone from Ponyville this...crazy?" she asked Twilight.

Twilight shrugged. "They're pretty decent people, but they are eccentric."

"Hey mom, Tanty's been tamed. Do you have the carrier?"

Moondancer's eyes widened as Twilight produced a plastic box covered in runes. "Wait, did that little alicorn just call you _mom?_"

"I adopted her," Twilight explained simply. "Found her panicking in the forest, completely amnesiac. Get in here, Larry." She shoved the fear cloud in with her magic.

"Thanks mom! Oh, who's this?"

"Oh, this is Moondancer, one of my oldest friends. Moondancer, this is Nyx Sparkle, my adopted daughter."

Moondancer just waved. "Nice to meet you, Nyx," she said. "Now if you'll excuse me, I need to lie down." At that moment, she fainted.

'_At least she didn't snap under pressure,_' Twilight thought.

* * *

>155.13 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Why is there a rabbit on your head?"

"Because after several Loops replacing Puu, Ryo-Ohki and Diana, riding around like this got to be a habit," the rabbit replied. "So when I found Momma earlier, I asked her nicely, and she said yes."

Rarity stared. "Nyx?"

The rabbit smirked. "Yes?"

"WHY are you a rabbit?"

"I think it's a play on the old 'rabbit on the moon' myths from the Hub," Twilight interjected.

Nyx nodded in agreement.

Rarity smiled. "You realize, of course, this is going in my photo album."

"As long as we get copies," Twilight told her friend with a grin.

"But of course."

* * *

>155.14 (Gym Quirk)

Moondancer's party was winding down. Twilight had said her farewells and was about to offer Pinkie a teleport back to Ponyville.

"Hey, Twilight?" Pinkie's demeanor was oddly serious.

"Yes, Pinkie?"

"Could you teach me that 'Enter the Book' spell?"

"I'm not sure if I can adapt it to earth pony magic, or even your version thereof. You'd probably have to ascend to use it."

"No biggie. It's just that I've got these..." The party pony pulled a pair of printed primers from her pocket. "I can manifest inside most books, but I don't pick up much of anything in there. You said your spell lets you absorb some of the content..."

Twilight examined the volumes. "_Discours de la MÃ©thode_? _Meditationes de Prima Philosophia_? Bit of a departure from your usual reading list, aren't they?"

"Yeah. I kinda got onto a philosophy jag when Cheerilee asked me 'What is happiness?' for that 'History of Thought' course she's working on."

"Sure, Pinkie. Let me know when you have a couple of free hours."

_Never thought that Pinkie'd be one to get trapped by putting Descartes before the Horse_, mused Twilight.

* * *

>155.15 (wildrook)

Mac couldn't believe his eyes...neither did the Looping Crusaders, for that matter.

"No way," Diamond Tiara muttered.

"Ah'm just as surprised as you are," Apple Bloom replied, noticing the moves on the thug that tried to threaten Sweetie Belle.

"PILE DRIVER!" Sweetie Belle and Scootaloo yelled.
"PILE-DRIVER!"

Indeed, Cheerilee had attempted a piledriver on the rogue pony that tried to threaten Filthy Rich, Granny Smith, and Rarity at the same time. Normally, you had to be very dim in order to threaten not only Filthy Rich's daughter and her best friend, the youngest of the Apple Family, Rarity's sister, Rainbow Dash's adopted sister, and Twilight Sparkle's daughter by themselves (especially since Big Mac was there chaperoning their trip to Manehattan) and ask for unconditional surrender or else they off one of the students. Before any of the Elements and Big Mac could step in, it was Cheerilee that made the first move.

And the first move was a right jab into the stomach to the closest one.

"Big Mac," Apple Bloom said, "did you know about Miss Cheerilee being a wrestler?"

"Ee-nope," Big Mac replied.

And he wasn't kidding. Half the moves could be mistaken for a bear's massage therapy, but to see Cheerilee pull this off was quite a development.

"RETREAT!" the lead pony yelled, carrying their wounded and getting AWAY from the teacher.

Cheerilee had looked at the seven that were standing there, gaping.

"Oh," she said. "Sorry...guess I lost myself."

"Miss Cheerilee," Silver Spoon asked her, "what was that?"

"Turns out in some Loops, I've got a twin sister that's in the wrestling business," she replied. "Figured that I'd contact her and learn a few things from her. I just didn't think I'd have to use it before the others got here..."

"No," Nyx said, "they're on clean-up duty. Although I didn't take Sweetie Belle and Scootaloo as wrestling fans."

"And Ah really appreciate you defending Apple Bloom," Big Mac said, blushing. "Kind of wish Ah could have assisted."

"Maybe next time, Big Mac," Cheerilee replied. "Until then, let's continue the rest of the field trip before something else happens."

* * *

>155.16 (wildrook)

"KING ASPEN!" a voice yelled. "ARE YOU READY TO FACE THE MINOTAUR WITH PROGRESS ON HIS MIND!? WELL, TONIGHT, IN THE EVERFREE FOREST, YOU WILL FACE THE STAMPEDING, WORKHORSE, CHINA SHOP CONSTRUCTOR, WELLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLL-TOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO-DOOOOOOOOOO!"

Twilight face-hooved as she looked at the situation. Well-To-Do, for some odd reason, was channeling Recoome from the Abridged Dragon Ball series and challenging Aspen to wrestling.

"AND THIS IS GOING TO BE ALL-OR-NOTHING AS WHEN I WIN, THE FOREST WILL BE MARKED FOR THE PARK AND YOU WILL BE MY MASCOT! BECAUSE I AM WELL-TO-DO, AND I WILL BE YOUR DOOM! AND YOU'LL START FEELING PAIN, ALL! TOO! SOOOOOOOOON!"

King Aspen glared as he and Blackthorn were assessing the situation.

"Shouldn't Cheerilee be here with us?" Rarity asked them. "Her sister's the wrestler..."

"She has a sister?" Rainbow Dash asked her.

"...Wrestling's fake," Blackthorn said, plainly.

That caused an uproar among the minotaurs.

"This is a worse idea than making a Card Game vital for the fate of the world," Twilight muttered, "I swear to the Roots of the Horse Chestnut."

"Agreed," a voice said, among the Minotaurs. "You never were the smartest bulb, Well-To-Do."

The Construction Pony freaked out. "Wait, I know that voice..."

"So do I," Fluttershy replied. "It's..."

"IRON WILL! How did you find me?"

"How can I not find you?" Iron Will asked Well-To-Do. "One of the carrier pigeons was sent to me by mistake!"

"But I had my men catch all of the carrier pigeons that were to be sent to Princess Celestia and...I said that out-loud, didn't I?"

King Aspen then growled. "So that's why she never got my messages," he muttered. "So, Mr. Will...how'd you get my message?"

"Let's just say that Well-To-Do's policies were illegal even by my race's standards, Lord Aspen," Iron Will replied. "And raiding the Everfree Forest? Last I checked, there was a Hydra living here! I'm just here to make sure he doesn't get killed before I turn him in myself."

Aspen was blinking. "Not exactly my usual title," he said, "but at this point, when it comes to assistance for damaging my kingdom and finding out why the Royal Sisters never replied, I'd be glad for the assistance if you're after the ringleader."

"As soon as you recall the vines from Ponyville and Canterlot," Twilight replied. "Then, we'll move them out of the way...other than that, Fluttershy, how DID you send the Pigeon to Iron Will?"

"Misdirection," Fluttershy replied. "I CAN tame the animals of the forest, remember?"

"Oh...right...well...anyone up for popcorn?"

"As soon as we take care of the mafia," Pinkie Pie replied, "THEN we can watch Iron Will and King Aspen throw down the hurting on Well-To-Do. Seriously, why didn't we think of this before? It's like we were losing IQ points in this kind of situation..."

* * *

>155.17 (Evilhumour)

Twilight blinked at what came out of the egg during this test and then at her parents. Widening her eyes and quivering her lip, she unleashed the best puppy eyes she had to beg Twilight Velvet and Nightlight to keep the newly hatched being.

The fact that Celestia shrunk the Awake Tyrannosaurus Rex looper and said young reptile was sucking on her tail certainly did help matters.

* * *

>155.18 (OathToOblivion)

As Phoenix Wright Awoke, he noticed that he was standing in a familiar tree house. _(Looks like another Equestria Fused Loop. Wonder what's up this time?)_

"Phoenix!"

Phoenix turned to see Twilight looking at him. She looked slightly worried, so Phoenix felt the need to put her at ease somehow. "Hey, Twilight. What's the matter?" he asked. However, upon his saying that, Twilight looked slightly confused.

"Oh, uh, nothing much. It's just a typical Fused Loop, like we normally have. You know, the Equestria 500 and everything. But...are you all right?" she wondered.

_(? What's that supposed to mean?)_

"Um, of course I am. Why, did you think something happened?" Phoenix questioned, a confused look on his face.

"Well, it's just...Last Loop we saw each other, you said that you had told Apollo about his mother, and were worried about how you were going to tell Trucy about her..." Twilight started.

_**HOLD IT!**_

"What? I never said anything like that! I told Trucy about that a long time ago!" Phoenix exclaimed. Now he was really confused about what she was talking about.

"Huh...that's bizarre. I distinctly remember you telling me about that. And then I heard that somebody from one of those Kamen Rider Loops had seen you crying away on a bench. Something about Trucy abandoning you, sending you a letter, and going with Apollo to Borginia?" Twilight mused.

"! ...That never happened!" Phoenix denied. "Or rather...Trucy did go to Borginia with an Unawake Apollo one Loop, and sent me a letter. But I'm the one who let her go in the first place, and I had Maya trailing behind them as backup!"

Twilight scrunched up her face in thought. She knew Phoenix wouldn't lie to her about something like this, and she herself wasn't lying. But that meant...

"'When you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains must be the truth'," she quoted. "Neither of us are lying about what we're saying, which means the Phoenix Wright I met that Loop was an imposter!" she declared.

_**OBJECTION!**_

"But whoever that was knew about that one early Loop where Trucy went to Borginia, and they knew that Apollo started Looping. Which means it has to be someone we personally know. And that also doesn't explain the appearance of that person in the Kamen Rider Loops. I know some of those guys, and they wouldn't pull anything like this," Phoenix pointed out.

"You're right. This is a mystery that isn't going to be solved that easily," Twilight agreed. "But right now, we have one trial to overcome. Let's focus on Rainbow's Trial first, then let's think about this mystery."

"All right..."

_(I can't believe it. Someone's been impersonating me? I already had my fill with that in baseline, what with Furio Tigre and the phantom. I don't want a Looping one too!)_

* * *

>155.19 (Kris Overstreet)

Moondancer's jaw dropped. "You... apologize?"

Twilight Sparkle bowed her head solemnly. "I was completely thoughtless and self-absorbed. I never thought about your feelings, and that was wrong. I'm very sorry, and if there's any way I can make it up to you, I will. I still want to be your friend."

"Oh," Moondancer said, and, "Er," and, "Ah," and after a prolonged pause, "Could you pardon me a moment?" The door to Moondancer's long-neglected house shut, and from within Twilight heard the cessation of a sound she hadn't realized was there; the high-pitched electro-mechanical whining on the edge of hearing descended rapidly through the range of tones and faded into silence.

Then Moondancer reopened the door, smiling awkwardly and chuckling nervously. "There we go, had to go turn off the stove. Totally not at all shutting down my Doomsday Revenge on All Ponies Device two minutes before zero hour. Because I don't have one of those. What pony would? Hahahahaha!"

Pinkie Pie leaned over and whispered in Twilight's ear, "Wow, she really IS just like you!"

"Er... would you like to come to a party?" Twilight said, choosing to ignore the blatant lies. "It's going to be in the courtyard park where you were going to have yours. I thought-"

"Um, yeah, sure!" Moondancer nodded. "It'll be good to catch up on old times. But I may be a little late. I still have a bit of tidying up to do. And by tidy up I definitely do not mean overseeing the complete shutdown of a hot arcanite reactor and the restoration of eight redundant fail-safe triggers to no-go status."

"That's OK!" Pinkie responded. "We're still waiting on the cake anyway! See you at four o'clock?"

"Sure- oh, one more thing?" Moondancer reached behind her door and held out a large white cat, even fluffier than Opalescence. It growled at Twilight menacingly. "Could you find a home for Blofeld here? He kind of came with the swivel chair I absolutely do not have."

_I must remember,_ Twilight noted to herself, _not to leave reconciliation with my Canterlot friends so late in the Loop, no matter what other distractions there are. Variants happen._

The thing which Twilight had taken as a minaret, but which looked more and more like a magical blast emitter array, slowly retracted itself into Moondancer's roof, which closed shut over it with a click.

* * *

>155.20 (Tangent)

"I'm so glad you could all make it to my party," Moondancer stated with a shy smile at her gathered friends. She was especially glad that Twilight Sparkle had come as, among the four, Twilight was the one she felt the closest connection to.

"I Just wish I could stay longer," Twilight replied.

"What do you mean?" Moondancer asked.

"I just got an assignment from Princess Celestia to oversee the Summer Sun Celebration in Ponyville this year. I have to be there before noon tomorrow if I'm supposed to make sure everything is in order."

"Ooh, I'll be moving back to Ponyville after graduation!" Lyra Heartstrings mentioned. "You'll love it there! The library is actually built into an enchanted oak!"

"What? Like a classic mage house?" Minuet asked.

"I thought that those only popped up in fantasy stories?" Lemon Hearts interjected.

"Fantasy or not, that's apparently where I'll be staying while I'm away on the assignment. Moondancer?"

"Yes, Twilight?"

"I'm probably only going to be gone for a few days, but just in case it takes longer, would you mind watching over my apartment for me?" Twilight asked, levitating a spare key over to the surprised unicorn.

"You want me to watch your apartment?"

"You can even study there if you want. It's kind of set up like a mini-library."

"HA!" Minuet exclaimed cheerfully. "I knew you lived in a library!"

"I would be honored," Moondancer accepted Twilight's spare key with a smile.

Twilight Sparkle smiled herself as she made a mental note to make sure to keep in touch with her friends in Canterlot from now on, unless she was riding a loop tight to the base-line for whatever reason. Hmmm... After Nightmare Moon was dealt with this time, perhaps she'd extend her requested apartment sitting to an offer to actually stay there instead? After all, apparently Celestia had never gotten around to assigning the tower apartment to anypony else while she was gone...

* * *

>155.21 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

Trixie stared at the small booklet in her hooves with glazed eyes, before turning back to Chrysalis. "Has Trixie told you how much she loves you recently?"

"You could stand to mention it more often." the changeling queen replied with a smirk. "I simply thought you could use some new material, I know how much your act means to you."

Trixie nodded eagerly as she skimmed the packet again. "Indeed it does. And Trixie knows exactly who should be the first to witness Trixie's newest and greatest performance! After the last few Expansions Twilight asked Trixie to give her regards to her friend Moondancer. It is quite enjoyable to have an appreciative audience and so Trixie has been doing exactly that!"

"In other words you like having your ego inflated."

Trixie humphed and refused to dignify that with a response.

* * *

>Moonshine frowned. "Does your 'entertainment' all consist of pointless ego stroking?"

Trixie grumbled under her breath at the amused look Chrysalis directed at her before re-donning her stage persona. "The Great and Powerful Trixie has prepared a small performance for this event which she is certain you will find most enjoyable."

So saying she climbed to the stage of her cart and activated a self-playing piano. Once the song had reached the proper intro Trixie began to sing.

_ "Iiit's Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane_

_ Even though the synthesis is really quite insaaane_

_ If it touches almost anything it will go up in flaames_

_ Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!"_

Moondancer was surprised by the unexpectedly scientific nature of the song and found herself smiling, a fact which her friends were pleased by as they joined her for the show. To their surprise a violet Alicorn figure which Moondancer recognized as bearing a resemblance to the mythical sister of Celestia walked onto the stage.

_ "When I was learning chemistry_
_ I made a few mistakes_
_ My potions weren't that good_
_ But my explosions were first rate_
_ One day I met a mare who said_
_ She'd show me what to do_
_ I tried to make Dioxygen Difluoride_
_ And I woke up on the moon" _

Moondancer giggled at that, finding the irreverence to the supposed origins of the Mare in the Moon to be highly amusing. Even though they didn't get the reference the others also found it rather funny, if Minuette's reaction was anything to go by. Abruptly they gasped as the Alicorn figure suddenly revealed herself as a changeling before shifting into the form of a griffin they didn't recognize just in time for the chorus.

_ "Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane_
_ Even though the synthesis is really quite insaaane_
_ If it touches almost anything it will go up in flaames_
_ Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane!_
_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_
_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_
_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_
_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_
_ I've been around the world_
_ From Fillydelphia to Roam_
_ I've seen a lot of things_
_ That I could never see at home_
_ But all the places that I've been_
_ I didn't want to be_
_ I never tried to get there_
_ I was sent by TNT" _

Accompanied by a small explosion of smoke, the fear of the changeling was replaced by laughter as the smoke cleared to reveal a seemingly charred griffin.

_ "Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane_

_ Even though the synthesis is really quite insaaane_

_ If it touches almost anything it will go up in flaames_

_ Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom!_

_ Um diddle diddle diddle um diddle boom! '_

_ 'You know Trixie could take it further and synthesize Heptanitrocubane"_

The changeling quickly leveled a glare at the unicorn performer who immediately backed down.

_ "But that's going a bit too far, don't you think?"_

At this point Moondancer was trying not to join in on Minuette's uproarious laughter, wanting to at least see the end of the act. Now completely revealed as a Changeling both mares on the stage continued singing.

_ "So if Tirek approaches_

_ There is no need for despair_

_ Just synthesis this chemical_

_ And hurry out of there_

_ But better do it carefully_

_ Or it could change your life"_

The Changeling moved forward to center stage. _ "For example"_

_ "Yes" _Trixie led.

_ "One night I gave it to my marefriend_

_ And she blew up my Hive"_

This was said with a glare which nearly cost Moondancer her composure.

_ "Hey! Trixie said she was sorry"_

Aaannnd, there it went. Collapsing into laughter along with her friends Moondancer barely noticed as the duo on stage finished their act.

_"It's Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane_"

_"Even though the synthesis is really quite insaaane_"

_"If it touches almost anything it will go up in flaames_"

_"Hexanitrohexaazaisowurtzitaaane!"_"

As the music wound down Trixie stared with satisfaction at the result of her performance. Combining two of her favorite things in Equestria into one glorious act, truly her love knew her well. Pushing affectionately against Chrysalis' side she moved to the front of the stage to take her bow.

(Masterweaver)

"It's obvious they stole that tune," Lemon Hearts whispered to Minuette, "but I can't figure out from where!"

"Shush," Minuette replied. "Not everything has to be completely original, and look how happy Moondancer is!"

* * *

>155.22 (Masterweaver)

Bonbon blinked, looking around. Ponyville seemed kind of strange at the moment... what with Derpy being a giant that meowed, amongst other things. What in the world was-

"MnnMnn?"

The earth pony looked down at her hoof.

Her green hoof.

Her four green hooves.

Each with a face.

And the sweet roll that had replaced her tail.

"...uh... Lyra? What's going on?"

* * *

>155.23 (Masterweaver)

"EEEEP!" Applejack jumped up as Luna burst out of the closet. "What are ya-oh. Right. This is a dream, ain't it?"

Luna nodded. "I apologize, but the Tantabus-" She leaned her head to the side. "Ah... who exactly is that?"

"Oh! Uh..." Applejack blushed. "Well, ya see... Luna, this is mah dream husband. Dream husband, this is Luna. Ah, uh, Ah can't actually always control mah dreams, and a filly can go wondering sometimes-

"Say no more. This is hardly the most awkward situation we have stumbled upon." Luna flushed, glancing away. "There are quite a few dreams in which I star-

"Heh, Ah can only imagine how awkward that must be. Take it as a compliment!" Applejack suggested with a broad grin. "Ah mean, if them colts and, Ah suspect, fillies feel yer the best... partner that they can dream up, there's gotta be a reason for that! Ain't that right, dream husband?"

"Why absolutely, miss Applejack my fine filly! Don't you agree brother of mine?"

"Indubitably, brother of mine! There's no such thing as bad publicity!"

The orange mare's face fell. "Tantabus hit him while Ah wasn't lookin', didn't it."

Luna raised a hoof. "I'd... suspect as much, yes, I was rather distracted by my own thoughts."

"Right." Applejack rose a hoof and materialized something she'd seen an Ork carrying once. "Why don't ya'll go on huntin' the durn thing, Luna? This dream's about ta get mighty bloody."

* * *

>155.24 (Masterweaver)

"Oh hey Luna." Nyx waved at the approaching alicorn. "How's life?"

"Life is fair, Nigh-ahem, Nyx." Luna cleared her throat. "Might I ask why you are forming this shared dream?"

"Oh. See my friends, a bunch of looping fillies, they get into competitions every so often. 'Who can build the best battleship,' 'who can build the best starship,' that sort of thing. So recently, they decided to have a little dream competition. Last one sleeping wins."

The larger alicorn nodded, watching the chaos around her. "I... see. So long as you're not abusing your powers, I suppose..."

"Nah, I'm the referee here. Care to stay and watch?" Nyx summoned up some dream popcorn. "I mean, it's a look into the minds of loopers that most Unawake ponies will never get."

* * *

>155.25 (Evilhumour)

"-ood day miss." the person in front of her said, handing her a package of groceries which she did her best not to let hit her in the face with her magic. Nodding numbly as Vinyl Woke up, she backed up and let herself be carried away in the crowd of strange looking people in this odd looking city. Kinda of a mixture of Rare's fashionness and Discord's weirdness, she thought to herself as people more or less ignored her except to tell her off for bumping into them.

Grunting back the multiversal curses to the idiot, the unicorn _tried_ kick start her loop memories of _where_ she looped in and what the _sap_ was going on. Jumping back in surprise as there was a sudden splash of water from the wheel of a cart being pulled close to the gutters that nearly hit her face, she was sorely tempted to do the simple thing and ask someone where they were when she heard the loudest cry ever-even louder than the time that Twilight's library was stuck in an infinite destruction loop bug for that one loop. Using her magic to pull several people her side of the street as several of the buildings across of her were simply _gone_. Already, people around her were panicking and shouting.

"What was that?!" One person shouted, looking around like a chicken with their head cut off.

"Dammit Vinyl, you got me covered in mud!" Another person glared at her from the gutters, looking if he would grab some himself and toss it at the white unicorn.

"To hell with you, the mare just saved your life!" The woman next to him slapped his hand and shoved him into the mud completely.

"Excuse me, but where the _spruce_ did that come from?!" Vinyl shouted, her magic already reaching out to move several of remaining rubble to a single spot, people already looking for survivors.

"I don't know but it _seemed_ to come from the royal pala..." the person trailed off, Vinyl already in the air with her wub hooves propelling her the distance as her loop memories finally kicked in.

* * *

>"So you see I-OW dammit kid, my ears do _not_ come off-" Vinyl grunted to the baby on her neck, laughing his head off as discovered more things of his new toy. "I heard the little tyke crying, and since I kinda am the master of all sound-_EEEEK!_" Vinyl squeaked as the infant discovered her glowing horn, and had _very_ cold hands. Blushing, she let the mother lift the infant up, moving to sit beside the mare. Smirking, the mother sat down beside the looper so the child could be near the mare who was eying the tail. "A-and when I heard _him_ cry out, I knew I could easily tame it and put it under control."

"Which you have shown effortlessly, Lady Scratch," the woman opposite of her said with a smile. "And I am glad that young Blackagar Boltagon will have a fine mentor training him to use his powers safely." the smile then turned a bit vicious, leaning down to stare into Vinyl's red eyes. "To which you will agree to, correct?"

"Yeah..." Vinyl blushed, looking the still furious royal guards, their weapons still all pointed at her. Perhaps bursting into the room where the queen was giving birth, using her magic on the infant without saying anything was _kinda_ a poor idea. "Again, I'm kinda sorry about that..."

"We all make mistakes, Lady Scratch," the woman said, nodding her head as she began to feed the young prince. "But what counts is that you do not _repeat_ them, understand?" the glare was back, making Vinyl more scared of her than the guards that were ready to poke her with a lot of pointy objects. Nodding her head, the woman smile relaxed. Reaching out with a free hand, she pressed down on the unicorn's nose. "Go-"

"_MEEP!_" Vinyl squeaked, as she shot off some dubstep magic into the air, blushing as she did so. "Um..._please_ no booping my nose?"

* * *

>155.26 (Evilhumour)

"_Nyooooooooooooxxx, call off your pet!_"

Twilight blinked as she was stirred awake by somepony shouting.

Sticking her head out of the window, she watched Lemon running in circles as the fear cloud chased after him, spitting out lightning bolts at the stallion for no adequately explained reason.

Turning her head to the side, she saw a makeshift rope coming out of her daughter's bedroom window and began to smirk to herself.

As Nyx pulled the Tantabulus off her boyfriend and began to soothe the fear-cloud, she chuckled and began to record.

It looked like the traditional boyfriend-sneaks-into-girlfriend's-room concern wasn't much of one.

* * *

>155.27 (Evilhumour)

"I've got an army," Loki bragged.

"We've got this muffin. Here, catch!" Tony smiled as he tossed the baked good at the surprised Asgardian.

"You really think a _muffin_ will stop m-" That was as far as Loki got before he was bowled over by Derpy.

* * *

>155.28 (Evilhumour)

"I can't believe you _stole_ them!" Twilight shouted, shaking her head.

"I didn't _steal_ them, I _found_ them!" Sticky Hooves flared his wings out. "It's not _my_ fault that I _care_ for precious artifacts of the past unlike the rest of you and they were just _laying_ there for anyone to find and use!"

"Gah!" Twilight groaned, rubbing her head with her hoof. "Well, would you _please_ give me the Elements of Harmony? We kinda need them."

Twilight looked over her shoulder to watch Rainbow Dash lead Nightmare Moon around the Everfree Castle.

"I'd like to give you a complete set before I do so..." Sticky Hooves muttered.

"We _do_ need to use them to recreate the sixth element you know..."
Twilight raised an eyebrow at the looper who grumbled as he pulled out the stone orbs of the Elements of Harmony.

Twilight quickly gave them to her friends to save Luna and rid her of the Nightmare Forces.

* * *

>Slowly, as Twilight woke up from using the Elements, she noticed something was missing.

"Uh girls, where are the Elements?" Twilight asked the confused mares before realizing there was a note attached to her nose.

_ 'I found the Elements of Harmony _first _Twilight, so they are _my _relics, not yours._

_Chapter Master Sticky Hooves of the Blood Ravens._'

Frowning as she crumpled the paper up, Twilight said, "Bloody magpies."

* * *

>155.29 (Heliomance)

Twilight's library shuddered, shook, and finally one wall smashed entirely. From the wreckage rolled a pair of enormous treads, carrying a vast tank. Nearly fourteen metres long, it looked slightly absurd emerging from the tree, that was clearly too small to hold it.
The absurdity was compounded by the fact that it was painted a bright, cheery shade of pink, and each of its seven cannons was adorned with balloons.

Lemon Rush gaped at the Balloonblade Super Heavy Party Tank as it rotated its turret to aim at Tirek. "But - how?! To hide that tank there, you'd have to be some kind of-" - realisation flashed across his face - "tactical genius!"

Twilight's eye started to twitch, as the dust from her demolished library began to settle around her. "PIIIIIINKIIIIIIIE!"

* * *

>155.30 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

The members of the Cutie Mark Crusaders sat quietly, for once, in their clubhouse. The reason for their silence had less to do with a lack of activity and more to do with the giant blueprints spread out across the floor.

"Okay girls, today's tha big day. This Loop has a second holiday to honor the Founders besides Hearthswarming Eve and thanks ta gettin some help from a few other scientists in some a' mah recent Fused Loops, Ah think we're finally ready to put the last touches on the special suits we were makin' for Cookie, Clover and Pansy."

Taking over from Applebloom Silver Spoon floated over to a specific section of the schematics. "The original design had some problems with my Alchemy skills, so I had to do a lot of research to try and figure out the various differences between Alchemy and Equestrian Magic. Twilight and Trixie helped a lot, and I think I can replicate most of the necessary parts using my Chaos Magic. That should allow them to access normal Earth, Pegasus and Unicorn Magic as long as the Transmutation Circles don't wear out."

Scotaloo and Sweetie Belle moved forward. "With Sweetie's help I was able to put together something to get the suits air ready. We just needed to figure out how to get all the parts working together. Sweetie had the idea to fuse Song Magic into the parts so that they when they were put together it basically uses the magic for Heartsongs to act like a normal body, no extra effort needed. That way they don't have to try and relearn how to use their bodies. Plus we can use it for all three instead of just for the pegasus model. I did all the manual stuff while Sweetie worked her magic and the results look promising."

Nyx smiled happily as she stepped up. "I know how much this means to you guys, so I volunteered to be the one to provide the power." Reaching into her Pocket she retrieved a red gem nearly three times the size of her hoof. "I used about a thousand years worth of my Magic from the Loops to make this Philosopher's Stone. According to Silver the mix of energies should help her cover the gaps where they don't match up right."

Applebloom nodded and took the lead again. "And Ah put it all together usin' th' nanites Ah reverse engineered way back. Ah think we're ready."

* * *

>Pansy shifted nervously in her seat, her wings fluttering anxiously behind her. The euphoria she felt at finally having a body again, one just as good as her original and perhaps better even, was momentarily set aside as she looked at the view in front of her. Seated next to her were a mechanical Earth and Unicorn pony, Cookie and Clover respectively. They seemed to share her feelings if the looks on their, surprisingly expressive, faces were any indication.

"We're gathered here today ta _officially _welcome the newest members of the Cutie Mark Crusaders: Smart Cookie, Clover th' Clever and Private Pansy." Standing next to the three Intelligent Devices, turned robots, was the CMC; each of whom was wearing their member only capes. The same capes which decorated the chassis' of the Founder trio.

"Uh, Applebloom? Do we really need to be doing this?" Cookie asked, nervously glancing down the very steep hill they were perched upon. The filly nodded with a wide smile.

"A'course. It's tradition." And with that she gave the wheelbarrow in which the three founders of Equestria sat a gentle push, sending it rolling rapidly downhill. As they watched their friends rocket through the center of Ponyville and towards the Everfree, the CMC gave the departing group a parting cheer.

"Happy Founder's Day!"

* * *

>155.31 (Masterweaver) (continuation of 150.1)

Berry shook her head. "Scho. Scho Leelee. I'sch wasch thinking about zebralicorni."

Her sister hiccuped. "You, you mean Zecora, yesh?" She tilted her glass and peered at it. "Alsho, why are we drunk again?"

"For old time'sh schake, filly. Canna be a brewer if 'n ye don't sample sometimes!" Berry giggled at her horrendous scottish accent. "Aaaaaanywaaaaaysh. Sho Zecy's a zebabra, yesh?"

"Uh-huh."

"But, but she goesh alicornity. Zebrabicorn."

"Yeah, she *hic* she does. Why don't you ever do, do the drunk *hic* thing?"

"Ish genetic."

"We're shishters!"

"My point. My point is. Alicornys are mixies of all three ponies. But Zecy's a zebzeb. Sho she, she's not got earth pony, yesh?"

"Okay...?"

"Sho, sho if she hashen't got'sh hershelf earth pony, maybe, maybe she'sh not got hershelf peggypony or cornypony either?"

Cheerilee held up a hoof, paused for a moment, then gasped for ten seconds with two interrupting hiccups. "Whoa. Sho what, what happensh if she triesh to ushe her unicorn magic or *hic* her, her pegasush magic-?"

At about that time, Cadance ran into the bar. "Okay, there's a reasonable explanation for this, but my dating simulator is currently flooding Canterlot mansions with exotic tea and me and Zecora need help putting it down!"

* * *

>AN:

155.1: Clothing quality is secondary. Everyone wants a Twilight Suit.

>155.2: Now that is subtle.155.3: It's just a savoury meal!

>155.4: Finally, no-one around to stop her.155.5: It's not simple, but it works.

>155.6: It's a long story. And would probably make a good rom-com.155.7: Some things are not funny. (Joker's from DC.)

>155.8: I'm not sure why, but it does.155.9: Erg. That's a marginally worse rated rom-com.

>155.10: Some variations are minor.155.11: Hence a pet.

>155.12: Hence trouble with a pet.155.13: Nice perch if you can get it. There's even a handhold.

>155.14: Ow.155.15: School of hard knocks.

>155.16: Some solutions are simple.155.17: Spike replaced.

>155.18: You really need the shouts to be flashing and in an odd format.155.19: Not-quite-mad science.

>155.20: Or you could do that.155.21: Ah, a song.

>155.22: This could get inconvenient.155.23: Oog.

>155.24: Competitive bunch, aren't they...155.25: It's complicated. (Marvel)

>155.26: They just saw Romeo and Juliet.155.27: It works. (Marvel)

>155.28: Dang Blood Ravens. (40K)155.29: Dang Creed. (Also 40K)

>155.30: A long, long term project.155.31: In vino veritas.

163. Chapter 163

156.1 (Masterweaver)

"Okay." Cadance grinned. "Twilight and Moondancer."

Chrysalis twisted her lip, bringing a hoof to her muzzle. "I'm... going to say no."

"What? But you've seen how close those two are in baseline. And with help from looping Twi, Moondancer can grow into a ridiculously competent and confident mare--"

"And there's the problem." Chrysalis took a sip from her tea. "See, romance is about give and take, but Moondancer... Moondancer grew attached to Twilight because Twilight had the confidence that Moondancer didn't. I mean, both of them were... well-read, shall we say, but I feel that Twilight's lack of sociability relates more to her insistence on maintaining control alienating her from other ponies, whereas Moondancer seems to be a natural introvert justifying her lack of sociability as other ponies simply not being intelligent enough to understand her. Twilight was basically Moondancer's exploratory social probe growing up, at least on a subconscious level."

"So it'd be perfectly natural for her to develop a crush on Twilight," Cadance pointed out. "After all, not only is the filly an intellectual equal, but the level of trust and admiration necessary to employ Twilight like that could easily develop into infatuation. Admittedly, it might dull for a bit once the two of them gain the crowd of other Canterlot friends, but it could still be there, lingering until re-awakened. While the whole part where Twilight took leave of her party during the Nightmare Moon incident would be problematic, I can see them getting together with a little nudging and the looping Twilight wouldn't even have to worry about that."

"Except that Twilight, looping or not, would not be contributing to this relationship," Chrysalis argued. "She would consider Moondancer a close friend, but the non-looping Twilight would probably be too high-strung to deal with a potential relationship even if outside influences assisted her, and the looping Twilight is pretty decently set into a low-libido low-romance mindset to the point of identifying as asexual. Either way, she would probably shut down any advances. I'm sorry, but bringing Twilight into any romantic venture is almost guaranteed failure." The changeling took another sip of her tea. "Although, they would look cute together, if it happened."

Cadance sighed. "Yeah, I suppose you're right." She flipped another pair of cards. "Alright, Rainbow Dash and... Fancypants."

* * *

>156.2 (Masterweaver)

Apple Bloom fell over laughing. "Oh sweet birch, ash, an' oak!"

Diamond Tiara blushed, hiding her face. "We're in the middle of an epic battle here, Bloom-"

"Oh come on!" The yellow filly pointed. "Hahaha, just look at him!"

Diamond looked up and groaned. "Daaaaaad! You're embarrassing me!"

Honestly, flying around on a cloud of moneyâ€¦|

"I guess money really can do anything," Apple Bloom sniggered. "Hey, can he make consequences go away?"

* * *

>156.3 (Evilhumour)

"Here you go Lemon," Fluttershy smiled as she placed the plate of green vegetables in front of the colt. "Now I'd like you eat all of it before you go ou-"

"Done!" The yellow colt smiled, holding the clean plate to her. "I'm off-"

"Did you really eat it?" Fluttershy raised an eyebrow to her son, who was already sweating bullets.

"Ye-yes?" Lemon squeaked out, looking off to the side. Fluttershy raised an eyebrow, looking under the table to check for any tossed veggies. "I really did eat them, see?" Lemon titled his head and bared his teeth to show some green leaves on them. "So can I go-"

Fluttershy leaned in and sniffed his mouth. Wrinkling her nose, she quickly grabbed his ear and dragged him back to his seat. "Next time, don't use your acid spit and toss it into your pocket Lemon." Placing down another plate with even more green vegetables down onto the table, Fluttershy looked at her soon. "Now please, eat your dinner."

Groaning, Lemon Rush stabbed the meal with a fork and began to eat his salad.

* * *

>156.4 (Masterweaver)

He'd tried to pull the picture off the wall, but Berry had taken one look at it, ascended, and used her magic to bind it to the cabinet while laughing maniacally. And then, of course, these two had waltzed in...

Moon Bunny, as the locals called her, leaned over the bar counter with a broad grin. Luna was right next to her, grinning even wider.

Their hooves were each on their own compacts.

Macintosh, for his part, staunchly ignored them. Never make the first move. That was one of the key things in these situations...

* * *

>156.5 (Gamerex27)

The door to Mac's bar opened, and a shoggoth proceeded to drag a drooling gryphon into the bar with its tentacles.

Mac glanced at the Cutie Mark both non-ponies inexplicably shared: an eight-pointed star. "Want me to open up a tab, Nurgle?"

"You never charge Loopers," the plague god said, seating the gryphon on a stool and propping him up with a few macroscopic bacteria. "And this is not a time for jokes. My companion need help. Badly."

Mac looked at Tzeentch for a long time. The glazed eyes, the drooling, the occasional whimpers of terror...and the hormones of anti-arousal Mac's trained senses from eons of working with fermenting crops he picked up on. There was only one explanation.

"Who'd he walk in on?"

"Slaanesh and Naoki."

Big Mac winced. Putting aside the Equestrian Loopers' rocky relationship with the so-called "Mad Anchor" (which was sometimes gossiped about in his own bar), that couple did not seem like anything he ever wanted to see. Or think about. Or be in the same Loop in. "Was it a one night stand, orâ€|?"

"Me only knows. No, wait, I don't, and I have n_o desire to_. My dear boy, we need the strongest drink you've got_."

The entire bar fell quiet at this request. Twilight and the rest of the Elements of Harmony gazed at each other warily, then dived into their Subspace Pockets in perfect, practiced unison.

Nodding gravely, Mac ducked underneath the bar, and was followed by the sounds of dozens of electronic, bioelectric, arcane, and mundane locks turning and opening. A few minutes later, he popped back up, gingerly holding a small bottle no bigger than a teacup in his hoof.

"Don't. Spill. Any of it," Mac warned, as he slowly and carefully poured it into the mug.

Nurgle glanced at the label on the bottle. "Are you trying to swindle us? That label clearly says it's the _second_ strongest drink in your collection!"

"Strongest stuff is fer Admins only," Mac replied. "A Looper drinks any of it, it automatically crashes the Loop fer safety's sake. An' that's just the stuff from _my_ stock: Oak knows what's in Berry's personal cellar."

"Very well, then." Nurgle tipped the drink into his fellow Chaos God's mouth, then took a sip for himself. "Keep it coming."

* * *

>156.6 (Filraen)

Starlight Glimmer tried not to groan in frustration. Her humiliation from Twilight Sparkle won't go unpunished! She, however, knew her on limitations: even if she was a unicorn talented and driven enough to create the cutie mark removal spell she wouldn't be good against an alicorn princess like Twilight Sparkle in direct combat. That was the reason for her current plan: learning about Princess Twilight Sparkle, her strong points and weaknesses. While going to Ponyville might be too suspicious, using one her many travels to Canterlot resulted in a good chance to learn about her without being discovered.

That was the reason Starlight Glimmer was at this restaurant today, watching Princess Twilight who seemed to be a meeting of ponies from her time in Princess Celestia's School for Gifted Unicorns, eating her salad sandwich while not attracting suspicions to herself. Eventually the group left, and Starlight ended eating the delicious sandwich.

"Waiter, check please." Just because Starlight was on a mission doesn't mean she's to be discourteous to those poor ponies who still haven't been taught the Harmony of Equality.

Now Starlight could go home and organize the information she had gathered this week about Twilight Sparkle in Canterlot.

"Excuse me Miss," the waiter said in a baritone tone. "But it seems like your bill has already been paid for."

"What?"

"Here, please have the receipt." and the waiter handed it over. To Starlight's surprise, the receipt was scribbled with a small note.

_Be careful, I'll be watching._

_Princess Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

My next Loop brought me to the world called Spira. When I Awakened, I soon found myself alongside the Blitzball player Tidus. He reminded me a lot of the guy with the same name back on Destiny Islands, right down to his appearance. It was weird to say the least; not half as weird as some of the things I've experienced so far.

The journey to help this Loop's Anchor, a summoner callef Yuna, defeat the monster called Sin, reminded me a lot of the adventures I had back with King Mickey, and the monsters here were kinda interesting challenges.

In the end, we defeated the being called Yu Yevon, and Sin was gone for good. But the 'dream of the fayth', the slumber of the souls which created the summons, had to end to allow such a victory, and since Tidus was from said dream, he had to fade away as well.

I expected the Loop to end there, but was I wrong.

For the next two years, I honed my skills fighting monsters, beating up bad guys...that sort of thing. I met up with Yuna again while I had been exploring ancient ruins atop Mount Gagazet; she had joined a group of treasure hunters called the Gullwings. I found myself traveling alongside Yuna once again, along with another friend from our first adventure- Yuna's cousin Rikku. And no, she's not connected to Riku from the Kingdom Hearts Loop, and yes, the joke has been made a million times. It is weird how similar her voice sounded like you, Twilight. There was also new friend, the aloof swordswoman Paine.

In something that shouldn't have surprised me, we ended up saving Spira AGAIN; the threat this time was from a giant machine called Vegnagun, which a lost soul called Shyuin planned to use to destroy Spira. The resemblance to Tidus was uncanny, right down to the fighting style, but we won in the end.

Thanks to the fayth, Tidus returned shortly after Shyuin was defeated, and peace had returned to Spira.

Having two adventures in one Loop like this was rare, but it was fun. I learned some new spells here, and experienced a lot. I await the next adventure I have, whatever Loop it may be in...

* * *

>156.7 (HarmonyChaos, Masterweaver)

Celestia rolled her eyes as, once again, the new bearer of generosity started freaking out over her dress. Yes, she was an immortal princess, but honestly it wasn't as though a casual visit required so much primping up. Although it would explain why her faithful student was so late... and she'd been hoping to introduce Philomena to her too-

Ah yes, there was Twilight!

...in a collar.

...on a leash.

...next to a yellow pegasus that was also leashed and collared.

...and followed by a blue pegasus that was holding both of said leashes.

Celestia managed to keep her calm mask on, as centuries of handling Equestrian politics had trained her, but only just. "Twilight! It is so good to see you. And... I see you're, ah, experimenting?"

The unicorn gave her a flat look. "I lost a bet."

"And I'm just here for moral support," the yellow pegasus added.

"Hey princess!" The blue pegasus waved brightly. "How do you like my new pets? Aren't they just, heh heh, the cutest things ever?!"

Suddenly a white flash flooded the room, and Discord appeared with Pinkie Pie on a leash, and collared.

"Hello everpony!" He said as he grabbed a glass of fruit punch, drinking the glass.

THUD!

Everyone turned to the unconscious Princess.

"Wait, so it's not bring your pony to work day? Huh." Discord said as he snapped his talon, removing the leash and collar from Pinkie and making a chocolate rain cloud appear above her.

"Same time next week?" He asked.

"Yup!" Pinkie said as she practically sang a choir all by herself and ran upstairs with it.

* * *

>156.8 (Masterweaver)

"Gah! Aaargh-PRINCESS! GET YOUR PURPLE BUTT OUT HERE!"

Twilight rolled her eyes, stepping out to her palace's balcony. "What is it Sunset-?*snnnnnrk*!" She put her hoof over her muzzle.

"She's like me... but with wings?" The purple unicorn latched Sunset Shimmer's rear leg gave her a fraughtful teary look. "I can grow wings senpai! And I'll, I'll stay in this weird horse world if you want me to..."

"Are you, hee, having a little trouble there Sunset?"

Sunset glowered up at the giggling alicorn. "Just... just get down from there and help me."

* * *

>156.9 (Evilhumour)

Twilight had to admit as she walked through the moonlight while ponies both stabbed each other and waved to her, this was one of the variant loops that she still wasn't sure she really hated or not, despite going through it many times in the past.

It was a variant where Nightmare Moon was the ruler over all in Eternal Night, and everypony had embraced their nightmare selves while still remaining true to their normal personalities. An example was Donut Joe grinding up several ponies for his pastries in the window, before levitating over a specially made doughnut just for her. The ponies in question who were being ground up by Equestria's number one baker popped back into existence and tried to run, when the owner stopped them and gave the teenagers the riot act for trying to dine and dash.

That was another fact that made things hard to really judge this loop; death was pretty much a free choice option which was a benefit as many ponies' talents relied on the temporary murder of their neighbours and friends, and ponies were so friendly and upbeat about it, despite the constant gloom and blood splatter.

As she nibbled on her flesh doughnut, she set out a Ping which had no reply back. Either that meant it she was soloing this loop or someponies were being quiet. Waving to her dracolich assistant, she walked past the vampiric thestral guards who were talking about the best blood bank to take their mares for a double dinner date, and she smiled at her mentor of this loop.

"My dear, precious student," Nightmare Moon boomed, a napkin dabbing the remains of the cockatrice meal away. "I am most proud of your studies and work, my dear Eternal Twilight." Flying over to nuzzle the potential Arch Mage and the number one voted cutest necromancer of the year, the Princess threw a literal blood gem toward Spike. "You have continued to grow and improve by leaps and bounds, with your studies in the relationship of light and dark magic with that wonderful paper arguing the label a type of magic has does not make it evil, but I must confess I have a concern with you." Holding up a letter, Nightmare Moon cleared her throat while wrapping a wing around the mare. "It is a letter about the return of my dear sister Solar Flame... or as she calls herself now, Celestia," Nightmare Moon spat out, shuddering at the lost Princess's mad name. "She is going to make her return shortly; a few days at most and will try to dispose me and then try to change the natural order of life in Equestria- have death be a final action the first time around, use magic to control the seasons permanently, have the sun and moon up every day in a year opposed to a the standard hundred year shift, and so many other poor insane ideas." Sighing, the Princess pulled Twilight closer to her in a tight hug. "Whilst I do appreciate you trying to create several new spells to hold her back, I wish you to travel to the most chaotic town in our fair Empire, Ponyville, for two important details." Nodding at the dracolich who had already got out a scroll and a feather out, Nightmare Moon walked over to her throne.

"Number one; I, Princess Nightmare Moon, entrust Eternal Twilight to oversee that the annual ceremony goes perfectly as possible, and number two; that you make some friends that you did not raise from the dead." Princess Nightmare Moon smirked, watching the young necromancer blush at being reminded of that event several years ago.

As Twilight was ushered out of the throne room, she kept a mental checklist open to see how this loop really stacked up.

* * *

>As the thestral vampires pulled the carriage into Ponyville, Twilight watched as everypony gave her a look over before going back to their usual business, with very little outside of the normality of her home.

Of course, as soon as she thought that, she noticed that Bon Bon was walking with Lyra, who seemed to be switching between a unicorn, human, seapony, a pegasus, a griffon and other species. Wondering if this was something natural of this Loop or Lyra sending a code to her, Twilight wasn-

"HIYA!" Jumping in surprise, Twilight snapped her head around to see a bouncing and perky Pinkie Pie, dressed exactly like her Cupcake variant self, with her normal grin on her face and a long butcher knife in her hoof. "I'm Pinkamina Diane Pie, but you can call me Pinkie! I'm the number one pastry chef in all of Ponyville, and if that dang hack in Canterlot will finally retire, and all of Equestria! You must be the pony coming here to oversee the festival tomorrow morning as I have never seen you before today and Mayor Ivory Scroll said that the cutest necromancer of the year will be the one in charge and you do match the pony on the cover of Young Heart Stealers unless you are changeling but I doubt that as the changeling queen is looking for her daughter with your brother and the entire hive."

Spike simply blinked his eyes in confusion. "Uhâ€¦nice dress?" He said lamely, blinking his undead eyes again.

"Awww, thank you mister undead dragon!" Pinkie Pie grin grew as she bounced around in place, the cutie mark dress fanning outwards. "It's made from all my friends so I always have them close to me and I can remember all the fun we had together and I am always looking to add new friends to my dress. If you don't mind, I would love you add you to my dress!" Leaning in close with the knife, Pinkie Pie gave her puppy eyes.

"But we just met!" Twilight protested, backing up slightly at the odd request.

"Silly filly, a stranger is just somepony you haven't met yet and a friend is gained whenever you say hello or trade stories with or just talk with about the randomest things like did you know I can lick my whole face as my tongue is super long and I can talk for a very long as I was gifted by a traveling pony with extended lungs that was meant to be a curse and I am able to tell instantly what kind of cupcake a pony will like the best unlike that _HACK_ Donut Joe and I can reach into my mane for all kinds of stuff and I can-"

"Okay Pinkie, okay!" Twilight laughed, hugging the mare tightly who returned the gesture with great enthusiasm. Twilight then snickered and giggled loudly as the mare stabbed her flanks with the long butcher knife and cut her cutie marks off before Pinkie sliced her jugular vein open. As it was part of the free option with death in this Loop, the intent behind the murder determined the pain felt and with a mare like Pinkie Pie, it was like a thousand of feather being run across her entire body. Wiping a tear away with a giggle still in her mouth, Twilight looked down to see a cupcake being offered to her by the number one party pony as Twilight appeared over her own dead body. Using her magic to bring the offered treat to her mouth to take a bite, Twilight had to resist an urge to send out a magical spark from how tasty it was. With a wide grin on her face, Pinkie Pie leaned over to hug her again before bouncing away with the corpse in tow.

Spike turned his head to Twilight and opened his mouth before a cupcake was placed in by a pink hoof. "Sorry about that mister dragon, I almost forgot to give you one too! Bye!"

Spike blinked again and began to chew the muffin with a grin on his face. "Wow this _really_ tasty!" Hopping onto Twilight's back, the dragon pulled out a list. "I can't wait to meet more ponies of this town! They seem amazing!"

Smirking, Twilight agreed to that fact as she made her way towards Sweet Apple Acres to meet this Loops Applejack.

* * *

>156.10 (Gamerex27) (Continuation of 150.12)

"So. Um...how's your Nyx?"

"She's fine," Twilight said, sipping her tea and trying to ignore the Royal Guards sitting at either end of the four-seated table, to the sides of herself and the entity currently controlling Starlight Glimmer's body.

"She's still going steady with Lemon Rush," she continued. "And I think she said something about a hot springs trip with Minato during a gender-switched Loop?"

"Eh, he's a girl about half the time now," Ryoji replied, sipping his own cup with Starlight's hooves, speaking in his own, more masculine voice. "Something to do with the Edit knocking off his gender marker. Even though that..._thing_...isn't in our Loop, it still did something to our Branch since they're connected. The biggest thing were these Persona users from Tokyo getting glitched by-"

He trailed off, as he nervously glanced at the guards. "C'mon, is this _really_ necessary?" he whined. "I've got her under control!"

"Be that as it may," one of the guards replied, "the pony you are possessing still committed mass violations of equine rights. Although the Princess confirmed she is no longer a threat," he explained, pointing to Twilight with a forehoof briefly, "Princess Celestia still assigned us to watch you until the trial can begin."

"Or until your friend gets you into another body," the other guard added.

"Oh," Ryoji said. "I guess that makes sense. She was being naughty, if you get what I THAT DOESN'T GO THERE!"

He slapped Starlight's hoof to her mouth.

"...um, sorry," he said. "She breaks through sometimes."

"We'll need to call in more backup, just to be sure." One guard took a sending stone out of his saddlebag. "Shining Armor, we'll need two more guards here-"

"That's...not needed," Twilight interrupted, gently pulling the stone out of the guard's hooves with her magic and setting it on the table. "I trust Ryoji enough that he can keep her under control. Though it is a temporary solution."

"Yeah, I wanna get this over with too," the Herald of Nyx agreed. "I feel bad for her. Trapped like an animal, with all her freedom stripped from her, not even allowed to move her face or be herself, and I'm suddenly describing all her victims_, aren't I?" Ryoji shrugged, then yanked a roll out of the breadbasket and popped it into Starlight's mouth.

"Irony, I guess. Or karmic, whatever the right word is. So, when is the THAT'S NOT WHAT HOOFCUFFS ARE USED FOR!"

As Starlight briefly took control of her body back, crumbs of the roll lodged themselves in her throat, and she began choking as Ryoji seized control of their shared form. As the guards gave him the Heimlich Maneuver, Twilight rolled her eyes.

"Still heard worse."

* * *

>156.11 (Gamerex27)

"Sombra locked in a room, check," Discord said, marking a box on his checklist.

"**Crystal?**" the dictator asked.

"Rock of some kind, check," he continued, marking that off too.

"It's quartz," Applejack replied.

"Can't say I care," the chaos spirit said, shrugging. "Though I'm grateful that you helped with this."

"The varmit deserves it," the mare said. "So, there's someone else in there too?"

"Bah!" a raspy voice hissed from inside the cage. "Foolish mammal! You think this cage can contain _me?!_ I shall use this CRYSTAL you foolishly left in this box to MAKE MY ESCAPE, and have my rev-"

"**Crystal!**" Sombra screamed. "**MINE!**"

"The CRYSTAL belongs to me! Get your own, inferior mammal cloud!"

"They're perfect fer' each other," Applejack said, grinning.

"This is either going to end in them fighting it out Thunderdome style, or with them falling in love and getting married over their mutual love of rocks." Discord produced a large bucket of popcorn from out of nowhere, and popped several kernels into his mouth, as the box began to jump and creak from the massive brawl inside. "Either one works for me."

The box creaked. Several splinters of wood flew into the air (thankfully away from the spectators), and Sombra promptly slammed Doctor Dinosaur against the damaged side of the box.

"Place your bets!" Discord announced, putting a green eyeshade visor over his face, and replacing his popcorn with a pile of gambling chips in the blink of an eye. "The evil tyrant, our old classic Sombra? Or the newcomer, a dinosaur with questionable medical experience (could be an honorary degree, I suppose) and a bias against mammals that's just _sad_, Doctor Dinosaur!"

"Eh, Ah'll put some bits on the Doc," AJ said, slapping some bits into Discord's outstretched palm. "It don't matter much, though. Whoever loses, we win."

* * *

>156.12 (Gamerex27)

Twilight Awoke lying on her back.

_Not my usual spot to Wake Up_, she thought to herself. _Alright, checklist._

As she tried to get up, she noted that she was bipedal this Loop, rather than in her usual pony body. _Okay, human Loop. Haven't had one of those in a while_. She felt at her neck. _No Adam's Apple and less bulk means female, which means I don't have to get used to a totally different center of balance, always nice. Clothes...yes. Age...late teens, I think. Body shape..._

She looked in the mirror. Other than the fact that her skin was tan and not lavender, she looked exactly like she did on the other side of the Mirror World back home.

_Eh, close enough._

"Twilight?" she heard her mother's voice call from outside the door. "Are you up yet?"

"Yeah," she said, as she filtered through her Loop memories. "C'mon, Mom, it's Saturday. Let me sleep in a bit more."

"You can't, dear," Twilight Velvet continued from the other side of the door. "You need to head over to Applejack's for practice!"

"Practice?" Twilight echoed.

"Yes, dear! You have to get more riding hours in before the race!"

"Ri-" Twilight's Loop memories chose that exact moment to kick in. She blinked, then groaned and facepalmed.

"I'll give you a few more minutes to get dressed and ready. If we don't leave by ten, we'll get caught in traffic!"

"On it," she sighed. Slowly, she looked around her room. There was all the usual stuff a middle-upper-class Western teenage human girl had in her room—makeup, a dresser, some posters, an entire wall stacked with books, all of which Twilight had already read at least twice over...

...but there was one thing out of the ordinary. On her bedside table, Twilight glared at the framed photograph of her Unawake self, holding a golden trophy...and standing next to a white-coated mare—not a pony, a horse, complete with a saddle and blinders. She was wearing cowboy boots and a jockey's uniform.

"Celestia," she muttered under her breath, "as my noble mare. In horse racing." She massaged her aching temples with her fingers. "May as well get this over with."

**The Equestrian Equestrian Competition****

* * *

>(Gamerex27)

**The Equestrian Equestrian Competition, part 2:****

"Ah know, Ah know," Applejack said, patting Rainbow Dash on the neck as she refilled her water trough. "It's annoyin' that we can't use our Pockets, so ya can't go back to normal."

The other mar-other female snorted in agreement, rolling her eyes. She began tapping her hoof on the ground.

.- - / .-. . .- ... - / .. / -. . - / - - / .-. .- -.. . (At least I get to race), the clops went.

"Horse Code, huh?" Applejack asked. "Guess that's the best way for us to talk, at least fer' now."

.-. - - -. . . / - ... .- - / .- .- -.. (Looks that way), Rainbow Dash agreed. ... - .. .-. .-. -.. / - ... .. / .-. - - .-. /
... ..- -.. -.. ... (Still, this Loop sucks).

"Glad to see you girls are Awake, too," Twilight said, as she walked into the stable.

"Heya, Twi," Applejack greeted her friend. "You still goin' in the race your Unawake self signed up for?"

"Why not?" the Anchor said, chuckling. "Not like I get the chance for this everyday. Who else is Awake?"

"Me," Sunset Shimmer said, rounding the corner from the last stall in the stable. "Gilda too."

... .. :-.. :-.. :-.. / -... . / :-.. .. -.. .. -.. -.. / - . / .. -.
/ - ... . / :-.. :-.. :-.. . _(She'll be riding me in the race)_,
Rainbow Dash explained. -.-. - ..- :-.. -.. / -... . / :- - :-.. ... .
-.-.- _ (Could be worse)_. _

"Also, Nyx should be around here somewhere," Sunset continued, counting off on her fingers, "as well as Luna, Fluttershy, and-

"Me!"

Twilight blinked. She didn't remember hearing that voice before in her home Loop. Was this a foreign Looper, or...no, she did remember. He spoke so rarely that she didn't even remember what his seldom-heard voice sounded like.

"Hi, Angel," she said. "How-"

"And it's about time I get to talk, too!" he said, the white-haired rabbit-turned-human sauntering over to the group. "I never got to finish our conversation the last time I could talk, when I was a dragon that one time. I think...yeah, the Loop crashed when I was getting to the bit about maim_mmmmmmgghg!"_

Whatever he was about to say was cut off by a hoof sticking itself in front of his mouth, jutting out from the closest stall. Which was followed by a whiny of dismay and a dull thud as the horse in question realized that she wasn't flexible enough in this body to pull that off for long.

"Thanks, Fluttershy," Twilight said, leaning into the stall as Angel Bunny clawed at his tongue to get the dirt and mud from Fluttershy's hoof out of his mouth. "Are you alright?"

The other Looper nodded weakly, pushing herself to her hooves and glaring at the Sith Lord sternly.

"So, which stable is Celestia in?" Twilight continued.

"Um..." Applejack said, twiddling her thumbs, "right over there. But" she continued as Twilight swung the door open and entered the Unawake Princess's stable "...she ain't feelin' too good."

Celestia sniffed, then huffed and dragged at the ground with her hooves. Then the comparatively gigantic horse sniffed again.

"Are you feeling alrigGAAAAAAAH!"

After a earth-shatteringly loud sneeze, Twilight's hand slowly reached out and motioned for a towel, a hose, and copious amounts of soap.

* * *

>"Alright, I see your point," Twilight finally said once she had cleaned herself of...well, she would like very much never to think of it again. "So who am I going to be racing on?"

"There's this new stallion that we got just last week," Applejack replied. "Pretty cheap, too. 'Bout as big as the Princess, similar muscles 'n leg structure...haven't had the chance to see him for mahself yet, though. Follow me."

"What?" Twilight asked as the pair walked out of the main stables. "Why isn't he here with the others?"

"Ah heard Applebloom said he don't get along well with the others," the farmer explained as they entered the auxiliary stables. "Bit of a kickin' habit, and he don't take too kindly to riders."

"I can handle it," her friend said, shrugging as she opened the stable door and walked into her new mount's section. "It's not like...it's..."

She trailed off as she stared at her ride. Blood-red fur. The "beard" of differently-colored fur around his mouth. And those eyes radiating pure menace.

Twilight stared at Tirek, as he snorted and turned to face the other wall, unimpressed.

Then Twilight walked over to the entrance of the stable, and started to bang her head against the wall in frustration.

* * *

>156.13 (ThanosCradik)

This Loop was going to give Twilight a headache, she could feel it. Everyone was a muppet; ponies, changelings, griffins, buffalo, dragons, even _Discord _was made of cloth... felt... whatever muppets were made of.

That wouldn't be so bad by itself, but everyone kept making puns left and right! It was like being in a bad comedy act twenty-four/ seven, with almost no let up.

*CRASH*

"Oh, sorry! You aren't hurt, are you?"

"Don't worry, I barely even _felt _that!_"_

She suddenly wanted to go back to the Lego Loop, now.

* * *

>156.14 (Gamerex27)

The two ponies-for a given definition of the term-glanced around the room awkwardly, not meeting each others gazes.

"Um..." Fluttershy said, creeping up to the bolted door. "Can you let us out now?"

The small hatch in the door opened, and a pale, bleached skull peered through.

"Neigh," it said. "For those who have conquered Death time and time again, it is foalish to remain afraid of mere bonds. Neither of you shall leave this room 'till you make amends."

"Uh...what he said," another skeleton agreed, which could just be seen polishing its bike in the background. "Stop being wimps."

"We already-"

The slit slammed shut, cutting off the Demi-Fiend's protests. Slowly, he sighed, then turned around to face Fluttershy.

"I...so..." he tried to say. "F_k me_, I suck at talking. No clue what to say."

"Er...well...let's start with the basics," Fluttershy suggested. "Who...are those demons outside? Are they from-"

"Amala, yeah," Naoki confirmed, trying very hard not to look down at his currently equine body. "And before you ask, no, they aren't from my Branch, because no one else from my Branch can get Activated now_. At least, they're not native to any parts of Amala we know."

"Um...what does that mean?"

"All we know is that they're always Loop Aware entities that pop up in any Loop at random, or that the part of Amala they came from is gone from the Event that started this whole mess. Or, their branch is still around, but it's so corrupted Masakado hasn't managed to sort out the files for backups or render anything about it besides keeping it Read Only. Or, they were from Amala as a whole, and when the Loops forced the Admins to split the fragmented universe into different Branches, they never had a home Loop since they were from the multiverse... so they just got shunted from place to place." Naoki tried to shrug, then noticed his current lack of shoulders, and scowled. "That last one's the most likely, I think...but I really am not sure how many of them are Looping or not."

"Oh."

The two of them were silent for a good thirty-ish seconds.

"You know," Fluttershy said timidly, "I could teach you how to shapeshift back to your human form. I-"

"No."

Fluttershy blinked in surprise. "But I thought you were still really uncomfortable_ seeing us as ponies? Or..._being_ a pony?"

"This...yeah, it's _jarring...but it's something I need to _get over_, " Naoki explained. "I said I was going to put everything in the past, and to do that, I need to start with this. A body's just a bunch of meat, Magnetite, Magatsuhi, and a soul pinning it all together, anyways. It _shouldn't_ _really_ matter what it's shaped like."

He paused for a second, seemingly spacing out.

"Wait. The souls were _still_ there_ after the serum?!" he exclaimed. "_Why_ didn't you tell me that?!_"

Another pause.

"_'I never asked,' my ass!_" he yelled, again to thin air. "Okay, okay, she _had_ to die, I get that, I _agree_ with that, but-wait, _razed_ the planet to the ground?!_"

"Um...who are you talking to?" Fluttershy asked.

But Naoki didn't seem to notice. He just kept ranting and raving at a voice only he could hear.

"You just said you _destroyed_ her kingdom!_" Naoki roared. "Killed the tyrant?! What about the _thousands_ of brainwashed humans_, and, hell, those _non-brainwashed, weak-as-hell_ __**ponies?!**_"

Another pause.

"Don't give me, _'I was willing to do the same in Baseline!_' In case you forgot, the world was _dead_ already! _And_ Lucifer never gave me the full story! That manipulative _bastard_ never said we'd break all of reality by trying to-"

He trailed off as he happened to look towards Fluttershy, noticing how she was suddenly standing on the other side of the room.

"...Shit," he exclaimed. "Fine, we'll put this on hold. But it's _far_ from over_, dickwad."

Sighing, he pulled out a piece of paper, fumbled at it for several seconds with his hooves, then gave up. "Urgh. There goes making a diagram to explain all this crap. Okay, you deserve an explanation for all that. I didn't..._mean_ to scare you. This time, I mean."

"I wasn't scared," Fluttershy said, her body visibly relaxing. "I just thought you might blow up again, so I was trying to-"

"-Get away from the ticking time bomb," he finished. "...can't say I blame you for that. Okay, here's what happened: remember how I told you in my Baseline that I ended up destroying the multiverse? That's only _kind of_ true. It _was_ me, but it also wasn't."

"Wait, let me go from the top," he said, smacking himself in the face, then grunting as he was unable to balance on only three legs and fell to the floor.

"Basically," Naoki said as he stood back up, "I was tested throughout my journey by those assholes," he said, jerking his head in the direction of the door, "and we fought over candelabras, which opened the door to a giant maze full of the worst traps ever. I pass all the tests, and learn the whole deal about the Great Will's infinite resets of the universe via the Conception, how he was trying again and again to find a world without free will, all that junk. So, Lucifer offers me power to try and break this system. What he didn't tell me was that I wasn't just getting the heart of a demon: I was getting the soul of one, too. He basically broke open my psyche and pumped metaphysical steroids into my id until it gained sapience. Which...uh...killed me."

"But an Anchor needs to survive a Loop in order for it to run, right? Unless...is it like with Toothless and Hiccup?"

"Co-Anchors, yeah," the demon confirmed. "One second Lucifer is throwing a lightning bolt at me, and the next I'm back on the subway near the hospital. Activating the Loop joined us together, since he basically tore his way out of my soul to exist. Took us a while to stop arguing-and by the time we did, we died in the Conception. So in the next Loop, we shut up long enough to learn what I missed in the rest of Baseline. Some stuff I really wanted to stay missed. You know the rest."

Naoki suddenly stopped, his ears twitching.

"What is it?" Fluttershy asked.

"You're...you have a body this time?!" Naoki asked his split personality. "The last time we tried that, you ended up incarnating as a Slime!...How the hell are we still talking if you're not in my mind right now?"

More silence.

"Forget it," he growled. "Guess it doesn't matter. You have any idea where you are?"

Silence again.

"Alright. Just don't kill any tough demons without me," Naoki replied. "A good fight's probably in short supply here."

"Will he be alright by himself?" Fluttershy asked, sensing that the inter-personality conversation was over.

"He punched an avatar of the Great Will so hard, it stopped existing in every reality ever. He'll be fine." Slowly, on unsteady legs, Naoki walked over to the door. "Open the door."

He was met by the sound of a blaring trumpet, blowing him backwards and right onto his flank.

"So, no," Naoki confirmed. "The hell do you want us to do, then? Sit around and talk about our feelings?! I want to get over all this, yeah, but I'm not gonna hold hands with her and whine about how my life is a literal goddamned mess. What the hell with that solve?!"

"And...we kind of already talked about that when we saw each other again through the Mirror," Fluttershy added.

They were met with no response, save the rumbling of an engine starting up and the Hell Biker driving out of wherever the heck Trumpeter had stuck them.

"The gate has been sealed with my strongest of magics," Trumpeter muttered, "as have the walls, ceilings, and floors. There is no escape 'till you commune and overcome the-"

"You want us to fu-_no!_" Naoki yelled. "Why would you even say that?!"

"Wait." Fluttershy stared at the door. "The doors and walls are all magically reinforced."

"Correct," said the Trumpeter.

"...what about the hinges and locks?"

The Fiend was silent for a few moments.

"Oh, _damna_-"

It was cut off by an adamantium door crashing right into its face.

Slowly, the vines and tendrils of dark magic withered and faded away from where they had wormed into the door and wrenched its workings apart.

"Oh, _no!_" Fluttershy gasped, galloping over to where Trumpeter's body was. Was, as in the past tense: it had vanished in a flash of light mere seconds after it was crushed by the door. "I didn't mean to-"

"Relax," Naoki said, bending down to slowly and carefully pull out the dropped Macca from where the other demon was. "Demons never stay dead where I come from. You kill 'em, and they just pop back up in the Expanse and sulk for a while."

"...your universe is _strange._"

"Never heard that one before," Naoki muttered, slowly pulling the demonic currency into his Pocket. "Though...I guess I owe you for all that's happened. Where's the local equivalent of hell?"

"Tartarus," Fluttershy automatically answered. "But...why are we going there?"

"Figure this is something anyone who spends any time with someone from Amala needs to know. Ye-_Fluttershy_," he corrected himself, "you're going to learn how to _negotiate_ with demons."

* * *

Twilight yawned as she entered Mac's bar with a sleepy stride.

Mac paused in the cleaning of 'that one glass' Twilight would swear he had behind the bar just so he could look busy when someone came in. "Somethin' wrong, Twilight? I thought you were at yer brother's fancy wedding."

Twilight nodded as she slid into a seat. "I was. And I thought it would be a pretty baseline wedding too, since neither Shiny or Cadance are awake, but I was wrong, and I'm honestly a little conflicted on how to feel about it. On one hoof? Awesome blackmail, and funny as all get out. But on the other, I kinda feel bad for my brother. Oh, um, just a water with lime please, I'll be flying back tonight."

Mac nodded and poured her drink. "Since I'm the only one here, but you came all this way anyway, I'm guessin' you just couldn't keep it to yourself?"

Twilight nodded. "Got it in one. Turns out Cadance is a kind of pseudo-alicorn this loop. She started out as a unicorn Grand Sorceress."

Mac blinked. "Now correct me if I'm wrong Miss Twilight, but I thought this loop hasn't appointed one a' those in centuries?"

Twilight shook her head as she sipped her drink. "You aren't wrong, she found a way to emulate alicorn immortality. She kind of fuses her present body with a willing partner, even if the partner doesn't know what they're agreeing to. The pooled magic extends the lifespan."

"... Wait, so yer sayin'..."

Twilight sighed and cast an illusion spell, showing Mac an image of a highly feminine alicorn princess, tall and with a long flowing mane and tail, smiling as she gracefully strode down a castle hallway, greeting the guards with a smile and receiving happy and respectful bows in reply. She also had a white coat, a blue and silver mane, and a starburst shield cutie mark.

"Yep, she only wanted my brother for his body."

* * *

>AN:

156.1: Shipping actuarial tables.

>156.2: Money is power.156.3: There's something relaxing about being childish.

>156.4: It's the picture of his Make Up. (Sailor Moon present.)156.5: Mac's drinks go to eleven. (40K)

>156.6: The subtle touch.156.7: I'm pretty sure they were just trying to overload Celestia. With what, remains to be seen.

>156.8: Events have transpired.156.9: Death has no lease. But it does have contract clauses.

>156.10: Some loopers have quite different morals.156.11: Maud will presumably show up at some point.

>156.12: Kind of a strange situation.156.13: What a bunch of muppets.

>156.14: A long, long term reconciliation.156.15: Kind of icky.

164. Chapter 164

157.1

"...so I guess the main problem was how to handle all those guys up near the pole," Nyx went on.

"Yes, I can see how," Lemon agreed. "They're certainly Chaos cultists, and they'd come down and burn most of the civilized world if possible, but... it's not as though you could just go in smiting."

"For both practical and moral reasons," Nyx nodded. "So... the solution I picked instead was to soft-land the moon."

Her coltfriend blinked. "That's unusual even for Loopers. Where?"

"Over the hole in reality," Nyx filled in. "I plugged it - well, mostly - and that made things a lot easier."

"I-"

The door opened suddenly.

"Lemon Rush, what do you think you're doing up this late?" Fluttershy asked, stepping into the room. "And Nyx Sparkle! When your mother-"

Nyx held up a hoof, and Fluttershy paused.

"Sorry, 'shy," she said, shaking her head. "I'd rather we not do this for now."

"All right," Fluttershy agreed straightaway, her Righteous Parental Anger dissipating in a moment. "You too, Lemon?"

Lemon Rush nodded. "Yes, thank you."

Fluttershy nodded. "All right, I'll leave you to it. But don't forget to go adult if you'd rather be treated adult, it's the best way for me to tell."

The two young ponies exchanged a glance, then aged up to at least young adulthood. Nyx did it by altering her preferred shape, using her rarely-used shapeshifting powers, while Lemon used a slightly more tricky method.

"There we go," Fluttershy said with a smile, looking over the pegasus and the alicorn. "Much easier."

There was a crash from downstairs.

"Oh, dear..." Fluttershy's ears drooped slightly. "Angel Bunny, stop using scythes in the kitchen!"

Another crash.

"I'll go deal with him," Fluttershy said apologetically. "Sorry about this."

"It's okay," Nyx said. She glanced to Leman. "Shall we go get a snack?"

"I'm game," Leman agreed.

* * *

>"Sorry about earlier," Nyx said, as they ate.

It wasn't a romantic candlelit dinner. It wasn't something cooked by one or other of them, or by a friend, and it wasn't even a restaurant meal either.

No, they were having hay fries and a burger each from a fast food stall.

"What's there to be sorry about?" Leman asked, frowning.

"Well..." Nyx shrugged. "I tend to prefer being young, because it's more... well, more fun. It gives me an excuse to act like a lot of loopers do, but no-one really pays as much attention. If a filly exists on a diet of whatever she feels like, then that doesn't even draw comment, and..."

She stopped herself. "Anyway. My point was, I hope it's okay that when we spend time it's usually as... well, kids."

"I didn't realize we were goats all of a sudden," Leman quipped. "But... no, it's fine, Nyx."

He smiled. "Actually, it's nice for me too. You've been in the Dark Millennium, you know what it's like... and even with my brothers and the Gods and even Father on-side, it's still a long, hard slog. Decades of fighting and planning and politics, even when I dump everything on Ciaphas at the first opportunity and go practice driving."

"I feel sorry for Mars," she said, and he chuckled.

"I deserved that one. But... after that, over and over again, it's nice to just... be a kid. Where everything's on a smaller scale, where I can drive a wooden cart down a hill and it feels more exciting than doing the same thing with a Land Raider... and where, once it inevitably crashes, it's just treated like that."

Nyx smiled. "I know what you mean... it's nice to unwind sometimes."

"And here's where I do, usually," Leman confirmed.

They each had a few more fries.

"...so, I'm pretty sure tomorrow we can try sledging," Nyx suggested. "From the Canterhorn."

"I like it," Leman replied.

* * *

>157.2

"Okay, so... run this by me again," Twilight requested.

"Right," Spike nodded. "First thing is... we're in a giant canyon. Like, miles deep."

"I saw," Twilight confirmed. "I also saw that Ponyville, Canterlot, Manehattan and in fact just about everywhere important is in the _same_ broad, flat canyon."

"Second, this place has low gravity." To demonstrate, Spike tossed a marble in the air. It described a lazy trajectory, rising for much longer than it might have been expected to before reaching the apex and slowly coming back down.

"With you so far."

"Thirdly... well, thirdly, we're all smaller than average. Just a bit." Demonstrating, Spike took out a ruler. Twilight measured her height, confirmed it with his, and nodded.

"So, how does all that add up to Rainbow Dash being taken into custody?"

"We're on a world where ponies are small enough, the gravity is low enough, and the air â€" at the bottom of these deep rifts â€" is _dense_ enough that pegasi can fly without magic," Spike said. "And of course Dash didn't notice until she'd flown eight kilometres above the zone that no other pegasus â€" even the gliders â€" can reach in flight at all."

"Right, I think I can fill in the details," Twilight said. "She's doing something they thought was impossible, her explanation's incoherent... so they decided to take her into protective custody and see if they could replicate the effect."

"Yep," Spike agreed. "Celestia was very nice about it, but... kind of insistent."

"Right," Twilight nodded. "Okay, time to solve the problems here too. Let's see... total air volume is going to be... right... and just convert the mass..."

"Twilight?" Spike asked, warningly. "What are you about to do?"

"Add enough argon to the atmosphere to make it ninety percent noble gas," Twilight replied, already rummaging in her pocket. "No ill effects, partial oxygen pressure should remain healthy if I mix a bit of it in, and that way _everyone_ will be able to fly without magic."

"You mean every pegasus, right?" Spike checked. "AJ still doesn't have wings, Twi."

"That's why I'm _also_ setting up a shop to produce custom self-powered wing harnesses," Twilight replied. "There'll be a _bit_ of magic in there, just to keep them topped off, but who's counting?"

"Only you, Twilight," Spike sighed. "Only you."

* * *

>157.3

"Excuse me?" Twilight asked. "Miss... Mayor?"

"I go by Ivory Scroll to friends," the Mayor replied, exchanging a meaningful look with Twilight. "What is it, miss Sparkle?"

"Well, your mayoralship, I was wondering if I could help with Winter Wrap-up," Twilight said, giving a somewhat less meaningful look back.

Internally, Ivory sighed â€" wondering what her Anchor had planned this time.

"Very well, miss-

Twilight's horn flared. Ghostly wings appeared for a moment, cupping her body, and her eyes flashed pure white.

A half-full sun mark appeared on her forehead, just below her horn, and then there was light.

* * *

>All over Ponyville, ponies picked themselves up off the floor.

They beheld... summer.

Full, high summer, green of grass, with the trees burgeoning with their crop and the fields waving with growing corn. There were white, fluffy clouds in place of the grey snowstorms that had been there seconds before, and birds flitted with some confusion between the flowers and young fruits that studded the trees and bushes.

* * *

>"...miss Sparkle," Ivory sighed, as her assistant stared. "As you know very well, the Winter Wrap-up in Ponyville is done with as little magic as possible."

Twilight shrugged, her caste-mark fading. "That wasn't _that_ much magic..."

"Not by your standards, maybe," Ivory said. "But unleashing an anima banner is usually an indicator of some considerable power."

Twilight glanced up at the enormous white pillar of energy that spiked into the air overhead, complete with the star-of-magic.

"I see."

Ivory stamped a hoof on the floor, and paperwork condensed out of the air. "I'm going to need you to sign here, here and here. A fine of thirty bits is being levied, and... turn it back to winter."

"What, really?" Twilight asked, disappointed.

"We have booked the wrap-up today," Ivory replied, unflappable.

"Fine," Twilight muttered. She rose into the air again, spoke words in a tongue that seemed more real than the mouth speaking them, and a moment later there was once more snow.

The birds sounded seriously annoyed by this point.

"Thank you," Ivory said. "I will expect payment promptly."

She turned to leave, then added a parting shot. "And turn the banner off! It's not real anyway, you know that as well as I do."

"...still looks good..."

* * *

>157.4 (Evilhumour and Gamerex27)

The Question, part one of four.

It was a strange day for Eldrad, and among the many strange and unusual ordeals he had to deal with the loops, this was the oddest of all things possible. It had thrown the Eldar race into chaos at the implications and results, with all their plans for their new god now void and pointless. It pushed many of them to drink and other horrible vices without fear of Slaanesh claiming their souls, despite history showing them how horrible an idea that was.

Not that the Chaos God really did eat his race's souls anymore in the loops to be fair, but this news was still beyond anything he could have ever expected. An individual was willingly entering the Eye of Terror that was flat out immune to the Dark Prin-Slaanesh's mind altering powers to be with the Chaos God. It even went to the point that the person next to him admitted that the Daemon Prince was not only a looper, and Anchor for an entire branch, but that the two were actually regularly seeing each other.

"**It is an unwelcome thought to entertain, I will admit.**" The Emperor spoke to him, handing over some of the finer alcohol from the loops to steady his hand, as he skimmed over the looping newsletter that Kent owned and wrote for. It had produced an article on troubled Branches, each one receiving a chapter detailing the incident, its problems, and the solutions which the Admins and the Loopers had come up with to meet the danger. He remembered talking to the Man of Steel about his own part in his loop's crisis, Vail giving the blue superbeing the latest part of her additions to the newsletter. "***No one, not even **_**I,**_ **expected Slaanesh to develop such strong feelings for another, let alone **_**two**_**, but whenever Naoki and the daemo-**_**demon**_ **Kashima are present, all of hir usual chaos activities cease. The greatest possible danger they posses to others is by looking at the Eye of Terror when they are pleasuring each other."** The Emperor of Mankind shuddered visibly before taking a sip of his own beer. "**The first time they had their fun, it broke Tzeentch's mind and crashed the loop, but not before causing the Eye of Terror to blink out dirty messages in morse code."**

"How did they do that?" Eldrad asked in disbelief before slapping himself to keep his mind from thinking of Slaanesh involved with anyone.

"**I do not wish to know and I am told that Fenrir took a cold bath after that stunt."** The Emperor of Mankind really did not want to know what they did to cause their Admin to bathe, but his mind was forcing himself to think the most unpleasant of thoughts.

"**Regardless, it would be best not to tell Leman of this. He has not forgiven Naoki for his actions with the ponies, especially not with how far Naoki pushed the woman that raised him. Bjorn has reported more than once that Leman has been training himself to 'settle the score', and has been worried about what will happen they do meet."**

"Have no fear, I am not planning to get involved with that mess," Eldard muttered, taking a sip of his beer. "I would be invoking the wrath of several more powerful entities than myself, one that once equated my race's souls to pizza."

Unbeknownst to them, Leman was waiting at the door to talk to his father about lifting the humiliating ban on him from driving, as he had gone through several different DMVs throughout the loops where he wasn't a Primarch to prove he was a safe driver.

Now he was on a different path as he stormed out of the Palace on Holy Terra, pushing those in front of him out of his way. He leaped into the nearest Bike and took off to the Eye of Terror.

It was time to settle a score with the bastard that harmed his family.

* * *

>Naoki had to admit, this was a new one for Slaanesh, and actually almost touching in hir own, perverted way. In hir room, all of the toys they usually used were all on the shelves and put away. Slaanesh had offered to use them in a tone that anyone who had not spent eons with the Chaos God would have missed but Naoki could tell that shi was nervous about this.

"I'm pretty sure we've done it plain in the past, Slaanesh," Naoki muttered as he examined the bed. The Chaos God had the faintest of blushes on hir face, almost hidden by the red lighting in the bedroom.

"Meh, I know, but I thought to myself, why the fuck not?" Slaanesh said a bit too quickly, eyes darting to the side. "I mean, sometimes you've got to return to the basics if you want to get inspir-"

"You do know we don't have to screw, right?" Naoki was surprised to see Slaanesh actually recoil in surprise from what he said, and a tiny bit delighted to see hir calm down. "You're one of, like, twenty Loopers that didn't try to kill me on sight the first time we met, and it'sâ€|"

"I know," Slaanesh muttered. "Same for me." Slaanesh tilted his head. "In a way, I suppose." Slaanesh's face scrunched up, as he began to wring his fingers together. "I mean, I do fe-"

"Hey, do you hear that?" Naoki muttered, turning his head to the wall where the rumbling was coming from. It was odd, as none of Slaanesh's toys on that wall were battery operated.

That was all the warning he had before Leman Russ psyker blasted him across the room and through the wall, howling in pure rage and riding after him on a shuddering bike that was being pushed to its limits.

[he]

"Oh, _come on!_" Naoki muttered as he picked himself up. "Can we go _one Loop_ without someone trying to kick my ass for something I did _billions of years ago?!_"

"Shut up and die, you damn monster!" Leman roared, pulling out the blade that Vulkan had made for him so long ago, swiping the air where the other man was standing millisecond ago. Summoning his mighty psyker power, he readied himself for another blast, only to turn it into shield as Naoki shot a pair of Freikugel eye-lasers at him. "You threatened my mother and my family! You put them through utter _HELL!_"

"What part of 'psychotic break due to being in an _endless time loop of hell'_ do you people _**never**_ _get?!_"

"Big _fucking_ deal!" Leman shouted, spewing fire from his mouth at the quick moving daemon prince, already darting through the Materium. "_My_ world is like an _ocean_ of fucking blood, violence and death and _NONE_ of _my_ loopers, my _friends_, broke!" Leman watched Naoki pause at this. "Face it; you are _nothing_ but a whining, crying little _bitch_ that lashes out at _EVERYONE_ and I will put you down like the worthless piece of garbage you are!"

Before he could do anything else, Naoki lunged at him, and sank his fist into his chest. Literally.

"I'm a _lot_ of things, Prince Furry," the Demi-Fiend growled, as Leman backpedaled to let his gaping chest wound heal, "but I've _never_ whined about a _damn thing_. I know how this goes. You'll lecture me _on and on_ about how I'm a monster and you're the good guy , _guess what_" he hissed before howling in fury, steam rushing out of his mouth to obscure Lemans' senses. "No room for your _fancy speeches in a fight_! You wanna _go_?! Then lets _go!_"

Leman roared, the Curse of the Wulfen engulfing him as he grabbed the man opposite of him and slammed him through another wall of the Materium.

* * *

>"So, what did you put in the food this time?" Isha asked, sighing. "AIDS? Herpes? Ebola?"

"Um...just food," Nurgle said hesitantly. While he would have loved to put his usual ingredients into his cooking for the date, several Loopers had cautioned him against putting deadly viruses in there, as that typically killed the mood. Among other things. After all these eons, he still loved Isha, and he wished he could prove it to her at long last. "I did gather the recipe from Lina, and I did try to my best not to experiment and-"

"I understand, Nurgle." Isha did her best to soften her tone. She was well aware of his affections for her, and since she had started looping, it made things a bit...awkward between the two of them. She still remembered how he proved his love for her by setting her free and returning her to the Eldar on the advice of that lovely young equine creature during her second loop. It was a gesture she could not just ignore, and she had decided to see if she could influence the better aspects of the Chaos God opposite of her with some mixed results. His garden was slightly less evil when they were both Awake, with Eldars being allowed in if they were invited by her and did not try to escape with her without her consent or Nurgle's awareness, and the daemons were ordered to listen to her every command as if it came from Nurgle himself or that nice looping fellow that often replaced one of Nurgle's Greater Daemons. Oh, what was his name again? Samwise Game something, she was not quite sure.

He was a nice looper to talk to, and one that Nurgle greatly approved of as he always managed to have the lands in Nurgle's garden in perfect order. He was one of the few freely allowed in at any time, Awake or not.

Pulling her attention back to Nurgle, she thought about the two of them again. On one hand, he had stopped force-feeding her new diseases, allowed her greater freedom and was trying to embrace his more positive aspects. On the other hand, he was still the Chaos God of decay and ruin, and at times, he needed to be reminded of why some people would not like his kinds of gifts. And then there was the fact she wasn't sure of how to feel about his affections for her. It was touching, what he had done for her, but she was still unsure how she felt about him. In the end, she resolved to give him a fair chance whenever he tried to prove his love for her. Hence this dinner date.

She looked down at the fairly ordinary oriental human meal and, after a quick check to make sure that Nurgle did not forget any diseases, of which there were thankfully none, she picked up a chopstick and began to eat. Suddenly, two beings crashed into Nurgle's private chamber and straight through the dinner table.

"Y'know," one of them said, climbing out of the wreckage of the table, "to use an old cliché, you hit like a girl. A two year old girl who hasn't even learned how to walk yet."

Leman simply responded by grabbing the table leg and smashing Naoki across the room. "I won't stop until I rip your bleeding heart out of your damn chest!"

Naoki rolled his eyes in response, grabbed something from his position on the floor, and tackled Leman. Instantly, the Primarch felt a searing pain in his chest, his secondary heart kicking in.

"No you." Removing the chopsticks from his chest, Naoki grabbed the heart in his free hand, and dropped it into his mouth. Chewing for a few moments, he grimaced as he blasted Leman back with another set of eye lasers. "Not bad," he said, "but I can taste the _stupid_ in every blood cell. May want to cut back on the carbs, dude."

Leman surprised Naoki by dashing over with speed that should have been impossible, his fist pulling in the very fabric of reality around it in blinding light, and smashed his Warp-empowered purity power fist into Naoki's chin, knocking him clear out of the Warp and back into the realm of men. "You honestly think that you can withstand the light, you filth spawned monster?! I swear I will not stop until I rip your damn head off!" Leman roared, leaping after the other Anchor.

The room was silent for a moment.

"NO!" Nurgle finally screamed. "The food! I worked so hard on it!"

"It just fell on the floor," Isha muttered, getting up and wiping what little food she had eaten from her chin. "Wouldn't you be all over that?"

"They _incinerated it!_" Nurgle moaned, pointing at the piles of ash on the floor. "There's nothing left to eat!"

"I _told_ you you'd love this!" a nasally voice said in the background.

Slowly, Nurgle turned around to see Tzeentch and Khorne sitting in lounge chairs slightly behind them. Tzeentch rested one clawed hand on a jukebox and sipped a martini with the other. As a number of beeps sounded in the background, Khorne got up and took a small paper bag out of a microwave. Opening it, he grabbed a handful of popcorn and shoved it into his mouth.

"For once, I agree with you," the war god said, grabbing a pair of binoculars and looking at the faraway planet the two warriors had landed on. "This is _priceless!_"

"Are you going to do _anything_ else to help other than just _sit there?!_" Nurgle demanded. "They _ruined my date!_" And just after I finished learning how to properly cook for Isha, too!"

"Hel no!" Tzeentch cackled, keeping his talons on the music player. "This is the _funniest_ thing I've seen in _years!_" he said, the famous track of "Yackety Sax" ringing throughout the Immaterium as the two Anchors brawled without any sign of stopping.

"Help you?!" Khorne asked mockingly. "And ruin this _incredible_ fight? This is the most fun I've had in _centuries!_" he exclaimed between mouthfuls of popcorn and Khorne Flakes.

Nurgle sighed and let the ruined splinters of the dinner table drop from his tentacles, Isha simply shaking her head in disbelief.

* * *

>Nyx smiled at the Primarch opposite of her as she closed the book. "Thank you, Magnus. It was simply wonderful."

"I had an inkling you would enjoy it, Nyx." He gave her a light smile, enjoying the company of his brother's girlfriend. Despite their rocky start, she was everything he would expect of the daughter of a librarian, almost equal to his own private collection in his humble opinion. She was kind, smart, funny, honest - a perfect match for his brother. The savage was so much more agreeable when she was around. He wasn't sure if it was the loops, Fenrir or something else, but he had seen the Space Wolves fall over in loving respect for her in the past when they saw their King so happy, along with how well she interacted with each of them. "I'm a bit surprised you had not already read this book; I am sure that Twilight would have it on stock."

"Well, to be honest," Nyx shook her mane, blushing a bit as she took a sip of the apple cider that Magnus had prepared for her. "Most of the time I am with the girls, out crusading and-"

"Say no more, I understand." Magnus shook his head. "I understand the siren's call of adventure from those close to your heart."

"Well, I -" Before the equine could continue, a figure appeared in the private room.

"_There_ you are!" the Chaos God grumbled loudly, reaching out for Nyx. "The two of them have been fighting for _hours_, breaking _all_ of my toys. Nurgle isn't lifting a finger to help after those _morons_ crashed his dinner date with Isha, Tzeentch won't stop playing that _fucking_ music and Khorne is eating his _fucking_ popcorn!" Slaanesh smashed a wall down in pure rage, scaring Magnus slightly to see him enraged instead of trying to seduce him. "I don't get a lot of chances to see Naoki and it pisses me _off_ that your damn boyfriend is c-"

"Na-_oh_." Nyx said. She sank deeper into her stool, her ears drooping, and suddenly became much more interested in staring at the ground than in making eye contact with anyone. She opened her mouth to speak, but couldn't find any words.

"Did he end up killing you during his freak-out or something?" Magnus asked, nervously sipping his cider as he sat in the middle of the two.

"It...it was _our fault_," Nyx said softly. "We...we didn't realize _how badly_ he needed help. We let him go off on his own, since that what we were supposed to do as a Sanctuary. But he lost it, and...His Shadow took control of his body, and made him rampage across the Loops." She bit her lip before finding her steel. "Slaanesh, _please_, take me to them."

"With _pleasure_!" Slaanesh grumbled loudly, unhappy with how the situation was playing out and this darker part of _his_ daemon prince's past. "You're the only one that can actually talk some damn sense into Leman after he gets like this!" With that, Slaanesh teleported them to the latest place where the two Anchors were spotted.

Magnus simply sighed, swirling his cider a bit before drinking it down. On one hand, he should try and stop his brother from attacking

Naoki, as it would be poor to let a grudge grow between loops. On the other hand, Leman was downright terrifying when pushed too far, and he was nowhere near strong enough to fight his brother going all out.

* * *

>157.5 (Gamerex27)

"GaaaaAAAAHHH!"

Waking Up to hear your parental surrogate/big sister/housemate screaming her ears off was not the best way to start a Loop, as Spike later decided.

"What's wrong?" he asked, jumping out of bed and flying into the library with swiftly-grown wings.

"Itches!" Twilight replied, scratching at her head with her forehooves. "Itches so badly!" She switched to scratching her sides with her back hoof as she flopped to the ground, her hooves digging into her scalp.

"Is it a rash?" the (biologically) young dragon asked. "Bug bites?"

"Fleas!"

"...fleas?" Spike asked flatly. "Can't you just yank them off with magic or something?"

"I've tried!" the Anchor cried, rolling over to a bookshelf and using it to scratch her back. "They're really resistant to magic! And there're from the Everfree-"

"Where else would it be from?" Spike muttered under his breath.

"-so nopony can figure out how to remove them! Zecora said she'd be on the case, but she says the ingredients she needs are in...urgh...Discord's sock puppet dimension! I don't even know how she knows that!"

"Is it just confined to you?" Spike asked, stepping closer to Twilight to try and help somehow.

"It's all over PonyvillAAAAAH!" As she rolled across the floor to scratch the itch, she ended bowling Spike over. The two sat there for a few moments, a tangled mess of hooves, tails, and scales.

"We need to get Discord!" Twilight said, standing up and trying to ignore the furious itch all over her body. "ASAP!"

* * *

>Grumbling, Rainbow Dash crawled out of bed and walked into her shower. Even as she activated the cloud above her and bathed in its heated rain, those dang fleas were still there!

"Great," she moaned. "Maybe doing a Rainboom will shake them off or something." She stepped out her front door of her cloud house and perched on the cloud's leading edge, stretching her muscles.

But as she leaned back and braced her wings for takeoff, she heard some squeaky voices.

"Now, hear this!" one proclaimed. "Ludicrous Speed!"

"Sir," another voice said, "you better buckle up!"

"Ah, buckle _this_," the first voice declared, as Dashie rolled her eyes and mentally counted down. "Ludicrous Speed! GO!"

With a deafening sound and a burst of rainbows, the pegasus rocketed into the sky. Alas, the various Machs of speed she passed had no effect on dislodging her uninvited guests. Looking back behind her, she could just spy several tiny elephants and lions falling out of the fleas' zoo, followed by what looked like an entire shopping mall about the size of her hoof.

"Stowaways," she growled, as she flew ever faster, to no effect.

(Evilhumour)

Lyra looked up and rolled her eyes, scoffing. "My friend units are so silly." It was _so_ much simpler to just turn herself into a cyborg to avoid the fleas then wait for the cure from Zecora. Although, using the Cyberman technology was proving to be a bit of annoyance as her other selves were fighting back the invading program. Shrugging, Lyra still thought it was better than waiting the ten minutes for Zecora to get into town.

* * *

>157.6 (Scorntex)

The Moon. Now.

Three figures popped into existence on the grey and barren surface. One yellow and red, one white and pink, the last orange and purple. All three bore strange necklaces around their necks. Seconds later, a large mass of metal appeared after them.

"Hey." Someone called out (via magic, since they were in a vacuum). The Cutie Mark Crusaders turned about, looking for the source of the voice. It was Nyx, who was sitting a short distance away. Behind her was Princess Luna, whose gaze was alternating between a pack of cards and the newcomers.

"Mornin', Nyx." Apple Bloom waved. "Woke up early or somethin'?"

"Yes." Luna declared. "For whatever reason, we couldn't break through the magic keeping us here."

"So we decided to play "Chaos" until we could." Nyx smiled, before glancing back toward her big sister. "She's winning."

Luna frowned. "I _was_. Until my assets were turned into farm-animals."

"Anyway." Nyx looked back towards the trio, and the thing they'd brought with them. "What's that?"

Apple Bloom waved a hoof at her, holding a hoof up to one ear. "Sorry, gotta take this. Hey, DT. We're here. Yeah, it's here too..."

She removed the hoof for a second and looked back at Nyx. "DT says 'hey'."

Sweetie Belle glided over towards Nyx, as Apple Bloom continued discussed something with Diamond Tiara. "Twilight had an idea." The unicorn explained. Nyx noticed the worry present in her friend's eyes.

"What happened?" She asked. Sweetie Belle looked down at the lunar surface.

"Twilight had a rough last Loop, apparently." Clover spoke up. Nyx gasped, instantly gathering her magic, before realizing Sweetie Belle's hoof was on her shoulder.

"She's fine!" Nyx's friend quickly said. "... well, she sort of took some of Big Mac's brain bleach, so whatever it is that upset her, she doesn't remember right now."

Nyx frowned, ruefully, at the thought of not having been present to help her mother. Sweetie Belle noticed it.

"I'm sorry." She said. "Anyway, before she wiped her memories, she handed us her plan for this Loop. I think it's meant to be used on Sombra."

Nyx examined the structure, as several more objects began appearing via teleportation. "Is it...?"

"Yeah!" Scootaloo grinned, looking up from several parts she'd been added. "It's an Orbital Friendship Platform."

Nyx looked about the moon all five ponies were standing on. "Um..." She began. Scootaloo rolled her eyes.

"We're gonna move it when we're done building, obviously."

Luna wandered over to look at the sight, one eyebrow raising as she examined everything. "I almost feel sorry for Sombra, if this is to be used on him."

"And you're building it on my moon... why?" She added. All three Crusaders shared guilty looks.

"Because..." Scootaloo began. "Reasons?"

"Princess Celestia had reservations." Smart Cookie declared. "And she insisted on being the first one to fire it..."

"Her and everypony else in the bar." Pansy piped up.

"Well, really." Luna pouted. "It's my moon! I should have first go!"

Nyx scowled. "And it's my mom's idea, I should get first go!"

Luna and Nyx stared intently at one another. "Rematch at Chaos?" Luna asked, slowly. "First one to win gets to fire."

"_You're on._"

The two sort-of-siblings walked off, leaving the three Crusaders looking at one another.

"Think we should tell them Apple Bloom got first go when she won the contract to build it?" Clover asked, hesitantly.

Apple Bloom looked as the two alicorns began aggressively shuffling their cards. "Maybe wait a while..." She suggested, before looking back to the massive pile of parts.

* * *

>157.7 (Kris Overstreet)

"Hey, Sunbutt!"

The guards flanking the throne stiffened. This was not language petitioners to the Day Court normally used. (Granted, the newly restored Princess Luna used it in private chambers now and again, and Celestia's chosen student Twilight Sparkle had used it once or twice in personal conversation, but those were friends and family of the Princess, not mere peasants.)

"Good morning, my little griffon," Celestia said, apparently unruffled by the hostile greeting. "May I ask your name?"

"I'm Guido of Griffonstone!" the somewhat pudgy griffon in the threadbare three-piece suit snapped, advancing to the throne with hackles raised and feathered crest laid back. "And I want to know what gives with all the early snow you're dumping on our mountains!"

"Oh, the snow?" Celestia asked innocently. "Why, it's part of my economic stimulus package for your city, Guido. Didn't you know that?"

"Economic stimulus, blah blah blah!" Guido mocked, miming a puppet with one talon. "You rebuild the library nobody uses, a new hotel nobody stays in, and send us a wagonload a week of this weird powder." He pulled a can of baking powder from under his wing. "We never paid any attention because it didn't cost us any money, but now it IS costing us money! We can't get out and work or shop or anything with this weather! You wanna stimulate the economy, then start dumping bits on Griffonstone instead of your stupid snow!"

"So, bits are important to you?" Celestia asked.

"Money is EVERYTHING to a griffon!" Guido shouted. "You know that!"

"I remember a time," Celestia said, "when pride and honor were everything to a griffon. When doing a job well and trading fairly with others were more important than squeezing them for every bit they were worth."

"Yeah, yeah, more fairy tales of Grover the Great," Guido grumbled. "A likely story. But it doesn't put scones on the table!"

"Perhaps not," Celestia agreed. "However, you will be glad to know that I intend to put quite a lot of scones on every griffon's table, so to speak. The snow is falling because I intend to spend the entire winter learning how to snowboard."

Guido blinked. "Learning how to what?"

Celestia pulled a surfboard out from behind her throne. "I do so enjoy surfing," she said, "but my free time in summer is so brief. My duties are less pressing in winter, but the ocean's too chilly then. So I'm putting a thick snowcap on the Griffonstone Range so I can spend the entire winter in your historic town surfing on snow."

"You mean," Guido snarled, "you're burying my home for your personal-" The griffon's white-feathered face took on a distinct reddish tone.

"Of course, ponies being ponies, there will always be those who insist on bringing me work," Celestia sighed. "So I have no doubt they'll seek me out in Griffonstone. In fact I feel the new hotel is entirely inadequate for the number of visitors you're likely to have."

"Ha! That'll be the-" The brain is seldom the most talented organ in any griffon's body, but Guido's brain had just caught up to his mouth, frantically waving large, simple signs in front of his imagination. He suddenly saw whole caravans and convoys of ponies ascending the passes to Griffonstone. Ponies, moreover, with saddlebags full of bits. Ponies who would want lodging, food, personal services.

Celestia saw Guido's eyes glazing over, counted silently to five, and muttered, "And don't forget professional guides for skiers and hikers."

_Yeah, them too,_ Guido's brain told the rest of him.

_Good idea,_ Guido admitted. _Glad I thought of it._

"Of course," Celestia noted, "I doubt I'll be able to get away two years in a row. So if you would like those ponies to come back after I leave... well, I'm afraid it'll be up to you to keep them."

Guido's brain had gotten itself up to a brisk jog, and with the power of momentum it flashed less happy images across the griffon's imagination. Pony tourists disgusted with the shambles of the town, the decayed statues, the horrible food. Pony tourists angry at extortionate prices, disloyal and surly employees, substandard services. Griffonstone going from a forgotten has-been burg in a remote corner of Equestria into a byword for all things dingy, decayed, and horrible.

"I'm giving you an opportunity," Celestia said politely. "What you make of it- or fail to make of it- is your decision."

"Er... could I prevail upon Your Most Serene Highness to kindly withdraw further snowfall for a matter of, say, three weeks?" Guido said with a shaky tone of voice. "I fear there are many preparations that need to be made for your visit in... when shall we expect you?"

"Winter Ramp-Up proper doesn't begin in the lowlands for another month," Celestia said. "Expect me shortly after Hearth's Warming."

"Five weeks," Guido rasped. "Then if you will at least reduce the snowfall, I shall put things into motion."

"Very well, Mr. Guido," Celestia smiled. "I shall see to it. Next petitioner, please?"

A burly pony stepped around the still befuddled Guido. "Your Highness," he said, "I'm here to ask what's to be done about the underemployment of stonemasons in Canterlot. Why, even a contractor like me is out of work-"

Guido grabbed the pony's foreleg. "No he's not!" he shouted, dragging the protesting pony away at top speed. "You're hired as of yesterday! I need two ski lodges, three hotels, an overnight inn, and massive repairs to three hundred eyries! Money is no object! Go, go, GO!" In a cloud of mane hair, feathers and confusion, the two sped out the throne room doors, which slammed with an echoing thud.

Celestia smirked and turned her head to look behind her throne, where Twilight was trying to stifle her giggles. "And that is how the thing is done," the sun princess said.

"You'll do anything for a vacation Loop, won't you?" the Anchor replied.

* * *

>157.8 (Kris Overstreet)

A certain trio of ponies observed Twilight Sparkle dancing a happy (and completely uncoordinated) jig around a book lying on the grass. This didn't seem at all strange to any of them. If anything could get Twilight dancing it would be a book, and of course the dance was just as awkward as the social behavior they'd come to expect of her.

The trio approached cautiously and waited a minute or two until Twilight noticed their presence. They had to stifle giggles as the purple unicorn froze in place for a moment, slowly looked at the three of them, and then sat properly on the grass to face them. "Eheheheh, sorry," she said, "I just, er, had some really good news."

"Really?" Minuette grinned. "C'mon, tell us, tell us!"

For a moment it looked like Twilight was going to tell a lie; there was the briefest evasion of eye contact and a single fidgety movement of her forehoof. "Er, I've just heard Princess Celestia is going to send me to oversee the Summer Sun Celebration in Ponyville!" she said. "It's such a huge honor! Knowing that the Princess trusts me with such authority!"

The three girls lost their smiles. "Oh," Lemon Hearts said. "Does that mean you're going to miss Moondancer's party?"

Twilight thought about this. "Well, I can only stay for a little while," she said, "but I wouldn't miss Moondancer's party for anything! And neither would Spike! I'll go get him and meet you by the fountain, okay?"

"Spike! Are you Awake?" Twilight shouted as she barged into her tower. She'd received two Ping replies, and the sooner she told someone the news the better.

"Yes, I'm Awake," Spike said, having moments before stepped aside so that overeager unicorn hooves wouldn't disembowel his present for Moondancer. "What's up with you? I almost never see you this happy at the start of a new Loop."

"I just had the best Baseline Loop ever!" Twilight grinned. "Well, mostly baseline. I didn't do anything major out of the ordinary, except avoiding the usual really stupid stuff like Want-It-Need-It. And the Golden Oaks survived the Loop! I didn't do anything to save it, it just never blew up!" She rose on her hind hooves and spread her forelimbs wide, adding, "When we unlocked the box from the Tree of Harmony, its magic transformed the library into this immense world-tree castle, with books from all sorts of worlds! We went on adventures when the books summoned us! It was SO COOL! And I saved most of the books just before the Loop ended! I'm going to so love reading all of them- NEW BOOKS, and my library DIDN'T BLOW UP!" At this point Twilight was dancing again, and her voice had surpassed fangirl levels of squeal.

The dancing ceased when a belch of green dragonflame interrupted her happy babbling. Spike opened the scroll from Celestia and read aloud:

_My dear Twilight Sparkle, _

_I hope you have Awakened (that's a capital A) well and are ready to face the day. Unfortunately I have to call on you for a special duty. For reasons not currently known the tree library in the town of Ponyville spontaneously combusted hours ago. The contents of the library were a total loss. Like you, I am saddened by the loss of so many books._

Twilight's happy dancy mood, realizing the weather was no longer right for it, flew north to Whinneypeg for the summer.

Spike continued reading:

_I must ask you to supervise the emergency replenishment of Ponyville's library, to be located in the town hall until a new building can be found. This takes priority over Summer Sun Celebration preparations, but I'm sure you can find good friends who will help you take care of it all._

_Sincerely yours, Celestia._

"Well," Spike shrugged as he rolled the scroll back up, "easy come, easy go."

Twilight Sparkle flopped onto her side, rigid. In the next courtyard over, a goat bleated.

* * *

>Even unAwake, Twilight's Ponyville friends proved up to the challenges of bringing thousands of books into Ponyville and organizing them as a library in a single day. Pinkie Pie helped arrange the paperwork with Ivory Scroll and organized the contractors to get the bookshelves installed into Town Hall in record time. Applejack's extended family carted the crates of books from the train station to Town Hall, while Rainbow Dash's weather pegasi flew chariots full of extra books in from Canterlot. Fluttershy's animal friends unpacked and shelved the books (Harry Bear, it turned out, had a talent for alphabetical organization). Rarity reorganized the decorations for the Summer Sun Celebration to turn the functional bookshelves into artistic and decorative symbols of learning. Twilight's less-than-a-surprise party became the early start of Celebration festivities, held in Town Hall as thousands of Ponyville residents and visitors from other cities gathered to spend the shortest night of the year.

Twilight couldn't believe how smoothly it all went. She'd even had time to meet her Canterlot friends, including Moondancer, at the train station at sunset. The Apple catering was just as good as ever. Fluttershy's bird choir sang sweetly. The nighttime sky was clear and starry, the Mare in the Moon perfectly visible... until, suddenly, she wasn't. Twilight, as usual, was the only pony who noticed the change in the moon.

And then, when the mayor introduced Princess Celestia, everything froze, as usual. No alicorn, as usual. Pinkie Pie complimenting the predictive powers of the mayor, as usual.

A total absence of malevolent laughter... not as usual.

The ponies began to chatter.

Evil midnight fog failed to materialize.

The ponies went silent again, beginning to be very afraid as minutes went by with no sun and no Celestia.

And then the rustle of a page being turned snapped through the silence like a whip crack.

All eyes snapped to one bookshelf. A large armored alicorn, coat blacker than midnight, pupils slit like dragon eyes, lay next to the bookshelf, holding a book about three inches from her eyes with her magic. Based on the number of pages already turned, she had apparently been reading for some time.

Sensing all the attention coming her way, Nightmare Moon looked up. "Could you wait a few more minutes?" she asked apologetically. "I just want to read one more chapter. Daring Do just broke her wing crashing into the jungle, and I want to see how she gets across the alligator-infested river without flying." Having said this she returned her head to the book, lost to the world around her.

Moondancer leaned over to Twilight and whispered, "Isn't that Nightmare Moon? The evil alicorn who gobbles up bad little foals and fillies?"

"That's her," Twilight whispered back.

"Huh," Moondancer grunted. "I think she needs to get out more."

* * *

>157.9 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

"Are you sure we should be doing this?" Carrot Cake asked, looking nervously at the large _thing_ the young dragon " who had apparently gone through a growth spurt recently " had brought with him.

"Hey c'mon Mr. Cake. It's Guys Night Out, this is nothing." Spike said as he adjusted his goggles.

"Well, yeah, but don't you think the Princess might get upset?"

"Nah, she's on a surfing Vacation on the sun and left Luna in charge." Spike replied as he grabbed his mustache from Big Mac's bag who, already mustache equipped, had stepped up to join them as Carrot Cake protested.

"Don't ya worry none, it's completely safe." the large apple stallion said as he tightened his pack.

Carrot Cake took a deep breath and nodded. "Alright."

Placing his own goggles onto his head, he strapped the large glider to his back and looked out over Canterlot from the Castle Tower. Before he could change his mind, Mac gave him a push and he found himself airborne.

* * *

>"Reckless violation of airspace, disturbing the peace, crashing into Donut Joe's and worst of all, not inviting me," Shining Armor read the list of charges to the ponies and dragon currently resting in the castle cells."I hope it was worth it."

"It was." Carrot Cake replied, still wearing a large smile from his recent flight.

Spike and Mac grinned. It was nice to get back in touch with their non-Looping friends every once in awhile.

* * *

>157.10 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

It was a typical day for this Loop. Celestia, who wasn't Awake this time, had gone off on a diplomatic visit to the Minotaur Kingdom and had left Twilight (who'd ascended early, after a reenactment of the events that brought Nyx into her life) in charge. At the moment, she was in charge of the Day Court in Celestia's absence.

"Um, your Highness?"

"Yes?" Twilight raised an eyebrow at the unicorn petitioner who was standing before she and Nyx, and appeared to be staring rather intently at the smaller alicorn.

"Is it just me, or do you have the incarnation of adorableness sitting next to you?"

Twilight's eyebrow raised even further as she smiled. "Yes. Yes, I do."

"I thought as much." The unicorn stood back, looking rather satisfied as he began reading his petition.

* * *

>Later that afternoon, mother and daughter were enjoying a small break in their duties.

Twilight looked down at Nyx. "So. That stallion from earlier? That was a much better reaction than you normally get when we do this."

Nyx nodded. "Definitely."

* * *

>157.11 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight Sparkle Awoke.

Hmm. Apparently, they were right outside the dragon's cave near Ponyville, ready to make it move elsewhere. She'd done this more times, and more ways, than she could count. Maybe this time...

"Twilight?"

Twilight's head snapped up. "Applejack?" The other pony was right next to her, looking concerned.

"You okay, sugarcube? You looked like you were dozin' off with your eyes open. An' I think you'd want to be Awake for this."

Twilight blinked, and shook her head. "I'm fine. Just lost in thought. And... are you Awake?"

Applejack nodded. "Me, 'Shy and Rarity. And now you."

Twilight nodded. "Well, let's get to it. Any plans for the dragon?"

"Nothin' specific," Applejack replied.

"Okay. I'm going in."

Inside the cave, directly in front of the dragon, Twilight took a deep breath. "Excuse me, Mr. Dragon?"

One eye opened. The dragon snorted.

"Sir, as Princess Celestia's duly appointed representatives, we're terribly sorry, but we'll have to ask you to take your nap somewhere else. Your smoke is causing a real problem here."

The dragon's other eye opened, as it reached one clawed finger out for Twilight. Then, as it tapped her nose, it spoke.

"Boop."

Twilight's eyes widened. "That's not... Are you..." She shook her head in surprise. "Um, Mr. Dragon? Is the same period of time repeating for you?"

The dragon snorted, and closed its eyes again.

"I'll take that as a no."

Back outside, Twilight sighed. "Persuasion didn't work, even when I told him Princess Celestia sent us. Rarity, you're up."

"Not a problem, darling." Rarity walked into the cave. "Yoo-hoo, good sir! Might I have a word with you?"

A few minutes later, Rarity walked out, covered in strawberry syrup. "Not. One. Word," she hissed.

Twilight raised an eyebrow. "Oh-kay. Pinkie?"

"Woohoo! Party time!" She dashed into the cave.

And came back out, looking confused. "Twilight? Can dragons use their tongues like noisemakers?"

Twilight raised her eyebrow again. "Not that I'm aware of. Why?"

"Because this one can! And..." Pinkie's eyes widened. "When he did, it tickled my nose!" She giggled.

"All right, that's it," Rainbow Dash interrupted. "This dragon is going down!" Before the others could stop her, she flew into the cave, yelling.

Then there was a loud honk.

Rainbow Dash stalked out of the cave, her eyes blazing. "That dragon," she growled, "is not playing fair. And neither will I. I'll be back when I have some good thunderclouds." She took off.

Applejack sighed. "That filly," she remarked to nopony in particular, "is going to get herself in a heap of trouble if we don't do something fast. Fluttershy? You got any ideas?"

"Well, I could try talking to him," the butter-yellow Pegasus said. "It's what you brought me here for." Steeling her nerves, she walked into the cave.

"Er, Mr. Dragon?"

Once again, the dragon's eye opened.

"Um, I hate to disturb you, but... your smoke really is causing a lot of problems for everypony nearby. So, could you please, please move to a cave away from inhabited areas?"

At this, the dragon raised its head. "For you, dear Fluttershy, anything." One snap of his fingers later, and a familiar draconequus stood before her. "It's all right, girls! You can come in now!"

"Discord!" Fluttershy's eyes brightened as she flew up and hugged him. "I didn't expect to see you this early!"

The spirit of chaos winked. "Well, I woke up around the time Luna came back from the moon, and I thought, why not give my best friends a pleasant surprise? Besides, I may be part dragon, but it occurred to me, I'd never tried filling in for one. Or at least, I hadn't tried it in longer than I can remember. So, here I am!"

"And here we are," Twilight added as she and the others walked in, Applejack just barely restraining a furious Rarity from charging him. "I knew something was up, but I couldn't put my finger on it. Though you certainly did," she added with a smirk.

Discord chuckled. "Oh my, Twilight. Is that a sense of humor I'm detecting from you?" As he was speaking, he snapped his fingers, causing the syrup on Rarity's coat to vanish. She huffed, but didn't look as mad anymore.

"It's a sense of something, all right," Twilight agreed. "But, if you're here... where's the dragon? You didn't put him in Celestia's garden, did you?"

"Certainly not. There's a plane statue there."

* * *

>In the gardens of Canterlot Castle...

Luna looked confused. "Sister? Is this some new type of abstract art thou hast obtained recently?"

Celestia, staring at the statue of a Sopwith Camel that had replaced Discord's stone form, shook her head. "I didn't put it here," she told her sister.

* * *

>At the cave...

"As for the dragon, I already gave him a better place to sleep, where nothing can disturb him." Discord snapped his fingers, summoning a large mirror. "See? He's quite happy!"

Approaching the mirror, five ponies looked... and at least three of them facehoofed as they saw the large red dragon, a smile on his face as he continued snoring away on his hoard, which was now surrounded by the palm trees of a very familiar island.

* * *

>157.12 (Evilhumour)

Lemon looked at Larry on the floor, and tilted his head at his girlfriend sitting next to him.

"Nyx, what is it with you and ...your pet choices?"

Nyx blinked, tossing the treat a bit farther than she intended, with Larry running out of the living room. "I dunno, to be honest. I guess I can relate to the more unusual animals, the more dangerous ones can really be misunderstood," Nyx sighed. "I just like how big dangerous monsters can have a real soft inside."

Lemon chuckled, rubbing against Nyx as he said, "I guess I know why you like me now Nyx."

Blushing, Nyx began to sputter when Lemon roared playfully, nuzzling against her again.

Giggling, Nyx tried to push Lemon off of her. "Quit it."

Shaking his head, Lemon went "Rawr," again, playfully nibbling on her wing.

Giggling louder, Nyx used her hooves to shove him back, to which her boyfriend let out an over dramatic grunt. "Down boy, or no treats!" Nyx managed to say that without giggling, although it was hard to contain them behind her massive smile.

Lemon paused at that, tilting his head before grinning widely at her. "Rawr rawr." Shaking his head, he pounced towards Nyx, catching her side as she tried to flee. Holding her close as they tumbled down to the floor, Nyx was trying to tell her boyfriend to heel while giggling her head off with Lemon simply rawring and stealing nibbles on her mane and wings, doing his best not to break down in laughter too.

* * *

>"Should we tell them supper is getting cold?" Spike asked Twilight, watching his sister and boyfriend try and tickle each other now.

"You do that and I will tell Rarity all your secrets, Spykoranuvellitar." Twilight said sharply, grinning from ear to ear at how adorable the two were.

* * *

>157.13 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Applejack walked into the bar, a haunted look on her face.

"Big Mac?"

The older stallion looked at his sister with concern. "Yeah, Applejack?"

"You need to have a talk with Apple Bloom."

"About what?"

"I just walked in on her, and..." Applejack shook her head. "I... I almost don't know what to say."

Mac put down the glass he was cleaning. "Who was it, and where do you want me to buck 'em to?"

Applejack looked aghast. "It's not THAT kind of thing, Mac! But you do need to have a word with her."

Mac regarded his sister. "If it's not that sort of thing, what was it?"

Applejack sighed. "Mac... you really need to remind her... why we _do not build nuclear reactors in our bedrooms!_"

There was a pause.

Then Mac sighed. "I'll get right on it."

* * *

>157.14 (Evilhumour)

As Twilight entered the portal, the Anchor noticed something was off. Perhaps it was the fact Twilight was wearing pants instead of a skirt as the portal turned the pony into a human. Perhaps it was the fact that instead of the hard boots there were soft shoes. Or the fact that Twilight Sparkle was now Dusk Shine.

What really clued in the Looper was the fact he crashed into one very surprised and flummoxed Sunset Shimmer, with many students wiping out their cell-phones and taking pictures of the two.

"This is _awkward_, " Sunset muttered. "Mind getting _off_ before things get wor-"

"Miss Shimmers, Mr Shine, _please_ keep your relationship appropriate or you will be in detention," Principle Solaris said walking past the two now blushing students, holding his coffee mug to his lips. "...Separate rooms, of course."

* * *

>157.15 (Evilhumour)

_Plunk_. _Plunk. Plunk. Plunk._

"Luna, if you are trying to sneak by using suction cups on the ceiling again, need I remind you that, A) you have both wings _and_ magic, and B) that slice of cake is _mine_." Celestia said looking at the scroll in hoof, not even gracing her sister a glance upwa-

_PlunkPlunkPlunkPlunkPlunkPlunkPlunkPlunk._

"Oh no you don't!" Celestia flew down the hall in a desperate race for the last slice of cake, leaving the delegation of ambassadors very confused and slightly hungry.

* * *

>157.16 (Scorntex)

Princess Celestia watched as the sun made its way below the horizon, with the moon already beginning its own journey through the night sky, guided by her sister, now returned and restored from the dark magic that had held on to her for so long, thanks to Twilight Sparkle and her friends.

Even some hours on from the joyous reunion, and Celestia was still finding it hard to believe.

"Sister?" She turned, to see Luna making her way towards her, clearly concerned about something. While she was sadly aware Luna behaviour was a blind spot of hers, Celestia couldn't help but notice something had changed by a great degree already in her sibling.

Before, where she had been quiet and withdrawn, or overcompensating with directness, now she carried herself with far more confidence and self-assurance, even if she was trying, for whatever reason, to mask it.

Luna looked out across the night, and across Ponyville as well, some distant noise coming from the town hall, even after most of the ponies present at the Summer Sun Celebration party had gone home.

"Nice night." Luna remarked. Celestia nodded.

"They always were." There was the tiniest twinge of something from Luna, something that made Celestia wonder if she'd said entirely the wrong thing.

"Tia?" Luna asked.

"Yes?"

Luna took a deep breath. "I... I was wondering if I might ask you something?"

"O-of course." Celestia smiled, as warmly as she dared. And there was another thing about Luna in the last few hours. She'd managed to come to terms with modern Equestrian with surprising speed. "You know you can always ask me anything?"

"I know." Luna said. Not, as Celestia had been expecting, with any undercurrent of sadness, or self-flagellation, just... just as if it were the most obvious thing in the world.

"So, what is it?" Celestia asked. Luna's eyes darted briefly.

"It's just..." She trailed off.

"Go on." Celestia said, encouragingly.

"I was talking with your student, with Twilight Sparkle, and..."

Celestia took a few seconds to realise she was smiling at the thought of her sister and her student getting along well. Luna took another deep breath.

"I am going to be blunt here, Tia..." Suddenly Celestia had an odd sinking feeling in her stomach, as Luna paused, a small roll of parchment appearing in a burst of her magic. Celestia looked at her sister, confused as to what matter was so troubling Luna couldn't see through to telling her, resorting to using parchment instead.

Carefully, she unfurled the scroll. And as she did, something became startlingly clear.

Instead of a carefully worded letter as she had been expecting, there was...

... it looked like a bill.

"What?" She found herself asking. Luna's expression was now one of cast-iron seriousness.

"'tis a service charge, dear Tia. You have been using my property for the last one thousand years, without my permission. I would simply like to be paid that which I am owed."

Celestia's mind was adrift in the metaphorical sea of confusion. "I don't... I... what?"

Luna rolled her eyes. "My moon, dear sister! You know, the big shiny thing in the sky at night."

Celestia stared blankly. She had to be kidding. She had to be kidding. And yet, there was the b-

Then she noticed one of the other names on the bill. That of her own student.

"Since when is Twilight Sparkle an employee of the royal treasury?" She asked.

"Since around three hours ago." Luna stated, nonchalantly.

Celestia's mind was now plain sunk, as her sister walked up next to her and wrapped a hoof around her. "Of course, you are my sister, Tia, and I do love you. That's why you have five whole years to repay me."

Then Luna's warm smile vanished. "But seriously, I do want you to repay me."

And with that, she began trotting away, leaving the dumbfounded Celestia to stare blankly. "Good night, sister."

* * *

>157.17 (Scorntex)

Arms folded, eyes narrowed, and mood simmering, he tried to convey his utter boredom as the being across from him motioned at the display.

"This is your target." The being intoned, in that emotionless echo. A small holographic display lit up on the table displaying a... well, a _thing_ was an apt description.

There were the large bloated legs, attached to a misshapen torso from which dangled undersized skeletal arms. The head, crowned with five horns, was dwarfed by what appeared to be large engines of some kind, attached to what could've been mistaken for wings. Reaching from its back were two gargantuan tails.

It wasn't difficult to see the expression on the thing's face, that of pure unfettered rage and insanity.

If he could've been bothered, he would've laughed.

"It is called Majin. That roughly means "demon". A fusion of our technology, Nebulan and a biosynthetic god-emperor's solar-powered weaponry. Conventional weaponry doesn't phase it. _Un-_conventional weaponry only angers it. Its internal fuel systems are solar-powered and hyper-efficient beyond near anything we have seen. It does not know pain, it does not know fear. Whatever little sentience it has is focused solely on laying waste to all in its path. But it is not entirely unstoppable."

The display zoomed inward to the creature's ugly features, illuminating the third of its three eyes. "For reasons we cannot determine and will not question, this third eye seems to be its' only weak spot. But it would require someone with unparalleled accuracy, or a weapon too overpowered to be practical, to possibly destroy this monster."

Bright yellow eyes glared intently. "We understand you have some skill in this area. If you were willing to solve this matter for us, all the charges you have previously built up would be... _forgotten_."

There was a pause before the robot spoke again. "So, Angel Bunny of Equestria. Do you have what it takes to kill an un-killable monster?"

Angel glanced from the display, to the Decepticon. And slowly, he began to grin.

* * *

>157.18 (Filraen)

A sudden gust of fresh air and the light from a dawning sun made Big Macintosh realize he was in a new Loop. The always inviting sight of Sweet Apple Acres before him and the full basket at his side made him realize his current task: gathering fresh apples for the Apple family reunion, as usual for a normal first day when the Summer Sun Celebration is celebrated in Ponyville.

Well, he couldn't let Granny Smith wait for the apples so he hurried to the house.

After arriving to the kitchen and leaving the basket with Granny Smith Big Macintosh found Applejack already making breakfast. Looking at his sister in the eyes Mac greeted her with a nod.

"Mornin' to you too, Mac." AJ answered as she cut some apples. "Li'll filly still hasn't shown up. Can you go wake her up?"

"Eeyup."

On the walk to his littlest sister's room Big Mac was certain something was amiss but he couldn't put his hoof on it. Applejack wasn't Awake, he could tell, and the sun and chores were the same as usual. Maybe Applejack was allergic to bananas again? His thoughts only went in circles trying to find this loop's curveball until he got to the room.

Apple Bloom being tucked completely under the sheets suited Macintosh just fine as it was easy to wake her up with a swift pull. So he did just that.

"Rise and shine, A-!"

Big Macintosh froze as he suddenly realized this wasn't Applebloom. In his shocked state his loop memories finished his sentence, though with a much more subdued voice.

"... Sunny Fields."

The white earth pony filly sat herself in bed and pulled her pink mane out of her face after a huge yawn. Then she looked at herself as inspecting herself and her big brother -who still had his muzzle open- and spoke.

"Oh, hi Macintosh."

It took Big Mac a considerable effort to stop the raising panic at his sister's gaze, because he knew that look in her eyes: it wasn't one of a little filly. Princess Celestia was Awake, and she was his littlest sister.

_Fewmets_

* * *

>"Applejack, go wake up Sunny. She's goin' to miss breakfast."

At the sound of Granny Smith's voice Applejack left the sliced apples for breakfast aside, looked around for her brother. "Granny, have you seen Big Mac?"

"Already out at the fields. Said something about plowing for the upcoming apple planting."

Again the same thing. Lately Big Mac had been losing himself in farm work; and while there was nothing wrong with working hard Applejack could hardly see Big Mac at the house. She just hoped there was nothing to worry about, he didn't need to repeat what she almost did last Applebuck season.

* * *

>A farm's work is never really done, so to make it easier Applejack and Big Macintosh usually divided the load it took. Today it was Big Mac's turn to go to Ponyville's market to sell apples. This morning had been a fairly good sell, and so he returned home for lunch satisfied with a good morning's work, even if the work wasn't at the farm.

He noticed Applejack was with a thoughtful look on her face looking at a note. "Hi, sis. What is it?"

"Oh, hello Big Mac," Applejack replied, seeming to realize her brother's presence just now. "Ah'm a mite worried about Sunny."

A questioning head tilt from him prompted Applejack to continue. "She's starting to wake up later and later every day. And to top it Cheerilee sent a note yesterday because Sunny's already gotten late to school four times this..."

Applejack was interrupted by a choke.

"Big Mac?"

The answers were in snort "Sorry... It's... you couldn't..." And then Big Macintosh truly lost it to laughter, at the astonished looks of Granny Smith.

Big Mac couldn't really help it, but the picture of Princess Celestia, Sol Invictus, the Everlasting Sun, with probably a thousand titles more, and more importantly _the pony who raises and lowers the sun every day_ being so good at sleeping in was inherently absurd.

It was minutes before he could calm himself.

"Y'er alright, Mac?" Granny Smith asked worriedly.

"Ah'm fine now, Granny. And sorry Applejack, but Ah wasn't laughing at you."

Applejack levelly looked at Mac, to which he made his best effort to calm down the smile that was still trying to find a place on his muzzle. Apparently it satisfied his sister because a moment later she continued talking, "like I was saying, I'm worried Sunny is sleeping in too much" Macintosh managed to contain his smile to his left side only, where neither mare could notice "and it's causing trouble in school."

After a silent moment, during which the laughter completely left the stallion's features Big Macintosh gulped and lowered his head. "Fine, sis. Ah'll go talk to her."

* * *

>"I was wondering if it was going to get me in trouble."

Big Macintosh wasn't sure what to do with this reaction. He knew Princess Celestia should know she shouldn't wake up late but it didn't seem like she was in a pranking mood.

Suddenly Celestia seemed to look to somewhere far away. "'You want what you can't have.' You've heard that, right?"

Mac nodded. He wondered if his face had the same look.

Celestia walked so she was by Big Macintosh's side, then she sat down and leaned on him. "Normally I can do many things, from visiting all corners of Equestria to make a city flourish, to get chamomile or mint tea if I want, to go surf the ocean's waves or prominences. Everything but sleeping in."

Off in the distance, the rays of day's end bathed the sky in pink and blue.

"Luna is usually recovering from her time as Nightmare Moon, Cadance is just starting to grow into her power, and Twilight still stays as unicorn most of the time. And when you're the only one who raises the sun, no matter how late you wake up the sun isn't out yet."

With wind and birds sounds as the backdrop both siblings looked at the Sweet Apple Acres fields for some time, and at some point Sunny Fields could feel the shifting weight of Mac leaning a bit towards her.

"But you still have to get to school on time, Cheerilee sent a note home about that."

"Yeah." Then the filly stood up and looked at her big brother. "Hey, Mac, How about you wake me up later?" At Big Mac's unasked question she continued "I have no trouble getting up quick, but I want the most sleep I can get."

"We'll give it a go for a week, otherwise it's back to wake up to see the sunrise. Deal?"

"Deal, big bro."

He smiled, despite himself. That was going to take some getting used to.

* * *

>Her old bones weren't good enough to buck trees for long anymore, but Granny Smith had lived long enough to have some degree of wisdom and highly refined skills, like checking with her earth pony magic how healthy the fields were, when the apples will be ripe to take, all sorts of little tricks that, may Twilight Sparkle permit it, she'll pass on to her family.

Family.

She had been worried for a while, since around the time of the last Summer Sun Celebration, Big Mac had been acting strange around little Sunny, and if Granny Smith hadn't raised him herself then she'd believe Macintosh was actually afraid of little Sunny.

So that's when Granny Smith saw those two children on the cliff leaning on each other she decided to change her route and go straight to the house, where Applejack was surely getting things ready for dinner.

"Applejack! Stop what you're doing mare and bring a jam of Zap Apple Jam for tonight!" Today was a day for celebration.

* * *

>Sometimes Big Macintosh wondered if Sunny had set a bet if she could have a tree sap disaster using only pure earth pony abilities to match Applebloom's usual standard.

Everything was going as normal as crusading usually went, or so he was told. Cutie Mark Crusaders scooter track builders they were today. How that became a wave of tree sap when he was bringing Babs Seed to the clubhouse was something he intended to learn, as soon as he could get out of this goop.

Now, if only it wasn't sap from zap apple trees it wouldn't shock him every time he tried to move. That'd be nice.

* * *

>It was late at night and Big Mac took a look at the calendar he had on his room. Today's date was circled and had been for some time, the last day of the loop. Looking back, he could easily see it had been a good run, with only the occasional monster or dragon attack. It was sort of expected, really. You couldn't live so close to the Everfree Forest and not have an encounter with some sort of creature.

A soft knock on the bedroom door interrupted Big Mac's thoughts. When he opened the door the pony behind it wasn't a surprise; the knock had been from too low in the dood for being anypony else.

Sunny Fields stood by the door, a blanket around her barrel. "Mac, can I sleep with you tonight?"

Big Mac smiled "Sure Sunny, Ah was going to bed myself."

And so Sunny joined Mac in the bed, both earth ponies piled small atop large as the bed was a bit small for both. His last thoughts before going to sleep were about tomorrow when he... well, tomorrow wasn't going to arrive anyways.

* * *

>A sudden gust of fresh air and the light from a dawning sun made Big Macintosh realize he was in a new Loop. The always inviting sight of Sweet Apple Acres before him and the full basket at his side made him realize his current task: gathering fresh apples for the Apple family reunion, as usual for a normal first day when the Summer Sun Celebration is celebrated in Ponyville.

However, this time Big Macintosh took a moment to bathe himself in the sunlight. Even in this cool morning it felt warm, warm like a little filly's hug.

Then the moment ended and Big Macintosh took the apple filled basket to carry it to the farm. After all, he couldn't leave Granny Smith waiting.

* * *

>157.19 (Awesomedude17)

Luna was simply sipping her tea when Cadance burst through the doors.

"AUNTIE!"

"What is it, our dear niece?" Luna asked.

"My love, it's been stolen!"

"Pardon?"

"My ability to love, it's gone. And there was this note next to me!"

Luna grabbed the note and read it, and then screamed to the heavens.

"CARMEN SANDIEGO AND LUPIN III!"

And thus was the tale of how two thieves found love, and stole it right from under the Princess of Love's nose.

* * *

>157.20 (Gamerex27)

Continuation of 156.14

She should have known something was wrong when her castle's Map cut off mid-signal.

"Where the hay's everypony?" Applejack asked, as the group of five (Fluttershy was visiting a friend that day) walked throughout the deserted town.

"It doesn't look too old," Rarity commented. "It looks like ponies lived here just recently. I don't know _how, _since all of the architecture and decor is drab and dull enough to put anypony to sleep."

"I...think they evacuated," Rainbow Dash said, putting the pieces together as she glanced at the ground. "Look down. See all the hoofprints? Judging by how far apart they're spaced, I think they stampeded outta here in a hurry."

"Maybe they had a flash mob or surprise party somewhere outside of town?" Pinkie Pie suggested. Her usual ear-to-ear grin had diminished somewhat: there was something about the atmosphere of the town that put a damper on her spirits.

"Some kind of emergency, I think," Twilight said, as she cast a simple scrying spell. "They ran away from something...no, some_pony_."

"What was the matter?"

"I...whatever it is, somepony's still here." Twilight glanced at an alleyway between the houses. "Come out. We won't hurt you."

"I sincerely doubt that you would," said a stallion's flat, nearly-emotionless voice. "Or _could_."

Slowly, a brown-coated colt trotted out from the shadows. Glancing at the group of five, he frowned. "So, you came after all. Lesser mares may have fled in terror at what happened here."

"So...you know what went down here?" Dashie asked, taking a step back from the intimidating unicorn in front of them.

"That I do," the other pony declared, the black markings on his coat swaying as he stepped forwards. "I shall tell you what transpired. But only to _her_," he said, pointing a hoof at Twilight.

It suddenly dawned on Twilight who this was, as the combination of the markings, the too-sharp horn, and the Cutie Mark of a pony's bleached skull came into view. "If...if you're sure about that."

Assuring her friends that she wouldn't be too far, and that they could come running if they thought anything at all was up, she followed the being into the cave on the edge of the abandoned town.

* * *

>"-been trying to feed a pet cat," the titanic creature made entirely out of sapient blood asked Fluttershy. "**Would you happen to know what they like to eat?**"

"Um..." Hesitating, Fluttershy glanced back towards her companion out of the corner of her eye.

"Tell him whatever comes to mind," Naoki said. "Or whatever he wants to hear. That usually works better."

"...they'll eat a lot of things, really," she continued. "But, they usually prefer small rodents. Freshly-killed mice usually gets their attention."

**"I see," the beast rumbled. **"The newly-shed gore gets the attention of a carnivore. Maybe now she'll stop meowing all over the place when I'm trying to work."** Smiling, the demon knelt down to her eye level. Fluttershy forced herself not to back away as some of the beings blood splashed over her. "***I should probably get going, but here's something for your trouble. You wanted me to Contract, right? I need to go on a company retreat, but you can have 10 Hunger Tarot cards to call be back later**."

"It worked this time?" Fluttershy asked, as the demon faded into nothingness and the small pile of playing cards fell to her forehooves, and the hoof-mounted computer on her left. "But that pony in the bodysuit tried to push me into traffic when I tried to help her cross the street. Why do I keep getting...mixed results?"

"You're treating 'em like they're all the same," Naoki explained, as he batted past a crowd of incubii leering at a group of sirens on their Girls' Night Out. "That was a soundless _shinobi_. They _hate_ sound, and was just messing with you to see if you'd figure it out. Always go wordless with them." He sighed. "That Rabbit a few Circles up? He left 'cuz he _didn't_ want those carrots. Doesn't matter he looked like a mortal bunny: he's a primordial force of fertility. The schoolgirl-looking one tried to gut you because she wanted a pencil rather than advice. And that generic fairy left mid-talk because you gave her too _much_ money: they don't like people who can't say no. Treating demons like they're some faceless mass of monsters who all think alike will either get you nowhere or in the graveyard, fast. And _everyone_ gets bad results sometimes. About a quarter of _my_ negotiations end with the demon trying to _maul_ me, no matter _what_ I say."

"I _know_ that," she said. "I've have _some_ success. I've got some Tarot Cards for later summoning, I made a truce with a few angrier ones, and I even got a free flu shot from that one dead nurse. Why can't I get consistent results?"

_Because you're not used to any hardship or dissent at all_, a bitter voice said at the back of Naoki's mind. _Just mind-bash everyone into thinking the same._

Fluttershy's expression hardened, and she gave him a Stare at around 44.44% intensity.

"...what?" Naoki asked, his face twisting in confusion.

_And you're an angry, mean misanthrope who drags everyone else down with him!_

Fluttershy abruptly turned red. "Um...I didn't say that!"

"No..." Naoki said under his breath. "You...thought it..."

In the blink of an eye, the Demi-Fiend had darted across the room and yanked a giggling, floating brain out of a bush made of dead branches. "Knock it off, _jackass!_"

After punting the meddling prankster into the horizon, Naoki sighed, rubbing at his head with a forehoof. "We didn't say that out loud: it must have been dicking around with some telepathy bullshit. All over-exaggerated and blown out of proportion, too.

"Look," he said, turning back around to face Fluttershy, "I can't just forget about the Bureau overnight, or what I did to you guys when I lost it. It's gonna take _time_ for my brain to stop jumping from 'pony,' to 'racist homogenizing horse.' And I'm sure you've got something similar with me. But I'm _trying_."

"I know," she said. "It can be easy to forgive...but much harder to forget. But we do what we can. Fix things, piece by piece."

Both of them were silent for a few moments.

"...this is the last layer, I think," Naoki announced, trying to change the subject as they moved deeper into Tartarus and waved some stolen passes towards some sleeping guards.

"Indeed," rumbled a deep voice. "This is the last. For you."

Trembling in anger, Tirek stepped out from the shadows, every hair on his coat bristling at rage upon seeing one of the ponies that had humiliated him so.

"...should I try negotiating with _him_?" Fluttershy asked.

"..._what_."

"Don't see why not," Naoki said, shrugging. "I mean, he _is_ a demon, right? Not all of 'em are open to normal talks-"

"you _dare_ ignore-"

"-so we may be better off waiting until a full moon," Naoki continued. "Those mess with some demons' minds. Or-"

"I am _standing right_--"

"-could try using one of Langdon's fancy apps to calm him down enough to talk," the Demi-Fiend went on. "The DEMONICA can do some really weird shi-"

He was cut off by a blow to the head, sending him crashing into a nearby wall with a painful-sounding _thud_.

"_Don't you dare ignore me!_" the incensed centaur roared. "_ME! LORD TIREK!_"

"Don't care," Naoki grunted, climbing to his hooves. "Look, Timex, or whatever-"

"_Ti. Rek,_" hissed the demon, as he opened his maw wide.

"...wait, _that's a really bad idea!" _Fluttershy warned, jumping onto her hind legs and waving frantically to attract the monster's attention away from her companion.

"_YOUR MAGIC IS MINE!_"

* * *

>"What did you do?" Twilight asked as soon as they were out of earshot.

"Come again?" Naoki(?) asked as he sat back on his haunches, spitting onto his forehoof and wiping something off of his horn.

"The entire town stampeded out of here, the wall of Cutie Marks is empty, and Starlight is nowhere to be seen," she clarified. "What did you do?"

"Let us not dance around the topic," the man agreed. "I killed her."

"Why?"

"You know why," he snorted, wiping the brown-colored mix of saliva and...dried blood...off of his horn. "I suppose you're expecting me to recount how I used some grand, ironic punishment on her. Drawing and quarteting her in front of her entire dictatorship, maybe? Flaying her alive, perhaps? No. Every journey begins with a single step, Twilight Sparkle. And, so too, do they end."

The Princess of Friendship glared at him.

"A single step at roughly under the speed of sound," he explained. "It is difficult to tear out someone's soul when you are bleeding out the throat and jugular vein. No grand humiliation, or magnificent plan. The look on her face when she realized that her plans were undone was enough for me. The town didn't even get past the first verse of their song before she fell," he recalled, smirking.

"This is a Sanctuary Loop, Naoki. We won't do anything to hurt you, but that doesn't mean you can go around murdering anyone you want."

"I am not Naoki." Red eyes blinked at her in irritation.

Twilight stared, likewise blinking in confusion.

"I am born of him, but not him," said the entity in front of her. "A demon, crafted out of the human's id by Lucifer himself, for the purpose of striking down the Great Will. You may call me Kashima, if you must name me."

Twilight briefly recalled something her daughter had told her in between sobs after that fateful Loop-how a red-eyed version of the Mad Anchor held off the enraged Naoki's presence in his mindscape as she delved deeper in to combat the Shadow.

"It doesn't matter who you are," she said. "You can't go around killing whomever you want."

"Why not?"

Twilight stared at him in disbelief. "Because...killing people is wrong?"

"Is it?" Kashima asked, tilting his head slightly.

Twilight saw no malice, no mockery, no arrogance in his eyes. Just confusion.

"...oh, sweet _turnip_, you don't actually _know why_, " she said, facehoofing. "Alright, let's start from the beginning."

In the span of three minutes, Tirek had gone from a haughty monster to a quivering, shrieking demon trying very, _very_ hard to hide himself behind a convenient boulder.

"Found you, Timex."

Screaming, Tirek tried to scramble away, but was summarily smacked in the face by a tossed rock. Yelling in pain, he fell to the floor as blood began to trickle from his broken nose.

"Can't really think of any catchy one-liners at the moment," a bored-looking Naoki said as he cantered to the fallen centaur, the binding magic of the cursed stone kicking in. "So, I think I'll just kill you now."

"Wait!" the demon screeched.

"Oh, and stealing some MP doesn't guarantee victory," he idly said as he lifted up a forehoof towards Tirek's center-of-mass. "I mean, most of my attacks run off of physical health-or HP, as nerds would say. Besides, I've got enough Magatsuhi crammed in my Pocket to make up for whatever teeny bits of power you made off with. If any. At all."

"Please! I'll do anything!" he begged as Naoki pulled back his hoof for a final blow. "I'll...I'll form a contract _just let me live!_"

"Wait!"

From somewhere behind him, Fluttershy tackled Naoki to the ground.

"Yeah, forgot to mention some demons bargain when you're about to smash their faces in," he grunted, as both of them got up.

"So, I just hold this up, and-"

As he openly wept from fear and shame, Tirek dissolved into a stream of ones and zeroes, flowing from the ground in front of them into Fluttershy's COMP.

"Congrats," Naoki said, slapping Fluttershy hard on the back, "you've got your first demon. A Tyrant-class one, no less. Those tend to be high end. Ish."

"Glad to hear it," Fluttershy said, blushing a little. "So, do I need to remember to break the Contract before the Loop ends, or-"

"Nah, demons get ejected from a Compendium before the Loop ends." Naoki brushed some of the dirt and tears from the fight off of his coat. "The data's still there, though. You'll be able to get your own Timex out of there whenever you want. Provided you'll pay the Macca."

"Tirek, not Timex."

"Same thing." Naoki grinned, his troubles finally pushed to the back of his subconsciousness for the moment. "Let's keep going. Up to tracking down Trumpeter and smashing his skull in with his own trumpet?"

* * *

>"So that is why," Kashima said, hours after Twilight had begun.

"_Yes! THANK you_!" Twilight said, her mane long-since frayed from exasperation of having to explain the entirety of an Ethics 101 course to what she had clearly learned was a sociopath.

"Mh." Truth to be told, Kashima _still_ didn't really get it. Nor did he particularly _care_. He was _not_ human (or equine), and the finite was always tough to understand for immortal Amalan demons.

Yet, he supposed it was in his nature to kill, as an incarnation of Death Itself.

He could not blame the eagle for flying, or the serpent for sliding on its belly. Nor could he blame the pony for befriending others and bringing them into their herd over death. Strength in numbers, he guessed, as they _were_ a prey species.

"Tell me, though," he said. "One of the reasons you listed for this is because murder breaks the law of your land."

"Yeah. You don't want to be thrown in jail for the rest of the Loop, right?"

"A foolish justification. Harmony is nothing more than a transitory--"

"Oh, _no you don't!_"

Suddenly, Kashima was yanked off of his hindquarters, and found himself dangling in the air in front of a _furious_ Anchor.

"I have _had it_ with people like you _complaining endlessly_ about how 'friendship is a lie,' or 'power comes from isolation,' or 'friends tie you down,' or _any of those road apples!_ Don't you _dare_ start on _that lecture!_ _I've heard it a hundred times, and I WON'T hear it again! It doesn't matter if it's a rainbow beam or just having people to support you! Friendship _is magic!_ Not _foolish!_"

"...Of course it is," Kashima said, with complete sincerity.

"...za?" Twilight said, dropping Kashima to the cavern's floor suddenly.

"All of these foes, you have vanquished through the bonds you have made," he continued, picking himself up. "The allies you have wrought, the connections you have forged, the power you have gained from doing so. Attempting to deny that there is _power_ in the bonds of Man and Mare is an exercise in futility. Amongst so many Branches in Yggdrasil, this concept appears again and again and again. I would be a fool to dismiss it after the sheer amount of support your ideals gain.

"All these dangers on this planet," he went on, motioning out the cave's mouth. "Beasts seeking to rend you limb from limb. Tyrants and overlords dot the landscape, ready to rip the freedom and power you hold dear from you and make you their slaves. The planet itself is stagnant, and would rot and decay into nothing without constant, neverending supervision. All of these lethal threats, dealt with without even raising a single hand against them. All of them, toppled by friendship." He smirked. "People dismiss you and your folk as little more than babes and weaklings, all due to your forms and philosophies. But I know better. You are warriors. Each and every single one of you. Fighting 'gainst death and entropy each and _every_ day: not through spells or blades, but through words alone. That...is worthy of respect, Twilight Sparkle."

"...then...what _were_ you going to lecture me about?" Twilight asked, baffled.

"Harmony," Kashima spat, as if the word were a dirty curse. "Do not claim that all things are balanced, and that laws or order mean anything in the long run. We both know better."

Kashima had suddenly gone from the other side of the cave to right in front of Twilight's face. She did not flinch in the slightest, staring the world-devouring demon right in the eyes, devoid of fear.

"Just as Man has eaten of the Fruit of Knowledge," he proclaimed, "so too has Mare. Do not pretend otherwise. I see it in your eyes. I smell it on your breath. You cannot close your eyes and return to ignorance. The knowledge that harmony and equality are naught but transitory states have sunk in: chaos is the natural order of things. I claim not to understand it, but Friendship does indeed transcend the laws of reality. This is a fact you have proven, time and time again. Yet I know for certain that Harmony does not.

"But you have your wish," he said, backing off. "I shall go to pains not to slay anyone for the duration of my stay here, unless I am directly provoked into a fight. I shall...what did you suggest?"

"Pranking...them," Twilight said slowly. "It's a lot more fun to mess with your enemies than to just kill them. Killing only ever does one thing: it makes people die. Pranks can be _so much more_."

"I see." Kashima broke into a grin, with far, _far_ more teeth than any herbivore was meant to have. "Why didn't you just say so in the first place?"

Twilight froze in place. For several seconds.

"I would have gladly agreed to torment my foes than kill them, had you said so in the first place," he said, still grinning. "No lecture needed."

A few moments later, Twilight's friends (who had patiently been waiting outside the cave, and had just wrapped up an impromptu game of Eye-Spy courtesy of Pinkie Pie), were jolted to attention by the sound of roaring rapids, followed by a surprised stallion falling out of the cave on a gargantuan wave of water.

Screaming in nonsensical anger, Twilight put away her supercharged squirt bottle, replaced it with a foam sword from her Pocket, and proceeded to go to town on the demon.

"I was considering a spar, anyways," Kashima said, eventually getting to his hooves and parrying her blows at the first opportunity. "Non-lethal, since you so insisted. A god, and a demon meant to kill one. Let us see who is victorious."

**Author's Note:****

I'm sorry for the extreme length of the pause between updates - there's been some general loop shakeups going on, and I've also been a bit generally overworked.

Rather than do a pithy comment for everything, I'll just note a few of the high points.

157.1: It's sometimes good to let out your inner child - even if they're not your normal shape.

157.2: World design from Planetcopla, used without permission.

157.3: No, she's not really an Exalted. But it looks shiny.

157.4: Oh, look! Plot!

157.7: Savvy.

157.8: Well, it is a good book.

157.15: Plunkplunkplunkplunk

157.16: Settling accounts.

157.20: Some people just won't Friend easily.

165. Chapter 165

158.1 (Masterweaver)

The loop had only just begun, and Steven had only just confirmed that the Crystal Gems were awake, when Amethyst's eyes suddenly widened. "Oh frack!"

Pearl gasped, quickly clasping her hands over Steven's ears. "AMETHYST!"

But the purple gem was already running for the temple door. "Garnet can you handle the centipeedles okay thanks Steven and Pearl you're with me!" With only that brief warning, she wrapped her whip around the very confused pair and dragged them into her massive mess of a room.

"Amethyst, what are you-?!"

"Okay, I need you two to help me get this-" Amethyst winced.
"_organized_ as quickly as we can."

Pearl dropped Steven in shocked glee. "_Really?_"

Steven stood up. "Um... why?"

The purple gem was already disassembling one of her piles. "There's a new woman in Beach City this loop, if my memories are right, and if she's who I think she is-"

A bubble suddenly warped into existence in front of the panicking gem, containing the image of a cross-eyed blonde smiling at her. "Hi there, honey! I'm still a little busy dealing with my Pre-Awake set-up, but I should be able to drop by in half an hour! Hope to see you soon!" She waved brightly at Amethyst for the briefest of seconds.

Then the bubble popped.

Pearl's eyebrow quirked. "'Honey'?"

Amethyst sighed. "I... I replace her oldest daughter a lot. Like, a lot a lot. And Amethyst Star is _super_ organized! I don't want to let her down!" She grabbed a tub, gave it a brief look, then stuffed it in her pocket. "Now come on, we've only got like thirty minutes before she gets here!"

* * *

>158.2 (Masterweaver)

"You're wrong, Nightmare Tangle!" Twilight shouted. "The Elements of Fashion are _right_ here!_"

She pointed at her friends, one by one. "Applejack, whose level-headed nature kept everyone from panicking when the cliff collapsed, represents the spirit of Practicality!"

"Darn tootin'!" The mare flipped her mane. "Press it every morning, brush it every night!"

"Fluttershy, whose charm and poise was enough to calm down a raging manicomore, represents the element of Elegance!"

The pegasus lightly stroked her mane out of her eyes. "This is all natural, by the way. It's a gift, really."

"Pinkie Pie, who showed us how to laugh off the damage of your mud-flinging fear trees, represents the element of Confidence!"

"I'm pudgy, pink, have frizzy hair, and I'm damn sexy to boot!" Pinkie paused. "Wait, are we keeping this G-rated?"

"Rarity, who gave fashion tips to one of the most up to date sea serpents in the forest, represents the element of Style!"

"Filly please." Rarity struck a pose that would have stallions everywhere drooling. "_Everything_ I do, I do in style."

"And Rainbow Dash, who pounded your army of barbershop minions while rocking a guitar solo, represents the element of Flair!"

"My mane is only twenty percent as awesome as me! AND IT'S A FREAKING RAINBOW!"

"Vut, vut zis cannot be!" Nightmare Tangle protested. "Vu du not have, how do you say, ze sixthe elemint!"

"But I do!" Twilight cried. "For you see, each and every one of these ponies has taught me so much about how to maintain my image, and that has sparked in me a wellspring of reflection and creativity. I look upon ponies now, and I see so much potential! I have the sense of fashion that I so long lacked. I have... ze Magics!"

The crown descended on Twilight's head, and the Nightmare's eyes went wide as the six ponies all began to glow. "Zis iz impossibley! Non... NON... NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOON!"

* * *

>"Welp, this is certainly a weird variant," Applejack mused. "Ah mean, Ah've got like five different shampoos back at home and Ah know fer a fact that's the least amount in Ponyville!"

Fluttershy chuckled. "Shampoo, conditioner, coat soap, hoof sealant, and antiperspirant deodorant, I'd imagine?"

"I'm just glad I'm not the pony that got the Element of Style," Rainbow muttered. "I don't think I'd be able to live that down."

Pinkie held up a hoof. "Quick question: how do balloons relate to confidence? Or is this just another 'shaped like the cutie mark' thing?"

"I'd presume something about being carried above doubt would factor into the interpretation," Rarity mused. "Oh, Twilight, do you know when Celestia's Replacement is going to arrive? She seems a little late."

Twilight rolled her eyes. "Well, given that appearance is really important this loop she does have a prep-kit she has to use, but Aloe should be here within twenty minutes. In the meantime, though, maybe we should help Lotus freshen up? I cannot believe I just said that," she murmured.

* * *

>158.3 (Masterweaver)

"I... I don't like to talk about it," Sunset explained reluctantly.

Twilight frowned. "What? Why?"

"Well... um." The teenage girl fiddled with her fingers. "...Twilight, when you're a male, you're basically just... you, but as a guy. Nerdy but still... uh, charismatic."

"...yeeeeeeeeesss?"

Sunset cringed, twiddled her thumbs for a couple moments, then threw up her hands. "Look, I don't know whether it's because my first loop was in Kingdom Hearts or if it's a glitched code or if I'm just this attractive normally, but whenever I'm a guy I'm completely bishonen! Like, the prettiest man that all the girls secretly fawn over, you know?"

Twilight blinked. "Wait... so that loop where you came to me and hid in the cardboard box, that's NORMAL for you?"

"YES!"

* * *

>158.4 (Masterweaver)

There were loops, and there were loops.

Twilight Sparkle had long ago come to the conclusion that her baseline was, for lack of a better term, sketchy enough that a certain amount of variation could occur without actually requiring that the loop be labeled a variant. Small things, like whether or not Quills and Sofas only sold red quills or sold a rainbow, or whether Nightmare Moon was the result of possession or just insane jealousy. The main story would remain the same, all things being equal, but these little micro eventualities popped up sometimes, and she simply had to deal with them.

Like, for instance, the stallion that had just stepped out of the crate that was just delivered to her palace.

Twilight looked from his face, back to the letter in her hoof, around at her (thankfully all Awake) friends, and then back to his face.

"...So," she said in as casual a tone as she could, "Princess Celestia just magically made us all a boyfriend." She paused. "To share, apparently."

"That there is a thing that just happened," Applejack agreed, rubbing the back of her head. "Has... has this ever happened before?"

"Well, she does occasionally spend some loops trying to set me up with various beaus because I'm romantically uninclined, but she doesn't usually involve you lot. And making a pony is new."

Rarity sighed, standing up and walking over to the stallion. "I'm terribly sorry to inform you of this, but I'm already married." She nodded her head toward the large dragon who was crossing his arms stoically. "I think he and I are just going to leave the rest of the girls to handle the situation." With that, the pair left.

Rainbow Dash rolled her eyes. "Well, she took the easy way out. Now what?"

Pinkie tapped her chin. "We draw straws?"

Fluttershy cleared her throat. "Ahem. We should probably see what mister Anypony's opinion of the situation is."

"I don't know, Fluttershy." Twilight finally put down her letter, gesturing at the still smiling but now sweating stallion. "If he is artificial-which, in this loop, is apparently a possibility-he might be running under a limited logic-directive system and therefore not have developed any opinion whatsoever outside an initial command to love and adore us all."

"Still, it's worth a try. Besides, we all attended Apple Bloom's lecture on synthetic psychology a few loops back, didn't we? Just because he starts with a limited logic-directive system does not guarantee he won't develop in a direction outside the initial framework."

"...Fair point," the alicorn conceded. "Still, of the ponies left in the target group, I'm asexual, Rainbow Dash probably would want a committed multi-loop relationship, and Applejack..."

She paused, giving Applejack an awkward look. "I'm sorry, but how do you feel about one-loop stands?"

The farm mare shrugged. "For me, marriage is part o' the family. Ah don't take in nopony who ain't gonna make a good Apple."

"...fair enough. So that just leaves you and Pinkie."

"To be fair," Pinkie quipped, "he is cute. And I'm pretty free-love, all things considered, although I'm not very good at the relationship side of things."

Fluttershy shrugged. "Well, I for one have had multiple one-loop stands, thank you very much, and I don't mind taking mister Anypony in."

Rainbow blinked. "Wait. You? I mean, I knew about you and Link, but-"

"Sometimes I like to feel like a caring wife," Fluttershy explained. "And what comes with that is what comes with that. I'm sorry, Pinkie, but in this case I think I might be better able to take care of him."

The pink pony shrugged. "Fair enough. Mister Anypony, you're okay with that, right?"

The stallion nodded.

"...You can talk, right?" Rainbow raised an eyebrow. "I mean, you're not just eyecandy, are you?"

The stallion shrugged, helplessly.

Twilight flicked up her wings. "Right. Fluttershy, you just take him to your cottage, and I'll... I'll write up a letter to Celestia explaining the loops and why a relationship is a bad idea." She turned away, rubbing a hoof against her clenched shut eyes.

* * *

>158.5 (Alex Prior)

Twilight trudged into the bar.

"Drink. NOW."

Mac took one look and swallowed a laugh. The mare traipsing into the bar had two long horns poking from her shoulder-blades, with a single wing where the horn should have been.

Mac weighed his options for a moment. Then he left Berry in charge of Twilight's drink and absconded into his pocket. One would think he'd have been jaded enough.

Berry looked Twilight over. "Spell backfire or a funky sense of humor?"

Twilight just glared.

* * *

>158.6 (Filraen)

_From all of us together, together we're friends. With the marks of our destinies made one, there is magic without end!_

Upon writing the now completed version of Starswirl the Bearded's spell, nopony was more surprised than Twilight Sparkle when the Elements of Harmony reacted, forming a magic storm around her. Maybe a punishment for their misuse and almost condemning her friends to live lives which would made them completely unhappy?

However, after a moment of panic Twilight realized the magic storm was around her but not affecting her, a simple feel of the Elements' magic told her that wasn't the case. She could feel the connections between herself and her friends. Applejack, Rainbow Dash, Rarity, Fluttershy and Pinkie Pie, Twilight could feel their connection just when they used the Elements against Nightmare Moon or Discord, that everything was going to be just fine.

When the whirlpool of magic finally collapsed towards Twilight she closed her eyes, smiled and let herself go.

* * *

>Next thing Twilight knew she was standing in the middle of a shiny space, standing on solid nothing... and she needed to wake up properly and find somepony else.

"Hello? Where am I? What is this place?"

All of a sudden Princess Celestia appeared before her
"Congratulations, Twilight. I knew you could do it."

Twilight kept her frown even after a nuzzle to greet her mentor.
"Princess... I don't understand. What did I do?"

"You did something today that's never been done before. Something even a great unicorn like Starswirl the Bearded was not able to do, because he did not understand friendship like you do. The lessons you've learned here in Ponyville have taught you well. You have proven that you're ready, Twilight."

"Ready? Ready for what?"

"For your final test, Twilight Sparkle." Another alicorn suddenly appeared at Princess Celestia's right side.

"Princess Luna!"

"We're so glad you've made it this far, Twilight." Princess Cadance appeared at Princess Celestia's left. Twilight gave just a nuzzle to greet the arriving Princesses; this didn't seem the moment for Cadance's nursery rhyme.

"What do you mean?" At this point Twilight wasn't sure who she was supposed to ask. Was this supposed to be a final test? She... she didn't have her study materials! She didn't have any time to prepare herself! She-!

"Follow us, Twilight." Princess Celestia's calm voice hopefully cut through Twilight's panic before the Princesses started walking.

As Twilight followed them she could see many images passing by, all of her time since she arrived to Ponyville: trying to investigate Pinkie's Pinkie Sense, the Running of the Leaves, Shining Armor and Cadance's wedding, that time traveling fiasco and many, many more. Twilight was so entranced by the images she didn't notice the Princesses had stopped, all of them looking at a big black glass panel.

The Princesses were now holding a short white stick each in their magical aura. When Princess Luna gave her a fourth small stick Twilight realized it had a small light, even if it didn't seem to be magical at all.

"Your bonds with your friends are strong, Twilight," Princess Celestia spoke as the black glass panel suddenly illuminated, showing different images unlike anything Twilight had ever seen. "But today you need to show their endurance, that your friendships can resist even the most devious of challenges."

Twilight kept looking at the colorful images of the glass panel until they stopped, this time teasing her with words holding an unknown meaning.

"Mario... Party?"

* * *

>158.7 (Masterweaver)

Usagi _had_ been running the loop baseline, mostly as a form of meditation while she thought about what to do the next time Ami and Rei were both Awake. But that all changed after the Attack in the Alleyway... where her rescuer did not have strawberry curls in a pony tail, but a short-cropped dirty blonde set of locks.

"...Ya alright, miss?"

The warrior of the moon allowed herself to be pulled up by the muscular woman-and she was muscular, Usagi noted, not just fit as usual. Her eyes traveled up and up to meet the green eyes of her rescuer-oh. Ooooh.

She grinned a grin that wouldn't be out of place on the face of her in-loop mentor. "Big _Mac_oto, I presume?"

The taller girl-and she was definitely a girl, she was just as 'talented' as the person she was replacing-let out a quiet huff. "Eeeeyup."

Usagi burst out in uncontrolled laughter. "This is great! This is just so great! You, you're replacing Sailor Jupiter, she's, she's like the strong one! This makes total sense!"

"Ah hope ya don't mind if'n Ah opt out," Mac grumbled. "Ah'm not really a fighter-"

"Ah ah ah noooo. No, sorry, there's this whole destiny thing going on," Usagi explained. "So you're going to have to fight. And! And there are the things that Makoto does in baseline that lead to important situations, and, snrrrk, you'll definitely need to, to introduce yourself to the girls, and constantly compare guys to, to...pfffffahahahahahahahaha!"

The anchor collapsed in another laughing fit. Mac tried to cross his arms, realized where that would put them, blushed, and settled for pinching his brow. "...Ah'm _not_ going to be obsessing over mah ol' boyfriend."

"Oh my god, oh my god, that would be hilarious though! Just you in that deep voice and, and, every time, you would say 'he looks just like my old boyfriend'!" The noble princess of the moon tittered with unmitigated glee.

"...Ya know," Mac mused, "most o' the anchors Ah meet tend to be a tad less... teasing."

"Original seven, I'm a total loon. A Lunatic, if you will!" Usagi finally managed to contain her laughter somewhat, standing up. "Oh, hee hee, my sides... okay, but seriously, you're going to be kicking ass in a miniskirt, no arguments."

* * *

>158.8 (Masterweaver)

One of the problems with being an immortal-at least, in the context of the loops-was, quite simply, the lack of context. Celestia could recall being hatched from an egg, formed from raw magic, being the final survivor of a super-soldier program, being created by Discord on a random whim, being the manifest consciousness of the Sun itself, and that wasn't even mentioning the many, many times she had a deific mother. It had gotten to a point where she wondered if she would ever know her 'true' origins, and sometimes... if it even mattered.

Still, no matter where she came from, she loved being a filly. There was just so much innocence and freedom and-

"The _princess _does not have _time _for playing _games_, " growled the guard next to her. "She is _attending _a _ceremony _later today. Now _move along._"

Aaaaand the other fillies were cowed and backing away.

Well, _this _wasn't something she'd let happen.

"Isn't it the princess's duty to know how her subjects are living?" she asked innocently.

The guard frowned at her. "That is why you are attending the _ceremony_."

"But everyone's going to be so controlled and trying to look good!" Celestia whined. "It's not going to be _real_! I think I'd learn more about my subjects by playing with them then by being part of some silly ceremony."

"You have a responsibility to attend that ceremony and claim your position as-

"Besides, it's not like the ceremony is any time soon," the little alicorn pointed out. "I think I have time for one eensy teensy little game with them, don't you?"

"Princess, it is unbecoming for a mare of your stature to be seen cavorting with-

"Stupidguardsayswhat?"

The guard narrowed his eyes. "Young mare, I am your personal bodyguard, and I-

Celestia grabbed his helmet in her magic and slammed it over his head, not so accidentally also covering his ears. "Tell him I ran for the bakers," she whispered conspiratorially to the shocked fillies watching, flapping up into a tree. She couldn't help a tiny giggle at the ridiculous scene before her. Yes, sometimes it was really quite enjoyable, being a precocious and highly intelligent filly.

* * *

>158.9 (Masterweaver)

Equestria was uniquely blessed with a large number of stable loopers.

That wasn't to say they were _sane_, mind. They were as stir crazy as other universes, when one got right down to it, and a very few of them did have legitimate mental conditions that would not have existed without the loops. Even with that, though, there weren't really any problem loopers, any of them that needed careful watching, and most of them were smart enough to realize when they needed to go to others to talk.

So it was entirely understandable that the Anchor might miss a few signs. Especially when said anchor had, as a hobby, at least twenty scientific experiments running at once, whilst also juggling a self-imposed responsibility toward ensuring the mental health of others, and to be quite frank hadn't exactly extended as much care toward the looper as she did her closer friends. It wasn't a case of negligence-it was a case of overestimation, miscommunication, and perhaps if she admitted it to herself an unwillingness to approach a pony who she often saw as a co-bartender outside situations where the pony would be, in fact, a co-bartender.

"...Berry," she said as gently as she could, "let him go. You're scaring him."

"FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LOOPS! He's been unawake for five hundred and fifty loops, Twilight!"

"I know, Berry." Part of Twilight wanted to snap back and shout about all her friends that were for the... rounding it up to three thousandth time completely dumbstruck by the situation, but she knew from experience that different people were affected by different measures. "I understand," she instead stated. "And I... I suppose I haven't been as friendly as I should have been-"

"This isn't about friendship!" Berry snapped. "I mean, you're a great friend and all, Twilight, but-I just... I just-"

The anchor let out a small sigh. "Berry, you and I both know that he isn't him. Maybe he'll Wake Up later, maybe he won't, but this right here isn't right. Just... just let him go, and... and we can talk later," she finished lamely. "Please?"

It took a long and tense moment, but finally the other mare sighed, releasing her grip and backing away. "I... you're right... I just... I don't know..." With a vague look on her face, she ruffled her wings. "I'm going to... just... go, okay?"

"It'll be alright, Berry." Twilight smiled. "I promise."

With a deep breath, Berry Punch teleported away.

After a moment, Discord raised a talon. "So... before I was turned to stone, purple ponies didn't just turn into alicorns on a whim. And I must say having one tacklehug me right after my escape is unexpected-"

He cut himself off when he caught sight of Twilight's glare. "Princess, please take my friends to the throne room, I'll explain everything when I'm done here."

* * *

>158.10 (elmagnifico)

It was an odd loop, but not because it was Berry Punch's turn to clean one of the omnipresent cups. She did it with the experience of a thousand years' practice, but the way she kept even the tiniest speck of soap residue from splashing on her habit was a new skill.

The loop was odd because here, a Bar had existed before Macintosh awoke. This was apparently the back-end of a loop where Twilight and Applejack had replaced the Royal Sisters, and this particular bar was part of the ministries of Sweet Apple Abbey, devoted to Her Highness Applejack The Strong. He'd wanted to take his traditional place at the bar as soon as he Awoke, but the abbey only let males do the cleaning, serving alcohol was strictly the domain of the nuns.

Berry's cornette bobbed as she talked, and a pinkish hoof adjusted the headgear to keep it from falling off as she worked.

"So Mac, ever thought about joining the horn-and-wings club?"

Macintosh concentrated on his own chore until he could put his thoughts into words. Rub, rub, rub, went his dishcloth, until the laminated bar surface squeaked with cleanliness. The pregnant pause went into its third trimester before he spoke up.

"Don't get me wrong, nothin' wrong with alicorns. One of the first things ah learned was that wings an' a horn don't make a pony real different inside. Y'd think ah'd get it th' first time, but ah've been learning that again and again..."

Images of sisters, both big and little, orange, yellow, purple, and off-white pink, danced behind green eyes.

"What ah'm worried about though, is what ifn' somepony like me Wakes Up?"

Silence fell when Berry didn't reply immediately, and Macintosh let it stretch before he continued his stately freight-train of thought.

"Remember back before y'all started loopin', when there was only one alicorn? She was th' be-all an' end-all, despite her best efforts. How do y' think a mortal pony's gonna feel, suddenly surrounded by be-alls an' end-alls?"

Macintosh continued scrubbing at a stubborn spot on one of the lazy susans.

"Ah'm th' oldest looper 'round here who ain't got extra limbs on-call, an' while ah don't have anything against th' things, ah'd like to hold off on 'em ifn' at all possible. Might be good to have somepony who's been 'round th' tree a few times fer them to turn to."

Thoughtful quiet prevailed again until, by way of reply, Berry held up the tumbler she was scrubbing, and it sparkled with the sheen of something more.

"It's just, apparently your baseline self, during one of the expansions, dreamed of ascension."

Mac grunted from the table he was wiping down.

"Maybe at some point, but ah'm thinkin' that was to protect mah family. Kin ta an alicorn don't hafta worry about a bad cider harvest or a pair of two-bit con artists sinkin' their farm. You seen mah sisters lately? Hardly need it now."

As though summoned, Applejack crashed through the front door, twice as large as usual and sporting the alicornal extraneous extremities. Her drawl lent something to the Royal Canterlot Voice that made the floorboards jump even as she slammed the stout timbers home again.

"BERRREEEY! MAAAAAAAACK! Oops, sorry. Berry, Mac, ifn' y' don't mind ah want th' biggest tankard ah Sweet Cinnamon Cider y'all got, an' a bit of privacy."

Mac nodded and went to the entrance, which had already started vibrating with the hits of Applejack's pursuers. His parting barb was just audible over the sound of a Royal Canterlot Chug as he leaned on the inside of the door.

"Besides, Berry, if there's one thing ah've learned-

He shook his head, and by way of the result of that bomb all those Loops back, his determination to protect his sister from her worshippers-cum-papparazzi added just enough strength to hold the door against five earth ponies in robes, two unicorns with cameras, a quarter-dozen pegasus devotees, and one griffon convert.

Berry waved the cosmic tumbler playfully in one hoof, her habit swishing as she used the other to withdraw another small barrel of the relevant liquid from her pocket.

Macintosh gave a meaningful nod at the windows, where photo flashes and hymns were filtering through as though the heavy curtains weren't drawn.

"Eeno. Bein' a normal pony is the best, bar nun."

* * *

>158.11 (Sonic Raynboom)

Calvin Awoke, checked his Loop memories... then slowly turned to the draconequus beside him.

"You're not Hobbes." Calvin stated the obvious.

"No, I'm not. My name's Discord. And who are you?"

"My name's Calvin... wait, I've heard of you. You invented that card game, right? Have you ever heard of Calvinball?" asked Calvin, grinning wickedly.

Discord grinned back. "I haven't, but by your expression, I can tell I'm going to love it..."

* * *

>158.12 (Masterweaver)

"...Twilight?"

A sigh. "Please, Rarity, please don't do this-"

"Why does your new palace look like a cuttlefish?"

The alicorn rubbed her face. "I wish I knew. I wish I knew."

* * *

>158.13 (Masterweaver)

There are various cliché reactions to awkward shock. The simple blink, which allows the person to take a moment for processing. An "uh" or possibly "er", very rarely an "ah", all useful pause noises as they try to figure out what to say. Various little sentences involving the word what: "I'm sorry, what?" "Wait, what?" "What was that?" "What did you say?" or even just "What." all on its lonesome.

However, there are times when none of these are appropriate for the situation. The Grand Galloping Gala was a high-society gathering, after all, and plebeian stuttering or direct admission of confusion was generally quite frowned upon... for rather idiotic reasons, to be sure, but it was the principle of the matter.

Thus, Nyx settled for a polite, "...Excuse me?" The implication of a What was there, but since it was not actually present she had not committed any faux pas.

The Smooze gurgled again, holding out a small pseudopod with a wide... grin was the closest word, although it couldn't really be called a grin without teeth.

"...I... suppose I could, yes." Still bearing some mild confusion on her face, the black alicorn stepped onto the dance floor with her new partner, circling around as slow music played. "I'm honestly just... surprised that you asked."

"Glorphlbrgmrphigl."

"Aha, thank you I guess..."

The green goop adjusted its tie self-consciously.
"...Gurglmorgmphlora?"

"Well, not... not exactly," Nyx admitted. "My mother used her plus-one to let me in, and I..." She trailed off, staring out the window at the stars. "...well, at the moment, I'm unattached I guess. The whole thing's really... complicated."

"Garmphola," the Smooze glorped sympathetically.
"Glerfigamporflomargolimafara."

"Well, yes." Nyx gave the green goop a joking smile. "You know, for a creature without eyes you're incredibly perceptive."

The smooze licked its lips, awkwardly orienting them upward.
"Glrifamicaraaaa..."

Nyx frowned. "...what? What is it?"

After a moment, the Smooze turned back, contracting in embarrassment. "Glorficama... Gimoorgiahsjocasina. Glerpinmorgangargonmorga..."

Nyx sighed, rubbing her forehead. "And he told you the whole thing, didn't he. Well, yes, me and my... ugh. I had a serious fight with the person I was dating, yeah."

"Glifmorgaramorgan," the smooze glugged drily.
"Glimfirmigamorgamiforgicaghljrewau-"

"He _what?!_"

The smooze held up some consolatory pseudopods as quickly as it was able. "Glrembargafloogen! Gliphragmorbighara-glar, glimaragaminorf-glarma..." It grappled at its hat, trying to take it off in a gentlecreaturely manner. "Glormigarifcarigkakamorg... glimarfagamorgana, gloomaragaglimgara?"

Nyx rolled her eyes as she sat down. "Look, Smooze... you're a nice creature and all, and... and I get that Tantabus sent you my way because he was worried about me. But... I really don't think that it would work out between us. Besides, Tanty is... well... Tanty is very childlike. Just because you look like a cool 'dad' doesn't mean, well..." She gestured vaguely. "I'm not saying you'd be a bad parent, but I don't think you could attend to his unique needs. Or mine, really. I do appreciate the gesture, but... I'm going to have to say no."

"Gliffffffffff..."

"...hey, it's not all bad." Nyx patted the Smooze's... ventral surface reassuringly. "You're a very sensitive and caring individual, clearly. I'm sure you just need to find the right pony â€" as a matter of fact," she added with a sly smile, "I do happen to know a pony who has an odd fixation on tubs of jelly. Maybe I could arrange a date...?"

* * *

>158.14 (Edvarius)

Celestia Awoke in a manner that was odd for her, surrounded by a shimmering, pyramid-shaped barrier of many hues. She quickly readied her magic and cast her glance all around her. To her dismay she found she knew _exactly_ where she was. Her old castle, where Luna had turned into Nightmare Moon, and the damage to the castle wasn't from an ancient battle. It was fresh, and the Elements of Harmony lay as stone orbs at her hooves. But why the barrier this time?

Celestia gasped in horror as the Loop Memories hit her.

Nightmare Moon had attacked as usual, but the castle had been occupied this time. Her unawake self ordered the guards to evacuate everyone, lead them away from this place, but when one of Nightmare Moon's blasts had sent her through a wall three had disobeyed the order and come charging back to protect her. They couldn't possibly have defeated her sister on their own. But then they hadn't even tried. One of them, a unicorn, had arranged his companions into a triangular formation around her, and they'd used her lives to create this shield to give her time to recover and fight back. Now that

Celestia knew they were there she looked down at barely visible, translucent forms of ponies at the corners of the shield, and what little there was of them was soon gone from sight. Celestia bowed her head in sorrow. _Perhaps it would be best if Luna didn't Awaken in this Loop. She shouldn't be forced to live with those kinds of memories._

The barrier she was within faded as the ponies who had cast it did, but somehow the shimmering in the air around her had not. If anything it was getting moreâ€¦ focused. The wavering air took on the form of the ponies that had died to save her, but with coats and manes of a ghostly white. One of them, an earth pony, turned to the unicorn, and Celestia heard her voice ringing within her mind. :_Five minutes! You couldn't go five _gods damned minutes _before you got us all killed again!:_

Celestia blinked in shock at the unexpected voice from beyond the grave. Given the gestures the spirits were making apparently the conversation was continuing, albeit more privately. This was definitely one of the odder ways she had started a Loop, althoughâ€¦ the earth pony which had "spoken" seemed familiar to her from somewhere. Then it hit her. "Yfandes, is that you?"

The spirits turned their attention back to her and the same mental voice as before answered, :_Yeahâ€¦ that's my name. Have we met before?_:

"My name is Celestia. I Looped in as Queen of Valdemar, remember."

The third of the ghostly group, a pegasus, nodded in recognition. :_Oh, now I remember. You were the ones who had the really oddly colored Companions. You'd mentioned you were normally a pony. Funny running into you like this_:

Celestia tried to calm her temper. "Funny? You think having me see three of my little ponies die right in front of me in an effort to hold back my sister under the influence of dark magic is _funny?!_"

The unicorn spirit held up his hooves in a placating manner. :_Stefen didn't mean it like that. We're sorry for the scare, but we Awoke during the attack and saw you were in trouble. I'm sorry if it seems we were a bit too hasty with that spell, but to be honest we're sort of used to dying at this point._:

:_It would be nice to spend at least a _little _time alive to get to know a place before we have to make the Heroic Sacrifice._: Yfandes grumbled. :_Maybe sample some of the local cuisine while I still have a digestive system._:

Stefen started giggling at that, causing the irritated earth ghost to turn her attention to him. :_Sorry, it's justâ€¦ the Loop memories just hit. Guess what I'm called as a pony._:

:_Is it any worse than Vanilla Yell?_: the unicorn more commonly known as Vanyel inquired.

:_I'm Songwind!_:

Vanyel and Yfandes blinked at that revelation. :_You can't be Songwind. We already have a Songwind._:

Stefen just stuck his tongue out at his boyfriend. :_Too bad, I'm keeping it. He doesn't usually Wake Up until he's changed his name to Darkwind anyway._:

Celestia tried to massage her forehead to quiet down the headache the past few minutes had brought her. "Well regardless of what you want to call yourselves, I suppose it's my duty to welcome you to the Equestrian Loop. We consider ourselves a sanctuary loop, so you don't need to feel like you have to get involved in any problems that crop upâ€" Celestia paused for a moment "Well, any _more_ problems that crop up. You can just relax and consider this a vacation."

:_Actually, how long does this Loop usually last?_: Yfandes asked.

"From this point? You're looking at around 1000 years before our Anchor usually Awakens, and another 5 years after that."

:_Well, it's a bit longer than we usually spend as forest spirits, but all things considered it's not all that much more._: Vanyel commented. :_If nothing else this should give me plenty of time to study your world's magic and get an impressive garden going._:

* * *

>"Sorry we haven't been around to keep you company." Twilight apologized to the spirits of what was known in this Loop as the Everhaunt Forest.

:_Think nothing of it._: Vanyel responded. :_Celestia has been an excellent host, and has always made sure to take the time to visit. Besides, even though we can't leave the forest that still left us with an entire castle's worth of reading material. Now hold on, we're coming up on the picnic grounds now._:

The spirits lead Twilight and her friends through some old, gnarled trees with curtains of vines hanging from the branches. The girls gasped in awe at the scene in front of them. Where just before had been a dark and creepy forest, now they stood in a sunny meadow. Flowers of every color imaginable swirled about in intricate patterns impossible to have occurred naturally, though no sign of anypony else setting hoof here before this was evident. The ponies took in the scene as they approached a large stone slab table. Celestia lounged on a flat rock next to the table, pouring tea into her cup from the kettle already set up. Songwind floated up to face Twilight. :_Well, what do you think?_:

"This place is beautiful. You guys didn't need to go through this much effort just to give us a place for a picnic."

Yfandes waved Twilight's comment aside. :_Hey, coming up with new breeds of flowers for this place gave us something to do._:

"You breed all new flowers for this?" Applejack asked.

:_Like 'fandes said, it gave us something to do. Researching how certain species, both flora and fauna, can be altered through generations of subtle magical mutation and good old fashioned breeding is a project of mine.": Songwind explained. :_And it's not just flowers. I've been experimenting with some of the other plants native to the forest as well. You should see what I've accomplished with Zap Apples._:

"Well I must say this is all very lovely," Rarity offered as she poured herself a cup of tea. "If you don't mind my asking what sorts of flowers did you start out with?"

Vanyel's eyes seemed to twinkle as he turned to face Rarity, though that may have been a trick of the sunlight shining through him. :_Oh, all the flowers in this particular meadow are a variety of Poison Joke._:

The girls turned and looked back at the blossoming field they had just walked through, and the Princess of the Sun smiled as she placed her cup back on the table. "Gotcha."

* * *

>158.15 (Kris Overstreet)

Twilight Awoke to the unmistakable sight of Dream Valley- grass, bushes, some oak trees here and there, and a number of half-panicked ponies.

_Ugh, _she thought. _A G1 Loop? Why am I here? I've been good. I didn't crash any Loops recently. I stopped Apple Bloom from building that Infinite Improbability Drive. What did I do to deserve this?_

_No, wait, focus. This is the Loops. There might not be any reason. Besides, this looks like Tirek right at the start, which means there's no time to waste on wondering why._

Twilight's eyes caught a glimpse of movement overhead. Firefly and a couple of other pegasi had appeared from the rainbow filling the sky overhead. Each had a human of some kind on their backs. _Yep. Megan, right on time... but I don't remember her siblings coming along on her first trip..._

"Twilight! Twilight!" Firefly came to a somewhat wobbly landing, allowing her rider to dismount. "I found the hero! Her name is Megan!"

"Er... it is?" Twilight looked carefully at the figure. Megan Richards was thirteen, somewhat soft-faced, and blonde. This figure looked to be not younger than sixteen. She had a face which could be most charitably described as strong, with a nose that, in old age, would do credit to a Discworld-style witch. The strands of hair that peeked out from under her motorcycle helmet were either platinum blonde or just plain gray.

And there were the guns. Oh, yes, the guns. The sniper rifle and shotgun strapped to her back, the pistol in its holster on her belt.

And oh, yes, there were the eyes. Not the red of an albino, but the red of a fire engine, or of blood, or (if you wanted to think GI-appropriate thoughts) of a ripe apple or cherry.

_You are not Megan. You're __**VERY **__not Megan._

"Um... hi there," Twilight managed to say. "Welcome to Dream Valley. I'm Twilight!"

"Charmed, I'm sure." The voice was a deep contralto with a decided rasp to it. "I am Megan. Megan Troness, to be precise."

Things clicked in Twilight's head, including her teeth (after closing her gaping mouth.) "Megatron?" she asked.

"At your service," the young woman standing in front of her said ironically, bowing at the waist.

Twilight narrowed her eyes. "Since when are you female?" she asked.

"It happens," Megan Troness grumbled, dropping her cordial facade. "Sometimes the Loops mock me by making me human. Sometimes they prefer mocking me by feminizing me. But when they really wish to test my patience, they do both." After a soft growl, she added, "This is not the first time for this. I'm just grateful Optimus isn't here to see it this time. Or worse, Starscream."

"I still remember what happened the last time you visited Equestria," Twilight continued. "Or should I say, destroyed it?"

Megan Troness shrugged. "I will not apologize," she said. "That was to prove a point. After all, you were hardly singled out that Loop."

"Um, Twilight," Firefly asked, prancing nervously on her hooves, "what are you two talking about? Do you know each other?"

"It's... it's nothing important," Twilight replied. "At least, it had better not be, right?"

"No, indeed," Megatron agreed. "Firefly told me much on our trip over. I'm sure I will have ample legitimate opportunities to... shall we say... work on my anger issues?"

"Don't worry, Twilight," a male voice chipped in from behind Megatron. "We'll keep our... sister... in line."

Twilight looked around the robotic-dictator-turned-farmgirl to see the other two pegasi unloading their passengers. The boy who'd spoken was about eleven or twelve, gangly for his age, with orange-red hair kept as meticulously tidy as his black and purple clothing. The little girl, by contrast, looked perpetually scuffed; dirty-blond hair, worn clothes, freckles, and a grim expression.

Megatron sighed. "Allow me to make known to you my little brother Gan and my little sister Skyla," she said, gesturing to each. "You probably know them better than I do."

"Ganondorf and SkyNet?" Twilight asked.

"Thanks for not saying, 'Is that you?'" SkyNet muttered, pulling a squirrel rifle off her shoulder and checking its action.

_Megatron, Ganondorf and SkyNet in G1. Replacing the Richardses._

_I MUST have done something truly horrible, _Twilight groaned mentally, _if only I could figure out WHAT..._

Megatron waved a hand in front of Twilight's glazed eyes. "Does she do this often?" she asked.

"Eh, build her a library later and all will be forgiven," SkyNet shrugged.

"True," Ganondorf... tried to rumble. Preteen boys aren't built for rumbling voices. Instead he squeaked, "But for now, I believe we have a magical centaur to dispose of."

"Ah, yes," Megatron said with satisfaction. She smiled, the same smile that Autobots had learned to dread over millions of years and millions of Loops. Despite being on a teenage girl wearing a beat-up old open-faced motorcycle helmet, the smile didn't look out of place. "I'm looking forward to that, _oh yes indeed._"

* * *

>Many Loops later, Twilight stared down the barrel of an armed fusion cannon with complete calm. "No, Megatron," she said. "I've seen the picture, but I do not currently possess a copy, and I certainly never distributed any."

"Then WHO?" The Decepticon leader, in his proper body, jammed the weapon on his arm a little closer to its target.

"That would be me," said a voice much closer to Twilight Sparkle's height than Megatron's. "Would you like a copy?"

Megatron redirected his furious gaze to the female human child, who held up a photograph. In the picture a female human, clearly Megatron despite the different species and gender, sat tranquilly in the shadow of a tree with a pony's head in her lap. She was brushing out the pony's mane, evidently at peace with the world.

"No, I would not like a copy, SkyNet," Megatron snarled. His huge metal arm swung away from the unicorn to aim at the girl. "I would like REVENGE!"

"I don't think so," SkyNet replied.

"Do you think you can stop me? In my own Loop? Here and now?" Megatron asked.

"Well, since I replaced Unicron the last time I was here..." The little girl raised the hand not holding the photo and snapped her fingers. Megatron's posture shifted immediately, torso hanging below elbows, hands and feet swinging limply like a poorly handled marionette.

"Now, I don't intend to abuse this power, Mr. Dark Energon Addict," SkyNet said, "but if you don't drop this issue right now and apologize to Twilight Sparkle, I'm going to video your performance of the Little Teapot Dance."

"SkyNet," Twilight said warningly. "Let him go, please." As Megatron recovered control of his servos, she asked, "What's wrong with the picture, anyway? Did somepony mock you for liking ponies?"

"Of course not," Megatron growled. "It's all too well known I have a soft spot for your world and don't care who knows it. But that... that expression!" He jammed a finger down at the photo, which SkyNet obligingly kept held out for him. "I will NOT have it said that I, Megatron, supreme tyrant of Cybertron, conqueror of worlds, am going... **pacifist!**"

"Okay, I understand," Twilight smiled. "Just let me know when you figure out how to administer brushies in a menacing way, and I'll help you pose for the pic."

"That doesn't help," Megatron grumbled, as the whine of his fusion cannon faded away.

* * *

>158.16

* * *

>Epic! Rap Battles! Of History!

**Twilight Sparkle!**

Twilight looked up from her diary, startled.

**Versus!**

**Nanoha Takamachi!**

Nanoha expanded out Raising Heart, looking for the source of the voice.

**Begin!**

The two Anchors stared at one another.

"So, how's things?" Twilight asked.

"Oh, not bad," Nanoha shrugged, switching Raising Heart back to dormant. "You?"

"All right, in general... but I just found out my adoptive daughter's dating a friend," Twilight told her. "Not sure how to feel about that, though overall I think I'm positive."

"Take it from me, the urges to kill the guy - or girl - go away after a while," Nanoha said sagely.

**Begin!** the voice repeated.

Both Anchors mostly ignored it.

"Ever had a fused loop like this before?" Twilight asked, waving her hoof across the boundary between the library background of her half and the Mid-Childa of Nanoha's half.

"I've heard of them," Nanoha shrugged. "I think Fate once found the videos on a trip to the Hub."

**Epic Rap Battles of History!** the voice announced, in case they hadn't heard it the first time.

"Any idea if we can leave?" Twilight checked.

"If we can't, then I'll fix that," Nanoha replied.

"No need to blast right through the walls, miss skeleton key," Twilight sighed. "At least not at first. Look, I'll try a teleport."

She ascended with a flash of her Element, and then both vanished with a flicker of purple light.

There was silence for a few seconds.

**Uh...** the voice hedged.

The background collapsed.

"Did somebody say Sailor Moon?" Usagi asked, her Furinkan background blossoming behind her... then frowned. "Oh."

**They left!** the voice told her.

"That's a pity," Usagi sighed. "I like these loops."

* * *

>158.17 (Evilhumour and Gamerex27)

The Question, part two of four.

Before either Leman or Kashima could move, there was a distinctive pop and an equine form appeared, causing one of the two bloodied and battered men to tense fiercely; unlike many creatures of chaos and the dark, he knew full well that ponies were not to be taken lightly. Especially one who had been able to brave the maelstrom of his host's mind brewed up by his Shadow..

She was not the same little creature that either knew, but a fully grown adult, dressed for battle. Her head was covered by a helm, her hooves by steel horseshoes with spikes at the heels for tearing flesh. Her neck and chest was protected by a peytral of the same near-indestructible material, and the glare she wore enforced the ceasefire.

The pony cast a single look at the warzone of the two mighty warriors and stepped in front of one, her wings outstretched to defend the other behind her.

The figure in the golden armor snarled at this sight, his anger building as he was denied the chance to have his vengeance on the one who harmed his family.

"Nyx, move NOW!" he roared, his pskyer power building up into a single point, forcing it to take physical form in the shape of blade that would kill the monster in this loop, and hopefully, othe
-

"**NO!**" she shouted back at him, her hoofsteps causing mounds of earth to fall inwards into the dying world; the unleashed fury of the two god-like warriors attempts' to kill one another having devastated the planet. "Why are you doing this?!"

"It caused you, my family and our friends so much pain!" Leman shouted back, forcing himself to stay still and not run around her to attack the monster. "Why are you protecting it?!_"

"They," muttered Kashima under his breath as he stood back up, tilting his head at his fellow creature of darkness.

Nyx's face twitched as Leman degraded the person behind her with the same words she once heard used against herself. But she pushed aside her feelings for the moment; she had to make things right with Naoki and stop Leman from killing him. "He is not at fault for what happened! It wasn't his choice!"

"I don't believe that!" Leman said, eying Nyx equally in the face. "It knew exactly what it was doing; there is no excuse for an Anchor to be that fucking crazy and dangerous without doing it on purpose!"

"There was the matter of the flaw that drove the boy to such
_"

"YOU SHUT UP!" Without even looking, Leman launched a bolt of psychic energy at Kashima, who sidestepped it but got the message nonetheless. As the two lovers argued, he slowly withdrew some soma out of his Pocket and chugged it in one gulp, the powerful magic reknitting his bones and wounds.

"It made you murder your mother!_" Leman screamed. "It made my mother slip into her Nightmare mode! It tried to ASCEND AND DESTROY ITS ENTIRE FUCKING BRANCH!"_

"He wasn't in control at the time!" she shouted back, fighting with everything she had to not unleash the building anger she had inside her. It was so hot and terrible, it was starting to burn her insides. The aftermath if she lost control now would be catastrophic beyond measure.

"It-"

"**STOP CALLING NAOKI AN 'IT!'**_" she bellowed. "Naoki is a person and every one deserves a second chance!"

Leman roared back, equally loud, "A heartless monster like it doesn't deserve a second chance! It should be put down like the feral monster it is so it can never harm another person ever again!"

Nyx reared back as the words tore at her heart before her rage

finally exploded out of her control. "A _monster?!_ Did you forget who _I_ am!?" she howled in the Royal Canterlot voice, her wings extending an impossible distance as she channeled the part of herself that she despised the most, the part she rejected to the point where she almost forget it was _there_. "I am Nightmare Moon! The _monster_ of Equestria's young, the being they _all_ fear and would do _anything_ to get rid of! Or did you forget _MY_ _baseline_ you inconsiderate bastard?!" She leaned in and laughed in his pained face, eager to share some of the heartache she was feeling. "Oh that's right, you _don't_ think, you _stupid_ moron! All you ever do is fight and crash everything you get into because it is _fun_ and your _mommy_ isn't there to stop you!"

"You leave her out of this!" He roared, shoving his face into hers.

"Or what, you'll kill me too? Kill everyone who gets in your _bucking_ way and who you deem a _monster!_" She slapped him across the face with a ironclad hoof, drawing fresh blood. "Or are you really too much of a damn idiotic savage _child_ to think beyond the _bucking_ _moment_ and you _always_ need someone else to help you figure out what to _bucking_ do!"

"At least I was SUPPOSED to EXIST!" The instant the words slipped out of his mouth he regretted them, the anger and rage he had been feeling gone instantly.

Nyx's face broke for a moment, reeling back as if physically struck and shaking her head in disbelief at what she had just heard as tears ran down her face. The daggers that were piercing her heart before had completely run it through now. Leman was mouthing words of apology, but she was beyond caring at this point.

"I HATE YOU! YOU _DAMN_ __**FUCKING BASTARD!**_" she wailed, her rage overtaking her fully. "We're _through_!" she shouted, her magic tearing the planet apart further. "I NEVER WANT TO SEE YOU AGAIN!"

Before anyone could say anything else, Nyx's magic split the planet they were all on. Normally, both Anchors would be able to shrug it off, but in their battered and weakened state, they were both killed instantly. Without any Anchor present, the loop ended.

**Author's Note:****

158.2: Keep your hair on.

158.5: A horned uniwing?

158.6: Well, if they can stay friends after that they're unbreakable.

158.7: Is this technically a dream come true?

158.9: Waiting is a hell of a thing.

158.10: Someone's got to be grounded. (Well, relatively speaking.)

158.11: And then things were exactly the same.

158.15: Hasbr-oh no.

158.16: WHO WON? WHO'S NEXT? (Nobody, I can't write rap.)

158.17: Oh cojones.

166. Chapter 166

159.1 (Evilhumour, Gamerex27)

* * *

>The Question, part three of four.

Twilight was reorganizing the library when the front door slammed open and an obsidian blur tackled her over, clinging tightly to her.

Twilight instantly knew four things. One, this was her daughter. Two, her daughter was very upset. Three, she was going to go alicorn and absolutely destroy the monster that hurt her daughter. And four, her daughter was crying, which made her mind instantly go into full panic mode and default to automatic parent response mode.

"Nyx, what's wrong?! Are you okay? Are you hurt?" She was dimly aware of her mane already springing out of place.

Her daughter simply whimpered, her head buried into Twilight's side, and then shook her head weakly.

Twilight used her magic to wipe away some of her own tears, her forelegs wrapped around her sobbing daughter. Nothing, not even the knowledge of how to permanently save her tree, could get her to let go of Nyx now.

"Please, Nyxie, can you tell me what happened, because I'm so worried and-

"We broke up!" Nyx shouted into her side, sobbing harder now that Twilight had reopened the wound.

"Wh-what?" Twilight blinked in surprise, pulling back slightly but not enough to actually let go.

"Le-Leman, that _mother bucking idi-ot_." Her angry snarl stuttered before she began to cry again. "He attacked him, I told him he was better and he didn't listen and he said those things and I -"

"There, there, Nyxie dear," Rarity cooed, which astonished Twilight greatly, as she hadn't heard her friend walk into her library or come this close to them. Rarity further surprised Twilight by managing to wiggle herself around Nyx, holding the alicorn teenager close to her barrel and away from Twilight. "Come, let's go to the spa and we can talk this over. How does that sound?"

Twilight was livid! How _dare_ she think going to the _spa_ would fix her daughter's heart after what Leman di -

"That sounds nice," Nyx sniffled, rubbing her face against Rarity's coat before muttering an apology.

"Oh, please, dearie, it's alright," Rarity cooed again, rubbing Nyx's back. "We're going to get pampered while we get this whole matter straightened out. I know from experience that after my Spikey-Wikey and I have our little tiffles, the best thing is going to the spa with some friends to talk things over."

Nyx sniffled again, and nodded her head. Rarity just patted her on the withers, guiding her out of the library and down the streets with Twilight in tow.

* * *

>Aloe and Lotus walked past Nightmare Moon again, Twilight and Rarity across from her, and tried their best not to listen too obviously to the conversation the three mares were having about Nightmare Moon's love life.

"I see." Rarity nodded as the young alicorn finished her amazing and heartbreaking tale.

While they did not understand everything the three mares said, they understood well enough that Nightmare Moon - Nyx - was apparently Twilight's daughter, and she was going through her first breakup. And from what the twins could hear, it was a nasty one.

"Well, I suppose you two never do things small, after all."

"No," Nyx muttered, sinking deeper into the pool. Lotus tsked, reaching in to help her out before she got her mane wet again. "Thank you," she murmured in the same soft tone, the twins smiling sadly at the sight. How deep must their young love be for somepony like her to be this sad. If this Leman Russ were here, neither knew what they would do to that stallion who broke this poor filly's heart.

"Come here, darling." Rarity patted the table next to her softly, the young mare walking slowly over and onto the table with Aloe already working on her wings. Lotus in turn was working on the nervous wreck that was the mother of this sad, poor filly, trying her hardest to calm down Twilight Sparkle. "Good," Rarity sighed, reaching out to pat the alicorn's hoof. "Now, do you want me to start or do you?"

"Iâ€|" Nyx took a breath, tears threatening to break out. "I was horrible, wasn't I?"

"To a degree, Nyx, to a degree." Rarity spoke honestly, causing Twilight to twitch in anger. Lotus instantly touched a pressure point and Twilight's body became limp with bliss. "Leman could have definitely stopped and listened to you, but you could have also stopped and spoke with him about the whole matter clearer and explained the real situation about his psychotic meltdown and why Naoki was not a threat anymore."

"And I could have tried not to get so angry -"

"Absolutely not, darling," Rarity sharply interrupted her, tightening her pressure on her hoof. "What Leman said was downright disgusting, and it is horrible to know that Leman still has some of that mentality about those who stumbled in the past. Do not think even for a second he was right to say that to you, Naoki or any

. Everyone deserves a chance to redeem themselves. You are living proof that he is wrong." She leaned over and gave her a very tight hug.

"Remember that everyone can be redeemed. All they need is a helping hoof to show them the way and loving support from others. Look at yourself. The reason you are here now is because that wonderful mare over there saw a scared little filly and took her in as her own without a second thought. She raised you all on her own when others would have tried to harm you for what you once did. She taught you how to be kind to others, even when they don't deserve it. She showed how to be the best little filly you could possibly be, taking care to ease your fears when you were scared, kissing your wounds when you scraped your knees, and raising you as if you were her own flesh and bone daughter. She taught you how to be such a wonderful pony that when you were forced to grow up by other ponies to rule Equestria, you did not become the monster they wanted but instead remained the sweet pure young filly we all know and love. You fought to save your home and family, your mother, and willingly gave everything up just to make things right, even when you did not have to. Remember how you earned your cutie mark; you did it when you defended those close to your heart. Nyx Sparkle, you are a beautiful mare who has long ago eclipsed any past sins you might have once committed and I am beyond honoured to be your aunt."

Holding the younger mare close to her chest, Rarity did not care that her tears were ruining her makeup. Aloe and Lotus surreptitiously wiped their own tears away. Twilight used her magic to give the girls their own tissues to dab their eyes, smiling fondly at her friend and her daughter.

Nyx hiccuped a bit, smiling bashfully at all the praises placed on her. "Thank you, Aunt Rarity." She nuzzled the mare again before laying back down on her own table. Aloe returned to work on her wings; the right one, already cleared of dead feathers, gleamed flawlessly. "I just wished I knew what to do about Leman." She sighed sadly, still broken up about the stallion who had hurt her so deeply.

"Nyx, do you love your mom, yes or no?" Rarity asked in an almost lazy fashion.

"Wha -" She blinked at the white unicorn, confusion glimmering in her big bright eyes.

"Yes or no, do you love Twilight Sparkle?"

"Ye-yes, but -"

"Is your favourite meal tulip soup and alfalfa sandwiches?"

"No, it's -"

"Are you a Cutie Mark Crusader?"

"Yes -"

"Is your coat black?"

"_Yes_."

"Was the water in the bath cold?"

"No."

"Do you love your friends?"

"Yes."

"Do you love reading?"

"Yes."

"Do you love your aunts?"

"Yes."

"Do you like being Nightmare Moon?"

"No." Nyx responded, uncomfortable with the line of questioning. She tried moving her head to look at Twilight for guidance, but Rarity kept her head in place by her stare alone.

"Do you like crazy seaponies?"

"No."

"Do you like being a princess?"

"No."

"Do you like being reminded of your dark past?"

"No!"

"Do you still love Leman Russ?"

"_YES!_" she shouted, then blinked at the announcement. She placed a hoof over her mouth, surprised at what she just admitted to herself. "I _still_ love him." The words must have been strange to her, but they were also the truth, judging by the smile on her face.

"I figured as much, darling." Rarity smiled coyly to herself. "You just needed to hear it from yourself, without you overthinking it."

"I -" Nyx shook her head slowly, Twilight watching the whole event tensely. As a mother, she was a bit overprotective, and the use of this common trick on her daughter rubbed her the wrong way. But any complaint Twilight might have had was quelled when the alicorn hugged the unicorn tightly. "_Thank you_," she whispered softly. "Thank you so _very_ much."

"No problem, Nyx." She smiled, patting her back and nodding her head at Twilight to come over. The purple unicorn walked over and claimed her rightful spot, her legs around her daughter, nuzzling with only the love that a mother could give. "Now, we need to come with a plan as to how you two should talk when you do meet again, how it should go, and what you should use over his head." Rarity's smile grew a bit predatory, but Aloe and Lotus simply laughed, the rough aspects of a breakup cut off by Rarity's wonderful, skillful words.

"Trust me, both my little brother and I are rooting for you two and we don't want to see either of you staying hurt like this." A giant, eight legged _stallion_ said from the bath, causing both of the twins to jump backwards. "We might get in trouble for this, and certainly have Skuld yell at us for pulling this stunt, but nuts to that." The large _male_ equine figure flashed a smile to the noticeably less startled other three mares, but they all gave the _stallion_ the same _look_ that the twins were giving him. He blinked, tapping his face. "What? Something on my face? Why are you looking at me like that?"

"While we _do_ appreciate your help, Sleipnir," Twilight said sharply, as Aloe moved to stand by the mare and Lotus went to block the exits, "this _is_ the _mare's_ room of the spa, and you _did_ just barge in _without_ knocking."

The pony-like creature blinked again and blushed, starting to move upwards. "Oh. Um, er... sorry, I'll just show myself ou -"

"Oh no, Sleipnir, please _stay_." Rarity gave him the same predatory grin she had given Nyx earlier, causing him to gulp. "We can go over our plans while Aloe and Lotus give our good friend a makeover. Right, girls?"

Sleipnir looked around and sighed, "Dammit."

* * *

>159.2 (Awesomedude17)

Discord looked around the room, trying to find out where Berry Punch was.

"Berry? Where aaaaaare yooooooooooooooooou?"

Discord pouted, and looked around.

"Berry?" Discord teleported away.

"Berry?" Discord came out of a cupboard.

"Berry?" Discord said, coming out of the teacup Angel was sipping from, causing him to have a panic attack.

"Berry?" Discord then saw a cardboard box with the words 'Boop Box' on its side. Discord opened the box, and Berry booped Discord's nose.

"Gotcha."

"Oh ho ho... That's really clever. Boop Box, I like it. I'll tell Pinkie."

"Oh, shut up, Discord, and come in here." Berry smiled.

Discord gave a sly grin, and booped Berry's nose.

"Of course."

* * *

>159.3 (Vinylshadow)

It was probably a Chaos Game for the history books.

Discord, Luna, Celestia, Twilight, Cadence and Chrysalis all sat on clouds looking down at the game board. The reason for that soon became obvious.

The game board stretched for roughly a mile in every direction and more than two hundred cards were laid out in front of each player.

Due to the vast distance, they had switched to walkie-talkies to communicate.

"Hah! I countered your counter's counter-counter to my trap by redirecting it off of Luna's fifth counter to Twilight, using Chrysalis' deck as the anchor for it," Celestia said smugly.

"Yes, but in doing so, you activated Cadence's love effect, which reduced the accuracy of your attack," Chrysalis replied, rubbing her hooves together in glee.

"Which boosted my own attack and disabled Discord's twelfth card," Cadence said, looking at the board with binoculars.

"So the hand goes to me," Twilight said triumphantly.

Chrysalis and Luna swore violently.

"I had to give up two Loops' worth of cuddles with Trixie for my eighth offensive against you!" Chrysalis raged, while Luna looked with apprehension at the bunny suit she would be stuck in for the next four Loops she was Awake for.

Discord scowled and reshuffled the deck.

"Best out of seventeen?"

* * *

>159.4 (Vinylshadow)

The Cutie Mark Crusaders sat in a circle in their Clubhouse, discussing their Cutie Marks.

"I've had microphones, disco balls, a subwoofer, nearly every musical note and a plane," Sweetie Belle said, holding up pictures of each.

"I've had every known type of building material," Apple Bloom said proudly.

"I've had nearly every kind of wing or feather from every kind of flying animal," Scootaloo said thoughtfully.

"You said 'nearly,'" Apple Bloom said. "What're you missing?"

"I've not had a butterfly," Scootaloo said.

"Well, to be fair, they'reâ€| wellâ€| slow," Sweetie Belle said slowly. "I don't think that's your thing. If you're anything, you're a..." She trailed off, frowning.

"Say chicken. I dare you," Scootaloo said flatly.

"No, no, not that. You're more like aâ€| hummingbird," Apple Bloom said. "You're very maneuverable, and they're some of the only birds that can hover and fly in reverse."

"Well, whatever it is, I'm sure it'll be perfect for me," Scootaloo said with a smile. "As will yours, I'm sure."

"Aw, you're going all sweet on us," Sweetie Belle teased, giving her friend a hug,

"And no matter what marks we get, we'll always be friends, right?" Apple Bloom asked, hugging them both.

"Right!"

* * *

>159.5 (Masterweaver)

Nyx sat in front of Golden Oaks, idly stroking her pet as she watched the ponies around her going about their day. "I don't know, Tanty. I mean..."

She sighed.

"It's just... You know how I usually don't like acting mature? Like how I'll try to remain a filly if I can, or maybe a party hardy teenager sometimes?"

The fear cloud next to her grumbled. A passing mare shivered in sudden existential terror, looking at her cutie mark like it was a foreign entity.

"I know, I know, technically I'm a couple billion - er, _million_ Loops old." The alicorn shifted, resting her head on her pet like a pillow. "But that's the thing. Usually when I think of myself as a grownup, I think of myself as... _Nightmare Moon._" She grimaced.

Larry wrapped a comforting pair of tendrils down her foreleg, growling comfortingly. One of the foals playing tag nearby suddenly realized that one day he would inevitably die.

"But... but it was always different with Leman, you know?" Nyx held up a hoof to the sky. "I mean, sure, we were kids together sometimes, but I could... I could be an adult around him, and it felt _okay._ It felt _right._ I was still Nyx, not Nightmare Moon. You know?"

She sighed, again. "And then he had to go and... and be some testosterone-filled jerk, and that thing that he said -"

Larry's tendrils tightened, the creature gurgling in sympathetic anger. A stallion nearby had a vision of another world and curled up into a fetal position.

"Ow! Hey! Hey, too tight Tanty!" Nyx playfully batted at the tendrils, which retracted with a small whine (a pegasus nearby started hallucinating and her wings locked up, causing her to fall out of the sky). "Oh... awwww, I could never stay mad at you. Come here, let me give you a big hug."

This was the scene that Cheerilee walked into. "Um... Nyx? I think you need to restrain your pet's psychic powers again."

"What?" Nyx looked up from her hug, looking about. "What are you talking... oh. Ooooooh."

She winced.

"Um... Sorry about that, everypony! I, uh, I promise I'll personally pay for the therapy bills! Heh heh..."

* * *

>159.6

* * *

>"Okay!" Applebloom said, firmly. "Order! Ah'd like to call this session of the Cutie Mark Crusaders to order â€" but 'cause I ain't getting it, I'll settle for less chaos."

Scotaloo chuckled, then nudged her friend.

"Sorry I don't find it as funny," Sweetie said, sighing. "I'm just kind of worried."

"Yeah, so'm I," Applebloom admitted. "Okay, girls, let's try to work this one out."

"Cutie mark crusader detectives?" Scotaloo offered.

"Let's say more like private investigators."

"We're not working for anyone," Sweetie pointed out.

"Which is why it's private," Applebloom finished the joke. "Now. Item one: Diamond Tiara's bein' kind of a jerk."

"What else is new?" Scotaloo snarked. "Standard issue Diamond Tiara, at least when she's not Looping."

"Yeah, but usually when I set things up with the business deals an' all, she sweetens up," Applebloom reminded them. "Nothin' doing."

The others nodded.

"Silver's the same," Sweetie said. "Just... kind of cold."

"That does sound unusual," Scootaloo said. "Variant?"

"Well, it's not just that," Applebloom hedged. "But yeah, ah think th' 'Variant' stamp fits for this Loop."

"Why, what else is there?" Scootaloo asked.

"You ain't run into Twilight yet, have you?"

"Well, I haven't either," Sweetie said. "It's something else that's bothering me... basically, Rarity's not Awake, but she's not acting usual either."

"So are my sister and brother," Applebloom said. "Little things, but there. And as for Twilight..."

"What?" Scootaloo begged. "Is she a dragon? Is she evil? Is she secretly Trixie in a suit? Has she been replaced by Bella Swan?"

The others stared at her.

"No, no, what and ew," the earth pony filly said. "In that order."

"Then tell me, come on!" Scootaloo insisted.

"She's wanting to go baseline - some kind of experiment," Applebloom said.

"Well... maybe she's trying to see if she can skew things with the Gala or something?" Sweetie offered weakly.

"Dunno," Applebloom said, shaking her head. "Anyway. That's about all we know."

There was a pause.

"So... wargames?" Scootaloo asked. "I've got this great design for a hydrofoil torpedo boat..."

"While fun, I think that might wreck Twilight's plans," Applebloom said. "No for now."

Scootaloo pouted.

"I've got a board game," Sweetie volunteered. "Picked it up on Marain. Only... we might need a bigger clubhouse."

* * *

>Twilight looked up at a knock on the door.

"Wonder who that is..." she mused, putting down her copy of the newspaper and trotting over to the door.

Opening it, she looked out on the worried faces of three young fillies.

"Come in," she said straight away, turning the library sign from _please, come in, read a book for once_ to _oh, forget it_.

It had earned her a few laughs.

* * *

>"So, what seems to be the problem?" she asked, as Spike made tea.

There was a splash, an _ow_, and a hiss from the kettle.

"Did you tip it on yourself?" Twilight called.

"Uh... yeah," Spike admitted.

"Spike!" Twilight said, with a sigh. "If you keep doing that, one of these days someone who's not heat resistant is going to be next to you!"

"Uh..." the little dragon said, nervous.

"It's okay," she decided. "I think... actually, I'm sure the girls would like something sweet. Can you go get three turnovers from Pinkie?"

Spike nodded, hanging up his apron. "Sure!"

"And get yourself one," Twilight added. "Plus a garnet for your trouble."

"Thanks!" Spike said, and hurried out the door.

"Nice work," Applebloom complimented.

"Thanks," Twilight smiled. "I thought it might be something Loopy... what's the matter?"

"Well," Applebloom began. "Remember how we had trouble with our families?"

"Speak for yourself," Scootaloo said with a shrug. "Mine are actually quite normal this time."

"First time fr' everything," Applebloom muttered. "Anyway, uh, we were wondering whether it was some kind of Loop Variant or something. And you're the Anchor... anything unusual about this Loop?"

Twilight frowned. "Not that I'm aware of, beyond what I've already told you... why, is something up?"

Sweetie presented her flank. "Look!"

Twilight looked.

"...there's nothing there," she said hesitantly. "Unless you got invisibility cutie marks?"

"Don't think so," the songstress said. "And I tried doing some music, too."

"I made a giant robot," Applebloom said. "It fell apart."

"And doing ramps in my scooter didn't work either," Scootaloo completed. "Normally that's enough to get me marked, but..."

Twilight's expression went unreadable for a moment. "That does sound like a problem," she said instead. "What about going alicorn? I remember usually..."

She trailed off.

"We ain't able t' test it," Applebloom sighed. "Two Loops back. We got killed in the middle of doing something impressive and lost the necklaces."

The Anchor gasped. "Are the Founders-"

"They're fine," Sweetie assured her. "But they got pulled back into our minds â€" we kinda need new ones, but Diamond Tiara built the chassis for our last ones and we'd kinda prefer that quality. Clover doesn't mind waiting a few Loops."

Twilight let out a whoosh of relieved air. "Thank teak, I was worried that they'd â€" you know."

"Pansy says she begs leave to inform you that it kind of stung," Scootaloo reported.

Twilight smiled. "Well, if she can joke she's clearly not too badly off... okay, I'll do what research I can. I'm sorry I don't have an answer for you that works."

"It ain't no biggie," Applebloom said.

"But," the Anchor went on. "Can't you just use your Element necklaces and crown?"

The Cutie Mark Crusaders (core group) froze.

"...no, we didn't think of that," Applebloom admitted. "Perhaps _"

"Pastries are here!" Spike called, and the shop bell _dingled_. "Pinkie gave us seven for the price of four, because she said there were six ponies that needed cheering up. Any idea what she meant?"

Scootaloo coughed.

"Not really," Twilight said, taking the bags in her telekinetic grip. "Probably just Pinkie being Pinkie."

* * *

>"Sorry, girls," Twilight said, shrugging her new wings.

"This just ain't fair," Applebloom said, kicking at the floor. "I mean, what the hay kind of Loop even is this?"

"One where the baseline's fighting back," the newly reminted Alicorn said. "I couldn't ascend up until when I was supposed to..."

"Has this happened before?" Sweetie asked. "I mean â€" you've got more experience with Loops than the rest of us..."

"Well, sometimes," Twilight shrugged. "I've certainly run into the odd one where something's bound and determined to happen, like when that chest finally opened... but that was a kind of half-Awake haze, and you're all fully Awake."

"Speak for..." Scootaloo yawned. "Yourself..."

She shook her head. "Sorry, didn't get much sleep last night..."

"Sleepless nights excepted," Twilight agreed. "Anyway, if that is what's going on then... you've got a choice. Do we go along with it or try to break it?"

"Option three," Scootaloo declared, focusing. "We find Discord and get him to stop... huh."

Twilight's expression was a question in itself.

"He's not Awake," Scootaloo explained. "I thought for sure this'd be his doing."

"Well, if it ain't him, then..." Applebloom sighed. "We go along with it for now, I vote."

"Agreed," Sweetie said. "Unless it turns out it's trying to make us do something completely, unambiguously stupid."

"Well, I was planning on seeing if Gilda would mind some unofficial under-the-table Equestrian help with the Griffinstone situation - if that's where the Griffins are this Loop," Twilight clarified. "So... baseline?"

"Fine," Scootaloo agreed. "But I kinda want to do the long-jump at the Games anyway."

"I'll enter you for it," Twilight agreed. "You'll be good at it, actually..."

* * *

>The soft, sparkling light faded.

"What just-" Applebloom began, looking around. "That felt... uh..."

"Kinda familiar," Sweetie finished the sentence. "But it wasn't exactly the same - what is it, Scoots?"

Scootaloo pointed.

Sweetie looked at her flank.

"What the..."

It was a cutie mark.

It wasn't the musical-note cutie mark she was used to, though there was a pink note device at the core. It wasn't any of the hundredfold variations she'd had over the course of the Loops, nor the 'true' version that adorned the flank of her alicorn self.

But, at the same time... the purple star on its three-colour shield felt more right than anything else she'd ever seen.

Neither of the others were looking at it any more, though. They'd turned to their own flanks, and seen something almost like the mirror of Sweetie's new mark – the same shield, but an apple for the earth pony and a feather for the pegasus.

And, as she'd had a musical note, Scootaloo had a stark pink lightning-flash and Applebloom a simple pink heart.

"Now that ain't normal at all..." Applebloom managed.

"Yeah, but..." Scootaloo took another look. "It kind of feels like it _is_."

"You've got your cutie marks," Diamond Tiara said. She blinked, and looked confused for a moment – then broke into a broad smile.

"Congratulations!"

"Sure, now that we got cutie marks, she's all -" Scootaloo began to mutter, then got shushed by Applebloom as Tiara was still speaking.

"I was wondering how long it would take," she went on. "But – well, I suppose you had to luck out some time."

"Luck out?" Sweetie repeated, sounding confused rather than outraged. "Luck -"

She stopped.

"Are you Awake?"

"She's not, I checkedâ€" Scootaloo began, and then Tiara materialized an Element of Generosity and the pegasus rather abruptly had to eat her words.

"I wasn't until about a minute ago," Diamond explained, taking pity on them and letting her Element dissolve again. "But Silver and I ran into this expansion before. We didn't tell you back when we met in Hogwarts, because I thought it'd be better as a surprise."

"You knew about this back then?" Applebloom asked. "An' y'all didn't think to tell us?"

Tiara gave a broad, happy grin. "Of course I didn't tell you - why would I spoil the surprise?"

"...okay, fine," Applebloom muttered. "But this is gonna be strange to get used to... think we can do either baseline?"

"I'm still not clear what this one even _means_, " Scootaloo admitted.

"Oh, dear, and you worked mine out..." Tiara said, shaking her head. "It's obvious. The ability to help others find _their_ marks. That's why it's tri-coloured â€" you helped one another, and you help others."

"Oh, right!" Sweetie said. "So the outer layer is our teamwork, the middle layer's what we are, and the inner core is _who_ we are, too. Deep down."

They considered that.

"I still think engineering's pretty good," Applebloom said, shrugging. "But this one feels nice too."

She glanced at Tiara. "Mind if I use this to mess with your baseline self next time around?"

"Oh, please do," Tiara shrugged. "I'll be the first to admit I need a bit of a kick in the flank..."

* * *

>159.7 (Vinylshadow)

Luna woke up with a massive yawn. Getting out of bed, she stumbled to her window and drew back the curtains to a most interesting sight.

Changelings buzzed around Canterlot, but instead of terrorizing the populace, they appeared to be handing out small paperback books.

Her curiosity aroused, Luna opened her window and whistled to a Changeling.

It - _she_, if the fins were anything to go by - flew over.

"Hi! We're selling the newest volume of _The Changeling Queen_, would you like a copy?"

Luna took the offered book and blinked, all traces of sleep gone. Adorning the cover of the volume was Chrysalis wearing something Luna vaguely recognized as a Magical Girl uniform, tailored for quadrupeds. Also on the cover was the Smooze. Luna arched an eyebrow.

"How many volumes of this series are there?" she asked.

"Thirteen, and we've started a spin-off series based on an alternate scene from volume 10," the Changeling said happily.

Luna was silent for a moment before she spoke. "I don't suppose you have the first volume on you?"

* * *

>Several days later, Celestia knocked on her sister's door.

"Luna? Are you feeling alright?"

When her sister didn't answer, Celestia opened the door.

"Lulu? Are you..." her voice trailed off into stunned silence.

Luna was curled up on her bed, horn glowing softly as she watched a quill zoom across a scroll. She pricked her ears and looked up.

"Hello, Celly. Sorry I haven't been around. I'm a little busy at the moment."

Celestia could only nod dumbly, staring at the posters of characters from the wildly popular _The Changeling Queen_ series that covered her sister's walls.

_Well played, Chrysalis..._ Celestia thought in bemusement.

Of course, she'd later deny _her_ collection of paraphernalia was _much_ larger than her sister's.

* * *

>159.8 (Sonic Raynboom + Vinylshadow)

"Cornilight?"

"Yes, Raricob?"

"Why are we each a piece of corn?"

"It's a bad pun, Raricob. A very bad pun."

Raricob snickered. "Cornilight. Corny Light."

Twilight angrily popped her kernels.

"When you become an alicorn, will you be Twilicorn?" asked Raricob.

Twilight's kernels popped harder.

* * *

>159.9 (Masterweaver)

Thoughtfully stroking the mane of her pet, the queen looked at the prisoner her guards had brought.

"Subjects," she drawled imperiously, "leave the throne room. I shall deal with this one... _personally._"

Quaking in silent terror, the room emptied, one or two sympathetic glances surreptitiously shot toward the chained individual. In mere moments the doors were shut; only the guards, the prisoner, the queen, and her pet remained.

After a moment, she leaned forward. "Well?"

"...Chrysalis, what the bark is going on here?"

"Ah, a feisty one. So interesting-"

"Come on, Chrysy, we both know you're Awake." Gilda pointed at the mare next to the queen. "Trixie wouldn't have agreed to this if you weren't, and your drones made a freaking Star Wars reference while bringing me here."

The changeling queen let out a sigh and leaned back. "In that case, I apologize for the chains. I just needed to make sure you were Awake before I decided how to handle you." She gestured to one of the drones, who stepped forward and started unlocking Gilda's shackles. "As for my presence... well, this is a bit of a project of mine."

The griffon shook her talon, rubbing at her wrist for a moment. "Really? Taking over Griffonstone?"

"Ah-ah-ah, I'm revitalizing Griffonstone." Chrysalis shrugged. "The takeover is mostly to ensure that I get the attention of the griffons. I've already ordered several civic projects started â€" well funded, of course, so that the griffons don't get too uppity at being ordered about. I've already had the central aquifers rebuilt, did you notice that?"

"Yeah, I did. So, what, you forcefully improve the standard of living, and...?"

"And," Chrysalis continued, "as much as the griffons resent me right now, as their lives improve they'll grow to appreciate what I've done for them, becoming very fond of me â€" and my changelings, of course," she added.

Gilda let out a little 'ah' of comprehension. "So they'll love you for what you've done. Mutually beneficial situation. Alright, I getcha there. Couple of questions, though." She pointed at Trixie again. "One, what is she wearing and why?"

"Trixie designed this herself," the mare replied. "It is meant to evoke the feeling of subjectivity to the queen, in both the positive sense of being adored and beautiful in her eyes and the aggressive sense of rebellion having potentially lethal consequences."

"No, I got the whole 'slave girl' thing, I was wondering about the feathers."

"That was supposed to symbolize griffons who attempted to resist and failed," Trixie explained. "The whole 'so beneath me I gave their pelts to my pet' sort of thing."

"Bones would work better for that," Gilda pointed out. "Right now you just look floofy. Alluring, but floofy."

"Noted."

"Secondly," the griffon continued, turning back to Chrysalis, "again, why the chains?"

"Right now I'm still in the domineering overlord segment of my plan," the changeling queen explained. "Since you left Griffonstone, you could-in theory-be the kind of griffon that led an uprising, so if I were the domineering overlord I appear to be I would, in fact, be obligated to bring you before me in chains and break your spirit. So basically appearances."

"Alright, makes sense. Send me warning next time, and I'll be your secret agent or something."

"Fair enough."

"Thirdly," Gilda finished, "speaking of rebels, what do you do when some griffon comes to kill you?"

"Basically I battle them one on one until they're down. Then, depending on how they did, I assign them community service somewhere or other." Chrysalis shrugged. "Usually border patrol or something like that."

"...You ran away from a fight with a dragon!"

"Just because I can't take a dragon doesn't mean I can't take a Nonlooping griffon. I'm much better at dueling than monster slaying."

* * *

>159.10 (Masterweaver)

"Spike, does this dress make me look fat?"

"There is a bit of bulge around the barrel, but it's pretty obviously ruffles. If anything, the excess makes you look a bit underweight."

"Thank you, dear. A designer needs to know these things."

* * *

>159.11 (Masterweaver)

Applejack stared.

Macintosh stared right back, sheer force of will keeping him from blushing.

"...So."

"...Eeeyup."

"...Just to be clear here, you're... still male."

"Eeeyup."

After a moment, Applejack shrugged. "As long as you're comfortable, Ah guess Ah can't stop you. Little weirded out, yeah, but this isn't the strangest thing the Loops have thrown at me."

Macintosh released a breath he didn't know he'd been holding. "Well... thanks for not freaking out, Ah suppose."

His sister looked over the dress he was wearing. "Trust me, Mac, Ah'm freaking out on the inside."

* * *

>159.12: (Masterweaver)

_Oh sweet tree, not this again..._

Nyx turned to the cultists with a frown. "No, I will not bring about eternal night. Nor will I kill and or torture your enemies. That was all a phase, and I'm perfectly fine with my life as it is thank you. Now please, release me from this summoning circle. I was in the middle of making pancakes for my mother."

The hooded ponies were silent, presumably in shock.

"I'm serious, I left the stove on, and if the house burns down on my watch she's going to be really mad."

"...I was sure I got the sigils right," one of the figures muttered, rapidly flicking through a book.

"Maybe we used the wrong blood for the offering?" another suggested. "I mean, she might like less, uh, _pure_ blood-"

"Is that what this is?" Nyx asked, looking down at the bowl at her hooves with disgust. "Ew! I don't drink blood! I prefer celery soup, _thank_ you."

* * *

>159.13: (Masterweaver)

Celestia had just finished her construction when Twilight Sparkle teleported into her chambers. This was most unusual, given that her chambers were specially enchanted to prevent such occurrences, and that Twilight had apparently grown a new pair of wings.

"Ah, Twilight! What a pleasant surprise-"

"No."

Celestia blinked. "Um... what?"

"No," Twilight repeated. "You are not going to use that device. You are going to disassemble it right now."

The white alicorn looked to her unfathomable machine. "Twilight, I'm far older than you are and-"

"No."

"...Yes, I am-

"Time loop."

"...all right, fair enough," Celestia conceded. A time loop would explain Twilight's odd behavior. "Still, as the solar princess I do have some privileges-

"This is going to end horribly for you and all of Equestria," Twilight replied. "Disassemble the love bomb now."

* * *

>159.14: (Evilhumour)

"But you must!" the alicorn in the window pleaded.

"I said no!" the foal in the bedroom yelled back.

"Luna," Twilight shouted, her mane splintering around with bloodshot eyes. "We're trying to sleep, so stop bugging my daughter to take over your job so you can prank your sister!" Twilight was also annoyed, as someone stole her spray bottle and thus lacked the ability to spray ponies who needed it with the righteous cold water of justice and logic.

"...She is my daughter too," Luna said slowly, looking from side to side. "She should spend more time with me too."

"As long as Nyx wants to go with you and you don't fob over your work to her, then be my guest!" Twilight snapped, walking back up to her bedroom.

"So...do you wish to come with me, Nyxie?" Luna said weakly before Nyx pulled out Twilight's enchanted spray bottle and blasted Luna to the moon in a roaring torrent of water.

Slamming the door open, Twilight looked at her daughter snoring loudly in her bed, the massive rainstorm leading out of her window and the spray bottle that Nyx quickly pushed out of her hooves and went back to snoring loudly.

Twilight stared at her daughter, who had the decency to crack a serpent eye open at her, before sighing. "I don't care, Nyxie, I'm going back to bed and deal with Ivory and Luna in the morning."

" 'Night, momma."

" 'Night, dear." With that, Twilight closed the door to her daughter's room and went back to her comfy bed to sleep.

* * *

>159.15: (Evilhumour)

"So, Luna," Celestia drawled out, looking at the city on fire, where ponies panicked as the Royal Guards did their best to enforce order. "You are telling me your hunger suddenly gained sapience and did

_all_ of this?"

"Of course, Celestia," Luna said a bit too quickly, eyes darting back and forth. "What do you think it was?"

"Oh, I don't know, maybe a certain princess decided to go on a _bender, _considering _she is still drinking her cider loudly in my ear!_"

Luna dashed away, her cask spinning in a circle as she ran off into the distance with Celestia chasing after her, leaving the black alicorn filly to facehoof. Her loyal fear cloud attempted to mimic the motion, but ended up resembling a large teacup.

* * *

>159.16: (Alex Prior)

"Hayburger?"

Chrysalis sighed. "Remind me why was this a good idea again?"

"Because Trixie is helping Cady with her coffee machine and we decided to "get out of the way", so to speak?"

"Yes, I know that part. Why lunch?"

"Why not?"

Chrysalis was feeling conflicted. On the one hoof, it was greasy food which she liked. On the other, it felt like a date with a stallion she'd once loved (and gotten over, mind you.) She looked him in the eye. "Why are we here?"

With a sigh, Shining put the burgers away. "You were married to me once." He received a deadpan look. He sighed. "You're not that over it, are you?" He held up a burger. "We're friends having lunch while our other halves are dealing with something that's probably explosive." Shining shrugged. "Let's not make it awkward."

"You're the one that brought it up."

"Because I could see it written in your face."

"...No it wasn't."

"It still is." He levitated a pocket mirror up. "Look for yourself."

With slight bemusement, she read 'was once married to Shining Armor' on her forehead. She facehooved. "I knew he was up to something..."

Shining shrugged again. "He gets bored from time to time. Have I told you about the time..."

* * *

>Discord, having disguised himself as a nearby gargoyle, grinned.

He loved it when a plan came together...

* * *

>159.17: (Rowan Ex)

"...and because of that, you got chaos by tails and chickens?" Silver Spoon asked.

Sweetie flicked her tail, causing a chicken to fly past them. "Yeah, but sometimes good ol' Tree gives those Nesting Doll Loops a slight difficulty as well, you know, we Loop, then it usually takes 100 Loops just to end that Nesting Doll Loopâ€|"

"'Those Nesting Doll Loops?'" Silver asked, raising an eyebrow.

Sweetie flicked her tail again. "Variants, and that."

"Oh." The two then looked at Discord who was currently trying to contain a chickenado. "Hey, want to help Discord?"

Sweetie spun her tail ninety degrees. All of a sudden, all of the chickens hopped into Discord's head and vanished in a variety of colored feathers. The Spirit of Chaos looked at the two before he snapped his talons, causing tree sap to fall at them.

"Hmph." Discord walked away as he snapped his talons again, causing the tree sap to disappear. "That's for the chickens."

* * *

>159.18: (Kris Overstreet)

Rarity looked over the rim of her glasses at Sassy Saddles, who shifted uncomfortably on her chair. "As grateful as I am that you volunteered your services so soon after the announcement of the Canterlot Boutique," she said, "I hope you understand that this job interview is no formality. It simply wouldn't be fair to either of us to enter into a long-term business arrangement without understanding one another's goals and intentions."

"Of course not," Sassy Saddles replied, a touch of nervousness in her tone.

Rarity gave a second look at the slender, well-bred Canterlot unicorn fidgeting on the other side of the desk. _What,_ she asked herself, _what, what, WHAT_ possessed my unAwake self to hire this mare, sight unseen, and put my career in her hooves based solely on a padded resume? I admit I am a trusting soul at heart, even by pony standards, if I do say so myself. But how could I have built a business from scratch in - I love Ponyville dearly, but the truth must be told - a cultural _backwater_, and earned enough money to open a shop in the most expensive city in all Equestria, with business skills like THAT? Hayseed Turniptruck has more savvy than that, for fir's sake! Was I bit with some kind of mosquito carrying Stupid-itis?_

_Calm down, Rarity. You're beginning to sound like Pinkie or Dash. Now is the time to be professional. Ms. Prim and Proper. Ms. Primmy

Prim-Prim Properson of the Primville Propersons._

_Oh, dear. Well, I'm not sounding like Rainbow Dash anymore, at least. Fifty percent success._

"Let us begin with your education," she said aloud, grateful her internal monologue hadn't leaked through her muzzle. "A degree in business arts with a focus in marketing, I see. Any classes in dressmaking? Fashion? Any artistic studies at all?"

"Good Celestia, no!" Sassy Saddles laughed, an edge just barely noticeable. "I love fashion - I used to say fashion is my passion, but I used that line to promote one of my former employers - but it's my love, not my talent. My dream is simply to run the greatest fashion boutique in all Equestria."

_And how does one do that without understanding the artistic mindset, my dear?_ Rarity asked in the privacy of her head. _Did that leak out? No, she didn't react. Good._ "We'll come back to that point," Rarity said carefully. "Moving on, when you contacted me you said you had a business plan already prepared that would catapult the Canterlot Boutique to the top of the Equestrian fashion scene."

"Oh, yes!" Sassy Saddles levitated a large scroll over the desk and unrolled it. "It's a simple plan designed to maximize both profits and market share while making your name the talk of the town!"

"I see," Rarity said, looking down the illustrations. "We begin with the boutique, looking nice and classy."

"_Beautify the Boutique_, " Sassy Saddles nodded. "And then, once we have an establishment fashionable ponies will want to enter, we move on to _Marketing to the Mares!_"

"Quite so," Rarity nodded. "We must let ponies know the boutique exists, after all."

"Not that kind of marketing," Sassy Saddles said. "We find out what mares want and base our product line around that!"

"Aaaah," Rarity nodded. "Well, as it happens, being that I spend rather a lot of time following fashion trends and artistic styles, I believe I have that step covered, thank you." Sassy Saddles looked ready to interrupt, so Rarity overrode any possible response. "Moving on again, we see a picture of my friend Twilight Sparkle. Might I ask what this represents?"

"_Celebrity Status,_" Sassy Saddles replied. "It's well-known that fashionable ponies want to wear things that celebrities wear. And you happen to be friends with the four greatest celebrities Equestria has! So if we can get one of them to wear one of your dresses at our grand opening -"

"Ah, yes," Rarity interrupted. "That leads directly into this cluster of ponyquins all wearing the same dress. I presume this would be whichever garment my friend would be wearing?"

"_The Success of the Signature Dress,_" Sassy Saddles nodded. "With everyone buying and wearing your design, your name will-"

"EXCUSE me," Rarity cut in. "Design? Singular?"

"Er, yes," Sassy Saddles said. "That's what a signature dress is, you see? And then we go to the _Assembly Line,_ where we get you away from the sewing machine entirely and leave you to design the next signature dress!"

Rarity didn't do Fluttershy's Stare. She did, however, have a decent disappointed expression which her reading glasses magnified. "My dear," she said carefully, "have you even considered that, just perhaps, I do not wish to be parted from my sewing machine?"

"Er... but that's only manual labor," Sassy Saddles replied.

"It is a vital part of the creative process," Rarity said. "A creative process which you do not seem to understand, especially since every step of your business plan from the second item on works to destroy that very creative process." Taking the chart into her own magical grip, she brought it closer so she could point at each item. "Rather than pushing the creative envelope, as Rainbow Dash might say, you put the creative decisions in the hands of the public. You then push a product which might not itself be a fine masterwork by associating it with a popular figure- and, in the process, put a strain on my friendships by pressuring my friends to support my business. Then you mass-market a single design, ensuring that the thought on everypony's mind will be, 'Ho-hum, I've seen that before. That Rarity, she's a one-trick pony.' This is not fashion, this is a fad!" With a dramatic flourish she crumpled up the floating scroll and dashed it to the boutique floor. "This is not a business plan for a fashion boutique. This is how you DESTROY a fashion boutique!"

Sassy Saddles sat back in her chair, the large eyes on her narrow face full of sadness and fear.

"Employment history!" Rarity snapped. "Seven years ago, Double Pleat's Sweet and Elite. Where is it now?"

"It... closed," Sassy Saddles admitted quietly.

"Five years ago, Prench Lace's Discreet Designs. Where is it?"

"Closed."

"Four years ago, Beau Brummule's Business Best. Where is it?"

"Closed." Sassy Saddles' voice barely rose above a whisper, trying to crawl under the carpet and hide.

"Two years ago,
Charles-Yves-Pierre-Soult-Sans-Brilliat-Savarin-Ferdinand-Thomas-Richard-Henri-Manfried-Mot-Jacques-Rocquefort Pony IV's Castle Couture.
Your previous employment. Where is it now?"

"Er... it fell over, burned down, and then sank into a swamp," Sassy Saddles confessed. "Mr. Pony grew a little bit... er... peculiar towards the end of our association."

"And I know, because I looked it up, that all of those boutiques were busy right until the moment they closed. But Double Pleat is now a humble seamstress in Trottingham, Prench Lace left the industry entirely, Beau Brummule has become a notorious salt addict, and CYP-double-S-BSFTRH-double-M-JR Pony makes his designs in crayon on the walls of his padded cell at Celestia's Home for the Lamentably Peculiar!"

"I thought it was... just... you know, the artistic mindset," Sassy Saddles moaned.

"It IS!" Rarity's hoof slammed onto the desk. "That's what happens when the artistic mindset is constantly thwarted, forced to repeat the same thing, day in, day out, without satisfaction!" Rarity stopped herself from adding the words And it is all your fault to the end of that sentence. Sassy Saddles trembled in that chair, trying to curl in on herself. No, she was cornered now; time to lead her out of the corner, hooves on the right path.

"Miss Saddles," Rarity said in a much softer, gentler voice, "we designers enter this business not for the money but for the joy of matching the right clothes to the right pony. It is the joy of creation which raises us from mere tailors and dressmakers to the leaders of Equestrian fashion. When ponies come to us, they aren't simply looking to buy a dress. They are hiring the personalized services of a highly talented individual. They are hiring our vision, our imagination, our eye detail... and above all else, they are hiring our personal attention to the needs and desires of the customer. We charge top bit for those services. When we force the customer into a cookie-cutter solution for their image, we are short-changing the customer. We are also short-changing ourselves."

Taking off her glasses, Rarity stepped down from her chair and walked around the desk to Sassy Saddles' side. "I know this is a lot to take in at once," she said gently. "And it's the sort of thing which gets short shrift in business school. This is why I'm going to take you to stay with me in Ponyville for a couple of weeks to see how it works in practice. Once you understand Rarity's Rules of Time, Love and Couture, then you'll be prepared to operate my Canterlot Boutique."

Sassy Saddles blinked. "You mean... you mean I'm hired?"

"Provided you take that plan of yours away and burn it somewhere, yes," Rarity nodded. "You obviously have skills if you can make and keep a boutique profitable despite the, er, displeasure of the designers. And the Canterlot and Manehattan fashion scene dote on your ability to spot the coming thing. Once you understand the importance of the personal touch and the creative spirit, I can't imagine any manager in all of fashion could hold a candle to you!"

First Coco, and now Sassy, Rarity thought. These baseline expansions seem to have a theme of my redeeming well-meaning ponies. And indeed, it is the generous thing to do.

But I'd much rather not blunder into it through a traumatic experience, thank you, Yggdrasil. Perhaps you could just drop them on my doorstep in a basket with a note on the handle? Otherwise I might end up being the basket case. Thanks ever so, amen._

"Incidentally," she added, "I occasionally experiment in unusual materials for fabric. Do you have any phobias I should know about? Spiders? Water? Heights? Fundamental forces? Abstract concepts made manifest in tangible form? I won't tell anypony else, but it is really quite important that I know."

* * *

>159.19 (Kris Overstreet)

"Broderbund Bonds and Bounty, this is Ralph."

"Good evening, Ralph. This is Rarity. I'm just calling to let you know that I found Carmen Sandiego."

"You WHAT?" the voice on the other end of the phone shrieked.

The master thief leaned over to the phone and cooed, "It's true. She found me."

"Not particularly difficult if one has an eye for detail and a snazzy wardrobe," Rarity added, stepping away from the handcuffed thief.

"Where are you?" Ralph asked frantically. "The statute of limitations expires in ninety minutes! I'll send a car right over to--"

"I'm at LAX, darling," Rarity said. "I just called to let you know I'm letting her go."

Carmen blinked as a key floated behind her. The locks on her cuffs went click.

"YOU WHAT?"

"Next time don't mock a lady's costume changes, dear," Rarity said. "Ta-ta!" She slammed the pay phone back on its hook.

"Well, congratulations," Carmen said, handing the cuffs back to Rarity. "You're the seventh Looper to successfully track me down and capture me, not counting those kids in my home Loop."

"Oh, dear," sighed Rarity. "Only seventh?"

"Well, you act like it's a large number," Carmen replied. "Not counting robotic or cybernetic Loopers in a surveillance state... let's see, the last one was that Goodwin chap, though I understand his boss is Looping too. Before him was Inspector Zenigata, not that he was actually aiming for me you understand. Wrong place, wrong time."

"Yes, I've met the younger Lupin," Rarity said. "I hadn't been aware the Inspector was Looping, though."

"Before him was Mr. Bond. That was... entertaining." Carmen smiled a smug little smile before continuing, "And before that it was the redoubtable Mr. Holmes. You know, the look on his face when he just barely fails to catch me is almost as beautiful as when he actually did?"

"I wouldn't know."

"Ah, yes. Before that, of course, was Saotome. If Ranma ever decides on a career of Looping crime, my dear, I shall have to hang up the trenchcoat."

"Never!" Rarity gasped, looking the beautiful burgundy coat up and down.

"And of course, the very first one to capture me was my dearest, darling Waldo."

Rarity blinked. "Waldo? Who's Waldo?"

"You haven't heard of Waldo?" Carmen asked. "Shy chap, loves red and white stripes, carries a cane, wears glasses--"

"THAT Waldo?" Rarity asked. "But - but he's just - I mean he does - he's not a detective at all!"

"It doesn't matter," Carmen shrugged helplessly. "How can you run from a man when, no matter where you go, there he is?"

* * *

>159.20 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

It was a quiet Loop in Big Mac's Bar; other than him, only Berry Punch and the Visiting Looper Ruby Rose occupied the room. Idly cleaning his glass, Mac observed the duo as they waited. Berry, as was typical of her, was thinking up a new drink for future Loops; fully immersed in her creative process, she was hardly aware of anything else. Ruby herself was sipping a glass of non-alcoholic Apple Acres Cider as she disassembled and reassembled her scythe, testing to see if any part of it needed maintenance.

The sound of the door opening and a flash of sun drew the group's attention as Applejack made her way into the bar. Wiping the sweat from her brow she gave the trio a friendly grin as she pulled up a seat. "Howdy, ya'll. Now, I'm sure yer wonderin' why Ah asked ya two to meet me here, so Ah'll just skip to the point. Not that long ago, Ah had a Loop where Ah Replaced that Gilgamesh fella from Shirou's Branch."

Abruptly both sets of eyes were fixed firmly upon the Earth Pony with laser focus.

"You mean Gilgamesh 'I own all the best weapons since ever' Gilgamesh?" Ruby asked excitedly.

"The same Gilgamesh who has the Conceptual Existence of wine fit for a god by the barrel?" Berry continued, all but drooling at the idea.

"Heh. The very same. And jest before the Loop ended, Ah jest so happened to empty the Gate of Appylon into mah Pocket. Ya'll two wouldn't happen ta be interested in a little trade now would ya?"

Mac was surprised the two didn't break their necks from how rapidly they were nodding.

"Free drinks! On my tab, for the next hundred - no, thousand Loops! And half my blackmail folder!" Berry yelled, almost falling over herself to get a hoof of the legendary liquor. The things she could create! The drinks she could mix! The wine she could drink! There was no way she could allow this opportunity to slip from her hooves.

"Hooey! Ah'd have ta be a dang fool to pass up that kinda offer. Ya'll got yerself a deal." Applejack replied, spitting on the frog of her hoof and extending it forward. Berry didn't hesitate, repeating the gesture and bumping Applejack's hoof in agreement.

While Berry began scrawling new plans for her recent purchase, Applejack turned to Ruby. "As one Museum Curator to another, Ah'll make ya a deal. If'n Ah ever need any help with maintainin' all the techno gadgets Applebloom 's got stashed everywhere, ya'll agree to help me out, ya hear?"

Ruby nodded eagerly.

"And also Ah wouldn't mind gettin a bit a that there Dust Ah know ya keep taking from that Torchwick feller. Ah'm kinda curious if Ah ken use mah Earth Pony magic to grow different kinds a apples in it."

Almost before Applejack had finished speaking Ruby had pulled out several crates of Dust that she had 'liberated' from Roman. "Is this enough? I have more, do you want more?"

Applejack gave a laugh. "That there's plenty, thanks. Ah think this calls fer a celebration. But uh, since ya'll don't drink... Hey Mac, break out the good Cider will ya?" she called out over her shoulder.

Mac paused from his cleaning and gave a languid nod. "Eeyup."

"Thanks. Since Berry here has agreed to give me free drinks, ya'll ken go ahead and put it on mah tab. We'll talk later 'bout them Noble Phantasms and such."

Ruby grinned appreciatively and gave a salute. "Right."

Watching as the Huntress all but skipped over to the counter where Mac poured her a mug of his best (non-alcoholic) Cider, Applejack gave a good-natured grin before turning back to the still-out-of-it Berry. Nudging her withers a bit, she pulled her brother's helper from her fantasies. "There was one other thing Ah wanted to talk about. Ta try and redeem mah good name after the... Potato Acid incident. Ah think Ah've proven since then that Ah ken still brew a good drink with the best of em, but that still sticks in mah craw like nothin' else so Ah felt that Ah needed to do somethin' 'bout it.

"A long time back Ah had mahself a right doozy of a Loop involvin' SCIENCE! and Discorded Lemons. Ah ended up buildin' a super collider to get me some yeast quarks that Ah could ferment ta make 110 or more percent pure alcohol, although honestly that don't rightly make sense when ya stop an think 'bout it. Called it Large Hadron Cider. Point is, Ah figur'd out how to build it without having mah head all twisted 'bout and Ah thought Ah should share it with ya. If'n ya'll agree ta make sure everypony knows where ya got it from and ta stop talkin' bout the Potato Acid, Ah'll let ya have the instructions fer it."

Berry stared for several moments before she grabbed Applejack in a hug. She had made quite a few drinks over the course of the Loops, even the one which allowed her to ascend, but the number of them which could transcend the typical boundaries of natural physics numbered less than a dozen, and of them only the 307 Ale could be produced using standard equipment found in the Baseline. And even then, it was neither easy or cheap to create a tesseract in which to brew the powerful liquor. Not that bits had been a problem ever since she started Looping, but still.

Yet here she was, being offered a device which would allow her to brew alcohol which was potent all the way down to the subatomic level. That opened an entirely new avenue of fermentation research to her delighted mind, and already questions were beginning to swirl around her head involving the possible results from combining the Tesseract Still she used for her 307 Ale and the supercollider for the Large Hadron Cider.

She couldn't wait to start working. She had so many new ideas to try, she was practically giddy. And it was all because of the Apple Acre farmpony before her. As far as she was concerned Applejack had just become her new best friend.

Applejack laughed. "Ah take it that's a yes, then. C'mon, grab a seat and Ah'll pour us a glass. Careful, though, it packs a mighty powerful wallop at first."

* * *

>Author's Note:

* * *

>159.1: Fall out fallout.159.3: Honestly I think they're just suffering from a sunk costs fallacy.
>159.4: Not foreshadowing in the slightest.159.6: And speaking of cutie marks...
>159.7: Authorial changelings. What next?159.8: Ow.
>159.9: Chrysalightened despotism.159.10: She asked.
>159.12: The perils of being labelled as evil.159.13: Celestia gets lonely sometimes.
>159.15: It is a high stress environment.159.17: Coping With Chaos Powers.
>159.18: Vet your employees.159.19: Well, she was dressed as a PI.
>159.20: The best drinks. Ever.

167. Chapter 167

160.1: (Crisis)

Twilight looked around the utter mess that Pinkie Pie's room had become. In addition to the usual party paraphernalia, there were also charts, beakers, research papers, incomplete blueprints, and devices of varying design and function (not all of which were readily apparent). "I'm going to regret asking this, but what exactly are you doing, Pinkie?"

"I'm trying to figure out how to goof on, silly!" Pinkie chirped back.

"How to...?"

"Goof on! Everyone knows how to goof off, but I want to invent the goofer so I need to know how to goof on as well!"

Twilight blinked slowly as Pinkie continued her explanation, the party pony chanting 'goof on! goof off!' several times; the unicorn then pulled a breathalyzer out of her subspace pocket. She proceeded to breathe into the sensor long and slow before fiddling with the device for a bit using her magic.

"As I suspected."

"As you suspected what?" Pinkie cut off her explanation curiously.

"I am entirely too sober to be having this conversation."

* * *

>160.2: (Vinylshadow - MLP Ultimate Hellsing)

* * *

>Cadence Woke up with a loud snort that would have sounded more appropriate coming from a pig.

"Oh, you're Awake," a voice beside her said. Cadence turned to see Shining Armor looking at her. Meeting her eyes, he winked.

"What's going on?" Cadence asked, yawning.

"Blueblood was replaced by someone from Hellsing. Schnitzel or strudel..." Shiny replied.

"Ah, the Major. Sturmbannführer," Cadence said with a nod.

"Uhm...why aren't we murderlizing him?"

"Well, he's not completely sociopathic. He apparently picked up some of Blueblood's traits. And he simply loves speeches. He's been going on for the past four and a half hours."

Cadence could only blink in bemusement. "Bring any popcorn?"

At Shining's nod behind her, she turned to see Alucard and Integra scarfing down popcorn. At her polite cough, the two offered her some.

* * *

>160.3: (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"Lyra, this is a terrible idea."

Twilight rubbed her forehead as she watched her partner setting up her stargate, which she had pocketed during the Variant where Nightmare Moon was a Goa'uld named Epona. Now, Twilight was learning Lyra occasionally tested the Stargate/DHD to see if they were connected. And this Loop, Lyra managed a successful connection with Abydos. Now, she was insistent on connecting with SGI and joining the team this Loop.

Lyra scoffed. "Come on, Twilight. Don't tell me you're not a little bit bored with hanging around Equestria all day. Don't you want to get back out there, explore the universe and see things you don't see very often? Everything outside our Solar System changes from Loop to Loop. Explore the stars and you'll never be bored again."

Twilight bit her lip. Admittedly, the idea was appealing. But the method was...questionable at best, "They have the iris protecting their gate. One step through and the Loop will automatically end, painfully."

Lyra waved her off, "Please, I can magic the iris open from this end easily. Come on, have some fun!"

Sighing, Twilight nodded, "Fine."

* * *

>As they stepped out of the gate, they were met by dozens of soldiers decked out with heavy machine guns, along with a pair of mini guns hanging from the ceiling, all pointed at the two ponies. Lyra was grinning in excitement, while Twilight was facehooving and keeping a shield up in case someone decided to shoot first, ask questions later.

In the control room, Daniel Jackson blinked several times and gave a short wave while Colonel Jack O'Neill mimicked Twilight in facepalming.

* * *

>160.4: (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>"Trixie, are you sure this is a good idea?" Twilight asked, watching the azure-coated showmare make a few last minute adjustments to her plan.

"Yes, Twilight. I've triple-checked everything from start to finish. Now shoo, go have your 'lazer battle' with Tirek and leave the rest to me."

* * *

>Twilight immobilized Tirek with ease, but she had been too slow to stop the blast that usually leveled the library. She watched as it neared the tree and she winced.

Suddenly, a ring of explosions erupted from the base of the tree and the entire structure sank into the ground with a _whumph._

The blast sailed over the sunken tree and nuked Town Hall instead.

Twilight stared and turned to see Trixie grinning from ear to ear.

"See? Exactly as I planned!"

Twilight thought about it for a moment, then facehoofed, much to Trixie's confusion. "Yes, you saved the Library, but everything _inside_ is probably all over the place now."

"...Oh."

* * *

>160.5: (ORBSyndicate)

Twilight Awoke to the words, "And this is my partner, Twilight Sparkle." She blinked, turning her head to see a man introducing her to... some random person. "We work for the local P. T. Buffalo 'wax your buns off' parlor. Would you like to purchase some scented candles?"

As the random person shut the door in their faces, Twilight blinked. _What the buck is this Loop?_

She sent out a Ping, hoping to pick up anyone to talk to. She only got one response, presumably from the man standing right next to her, since he tapped her in the forehead saying "PING!" just as she felt it. "Hello, Twilight, I am Shawn, psychic detective. I sense you are baffled, confused, and perhaps need a banana pancake covered in strawberry drizzle. Come with me. I know just the place, my purple-skinned friend."

Twilight followed Shawn in a daze, racking her brain for her Loop memories.

Then they hit. Her name was Berta Sparkle, lifelong friend to Shawn Spencer. They had recently started a psychic detective agency known as Psych and solved cases for the Santa Barbara Police Department. There was just one problem -

"You aren't really psychic!"

"Usually not, but did that ever stop James Roday?" Shawn said, grinning. "Now I suppose I should welcome you to the Psych Loop, say I'm the Anchor, yada yada... But you know what? That's boring. I have something much better planned. My little pony, can you do magic now?"

Twilight tested. "Yep."

"Good. When I yell 'Lassie' and point, I want you to turn whatever I point at into a dog."

"What do I get out of this?"

"A full Loop-long membership in Psych Inc., the best psychic detective agency in the universe." Shawn smiled. "Which, as you have figured out, has nothing at all to do with being psychic."

"You're using your knowledge of the Loops to take advantage of-"

"BWAAAAAP!" Shawn blared, grinning. "Psych existed BASELINE, little princess. I just used my amazing powers of observation and Gus's super sniffer. I was like the Rainman. Now shush, I'm about to scream 'Lassie.' Ready? "

"Um... sure?"

"Okay." Shawn Spencer threw open the doors of the Santa Barbara Police Department. "HEY LASSIE!"

Detective Carlton Lassiter looked at Shawn standing there, pointing at him. "Mister Spencer, I really don't have time for your antics right now. So how's about you hook up with your snobby little purple friend -"

At THAT point Twilight turned him into a dog. He started barking. Shawn cracked up laughing. "Yes! This has gotta be the fifth best time I've turned Lassie into a DOG!"

Twilight briefly pondered this before turning Lassiter back.

He stared, blinking. "What just happened?"

"Berta turned you into a dog, Lassie! Isn't that wonderful? You've got a superpower now... you could be... the SUPERLASSIE! No... that's not right... the BAT DOG! Copyrighted by at least a dozen universes... the... Berta give me a hand here."

"Berta's Amazing Pup?"

"As embarrassing as it is, Lassie deserves a legitimate superhero name. No dice. Perhaps something relating to this version's Lassie having an obsession with red socks -"

"I DO NOT!"

"Dude," Shawn said, putting a hand to his forehead. "My psychic vibes are telling me you like red socks. Particularly on dogs. Perhaps the Red Socked Avenger. Or..."

Twilight sighed. This was going to be interesting...

[br]

Mac looked at the brown pony with a nose cutie mark. He looked... really relaxed.

"You have no idea how long I've been waiting..." Super Sniffer (more commonly known as Gus) told Big Mac. "I heard about this Sanctuary Loop centuries ago. I've been waiting forever for a BREAK. Have you met my Anchor? Shawn? He's the most immature man in existence."

"I reckon he can't be the most immature -"

"He pranked our entire planet by replacing the world leaders with piles of cow pies."

"Eewhat?"

"Nothing," Gus said, chugging down a drink. "Now if you excuse me, I'm going to relax for a few years before I inevitably get dragged back home to be dragged around through who-knows-what."

Another pony walked in, a member of the fluffy pony race with white fur. He shot death glares into the ponies with just his presence.

"Not a word." Lassie said. "Not. One. Word."

* * *

>160.6: (ORBSyndicate)

Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic

Twilight Awoke on a bus, with all five of her closest friends with her. She could feel the right combination of Elements, guessed that they were all Awake, and waved. They waved back. They were all human, in their Canterlot High forms. (Although they were younger, and Rainbow Dash was wearing jeans instead of a skirt.)

She sent out a Ping, receiving one response other than the Element bearers. The six of them scanned their Loop memories, quickly noticing one odd detail:

"Sextuplets?" Rarity said, eyes wide. "Is that even possible?"

Twilight nodded. "Hub world record for most children born at once that survived is eight. That's two more than six." She decided to examine the surroundings. It was midday, the sun high enough in the sky that the bus' roof completely obscured the ball of energy at all angles. The sky was cloudless, which was standard for a summer day in the Oregon forest. Speaking of forest, there were trees. Everywhere. Gigantic tall pine trees that loomed ominously against the sky, brushing the air with their tips. The bus itself, the Speedy Beaver, was a piece of junk. Torn up cushions, random stuff under the cushions -

"Hey! Let's play treasure hunt!" Pinkie yelled, peeling up a cushion. "Oo! Old gum, a stain that looks like Shawn, a cockroach, and a balloon!"

Twilight ignored Pinkie's antics. Right now, she was trying to figure out where they were. She reached into her Pocket and began to search through Hub fiction, looking for anything similar to their situation. She was stopped by Fluttershy. "Twilight? Can we not try to know what's going to happen? Justâ€¦ live through the Loop?"

Twilight blinked. "Sure. Why not." She put the Hub fiction device back into her Pocket and sat down, attempting to enjoy the ride.

"Where are we going, anyway?"

Applejack pointed out the window at a sign. "Some town called Gravity Falls. Our Grunkle Stan is going to watch us for the summer. My unAwake self was looking forwards to this trip, been a while since we'd been in the country apparently."

Rarity sighed, leaning on her hand in a overly-dramatic pose. "We're going to a back-of-the-woods town in the middle of nowhere. There's not likely to be ANYone who has ANY fashion senseâ€|"

Rainbow Dash grinned. "Back-of-the-woods town? Sounds like adventure! We shall explore the entire town and root out all sorts of mysteries! THE MYSTERY SIX! I shall -"

"Darlingâ€|" Rarity said. "The Scooby-Doo Loop wasn't THAT funâ€|"

"It was fun enough to warrant a name. Mystery Six. We will brave great dangers and discover the mysteries of the townâ€|"

"Yer bein' redundant," Applejack muttered, adjusting her hat.

"Oh, really?" Rainbow said. "I'll have you know I'm an author and I know redundancy. I did not mention danger the first time, and mysteries just needed to be solidified. MYSTERIES!"

Pinkie Pie jumped in, wearing her deerstalker and sugar-bubble pipe. "MYSTERIES!" she yelled, taking a deep breath, springing into a heartsong.

_Mysteries, mysteries!_

_Oh how I love these!_

_Mysteries, mysteries!_

_Bigfoot! Mothman! Hunks of swiss cheese!_

_These are all my big mysteries!_

_Is it true or is it not?_

_These are all the questions I've got!_

_Can you see?_

_My curiosity?_

_Mysteries, mysteries!_

_Oh how I love these!_

_Mysteries, mysteries!_

_Halflings! Zalgo's screen! Blue zombie plagues!_

_There stories are all just so vague!_

_Big ol' pot of Neglish rot!_
_Or mutants that like tater tot?_
_What is truth?_
_Can we be the true sleuth?_
_Mysteries, mysteries!_
_Oh how I love these!_
_Mysteries, mysteries!_
_Stargates! Zodiacs! Constellations!_
_Mysteries from all the nations!_
_All of them congregate there!_
_A place which we are so near!_
_Can you feel?_
_The great alluring zeal?_
_Oh look there, here is the place!_
_The place where gravity falls, and earth becomes sky!_
_Beware the beast with just one eye!_

As the song ended, the Speedy Beaver bus pulled into the small town of Gravity Falls, stopping at the outskirts. The six sisters stepped out, looking at their new surroundings. The town was situated in what appeared to be a gorge, with two steep crevasses towards the northern end of the town, which were connected by a metal wire-frame bridge. Beneath the bridge were two large gashes in the crevasses, giving them the appearance of two Pac-Men staring at each other. The river flowed between them into town, where it met up with a waterfall, creating a small, but deep, lake. The southern edge was bordered by thick, deep, dark forest, the water tower standing up out of the canopy. Several large mansions could be seen lining the higher-elevation areas, looking down on the mish-mashed look of the town itself. There was a mixture of cars and bikes, modern looking buildings such as a mall, old sheds that looked like they'd been there since the days of Lewis and Clark, and other buildings that looked like some unholy combination of the two. The town seemed to be a living contradiction: modern mixed with ancient, fancy cars alongside horse-drawn carriages.

What really caused the six to reconsider was the fact that roughly half the buildings were somewhat familiar. Although there was much less pink dashed around everywhere, there was no mistaking the ice-cream shape of Sugar Cube Corner, the tall and circular design of the Town Hall, the Library made out of a giant treeâ€

There was no doubt about it. This town was a fusion of two places. Gravity Falls and Ponyville, thrown together in the backwoods of Oregon.

Twilight pondered this. "Huh. Wonder who we'll see here?"

Pinkie grinned. "I can't wait to know EVERYONE and find out ALL THEIR BIRTHDAYS and ALL THE PARTIES and&#128;| a whole new town Twilight! Can you believe it? Woohoo!"

Applejack blinked. "Pinkie, every Loop you have a new town. And this is far from the first one that's been at least partly like Ponyville _"

"Hush now, one-who-is-standing-in-the-way-of-party. ALL new places are amazing!"

Rarity spoke up. "Darlings, we should probably check in with our Grunkle Stan first, so we don't upset anything. That is, if we are going to follow this Loop through."

Twilight nodded. "Come on girls, we need to head to the Mystery Shack."

"The mystery whatsis now?" Rainbow said "Sounds lame and run down. I want ADVENTURE!"

Twilight rolled her eyes. "Let's just get settled in first. We can go searching for trouble later."

[br]

Stan Pines, Mister Mystery, was waiting at the front door like he did every Loop. He was a tall man with a thick figure, and despite his old age he managed to look strong and even full of energy. He wore a red fez, with a strange golden symbol on it that resembled Pac-Man crossed with a goldfish cracker. The Pac-Man fish's mouth was open ever so slightly, seemingly reaching for the golden dot in front of it. Unfortunately, being nothing more than a symbol on a hat, the Pac-Man fish would never, ever be able to eat the dot. Such a shame, really. Stan's face was square-jawed, covered in stubble, and had an eyepatch across one eye. He was wearing what appeared to be a black and white showman's uniform crossed with a tuxedo. It gave the appearance of being fancy, while at the same time looking somewhat cheesy and overdone. Choking his neck was a red cord tied into a knot with four tassels. He was currently staring intently at his watch.

"Five&#128;| Four&#128;| Three&#128;|. Two&#128;| One&#128;|" he said before opening the door quickly. Twilight, who had been in the process of preparing to knock, stumbled into the front room. "Um&#128;| Hi. I'm Twilight. I assume you are Grunkle Stan? You sure must be Loopy to take all six of us for the entire summer."

Stan grinned. "My unAwake self made that decision, as he does every Loop. Come in, make yourselves at home." He generously gestured with a wave of his arm. The six walked into the Mystery Shack, into a large room. There waswere paraphernalia littered everywhere, from T-shirts to baseball caps to snowglobes, all priced at least four times too high. Further along several examples of obviously-fake taxidermy littered the walls. There was a jackalope with three antlers, a horse made entirely of corn, and a squirrel with a duck head. Each of these "exhibits" had a rather uncreative name attached to them: "trackelope," "ecorn," and "squck" just to name a few. There were also "adventuring supplies", such as a grappling hook, rope, a crossbow, and more rope.

"OK - i take the first part back. NOT lame," Dash said. "Some of this stuff is actually pretty cool!" she said as she picked up a crystal eye.

Stan quickly tore the red crystalline eye out of Rainbow's grasp. "That's not for sale. Don't touch that."

"I thought we were living with you - why can't I touch your whatsawagigs?" Dash said.

Twilight sighed inwardly at Rainbow's use of "whatsis" again.

Stan glared. "My shack. My rules. I say what happens and what doesn't. Also, I'm the resident Looper here. I know things."

"Oh, well, good for you, Mr. Protective," Dash sarcastically muttered, rolling her eyes as she picked up a multi-colored geode.

"You touch it, you buy it," Stan said, gesturing to Dash to fork over some money.

Rainbow Dash quickly checked her wallet, then proceeded to give Stan a five dollar bill. Stan stared at her in disbelief. He had obviously not expected her to actually pay him. "Erâ€| okay then. Listen up! You six, are going to work for me at the mystery shack -"

"So I get my five bucks back?" Dash asked. "As payment?"

Stan twitched. He was not in the mood to be interrupted. "Your payment will be your rooms. No, you won't get paid. You know what, just for that?" He turned to look at all the sisters. "I'm not telling you anything. You all have to figure this Loop out for yourselves. Have fun; this place is a real pain in the back when you don't know what's going on. Your room is up the stairs, down the hall, first door on the left. Work begins tomorrow."

The six element bearers stood in the Shack, staring at the place where Stan had just been. Applejack was the first to recover, shrugging. "I say we go an' get our room together. Then we figure out what we're gonna do."

The others nodded, and they walked up the wooden stairs to their room. The ceiling of the room was slanted, indicating the rooms position in relation to the roof. The room had a single triangular-shaped window, a lot of power outlets, several old wooden dressers with lamps on them, and two beds.

Only two beds.

Twilight twitched. "Girls, who carries extra beds in their pockets?"

Pinkie Pie grinned. "I do! I always carry them around in case of a bed emergency!"

Rarity looked around the room. "Are you sure there's room in this little room?"

Pinkie Pie produced two bunk beds, setting them in between the two other beds, taking up most of the space in the room. "Just barely!" Pinkie grinned. "But it works!"

"Hrmmmâ€¦ it needs to be about twenty percent roomier." Dash said
"'Cus reasons."

Fluttershy smiled. "I don't mind a cramped place. It'll let us bond more."

"Fluttershyâ€¦" Twilight responded. "We've had billions of years to bond. I think we've got it down."

Pinkie Pie dropped down from the ceiling, somehow. "Oh really? Riddle me this: what am I thinking about right now?"

"Fooling me?" Twilight guessed.

"Nope! I was actually thinking of croissants. I'm hungry." She pulled one of the crescent-shaped pastries out of her pocket, digging in like a rabid squirrel.

Twilight shrugged. She wondered what this world would have in store for them. The town was brimming with magical energy, flowing in and out around her. She would have to study it in detail. It looked like she might get to have a genuine adventure with her friends for once. It had been quite a while since she'd been in a place with all five of her friends that none of them had been to before. And they were sure as aspen going to have fun with it.

Twilight considered thanking Stan for not telling them what was coming. It was always more interesting that way.

* * *

>Stan sat back in his room, pondering life. He took off his fez, studying it deeply. It was his symbol, that strange fish thing. It was who he was. It was his destiny. It represented his baseline self. Which, admittedly, wasn't altogether that different from him now. Millions of Loops hadn't changed his core self that much, but that was probably because he'd already been old when he started.

Would he be able to go through a baseline run again? It would be a challenge, physically, mentally, and emotionally. As fun as it was to watch visiting Loopers go through the mysteries completely baffled, he usually stepped in at some point, to change what was going to happen.

It had been a really, really long time since he had seen it through all the way to the end.

Maybe this was the time he'd face it. Maybe. Maybe not.

He sighed, taking a picture of his niece and nephew, Dipper and Mabel Pines. Anchor and Looper for this branch of the great world-tree Yggdrasil. His frown deepened. They had changed so much, and he was still the same old man he had always been.

Maybeâ€¦| maybe this would be the Loop.

Just maybe.

Outside time, and outside space, a creature of nightmares stirred. His single eye flipped open, and he knew everything. He laughed.

"This is going to be fun!"

* * *

>160.7: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Afternoon, Mac."

"Afternoon, Mayor."

Ivory Scroll chuckled as she settled in on her stool. "I just had a really, really weird Bureau Loop, and I know we don't like to talk about themâ€¦| but I need to get this one off my back."

"How so?"

"It was a LITERAL Bureau Loop. As in, I was a chest of drawers in someone's house."

Mac raised an eyebrow as he slid a drink her way. "Now, this I have to hear."

Ivory chuckled. "Wellâ€¦|"

_Ivory Scroll, sometimes known as Mayor Mare, Awoke feeling very strange. Curious, she tried to move and found she couldn't._

_Frowning (such as she could), she triggered a Ping, and several responses came back almost immediately._

_Tapping the Force abilities she'd gained from one Loop, she stretched out her senses, and began picking up other voices._

_"_Twilight?_"_

_"_Yes, Rarity?_"_

_"_I think I'm a sofa._"_"_

_There was a pause. "_I know how you feel._"_"_ _Ivory sighed in relief. "_Twilight?_"_"_

_"_Ivory?_" Twilight's mental voice came. "_Oh good, we aren't alone. I felt the ping, so I knew there had to be more of us here, but I couldn't tell who._"_"_

_Ivory chuckled. "_Yes, I'm here. Anyone else?_"_"_

"_Shiny and I are,_" came Cadance's voice. "_I appear to be a credenza? And Shiny's an armoire._"

"_And here I thought I had it bad the time I Looped in as literal armor,_" a grumpy voice added._

"_At least you aren't a bureau like me,_" Ivory told him._

_There were several shudders at that. Including one from an actual pair of shutters. "_I have to admit, this is definitely among the stranger things I've been,_" Sunset Shimmer commented._

"_Yes,_" Twilight replied. "_Yes, it is._" There were several chuckles in response._

"It's a good thing we could still talk with one another like that," Ivory concluded. "Otherwise, it would have been a very boring Loop, just having to stand there all day and do nothing."

Mac chuckled. "Eeyup."

* * *

>160.8: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Ah, literature, literature," Mrs. Twilight Sparkle sighed as she studied the shelves of her mansion's library. Around the room, her maid and their five guests were each contently reading one of the books from her vast collection.

Then she and the others all blinked Awake at the same moment.

Looking around, Twilight blinked. "Um, girls? Are we in Boddy Manor? The real one, not just a copy we made for a game Loop?"

"Yep yep yep!" Miss Charlotte "Pinkie Pie" Scarlet bounced in her seat. "But I think you mean Sparkle Manor, this time."

Colonel Martin "Rainbow Dash" Mustard raised an eyebrow. "And I see you're the only one reprising your old role, Pinkie."

Next to her, Mrs. Wilhelmina "Fluttershy" White nodded as she set her copy of _Make Way for Ducklings_ down. "I don't mind being in this role, actually."

"Well, ah do mind this one," Mr. Gerald "Applejack" Green remarked. "Why in tarnation am ah the corrupt businesspony? Do ah look like Flim or Flam?"

"No, but your family does run a successful business," Mrs. Patricia "Rarity" Peacock commented. "So excluding his criminal activities, you are the closest to the character's background."

Applejack reluctantly conceded the point.

"I just have one question," Professor Paul "Spike" Plum threw in. "Why am _I_ the absent-minded professor this time instead of Twilight?"

"Because you're purple?" Twilight suggested. "At any rate, I think this is the book version. And unlike Mr. Boddy, I have no intention of being murdered or robbed blind. So... Vacation Loop?"

"Vacation Loop," everyone else chorused.

* * *

>160.9: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"TWILIGHT!" a panicked-looking Rarity shouted as she burst into the library.

Rolling her eyes, Twilight looked up from her book. _Even the unAwake versions are getting into it now..._ "Yes, Rarity?"

"Come quick! We've a situation, and Fluttershy isn't here to help with it!"

Twilight raised an eyebrow, but followed her friend out the door. "Animals where they're not supposed to be?"

"Yes! In the swimming hole! Where my sister and her friends were playing!"

"And... what kind are they?"

"See for yerself," a much calmer Applejack put in as she walked up to them. "Ah've seen 'em and they aren't causin' any real trouble, but Mac's watchin' 'em anyway, so everything's jist fine. And Rarity, I know you can get a little worked up at times, but did you really, really have to run screaming like that?"

"Our sisters are in danger and you think I shouldn't be 'worked up'?! Why, you..."

Ignoring the frantic Rarity as she continued to rant at an obviously exasperated Applejack, Twilight sighed. _Why, oh, why did Rarity have to be such a worrywart this Loop?_

A few minutes later, as the three mares walked up to the swimming hole, Twilight raised her eyebrow even higher. _Okay, even in the mostly baseline Loops, I can still be surprised._

A family of bears, one adult and five cubs, were happily splashing around with the Crusaders, while Mac kept a careful eye on the group from where he was sitting. Concentrating, Twilight sent a Ping, to see if any of the bears would react. They didn't, though Applejack (whom Twilight already knew was Awake) quirked one ear. _Not visiting Loopers then. Huh._

Walking up to the water, she coughed to catch their attention. "Room for one more?"

"Twilight!" Three happy fillies chorused. "Come on in, the water's fine!"

The mother bear looked up too, shrugged, then went back to resting on her side of the swimming hole.

Smiling, Twilight waded in and joined the group in their playing.
_Ah... I needed this._

Several hours later (Rarity having stormed off in a huff at some point, and Applejack having returned to her farm, knowing Mac and Twilight had things well in hoof), the last of the group finally left the water and shook themselves dry. Watching the six bears lumber off, Twilight turned to her three younger friends with a smile.
"Thanks for letting me join you, girls."

"Oh, it was no problem!" Scootaloo chirped. "So... same time next week?"

Twilight smiled. "Works for me."

* * *

>160.10: (Anon e Mouse Jr.; with one line by Masterweaver)

Diamond Tiara stuck her nose in the door of the Golden Oaks Library.
"Hey, Twilight? Spike said you wanted to see me?"

Twilight nodded from where she was shelving books. "It's about your unAwake self last Loop."

Diamond groaned as she walked into the room. "Oh no. What'd she do _this_ time?"

"Nothing bad," Twilight reassured her.

"Oh. Phew." Diamond sighed.

"She just acted exactly like Maud normally does."

Diamond stared. "What."

Twilight nodded. "She looked just like you, and had the same basic voice, just with Maud's personality. Deadpan expression, always speaking in a monotone... she even had the same obsession with rocks and gemstones. And she was about as protective of Silver Spoon as Maud is of Pinkie."

Diamond smiled at that. "Nice to know some of my other selves can be decent ponies too."

"Yep." Twilight crinkled her forehead. "The only problem... it was a little disturbing to see Maud's "Look" on your face. Promise me you won't start doing that?"

"Only in emergencies," Diamond assured her.

"Good." Then she cocked her head. "...soooo, does this mean the Maud of that Loop acted like my unawake self or-?"

"Fortunately, no. And even more fortunately, you two never met when she came to town at the usual time."

"You don't mean..."

Twilight nodded, and shuddered. "Trust me, the universe is not ready for Maud in stereo. I'm just glad they were different enough from one another for it not to be a problem in that Loop where there were six of her."

* * *

>160.11: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight Awoke in the chariot on the way to Ponyville. A quick check of her Loop Memories told her this had been a mostly baseline Loop for her so far, and two quick Pings, one with the elements and one without, told her only one of her friends - specifically, a bearer of Loyalty - was Awake. Then, she felt a tap on her leg.

Standing beside her, Spike looked up. "Hey, Twilight. Feeling Loopy?"

Twilight breathed a sigh of relief. "Yes. You just Woke Up too, huh?"

"Yeah. So, what's the plan for this Loop?"

"Nothing in particular, I..." Twilight stared. "What the birch?"

Their chariot had landed in Ponyville while they were talking, and an unusual sight lay before them:

Every single pony had a miniature version of Derpy Hooves sitting on their head and looking cute.

Spike facepalmed. "Okay, what."

As one pony walked past them, the pegasus mare on her head waved to the pair.

Twilight, still looking around in surprise, nodded to the pegasus and then glanced at her dragon assistant. "Something tells me this is going to be an odd Loop, Spike."

A little while later, Twilight and Spike were still walking through Ponyville, and still wondering about the miniature pegasi that everypony, be they adult or younger, had. The youngest ponies had proportionally smaller ones, while one elderly pony Twilight saw had a very aged-looking Derpy on his head. Even Pinkie Pie (who'd done her usual "gasp and run" routine with them) had one on her head, though hers was apparently wearing a small party hat. (It took everything Twilight had to keep from squeeing at the sheer adorableness of the sight.) As the two approached Sweet Apple Acres, they could see all the ponies there had the miniature pegasi as well.

A familiar Earth Pony walked up to them. "Howdy, y'all!" Applejack called. "Welcome to Ponyville, miss..."

"Twilight. Twilight Sparkle. And, um... how could you tell I'm new here?"

Applejack chuckled. "Your head's bare, that's how! Everypony around here's got one of these little darlin's on their head, so of course anypony without 'em's gotta be new." As she gestured, her own miniature pegasus popped out of the brim of her hat and waved.

Twilight waved back. "Okay... now, I have to ask. Why _does_ everypony have a tiny pegasus on their head?"

"Cute, ain't she?" Applejack chuckled. "This here's a Derpie. Near as we can tell, they're an offshoot of the... _Breezies_, I think Fluttershy called 'em. They're supposed to be kind of a mix between ponies and butterflies, but this kind look like normal Pegasi, 'cept for the size an' all havin' the same color scheme. Anyway, whole bunch of 'em moved into town a few years ago, an' since they don't cause any trouble, we let 'em stay."

"So, why is she on your head?"

"That's what Derpies do," Applejack replied. "They settle down on folks' heads and look cute. An' we found out they make good lookouts too, since they can see in every direction at once. Don't ask me how, they just do it."

"Don't you have to feed them?"

"Nah, they just pull some of the ambient magic out of the air an' eat that. Though for some reason, they always make it look like a muffin before they eat it."

Her Derpie giggled and demonstrated.

Twilight raised an eyebrow. "Well, that's... interesting. So, Spike and I are here to check up on the preparations for the Summer Sun Celebration?"

Nearly twelve hours later, Twilight was seriously wondering about this Loop. Aside from the Derpies sitting on pony's heads, it was effectively the same as baseline. Applejack and her family were still friendly and welcoming, Rainbow Dash was still just as good at handling the weather (though Twilight had to wonder how her Derpie held on when she was moving at top speed), and Rarity, Fluttershy and Pinkie were the same as well. Nightmare Moon had shown up right on time, and Twilight had led her friends through the Everfree to get the Elements and purify the corrupted Alicorn. Now, Princess Celestia was there and speaking to them.

"Spike, take a note, please. _I, Princess Celestia, hereby decree that the unicorn Twilight Sparkle shall take on a new mission for Equestria. She must continue to study the magic of friendship. She must report to me her findings from her new home in Ponyville._"

As the others cheered, Twilight blushed. "Thank you, Princess. Staying here with my friends, making Ponyville my new home, it means the world to me."

Just then, a Derpie flew in out of nowhere and settled on her head, a big smile on its face as Twilight looked up at it. Another flew in to settle on Spike's head, making him grin.

Applejack chuckled. "Well, lookee here, Twilight! Guess you really are one of us now!"

As the room filled with laughter, Twilight just smiled. This was going to be an interesting Loop.

* * *

>160.12: (Evilhumour, GamereX27)

The Question, part four of four

Nyx flew through space, with eyes narrowed as she made her way to the unoccupied moon. Sleipnir had informed her of the location during the last Loop, to where she could meet him.

She braced herself both physically and emotionally as she flew up to the lunar rock and landed in front of the giant in gleaming power armor trimmed in fur. His helm was resting on the surface, and he sat on a raised ridge.

Nyx knew his physical appearance very well, to the point she was certain that she could draw all the lines in his face without a reference.

Yet the mournful lines were a new addition to the faceâ€¦|

He looked up at her and caught her eyes with his.

They were heavy with sadness and regret, shame and remorse as he looked at her. Yet there was a spark of determination and hope, of resolution and joy in his eyes as well.

There was an awkward silence as the two beings looked at each other. The man finally sighed, eyes darting to the side.

"Hello, Nyx." Leman spoke softly, unable to look at her anymore.

"Hello, Russ," Nyx responded curtly, letting a small bit of anger and hate that she still had out onto the man that had hurt her.

"Nyx, you -" Leman began before shaking his head. "Nyx, I cannot begin to say how sorry I am, how much I regret saying that to you."

"Try," Nyx said, far harsher than she had planned. "Actually saying the words 'I'm sorry for being a hurtful jerk' would be a start!"

The powerful Primarch winced at that, folding inwards slightly. "Nyx, I want to say I am sorry - I am sorry for everything that happened, believe me - but just saying I am sorry feels like I am understating what I did to you. It doesn't feel enough!"

Nyx huffed, silently agreeing that if Leman had simply apologized, she would have thrown it back into his face. She didn't want to agree with him right now, but he was right; a simple conversation would not be enough. "Then what do you propose then, Russ?" She watched him wince again, and she was surprised at herself that she did not feel guilty at doing this to him. But she was relieved that she felt guilty for not feeling guilty about hurting him.

"Nyx, I," Leman started before shaking his head. "I don't know if we can go back to what we had, but we need to talk about -" He broke off, looking into space. "Did you feel that?" He frowned, tilting his head.

"What are you talkin-" Nyx blinked, ears twitching around as she felt something that was like nails on a chalkboard in the magical aether. It was a very unpleasant feeling, and as she listened into it, she could hear the screams of people and the screech of metal against metal.

"Damn it all to hell!" Leman swore, racing towards an assault bike parked against another ridge. "Those daemons will kill those people!" Throwing himself onto the bike, he started the machine when Nyx placed her hooves on it to stop him.

"What are you doing? You can't drive that -" Nyx reared back in surprise as Leman took off and began to head to the people in trouble. "How are you doing that? I thought you couldn't drive anything smaller than a _tank!"_ Nyx shouted at him as she flew alongside him, keeping one eye on the direction they were heading to make sure they were still on track.

Leman snorted, shaking his head. "Nyx, that's a _lie_, a self lie." Stealing a glance at her, Leman ran a massive hand through his hair while letting out a sigh. "Everyone, especially Anchors like me and your mother who are _always_ Awake... We _need_ something to keep ourselves and others occupied during the Loops, and sometimes the silliest of things amuses others, so we keep to it no matter what. You really think your mother, whose special talents are Learning and Magic itself, would be unable to save her home time again and again with her vast experiences and knowledge?"

Nyx blinked at that, feeling a bit uncomfortable with how much sense that made. "So your cooking skills are another self lie?"

"No, I _really_ suck at cooking." Leman blushed. "I _still_ don't know how I made a warp storm with just a toaster and toast."

Nyx couldn't help but giggle at that, with Leman smirking at her before frowning as they came upon the escort ship under siege by three odd-looking daemons. One of them was a black-robed figure riding inside a wheel made of fire - no doubt one of Khorne's. The second was a teal-ish transparent blob of a being, with its sole, heart-shaped organ visible and covered with black tumors. Nurgle's, obviously. The third was a feminine figure, white wings flapping as her only articles of clothing - Slaanesh type chains and leather that just _barely_ covered her decency - whipped about in the nonexistent breeze of space's vacuum.

"How should we handle this?" Nyx looked at Leman for a bit of guidance, eager to swoop in but aware of how foolish that would be.

"You take care of the ship; I'll distract the daemons." Leman stared at her, holding a finger to silence her protesting. "If we do it the other way, I'd be too worried about you and more than likely abandon them to get back to you."

"Oh." Nyx blinked, feeling at odds with the unspoken words that they both knew Nyx wouldn't be tempted to go back to aid Leman.

"Let me give you some coverage, Nyx, and tell the Imperial Guards on board that page six hundred twenty one of the Imperial Infantryman's Uplifting Primer goes double for you if they try anything." Leman smirked before firing at the daemons and hollering on the top of his lungs at the daemons that Nurgle's own abominations and daemons were far better on the eye. Roaring in outrage, the trio flew after him as Nyx teleported herself onboard, already feeling the stares and weapons locked onto her.

"I am Nyx Sparkle, and Lord Russ has stated that page six-two-one of the Imperial Infantryman's Uplifting Primer goes double for me, whatever that is!" It was telling that a few Imperial Guards actually blanched at that, most dropping their rifles to standby positioning. "I'm going to create a shield around this ship so those daemons won't attack you while your pilot gets this ship back into safe space." As she took a step towards the enclosed command bridge, the Imperial armed forces raised their weapons back up.

The Commander frowned at this, but bade his men allow her forwards and drop their arms. "We shall use the coverage that Lord Russ gave us until we can regroup with the others." Raising an eyebrow, the Commander looked Nyx square in the eyes. "You claim that you are able to produce a shield that will protect us?"

With her horn glowing, she summoned a basic shield around the ship that eased the blows against the hull. Raising an eyebrow back at him, Nyx did her best not to smirk, as it would be pushing her luck.

With a nod of his head, the Commander stepped to the side, allowing her inside the bridge; the door slammed shut behind them.

Nyx quickly used the view of space around them to modify her shield, acting as a camouflage as Nyx matched the night sky with the ship. The Commander's frown briefly turned into smirk. "Nearly invisible, Sparkle," he remarked, ordering the crew of four inside the bridge to travel faster. "You and Lord Russ have saved us this day."

"It was nothing special." Nyx brushed off the praise, trying to concentrate on the spell. "Leman and I were nearby when we heard you in distress."

"Oh?" A black haired officer in front of her spoke up, turning to face her. Looking at the second-in-command, Nyx stared at him before he continued to speak. "If I may ask, Lady Sparkle, why were you and Lord Russ nearby?"

Nyx sighed slightly, keeping her attention on the man. "Long story short, multiple usages of time travel allowed us to kinda find each other and we started to go out. Recently, we broke up due what that bucking idiot said, and this was our first chance to really talk to each other when the daemons attacked."

"That sounds oddly familiar." The man chuckled dryly, an odd look on his face for a moment - one that belonged to a much older person. "If I may ask further, Lady Sparkle, what are your plans with Lord

Russ?"

"I... I don't know." Nyx bit her lip. "I do still love him, but what he said really hurt me."

The man gave a short bark of laughter, pushing his purple lips together. "It's a good sign, then, that you're this hurt." Holding a finger up to halt her, he smirked at her. "The ones that love you the most know you better than anyone else. It stands to reason if they love you so much, that by turning that love on its head they'll be able to hurt you so much." Scratching his head, the man gave an awkward, stilted laugh. "Unless he had been faking the love for so long and did this on purpose."

"No, that's impossible!" Nyx shouted, before remembering to concentrate on the spell as it was starting to wax. "But I am still hurt by what he said and I don't know if I can ever forgive him for saying that to me."

"What did you two do in your last fight, by the way, before this one?" The man arched an eyebrow, smile briefly lapsing into a deep frown, his face falling in concern.

"This is our first real fight." Nyx blushed, keeping the man in her line of sight. "We usually don't have much time together, and it's liable to end at any point, so we resolved to keep things as pleasant as possible."

"That doesn't sound too smart to me, handicapping your relationship like that." The man pointed out the fact that Nyx had been regretting ever since it had been pointed out back at home. "But regardless, if you two do love each other, then let him prove it to you and accept what Lord Russ said as a horrible mistake."

"I -"

"Lady Sparkle, we're here." The Commander caused Nyx to snap her head toward the fifth man in the room. "Thank you for the support and coverage."

"You're welcome, sir." Nyx smiled at the man, pleased at how the trip went, although it had been a bit too quiet for her liking. For some reason, though, Nyx felt a lot better about her relationship with Leman now. "If you do not mind, I will be returning to aid Leman."

Before the Commander could respond, Nyx left him and the four-man bridge crew with a pop as she teleported away.

By the time she entered the space where she had left Leman before, the fight had tipped heavily in the favour of the daemons. Leman was using the blade Vulkan made for him against the daemons', but he was off balance - the assault bike had been destroyed at some point, and the primarch was left floating in space.

"LEMAN!" Nyx shouted, her voice carrying out in space and into Leman's helmet. As he turned his head to look at her, Nyx realized she had made a horrible mistake. She had distracted Leman from the fight and allowed one of the daemons an opportunity to slice his head off.

Snapping her wings and using her magic to propel herself forwards, Nyx used her horn to block the blade leaning against Leman's massive form. Another daemon roared in anger, its chain-blade poised to chop her neck in half. Within a second, Leman switched the massive frostblade to his left hand and caught the daemon's blade with his right hand; the weapon dug past the protection of the ceramite as blood oozed out of his wound. Then the third daemon attacked, swinging at Nyx's unprotected left side with its fiery blade. Without any hesitation, Leman brought his left arm upwards to block the blade with his own.

Leman grunted loudly in pain as the force of the daemon's attack, as well as the poor angle that Leman used, knocked the Primarch's left arm out of its socket with an ugly snap. It was only through sheer force of will that Leman kept his arm upright to protect Nyx.

"Go, Nyx," Leman grunted. "Teleport away and I -"

"Are you insane? They'll kill you!" Nyx shouted, pushing more magic into herself to keep the blade from breaking her horn in half.

"But you'll be alive and that's what matters!" Leman shouted back, leaning more into her side. The daemons' blades were getting harder to repel.

"I've got an idea, but -"

"Good. Let's do it!"

"Do-don't you want to know what it is?" Nyx looked at him, wondering what was going on through Leman's head.

"Why?" Leman blinked in honest confusion. "I trust your judgement completely, Nyx. You know that."

"I -" Nyx blushed at that, trying to get her mind in order. "When I give the signal, push and toss, then get ready for some light jousting, do you get it?"

"Ye-yes, I believe I do," Leman responded before closing his eyes to concentrate on the Warp powers he had. "I got something ready, Nyx, whenever you're ready."

With a grunt, Nyx let a build up of magic flare out in a blinding light to knock the daemon in front of them away; Leman pushed the blade in his right hand away and tossed his frostblade at the daemon to the left. Nyx swooped down and then up to get Leman onto her back as Leman summoned some solid Warp-constructed armour for her entire body and a makeshift chainsword for himself.

As he swung the blade to block one strike from the daemon on the right, Nyx summoned her own weapon, a sickle, with a kite shield to defend against the daemon on the left. With his legs squeezing her sides lightly, Nyx began to exploit the extra dimensions that space offered and the fact that space was her domain. Pulling at the fabric of the void, she knocked the Khornate daemon out of its wheel and flung it towards them. As Leman blasted the Slaanesh-spawn back with a Warp blast, Nyx swung at the fiery monster with her sickle, cleaving its arm clean off.

Swerving at a right angle, Nyx allowed Leman to stab the Nurgle-like daemon's wings in place while Nyx plunged her sickle into the heart-shaped organ, then channeled some burning magic throughout the daemon's entire body. It broke down and dispersed into dust, more than likely returning to the Warp.

However, it was not enough. The Slaanesh-like daemon's chain grabbed Leman off of her, the Warp blade in his hands vanishing as his concentration broke. Nyx's eyes flicked back from Leman towards the Khorne-like daemon, its flaming blade angled to slice her head open. Raising her shield, she managed to deflect the strike, although it did cut through the top of her horn, sending a massive surge of magic back at Nyx and forcing her into blackness. As her vision faded, she could see her reflected blow smashing the Khornate daemon's head into an ethereal mess, followed by Leman's fading scream of rage and the faint sound of a wolf's howl.

* * *

>With a start, Nyx woke up to find herself in a massive bed. Looking around, she saw that she was inside a massive room, befitting someone of Leman's size. There were no windows in the room; Nyx's pegasus magic told her she was deep underground. Looking around the room, she saw that on the nightstand next to her was a light blue version of the vest she usual wore and her headband.

"Ah, you are awake, Lady Sparkle." An Adeptus Custode spoke cleanly, drawing her eyes towards the doorway. "How are you feeling, my lady?"

With a twinge of pain, Nyx was aware of her injuries. Her sides had a slight soreness to them; her right wing felt a bit heavier than it was supposed to be, and then there was the uneasy numbness of her cut horn, although it seemed that someone that had sanded it down so the bone wasn't exposed to the air.

"I am fine, thank you," Nyx said politely enough, using her magic to put on the headband as the golden soldier offered a brush.

"Thank the Ordo Xeno for your survival, Lady Sparkle," the Adeptus Custode responded. "Lord Russ made it clear that you were to be treated with as minor modifications as possible. A waste, if you ask me, but he was clear that you were not to be altered in any fashion and were to be provided with those items next to you."

With a nod of her head as she brushed her mane and coat in place and placed the vest on herself, Nyx's eyes darted around the room. "Where am I currently, if I may ask?" She was trying to wrack her mind as to where this could be, but nothing came to mind.

"We are in Lord Russ's chambers, underneath the Imperial Palace, Lady Sparkle. After you and Lord Russ dispatched the first two daemons, you were rendered unconscious by the third one. Luckily, the Space Wolves were nearby and were able to fight off the daemon, rescue both you and Lord Russ, and bring you back to Holy Terra for treatment. That was a week ago."

Nyx blinked in surprise at the length of time, but before she could really digest that, her stomach growled in hunger.

"Ah, if you will follow us, Lord Russ has ordered a meal made to your preferences for when you awaken," the man said, leading her out of the bedroom where it seemed that the entire company of the Great Wolf was guarding the room, with massive Fenrisian wolves stalking along her side as extra determent against anyone that dared to raise so much as a combat blade, guiding her upwards. "Despite Lord Russ's orders of a light honour guard, they refused to leave their post."

"You have brought back Lord Russ to us," a man that Nyx recognised as Logan Grimnar growled out, sending glares at those lesser people that went past their escort. "That alone speaks volumes with our packs; considering how much Lord Russ treasures you, that we shall guard you with our lives."

"And what did Leman say about all of this?" Nyx raised a brow, keeping a low burn of magic on hoof if she needed to suddenly flee or fight. "Call you silly or something? I do appreciate this gesture, but I can defend myself, Old Wolf."

There was a trace of a smirk on the Great Wolf Lord's face as he slowly shook his massive head back and forth. "'Foolish pups that are guarding the slumbering she-wolf after a tumble down the hill.'" With a trace of a blush, the Chapter Master's eyes darted upwards. "Lord Russ's original words were a bit more crass, but he ordered us to never speak them in front of you and use those lesser words."

With a dry chuckle, Nyx was amused at how Leman was still light-footed in regards to her despite everything she had done
-

'Or, it could be that Leman is doing his best to think before he speaks, and trying not to offend you again by calling you a she-bitch.'The thought snaked through her head, causing her to pause mid-step, with all the men around her giving worried and concerned glances at her.

A flash of smile eased them as they brought her out onto one of the many balconies of the Imperial Palace. The air felt nice on her coat, and her wings opened slightly to catch the breeze, although the heavy presence of Vlka Fenryka was slightly off putting. As she walked up to the balcony, her escort breaking apart to let her pass, she saw that a simple table was placed in the center. A metal tray was on one side and Leman Russ, looking almost everywhere but her direction, on the other.

As she approached her seat, Leman seemed to notice her at long last, rising up and move over to pull out her chair for her. As she let herself be pushed in, Leman pulled the lid up to show that there were a large number of daisy sandwiches and a big bowl of celery soup.

"It was a bit of chore to find daisies, to be honest." Leman chuckled as Nyx lifted one up to her mouth. "Kinda sad as well. I've seen Terra in the early days, well before the first millennium, and it was always so beautiful with how green the land was, the flowers of all colour and size."

Nyx was unsure how to respond to that, deciding to chew on the first sandwich to give herself some time. With a light smile, she gulped the food down and placed the remainder of the sandwich back onto the platter. "Well, wherever you found it, the land should be greatly admired. This tastes wonderful. Did you make it?"

Leman let out a snort of laughter. "Nyx, you just recovered from fighting several daemons; you really think I'd be willing to poison you so quickly with my cooking?"

Nyx giggled at that, placing a hoof to her lips to halt it. "I suppose that is true, Mister I-can-summon-warps-storms-with-a-slice-of-bread."

Chuckling again, Leman raised his hands in defeat. "I'll never live that one down, will I?"

Giving him a smirk, Nyx leaned into the table. "What do you think?" As she flashed her eyelids, Leman let out a playful grunt.

"My mouth never stops flapping, does it?"

"No, Leman." Nyx leaned back into her seat, a content smile on her face. "It's like your mouth is its own entity."

"I hope I can control it better in the future around you." Leman's smile started to shrink as he looked off to the side. "If there is a future with you, I meanâ€¦"

"Leman," Nyx sighed, leaning over to caress his rugged face, which forced him to look at her. "A major problem in our relationship was that we were not honest with each other, and we didn't let ourselves experience the low times that a relationship needs to grow into something stronger." Letting go of his face, Nyx folded into herself. "I don't know if we can get back to what we had, but I think it would be a good start for us to be completely honest with each other."

Leman nodded his head, tapping his fingers against the table. "That seems reasonable to me," Looking back at her, he stared her straight in the eyes. "What do you want to know first?"

* * *

>"That's one hell of a terrible nightmare Loop," Nyx conceded, shuddering at the description of the Chaos God Emperor of Mankind. "I can see why you never brought it up before."

"I never wanted you, or the others, to be worried about what we had to endure, so I never brought it up," Leman told her, feeling lighter than he had in eons. "That, and it rarely happens without warning. Fenrir told me ages ago that for some reason whenever he tries to pull together the information about my lost brothers, the next Loop is always that Variant, so he takes upon himself to warn me about it." With a distant look, Leman followed up with, "I think he has given up on trying to fix them, to be honest."

"Well, I'm sure one day they'll be found and their data will be fixed." Nyx patted his side, trying to comfort him.

"One day, perhaps," Leman agreed before looking at her. "Do you wish for a blanket, Nyx? It's getting late, and it does get cold up here."

Nyx looked up at the sky, the sun nearly setting on them, before shaking her head in the negative. They had spent nearly the entire day talking to each other, revealing secret after secret to each other. While it had been unpleasant to reveal personal secrets, the two felt better about everything that had happened so far. They felt closer to each other now, and what they had now had more meaning than what they had had before.

"So is that everything, Leman?" Nyx raised the glass of water to her mouth.

"Ye-yes," Leman's eyes darted to the side. "That's everything Nyx."

"Leman..." Nyx dragged out his name, frowning at the man opposite of her. "We just had a long talk about being honest and -"

"I know, I know. Leman held his hand up, halting her. "It's just that this is kinda of embarrassing and awkward now, considering everything that has happened between us."

"Well I've got to hear it now." Nyx grinned, placing the glass down. "Go on, tell me. Or do I need to bring out the big guns?" Nyx started to widen her eyes, at which Leman placed a hand on his chest in mock defeat.

"Okay, you twisted my arm Nyx. Promise not to laugh?" Leman asked as he rose to his feet.

"I promise nothing, Leman." Nyx chuckled, leaning comfortably in her chair. "Stop stalling and tell me."

"Alright, alright," Leman paced back and forth, trying to build up his nerves. "Nyx, I -"

"Yes?"

"Nyxie!" Leman moaned, blushing now.

"I'm sorry, I see that you prepared for whatever this is and my little comments aren't helping your concentration."

Rolling his eyes, Leman took a deep breath before turning to face her.

"Nyx, you know me. You know that I am not one for much words, letting my actions speak for me instead." He paced in front of her, keeping his eyes on her. "I do love you, a great deal, Nyx. I wanted to show you this for a long time and at a time, I felt I had got it right." Pausing in front of her, Leman reached into his subspace pocket for something. "I then realized that I was not thinking enough for you and restarted it. The second time around took me far longer; learning how to cast the spells and attach them to it, and then place them within the project, took me eons, but it was worth every second spent."

What Leman did next caused Nyx's brain to come to a screeching halt.

He dropped down to one knee, holding in his hands the object he had taken out of his Pocket: a small, common-looking box.

Her heart leaped into her throat as Leman opened the box to reveal a horn ring inside with a gem on top.

"Nyx Sparkle, will you marry me?"

As she used her magic to examine it, processing every aspect of the ring in front of her in an instant, her conscious mind barely comprehended what she saw. The gem was made of polished onyx, common and modest-looking, but there was something inside of it. Delving deeper into the ring, she saw that it held a depiction of her cutie mark made of shining lights that looked like stars.

Becauseâ€¦ because they were stars. Beautiful stars that were lovingly created and shaped by mortal hands, each one different from the other with unique details that made each stand out to her.

Then she was aware that each star had a bit of a magic spell attached to it - a memory spell. Letting her magic brush against them, her heart thundered in her head as she saw countless moments of her and Leman together, doing both the amazing and the simple, having a grand adventure and snoozing in front of a fire together. She saw the first time they met, the dates they went on, the simple talks they had, the pranks they played, all the other special times they had done together when they were dating.

Blinking through her tears, she broke her magic away from the stars and the onyx gem and looked at the silver band, which had both an alicorn pony and a wolf emblazoned on the side, reaching towards each other at the bottom of the ring. Peering inside, she saw that was an inscription.

_'Nyx, like you, this ring's modest exterior barely hides the unimaginable beauty that lies inside_. _Leman'_

* * *

>Leman sighed, pushing himself upright and letting Nyx look at the ring. "I told you it was foolish, and I know how awkward it is to hear me say that after everything that has happened. But I hope to one day, if we can -"

"Yes." A whisper behind him caused Leman to turn around.

"Yes?" he repeated in confusion, looking at Nyx holding the ring in her magic with a dazed look on her face.

Smiling, Nyx lifted the ring up to her horn and placed it on. Tears running down her face, Nyx nodded her head and repeated the soft, "Yes."

Realization slammed into Leman, cutting his legs out from under him. Falling to his knees, he reached out towards the mare, a hand trembling. "_Y-yes?_"

Throwing her hooves around his neck, Nyx rubbed her face against his, laughter and tears of joy escaping from her. With certainty and steel in her voice, Nyx answered his question with a solid, "_Yes_."

Leman quickly wrapped his hands around her withers, tears running down his face as he leaned into her. He started to rumble with joyous laughter, letting out a bellowing "_**YES!**_" to the sky.

As the two held each other, warming each other with their bodies and tears, their laughter started to ebb and they looked at each other.

Without any words spoken and with eyes locked on each other, the two leaned in for a kiss. It was not the most romantic of kisses, it was not the best of kisses, it was not even a very comfortable kiss.

But for Leman Russ and Nyx Sparkle, a simple kiss was all that was needed.

Because they had each other and that was all that mattered.

They had each other and everything was going to be just fine.

* * *

>AN:

160.1: Goof on, goof off.

>160.4: Still progress.160.8: Pinkie, put down that comically large rubber knife.

>160.10: Diamaud tiara.

160.12: Awwwww...

168. Chapter 168

161.1

"Aaaaah!"

The ground trembled as hundreds of ponies stampeded away in all directions.

Princess Luna blinked, looking back along her body. "But We are dressed as a bright yellow bug with googly eyes! How can that possibly be scary?"

Twilight coughed. "Parasprites."

"Oh..." Luna said, nodding. "I see. Our thanks for your advice, Twilight Sparkle" "We had forgotten about when that plague struck this fair town."

"My pleasure," Twilight replied, mainly glad she'd handled the Canterlot Voice issue earlier. "Hold on, I'll go talk them down..."

* * *

>Some minutes later, the ponies of Ponyville were more-or-less settled.

"Ahem!" Luna said, having painted black stripes on her costume so she was now a bee. "May We have your attention?"

"Sure!" called one of the Cutie Mark Crusaders.

"Hey, don't speak for us!" Diamond Tiara snapped. She coughed. "Ahem... we would be glad to listen, your majesty."

Luna frowned. "Is that not what the first one said?"

"But..." Tiara looked momentarily lost. "I was more polite about it..."

"Indeed, but all We wanted was an answer," Luna explained. "In any case - it is Our pleasure to inform you that Our royal sister will also be participating in the festivities!"

There were excited mutters through the crowd.

"Our royal sister left Canterlot some time after We did," Luna went on. "And even We do not know what her costume may be."

She stood back a step, and watched.

The day royal chariot skimmed down low over the rooftops, turned, and alighted.

A griffin got out.

Luna's face became slightly fixed. "What is the meaning of this?"

"Lulu, it's me," the griffin explained. "I've got a _really good_ costume this year!"

"...really?" Luna asked, taking a step forwards. _"Really."_

"Yep," the griffin confirmed.

"Prove it," Luna challenged.

Rolling her eyes, the griffin lashed her tail. Then she shrugged. "Nah, too easy to do it that way..."

"Oh, no..." Twilight said, very quietly, as she realized what was going on.

"Instead - I've brought the Lost Photo Album, an artefact only a Princess can retrieve from its vault."

Luna paled. "Well, that seems-"

"Look!" the griffin-who-was-apparently-Celestia went on, opening it. "It's you fighting a monster made of hay!"

She looked closer at the photo, fending off Luna with a foreleg. "No, wait, it's you buried underneath a pile of hay because you ordered four hundred and fifty servings of hay fries at the restaurant last month, because you thought you had to say how many pieces of hay you wanted."

"We accept your claim!" Luna said. "Please close the album!"

"Of course!" the griffin said, folding it closed and giving a grin. "You were saying?"

"Right," Luna said, nodding. "As We were about to explain, We are going to do Nightmare Night toge-"

A white shape of wings and horn landed with a clatter in the crowd.

"-sister!" Luna said, interrupting herself. "How-"

"What?" the griffin asked.

"Wait, you mean me?" asked the white-coated alicorn standing at the back of the crowd. "Nah, I'm just dressed up as Celestia. It's really me, Gilda the Griffin."

Luna sat back on her haunches. "We give up."

* * *

>"So, which of you came up with this idea?" Twilight asked, some minutes later.

"Actually, it was Zecora," Celestia chuckled, no longer using her 'Gilda voice'. "She arrived five minutes after we did, and no-one even noticed she was an alicorn..."

* * *

>161.2 (LordCirce, Evilhumour)

Sleipnir poked his head in the door to his marefriend's office. "Hey, do you want me to escort you down?"

Epona looked up and blinked. "Escort me down to what?"

Sleipnir chuckled. "To your advancement ceremony. Did you forget that it was today?"

Epona stared blankly back at him, before raising an eyebrow. "My... advancement... when did this get announced?"

Sleipnir's chuckles died off. "... Susanoo forgot to tell you, didn't he?"

"To tell me _what_?" Epona's voice had turned soft and icy.

"Given your exemplary performance in handling the Hyrule Universe, it has been decided that you shall be promoted to Full Administrator Status." Sleipnir grinned as Epona's mouth fell open. "Now, come on, we need to get you down to Tyr's office to officially accept and sign off the last bit of paperwork."

As the two departed, Susanoo let out a deep breath from where he had hidden behind the door. He had been trying to sneak in to let Epona know, and to try and figure out a way to tell her that wouldn't result in her exploding over him forgetting to mention it for the past few days...months... whatever...

* * *

>"This is a very nice town, Twilight." Moondancer smiled, looking around the small village. "Although with how you described it, I thought Ponyville would be a little more crazy."

"Ponyville is a bit much at times, but it is still a normal-

"_Heya Twibright!" _a drunk voice called out, drawing both mares' attention towards the center of the town, where an eight-legged stallion staggered around. "_Guess what? Girlfriend my Epona got higmoted to bull Adminsnip!" _The stallion hiccuped and paused, tapping his chin. "_I mean promoted to ship Adminship!" _He giggled, walking over to Twilight and Moondancer to give them a hug, reeking of alcohol, before collapsing in front of them.

Before they could react, they heard a sigh from behind them. Turning around, they saw a massive wolf walk past them and grab the stallion's tail. "Sorry, Twilight, my brother had a bit too much last night celebrating Epona's promotion to full Adminship. He wasn't suppose to work today, and let his assistants take the brunt." Fenrir gave them a sheepish smile before glaring at the drunk Sleipnir. "You better not pass wind or I _swear _that I'll toss you into the la-"

Everyone winced as a foul air was suddenly exhumed from the passed-out stallion, which made the wolf rear back in disgust. Fenrir gave the mares a smug look before grabbing the horse by the barrel. "I _did_ warn him, ladies." With a jerk of his head, the eight legged horse went through the sky and crashed into the lake with a mighty shout. "I was never here!" Fenrir shouted, running away from the now furious and sober eight-legged horse, both taking to the air with speeds so fast they caused a sonic boom.

Moondancer slowly turned her head towards Twilight and raised an eyebrow.

Twilight raised her hoof up. "Ponyville is a _mostly_ normal town."

* * *

>161.3 (fractalman)

Twilight stared through her window at the mob of assorted lifeforms.

"Spike, is it just me, or are we being visited by every mlp reviewer on youtube?"

Spike jumped onto her back. "Hmm...sure looks like it."

Then an explosion flung a singed hippogriff in through the window. Twilight facehooved.

* * *

>Elsewhere, Chrysalis chuckled as Trixie gave her a back massage.
"She bought it. "

Trixie scoffed. "Not to disparage your abilities, but Sparkle will figure it out within the hour."

Chrysalis chuckled. "Wanna bet? If she figures it out within the hour, you get to do whatever you want to me. But..."

Trixie nodded. "_IF_ Sparkle cannot figure out that she's been duped by a bunch of changelings, then you get to turn me into soup like you've been wanting to do. Just be sure to resurrect me afterwards." She scoffed again. "Not that Sparkle will take that long."

* * *

>(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

My next Loop found me in the world of Assassin's Creed. In that Loop, two secret groups called the Assassins(who represent free will and the right to choose) and the Templars(who believe in order and control) had fought in secret for millennia.

I had landed in the end of the 15th century, just as the Anchor of that era(like the Star Wars Loops, different eras have different Anchors), Ezio Auditore, had arrived in Rome. He soon took me in as an apprentice in the Assassins, training me in their ways. The first thing he told me was not to use my Loop-acquired abilities under his training, as he wished me to learn without relying on my other powers.

Makes sense. As I had figured a very long time ago, I can't be sure when I won't be able to use my abilities. He trained me in stealth, blending into the crowds, and other tactics. He reminded me of Big Boss a good bit; Ezio and he are friends, apparently. Since that timeframe didn't have the kind of weapons Big Boss' era had, I had to rely more on hiding in plain sight, parkour in case I had to run for it, and close-range combat when all else failed.

I found myself meeting a lot of interesting people, and finding myself a prime player in the fight against the Templars. Some of my comrades even figured I was Ezio's favorite apprentice. After his trip to learn more about his ancestor, Altair, happened, they were right, as he named me his successor.

It was interesting to play a role in history, however miniscule it might be, and I learned new things to add to my list of skills. But in the end, my honor got the better of me, and in a battle against a Templar commander, I was caught by surprise, and I...died.

It was scary to feel my life fade away, though I knew I'd just Awaken somewhere else, but that doesn't mean I don't fear death. Far from it.

Hopefully, I'd learn from that death...

* * *

>161.4 (Crisis)

Sunset Shimmer groaned as she tried to shake the static out of her hair. Waking Up after the whole Fall Formal demoness incident was never all that fun, especially as it repeatedly reminded her of what kind of person/pony she used to be. Still, the incident served to introduce magic to the alter-Equestria which gave her an opportunity to try and figure out how it worked. She could only lament the fact that she'd forgotten how much she loved doing field research until recently. So many lost opportunities... Still, she'd managed to learn quite a bit about the multiverse. One of the things she'd quickly proven was that magic in one reality did not necessarily work the same as magic in another. Much like the laws of physics, actually. It made for lots of interesting research opportunities.

If only the magic of her friends, the alternates of the Elements of Harmony and the members of The Rainbooms band in this reality, didn't keep finding amusing ways to zap her when she tried to take readings. She could make assumptions on what her friends might be capable of when 'ponying up', but how and why it happened in the first place not only continued to elude her, she was certain that the magic was actively sabotaging her efforts to understand it.

"I give up..." she moaned from where she'd allowed herself to collapse on the floor while the Rainbooms began band practice away from the instrumentation she'd set up. "I'm no closer to knowing how magic works here than I've ever been..."

"That easily?" a male voice that Sunset wasn't used to intervened in her thoughts, reminding her that she had a pair of visitors this Loop. Something she normally didn't. Visiting loopers usually ended up in Equestria with Twilight and the others.

"Do you have any idea how many times I've run tests like this, only to end up zapped, splatted, defenestrated, and otherwise humiliated?"

"Watching you cough up a puff of rainbow smoke _was _kind of funny," a female voice admitted and Sunset snorted in amusement despite herself.

"Yeah, well, thanks for helping me out, Rock, Roll," Sunset sighed and sat up, trying to brush herself off as she looked at the twin loopers. "Have I mentioned how glad I am to see you again?"

"A few times," Rock grinned.

"At least you didn't ask us to autograph your copy of _Daring Do and the Curse of the Magi_ again," Roll grinned. (*) "Or any of the other books written about that Loop."

"Sorry about that by the way," Sunset blushed. "It just sounded so impressive when I read about it the first time. Ahuizotl, Tirek Sunstar, Discord, Waltz, the Dark Mane, King Sombra," Sunset trailed off and her expression turned somber, "Dr. Willy subverting the Elements of Harmony..."

"Um..." Roll hesitated on seeing Sunset's guilty expression. "That wasn't in any way your fault, you know."

"Yeah," Rock agreed. "You weren't even part of that Loop. What Wily did with the Elements and their bearers had nothing to do with you."

"Maybe..." Sunset hugged herself. "Maybe not. After all, I was the one villain in the baseline who successfully subverted an Element of Harmony, however temporary. I can't help but feel that the possibility itself is tied to that event."

Rock and Roll remained silent and exchanged glances with each other.

"You know what your problem is, Sunset?" Roll asked, getting a look from the other girl. "You give up too easily."

"What?"

"Yeah, especially on yourself," Rock nodded as he dialed a number on his phone. "Hold on. Hi dad, yeah I'm at school with friends. Look, we've got a budding researcher here who's so frustrated with a lack of results that she's ready to give up the whole thing. Uh-huh. Yeah, Sunset Shimmer. You remember her, right? Studying magical manifestations. They happen while playing music. Gotcha. See you soon," Rock ended the call. "He'll be right over."

"Uh..." Sunset blinked. "How soon?"

A door suddenly slammed open, startling Sunset as well as the Rainbooms from their practice. Silhouetted in the doorway was a stout bearded man in a labcoat, holding several rolled-up charts and wearing stylish shades. Dr. Light had arrived.

"Um... doesn't that door lead to the band closet?" Pinkie expressed the band's collective confusion.

"I come in the name of SCIENCE!" Dr. Light declared, pointing dramatically.

"How?" Sunset wondered incredulously.

"Remember how we told you that dad studied Pinkie Pie's abilities that Loop while Unawake?" Rock whispered. "Well, after we last met, he Dreamed up the research one Loop and set about replicating them."

"Again, how?"

"Why, with SCIENCE! dear girl!" Dr. Light declared from behind Sunset, making her jump several feet into the air.

"That makes no sense!" Sunset accused upon landing.

"It makes perfect sense!" Dr. Light returned, striking a pose. "After all, what is SCIENCE! if not study? What is it if not the power to stare into the unknown and declare that it shall be made known? To seek out the shrouded mysteries of existence, present yourself before them and say 'teach me!?' To unravel the secrets of the cosmos with neverending wonder, marveling at each new tidbit of knowledge they give up, and persisting no matter if the research takes a day or a lifetime? Or, indeed several lifetimes? The drive to ask questions of the unknowable and transform it into the known! That is SCIENCE!"

The room was silent for several beats as six of the eight students gaped in astonishment at the man.

"Dude!" Rainbow found her voice first. "Did you actually just make studying sound awesome?"

"Sheeeeeoooooooooot..."

"Is it wrong that I suddenly have the biggest schoolgirl crush on your dad?" Sunset whispered to Roll while blushing crimson.

"I wish I could say this was the first time that happened," Roll sighed.

"Now, head researcher Sunset," Dr. Light continued, causing the girl to jump at the address, "I believe you were studying the manifestation of magic through music?"

"Head researcher? Me?" Sunset blinked in astonishment. "Er... I mean, yes, but all the readings I took just blew up in my face. The instrumentation can't get any clear reading."

"Well, then, we start with observation of the phenomenon then," Dr. Light proceeded, unperturbed. "Perhaps ask questions of the subjects afterwards about how the manifestation feels."

"Well..." Fluttershy responded quietly, "it does feel kind of warm and nice, like being hugged by lots of cute fluffy bunnies."

"Mine rather feels like a walk down the runway while wearing the most fabulous dress," Rarity added.

"The satisfaction of a hard day's work," Applejack nodded.

"My sheer awesomeness!" Rainbow Dash strutted.

"THE MOST EPIC PARTY EVER!" Pinkie yelled.

"And," Dr. Light stopped Sunset from writing those down by placing a gentle, but firm, hand on Sunset's notepad, "do not forget to include all known subjects."

"Huh?"

"Dear Sunset," Dr. Light chuckled, "I was there at the battle of the bands. I saw you undergo the very same phenomenon you are trying to study. How the magic works with you is as relevant to this research as how it works with them."

"Yeah!" Rainbow shouted, holding up Sunset's guitar. "Get up here and pony up with the rest of us!"

Sunset looked between the Rainbooms and the visiting loopers for a few moments, before giving in to the emotions of the moment and joining her friends.

"Alright! One... two... one two three four!"

* * *

>161.5 (ORBSyndicate)

Sunset just couldn't figure out where it all went wrong.

All she wanted to do was try some fishing. Sunset happened to like meat, after all. And fish was particularly good when grilled with a light batter and some fresh herb seasoning and-

She really had been affected by the Cooking Mama loop... It was probably best to get that out of her system pronto.

So she had gone fishing. She had taught herself how to put a hook on a line (after much jamming of hooks into fingers) put bait on a hook (worms, while dirty, were excellent for luring in the scaly critters) and casting (snags. Snags had been difficult to overcome).

Just as she had gotten relatively good at fishing, Applejack had shown up, saying that she had never bothered to learn how to fish, and that she'd like to now. Sunset taught her, of course.

Rainbow came next. She was difficult, simply because of how impatient she was. But Sunset prevailed, getting her to sit on a rock for an hour and reel in big fish. Rainbow enjoyed the fight. And the eating, but mostly the fight.

Pinkie didn't even need to be taught. Rarity did, but never really learned. Fluttershy had originally had qualms, but she let them do what they wanted.

It became a bit of a tradition for them to go fishing every day after school. They got lots of fish. It was enjoyable.

Then more people started coming.

Snips and Snails, who were so loud they kept scaring the fish.

Flash, who just... couldn't do it correctly. Not for lack of trying.

Trixie, who just kept yelling "THE STUPID AND INSOLENT FISH ARE NO MATCH FOR THE GREAT AND POWERFUL TRIXIE!" Which, of course, scared the fish away. Sunset was amazed at how many people seemed to think fish didn't have EARS.

And more and more people came. Sunset had become the teacher of fishing. It was what she was now. She was the fisherwoman.

The river was extremely crowded now, and people didn't actually catch fish as often. Sunset twitched. She just wanted to sit, fish, and enjoy herself. But fishing got annoying after several days of catching nothing and-

"What an impressive thing you have done, miss Shimmer."

Sunset looked up. "Principal Celestia?"

"It's amazing that you have gotten so many vastly different people here, together, having a good time. Look at all of them."

Sunset did so. People were talking, chattering. Bullies were next to nerds, not actually at odds. The human Cutie Mark Crusaders were trying out their new better fishing invention (which didn't work). Bulk Biceps was screaming "YEAAAAAH!" when he successfully tied a hook, and everyone clapped. People were talking, laughing, and having a good time. There was the table set up with a portable gas skillet, where Flash was cooking up the fish that were caught, dishing them out to everyone. It was... a nice image.

Sunset sighed. She supposed it was a good thing. She looked up at Principal Celestia. "You want to learn how to fish as well?" She offered.

"Me? No. I fished a lot when I was young. My sister is the one here who needs to learn. LUNA!"

Luna came out from behind a tree. "Do I have to?"

"Yes, you need to learn."

"But worms are... icky."

"Yes they are, but fish are tasty and you need to catch up on missed childhood opportunities."

"But-"

"Luna."

"...Fine. I suppose it might be enjoyable."

Sunset rolled her eyes and began to teach Luna the basics of putting a hook on a line. Maybe this wasn't such a bad thing after all-

"EVERYBODY DUCK!" Applebloom yelled as the CMC ran away from their odd fishing device as fast as they could. The river exploded, a fish flying out of the river into Sunset's face.

The news tomorrow would have a section about the four minutes it rained fish. Sunset still had no idea how the device, which just looked like a triple fishing pole, had managed THAT.

* * *

>161.6: (Kris Overstreet)

"We'll never succeed," Buttercup moaned, trying to brush bits of lightning quicksand out of her dress. "We may as well die here."

"No, no," Westley assured her. "We have already succeeded. I mean, what are the three terrors of the Fire Swamp?" He held up one gloved finger. "One, the flame spurt - no problem. There's a popping sound preceding each; we can avoid that." He added a second finger. "Two, the lightning sand, which you were clever enough to discover what that looks like, so in the future we can avoid that too."

"Westley," Buttercup sighed, "what about the HODS?"

Westley shrugged. "Horses of Diminutive Size? I don't think they exist."

The instant the terminal _t_ of the last word passed his lips, a cannon shot rang out from a nearby bush. Westley and Buttercup flinched, then slowly uncurled as they realized, instead of grievous bodily wounds, they each bore a plate with a slice of cake in one hand and a small cup of fruit punch in the other. Paper party hats perched atop their heads.

Two popping sounds rang out, and a moment later twin fountains of flame erupted from the swamp, illuminating a banner: HAPPY ESCAPING-HUMPERDINCK-AND-SURVIVING-THE-FIRE-SWAMP PARTY!

Under the banner stood six ponies of improbable colors and, yes, rather diminutive size. Two had wings. One had a horn. One had both. And one in particular had a case of chronic bouncing.

The purple one with both wings and a horn pointed to the bouncy pink one and said, with a touch of embarrassment, "It was her idea."

* * *

>161.7 (Anon e Mouse Jr., Masterweaver, Vinylshadow, fractalman)

"Oh yes," Twilight confirmed, "Cadance makes excellent pizza. It's just amazing."

"What does she make it with?" Applejack asked.

"She makes it with love," Twilight said flatly.

Rainbow Dash cringed.

"That was awful," Pinkie said.

Fluttershy and Rarity rolled on the ground with laughter.

"But seriously, what _does_ she make it with?" asked Spike.

"Mostly water, bread flour and yeast," Cadance spoke up from behind him. "Plus a few more ingredients. But the real secret is in how you work the dough once it's ready."

Pinkie nodded. "Yep yep yep!"

Twilight eyed her suspiciously, then turned to Cadance. "I have to ask, when did you get so good at making pizza? I don't remember you liking it in baseline."

Cadance smiled. "I had a Hub loop a while back, and one of the people I met spent a lot of time watching the Food Network. Thanks to him, I got hooked on a really good cooking show called _Good Eats_, so before the Loop ended, I made sure to get all the host's books and DVDs, and even transcripts of the episodes, so that I could try out some of the non-meat cooking applications when I came back here. His pizza dough is really good. And wait until you try the peanut butter fudge!"

"You have books?" Twilight's eyes widened. "Where?"

"You have fudge?" Pinkie said at the same time. "Where? Where?"

Applejack rolled her eyes. "She said the magic words."

Her eyes narrowed, Twilight huffed at her friend as the others laughed.

Elsewhere in Equestria, Chrysalis munched on her slice. "Mmmm... made with love..."

Trixie watched her marefriend and snickered to herself. _Trixie will definitely have to thank Cadance for giving her a sample of her work._

* * *

>161.8 (Kris Overstreet)

Twilight Sparkle really, really wished Trixie was Awake for this Loop.

"An' then we hit th' actuator," Apple Bloom said. "An' that's when that happened."

Twilight's gaze followed Apple Bloom's pointing hoof up into the air, where the remains of one of Sweet Apple Acres' older barns floated about twenty feet in the air, the debris collapsed upon itself in an ever-tightening ball. She could hear the occasional crackle and snap of old timbers being compressed.

"We thought," Scootaloo added, repeating part of the inexplicable explanation from before, "that since so many other things we build trying to get our cutie marks blow up, that we should try making something designed to blow up."

"And instead," Twilight replied, "you got that."

"Instead of explosion, we got implosion," Sweetie Belle agreed. "We were hoping you could tell us what went wrong."

Part of Twilight's mind was amused, possibly even enthusiastic, that the Cutie Mark Crusaders had somehow stumbled across an entirely novel and unknown magic spell to generate artificial gravity- unknown even to herself. That was the minority opinion inside her skull; the majority still voted for finding the nearest unaffected wall, or possibly one of the conveniently nearby apple trees, and banging her head against it until the world and all its insanity went away.

How? _How? __**HOW?***_

_They aren't even AWAKE this Loop!_

Not far off, a ripe, heavy apple snapped off its stem and fell up.

* * *

>161.9 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_"There is a fifth dimension beyond that which is known to mortals. It is a dimension as vast as space and as timeless as infinity. It is the middle ground between light and shadow, between science and superstition, and it lies between the pit of a pony's fears and the summit of his knowledge. This is the dimension of imagination. It is an area which we call the Twilight Zone. "_

Twilight looked up from the script she was reading. "And no, it is not a clever euphemism for my house!"

Off-screen, somepony groaned. "CUT!"

Twilight grinned. "Sorry, Director. I couldn't resist."

Famed Mercy, the series director, was too busy face-hoofing to respond, but his assistant could, and did. "Twilight, when you agreed to be the hostess for this show, you promised you'd take the job seriously."

"I know, Coco, I know." Twilight's face brightened. "But look at it this way: when the DVDs come out, now you have the first blooper for the extras."

"There is always that," Coco Pommel acknowledged. "All right, let's take it from the top!"

As Twilight cleared her throat and began reciting her lines again, she was grinning inwardly. Loops where I decide to be an actress and work in Applewood are fun. I should do this more often!_

* * *

>161.10 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Hey, Twilight."

"Sunset!" Twilight looked up from the comic she'd borrowed from Spike. "Oh thank goodness. This latest Loop expansion... I haven't had anything new to do in a while, and it's driving me out of my tree! Metaphorically speaking," she added. "So, what brings you here?"

"Not much." Sunset shrugged. "Our side's expanding slightly, but not a whole lot yet. And since it's the weekend and nobody had any plans, I figured I'd drop in and say hi. And, give you a warning."

"A warning?" Twilight's eyes widened. "What kind of warning?"

"After all the Fused Loops I had at the start, I have a couple of different kinds of precognition." Sunset tapped the side of her head. "And right now, they're all telling me something big, like Sombra or Tirek-big, is coming up. I don't know exactly what it is, or when it's going to happen, but... keep your eyes peeled, okay?"

Twilight nodded. "I will." She cocked her head. "So, what kind of expansions are you having?"

"Well, there's this big competition coming up between Canterlot High and the Crystal Prep Academy..."

* * *

>161.11 (masterofgames)

* * *

>"Okay everypony, what's the first song you weaponized as a heartsong?"

Vinyl shrugged. "Call me a sucker for the meme, but I used, 'Everybody do the Flop!' for my first." she admitted, chugging the last of her drink and then smashing the wooden mug with her forehead. "... Okay, ow! Ow... ow... ow... That seemed like a better idea before I did it. Ow..." she groaned, flopping to the floor and holding her head, rolling side to side slowly.

Twilight rolled her eyes, leaning back just a bit in her chair to look under the table. "I'd heal you, but then you wouldn't learn anything." she called down to her.

Fluttershy raised a hoof. "You already know mine. 'I like trains', remember?"

"Trixie performed a rousing performance of 'Trigger Happy' during the Canterlot wedding invasion." Trixie smirked.

Spike grinned. "Same time, same place, 'Ultimate Showdown'. I played the part of Godzilla myself."

Trixie shot him a scowl, and reluctantly resigned herself to paying for her next drink.

Gilda shot Trixie a look. "Huh. Go figure. I thought you would have used 'Drop the Bomb'. Ah well. I used 'Mortal Kombat'. It only seemed right after my training with Ammy to do something that sounded Eastern, even if it wasn't."

Shining slumped his shoulders. "I used 'Kung Fu Fighting'... I'm not winning this one, am I?"

Rarity shook her head. "A bit too cliché I'm afraid, though it beats mine. I simply used the washing up song from Snow White's baseline against the Diamond Dogs."

"I know I'm not eligible for the prize," Berry called from the bar. "but I did a five part marathon, weaving together 'Beer', 'drink and fight', '307 Ale', 'seven drunken pirates', and 'f*** you, I'm drunk'."

Nobody said anything for several moments as they all turned to look at Berry, who in turn ignored them and kept putting the clean glasses away.

* * *

>161.12 (Evilhumour)

Inside a clubhouse, three little fillies Awoke and looked at each other with a tired sigh.

The living glop of water and dirt filly with a bright red bow looked at her normal equine shaped friend with one oddity.

The exception to the norm was that instead of possessing a normal equine head, she instead had a pin sticking out of her neck.

Their third friend had mostly normal features of a pony; one head, a mane, four legs and a tail. What was different about her was that her entire body bared a striking resemblance to that of a feather duster, one bright orange one to be exact.

With a glop as Applebloom opened her mouth, the mud pony said, "Ah _really_ hate this variant."

Sweetie Belle simply chimed her annoyance with her pinhead, trying to learn how to speak again without possessing lips.

The feather duster normally known as Scootaloo nodded her head, trying to take off from the ground, her entire body buzzing as it struggled to lift her in the air. With a plop as she fell to the ground, the fillies began to cough as dust was sent everywhere.

* * *

>161.13 (Vinylshadow and Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"...did we inadvertently anger Pinkie Pie in a previous Loop?"

"I'm sure there's a perfectly reasonable explanation as to why we are pastries in Sugercube Corner... one that's not related to Pinkie Pie."

"Hi girls!"

Twilight looked at the pink cupcake to her left (as much as she could without being able to move). "Pinkie?"

"Yuppers!" The cupcake smiled. Somehow. "This is fun! I've been a cupcake before, but this is the first time any of my friends have been desserts with me!"

Twilight metaphorically shook her head. "â€¦ I don't even want to know."

A yellow-frosted cupcake could be heard making a squeaking noise nearby.

A moment later, several ponies turned pastries were internally screaming with terror as they were scooped up and put into a box, realizing what this meant. (Pinkie, on the other hand, could be heard going "Wheee! I'm going for a ride!")

About half an hour later, the box was set down on a kitchen table, and opened. "Girls?" Lyra stared at them. "I got all of you, didn't I?"

"Ah hope so," an apple fritter replied. "Um... you aren't going to eat us, are you?"

Lyra stared in disgust. "Of course not! Why would I eat my own kind? Let alone my friends?"

Twilight blinked (so to speak). "Your own... Sweetroll?"

The pastry turned unicorn nodded. "I'm in charge of our body this Loop - that's how I can understand you, by the way. And I Pinkie Promise, I have no intention of eating any of you. Or of letting anyone else do so."

There were several sighs of relief. (And one whisper of "Foreverâ€¦" from the pink cupcake.)

"I will have to stick you in the freezer though. Just so you don't spoil."

An ice cream cake nearby sighed in relief. "Please do, before I melt!"

Sweetroll nodded. "Right away." As she opened the freezer, the pastry ponies heard a hiss.

"The lllllight, it burnsssss ussss!"

Sweetroll rolled her eyes. "Hello, Luna, I've bought your friends over."

"Friendsss?" the Moon pie chirped.

"She's been in there for a few weeks... better than the moon, but still, she's not had company..." Sweetroll explained, putting the colorful edibles around the black and white pie, and making sure to set the ice cream cake right next to it. "Play nice and I'll keep an eye out for anyone else."

A while later, one black raspberry eclair, one vanilla cream eclair, one pink-frosted cupcake, one yellow-frosted cupcake, one apple fritter, one tray of Rainbow Cookies and the ice cream cake that was Celestia had settled into their new home for this Loop.

Rainbow Dash shifted uncomfortably (as much as a tray of cookies could). "Soâ€¦ now what?"

"I don't really know, Rainbow Dash. I don't really know." Twilight sighed. "Soâ€¦ anyone know any good bar discussions that just the eight of us could do?"

_The next Loopâ€¦_

Mac looked up as seven unhappy mares walked into his bar. "Bad loop?"

"Mind-numbingly boring," Twilight corrected him. "We were all pastries or other desserts, and spent almost two years locked up in Lyra's freezer. Fortunately, it was just us, and nobody else had it happen to them."

Mac winced.

"We couldn't move," Twilight continued. "We could talk, butâ€¦ well, two years in the dark, not moving, and running out of conversation topics after a whileâ€¦ it got to us. Well, except Pinkie, but you know what she's like. That's why she's doing her usual routine now instead of being here with us." She shook her head. "Needless to say, we're all more than a little stir-crazy, so hit us with your best shots!"

As Mac nodded and walked away to get their drinks, Rarity sat down on the stool next to Twilight's. "Really, darling? "Hit us with your best shots"?"

Twilight blushed. "I kind of came up with that one in a Hub loop a very, very long time ago, and I've been waiting for a chance to use it."

"Understandable."

* * *

>161.14

Twilight Sparkle Awoke, and found she had just finished reading a book on how Princess Luna (not Nightmare Moon, already a good sign) had banished the mad Princess Celestia to the sun.

She took the fact that she was still reading in broad daylight as a good sign, as well as her memories showing no sign of anything potentially worrying about Luna, who was still her mentor, or her behaviour.

So, baseline with some names moved about a little, it seemed. Nothing dangerous or worth getting concerned about at the moment.

And then a scroll appeared in front of her. Mildly intrigued, she unfurled it, and read.

"_Twilight. I'm Awake, and for reasons that cannot be explained within the length of a single letter, so is Nyx. We're fine. Yes, Celestia is imprisoned in the sun. And I am worried a thousand years with nothing to do but think may have given her some great ideas for pranks._

_Also, she could be slightly insane._

_Also also, Nyx requests that I tell you she sends her love._

_Luna._"

Twilight carefully double-checked the scroll, then carefully folded it up and turned in the direction of her library.

It was, she noted, a very good thing she hadn't made any plans for that Loop.

A few minutes later, after some checking with Spike, and arranging a few details for that Loop, along a quick triple-check to make sure everything was taken care of, Twilight teleported to Ponyville.

As the light dimmed down from her eyes, she saw the tell-tale signs of Rainbow Dash approaching.

"Hey, Twilight." The Pegasus declared, "What's up this Loop?"

Twilight quickly filled her and Spike in.

"So, Celestia's the one that got banished." Rainbow observed. "But otherwise same as normal, right?"

"So it would seem."

"Cool, cool." Rainbow nodded. "The rest of the girls are Awake by the way. I'm not sure if everyone else is, though."

"Alright then." Twilight said. "All we have to do is keep watch until Celestia "escapes"."

"Is she Awake?" Rainbow Dash asked.

"No idea. If she is, she's not giving any hints."

"Oh, great."

* * *

>The hours passed. Day turned to night turned to day again. The longest day of a thousand years came and passed with no dramatic alicorn appearances whatsoever. Or even the slightest hint anything was at all amiss.

Which naturally had everypony suspicious.

"Okay!" Twilight said, to the gathered element bearers. "Celestia is free, and if she is Awake she's not telling us. So, where would a (potentially) mad alicorn who's escaped from a thousand years imprisonment go?"

Several microseconds blinked past as the six ponies each realised there was only one solution.

A quick teleport later, and the six arrived on the front doorstep of the former palace of the pony sisters.

Carefully, and with Pinkie acting as the scouter for any traces of "fun", they tentatively made their way inside.

Fortunately, there were no pranks lying in wait. Instead, there was something much stranger.

Lo, and behold, there indeed was Princess Celestia waiting for them.

Aside from her mane and tail being alight, and the way her eyes were aglow with a fearful malignancy, she looked pretty sane.

Mainly because crazy ponies weren't usually perusing what looked like paperwork.

On seeing the six approaching, she smiled and waved at them.

"Good afternoon, everypony." She said. Twilight stopped and looked outside, at the dark purple night.

"It's nine in the evening." She declared. Celestia blinked, looked out of the nearest window, and then looked embarrassed. She then muttered something under her breath.

"Sorry." She said. "I got distracted with work."

"Celestiaâ€|" Twilight began, "You are Awake, aren't you?"

"Oh, yes, I am." Twilight allowed herself to relax slightly.

"It's justâ€|" Celestia paused, "I had some ideas I'd like to try out. Can we hold off the Element blasting for a few weeks?"

Twilight considered this for a moment. "Okay. Alright."

"Thank you." Celestia smiled, before it suddenly vanished and her visage turned serious.

"Now then, you fools, you may have your Elements"

"Overacting much?" Rainbow Dash asked. Celestia stopped what she was doing and considered this, before shrugging.

"Eh. I am supposed to be insane." She stopped, and looked about. "Where was I?"

"Fools." Fluttershy said.

"Thank you." Celestia smiled. "You may have your Elements, but I have my trusty minion! Sunset!"

At this, Sunset Shimmer strolled into the room, as if this was perfectly normal.

"Uhâ€|" Applejack began. Words apparently failed her, and she went for a good old fashioned "What?"

"Oh," Sunset said, "I woke up early. And I wasn't Luna or Nyx's student. And the portal was hidden somewhere. So I had to find something else to do, and then yesterday Celestia shows up and asks me if I want a job as an Evil Minion."

Celestia looked sheepish. "I was trying to assemble a group of counterparts, make a real show of it, but the interviews didn't go very well for some reason."

"I think," Sunset said dryly, "that had something to do with offering them tea."

"I was just being polite."

"And you scared them away. Evil maniacs don't offer prospective minions tea and biscuits!" Sunset retorted. "Now I have to do all the work."

"What work? We haven't actually done anything yet."

The yellow and red unicorn stopped for a moment and considered this.
"Trueâ€|"

At this, the two looked at the assembled group looking at them.

"Then we had better get started." Celestia declared, her horn suddenly coming alight. "See you in a few weeks, everypony!"

And with a flash of light, the two were gone, leaving the six ponies standing there. After a few seconds, everypony became aware of a strange noise coming from Twilight Sparkle. Rarity, being the closest, gingerly placed a hoof on her shoulder.

"Twilight, are you alright?" She asked.

"Justâ€|" Twilight announced through gritted teeth, "Peachy."

There was the tell-tale sound of two ponies teleporting into the room, followed quickly by planned speeches dying on the tongue (it was something you learnt after a good half a dozen thwartings).

"I'm going to guess things didn't go to plan." Twilight heard Nyx say.

"You sure you're alright?" Rainbow Dash asked Twilight. "You're going a funny colour."

After a few seconds of calculating the exact response, and what exactly Celestia's most likely plan was, Twilight could find only one answer.

"I need a drink."

* * *

>It took three weeks before the first sign of Celestia's schemes appeared.

Quite literally, a sign.

"I..." Twilight began, as she took in the sight. "I don't..."

"Yeah..." Nyx commented, "I'm kind of confused how this is supposed to work as well. Given, y'know..."

The "sign" in question was a large billboard, prominently displaying Celestia (mad glowing eyes and ethereal fire-y mane and all), along with seven words.

**Vote Celestia!** It proclaimed. **A Name You Can Trust!****

* * *

>161.15 (Detective Ethan Redfield)

"THE END IS NEIGH, THE END IS NEIGH!"

Countless ponies fled in all directions, running back and forth, out of and back into villages. Houses were ransacked as some tried to pack up and leave in a hurry, only to realize they were packing up the wrong house. Somehow, this ended with Golden Oak's Library being uprooted in the resulting madness and carried away to the furthest edge of Equestria...though that might have been Doctor Whooves at work upon later reflection. Right then though, Twilight stared down the centerpiece of the chaos, a trio of fillies that were giggling to themselves.

"What do you have to say for yourselves, girls," asked Twilight.

Scotaloo held up her hoof, "Ascending in the middle of Ponyville is fun!"

Twilight's glare grew heavier as the girls started rubbing their manes out of nerves. Sweetie Belle tried next, "Uh...randomly ascending in the middle of Ponyville might not have been the best idea."

Twilight rolled her hoof over, causing Applebloom to give a sheepish grin. "And...making a bet with the town that we'd become alicorn princesses before we'd ever get our cutie marks might surprise them just a bit."

Spike sighed and shook his head. "I think what really set them off was when Rainbow Dash joked about the Crusaders becoming alicorns would herald the end of the world as we knew it."

Twilight turned her glare on Spike. "It didn't help that they decided to ascend immediately after she said that."

* * *

>161.16 (Evilhumour, with Purrs's help)

Rubbing her face with a hoof, Twilight groaned as her tree spontaneously combusted yet again.

"_Why _did you blow up this time?" Twilight demanded rhetorically.

She hadn't expected an answer at all, and she certainly hadn't expected this one: "I want to get Senpai Yggdrasil to notice me, Twilight!" The loud, shrill voice pierced the air; Twilight recoiled as her tree shook violently. The flames, which had died down as quickly as they had sprung up, returned with an even greater intensity. "_NOTICE ME, SENPAI!_" the Golden Oaks wailed.

Twilight stared at the lovelorn library, muttered, "Screw this," and stormed off to the bar to get drunk and forget this had ever happened.

Once she had left, two mares cackled their way out from behind the tree.

"You do know that, once Twilight figures out what we did, we'll be sent straight to the moon, right, lovebug?" Trixie smirked at her marefriend, moving in for a nuzzle.

The changeling queen smirked right back. "Where there's nopony else but us for hundreds of thousands of miles? That's hardly a punishment at all."

"Very true." The showmare failed to stifle a squeak of laughter. "_The look on her face!_"

"Besides, it is her fault for banishing you to Tartarus." Chrysalis's façade of sternness crumbled into giggles. "No one messes with _my_ little pony!"

* * *

161.17 (Evilhumour)

"I'm going to be a mom?" Cadence repeated in the same stunned tone as before.

"Yes, as that's what the details are indicating," Sleipnir said to the two ponies sitting across of him. "While I do not know all the details for sure, the royal family is going to have a new member very shortly."

"That's," Shining licked his lips as his emotions were threatening to break out, pausing to gather his thoughts. "I don't know how to say it, but..."

"I'm going to be a mom?" Cadence was still in shock at the news, repeating the same words again.

"All we ever wanted since we've started to loop sir," Shining placed his hoof on his wife's arm, "We thought we'd have to wait until the loops _end_, but this is simply all of our dreams come true."

"I'm going to be a mom?"

"I know," Sleipnir said with a soft smile to the couple. "Although, your child more than likely will never loop, unless I get a _lot_ more details out of your Branch to support your child."

"Sir," Shining Armor shook his head, liquid pride flowing freely from his face. "The fact we finally _get_ to be parents, of our own _child_, _is_ our dreams come true. If we have to wait a few more eons to have our child to grow up, then so be it," Shining then smiled at his Admin. "Besides, I'm sure Caddy will love to be with her foal no matter what."

"Shining," Cadence's change of words caught Shining and Sleipnir's attention. Looking straight at her husband, she was crying tears of joy. "I'm going to be a mommy!"

Hugging his wife tightly, Shining nodded his head as the both of them cried, their greatest wish answered so unexpectedly. Sleipnir took his leave from the expecting couple, feeling better about his duty then he had for a very long time.

* * *

>161.18 (Scorntex)

_Funny_, Cadance thought. She'd been through this moment, this day so many times. Details varied, of course, as they so often did. Sometimes someone would be Awake, or there would be a newcomer in play, or someone wanted to test something out, or Twilight had gotten distracted with a project.

She'd have thought after all those times, all those tries, she'd have stopped feeling the way she did. Nervous, perhaps. Tense. And somewhere, deep down, buried beneath everything else there was actually regret.

For him.

For Sombra.

She knew why. Because she believed that at least one version of him had to have been a good pony at some point. Because she believed there must have been something, perhaps, worth saving in the darkened pit that was his heart.

But then she remembered that Loop. That one so long ago. The one she'd woken up as his... as _his._ In that twisted parody of Equestria, and the memories that came with it.

And suddenly all desires of forgiveness and redemption vanished.

She was tired. The result of playing things a little too closer to baseline for comfort meant he'd been hammering away at her and Shining's defences for days now, stronger than usual too. And getting the Crystal Ponies to cheer up and remember themselves had been proving difficult all of a sudden.

And then Spike and Rarity couldn't find the Crystal Heart anywhere.

The surprise had caused the shields to weaken, just enough for him to seep through. Crystal Ponies ran in a blind panic, as she slowly walked through the streets towards where he was hovering.

Those wild eyes focused on her. Maybe this Sombra still had a mind. Maybe he was the maddened beast of some Loops. The harsh growl that reverberated through the air as she approached wasn't much help.

"**You.**" Came his voice. The dark clouds of his form roiled.

"King Sombra," she declared. "I offer you one chance to surrender yourself."

He wasn't going to take it. Not that she truly had much hope for that, but there was always the chance.

The noise that could have been laughter, and the sneer on his face was his response.

"**Or what, little girl?**" There was something that could have been a snort. "**Will you fight?**"

"Yes." She said.

"**You can barely stand.**"

"I will still fight." She said. "I will protect these ponies from you."

He laughed. It wasn't, frankly, the best noise to ever hear.

"**Protect? How? I am a part of them. I am in their very hearts, I am in their souls. When they close their eyes, I am waiting for them. When they sleep, it is in my shadows. This is MY EMPIRE. MINE!**"

She stared at him, ignoring the aching of her legs with practiced ease. "No it isn't. This is not your empire, and these ponies do not belong to you!"

"**And how will you take it from me?**" Came the snarled response. Behind his visage, the dark clouds gathered together.

Cadance just smiled back, and with careful effort removed an item from her pocket. Sombra rumbled.

"**A ring?! That is how you fight? Jewellery?**"

She looked at the ring, hovering harmlessly in the air. Still looking as new as it had been the day she'd been given it. Not remotely one of her better days, frankly. The days when she still had that reputation. Mad Cadance. Strange Cadance. Obsessed with marriage and romance.

She was certain it wasn't the dark magics of Sombra, or her physical tiredness which brought up the unpleasant thoughts in her mind. The voice in the back of her head, asking if she was truly willing to risk it. A double-edged sword, just for the sake of spectacle.

They'd warned her. The ring tended to make those who wielded it obsessed with love. Blinded by it. Well, she knew about that.

Her friends were nearby. Her family. They would fight Sombra. The friends who never noticed, the voice said. The friends who never seemed to care when she'd started turning. It'd just been a joke. Silly Cadance. Funny Cadance.

Yeah, Cadance thought. That cinched it. She reached out to the ring.

I know who I am. I have friends who love me. Family that cares about me. A husband that adores me. Why should I be afraid when I have them?

The ring intuitively altered itself so it could be wielded. Instantly, she felt it, almost like she'd stuck her hoof in the electric socket of the universe. It felt strangely warm, and pleasant. Like a gentle kiss on a summer's day. Like watching the sunset. Like a thousand moonlit moments with Shining.

Like purest and truest love.

"I am Princess Mia Amore Cadenza of Equestria." She smiled, as the warm feeling spread through and from every part of her. "I welcome myself into the Star Sapphires."

There was a roar from Sombra, his horn glowing with an unpleasant light.

"**Words. Words and tricks.**" He growled.

"No." Cadance replied. "Love. Or did you think this mark on my flank was for show?"

A bolt of shadow reached out, and the ring reacted. The bolt smashed off a glowing purple shield construct. One she recognised as Shining's own cutie mark.

Well, she thought, it was hardly going to be anything else.

And then she felt it. The tug from the ring, a dozen, a hundred, even a thousand faint blips. What was it they'd said, those two, the day they'd saved her from that gem's control?

Goodness, it had been a long time.

Another shadow bolt smashed off of what looked like Nyx's mark. And it came back to her.

They'd said the ring didn't just draw its power from the love of whoever wielded it, but from those around them. However faint, however buried, the ring could recognise it.

And deep down inside them, each of the Crystal Ponies still had love inside them.

She couldn't believe she'd actually forgotten them.

A quick set of spells, and some moving out of the way as Sombra moved to move destructive magics, and she was ready.

"Everypony," she declared, her voice spreading through the whole city, "this is Princess Cadance. I know you're afraid. Afraid of Sombra, and what he did to you. What he's still doing to y- hey," she called out, as Sombra soared past her.

"Where was I? Oh, yes. But that fear is nothing. Because even after all Sombra has done, there is still love inside you. Waiting, sleeping." A large chunk of darkened crystal soared at her head, only to be smashed apart by the hooves of a giant glowing Shining Armor construct, which then leapt after the shadowy king.

"Even all he could do could not remove love from your hearts. Not completely, not forever. So now I ask, not as a Princess, or an alicorn, just as your defender, that you remember the love. Remember what Sombra could not destroy."

Suddenly there was a strange noise, and the feeling from the ring stopped. The giant Shining Armor vanished, and Sombra, realising his chance, cackled.

"Please..." Cadance finished, "do as you have always done."

There was a tiny, almost inconsequential noise from the ring. "_Ring charge: 0.00% remaining._"

Cadance stopped, and looked at it. Low battery power. That would... yes, she noted, because she'd never charged it.

Had there not been a mad tyrant looking to enslave a few ponies, she might have facehoofed. But she didn't have the time.

"**Your last chance failed you, little princess.**" Sombra's voice echoed. "**There is no love left in their hearts! The Crystal Heart you seek was destroyed!**"

"What?" Cadance blinked. Quite suddenly the fallen king stopped chortling, and looked at her like she'd grown a second horn.

"**Well, I'd have been damned stupid keeping it around, wouldn't I? I don't need it.**"

Cadance found herself grinning at that. Seconds later, she started laughing.

"**What?**" Sombra roared. "**What is so funny?**"

"I'll let you- heh - work it out." Cadance said, "sorry. Laughing. Not very appropriate in a fight. But just give it a second."

There was a light nearby. A strange bright blue one, that was moving. Cadance squinted (she was, after all, very tired), and could make out what looked like a head, and limbs somewhere in the glow.

It was a pony. Floating. Floating and glowing. Floating and glowing Crystal Ponies.

That was a new one.

Soon there was another light. And another. And another, and another and another.

"**What.**" Sombra rumbled.

"You broke the Heart." Cadance pointed out. "But you didn't destroy it. And you couldn't, not with a thousand spells."

"**What?!**" Sombra roared.

"Think about it. Crystal Heart? Crystal Ponies?" By now, the Crystal Ponies were all hovering over the city, all glowing brightly. "Never mind," Cadance sighed. "You'll never get it."

"**This...**" Sombra said, "**This cannot be!**"

"It can, actually." Cadance replied, as she looked down at the ring, trying to remember how to recharge it. There'd been an oath, hadn't there? How had it gone aga-

Ah, yes. Now she remembered. And how fitting.

"_For hearts long lost, and full of fright,_

_For those alone in blackest night,_

_Accept this ring and join our flight,_

_Love conquers all-_"

The light of the Crystal Ponies exploded outward, as Cadance finished.

"_WITH VIOLET MIGHT!_"

There was a wave of light, washing over everything, and a pained roar from Sombra. Over the din of that, and the rushing feeling in her ears, Cadance was certain she could hear the ring gently noting something about power levels.

She wasn't paying the greatest attention, as she suddenly felt so relaxed and calm and happy, and just had to close her eyes for a mome-

* * *

>Cadance awoke, in the palace, in her bed, with everypony standing over her. Shining Armor was smiling.

"Hi, honey." She grinned. He grinned right back. Then Cadance's brain pointed out there were others present.

"Sorry," she said, "I probably should've said something about that ear-"

Twilight shook her head. "Don't apologise, Cadance."

"How long-" She began. The answer was the same as it usually was.

"The Crystal Ponies?" She asked.

"Fine." Twilight said. "Better than fine, actually. But that's probably because they managed to recreate the Crystal Heart by themselves. I still don't know how they did that!"

"They won't let her study them." Spike cut in, "Or the heart, either, actually."

"But I did get a few tricorder scans!" Twilight said triumphantly.

"So, everything's alright?" Cadance asked. There were a few cautious glances.

"Yes?" Shining said, cautiously.

"What happened?"

"Oh, nothing." Twilight said hurriedly. "Definitely nothing dangerous or anything like that, it's just..."

"Yes?"

"The Heart." Shining said. Cadance raised an eyebrow.

"What about the Heart?"

* * *

>"It's... purple." Cadance noted, as she looked at the very purple indeed Crystal Heart. There wasn't much else to say. It was definitely purple.

"Looks pink to me." Rainbow Dash muttered.

"I think," Twilight said, ignoring her friend's comment, "It has something to do with that Star Sapphire ring of yours, something I'd incidentally also like to talk to you about by the way."

"My ring?" Cadance repeated.

"Yeah." Twilight nodded. "Something about using it in conjunction with the heart when it was forming and... I actually wrote a paper on it, if anyone's interested." She said, holding up a few pieces of paper. "Kind of rushed, but it's just preliminary..."

"Is it being purple a problem?" Cadance asked. Twilight looked about cautiously.

"Shouldn't think so." She shrugged.

"Alright then." Cadance smiled. "Anyone up for lunch? I'll buy."

There was a general nodding of heads at that. And the group moved off, Cadance remaining to look at the Crystal Heart for a moment.

"You okay?" Shining's voice cut through her thoughts, and she turned to him.

"Me?" She asked, "Yes, I'm fine."

She smiled warmly at him, and Shining smiled right back.

"I'm fine."

* * *

>

**Author's Note:**

161.1: How do you make a zebralicorn completely unremarkable?

161.2: Emphasis on "most".

161.3; What's a fourth wall?

161.4: Mega Man cross.

161.6: Well, there's several Princesses. Don't think any of them is a Bride, though. (Princess Bride)

161.8: Fail to fail.

161.9: Twilight Zone.

161.12: Literal slurs.

161.14: This is worse than usual! She's getting... electoral.

161.17: Something nearly every looper has long decided they will never hear.

161.18: It's better to light a lantern than curse the darkness.

169. Chapter 169

162.1 (Masterweaver)

Nightmare Moon cautiously prodded the pink pony that had just added a crater to her residence. She jumped back when the mare gave out a little groan.

"Ohhhh. Oh." After a moment, the mare managed to push herself up. "Oh. Ooooookay, well..." She glanced around. "Okay. Note to self: Do not tease Twilight about her laboratory with outdated scientific concepts. Oh hi Luna!" she added, waving at Nightmare Moon. "Good to see you!"

"...Who art thou and how hast thou the knowledge of my former name?"

"I'm a crazy baker and I know because we've met looooooads of times before. Ooo! While I'm here, want to help me plan a counter-prank on your sister's protege?"

* * *

>162.2 (Masterweaver)

"...not saying you're not strong, I'm just stronger. Plus, as a human I'd have a bipedal stance-"

"Look, Lemon, it says right here in the rules that shapeshifting isn't allowed!"

"During the match, Nyx. See here? 'So long as the two participants retain a reasonable form decided prior to the match-'"

"Well, yeah, but that was just so that Spike could keep tossing Rarity."

"And this is basically the same thing!"

"Equestria doesn't have humans most loops! There's no way the judges would rule a freaking Space Marine as reasonable!"

"So you do admit I'm stronger!"

"I admit you're bigger and most of that mass is muscle, but if we want to be allowed in the spouse toss competition-"

"I thought it was-?"

"Gender equality, Lemon, try to keep up."

* * *

>162.3 (Masterweaver)

Twilight looked about Canterlot Carousel with an odd feeling of nostalgia.

Rarity, awake, could easily achieve this with her foreknowledge and pocketed wonders. That, however, hadn't been the case in her first few loops. To find that she could " that she would have done it baseline...

The princess of friendship looked to the unawake unicorn. If she had to put her feelings into words... she might have compared it to a grandmother seeing her daughter earn their cutie mark. Well, great aunt, more likely.

She subtly unpocketed a few small cameras and plugged them around the building, setting them to record. Rarity would love to see what she accomplished. Only the experience of loops kept her from tearing up.

"If wearing a dress will help the shop," she finally managed, "then I say... stick a pin in it!"

* * *

>162.4 (Masterweaver)

Rainbow let out a melodramatic yawn, knocking on the door of the room. "Miss Spitfire, ma'am? What are you doing in there?"

"There's no time to explain-"

With a quiet roll of her eyes, Rainbow opened the door. "Listen, I know I'm only a reserve, but I do have personal experience saving Equestria from monsters. Whatever it is, I can either help or get somebody who can here in ten seconds. Twenty, tops."

The yellow mare paused, her jumpsuit half zipped. "...alright, alright. I just got a letter. My mother has Pegasitis, and the only known cure is the ice Iris, but they only grow on the crystal mountains."

"Ice Iris, where have I heard that- oh yeah!" Rainbow grinned. "My friend AJ's growing a couple of them."

Spitfire froze halfway out the window. "...wait, what?"

"Don't get me wrong, she comes from a long family of apple farmers and she is mostly about apples," Rainbow Dash explained. "Buuuuut a pony can only spend so much time around apples before they go a little bit crazy. She started branching out a while back, experimenting, ordering fancy seeds â€" I dunno if she's got any full-grown Ice Irises, but she ordered them a year ago, and she's just down in Ponyville."

"Oh thank Celestia." Spitfire let out a small sigh, turning to the other pegasus. "Can you take me to her?"

"Absolutely, ma'am." Rainbow saluted. "We can be there and back in twenty minutes."

Could she have exposed Wind Rider? Sure, he was right behind that curtain. But... well... she'd already beaten all his records ages ago. It wouldn't hurt to let the old fogey have some scrap of pride left.

* * *

>162.5 (Masterweaver)

Rarity pursed her lips as the film stopped rolling.

"...hmm."

Twilight turned to her. "Hmmm?"

"Hmm."

"Ah."

There was a quiet moment.

"I mean," Rarity began, "I should be proud of that achievement, no matter which version of me pulled it off. It's just... a boutique in Canterlot?" She waved a hoof over towards a locked door. "Compared to my material creations lab, I... well, it's just so..."

She shrugged, helplessly. "'Quaint' is the best word I can come up with..."

Twilight nodded. "No, I understand. It's like... looking at an old experiment. Do you know, way back when I started looping, I actually set up a number of them trying to figure the whole thing out? Only the most expensive, restricted set of equipment â€" Celestia back then was worried too, because neither of us had heard of anything like this..." She let out a little chuckle. "Fat lot of good that did. But... I still remember that time, and I still feel kind of nostalgic thinking about it."

"Hmm." Rarity nodded vaguely. "That's somewhat different though, it's something that... that happened, if that makes sense. Here, though, this is something that... will happen? Should happen?" She gave her companion a wry smile. "Did you invent a tense for this situation?"

"Future Possible tense, yes. Different from future impossible tense because this is something that would happen baseline without alteration. It's the si prefix."

"Yes, well, you get my point. I have a choice to make here â€" actually, a number of choices, what with Sassy Saddles apparently preferring trendy sales over fashionable ones â€" but the thing is..." Rarity rolled her hoof. "When the situation with Moondancer came up, you obviously _didn't_ want it to happen again, so you decided against, well, going baseline â€" outside unique circumstances. Here, this is something that I... might want? I honestly don't know. It's a net positive, but I... usually, when expansions come, there's something we want to reject. You know, turning Fluttershy into a vampire, letting Tirek rampage about â€" I'm just a little unbalanced at how good this whole thing went. Will go. Was recorded as it will go." She frowned. "One of these days I really must memorize that tense project of yours..."

"You're... actually surprised that a good thing happened to you?"

"Hmm, yes, that... would summarize it, I believe. It's rather more complicated than just that, of course, but that's one of the core... reactions I'm having." Rarity tapped her chin. "There's also the fact that I could easily run mass distribution and personalized wardrobes at this point, so it's sort of a silly expense â€" and, oh yes, what to do with Sassy Saddles. It's all rather... overwhelmingly underwhelming? I don't know how to put it into words, Twilight!"

"Why don't you just... think on it," Twilight suggested. "Run this loop baseline, see how you like it, and go from there?"

"...That is a good idea. I... suppose I'll do that, then."

* * *

>162.6 (continuation of 159.18) (Masterweaver)

Two days later, Sassy Saddles blundered into Berry's bar, wide eyed and stammering. "Ra... dre... ma... fire..."

Berry Punch sighed, gesturing for the unicorn to have a stool. "She was showing off, wasn't she?"

"Fire. Dress fire. Fwoosh, stitch stitch stitch." Sassy managed to get herself onto the stool. "Rarity, fire, stitch stitch. How? _How?_"

"She cheats, basically." Berry carefully selected one of her more balanced brews. "She once made a dress of her own feathers."

Sassy stared at her. "What... Rarity? Unicorn!"

"Currently."

For a moment, Sassy just stared at the bartender. Then she grabbed the drink with both hooves and gulped it down.

* * *

>162.7 (Masterweaver)

"...I apologize, but in truth I fear that I have misheard your words, my dear. Did you honestly just suggest that I take as a quest the opening of a laboratory in a mountainside city built upon a quarry?"

"Oh yes!" Sassy Saddles nodded vigorously. "Canterlot is severely lacking in the alchemical arts, and I felt a second location could expand your business quite a bit."

Zecora stared at her for a long time.

"...I'm sorry, but I believe my answer is no. I cannot see any reason to go."

* * *

>"...and I felt that the success you had in teaching your own students could be replicated tenfold in Canterlot-"

"Miss Saddles, I'm afraid I must correct you. My methods only work because I know my students so well. Attempting to divide my attention would only cause my work to suffer."

The unicorn's ears drooped. "Oh. Well, maybe I could learn your methods and put them in a book for other teachers-"

"My methods are tailored to my class, I'm afraid..."

* * *

>Diamond Tiara waited patiently.

"...Ah..." The unicorn recovered quickly. "I'm... terribly sorry, I wasn't expecting a master gemcrafter to be so young."

"I get that a lot."

Sassy glanced at the scroll in her magic, looked at Diamond again, then visibly adjusted something going through her head. "W-Well, I was thinking, maybe, you'd like to open a second store in Canterlot...?"

"Hmm." Diamond leaned back. "Well, as much as I would like to hobnob with the nobility, the fact is I'm an underage filly and I can't really do that without my father's permission. He is a businesspony, though, so it's possible... but a lot of his ventures are tied up in Ponyville." She shrugged.

"Ah." Sassy cleared her throat. "I... I see..."

* * *

>162.8 (Masterweaver)

Twilight warily approached the ring of caution tape and the thick metal dome set within. "Trixie... what's going on?"

"Oh, Discord and Pinkie decided to try to read each other's minds." Trixie gestured at the doom. "I provided the safety features is all."

Twilight blinked. "So... hold on, are you waiting for an explosion?"

"Kinda sorta. It's a stress test of my new shield fabrication method. Tectonium is great, but it's ludicrously hard to create and that's WITH Rarity's help." The blue unicorn shrugged. "See, this is technically pure steel, but created in such a way that-"

A stream of cookie dough suddenly burst from the dome, forming a small puddle between the two ponies. Twilight jumped back, but Trixie just shrugged and adjusted the caution tape to go around the new puddle. After a moment, a long green tentacle reached out, split in two to reveal a mechanical rotary sponge, and started to suck up all the wayward sweet.

"...well, that was five minutes to the first breach," Trixie quipped.

Twilight groaned. "I... I'm just going to leave you guys to it and hope this doesn't crash thheLrg:rlKSGTJKLR:Ghrbppp-0-

* * *

>162.9 (Masterweaver, Scorntex)

"...why do you wear a saddle all the time?"

Sassy levitated her clipboard down. "What?"

Rainbow pointed at the mare. "That saddle. You're always wearing it. I can get the dress, sure, but why the saddle? Is it just because it's in your name, or what?"

The unicorn sniffed primly. "I have my reasons."

"What are they?"

"This is a dress shop, miss Dash. If you're not here to purchase a dress, or talk to your friend, I'll have to ask you to leave."

"I'll buy a dress if you tell me why you wear a saddle."

Sassy rolled her eyes. "No deal."

Rainbow waved a hoof at Pinkie. "If you do not tell, my friend and I will return here, every. Day. Of the week."

"Frequent customers? That will encourage ponies looking for the popular dresses."

* * *

>162.10 (Masterweaver)

"Aren't they just so KIIIIUTE together?!" Pinkie squealed, hugging Rarity tightly. "Just look at them, sharing a sapphire-amethyst smoothie!"

The unicorn nodded vaguely. "I... suppose they are..."

"OOOOO! Does this make us sisters in law?!"

"I'd have to say no," Rarity replied slowly. "Looping and nonlooping versions of the same person don't really qualify as the same person and/or related."

Pinkie pouted for a brief second... before shrugging. "Eh, I'll get us all in a family some loop. But back to what matters right now-" She gestured through the window. "SO CUTE! SO SO CUTE!"

"Yes, yes, your sister and Spike are cute. Maybe I'll design them something... before the loop ends..."

* * *

>162.11 (Anon e Mouse Jr., Gamerex27, Masterweaver, ORBSyndicate, Scorntex)

"...and that is how Starlight Glimmer managed to not only halt the conversion bureau, but become a hero of two worlds in the process," Twilight finished.

"Huh." Rainbow tapped her chin. "Makes sense, all things considered. Still, pretty epic. Taking on Xenolestia like that, she had to have some pretty big brass balls."

"Literally _and _metaphorically!" Pinkie quipped.

"She goes against a basic tenant of Equestrian society in _baseline_, Dash. I may not like her, but I've never doubted her sheer determination." Twilight sipped at her mug, glanced around the bar, and a sly grin formed on her face. "Actually... New game. What is the weirdest way you've seen a baseline villain become heroic?"

Chrysalis held up a hoof quickly. "Corollary, villain must not be Awake! Otherwise everypony would be pointing at me and/or Discord."

"Lord Sombra versus the Fiendish Minions of Orthodontistry!" Sweetie Belle declared.

"Lord?" Luna asked.

Celestia stared quizzically at her sister. "You're more concerned about that than evil dentists?"

"... Maybe."

"Tirek ate Sombra." Berry Punch said. "I may or may not have drugged him with something."

"Sombra ate Tirek." Cadence countered.

Discord jumped up between the two of them. "Discord ate every villain simultaneously!"

"Discord!" Chrysalis yelled. "Not Awake!"

"Oh it wasn't me. I was replacing Starlight. A most interesting experience..."

"Being Starlight or being eaten by yourself?"

"Running that little equality town inside my own stomach, actually. But thank you for playing. You win a kumquat."

"There was th' time Starlight Glimmer put her plans into action early," Mac put in. "She snuck into Canterlot and stole Celestia and Cadance's Cutie Marks, an' Twilight's too because she heard 'em talkin' about what it meant, then put all three of 'em into some kind of magically-induced coma while they were too stunned to fight back. After that, she somehow persuaded all th' nobles that th' Princesses and Twilight's own Cutie Marks turned against 'em for bein' so powerful, and that all Cutie Marks would do the same thing some day, unless they got rid of 'em. Seein' what'd happened to their princesses, everypony was too busy fallin' in line to realize they'd been suckered." He shook his head. "Fortunately, a few of us were smart enough to figure out somethin' weren't right, so we painted over ours to make it look like she'd zapped us. We kept our individuality, an' laid low as we tried to figure out how to stop her."

"A few years later, when Nightmare Moon came back, she found Starlight in charge of a nation full of dull, "equalized" ponies, and was so disgusted with what she saw, she almost went back to the moon then and there. But before she could go, Apple Bloom found her, saw she still had her Cutie Mark, and begged her to help. She took her back to th' farm, where we told her about Starlight and how she'd taken over. I Woke Up about then, right as Apple Bloom was beggin' her to stop that maniac an' bring back the Cutie Marks, 'cause what she was doin' jes' tweren't natural." He chuckled.

"Sure as shootin', Nightmare Moon couldn't help herself when she saw the look on that little filly's face. She agreed to help, then went an' spied on Starlight to find out exactly how she'd stolen all the Cutie Marks. Once she found what she was lookin' for, she freed the Marks, banished Starlight to Tartarus for her crimes, an' even woke up her sister, Cadance an' Twilight. When Princess Celestia found out what Nightmare Moon had done, she gave her back her throne right then an' there, without even tryin' to have her de-Nightmared. 'An she made a new national holiday in her honor too, to celebrate how she'd given Equestria back its freedom."

There was a long silence.

"That... is quite possibly the most terrifying thing I have ever heard," Celestia managed. "Twilight, are you sure we shouldn't make stopping her a priority at the start of every Loop?"

"Positive," Twilight told her. "I'm just glad Luna - er, Nightmare - was willing to wake us up after stopping Starlight that time. I would not have enjoyed spending the rest of that Loop Awake, but still in a coma."

There was a pause as a few ponies tried to digest this.

"So, anypony else got one?" asked Rainbow Dash.

"Tirek Sunstar?" Pinkie suggested. "Although, I don't know if that qualifies. He was basically a theme-flipped Nightmare Moon, and his brother Tirac was basically a theme-flipped Celestia..."

"And that was a fused loop," Rarity pointed out.

"Tirek, bane of the Derp." Derpy offered.

Everyone begged her for more information.

"My cutie mark that time was entropy, and everywhere I touched literally exploded. It made sleeping quite a problem." She slurped her drink. "I tried sleeping while flying, but that never worked. Anyway, I became a menace. Completely by accident of course. But I kept just.. exploding into places. I completely leveled Applejack's orchard multiple times, somehow managed to blow Cloudsdale into orbit, and causing half of Canterlot to just... vanish."

Anyway, years of this I did sorta manage to not run into things as much, though I kept blowing things up. And nobody could keep me still because the chains would just explode. Then Tirek came, on his rampage, ready to eat all the magic in Equestria. He ate mine removing my ability to explode things, and everyone simply loved him, wanting to become his personal army for conquering. Pinkie actually threw him a party, which destroyed the one building I had somehow managed not to touch that entire loop."

Twilight rammed her horn into the counter. "The library."

"Yeah. Sorry. I tried. Anyway Tirek wasn't actually redeemed... he kinda just decided that he could rule as a hero. The elements eventually did drive him out, though i don't remember exactly how... I was sleeping. I slept till the end of the loop. I didn't wake up until Rainbow unleashed the sonic rainboom next loop."

"There was this one time the Flim Flam brothers mosied over to Sombra's place an' set up shop there," Applejack recalled. "Ah didn't really expect them to actually hire any of them crystal ponies. Or bring along Iron Will to give seminars to increase productivity. Their work ethic an' confidence got so strong, they just up and bucked Sombra out of the kingdom when he tried to come on back."

"...wait, were they trying to help, or were they just doing their usual dirty business?" Ivory Scroll asked.

"Hay if Ah know. Ah think they just ended up helpin everypony by accident: probably just wanted to get some cheap labor, make cheap cider, and set up a corporate town. That'd explain why Cadence kicked them out of the kingdom once she took the throne."

The mayor shivered. "Urgh. There was this one time I Looped in as a mayor of a company town in the Gilded Age. That was horrifying, what went on there. And it took years to organize a union and find enough loopholes in the contract to kick the corporation out of there."

"Okay, so." Sunset put down her mug. "I was going with a whole 'redeem the sirens' path, not too unusual, and I managed to get them good and back to Equestria shortly before Discord's release. Now, what I expected was them to use their singing ability, you know, some sort of tune about 'the power of harmony,' or 'chaos and entropy,' or something."

"So?"

"So... in that loop, siren and seapony were synonymous. As in, Sirens were specifically seapony warrior legends." She winced. "They quite literally drowned Discord in his own chocolate milk. And then later, washed away the changelings, and then they trapped Sombra in liquid crystal-no idea how that worked-basically, the whole loop was spent with them laying a watery smackdown on every antagonist."

* * *

>162.12 (Masterweaver)

"Al_right_, I've put this off long enough."

Twilight revved up her chainsaw, glaring at the crystal map in front of her. "I can get you hiding your secrets when you were a lockbox. I can understand that as a fount of missions for us, you're supposed to have a mysterious connection to the powers of fate. But I am a scholar, I am a scientist, I am a tree damn wizard, and I will NOT be mocked by hidden knowledge inside my very own home! So," she finished, lowering the chainsaw slowly, "it's time to see just how you tick. OWL, activate recording. Twilight Sparkle log, experiment HCM 1, beginning initial incision in three, two, onegtklab;dfjgh;parwu90tgeajlb/dfkg0:NUDSO;kflehsnd/lgk-

* * *

>Twilight Awoke in Unicornia, glancing around and giving a little groan. "Really? G3 again?! REALLY?!"

She kicked at the ground. "Ugh. Fine. Fine, whatever."

* * *

>162.13 (Masterweaver)

"Twilight?"

"Rarity, just ask. Just ask."

"Why is it that everyone is an alicorn this loop? I mean, even the sheep!"

"I'm going to blame Loki, because Loki."

* * *

>162.14 (Masterweaver)

"Hey Twi?"

"Yeah Dash?"

"SPOILER ALERT!"

"...wait wh-?"

At this point, Scootaloo clipped the alicorn with one of her plane's wings. "Oh geeze! Sorry bout that!"

* * *

>162.15 (Masterweaver)

"...Rarity?"

"Yes Applejack?"

"Coco said them Method Mares were... professional actors?"

Rarity sighed. "I've checked. They're... not celebrity tier, but they are top bracket."

Applejack trotted down the lamplit street, musing to herself. "...that's what passes for acting in Manehattan?"

"That's what passes for acting in Equestria, darling." Rarity's ears drooped. "The fact of the matter is... well, ponies in general aren't very good at becoming roles that aren't them. Lying, sometimes, but wearing masks?" She shook her head. "Of all our arts, theatre is the one that suffers the most. I honestly can't tell if our hokey movies are a result of our relative tech level not allowing much theatrical comparison, or if we're really that naive compared to other loops."

The farm mare gave her a look. "Speaking from experience?"

"I used gemstones in the costumes for a children's play. Yes, I was just a foal, but... our entire culture has a lack of subtlety, preferring explosions of color and shapes to fades in and out. It's... I don't know how to describe it, I mean I do love it but just limiting myself to one style?!" The unicorn swung a hoof at the lamplight. "It's... it's like artistic light pollution! These streetlamps are everywhere and ponies like them, but the stars are drowned out!"

"Huh. You feel pretty passionate about this, don'cha?"

"Sometimes. Sometimes I just feel... drained." Rarity chuckled wryly. "It's an artsy thing, I suppose. But, yes, there are some actors in Equestria that are... definitely better than the Method Mares, but they're considered avant garde."

* * *

>162.16 (Masterweaver)

Twilight grinned to herself as her comm beeped. She had a good idea who was on the other side, and what they wanted to talk about.

"Ye-low, this is Twilight Sparkle, if you don't know what you're handling please bring it to my palace-"

"Ya'll could have told me Mac was going to try to join me in the social!"

"Oh come on, Bloom, it's an expansion!" Twilight adjusted the comm, carefully pouring some chemicals into a few beakers. "Surprises for all! And he did look good in a dress-"

"He's going to wear a _dress?!_" There was a low groan on the other end. "Ah thought he was just gonna be himself! Ah only realized what was going through his head a minute ago!"

"Trust me, you do not want to miss your dear sweet _cousin_ Orchard Blossom. Quite a sight, if I do say so myself."

"Nnnnnnnrgh-Ah guess at least Applejack's not Awake for this..." There was a sigh. "Shame Rainbow Dash is though."

"It's not really that bad," Twilight pointed out. "I mean, we're technically a semi-nudist society with clothing generally being considered an affection of personality rather than a cultural requirement. Really, the only reason we as loopers are unnerved by the concept is because of our frequent interaction with humans and other such clothing-oriented groups."

There was silence on the other end.

"Plus," Twilight added, "he really pulls off the look."

"Alright, that's it, Ah'm hanging up now." With a click, the comm fell silent.

Twilight shrugged, turning back to her beakers. "She'll get over it."

* * *

>162.17 (Masterweaver)

"...wait, seriously?"

Berry Punch nodded. "Seriously! They let me race with my own daughter!" She paused and frowned for a moment. "They wouldn't let me join with Cheerilee, though. It makes sense, since the event's more for the foals, but she's the pony who's _actually_ my sister-"

"Well, I know they let Celestia and Luna join sometimes," Twilight mused, "but that could be just because they're princesses and whatnot..."

"You know, though, I was thinking." Berry leaned over the table. "What if, next loop, we got all our foals together for sister-hoof shenaniganery? Like, you could enter with Nyx, and Zecora could enter with Silver Spoon â€" I don't know who Diamond would enter with, exactly, but you get the idea."

After a moment, Twilight nodded. "That's actually a pretty good idea! Maybe we can talk to the CMC to see if they'll mix up their partners too..."

"Oh, that could be fun."

* * *

>162.18 (Masterweaver)

Silver Spoon hummed to herself as she set out her Ping, smiling at the number she received back. A lot of loopers were Awake, which was always good. Twilight would certainly be happy-

Her ear perked as she felt a shift in magic right outside her door. She turned to it with some confusion, but smiled broadly when she opened it. "Diamond! Good to see... you?"

Diamond Tiara sighed. "...so. Expansion. My mother... has, uh, stabilized."

"Oh my gosh, Diamond, I'm so... happy for you?" The silver kelpie (currently) frowned as she took in her friend's drooping ears. "...is... isn't that a good thing?"

"...her name's Spoiled Rich."

Silver winced. "Oh."

"She's a socialite. High class."

"Ah."

"...she doesn't like it... when I fail..."

Silver Spoon stepped to the side quietly, gesturing for Diamond to step in. The pink filly trudged through the door.

"It's just... Twilight did warn me, but I didn't... I didn't want to believe it. I mean, before, she could be dead, or divorced, or- or whatever, and I didn't like it, but I treasured... I treasured the times we had together, the loops where she still existed. I liked my mother, no matter who she was, because... because luck of the draw meant she was usually, you know, a mother. And now..." Diamond sat down. "And now I have Spoiled Rich, and she's... she's what made my baseline self so... you know. And the thing is, I look at her and... I don't know. I don't feel like she's my mother. Not like the ones I had before, you know? She's... I don't..."

Without a word, Silver Spoon shut the door, shifted her body, and lay down next to her friend.

Diamond blinked as a big fluffy tail wrapped around her. "...fox? Really?"

"Trust me, squirrels at this size look creepy." Silver nudged her gently. "Now shut up and enjoy the warm fuzzies."

The filly managed a small smile, for the briefest of moments. Then she sighed.

It would be a long while before either of them moved.

* * *

>"Aha!"

Nyx strode into the bedroom, pointing at the other four fillies and large grey fox. "Momma said you'd probably be here, and she was right! You're all here!"

"Yeah..." Sweetie Belle rubbed the back of her head. "Getting cutie marks in baseline is... cool and all, but when we figured what Diamond would have to go through-"

"Yeah, I know she soloed it and you three went through it unawake. And you know what? Comforting her, that's a good thing, props to you lot. But I have a problem with this situation."

There was an awkward pause.

Diamond Tiara eventually emerged from the fluffy tail. "Um... there are a number of problems, actually-"

"I am the literal manifestation of a goddess's self-loathing," Nyx continued, "mixed in with some rage and a minor guilt complex. That means that I get to be the brooding darkmare. If anypony else is angsting more than me, something is seriously wrong! So you know what, we are going to address your problems head on, and get through this together as quickly as possible, because otherwise I won't be able to build my moon death ray in good conscience!"

There was another awkward moment.

Diamond's face twitched. She snorted. She tried, very desperately, to keep a serious face.

Then she just gave up and fell over laughing.

Sweetie Belle rolled her eyes. "Nyx, you're Honesty, I'm Laughter, get it right." There was a big grin on her face regardless.

* * *

>162.19 (Masterweaver)

"Three ponies got almost the same cutie mark simultaneously?!"

Twilight nodded. "Yes, Moondancer. It was really quite-"

"Do you know what this MEANS?!"

"...well, depending on who you ask, it could mean that they're good friends, the world's largest cutcenara, that fate has a sense of-"

"THIS CALLS FOR SCIENCE!"

Fortunately for everypony, the loop ended three minutes later.

* * *

>162.20 (Alexrior, geohikari152, Hvulpes, Masterweaver, Purrs)

Twilight gave out a groan of frustration as she wore yet another rut into her library. Her mentor, who was visiting at the moment, was watching curiously from her spot.

"Twilight, what is the matter?" Celestia asked, lifting a cup of tea to her lips in her usual serene manner.

The lavender unicorn huffed. "I just realized that, in all this time in the loops, I never did find out how Sunset knew to enter the portal, and how she managed to figure out I had a crown! It's been nagging me for ages!" She huffed again.

"Actually, it's rather simple," Celestia said after a small sip of her tea.

Twilight turned, raising her eyebrow at her mentor. "Oh?" she asked with interest.

"I used the journal to contact Sunset. I wrote her all the time, she just never answered. How else did you think she knew to steal the Element of Magic in baseline?"

Twilight blinked. "...That... actually explains a lot."

* * *

>Later...

"...so when Celestia told me that, it's as if everything made sense again." Twilight paused. "Wait. Suppose you got all your information from there, how the hay did you know what my crown looked like?"

Sunset shrugged. "I didn't."

"Wait, what?"

"I simply theorized that the new Fall Formal crown was a counterpart item, and got lucky when my hypothesis that it actually corresponded to the Element of Magic turned out to be true."

Twilight blinked again. "Huh." She thought for a moment. "Wouldn't that mean there would be some necklaces to be counterparts to the other Elements of Harmony?"

"Yep. But those are for the Fall Formal Queen's court. For some reason, they get picked the day after the main dance. Letting somebody be Queen for a Day or something like that," explained Sunset. "By the way... Applejack, Fluttershy, Rarity, Rainbow Dash and Pinkie Pie did get them, and each of them got the correct necklace," she added.

"Actually, that sort of makes sense. Hey, with me being a Princess in Equestria and a Fall Formal Queen here, with counterparts of my friends being my Court, wouldn't that make my friends in Equestria my Ladies in Waiting or something?"

As Twilight finished speaking, a squeal of delight (which kind of sounded like a certain fashionista) echoed from the statue at Canterlot High. Both humans raised their eyebrows.

"Well, Rarity sounds happy about that," Twilight commented. "How she heard it from another universe... no, not again. That way leads to Pinkie Sense Madness," she finished.

* * *

>162.21 (Masterweaver)

Twilight Sparkle was halfway to her tower when space rippled in front of her, a ragged portal spitting out a familiar pink pony. "Hey, Pinkie, what's-s-?"

"Twilight!" Pinkie grabbed her friend's shoulders tightly. "Have you gone through the recent expansion?!"

The unicorn smiled, rolling her eyes. "Yes, Pinkie. I have. You don't need to worry about keeping it secret from me."

"OH THANK EVERFREE." Pinkie collapsed on the ground with a huge smile. "You know it was really hard with that stealth anchor, I just don't think I could have kept myself from blurting out-"

"Oh, but Cadance hasn't yet," Twilight added as an afterthought. "I wanted to surprise her, you know?"

Pinkie's grin froze.

Very calmly, she stood up, turning her gaze to the purple unicorn and staring at her for ten whole seconds.

"...Excuse me for a second, would you please?" She stepped back through the portal.

Nightmare Moon, busily preparing for her soon-to-be escape, jumped suddenly as an unholy scream reverberated throughout the ground she was standing on. "What in Mother's name was that?!"

* * *

>162.22 (Evilhumor, Masterweaver)

"Wait a minute, why's everypony so worried?" Vinyl asked. "I mean, new baby, yeah, but the kid's not coming for a few expansions or so, plenty of time to prepare-"

She was promptly assaulted by a bevy of whatever objects the loopers had on hoof.

"Whoa, Shiny!" Cadence shrieked as she tossed across the room, landing square on the poor unicorn of Blunt Honesty.

"Careful!"

"Sorry Caddy!" Her husband blushed, rubbing his neck. "Gut reflex and all..." He let out a trail of embarrassed chuckles, eyes darting to the side.

"Very cute and all, but would someone get her off of me!" Vinyl squeaked from under the expecting mare.

* * *

>162.23 (Masterweaver)

"So... you couldn't meet me in person?" Trixie asked the changeling drone, leaning back in her chair. "I'm hurt, Chrysy, really I am."

The drone had the decency to look embarrassed, fiddling with a menu. "Yeah, I... well, I kind of feel the need to stay around Cadance right now."

Trixie rose an eyebrow. "I thought you didn't like taking her place anymore--"

"No no, it's not that. It's just â€" there's this new expansion, and she, well, she found out she was pregnant--"

"OHMYGOSH!" Trixie grinned widely. "REALLY?! THAT'S INCREDIBLE!"

"Yes, it's amazing, I get it, but she doesn't give birth before the loop ends!"

Trixie blinked. "...I... thought that was impossible, though--"

"It's a bit of a loophole," the drone hedged. "She is, eventually, going to give birth â€" Sleipnir came down to personally assure her of that â€" but at the moment, she ends the loop still... you know, hormonal. And it kind of carries over..." The drone waggled a hoof. "I personally think it's psychosomatic, but the point is that for the foreseeable future, Cadance is going to end almost every loop with cravings and possibly mid moodswing. Kind of a jarring adjustment, if you catch my meaning."

The unicorn sighed. "Yeah, I have loop memories from variants where Silver's my daughter. Or Twilight, sometimes. I can see how that would be a problem." She gave the drone a glare. "Still doesn't explain why you need to be there personally, Chrysalis."

"It's a personal touch, I'll admit," the drone allowed. "But you know, better that I handle this directly rather than let, say, a mindless drone do it. And yes, the drones are mindless this loop, I checked..."

* * *

>162.24 (Masterweaver)

Chrysalis giggled good naturedly, sipping her tea. "I can imagine!

The poor dear must have been so confused..." She tilted her head curiously. "...How many Ichigos are there across the multiverse?"

"Oh, quite a few I'd imagine. From what I've heard, the shinto pantheon was quite imaginative back in the day-" Fluttershy frowned as the teapot she held failed to produce any tea. "Oh, conifer. All out already? This is so embarrassing, that was my last batch."

Leman Russ, currently a cute pegasus colt, rolled his eyes. "I told you we were running low yesterday."

The queen of changelings chuckled. "Don't worry about it, Fluttershy, I don't mind."

"Oh, but it... it just doesn't feel right to have a tea party without, you know, tea." Fluttershy stood up awkwardly. "I'm terribly sorry about this... would you two mind if I went to the market and bought a couple more brews?"

"If you insist," Chrysalis replied with a reassuring smile. "Me and Leman can just talk about things while you're gone, how the Warp is doing these days, that sort of thing."

The pegasus colt shrugged. "Same old blood and chaos. Don't worry, little mother, we'll be alright."

Fluttershy smiled gently. "I'll only be a few minutes. Try not to kill each other," she joked as she left the cottage.

Leman chuckled as the door shut. "Kill each other... That'd be pretty difficult. I mean, no offense, Chryssi, but you're a stealthy kind of mare, and I was made to battle demons. If we did fight, only one of our deaths would be ensured."

Chrysalis smiled and put her teacup down. "I know. That's why I laced my drink with sedative venom and swapped our cups while you weren't looking."

"Hahaha... wait. Wh-?"

The next thing that Leman knew, a holey limb had pinned his entire upper body against the wall and the changeling's face had morphed into a rictus-inducing snarl.

"Listen to me very closely little man," Chrysalis growled, "because I am NOT going to be repeating myself. It doesn't matter whether a person's existence is carefully constructed and plotted out or if they were just some freak accident, nobody is meant to exist. They make meaning out of their own existence through their own actions. So maybe your damned emperor built you up to be a glorious warrior for his little blue planet, so what? Most people are just born like normal; heck, me and Nyx break baseline just by being ourselves. And you know what? We're better for it. The world is better for it. The damned multiverse is better for it!"

She leaned into the struggling colt's face. "So if I ever hear you said anything about people who 'weren't meant to exist' again, I will personally go up to the chaos gods and have them Pinkie Pie swear to torment you for ten loops straight. At minimum. The only reason I haven't done so yet is because you were at least smart enough to realize you were in the wrong and somehow, _somehow,_ got Nyx to forgive you. Do I make myself completely and totally clear?"

"Y-Yes," croaked Leman. It was definitely a croak from lack of air, and not a squeak of terror. "C-Can you put me down now please?"

Chrysalis glowered at him for a moment.

Then she let him drop to the floor, wheezing for breath.

"Well, I feel much better now, getting some of that off my chest." Her face once again a friendly mask, Chrysalis helped the colt up to his feet. "I'll admit I'm still sorely tempted to tear you apart and pummel you into oblivion, but that would be quite rude and honestly I think I got my message across. I think I'll head back to the badlands now and make some red dragons black and blue, they're really a terrible breed this loop. And no," she added over her shoulder, "you _can't_ come."

"G... got it."

Fluttershy opened the door. "You wouldn't believe the luck I had! I managed to snag the last box!" She held up the brew with glee.

Chrysalis gasped. "Oh, it's my favorite blend too! But... I'm terribly sorry, Fluttershy, some queenly business just came up and I'm afraid I'll have to dash." She leaned down and nuzzled her. "Save it for next week, alright?"

"Oh, certainly." Fluttershy stepped aside, letting the changeling fly out. "Goodbye, Chrysalis, have a nice day!"

She turned to Leman... and frowned. "Um... Leman? Are... are you feeling okay?"

The colt gave her a long, flat look. "...I'm going to go take a nap."

* * *

>162.25 (Masterweaver)

Well chlorophyll Twilight grumbled

Whats the matter asked Spike Then he blinked Whoa this is weird

Theres no punctuation this loop Twilight replied Which is really confusing because I dont see how it could logically affect us like this

Twilight Spike interrupted Remember what happened when you questioned the lack of tactile telekinesis

Twilight sighed Alright Ill drop it for now but I cant be blamed if the loop crashes anyway

* * *

>162.26 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Hey, Diamond?"

Diamond Tiara looked up from her homework. "Hey, Twilight. What's up?"

"New Loop expansion. And..." Twilight took a deep breath as she stepped into the room, closing the door behind her. "I need to apologize to you."

"What for?"

"Back in my first few centuries of Looping, I thought the only thing you were good for was a bad example." Twilight bowed her head. "But when you actually became friends with Apple Bloom and started Looping, I changed my mind. I still thought your Unawake self was only good for being a bad example though, and that she'd probably never change. Now..."

Diamond turned and walked up to her. "Twilight?"

"She's changed. We found out why she was such a brat, and then she genuinely turned over a new leaf and became a better pony. And it's not just a variant - it's a baseline expansion. It's something I never thought could happen, even after knowing the Looping you for so long, and... well, I'm sorry I doubted you."

Diamond took a deep breath. "Twilight?"

"Yes, Diamond?"

"Apology not accepted. Because quite frankly, you have nothing to apologize for." She blushed. "I'll admit, I'm surprised to hear it too. But knowing what I was like in baseline, I can't blame you for thinking I'd never change without Discord or some other super-powered being intervening."

Twilight smiled. "Thank you, Diamond. Thank you." She pulled the little filly close and hugged her. Then, she whispered.

"So, want to see pictures of the girls' faces when they got their baseline Cutie Marks for helping other ponies, including you, realize their own talents and what their existing Cutie Marks mean?"

When Diamond Tiara's eyes widened and a loud "WHAT!" echoed through the room, Twilight was glad she'd worn specially enchanted earplugs for this, and that she'd soundproofed the room when she'd stepped in. And that she knew the "memories to photos" spell, because the look on Diamond Tiara's face this moment? It was definitely going in her latest album.

* * *

>162.28 (Alex Prior, Anon e Mouse Jr., banjo2E, Evilhumour, Gamex27, Masterweaver, wildrook; edited by Masterweaver and Anon e Mouse Jr.)

* * *

>Cadence perked up.

"Oh, I got one. What's the strangest/weirdest/most mind-boggling thing Twilight Velvet has done/you've seen her do throughout the loops? Variant or otherwise? And please, keep it foal-friendly."

Twilight groaned. "First my library, then my mother. My family must _love_ picking on me."

Nyx, who was sitting next to her, patted her hoof. "I already apologized for that, Mom."

"I know, Nyx. But stillâ€¦" She looked at Cadance coolly.

Cadance shrugged. "It's nothing personal, Twilight. But I just came from a Loop where Velvet was my magic teacher when I first moved to Canterlot, and it got me thinking about what other variations of her might be like."

Twilight pondered. "Okay, I can understand that, but I reserve the right to get ridiculously drunk if they get _too_ weird. Carry on."

Hearing that, Vinyl grinned. "There was that one time she decided to adopt the entire Dragon Migration."

Twilight's eyes narrowed before she slammed her drink back. "Worst part, she succeeded! You can guess what happened to my poor, poor library when the family came to visit..."

"That explains why Garble sent me his entire hoard as an apology," Spike said to the others. "Crazy enough, there were two Rarities... one of them was a Dragoness."

"Mikasa glitch, darling," Rarity replied.

Rainbow Dash then gave it a thought. "Does working with A.K. Yearling count?" she asked Twilight.

"No, because that's mostly every other Loop," Twilight replied. "Or BEING A.K. Yearling."

"Oh. Nuts."

"Underground Wrestling Champion," Cheerilee put in. "At least... that's how I met her through Cloverleaf."

Nyx raised a hoof. "I remember a human variant Loop with Tibbles as our anchor. Luna was my only parent - bio-dad took off before I was born - and Grandma was her best friend. I knew her as "Auntie Velvet" once I found out about her when I was a teenager."

Twilight blinked. "I don't see anything strange about that."

"She was also an ambulatory human skeleton who came back to life to save Mom-Luna from a pedophile when she was six, and had been living in our attic ever since."

"Okay, that IS strange."

Nyx nodded. "G-mom and G-dad figured she was either a really skinny zombie, or a ghost haunting her own skeleton. Mom-Luna preferred the "haunted skeleton" theory."

Luna nodded. "It does make sense. Speaking of Velvet though, there was this one Loop she switched places with my unAwake sister."

Celestia had the grace to blush. "Actually, I was Stealthy that Loop."

Rainbow Dash set her mug down. "Okay, I got a different one. You know how Soap Opera Loops usually go? Well, in the last one I was Awake for, Twilight Velvet was behind everything. The multiple time travelers, the changeling circus, the release and sealing of Tirek, all of my pregnancies before and after my sex change operation, and the bucking founding of Equestria... she masterminded it all. She wasn't even an alicorn or anything, she just had the special talent of actually understanding what the hay was going on!"

Twilight faceplanted into the table and groaned. "I remember that one. There was exactly one thing she wasn't behind-she apologized over Hearth's Warming dinner for not realizing the bomb in the orphanage was a fake. The real one had been planted in my library the whole time."

"That explains why there was a secret agent dove in the lasagna," Pinkie Pie replied.

"One moment, please," Isabeau said, grabbing a scroll from her Pocket, and fumbling it open with her clumsy, finger-less hooves. "Since my fellow Anchors are typically scattered across the Multiverse after the Edit, we have given each other a list of responses to drinking games that we are to read in their steads when they are absent."

"...you don't hafta be so formal, sugarcube," Applejack said. "Yer in a bar, hun."

"Old habits die hard, as they say," the Samurai said, shrugging. "Hm... Question Six hundred ninety six thousand, nine hundred and sixty nine (Twilight facehooved in the background, muttering about tired jokes): questions in regard to incidents with Equestrians, subset 107: Twilight Velvet slash Twilight's Mom."

She read on. "Flynn: 'She was my steed during one Loop. Mikado was much larger that time, so each Samurai was assigned a pony to carry them to and from missions.'"

"Wasn't that the one where Pinkie baked a pie bomb and delivered it right to the monastery?" Shining Armor asked, looking at Pinkie Pie hesitantly.

She shrugged. "Hey, no one died from it. And I filled it with that anti-magic cream, so those meany-pants Archangels' cover was blown."

"_And_ Mikado fell into anarchy as a result, leading to mass deaths," Isabeau recalled, sighing. "Inevitabilities regarding Amala asides, let us continue. Maya: 'Along with all of the other primary Elements of Harmony's mothers, Nyarlathoetep stole her form to use in his 'Great Mother' body when we fought him in our first Equestrian Loop.'"

"WHAT?!" Fluttershy screamed, then winced at her unusually loud tone. "Oh... I forgot that this is a _different_ Nyarlathoetep. _Bucking_ Amala._"

"'She was fortunate enough to be the head, at least," Isabeau continued. "'Four of them were stuck being the legs, and poor Miss Pie's mother was the tail. At least she was facing outwards so she wouldn't have to stare at the incarnation of all evil'sâ€|' er, flank.'" She looked up. "She uses a different word, but you did say to keep it foal-friendly."

Shining Armor cleared his throat. "May as well share my own example. Princess Twilight Velvet."

"Yikes," Rainbow Dash winced. "What changed there?"

"Twilight and I only attained our Baseline positions due to nepotism," Shining answered, "all of the Royal Guard's army were coated in glitter, and Nyx was _still_ Nightmare Moon."

"She banished me to the Moon because she caught me _kissing Leman!_" Nyx whined. "And stealing from the cookie jar, _but that's beside the point!_"

"Trixie recalls a Loop where she and Velvet had switched places, meaning Trixie was Twilight's mother." The blue showmare paused, and looked at Twilight. "It was rather disconcerting, since Trixie was just coming off a Loop where she was an orphan until her Uncle Night and Aunt Velvet adopted her as your sister. And since Trixie has a surprising number of Loops where Night Light is her mother's brother for some reason. Not that she's complaining," she added. "Trixie quite likes Loops where she has more family. It's just odd that this particular variant pops up so much."

Twilight nodded. "I've had some of those too. Having you as my sister again was fun, Awake or otherwise."

Chrysalis smiled. "There was a Loop I really liked, where Changelings didn't live in hives. We were ponies, just like any other, but with our baseline shapeshifting abilities. Velvet and her family were actually the first Changelings to reveal themselves to Celestia in the hopes that we could peacefully integrate into the rest of society rather than live in hiding like we had for so long, and when Shining Armor and Cadance met for the first time..." She smiled again. "It was love at first sight. So their marriage was technically a political one, but neither of them objected in the slightest. I was one of the bridesmaids."

"I remember that one," Cadance chimed in. "You did a wonderful job as bridesmaid."

Chrysalis blushed. "Thank you."

Luna considered. "Here's another one I remember. It was an Animorphs fused Loop where Velvet was actually an Andalite. When her ship crashed here, she met your father, fell in love and permanently morphed into a pony to stay with him. Then the two worked out a sort of "notice-me-not" shield that hid our star system from any hostile alien races, including the Yeerks, preventing them from ever invading. Years later, when Discord was freed, she tried to stop him from attacking Twilight, and he detected that she wasn't a normal pony. Whatever he did then, it accidentally jumpstarted her morphing ability so she could turn back into her original form. Then she terrified him into behaving."

Discord shuddered at that. "Sounds like her. I'm just glad I wasn't Awake _that_ time."

Raising an eyebrow at this, Luna continued. "After that, she finally admitted to my sister and I where she'd really come from, and about the shield she and Night Light had created."

A voice spoke up. "There was that one time where I was a ninja. I noticed Twilight and Shining were both acting very strange, so being the concerned mother that I was, I decided to follow them to wherever they were headed."

The entire bar fell silent. One by one, the patrons let their gazes climb upward.

"Hi hon." Hanging from the ceiling and dressed in a skintight suit, Twilight Velvet waved at her daughter. "Time loop, huh?"

"...yep."

"I guess we both have our secrets." She paused a moment, then pointed at Nyx. "Did that black filly call you _mom_ earlier?"

"I'm not drunk enough to answer that yet."

The yellow pegasus next to Nyx was eternally grateful that she didn't question his appearance. _Every time_ he ran into Twilight Velvet, she terrified him with the long, painful talks about his relationship with Nyx.

Sensing tension, Lyra spoke up. "There was this one time she turned out to be the Princesses. All of them."

Rainbow looked skeptical. "Even Twilight?"

Lyra nodded gravely. "Especially Twilight."

Velvet blinked. "I must have been quite a busy mare then."

"You were," Gilda added. "I remember that one too. I was one of the royal advisers." Seeing a few odd looks at her, she shrugged. "It was a living. Besides, how often do you get hired to tell your employer when she's being a pain?"

"I've hired your non-Awake self for exactly that reason a few times,"

Celestia told her.

Gilda looked rather smug at that.

Discord raised a claw. "I woke up when I was being released the second time, and my Loop memories told me about how I'd met Velvet before." He looked nervously at the Ninja-Velvet still hanging above her daughter. "After I corrupted all six of you, I went around doing it to other ponies, and Velvet was one of them. But once she was... ah-heh-heh... changed, she took one look at me and roundhouse-kicked me in the face. Repeatedly. No matter where I was or what I was doing. I finally turned everypony back to normal and myself back to stone just to get away from her. And now you know why I'm glad I wasn't Awake for her Andalite loop."

Celestia leaned over and patted Discord on the back. "Sometimes, when trying to take Twilight as my student, I'm met with serious oppositionâ€¦ actually, it happened this Loop too, but we worked things out in the end. I had no idea she was like that though," she added, gesturing to the ceiling.

"That was the idea!" Velvet called down.

Nyx looked to the stallion next to her, still close to bolting. "Lemon here sees and deals with so much violence on a daily basis but mention Twilight Velvet-" Her magic grabbed the colt, dragging him back. "He gets so scared of seeing his fiancée's grandma."

Twilight Velvet perked up on the "fiancée", and looked at Lemon, who whimpered loudly.

"Now son," Fluttershy said with a smile, "you knew she was going to have to know eventually."

"Oh, I..." Velvet dropped down from the ceiling. "I take it you're my daughter-in-law to be?"

"Fluttershy, yes." The yellow pegasus bumped hooves with the catsuit wearing unicorn. "I'm Lemon's adopted mother. He was so adorable as a baby, do you know?"

"Little mother, please-"

"Oh they always are!" Twilight Velvet grinned broadly, a sly twinkle in her eye. "Do you have pictures?"

"Holo-recordings, even!" Fluttershy produced what seemed like a brass pocketwatch. "Although he wasn't a pony back then, it's a quirk of this universe-"

"Little mother!"

"Are we still talking about the weirdest thing Twilight Velvet's done?" Sweetie Belle asked. "Because I think this right here might cap it."

"Now here he is making snow-wolves with his pack. I tried to get him to wear warm clothes, well any clothes, but he wouldn't listen!"

Leman Russ, noble primarch and part-time pegasus, buried his face behind his feathers.

As the others were preoccupied with their own conversations, almost nobody saw Twilight leave the room. With one exception, who quickly followed her into the hall.

"Um, Twilight?"

Twilight looked behind her. "Yes, Scootaloo?"

The orange filly looked down. "I had one more version of your mom - not something too weird, but I still thought you should know about it."

Twilight smiled. "Go ahead."

"Well, it was one of those Canterlot High variants. My mom - my biological mom, that is - was a real jerk that Loop. She neglected me for the first few years of my life, then dumped me entirely and ran off on her own. If our neighbors hadn't heard me crying, I don't know what would have happened to me."

Twilight hugged her. "I'm sorry to hear that."

Scootaloo hugged her back. "It's not your fault, Twilight. But thank you." Clearing her throat, she continued. "Anyway, our neighbors heard me, took me home and helped me when I needed it most. They called the cops to report my mom, who was caught and arrested. My new family - County Services let them take me in as a foster kid, and after the courts stripped bio-mom of her parental rights, they petitioned to adopt me, and got the go-ahead the year after." She looked up at Twilight. "My new family already had an older daughter. It was Rainbow Dash. So we got to be sisters again that Loop."

Twilight smiled. "So you got a happy ending then. Butâ€¦ what does this have to do with my mom?"

"She was the assistant director of the county's Department of Social Services. She's the one who gave the approval for them to adopt me."

Twilight blinked. "That'sâ€¦" Then, she smiled and pulled the younger Looper into another hug. "Thank you, Scootaloo. I needed that."

"You're welcome," the little filly told her.

* * *

>162.29 (Crossoverpairinglover)

**MLP/Phineas & Ferb**

Yawning early in the morning, a long night celebrating with Pinkie Pie for her ###^4th loop party, Fluttershy noted her mailbox was rather full.

Idly noting the contents, she began the time honored tradition of sorting mail in a long stream of regular words.

"Ad, Ad, Ad, Bill, Bill, Ad, Ad, Bill, Bill, Court Summons for Angel, Restraining Order for Angel, Business Card for Angel..." she stopped her idle sorting daze when she noted the business card that had found its way into her mailbox.

"Are you an evil genius with limited physical ability? Are you constantly being made a fool of? Want to achieve great things? Join the Legion of Doom. Call 1-800-Evil-Doom, ask for Hienz," Fluttershy read off the card, before turning the card over and noting the large skull shaped Headquarters of said group, with discreet letters on the bottom of the card saying 'Note, design of evil lair design not final'.

Covertly looking around for anyone who might have been watching, Fluttershy swallowed the card before Angel Bunny could get it.

* * *

>162.30 (Crossoverpairinglover)

**MLP/Star Wars**

"Elation. I feared that my exile to this maker-forsaken place filled with happiness and joy would cause me to loose my sense for artistic and precise murder. It is with great joy I have come across an organic with such, vision."

Twilight normally had nothing against trans-loop bonds of friendship, family and love. However, in this case...

"Query. Angel Bunny, have you ever considered the most efficient way to destabilize quadruped governments via efficient and discreet assassination?"

She could not, in good conscience, allow a friendship of mutual murderous intent to form between Angel Bunny and HK-47.

* * *

>162.31 (fractalman)

Applejack snorted in satisfaction as she watched the Flim-Flam brothers high-tail it out of Ponyville before they could scam the residents. But then..."Granny, where did you get that?"

"Eh? Oh, a nice pony named Silver Shill sold this here tonic to me." said Granny, before taking a drink.

"Granny, that's nothing but apples and beet leaves. It doesn't really-"

Granny Smith took off in a blur.

Applejack blinked. "Work. What the..."

* * *

>"Twilight, I need your help. Granny's runnin' around at high speed, and ahm worried she'll break somethin."

"Sure thing, Applejack."

* * *

>"HEY! LEMME GO!"

"Now just a minute, Granny! Ya gotta calm down before ya hurt yerself. "

"Say, Applejack, when did she get so fast, anyways?"

"She drank some of that no-good tonic and then took off like the Roadrunner."

"Hmm...do you still have some of it around? It obviously works this loop, or Granny wouldn't be running that quickly."

"Well ah...huh, that's a good point..."

"WILL YOU TWO VARMITTS LET ME DOWN?"

* * *

>"So apparently, the tonic doesn't actually work, except in the case of Granny Smith."

"Any idea why that might be, Twilight?"

"Not sure. Maybe if I get a good scan of her magic I can figure it out. "

* * *

>"LEMME OUT OF THIS DARNED CONTRAPTION RIGHT NOW!"

"Sorry, Granny, but this is as much for yer own safety as it is for Twilight's curiosity."

"AHAH! Chaos magic! When Discord messed around with the ponies in Ponyville, he made Granny's legs move extremely quickly! The elements of harmony must've left some of that behind, and it became active when Granny drank the tonic!"

"That...explains a lot, actually. Ah did wonder why Granny never seemed to suffer from overexerting herself in baseline..."

"This calls for SCIENCE!" yelled Twilight with a big grin on her face.

* * *

>162.32 (fractalman)

"Twilight?"

"Rarity, if you're asking why we're ants in Shining's ant farm, it's probably because I've been obsessed with becoming an aunt lately."
"

"..."

"HI UNAWAKE ME!" yelled Fluttershy.

"At least Fluttershy's taking it well. I'm surprised she's going with that sort of reveal, though."

* * *

>

**Author's Note:**

162.1: Space mail! Pony to orbit in one quip!

162.2: That moment you have to add a lot more rules all of a sudden.

162.5: Metanostalgia.

162.6: And sometimes you just want to mess with someone.

162.7: She's persistent, at least.

162.10: Now that's frankly confusing.

162.13: He's innocent, he tells you. Incidentally, I assume the term is "winged sheepicorn".

162.15: I am not yet done mit trying the subtle!

162.16: Yeah, that was a bit of a surprise for everyone.

162.18: Sometimes there's... not good things. Fortunately, there's friends.

162.24: Protective not-relatives. Worse if anything than the other kind.

162 25 I am already hating this one

162.26: Some things you need to apologize for. No matter how long it's been.

162.27: SNIP NOT FOUND

170. Chapter 170

163.1

"Okay, so explain where you were going with this," Twilight invited.

"Sorry, Twi, can't quite hear you," Rainbow Dash apologized. "So, anyway, the idea was - well, first I needed the sand. Really good, high-quality sand. The kind of sand you get on a beach which has never known anything more sophisticated than a stick, run through five layers of filtering so it's nothing but pure silicon dioxide."

She coughed. "I had to get Maud to help with that bit."

"I can imagine that would help," Twilight said, looking around at all the bits of shattered amorphous silicon dioxide.

"Still can't hear you! Anyway, then I got Spike to help - he's Awake, as I'm sure you're aware what with being a brainy pony and all - and he helped me get the forging temperature up. Up so high that most of my tools were melting, and I think that actually helped a bit - you know, additives." Twilight raised a hoof, but Dash kept going. "After that, I fitted it into the mold which it had taken your brother _and_ Celestia to help build - you know, to handle the high heat and stuff."

"At this point I just want you to skip to the end," Twilight requested.

Not hearing her, Dash kept going. "Then I had Luna do the calculations on the rifling grooves, and cut them with a shallow pattern. Once that was done, I was able to fit the striking mechanism - it had to use some neat stuff Rarity discovered when trying to make _"

"Okay!" Twilight shouted. "Just tell me what happened, please, not your project notes!"

Dash looked Twilight in the eye. "It's simple! I can now conclude, experimentally, that a glass cannon _can_ fire a shot! But that you really need to watch how much propellant you use."

Twilight just sighed. "What next?" she asked rhetorically. "Are you going to build a mighty glacier?"

Dash looked shifty. "...hold on a moment, I need to have a chat with Flutters. Later!"

* * *

>163.2 (Evilhumour)

Twilight and her friends sipped their drinks, watching the aerial display of hotheadedness from two competitive ponies; some ponies were in the Rainbow Dash corner, Scootaloo in particular cheering her heart out, while Lyra supported her fellow musician with typical seapony enthusiasm, although without any gunfire or explosions.

After Twilight told Nyx of Vinyl's latest attempt at using her sonic powers, what had started out as a debate between which style of flying was more efficient had broken out into a serious debate between the alicorn of speed and the wub queen.

So, like any mature people, they took to have a contest of sorts to see which one was better. Rainbow Dash had won the department for speed while losing to Vinyl for better control. The two went back and forth between winning and losing contests with Ivory Scroll telling them to _end_ the birching thing.

Which led to this game of Tag with a twist.

"Come back, ya slowpoke!" Dash shouted, throwing more balloons filled with striped paints. The speeding unicorn promptly pulled up, allowing Rarity to be hit again; the fashionista shrieked as Vinyl's plaid paint filled balloons left her hideous.

With a quick change of tone in Vinyl's wub hooves, she paused mid flight. Throwing several balloons at her, Dash flew past her and into the Golden Oaks. Unfortunately for everyone involved, Dash was in the midst of a sonic rainboom, which dragged the DJ into the library too. With a mighty blast of music, screaming and splashes, the streets and ponies were covered with striped, plaid, or a mixture of both paints, leaving many screaming about the horror. Oddly enough, the Flower Trio were perfectly fine with this and were rolling their eyes at everypony else for being drama queens.

Twilight's eye twitched as the door opened on her ruined library to reveal two technicoloured mares walking out, each with a hoof on the other's withers, laughing with each other.

After that, everypony learned that Twilight was slower than a galloping Rainbow Dash or a wubbing Vinyl Scratch.

* * *

>163.3 (Evilhumour)

Rainbow Dash: looper; pony. Searching for a way to go even faster than all other pegasi. Then an accidental crash with a wall eyed mare alters their body chemistry. And now when Rainbow Dash grows peckish or hungry, an amusing metamorphosis occurs. The creature is driven by a desire to eat all muffins and is pursued by her friends to get videotapes of this._

"Girls, please stop laughing at me and leave us alone!"

The creature is wanted for winning an eating competition that she didn't want to enter. Rainbow Dash wants the world to believe she's dead, and she will let the world think that she is dead, until she can find a way to control the adorable klutz that dwells within her._

**The Incredible Derpy**!

* * *

>163.4 (Masterweaver)

Derpy Hooves, a grey pegasus with googly eyes, snowboarded by on Cera, an orangey-tan triceratops. Hiccup, a thin Nordic human, paused and turned to Wrex, an alien super-turtle mercenary.

"...Is it weird that the only thing I want to do right now is critique their technique?"

* * *

>163.5 (DrTempo- Fused Loop with RWBY)

'Another Loop, another one of those opening exams,' Jaune thought as he was once again launched into the forest. He had never liked that, but by now...

As he landed, he saw the Replacement for Pyrrha land gracefully. It helped that she could fly.

"Hey, Sunset. Enjoy your flight?" Jaune had heard some stories about this Equestrian Looper, who had experienced a very long series of Fused Loops before she had returned to her home Loop.

As he got up, Sunset chuckled a little. "Once I managed to fly under my own power. How in the heck you handle it every Loop...yeesh. So, what first?"

GROWL.

"Those guys." Jaune pointed behind Sunset, as a few Grimm had snuck behind the duo. Sunset nodded, and in a flash, the Grimm fell down, slain by Sunset's Keyblade. He had to admit, that level of speed was pretty good.

More Grimm showed up, and Sunset dispelled her Keyblade, drawing the weapon her Unawake self had: a hooksword with a gun in the hilt. Oddly, it did look like a giant key. Sunset cracked her knuckles. "Your turn, Jaune. Let's see what you got!"

Jaune removed a green hat from his Pocket and put it on.

"HAH!" He launched a flurry of attacks with his sword and shield, taking down the hordes of Grimm that had shown up.

Sunset clapped. "Hyrule Warriors Loop?"

Jaune nodded. "Yep. A perfect place to train my skills. Shall we?"

Sunset smirked. "Let's!"

The two charged into battle, ready for a fight!

* * *

>163.6 (Crisis)

"Hey Twilight!" Vinyl Scratch called out, waving her forehoof in one of the subtle visual signals for 'I'm Awake, are you?' the Equestrian loopers occasionally used.

Twilight blinked in surprise before waving the unicorn mare over with the appropriate countersign. It was a bit odd to see Vinyl this early in the Loop. After all, she hadn't even gotten the order to oversee the Summer Sun celebration yet.

"Hey Vinyl, what's up?" Twilight thought of reasons why Vinyl would make an effort to come see her, and came to an obvious conclusion. "Was there something you wanted to try this Loop?"

"Oh, is there ever," Vinyl grinned widely. "Tell me Twilight, how'd you like to be a rap star?"

"A..." Twilight blinked as that registered. "I can't say I've ever thought about that. I mean, we sing all the time, but full-blown music star? Can't say I've ever had the time... Or the coordination outside a heartsong for that matter."

"I can help with that if you don't mind some subconscious subharmonics," Vinyl waved off the concern and pulled out a manila folder thick with loose sheet music. "Anyway, take a look at these songs I wrote for you and tell me what you think."

Raising a curious eyebrow, Twilight accepted the folder with her magic, opened it, and started reading the first page. "I like big plots and I cannot lie... yeah, no, not happening." Twilight stopped reading and turned to walk away, only to find a pleading DJ in her face.

"Aw, come on!" Vinyl wheedled. "Read just a couple more lines before you call it a wash!"

Twilight debated the merits of just teleporting away versus the annoyance of Vinyl hounding her about this for who-knew-how-long, and decided to humor her for a moment longer.

"...my bibliophilia I can't deny. When you see a new book thick around the spine with those crisp fresh pages smelling fine... Okay, I take it back, this is rather clever."

"So you'll do it?" Vinyl grinned.

"I'm thinking..." Twilight stalled while looking through some of the other rap songs Vinyl had put together for her to apparently sing. "You're really playing up the 'nerd' angle with these."

"What can I say? I've been planning this for a bit. You should see what I wrote up for the others."

Twilight paused and looked up at the grinning DJ curiously. "Even Applejack? Because I'm having a hard time imagining her as a rapper."

"Even if I bribe her with pictures and recordings of Twilight the rap star?"

"That might do it. Of course, now I feel kind of shorted. What do I get out of this?"

"Oh, as the first you automatically get rights to pictures and recordings of the others doing this," Vinyl grinned. "Plus if you want in on making it happen any time we're both Awake, I'll be happy to include you."

"Better," Twilight went back to looking through the songs Vinyl had written for her. "Okay, I think I'm okay with doing this, so..."

Twilight paused on one particular song and slowly raised her head back up to stare Vinyl straight in her sunglasses.

"'Twilight and Nerdy'? Really?"

* * *

>163.7 (fractalman)(inspired by Conicer's " family generosity and demonology")

Lemon Rush yawned, stretched, glanced down at his hooves, and got out of bed. 'Ah, another Equestrian loop. I hope Fluttershy is Awake,' he thought.

Then the loop memories kicked in. "Why am I a member of the pony Inquisition?" He paused as he considered the memories in detail. "Huh. I've never really thought of Equestria that way before, but it makes sense."

* * *

>Lyra's horn glowed a sickly, bubbling green and purple, while eyes sprouted across her body and flames licked away at the floor.

"The cookies are ready, Lyr- Oh, I see you're busy. Should I come back later?"

"THANKS, SWEETIE DROPS. JUST LEAVE 'EM ON THE TABLE."

Claws sprouted out of Lyra's hooves, while tentacles grew from her back.

* * *

>"EEEEK!" yelled Roseluck as Lyra - or at least, something that vaguely resembled her - made its way to Sugarcube Corner. "Call the Inquisition! Call the Inquisition!"

* * *

>Lemon raised an eyebrow as he squashed his grin and giggle. "So, is it trying to destroy our plane of existence?"

"No..." said Roseluck, while the Lyra-thing popped a cupcake into its mouth.

"Is it trying to bring about eternal night or otherwise destroy our planet?"

"No..."

"Is it or has it been trying to harm anypony?"

"No, but-"

"Then there's nothing to see here, citizen! Move along!" finished Lemon with a grin.

"But...but...but..." protested Roseluck, while the Lyra-thing wandered away, burbling about changing mazes.

Lemon's grin widened. "Our planet's already a daemon world. Haven't you noticed that the seasons and weather change according to the whims of ponies, and that the sun and moon move to the whims of a pair of particularly powerful ponies? I can assure you, that's not normal."

Roseluck's eyes widened. "Oh...I...I see..."

Lemon chuckled as he flew off to Fluttershy's house to check on the Little Mother before heading back to Canterlot. According to his loop memories, Lyra would be back to normal within a day or two - maybe a week, tops, and none the worse for wear. All in all, it promised to be a hilarious Loop -

"HEY! GET BACK HERE! IT DESTROYED ONE OF MY FLOWERS!" yelled Roseluck at Lemon's retreating form.

Yep, definitely hilarious.

* * *

>"Oh, hi Lemon, I didn't expect you," said Fluttershy.

Lemon grinned. "NOPONY EXPECTS THE CANTERLOT INQUISITION!"

Fluttershy sighed and gave Lemon the stinkeye.

* * *

>163.8 (Darkmage97)

"Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Why are we made of meat?"

Twilight turned to stare incredulously at Rarity.

"Rarity, we were always made of meat."

Rarity frowned, "No darling, we're usually made of horse, but this time we're made of meat."

Twilight cocked her head to one side.

"Rarity, horses are always made of meat."

"That simply isn't true, darling. Horses are made of horse and meat is made of meat."

"Rarity, horses are still made of meat."

She stomped the ground, "No, we're not. Griffins are made of griffin, birds are made of bird, dragons are made of dragon, cows are made of cow, bears are made of bear, but we're horses that aren't made of horse. Instead, we're made of meat."

Twilight stared at Rarity, "Rarity are you..." Then her in-Loop memories hit her like a load of bricks.

"Rarity?"

"Yes, Twilight?"

"Why are we made of meat?"

* * *

163.9 (ORBSyndicate)

Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 2 - Tourist Trapped

Stan looked at his options.

He needed the perfect candidateâ€|

The pink one was far too eager. She would do anything, no matter how absurd, with a smile on her face and a stupid grin. That wasn't what he wantedâ€|

The white one wasn't anywhere near observant enough. She'd probably do it after a lot of annoying whining and then completely miss the point. Unless she was more than she appeared, which was always a possibility.

The orange one wasn't anywhere near curious enough. She had a natural talent for conducting tours though.

The yellow one was either way too quiet, way too shy, or way too into animals. She hadn't been around long enough for him to truly figure her out.

That left the purple and rainbow onesâ€|

"Eenyâ€| Meenieâ€| Mineyâ€| You," he said, pointing at Twilight. He shoved a hammer, nails, and MYSTERY SHACK! advertisement signs into her hand. "Go into the forest and hang these signs up in the spooky part of the forest." Stan grinned. "We'll attract lost hikers! Make a fortune!"

Twilight sighed. He was sending her into the creepy part of the woods. Great. "You do realize weird things are in those woods right? Something is definitely off. Just today my mosquito bites spelled out beware."

Stan glared at her. "That says beware." Twilight, from years of experience, noticed the I've-said-that-so-many-times-I'm-about-to-puke face on Stan. "And don't be silly. All of those stories are just a bunch of hillbilly legends."

Twilight blinked. Stan was a good liar. If she hadn't just seen a fairy in the forest yesterday, she would have believed him. He really was going to be able to keep secrets from them.

Interesting.

She shrugged, took the hammer, nails, and signs, and marched to the creepy part of the forest.

Stan waved. "Remember to nail them into every tree you conceivably see!"

Twilight raised an eyebrow. A hint? Perhaps. She smiled. This was very interesting.

[br]

Pinkie yelled. "I JUST THOUGHT OF SOMETHING!"

"What, dear?" Rarity said.

"You're married -" As soon as the words left her mouth Stan spat out his Pitt Cola and entered a coughing fit.

Rarity squinted. "I'm an adult most of the time, Stan. Really."

Stan nodded. "I'mâ€¦ going to go sit downâ€¦ I don't need to hear this conversationâ€¦"

Pinkie continued. "Anyway, you're married, I'm the goddess of parties, Fluttershy's married to the Emperor a lot of the time
_"

"Um, that's not, um, actually a big thing." Fluttershy said.

"And everybody loves Rainbow and Twilight. But you know what? _Applejack's never really even had a date or a relationship of any kind! _Or at least not much of one. She usually just doesn't get involved."

Applejack squinted. "And that's a problem why?"

"Don't you see? You need to FEEL the romance! Your Looping life has been broken without it! You need to experience companionship!"

"Thanks, but I'll pass."

"Great! Let's get started today."

"What?" Applejack said, before Pinkie grabbed her and pulled her away.

"We're going to find you a date!"

"Pinkie put me down this instant -"

Fluttershy, Rarity, and Rainbow Dash simply stared in silence.

"Thatâ€¦" Rainbow Dash muttered. "Can't end well. Yeah. I'm out. I'm going to go see what Twilight's up to."

And with that Rainbow Dash produced wings and flew off.

Rarity facepalmed. "DEAR! You can't just go giving yourself wing- and she's gone."

Fluttershy smiled. "Maybe things will be quiet now."

"You two! Get down here! I need someone to rip off some customers!"

Stan yelled.

Fluttershy sighed.

[br]

BAP! BAP! BAP!

Twilight had quickly discovered that nailing signs into trees was hard work. She was sweating, tired, and had yet to find anything even remotely interesting. She was beginning to wonder if Stan wasn't just messing with her because he could. The old man obviously had a fondness for pranks, seeing as he'd already spooked Fluttershy three times with that fish-man mask of his.

She held up the last sign, ready to pound it into the tree. She lifted the hammer to drive the nail into the wood.

She was not expecting a metallic CLANG to resound through her body. She dropped the tools instantly and investigated the tree. There was a metallic panel which she pried off, revealing a hidden lever. She cautiously pressed the lever, and heard a loud clunking sound behind her. She turned to see a hole in the ground, in which was nestled a book.

It appeared to be a really old red leather-bound journal with an eyeglass attached to it. On the front was a big golden symbol of a six-fingered hand with a large "3" inked on it.

Twilight picked up the Journal, blowing the years of dust off it. The first page had the words "Property of" with the lower half of the page ripped out. The second was dated June 18:

_It's hard to believe it's been six years since I began researching the strange and wond'rous secrets of Gravity Falls, Oregon. In all my travels, never have I observed so many curious things! Gravity Falls is indeed a geographical oddity._

Twilight flipped through the journal's pages. The book was filled with strange and fantastical drawings of things such as gnomes, ghosts, a strange thing known as a leprecorn, and strange triangles with eyes littered throughout the journal. She found that the second half of the book was blank, and that there was a hastily scribbled message on the last pages:

_Unfortunately, my suspicions have been confirmed, I'm being watched. I must hide this book before He finds it. Rememberâ€"in Gravity Falls there is no one you can trust._

_TRUST NO ONE!_

Twilight blinked. She had figured this was going to be a silly, comical Loop that she'd just have to live through while being forced to suffer through Stan's sense of humor.

But this book had many things in it that wouldn't be in a normal happy Loopâ€" like that one page with lots of blood stains.

It looked as if the author of the journal might have been insaneâ€"

"Hey! Whatcha looking at?"

Twilight yelped in surprise. She dropped the book to see Rainbow Dash hovering in front of her. "Rainbow!" she gasped, shaking her head. "Don't do that! Ser- _Do you have wings right now?"_

"Um, yeah? Why? It's not like anyone can see me out here -"

"_That's not the point!_ We are _normal_ humans without wings!"

"Fineâ€|" Rainbow Dash muttered, her wings vanishing. "Ya know, I probably could just fly without the wings -"

Twilight's glare indicated that that wasn't acceptable either.

"You're no fun." Rainbow Dash leaned in closer. "Now, _what are you looking at?"_

"It appears to be a strange book filled with all sorts of secretsâ€|"

"Coolâ€|" Rainbow said, joining Twilight as they pored over the amazing secrets of the journalâ€|

[br]

As Twilight and Rainbow Dash walked back to the Shack, they heard Stan yelling at the top of his lungs. "GET THE PINK ONE AWAY FROM MY MERCHANDISE!"

Twilight sighed, rushing into the Mystery Shack. They found Pinkie jumping up and down with excessive energy. "OHBOYOHBOYOHBOYOHBOYOHBOYOHBOY!" She grabbed Applejack by the face. "I still can't be_lieve _that we got you a date this quickly!"

Applejack sighed. "Neither can I. I was tryin' to sabotage the whole thingâ€|"

"YOU MUST BE DESTINED FOR SUMMER ROMANCE!"

"Pinkie, are ya sure you're all right? This isn't like you -"

"I'M LIKE EVERYTHING!" Pinkie grinned.

The doorbell rang.

"Thatmustbehim!"

Applejack moaned. "No. Please noâ€|"

"Come on, everyone, let's meet AJ's new boyfriend!"

"I'm tellin' ya, this is an absolutely horrid idea and he's not my boyfriend!"

"That's just what you thinkâ€|" Pinkie said, grinning. She flung the door of the Shack open. "HI THERE!"

At the door was a tall boy wearing a dark black hood. His skin was pale, his eyes were distant, and he had what appeared to be blood on his face. "Sup," he said.

Pinkie pushed Applejack forward. Applejack put on a fake smile. "Uhâ€¦ hi there."

Rainbow Dash poked her head forwards. "What's your name?"

"Uhâ€¦ NORMAL! _man!_"

Stan facepalmed. "Every timeâ€¦"

Pinkie shook her head. "Silly, your name is Norman! Come on!"

Twilight blinked. "Are you bleeding, Norman?"

"Uhâ€¦ it'sâ€¦ jam," "Normal Man" responded.

Stan shook his head. "That's it. I'm out. Again."

Pinkie shoved Applejack closer to "Norman." "Now go have fun, you two!"

Applejack looked at everyone with a pleading look as Norman walked off with her.

Pinkie grinned. "This is great!"

Rarity, Fluttershy, and Twilight all exchanged glances. "Uhâ€¦ yeah, no."

Rainbow Dash, however, had a completely different reaction -

"OH MY GOSH! He's a zombie! LIKE THE BOOK SAID!" She grabbed Twilight by the face. "Let's go save her!"

"Now, Rainbowâ€¦" Twilight said. "I'm sure he's not a zombie. I'd be able to sense the undead. And while there is magic about him, that is probably just because of all sorts of weird magic in the area _"

Rainbow Dash grabbed the journal and opened it up to the page on the Undead. She read aloud. "Known for their pale skin and bad attitudes, these creatures are often mistaken for teenagers. Beware Gravity Falls' nefarious zombies!"

"DUN DUN DUUUUUN," Pinkie added, grinning.

Twilight shook her head. "As I said, I would detect the undead."

"Yeah!" Pinkie said, bouncing. "And plus, wouldn't it be AWESOME to have a ZOMBIE FOR A BOYFRIEND?"

Rarity blinked. "Darling, are you sure you're okay? You're being moreâ€¦ extravagant than usual."

"This is nothing. Wait till you see me towards the end of the summer!"

"What?"

"I'm being mysteriousâ€|" Pinkie said as she hopped out of the room backwards.

Rainbow Dash sighed. "Come on, guys! We need to form a rescue team!"

"Uhâ€| no," Twilight said. "He's not a zombie. No need to go crazy, Rainbow. Unless you have proof -"

"Fluttershy!" Rainbow Dash said, pointing. "You and me are going to spy on Applejack and Norman all day!"

"Umâ€| why?"

"For the admirable goals of proof and blackmail!"

"Umâ€| okay."

Rarity and Twilight rolled their eyes. "You're on your own," was the general consensus.

Rainbow Dash cracked her knuckles. "Let's do this."

Fluttershy sighed, wondering once again why she had let herself be dragged into this.

[br]

Soos, handyman of the mystery shack and the man in the question mark shirt, was screwing in a lightbulb in the attic. Red light streamed through the triangular stained-glass window. Soos shuddered. He always felt like that thing was watching him.

He briefly looked around, wondering if there was someone to talk to. There wasn't. He sighed. Yet another lonely day working in the Shack. The sextuplets were nice, but all of them were doing things not-attic-related.

He might be here all day screwing in lightbulbs.

Was this a metaphor for life? An eternal screwing of lightbulbs, doomed to continue until the end of time?

Was the eye in the window reminiscent of a higher power observing his every move, watching his lightbulb screwing, waiting for the day he messed up?

Was there a point to being this philosophical?

Soos shook his head. His wisdom was both a blessing and a curse. Maybe he should get some comfort foodâ€|

"SOOS!" the voice of Stan yelled from the floor below. "THE PORTABLE TOILETS ARE CLOGGED! AGAIN! AGAIN! AGAIN! AGAIN! AGAIN!"

AGAIN! - "

After innumerable "again"s, Stan finally ran out of breath. "Justâ€¦ just fix them," he said, hoarse.

Soos saluted to Stan, even though they were on completely different floors. "Duty calls, lightbulb."

[br]

"Okay, Fluttershy, what zombie-like things have we seen Norman do so far?"

"Uhâ€¦ stumble around as if he had no control over his bodyâ€¦"

"Goodâ€¦"

"Fall into an open graveâ€¦"

"Goodâ€¦"

"And break a window in the diner."

"Good. I think we've got enough."

"I still think Norman's perfectly normal."

Rainbow Dash groaned. "CAN'T YOU SEE? Something's off about him!"

"But he doesn't smell like any sort of death. I should know."

Rainbow Dash didn't bother asking how she would know. "Butâ€¦ You know what, I'm just bringing this evidence to Applejack."

"Umâ€¦ she's not the one who's in control of whether she sees Norman or not."

Rainbow Dash blinked, realizing.

She had to convince Pinkie.

"Great." She grabbed the camera from Fluttershy, and rubbed her hands together. "Let's go to Pinkie -"

"Why would you need to go to me?" Pinkie said, holding up a camera.

"AUGH!" Fluttershy screamed in surprise.

Rainbow Dash was not amused. "Why do you have a camera?"

"They're just so cute together!" Pinkie said, grinning.

"You're turning into Cadence. That is not a good thing."

"Oh come on! It's fun! Hey Applejack!"

Applejack poked her head out of the bush. "Is he gone?"

"He's been gone for a couple hours."

"Good. He'sâ€¦ unnerving."

Rainbow Dash turned to Pinkie. "See? Even Applejack thinks he's off!"

"She just has cold hooves - um, feet," Pinkie responded, grinning. "Now come on, Applejack, we need to get in some kissing practice!"

"WAIT WHAT -"

"Oh not with me, silly! With a leaf blower!"

"_WHAT?_"

Rainbow Dash yelled after them. "NORMAN IS NOT WHAT HE SEEMS!" She held up the book. "SEE?"

"GNOMES?" Applejack yelled as she was being dragged off.

"What?" Rainbow Dash looked at the book, which was open to the gnomes page. "No! ZOMBIE!"

Applejack gave her the "seriously?" look before she was dragged out of sight.

Rainbow Dash sighed. "Greatâ€¦ We've got nothing." She groaned. "There's gotta be some sort of concrete evidence on himâ€¦"

Exactly two hours later, Rainbow Dash was still reviewing the video footage. A lot of Norman acting weird, but nothing completely indicting. There he was attempting to hold Applejack's hand before she swatted it away. There he was munching on her hat and getting a punch to the face. There was him getting the "THIS IS NOT A RELATIONSHIP" speech and just going "ger." There was him losing his hand and reattaching it. There was him with a -

Wait WHAT?

Rainbow Dash rewinded. Sure enough, Norman's hand had fallen out of its sleeve and he had quickly picked it up and reattached it. Rainbow Dash yelled. "FLUTTERSHY, WE NEED TO-"

She realized she was alone outside in the middle of the forest. Fluttershy must've left at some point.

"Great," Rainbow Dash muttered, summoning her wings back. "Guess I gotta do this myselfâ€¦" She took off into the woods, trailing rainbows.

[br]

Norman and Applejack were alone in the forest.

Applejack was resigned to spending the rest of the day with him before locking herself up in the Mystery Shack's cellar for a week.

The guy either just couldn't take a hint or had no brain.

No brainâ€|

â€|nah. He couldn't be a zombie. Nah. That was just crazy talk.

"Uh.. AJ?"

"Yes Normanâ€|" Applejack sighed.

"I've gotâ€| something to tell you before we go any further with this."

Applejack facepalmed. This guy was not up to date on social interaction. "Look Norman you don't hafta do anythin-"

"But I have toâ€| Don't freak out, okay? Keep an open mind. Be cool." Norman reached to the zipper on his jacket, unzipped it, and pulled it off.

Applejack's jaw hit the floor. Standing in front of her were five gnomes. Two acting as the legs, two acting as the body and holding the arms, and one acting as the head.

"Umâ€| so, yeah. We're gnomes. First off. Get that one out of the way," the gnome on the top said with a voice that was no longer brooding teenager, and more annoying middle aged man.

Applejack continued to stare, gaping.

"This is awkward, isn't it. Well. I'm Jeff, this is Carson, Steve, Jason, and -"

"Schmebulock," the lower left foot gnome said.

"Right Schmebulock. ANYWAY! Long story short, we have been looking for a new queen, and -"

Applejack didn't even stop to think about what she was doing. She bucked them. She had long ago figured out that a combination of a handstand and a power kick could accomplish more-or-less the same thing her pony bucking could. The gnomes went flying.

"No," she said.

"Oh, come on. I didn't even show you the ring ye-"

"I SAID EEEENOPE!" Applejack said, glaring down at Jeff.

Jeff looked up and glared. "Fine. We understand. We'll never forget you, Applejack."

"You bet you won't," Applejack said, having had enough of the whole ordeal.

"Because we're going to kidnap you."

"Wait, WHAT?"

[br]

Rainbow Dash yelled at the top of her lungs. "AJ, I'M COMING! JUST HOLD ONTO YOUR BRAINS A LITTLE WHILE LONGER!" She briefly wondered why she was taking this so seriously. Applejack would be just fine. Probably. Then again, she didn't think he was a zombie. So that could be a problem.

Rainbow Dash arrived on the scene to see Applejack standing over five gnomes, each of which were continually barfing rainbows. She blinked. "Whatâ€¦ happened here?"

"Norman was a bunch of gnomes. And they turned out to be a bunch of jerks. Oh, and they tried to kidnap me."

"What else is new," Rainbow Dash deadpanned.

Jeff stood up, shaking his fist. "You will regret this! GNOMES OF THE FOREST! ASSEMBLE!"

Rainbow Dash and Applejack watched as hundreds of gnomes poured out of the woods, running into each other. They watched as a pile of around a thousand gnomes piled into a single, giant, humanoid shape. They had become a giant gnome of gnomes. The gnome of gnomes roared in anger.

Rainbow Dash didn't bother to ponder how a being that was literally just a thousand gnomes stacked on top of each other could be roaring. She simply opened the Journal. "What's it say about gnomesâ€¦ Ah, hereâ€¦ Little men of the forestâ€¦ Weaknessesâ€¦ _Unknown?"_

Applejack facepalmed. "Seriously?"

Rainbow Dash grabbed Applejack and flew away just as a gnome-of-gnomes' fist tried to crush them. "NEW PLAN! FLY AWAY!"

"YOU WILL COME BACK HERE, HARPIE! YOU DO NOT MESS WITH THE GNOMES! WE ARE AN OLD AND POWERFUL RACE!"

"Yeah, wellâ€¦ uhâ€¦" Rainbow Dash had been about to say that she wasn't a harpie when she realized that that actually was pretty close to what she was right now, wings and all. 'Uhâ€¦ well, you're slow!" She took off, leaving a trail of rainbows.

"FOLLOW THE SKITTLES!" Jeff yelled.

"What are skittles?" the gnome below him said.

"It's what humans call barf trails."

[br]

"And now, folks, come look at the world's most distracting object!"

Stan had long ago replaced the old distracting object with one that looked identical but had an actual distracting enchantment. He pulled the string.

All the customers of the Mystery Shack stared at the device, unable to look away. Rarity, Fluttershy, Pinkie, and Twilight gazed deep into its swirling movements.

_It's simply darlingâ€|_ Rarity thought.

_It makes me think of fluffy non-murderous bunniesâ€|_ Fluttershy thought.

_Books!_ was the only word in Twilight's head, for some reason.

What Pinkie was thinking was, literally, _zdwfk zlwk ph. _No telling why.

The only person in the Shack not looking at the world's most distracting object was the teenage cashier, Wendy, a redhead who was busy being bored out of her skull. She studied the knots in the mismashed conglomeration of real-wood and fake-wood planks that made up the ceiling. She was so into the boredom she didn't even notice the rumbling of the ground as a giant gnome chased Rainbow Dash and Applejack back to the Shack.

"Rainbow! We can't let this thing destroy the Shack!"

"What do you suggest? Fight it?"

"Well, we are Loopers. We could do all sorts of things."

"Oh. Yeah. Right." Rainbow Dash dropped to the ground, causing Applejack to slam into the ground.

"HEY! Coulda done that a little SLOWER."

"Maybe. Didn't feel like it." The cyan human (or harpie?) turned to look at the assailant. The gnome of gnomes was running towards them.

"Any particularly interesting ideas on how to take this thing out?" Rainbow Dash asked, turning to her friend. She blinked. "Why is your face all red?"

"Pinkie's 'kissing practice' came with hazards. Like a leaf blower stuck to your face -" Applejack's eyes lit up. She reached into her subspace pocket, grinning. "Aha! I DO have one in here!"

She pulled out a leaf blower the size of a pine tree, and pointed it at the gnome of gnomes.

The gnome of gnomes stopped, and stared.

"How are you holding that?" Jeff yelled down from his place at the top of the gnome of gnomes.

"Does it matter? I'm pointin' it at y'all!"

"Riiiiight. You know what? ATTA-"

The gigantic leaf blower turned on, blasting the gnome of gnomes into its fundamental parts (a lot of gnomes) and spreading them out across the forest. The gnomes growled and yelled before running off into the bushes.

Jeff stood up. "YOU WILL FACE THE WRATH OF THE GNOMES -"

Applejack pointed the leaf blower at him at point-blank range. "You were saying?"

"Uh. Right. Bye." He took off as fast as his little legs would carry him (which was about as fast as a one-legged cat).

Applejack and Rainbow Dash cheered, rushing into a hug and laughing.

"That. Was. AWESOME!" Rainbow Dash yelled, grinning. She flipped open the Journal to the gnomes page, taking a pen out of her Pocket. "Weaknesses: LEAF BLOWERS! WOOT! This deserves a party!"

Another excited hug followed, before the two walked back into the Shack.

Stan watched them, lightly sipping his Pitt Cola.

So they escaped the awkward sibling hug. That wasn't too unusual. As far as he knew, anyway.

He smiled. They were nice girls. As they walked into the Shack, he gave them a smile. "You know what? I overstocked on inventory and I need to clear some stuff out. You six can get something from the gift shop. On the house."

Twilight blinked. "You mean, free? Without paying?"

"Sure. Why not. Now hurry, before I change my mind."

Rainbow Dash instantly grabbed a rainbow baseball cap with a lightning bolt on it. "This is mine." She grinned.

Twilight took a triangle-shaped pendant with an eye in it, because it looked interesting. Applejack took a crossbow. Rarity took one look at the gift shop and decided the only thing she even remotely liked was a shiny pen.

Pinkie Pie yelled, "GRAPPLING HOOK!" She grinned, holding the device for all to see.

Stan laughed his head off. "Sure, sweetie, you can have the Grappling Hook. Go climb some dangerous cliffs for Grunkle Stan."

"YAY!" Pinkie said, running out of the Shack.

Wendy and Soos walked up to Stan. "Uhâ€¦ Mister Pines?" Soos said, twiddling his thumbs. "We were wonderin' if we could, uhâ€¦"

Wendy took over. "We'd like something from the gift shop, too."

"I pay you two to do work. I don't pay them." Stan grinned. "I'm amazing!"

Wendy sighed. "Fine," she said, walking back to the cash register.

Soos saluted, walking back to the lightbulbs.

Stan smiled. This day had gone well. So far so good.

Of course, he knew that eventually the new people and locations in town would affect the Loop somehowâ€|

He would have to keep going.

* * *

>163.10 (Vinylshadow & Evilhumour)

Twilight, Luna and Fluttershy met in front of the Mirror to Canterlot High, each bearing a simple message from Sunset Shimmer.

_Nyx and Leman want to talk - please come to the Mirror World.
-SS_

Sharing worried looks, the trio entered the Mirror and found themselves in the familiar courtyard in front of the high school.

"Glad you could make it," a voice called out to them. As one, the trio turned to see Sunset Shimmer walking towards them.

"Sunset, what's going on?" Twilight asked, her mind running a mile a minute with possibilities as to why they had been called.

The traveling Looper shrugged. "They wouldn't tell me anything concrete. They just asked me to send messages to you and left."

"Left? Where -" Fluttershy began, but was cut off by a gruff voice.

"Glad to see you could make it," said someone unoriginal.

The four Equestrians turned to see two people walking towards them, their hands laced together.

On the left was a petite perky goth girl whose face lit up upon seeing Twilight. Standing next to her was a very tall male teenager, nearly a head taller than the small female. His whole appearance screamed dangerous, with his biker jacket, broad shoulders, messy blond hair and a very hard face, which softened slightly when he laid eyes on the pink-haired woman who had raised him.

He offered a nod to Fluttershy. "Little Mother, may I offer my sincerest apologies for my rude behavior towards you?"

Fluttershy swallowed the lump in her throat and nodded. "I'll always forgive youâ€| you know that. You're my son. Even when you push me away, I will always love you." She stepped towards him, a hopeful expression on her face. Leman took a step away from Nyx and opened his arms; Fluttershy didn't need another invitation, and hugged him tightly.

While the two spoke quietly to each other, Nyx approached Twilight and Luna shyly. "I'm sorry I pushed both of you away. I -"

She staggered back as both Luna and Twilight wrapped their arms around her.

"You don't have to say anything, Nyx," Luna whispered into her hair, stroking her younger sister's back.

"We're your family," Twilight said, voice thick with emotion.

The entire group was quiet for a few minutes before Twilight gently pulled away from Nyx and cleared her throat. "You said you had something to tell us?" she asked, eyeing Leman warily.

"Let's go somewhere where we can sit down?" he offered, gesturing towards the café Twilight remembered visiting during several Loops.

* * *

>The six Loopers commandeered the corner booth, which offered ample room on one side for Sunset, Luna, Fluttershy and Twilight while Leman and Nyx sat across from them.

"Well, if it wasn't obvious, we've taken the time to clear our heads..." Leman winced. "Not in the best ways, looking back, but..." he fumbled his words. Nyx gave his hand a light squeeze and a look passed between them.

"So you've reconciled?" Luna asked, resting her chin on her hands and looking at them with a neutral expression.

Nyx nodded, and the other Loopers relaxed.

"So you're dating again?" Sunset asked, happy to see the two talking again.

"Well, once we cooled down, we took some time for ourselves to think about our relationship. Nyx eventually contacted me and we talked it out," Leman said.

"We did it during a Daemon hunt, actually," Nyx chimed in.

Fluttershy and Twilight both blinked in surprise. They knew Daemons were dangerous, and usually required your full attention on them, but the two mothers knew their children wouldn't have been too distracted by a chat.

"How did that go?" Fluttershy asked.

"It...hurt," Nyx said. Twilight reached for her, a worried expression on her face, but Nyx raised a hand, stopping her. Before Twilight could withdraw her hand, Nyx clasped it gently. "It wasn't any fault of the Daemons, mom."

Twilight relaxed and Fluttershy let out a relieved sigh.

"Seeing Leman after avoiding him for so long hurt worse than any death I've suffered," Nyx said. "But it was a good kind of hurt. I knew I had made the right choice with him, so once we had finished our hunt, we sat down and talked."

Sunset and Luna leaned forward, anxious to hear the news.

"Turns out we both had similar reactions to our spat. We withdrew from the Loops, pushed everyone who wanted to help us away and thought about what we had done wrong," Nyx said, leaning against Leman.

"We..." Leman started, then paused, grimacing. "This is probably gonna sound stupid, butâ€¦ everything we've done together, everything we've sharedâ€¦ made us realize what we were giving up if we split. Iâ€¦ love Nyxâ€¦ she's amazing, caring, patient, beautiful - ow!" he grunted as Nyx elbowed him with a glare. "Alright, sorryâ€¦ but once we got our feelings out in the open, Iâ€¦ wellâ€¦"

Together, they raised their left hands.

Twilight and Fluttershy's jaws dropped, Luna gasped, and Sunset's eyes went wide.

On their ring fingers were a matching set of engagement rings.

"I asked her to marry me," Leman said quietly, looking at Nyx with a smile.

"And I said yes," Nyx said, leaning in and kissing him.

Nyx's eyes darted from one Looper to another anxiously. She fidgeted as the silence grew before she spoke hesitantly. "We wanted you to be the first to know, which is why we were so quiet about it. Umâ€¦ I was expecting more of a reaction. Are you mad?"

Her voice seemed to snap the other Loopers out of their blank state, and Twilight found her voice first.

"No! No, we wereâ€¦ well, I was, at any rate, shocked." She took a shaky breath. "Reconciliation is one thing, but to propose," her eyes darted to Leman, and he shrank back from her piercing stare, "and to acceptâ€¦" Twilight's voice trailed off and she teared up. "I'm not mad, I'm happy."

Fluttershy simply smiled at Leman. "I'm glad you finally worked up the courage to ask her, Leman," she said. "It's always a mother's dream to see her son finally find someone he wants to spend the rest of his life with, and I don't think you could've chosen a better wife than Nyx."

Sunset felt out of place in such a serious conversation. She had spent Loops with both of them, but she still felt uncomfortable around both of them. The young woman simply offered a small smile to the two, which seemed to relax them further.

Luna had leaned forward, her eyes on the engagement ring. "Do you mind if I take a look at that?"

Nyx and Leman exchanged confused glances, but gave their rings to Luna somewhat reluctantly.

The Night Mare examined them closely. "That's a beautiful gesture you've done for her, Leman. I've had ponies ask me to put their Cutie Marks in the night sky, butâ€¦ I dare say you've done one better and put the stars into a ring she'll have forever." She passed the rings to Twilight, who admired the enchanted rings with something bordering on awe.

"A modest ring barely containing the beauty insideâ€¦ That's definitely my daughter," Twilight said softly, which caused Nyx to blush happily as Twilight handed the rings back.

"Should we head back then?" Sunset asked, standing up and stretching her arms behind her head. Everyone but Nyx and Leman agreed, but when neither made a sound, Fluttershy turned to look at them curiously.

"What's wrong?" she asked, her voice worried.

Leman ran a hand over his face with a sigh before speaking.

"I hurt a lot of people, especially those back home, with what I said to Nyx. And even after all this time, I'm not sure if they've forgiven me for what I did."

Twilight shook her head. "If you want me to explain to them -" she began, but fell silent as Leman abruptly stood up.

"No, no, it was my fault, and I should be the one to apologize for my behavior."

Nyx rolled her eyes, muttering, "Men!" under her breath as she stood up and gave him a reassuring hug.

"Come on, my sweet Lemon Baby, let's go spread the news. The sooner we start, the sooner we can get to the honeymoon."

Without another word, the couple left the cafÃ©, leaving behind a quartet of dumbfounded Loopers.

"'Sweet Lemon Baby'?" Sunset finally managed to ask, clearly not sure whether to laugh or retch.

"Oh, don't be like that, Sunset," Fluttershy said, patting her shoulder. "When you find someone, you'll come up with cute nicknames for them as well."

"Never gonna happen," Sunset said flatly, crossing her arms and looking away.

Luna snickered. "If I had a bit for every time I've heard that..."

Chatting, the group followed after the engaged Loopers.

* * *

>As Lemon, Nyx, Twilight, Sunset, Luna and Fluttershy walked out of the portal, the young couple looked at each other.

"Momma," Nyx smiled, nuzzling up against Lemon, "can you tell Cadence about the news, and how we've decided to ask her if she wants to be our wedding planner?"

"Uh, Nyxie," Lemon frowned, looking down at the black alicorn he had already wrapped a wing around, "didn't we agree to tell her together? I am fairly sure that Mi Amore Cadenza will be very cross with me if we use a proxy to ask her about this offer."

"She'll understand that it was necessary, as I will have to teleport us to Ponyville without giving you any chance to prepare yourself for meeting our friends," Nyx said with a soft smile before leaning up and placing a kiss on his face to distract him.

It seemed to work as Lemon's eyes became unfocused as the younger alicorn of the night teleported the two away, leaving the rest of the group a bit confused.

"Twilight," her sister in-law asked as she walked over to her family and friends with an eyebrow raised. "I just felt some powerfully strong love here. Care to explain?"

One short explanation later, all the glass in the Crystal Empire broke due to one very shrill shriek of joy.

* * *

>With a pop, Lemon and Nyx found themselves in front of the Sugarcube Corner, with the stallion trying to look cross at the mare next to him.

"Nyxie, I thought we planne-" Lemon started when he noticed he wasn't alone.

"Hiya." Nyx smiled at a frowning Applejack, Rainbow Dash and Rarity Belle. Pinkie Pie was simply smiling a bit less, which was easily equatable to a frown. "How are you?" With a less than subtle elbow to the ribs, the alicorn mare nudged her head towards the four mares already present to meet the two.

"Hello, miss Apple, miss Dash, miss Belle, miss Pie," Lemon said in a strained tone, looking to the side. "I -"

Before he could continue speaking, a purple scaly hand reached down and grabbed the alicorn stallion. Lifting Lemon up in the air, the dragon glared at the pony. "If you ever hurt my sister again, we will learn exactly how long it takes for my body to digest you, got it?!" Spike thundered, eyes narrowed in barely restrained anger.

"Spike!" both Nyx and Rarity shouted, causing Spike to reluctantly place the stallion back down on the ground. The unicorn's eyes glared up at her husband before glancing over at the young alicorn mare and gasping loudly as she noticed the piece of jewelry on her horn.

"Nyxie, dear, is - is that what I think that is?" she asked, a hoof pressed against her chest and eyes already watering in joy.

"If you think it is an engagement ring, it is!" Nyx smiled, beaming with joy as all the other mares gasped loudly at the news. Spike leaned down to hug his sister tightly, his grin going from ear to ear.

"Well, shucks, ain't that the best news Ah've heard in a while!" Applejack took her hat off, kicking the ground with one foot.

"Thank you, miss App- OW!" Lemon shouted in pain as Applejack punched him square in the shoulder.

"That's _for being a total idiot, ya darn fool!" Applejack was brooking no argument, already landing another punch into his shoulder. "That's _for thinking we wouldn't forgive ya, and don't ya dare try and tell me otherwise."

Lemon's ears folded, muttering curses in Low Gothic as he tried to reclaim usage of his right foreleg, to no real success. It was not helped when Applejack punched him again in the same place, causing Lemon to swear a bit louder.

"What the hay was that for, Applejack?!" Lemon growled, his anger growing before he was aware of it.

"That's _for treating us like strangers, silly," Pinkie Pie said, pulling Lemon and Nyx into a tight hug. "Now tell us how it happened! Auntie Pinkie Pie needs to know!" Her grin was far larger than normal, and no one was sure if it was due to Pinkie Pie being Pinkie Pie or if she was using her warp goddess powers to fully express her joy.

"Well, if you don't mind, I am going to let the girls know the good news so Lemon can tell you all the details!" Nyx leaned up for another kiss before taking to the air, leaving her fianc   alone with her slightly predatory aunts to let the stallion know she was still a bit sore about their breakup. "See you soon, Lemon baby!" she shouted, giggling as Lemon gave her a rude gesture in return for using the same trick twice on him, only for Dash to smack him upside the head.

* * *

>"So, girls," Nyx smiled as she flew into the clubhouse, where her five best friends were sitting, "you heard that Leman and I are talking again?"

"Eeyuup." Apple Bloom nodded her head, looking at the alicorn with a raised eyebrow. It was noticable that she wasn't a filly like usual, but a young mare on the cusp of full marehood. "Mah sis mentioned you summoned Twilight, Fluttershy and Luna for somethin', and we figured that we should all be here for whatever news you've got for us."

"Yeah." Nyx's smile grew as she nodded her head, letting her mane drop from her horn; a reflective gleam caught the eyes of all the fillies. "You can say that." Nyx let an awkward laugh out, rubbing her hooves together. "I'm engaged!"

There was a loud gasp from everyone in the room, with a rush of congratulations, praises and questions rushing out of their mouths before they all paused and looked at each other before they all shouted in unison.

***"DIBS ON MAID OF HONOUR!"**

The five looked at each other again, sharing a wicked glare.

"Wait, girls, I know how to handle thi-" Knowing what was coming, Nyx tried to prevent the chaos and destruction but was too late.

***"CUTIE MARK CRUSADER MAID OF HONOUR YAY!"** With that, the five fillies dashed off to create the rules of how to decide who would be their best friend's maid of honour, leaving Nyx feeling very sorry for everyone.

Licking her lips, Nyx decided that she should go rescue her fiancÃ© from her aunts, though she had been the one who'd left him to deal with them. She then giggled to herself: her fiancÃ©! With a smile, she flew back to Sugar Cube Corner, hoping that Lemman hadn't annoyed Applejack again; he was already down one leg, after all.

* * *

>163.11 (Bliss Authority) (Undertale)

"â€|Thus did the humans win the great war, their seven greatest sorcerers sealing away Ponykind beyond the Barrier MirrorOOOOKAY this Loop is sure starting with a bang," Twilight said as she Woke Up. She closed the book she had been reading, looked at the cover, saw that the cover was the same as baseline, and reopened it to the chapter on the great war between Humans and Ponykind.

Spike dug at the inside of his ear with a claw. "Okay, did I mishear that, or is this one going to be a strange one?"

Twilight drew a tree in the ground. "Root and Branch, please let this not be a Bureau loop."

"Boy, you can say that again," Spike said. "So what do your loop memories say? Cause mine aren't really all that relevant. Just a bunch of baseline #1 assistant things. Which reminds me â€" we should totally do Moondancer's party this time."

"Oh yeah, wouldn't miss that for the world," Twilight said, flipping through the book. "A â€" huh. There we go. Nightmare Moon was banished for trying to breach the Mirror and war on humanity, and on the thousandth year of the longest night the yadda will yadda in her yadda." Twilight sent out a quick Ping, frowning. "Given everything else about the loop's history, I REALLY hope Sunset is Awake this iteration..."

"Do ya have Celestia's half of her diary in your Pocket?" Spike said.

Twilight shook her head. "Good thinking, but I'm not going to risk tipping off an Unawake Sunset if there WAS a war between ponies and humans and she defected â€" or worse, still thinks she's 'on ponykind's side.' That can wait for a Loyalty to confirm it's her. Still -"

Twilight just then got thirteen responses to her Ping in rapid succession, including Spike's. Thirteen fellow Loopers, no other information â€" frustratingly vague, but at least she wouldn't have to do this alone. "Right. Send out the usual letter and ask if there have been any stirrings around this 'Barrier Mirror' in particular. In the meantime, make your preparations for the party: I'm going to get some going-away presents for my Canterlot friendsâ€| and some history books."

Spike gave her a brisk salute. "Aye aye, Captain!" he said, with only the barest hint of irony.

* * *

>Frisk woke up to the familiar sensation of tumbling headfirst into the darkness, rolled her eyes, and got set to break her fall. There was a blur of yellow beneath her as usual â€" but somehow, there was also some pink â€"

**POMPF.** She landed in prime position to roll on her arms. Only this time, there was a soft squeal, something like the sound of a dog toy squeaking, as she landed â€" followed by the unmistakable sound of someone blowing a raspberry.

The pink, shaggy, vaguely equine monster that broke Frisk's fall turned to look at her, then stuck out its tongue with another raspberry sound.

Frisk blinked at it. It repeated the gesture back to her.

Acting on impulse, Frisk threw her stick. The creature gasped, then shot off after the object.

Chuckling, Frisk looked around the room, trying to see if anything was different, and took a bag of popato chisps from her pocket for a snack while she did so. Jizo's explanation of what Loopers could do had been thorough without being pedantic or irritating; Loop memories and a Pocket were the first things she'd figured out, and she was working on the Ping.

Hell, her actual lowercase 'P' pockets acted as sort of a small uppercase 'P' Pocket, even in baseline; there was no other explanation for how she managed to keep (even ever-fresh, monstrous) slices of pie, hot-dogs, _ice cream, _burgers, steaks, _tutus_ and _frying pans_ in there and still retrieve them all in completely pristine condition. Frisk hadn't questioned how until now, but it was undeniably useful â€" especially since she now could carry items with her into the next Loop.

Suddenly, there was a pink snout under Frisk's arm. The fluffy creature had returned with the stick (from, Frisk noted with some amusement, a completely different direction than the one Frisk had thrown said stick) and was now inspecting the chisps with its (her?) nose.

Clearly the proper thing to do was to pet it and give it some chisps. Petting fluffy monsters had gotten Frisk pretty far in the loops, and she wasn't about to stop now. This earned another happy gasp â€" not a big surprise, as petting had always proved to be the blatantly correct choice.

"I see you have made another friend," a familiar voice said. Frisk turned towards that voice â€ â€" and started at the huge, goat-eyed, quadrupedal creature wearing Toriel's robes.

"Tori?" Frisk asked.

"Do not be afraid," the goat sighed. "I remain your friend, Toriel, caretaker of what has proven a very different set of Ruins this Loop. You are fortunate that this particular Loop's version of Flowey is â€" indisposed, at the moment. But she will not be for much longer. We must make haste before they find us here."

"Why are you a goat, mom?" Frisk asked. "And what do you mean, 'indisposed?'"

Toriel â€" this transformed Toriel â€" sighed, putting a split hoof to her forehead. "If you have not yet consulted your Loop Memories, do so now. I understand they are usually much more useful for Sans and I in particular, but this is of the most vital importance."

Frisk shrugged. She knew how this story went anyway â€" getting in an argument with her parents and running away (sometimes), getting lost exploring Mount Ebott (sometimes), her friends at Canterlot High School daring her to touch the statue of a horse (sometimes), and â€

Wait a second. Canterlot High School? From a former equine city â€" equine, not monstrous â€" that the humans claimed as their own, the site of the Mirror Barrier?

The pink fluff pony gasped, then rooted through the potato chips that Frisk had dropped in her shock. It squealed its delight.

"It's a bit unnerving when your memories and those memories don't match up, isn't it?" murmured Toriel.

"Oh shit," Frisk groaned.

"Language," Toriel scolded.

"Ptthbt," Fluffle Puff replied.

* * *

>Twilight walked into Moondancer's party with Spike, several gifts, and a frown. Celestia's return letter made it clear that she wasn't Awake, but otherwise raised more questions than it answered. In particular, it emphasized that Twilight was to "show the visiting emissaries of the Goat Kingdom a good time." She spoke with Moondancer and the others on the subject, trying to fish for information.

"They ARE only our closest allies," Moondancer said, smiling â€" clearly glad to be the expert in this situation, to be able to teach Twilight something important instead of the other way round. (Ficus, was she always this obvious about her regard for Twilight in baseline? But that was a tangent.) "Their research into magitech and applied metaphysics is second to none, particularly as it applies to soul theory â€" among other things, their Royal Scientist figured out some things with very interesting implications about cutie marks."

"I heard a rumor that they helped develop some of our most powerful weapons, right after the Human War," Lyra said, looking Twilight right in the eyes. "As in, just in time to fight Discord and Nightmare Moon."

"You hear ALL SORTS of rumors," Lemon Drop said, laughing. "Tell us again about how three humans beat Tirek instead of Firefly Thunderhoof."

"They helped Firefly, they didn't beat him on their own," Lyra said. She winked at Twilight. "Stay woke, all of you."

Aha. Lyra â€" well, all of the Lyrae â€" were awake. That made things significantly easier. (Also the events of a Gen 1 loop were apparently the antiquity of this Loop â€" possibly useful information.)

"I don't think I'll be able to get much sleep done when I have a job this important," Twilight said. "But that's nothing new. I'm always Awake. When does that ever change?"

"We always did have too much blood in our caffeine systems," Lemon Drops said.

Moondancer brayed laughter. "Amen. You should get some Pony Joe's coffee grounds for the road â€" I know they always help me when I cram."

Twilight had done her shopping and packing for the trip already and considered saying way ahead of you. Then she thought better of it, and beamed at her biggest fan instead. "Good idea, Moondancer; I think I'll have time tomorrow. I'm going to need to find a replacement in Ponyville â€" Lyra, you live there, where do you recommend?"

Lyra got up. "You know what, we should probably compare notes. Mind if I borrow Twilight, Moonie? Don't worry, I'll bring your waifu back safe and sound."

Moondancer stammered something incoherent in reply.

"Great!" said Twilight, who was suddenly uncomfortable herself. "I'm just getting some fresh air, and don't worry â€" she's taken."

Oh, Branch. Why did Twilight say that? Moondancer put her hooves over her glasses as they left, Lemon Drops giving her the waggly eyebrows.

As soon as they were out of earshot of the others, Twilight turned to Lyra. "I hate the Variants where I need to turn her down," Twilight muttered. "Right, Lyra. Who's Awake?" she said. "Is Sunset awake? Let's start with that."

"Yes, Sunset's Awake, thank Pine," Lyra said, her expression unusually stern. "We've also got Spike, the other five original Element-Bearers, Trixie, Shining, De- well she's going by Muffins Redacted this loop, but you know who she is â€œ"

Twilight facehoofed. "Muffins. Redacted."

"I told Bon Bon I knew about her deep cover 'Monster Aggression Response Equines' stuff and 'Muffins Redacted's' mom is Bonnies' handler this loop, Data Expunged. Okay? Great, now I lost my train of tho-"

Lyra shook her head, and her entire body language changed. She stood up on her hind legs and cracked her neck. "Okay, I'm going to take over cause _I_ didn't lose track," Lyra said. "The other three are Chrissy, Candy, and Ivory."

"I'm addressing human-Lyra, right?" Lyra nodded at Twilight's question â€œ" and Twilight cringed. "Oh root it, you're part human. That might beâ€œ| troublesome for you," Twilight remarked.

"Like you wouldn't believe," Human-Lyra growled. "This Loop's cosmology is all about souls, and I have a human soul â€œ" speaking! â€œ" and a bunch of others. Have you brushed up on this Loop's Soul Theory?"

"I was going to after Moondancer brought it up," Twilight said.

"You better," Human-Lyra said. "I'm pretty much ascended without the wings or hooves right now, and if anyone who isn't Awake or Bon-Bon finds that out I'm in deep trouble."

"WHAT!?"

"Keep it down, Twilight," Lyra hissed. "But yeah, I've gone full Alicorn without actually going full Alicorn, just by having a human soul jumbled up with the rest of my alters. Turns out monsters, including us ponies, can take them this Loop; I remember someone on the wrong side of the Mirror willingly giving me one with their dying breath as part of my Loop Memories â€œ" human-side Lyra. Phenomenal cosmic powers â€œ" all you need is a dead human and you're in business."

"Oh no," Twilight groaned. "No, no, no, no, no. That's what the war was over in the first place, wasn't it?"

"Bingo." Lyra sighed. "Tirek was the only one that tried to steal souls, but Tirek was bad enough to get the rest of humanity panicking about the fillies and gentlecolts from across the Rainbow Bridge."

"I'm not sure if I can blame them," Twilight said. She put her hoof under her lip and frowned. "Equestria isn't exactly a bad place to live, but it's also a lot more dangerous than Sunset's world even without that additional temptation. Abacus Cinch aside, anyway."

Lyra folded her fetlocks. "Oh, and you can go through the Mirror to and from Canterlot High, but you can't get out without at least a human soul and a monster soul in one body. Loop Memories say we used to sneak across, shifting bodies with magic. M.A.R.E. took advantage of that, with my and Bonnie's permission."

"This has to be a Fused Loop," Twilight said. "But I've never even heard of a universe that functioned this way before."

"Maybe it just started Looping?" Lyra suggested, shrugging.

"Are you two okay?" Moondancer called from across the hall.

Twilight turned and waved. Then, after shaking her head, Lyra got on all fours and started trotting back.

Twilight followed, thinking. Assuming a Fused Loop, the other universe was new enough that the Loopers didn't know how to Ping yet â€" none of them had responded to any of the fourteen native pings. Moreover, the Goat King wasn't baseline â€" if he wasn't the Looper, one of his retinue almost certainly _was,_ and they were all VIPs on their way to the Summer Sun Festival.

She was going to get the Loopers on the same page with letters from Spike, and get a course of action ready - to greet the new Loopers, and to get them up to speed, and protect them from what was looking to be a much more dangerous Nightmare Moon than baseline.

Right after she dealt with the much more fearsome task of friendzoning Moondancer.

Twilight audibly gulped.

* * *

>

**Author's Note:****

163.1: Admit it, you'd do it if you had the resources.

163.2: Well, it's a data point.

163.3: On balance, I'm more sorry for Dash.

163.4: Let's just say that strange things happen in the Loops and leave it at that.

163.5: Remnant. Guilt free carnage since some time a while ago.

163.6: She may regret this later.

163.7: It actually makes a great deal of sense.

163.8: The short story by Terry Bisson. (Sort of.)

163.9: I do not know enough to comment. And, based on what I've heard about this show, neither do you at this point.

163.10: An ouncement.

164.1 (Rowan Ex)

"Any plans?" Twilight asked her fellow Loopers. They had just defeated Nightmare Moon, at which point Nyx Awoke; said filly was now was sitting with them at Town Hall. "Besides watching out for Variants, or trying to do an impossible thing, such as trying to replicate Divinium, which I fancied doing when I had a Call of Duty Zombies-like variant?"

"Wellâ€¦" Pinkie, one of the Awake Loopers present, pulled out a long list from her Subspace Pocket. "I was planning on mass-multiplying my party cannon and giving every party pony in the whole of Equestria one."

Applebloom looked at Pinkie before she presented her own plan. "I was plannin' to create my own alethiometer this Loop."

"Isn't that the compass-thing that can tell the truth?" Applejack guessed. "Why you makin' it?"

Applebloom stared at her sister. "Just something I wanna experiment on since it was said to, you know."

Seconds passed before Twilight spoke up. "Are you trying to expand your technological knowledge by replicating some of the greatest yet probably the most powerful, corruptible items in the whole Yggdrasil?" Applebloom nodded. "Are you okay, or it's just your Element of Magic sputtering and clanking?" Twilight joked. "Just kidding. Are you sure you want to replicate one?"

"Why?" Applebloom asked.

"Wellâ€¦" Twilight tried to come up with an explanation on how she attempted to create her own only to cause a Loop Crash because of multiple dimensions. "... Good luck on that, Little Engie."

"'Little Engie?' Really?" Nyx asked.

"Don't ask me where I got that nickname," Twilight casually replied. "It's a secret."

"Awâ€¦"

"That, and even your pouty face just makes me remind me NOT to tell where I got the nickname," Twilight insisted.

As they were talking, Applebloom sneaked out and headed towards the CMC clubhouse, where two Awake friends waited for her.

"So, baseline cutie marks?" Scootaloo suggested.

Sweetie Belle looked at her blank flank and then to Applebloom.

"Sure," Applebloom decided. "After I do this."

* * *

>In the CMC Clubhouse GarageSubspace Garage/Applebloom's Tinkering

Workshop etc., Applebloom tried to draw out the blueprint of the golden compass. Nyx just watched.

"I don't know why you want to build your own alethiometer but Twilight once tried to build it," said Nyx. "I'm also not sure if that would be fine..."

"Why not? Ah can do it!" Applebloom defended. "What happened to her alethiometer anyway?"

"Didn't got finished and ended up crashing the Loop," Nyx explained.

Applebloom paused and looked at Nyx. "It did? Huh." She continued sketching her blueprint. "Have ya heard by chance the story of 'The Little Engine That Could?' Maybe that'll make ya think a bit. Besides, Ah'm sure Ah can do it without making the Loop crash."

While Applebloom continued, Nyx remembered something.

"Isn't the alethiometer's thing to tell the truth, like an Element of Honesty?" Nyx asked. "Why are you building your own?"

Applebloom chuckled. "It's not all the time the others are Awake, and not every Loop will have an Element of Honesty Awake, y'know."

Nyx considered the thought and smiled. "Good luck with that."

* * *

>164.2 (AlexPrior, Masterweaver)

"...Wait, so... there's a giant egg-shaped boulder in the middle of your family's rock farm."

"Yep!"

"Which, according to legend, your family founder discovered in a _dragon nest._"

"Uh huh!"

"...Now, admittedly, I know for a fact that Spike's egg is usually only about the size of a filly. But... Pinkie, something egg-shaped. Found in a nest. A nest, I must add, belonging to a rather gargantuan species."

"...what about it, Twilight?"

"...call me crazy, but is it possible-just possible, mind you-that the boulder in question might, oh I don't know, actually be _a feathering dragon's egg?!_"

Pinkie paused, frowned, tapped her chin, and hmmmmed. "...you know, I never really thought about that. I guess it could explain why my family tends to be so... off..."

* * *

>Discord tapped the boulder thoughtfully.

"Dragon egg? What was Twilight on? That's not a dragon egg. It's a _draconequus_ egg." He looked startled. "Good heavens, I think I just figured out Pinkie Pie."

The draconequus glanced around furtively. "Better keep that to myself. Twilight's going to go pancakes over this..."

He disappeared with a flash, leaving no evidence for him ever being there.

* * *

>164.3 (Masterweaver)

"Twilight?" Applejack cautiously walked up to her friend, hat to her chest.

The unicorn gave her a careful look. "...yes Applejack?"

"Well... ya know how..." Applejack rubbed the back of her head.

"Well, uh... how yer tree is destroyed every loop?"

Twilight winced. "_Yes._"

"Ah just wanna say, Ah'm right sorry for all tha times Ah poked fun at that."

That got Twilight to raise an eyebrow. "Not that I'm rejecting your apology, but... what exactly brought this on?"

Applejack sighed. "Am Ah that obvious?"

"New expansion, sudden apology..." Twilight shrugged. "I hear about Holder's Boulder a lot in lonely loops."

Applejack winced. "Yeah... even when Ah avoid tha rock farm, somethin' happens to that rock, and somehow it gets back to me. Last loop there was a volcanic eruption on the Pie's farm, thing just ended up crashing through mah roof." She gave Twilight a worried look. "Do ya ever get a reprieve?"

Twilight put a hoof on her shoulder, looked deep into her eyes, and smiled broadly. "_Never._"

* * *

>164.4 (Vinylshadow)

Moondancer was rather surprised at the turnout her party had garnered. While she wasn't all that surprised to see Lyra, Minuette, Twinkleshine and Lemon Hearts, she _was_ surprised to see a familiar lavender unicorn sampling the punch.

"Twilight Sparkle?" she asked, approaching the lavender unicorn slowly. Twilight turned to face her and surprised the yellow-gray-coated mare with a hug.

"Moondancer! It's so nice to see you. Have you been keeping up with your studies?" the bookworm asked, pulling back to grin at the utterly bemused unicorn.

Caught off guard, Moondancer fixed her glasses with her magic and smiled awkwardly. "Of course I have. I'm surprised you made it, though; you usually have your nose buried in a book..." her eyes went wide. "You didn't run out of books to read, did you?"

Twilight snickered. "Of course not," she said reassuringly. "I just wanted to spend time with my old friends before heading off to Ponyville."

"Ponyville?" Moondancer echoed. "Can't say that rings a bell."

"Well, I've been doing some reading on early settlements..." Twilight shot a mock glare at Moondancer, who quickly turned her stifled laughter into a cough. "And it has quite the illustrious history. It's also one of the few places in Equestria where Zap Apples grow naturally."

"Oh, sounds like you're going to be busy then," Moondancer said morosely. Twilight shook her head.

"Nonsense, it's only a short train ride away. Besides, I'm sure I'll have plenty of time to come and visit you; I'm..._very_ good with managing my time."

Moondancer didn't look convinced and Twilight added casually, "I'll also bring you any books I find that might interest you..."

Moondancer arched an eyebrow. "Really? And what kind of books would an old town like Ponyville have to offer?"

"You'd be surprised," Twilight said seriously. "Probably quite a few historical volumes that cover events that took place in the nearby Everfree forest, home to the ruins of the Castle of the Royal Sisters for starters."

Moondancer sighed dramatically. "Very well, I guess I'll have to put up with infrequent visits and poring over long dusty novels."

"Ah, don't be like that, Moonie," Twilight said, throwing a hoof across the other mare's withers. "The day is still young, so let's liven this party up with our tandem dancing, like the old days!"

* * *

>Celestia and Luna watched the thick cloud of smoke rising from Canterlot with varying levels of amusement. Luna nudged her sister.

"I can see where Twilight got her dancing skills from. You never were that graceful on the dance floor."

Celestia bravely took the blow. "She never asked for lessons, so I never bothered to bring in a dance instructor..." Her voice trailed off, and a look that would've cowed a dragon took its place on her face. "Luna, bring me the phone book. I have some calls to make."

* * *

>164.5 (Vinylshadow - PrototypeMLP)

Alex Mercer wasn't used to dreaming. He had started out with a single desire to survive when he had entered the dying body of the original Mercer. After that, most of his experience had come secondhand from consuming people.

They had hopes, desires, wants, needs...and dreams. He had spent some time going over the strange sequences of memories that plagued humans once they fell asleep and hadn't had what he considered a true dream until he started Looping.

Unfortunately, his dreams - while in Equestria, at least - had been of the Conversion Bureau and the things he had done there to a mostly UnAwake Equestria.

He had been relieved to know he hadn't harmed any Awake Equestrian Loopers, since he had become friends with a few of them.

Still, the things he had seen and done didn't fall under any of the criteria that resembled a dream, so what...?

"They're called nightmares," a voice said quietly. The Prototype Changeling jumped a little and turned to see Luna regarding him neutrally.

"Good evening, Princess Luna," he said, dipping his head.

She made a sour face. "We're friends, Alex, no need to be so formal with me," she said, rubbing a hoof over her leg. "Neither of us - my sister and I - like having friends refer to us as Princesses, so..."

"I understand," Alex said, which caused the Mistress of Dreams to relax.

"Your memories of the Bureau are...not uncommon," Luna said slowly. "It's probably one of the most hated Loop Variants throughout Yggdrasil and rarely are Loopers penalized for crashing such Loops, since anything is better than living through it." She trailed off, looking somewhat hesitant before she asked, "Have you ever had another Loop there?"

Alex shook his head. "No, nothing but various points in your Baseline. The Changeling Invasion of Canterlot was...interesting."

Luna arched one eyebrow. "Why's that?"

"Getting hurled halfway across Equestria by a wave of supercharged Love is just as agonizing as you'd expect," Alex said with a grin. "Although I was disguised and helping ponies escape the city, it still picked me out, burned my wings off and picked the sturdiest tree to smash my head through. Brought back fond memories of my Baseline, actually."

Luna looked at him oddly. "You're a strange one, Mercer."

"I learned from the best," Alex said with a shrug. "The Loops are a strange place. I find it's easier to tolerate them if you either find or make reasons to laugh at them rather than letting the horror of what's happening sink in. Besides, spend enough time with the Doctor and you kinda become numb to the point where all you can do is laugh at the absurdity of it all."

"So you're happy?" Luna asked.

"Quite so," Alex said.

"Well then, I hope you enjoy the rest of the Loop. It was nice talking to you," Luna said, her horn lighting up as the dream dissolved around them.

* * *

>164.6 (katfairy)

There was a pony in the library. An actual, non-Looping pony. Clearly looking for a book.

Twilight wasn't sure how to handle this. She could count the number of times it had happened on the fingers of one foot, and since she had hooves, that said a lot. Still, it was behavior that she wished to encourage, so she greeted the honey-colored mare with a smile, telling her that if she had any questions, all she had to do was ask and Twilight would be more than happy to help. The mare thanked her, then began to browse the shelves. After a minute or so, it became obvious that she was doing exactly what it looked like, so Twilight returned her attention to her latest project: cross-indexing the Variant Cutie Marks she'd seen.

"Excuse me, Miss Sparkle? I'm looking for a book on Pavlov's Dog and Schrodinger's Cat?"

"It rings a bell, but I'm not sure if it's here or not," she replied absently.

A stifled snicker brought her back to the real world, and she reviewed the last few seconds.

* * *

>Chrysalis zoomed through Ponyville, laughing so hard that ponies were surprised she could maintain her course, pursued by a suddenly-alicorned Twilight Sparkle wielding an inordinately large squirt bottle. Roseluck gaped at them, almost dropping the peck of apples she was buying.

"Twilight Sparkle is an alicorn?" she gasped.

"Looks like," Applejack drawled. "That'll be two bits, please."

* * *

>164.7 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Luna Woke Up on the surface of the Moon. Taking a moment to go over her Loop Memories, she realized she had only been there for a few decades of her thousand-year exile. She knew she could easily break the seal, but there were times she liked to use the period of quiet to review previous Loops.

And maybe meet the other moon creatures.

The Night Princess had been surprised to find living creatures on and below the surface of the celestial body she usually controlled. The creatures ranged from batponies to seaponies to strange creatures collectively called the Nyx.

The Nyx often had varying backstories. Sometimes they were in fact named after the Greek goddess of the night. Others, they had been named after Nyx Sparkle, who sometimes shared the Moon with her as Nightmare Moon. Other times, it was because the only word they said was 'Nyx.'

Communicating with them also varied. Sometimes they could speak, other times, it was telepathy. The most bizarre version had been the time they spoke the word 'Nyx' and Luna could read an entire paragraph or two from the word itself.

Unfortunately, Luna was alone this Loop, so she started doodling on the surface of the moon. It was another of her favorite pastimes. Over the Loops, she had turned the moon into the Death Star, Death Egg and the Moon from Termina. The last one had convinced ponies that they had somehow angered the moon and petitioned Celestia to release her early.

This time around, however, she decided on something a little more low-key.

* * *

>Celestia Woke Up a few days before the Summer Sun Celebration and walked out onto her balcony to lower the moon.

Looking up, the Solar Diarch stopped and stared up, jaw hanging loosely as she beheld her sister's latest masterpiece.

Opposite the usual Mare-in-the-Moon blemish was another stylized mare's head. Whereas the Nightmare's head was darker than the moon's surface, this one was lighter than it.

"Impressive, Lulu," Celestia murmured approvingly.

* * *

>164.8 (Rowan Ex)

Watching her library tree get burned down by her Unawake means with Rainbow Dash, Twilight stared at the rainbow-maned pegasus and coughed to get her attention.

"So, make Unawake me listen to a song with an undefined word causes this," Twilight pointed out. "What you gonna do?"

Rainbow Dash pulled out a gold-plated sword and raised it. "Well, probably stir up some 'lost girls' and shout the undefined word?"

Twilight smirked. "Oh sure, bangarang."

* * *

>Celestia was about to rest her head for the day until her sister barged in wearing wooden armor.

"Bangarang, Luna!" a very familiar voice shouted. "Take the throne!"

'_Is that Twilight and her friends?'_ Celestia thought as what would seem as the ponies of Ponyville and a changeling hive surrounded the palace. '_What are changelings doing here?_'

* * *

>Meanwhile, Chrysalis and Twilight Sparkle enjoyed the sight for a change. Chrysalis had to ask though.

"What gave you the idea to form this?" the changeling queen asked.

Twilight pulled out a salvaged 'bangarang', which was just a flaming boomerang or a flamarang. "Unawake me listened to Rainbow Dash's music, got totally weirded out by the word 'bangarang,' made this thing, got the library burning, and then I Woke Up."

"I just had to ask," Chrysalis muttered.

* * *

>164.9 (Scorntex)

* * *

>"I'm so glad you all stayed here for my lecture," Twilight concluded, "without having to be coerced or blackmailed this time. And that's it."

Throughout the room, several ponies awoke from their completely accidental naps they had definitely not intended to take.

"Except of course," Twilight's smile vanished completely, "for one last item of business. _Pinkie._"

"Yuh-huh?"

Twilight turned to look at the party pony with an almost terrifying glare. "Stop it. _Now._"

Pinkie glanced about the room nervously. "S-stop what, Twilight? I'm not doing anyt-" Twilight kept glaring. At this, a change overcame Pinkie Pie. The smile vanished, her mane deflated.

"Fine." Pinkie Pie lifted a hoof to her head, and with one swift motion... removed what turned out to be a surprisingly good mask and wig, revealing the face of Starlight Glimmer.

"Wait." Rainbow Dash said, "What?"

"Starlight has been filling in for Pinkie since we first met," Twilight declared.

"How, exactly?" Rarity asked.

"Acting," Starlight said, "bluffing. A few pages of notes from the mare herself. Really insane luck."

She glowered at Twilight. "And I would've gotten away with it too, if it weren't for you!"

"Gotten away with what, exactly?" Fluttershy asked. "Have you actually been doing anything bad?"

Starlight looked about. "No. My plan was to imitate Pinkie Pie."

"The entire plan?" Nyx asked. Starlight nodded glumly.

"It made more sense when I thought about it..." she murmured. "And I kind of got lost in character."

"But..." Applejack said, "Hold on... that... wait..."

"The more you think about it," Twilight said, "the less it makes sense."

"It doesn't make any sense in the first place!"

"My point exactly," Twilight replied. "That's what the beer's for."

Applejack looked to her side, where there was now a flagon of beer, as there was with everypony else in the room. "How did - ?"

"I passed them out," Starlight said sheepishly. "I, ah, got kind of good at imitating some of your friend's ways."

The five Element Bearers and Nyx shared a morose look. "Girls," Twilight declared, "I declare we drink until this makes sense... or we pass out. Either one."

There was a resounding cry of "hear, hear" from everypony in the room.

* * *

>(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

My next stop on my journey was the home Loop of one Henry Walter Jones Jr. Or, as he's better known, Indiana Jones. The guy has done a lot of awesome things in his baseline in his search for legendary relics (though said relics tend to get destroyed, lost forever, or get stored in a warehouse; Indy is still angry about that last one.)

And yes, he's been compared to Han Solo. The two have spent a lot of Loops in the other's role, so he's heard that comparison a million times. And he's also been compared to the popular Equestrian book character Daring Do, and he's heard that enough as well.

We became friends pretty quickly; guess it helps that like me, Indy is pragmatic when it comes to battle; such as the time when he faced a swordsman, instead of grabbing a sword himself, Indy just drew his pistol and shot the swordsman. He also tends to think on the fly in situations, rather than plan them out to the last detail.

Indy is always trying to find rare artifacts during his Loops, but his luck tends to be the same as in baseline on that. Basically, he finds the artifacts, but something always happens to them.

When we met, he was wielding the Vampire Killer whip; as it turns out, my assumption that the Vampire Killer whip drains the life out of Loopers who Looped in as Belmonts, but kept the whip after due to the whip doing so to non-Belmonts in baseline was wrong. Well, I guess I can't always be right about analyzing how artifacts like that are from Loop to Loop.

Indy was willing to teach me what he knew about archeology during my time here, but as always with him, adventure soon follows.

Naturally, I joined Indy on his adventures, and he does get into a lot of crazy situations, even in baseline.

And even to this day, he STILL doesn't understand how he survived a nuclear explosion by hiding in a fridge. And yes, that is baseline.

I had a lot of fun on my adventures , and learned a lot as well. As always, I wonder where I'll end up next.

* * *

>164.10 (Rowan Ex)

(Dedicated for Nightmare Night and Egyptian Lovers!)

Sunset Shimmer Woke up walking towards Canterlot High School on what seemed to be a regular Loop until something clanged on her chest. She looked at the thing dangling from her neck and checked it out. It was a lavender Ankh amulet which seemed to glow faintly.

Shrugging, she Pinged. The amulet pulsed violet in response and wondered who was Anchoring this Loop since she never received any Pings in return, except for a small voice in her head. She tried to listen closely as she walked until she bumped to Fluttershy who meeped in surprise.

"Oh, Sunset!" The animal lover greeted. "Talking to that voice in the amulet again?"

_... Can you hear me now, Sunset?_ the voice finished. _Sunset Shimmer? It's me, Twilight. I'm Awake. I got your Ping._

"Uhâ€|" Sunset looked at her amulet then to Fluttershy. "I guess."

"Oh, Sunset," Fluttershy said as she giggled. "We're about to be late at class. Hurry up!"

"Game on, Fluttershy." They came charging in and got the whole student body to follow along, laughing.

* * *

>Sunset noticed that the Loop was actually a variant since there was no Equestria with ponies and the town where Canterlot High was is in England. However, she recognized the accents and there was no british accented among the group causing her to think that this town is an isolated island slightly near the English Archipelago.

As she went home, the first thing that greeted her were two dog small statues beside the door. '_I must've been a world traveler this Loop,'_ she thought. '_Because those look like Chinese stuff.'_ She entered her house to find thousands of artifacts all neatly designed between everything else. '_This isâ€|" amazing for my Unawake self.'_

As she looked around, her eyes landed on a picture with seven figures on it. She approached the picture and saw who they were.

_Huh, you're basically a superstar this Loop,_ Twilight commented.

"Why so?" Sunset asked, clutching her amulet and staring at it.

Twilight was silent for a few seconds. _You're friends with them, especially human Fluttershy. I've never seen her race with you like that._

"Like what?" Sunset idly asked before she recounted what she said. "You never saw her like that before?"

_I never visit that much, _Twilight admitted. _Since when every time you Wake up, you come over to Equestria most of your visits. Hey, speaking of Equestria, have you tried sticking your Keyblade in where the portal was supposed to be?_

"Very subtle," Sunset answered. "Yes, I tried it and it didn't work."

_So that means you're a native to this world this Loop._ Twilight guessed. _I just wonder something._

"Ask me anything," Sunset said.

_Why am I a disembodied spirit living in a lavender Ankh amulet?_ she asked. _And does it mean as long as the amulet being not destroyed the Loop will continue?_

"One, my Loop memories tell that I got this amulet from a pyramid expedition with hieroglyphics talking about ponies," Sunset replied.

"Two, maybe. What will happen if I placed it in my Subspace Pocket?"

_That might count as destroying, so maybe you should try it before the Loop ends,_ Sunset felt a tug and looked at the amulet which was floating. H_ey, I can do this too! What if Iâ€¦| Sunset, this might hurt a little bitâ€¦|_

"Why?" Sunset asked. She was answered by the amulet flying towards head, knocking her unconscious.

_Whoops, my bad!_ Twilight told her. As she waited for Sunset to wake up, she thought of something and immediately set it into motion.

* * *

>Sunset woke up and realized she couldn't move her body at all. She tried to look around only to realize that she replaced Twilight Sparkle in the Ankh amulet which now glowed orange.

"Sorry about this," Twilight said to the amulet. "But apparently knocking out someone who wears the amulet can make the disembodied spirit inside switch bodies with the wearer."

_Does that mean I knock you out and everything will come back to normal?_ Sunset asked, an imaginary mischievous grin forming on her head.

"Yes," Twilight replied. "Why did youâ€¦"

*CLANG!*

* * *

>Fluttershy and her other friends looked at Sunset Shimmer who was in a hospital bed due to a concussion in her head and possibly brain damage. As they left their own regards, Sunset called them back to fetch her Ankh amulet. After a moment's hesitation, Sunset realized that Rainbow Dash was wearing the amulet and using Twilight's knowledge to pass her grades.

"Oh, you've got to be kidding me," Sunset swore.

"Nope," Rainbow Dash proudly stated. "This amulet of yours made me 20% more awesome."

"What's with the thingamajig anyway?" Applejack asked.

"A very intelligent but slightly paranoid librarian spirit trapped in that magical amulet which is thousands of years old," Sunset replied. "I got it from a pyramid expedition."

Dash frowned. "She says she's not paranoid."

"I rest my case, Rainbow Dash. I rest my case." Sunset thought of something. "Unless you're not Rainbow Dash, Twilight Sparkle."

Rainbow gasped and slack-jawed as the amulet glowed in an angry shade of blue.

_The Next Loopâ€|_

"Uhâ€| Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Sunset Shimmer's forcing me to make thousands of Egyptian-themed dresses. What should I do?"

Twilight looked at Rarity. "I don't know. Maybe make a lot of those Egyptian crosses instead and place it around the Boutique. Besides, Nightmare Night is near. Maybe she also wants a costume."

"Ok, thanks for the opinion darling!" Rarity left afterwards, leaving the librarian alone.

Twilight looked around and summoned Sunset Shimmer, who was an Egyptian pony for this Loop since the Crystal Mirror only connected towards two points in the local dimension this Loop. "So, Sunset, what's with this Loop?"

"No pony believes me that I'm a pharaoh," Sunset complained. "And remember that crazy amulet?"

"What about it?" Twilight asked.

Sunset pulled out the Ankh amulet and wore it causing her appearance to change into those of the pharaohs. "See?"

"You gave the amulet a spell which made your appearance different," Twilight pointed out. "And you used that amulet last Loop."

"Yeah," Sunset replied. "Apparently it was cursed and when I placed it in my Subspace Pocket, it landed directly into a neutralizer which broke the curse, setting whoever was trapped in it free."

"And since I was the one trapped and I don't have a body that Loopâ€|"

"Yup, Loop crashed. All that I lastly remember is Osiris mad at me," Sunset answered as she hid the amulet again causing her appearance to return to normal. "Where's Rarity?"

"She just left," Twilight said. "Why do you want to have thousands of Egyptian-themed dresses anyway?"

Sunset smirked. "I just have a tiny plan."

* * *

>164.11 (Masterweaver)

"...so, I think we figured out that bug with the uneven expansion a while back," Sleipnir finished, "but for some reason trying to fix it tangled up the timeline a bit, so for the moment you're going to get a Nightmare Night AFTER Hearth's Warming. It should only be a few loops before we can fix that, though."

Twilight sighed. "Well, thanks for the heads up anyway... sounds like you've got quite a mess up there."

"Mmm... yes and no. There are a number of small bugs we're noticing, but they're very much 'grit in the gears' kind of things. For the most part, things are going quite smoothly."

"Really?"

"Yeah, it's pretty incredible, all things considered. I mean, there's even been talk of-" Sleipnir glanced around suddenly. "...well, I can't really tell you, because I don't want to get your hopes up."

"Oh, come on!"

"No, really. Sanity and all that."

Twilight groaned. "You realize the curiosity is going to eat away at me for whole loops now that you've said that?!"

"Look, it's not even really my department. If it works, I'll make sure you know, but honestly I'm mostly in the dark as well. It's just a rumor, anyway." Sleipnir cleared his throat. "On... another note, has Rainbow finished any more of her Iris Drake novels?"

"What?"

"It's just... me and Epona sometimes read our kid bedtime stories, and she really likes Iris Drake..."

* * *

>164.12: (Masterweaver, Vinylshadow)

Clover looked at Pansy.

Pansy looked at Clover.

Smart Cookie looked at them both. "Well, one of you is going to have to change." She tilted her head, suddenly adopting a somewhat more british accent. "I am of course programmed with costume options from over six hundred different cultures, and I would be very happy to provide alternatives for the both of you."

Pansy and Clover stared at their golden-painted companion's glowing eyes. They gave each other a look.

Then, as one, they lifted their right hooves and started walking forward. "DELETE... DELETE... DELETE..."

Unfortunately for the Cyberponies, gold was their one weakness and they soon had to give half their candy to the protocol droid.

* * *

>164.13 (Masterweaver)

Most people looking at Sunset Shimmer would probably not realize she was panicking. In fact, most people would assume, from the way she was very deliberately going about and making amends for her past behavior, that she had in fact gained some sort of confidence in herself that let her be less... standoffish.

Very few would pick up on the way she tapped her hip rapidly with a single finger, the occasional roll of her shoulder as she straightened her back, and the brief adjustments of her forelock of hair.

When she'd heard the ping on _this_ side of the mirror, she'd quickly contacted Twilight and let her know. She had assumed that the looper in question was a student either at Canterlot High or, possibly, Crystal Prep. However, a perusal of both their records had led to no inconsistencies... at least, none she could note. She'd looked into the teachers next-maybe the looper was older-but, no, everyone was who they were supposed to be there too. The visitor could have been a random citizen, that was true, but... there was still the option of the Sirens.

Which was a problem, because the Sirens tended to operate off the map; their paper trails were almost nonexistent and filled with aliases, _where_ they set up shop would vary disturbingly often, and they could pack up and slip away if they caught even a whiff of a follower. It did make sense, given that they'd presumably been hiding from civilization for a thousand plus years, but it did mean that Sunset almost always had to make a scene if she wanted to find them. And that was before she factored in the Ping; one of the Sirens was a looper this time round, and she couldn't tell if it was a Replacement or, perhaps, if one of them had been activated in a Fused Loop.

Either way... either way, the situation could go south in a hurry.

Still, there were a few things she had on the Sirens. For one, Sonata Dusk almost always liked tacos-Sunset didn't understand _why_, but trademark foods were trademark for a reason. That meant whenever the Sirens went on their conflict raids, they'd usually choose Mexican restaurants to antagonize. Staking one out was easy enough; arrive every night with a few bucks and a winning smile, buy herself a meal, and then just wait till the shop closed. Sure, the staff got a bit curious, but all she had to say was that she was "waiting for somebody," and most of them dismissed her as a lovestruck teenage girl.

Which was a bit weird, all things considered. A lovestruck girl at a Mexican restaurant? Then again, there was a unicorn and a dragon married on the other side of the mirror, so she really couldn't judge the ideas the locals came up with...

It took about a month (and ninety five tacos) before her efforts paid off. Two familiar faces entered the building with an almost too casual manner, with only their eyes moving about to quickly ascertain there weren't any threats. Sunset noted that they weren't wearing their usual hoodies and sweatpants _or_ the deliberately provocative Battle of the Bands outfit, but something... casual. That was certainly odd. However, it wasn't until Aria leaned out and gestured that the third member entered, confirming Sunset's suspicions. She had green skin and wore her red hair in what could be called a ponytail of dreadlocks, a far cry from Adagio's own orange poofy mess.

With a small grin, Sunset Shimmer stood up and started walking toward the group. Aria noticed her first, sidling between her and the green woman quickly. As soon as the other two turned to look, Sunset sent out a ping and gave a Vulcan salute.

The green woman rose an eyebrow. "...Subtle."

Sunset frowned. "Yeah, well, sometimes I feel a little Loopy, you know?"

That got a snort. "Oh, I know. Keeps me Awake."

Aria glanced between the two. "Passaggio, do you know this person?"

"Mmm, not personally... but I've heard things about her little group." The woman patted Aria's shoulder reassuringly. "If she is who I think she is, she'll want to talk to me privately. Why don't you take a table where you can keep an eye on us?"

The purple singer's eyes darted between the two. "...come on, Sonata. Let's find a seat." She grabbed the blue woman's elbow, giving Sunset a pointed look as she passed.

* * *

>164.14 (Evilhumour)

[Warhammer40K/MLP]

Siege Patrol was working on the repairs of the Golden Oak Library with Twilight when he suddenly turned his head to the side. Staring straight at the tool box he said, "Pinkie Pie, I need the omniwrench you are sitting on."

"Okie dokie!" A pink pony hopped out of the tool box, to which the grey stallion nodded his thanks as he pulled out the omniwrench out and went to work on the foundation of the new tree.

He then paused, reaching into the cupboard and pulled out the offered cupcake that Pinkie Pie had out on a platter. Taking a bite with a hint of a smile on his face, he gave another nod of thanks and went to grab the reinforced tree trunk of the new library when he was stopped by a slack jaw Twilight.

"What?" Siege Patrol asked, blinking in confusion.

"H-h-_how_ are you doing that?!" Twilight squeaked out.

"What do you mean Twilight?" the pony titled his head.

"Finding Pinkie Pie!" Twilight shouted.

"Ah," Siege Patrol smiled as he walked over to a tiny stone. "Pinkie Pie has a miniature version of the Eye of Terror in her pocket, don't you?" he asked the stone.

"Yuppers!" Pinkie Pie said as she hopped out from under the stone, nodding her head excitedly. "And since Siegy here can always tell where an Eye of Terror is, he can always find me!"

"Okay," Twilight said slowly as Pinkie Pie bounced away. "So you know how she does that?"

"Of course not!" Siege Patrol scoffed. "I may be a daemon prince most of the time but I would not dare to try and understand that chaotic masterpiece."

Twilight simply decided not to ask anymore questions as she remembered what happened in baseline when she tried that little song and dance and let the stallion get back to repairing her tree.

* * *

>164.15 (Evilhumour)

"Behold as the Great and Mighty Trixie shall control the sun and moon itself without using her magic!" Trixie boasted to an annoyed group of ponies, including two disbelieving princesses.

"Trixie, I don't thi-" Twilight started when Trixie ran up to Celestia and tapped her nose.

The sun went out, causing massive panic in the streets, which Trixie quickly fixed by tapping Celestia's nose a second time, causing the sun to catch on fire again.

With a captivated audience, Trixie then bounced over to Luna who had her hooves over her nose.

With a wry smile on the showmare's face, she reached up to adjust Luna's ears, causing the moon to rise and created a solar eclipse.

Trixie then took a bow to her crowd, letting their praise wash over her.

* * *

>164.16 (Kris Overstreet)

Pinkie Pie, having Awakened as a filly, had decided to introduce her sisters to the concept of Nightmare Night, at least as the non-rock-farmers of Equestria celebrated it.

Thus four fillies trotted away from a house. All four had decided to go as ghosts, using old sheets their mother had set aside to be cut apart for quilts. One such sheet was perfectly ordinary- white, two eyeholes, that's all. Another had not so much cut eyeholes as made two angry slashes in the proper spots, giving the ghost a permanent glare. The third ghost proned along, glorying in its paisley-ness. The last filly, slightly larger than the rest, hadn't unfolded the sheet before cutting, and thus was more holes than ghost.

"What did you all get?" Paisley P- er, Pinkie Pie asked.

"I got a pack of gum!" Limestone snarled. "I hate gum! Why do people even make candy you have to spit out?"

The normal looking ghost mumbled something indistinct and waved her own treat bag.

"Marble's willing to trade you for her chocolate bar!" Pinkie said. "It's got nuts in it."

"Rrrrg... I suppose!" Limestone made the swap with her usual good grace.

"And I got a caramel apple!" Pinkie giggled.

Maud Pie, the Holey Ghost, held out her prize. "I got a rock," she declared.

The other three fillies gathered round to stare.

"Wow! That is a ROCKIN' rock!" Limestone said, a rare tone of approval in her voice.

"...!" Marble agreed.

"He's a rock with ambition," Maud agreed. "His name is Boulder. I think I'll keep him."

* * *

>164.17 (Vinylshadow)

Vinyl hooked her foreleg around Lyra's neck and hoisted a mug of cider into the air.

"Alto-gether now!" the tipsy DJ slurred as Lyra squirmed in her grip.

"Really, Vinyl? Puns at this hour?" the unicorn grumbled.

"Did you know my family didn't want to expose me to music? They were worried about all the sax and violins," Vinyl went on. "Landed me into a lot of treble during my community college days, hoo!"

"Any chance you can scale it back?" Applejack said, moving her own mug out of the path of the drunken musician.

"We don't have the staff for it," Berry said, topping off the farmer's drink. The two blinked then did a simultaneous facehoof.

"Come on, ponies, we've got to guitar act together. Me and Lyra are pretty sharp when it comes to conducting our business," Vinyl said.

"Well, that fell rather flat," Lyra muttered.

"Could you repeat that?" Vinyl asked innocently, finally releasing the minty unicorn and taking a swig. "Just a note, some of these fall a little flat, the key to this is to make sound all natural, so only the sharp ponies get it. I mean, play it low key, there's no need to jazz it up too much. Some ponies can't keep up with the tempo of all these jokes; after all, music jokes aren't everyone's forte. Harping on and on about it can get ponies frustrated. Keep it trill, bro," she said in a single breath before keeling over.

"Is she alright?" Twilight asked worriedly.

"Whenever she gets like this we tend to spike her drink. She winds up crashing sooner or later," Big Mac said.

Octavia burst into the bar, eyes roving over the crowd. When she saw the unconscious DJ, she let out a relieved sigh. "Not too much trouble, I hope?" she asked, hoisting her onto her back. Big Mac shook his head and Octavia apologized again as she left with her snoring counterpart.

* * *

>164.18 (Evilhumour)

"Gah!" Vinyl shouted, spitting out a mouthful of water. "No more, no more!"

Her cries were ignored as her head was pushed back under water and a scrub brush descend onto her back once more.

It was taking over five bath tubs, as the sheer dirt that came from the unicorn had clogged the first five tubs' pipes, but Octavia was determined to have her roommate clean for their 'friend' date at Grand Galloping Gala.

"By Celestia's mane Vinyl, if you bathed more than once every five years, this wouldn't be necessary!" the cellist yelled at the floundering mare, giving a thankful look at Twilight, who ready to teleport them to another awaiting tub of hot water and soap. "I mean seriously Vinyl, you've got such a lovely coat and you hide under this filth?"

"It's not filth, it's just comfort!" Vinyl retorted angrily.

Octavia responded by dunking her head back under the water.

* * *

>164.19 (Evilhumour)

"Uh..." Vinyl looked down at the mare next to her, cuddling up to her tightly. Normally, she'd loved to be in this place with Octy considering how often the mare didn't believe her tales about the Loops, convince Tavi that she had changed and was now a mature adult-which normally fell flat due to her poor lying skills- or she wanted to woo the mare over honestly. The last few loops that Vinyl had been Awake for, Octavia simply did not exist and she had been cellist deprived for too long, resolving to make her grey mare sing all night long.

But this? This was just Yggdrasil being a mean, cruel bastard of a world tree computer.

"What is it Vi?" Octavia yawned as she woke up, a blush on her face.

"Nothing Octy," Vinyl said truthfully, as she could handle this.
"Have a good night sleep?"

"Yup," the mare leaned in for a tight hug, which did not help what her inner Vinyl was thinking. "Thanks for letting me sleep with you sis."

"Any time Octy," Vinyl said while keeping out her frustrations out of her voice. "Any time."

* * *

>164.20 (Alex Prior)

"Everypony, be prepared. We don't know what is going to come through that door!"

Twilight mentally steeled herself. She had decided to go through a Baseline Loop this time. That, however, didn't mean she liked going through Starlight's little town. It always was a pain. And speak of the devil...

The door creaked open, letting the mare walk through. "Welcome," she greeted, a fake- wait. That was not a fake smile. Starlight's eyes landed on Twilight. She let out a gasp. "Twilight?"

The mare's thoughts ground to a halt. "You've heard of me?" That was always a safe answer.

Which was as far as she got before getting squeezed in a hug. At this point, Twilight was content to let this play out - for now. She half-listened to the mare's babbling.

"Oh, Twilight, look at you! You've grown so much - and grown wings, too! Oh, last I saw you, you were just a little filly - but you don't remember me, do you?" Twilight recieved a telekinetic pinch to the cheek. "I'm your Auntie Starlight, Twilight! Oh, just look at you, you've grown so pretty! Do you have a coltfriend yet? Oh, you would look marvelous with glasses, colts would just flock to you, no joke - it really is a shame we don't have an ocular's cutie mark or a designer's cutie mark, oh you should have told us you were coming, even if in official capacity; turning up just like that is a little bit rude, dear." Starlight paused, looking over the rest of the Elements. Twilight allowed herself a peek, too.

Pinkie was wearing a highly skeptical expression. Rainbow was snickering. Applejack's eyebrows had ascended orbit. Fluttershy was hiding a smile. Rarity was taking pictures.

Twilight rolled her eyes.

As Double Diamond got to introducing the rest of Twilight's friends to Starlight, the alicorn contemplated her situation. All signs pointed to a Cutie Mark Rental variant, with Starlight as the doting matriarch. Twilight supposed she was okay with it.

As Starlight and Double Diamond were beginning to dote over a suddenly very embarrassed Fluttershy, Rarity sidled over to Twilight.

"Ahem. Twilight, Darling?"

_Oh no, not again._ "Yes, Rarity?"

"I hope you realize this is going in the album."

_Sigh. _"Naturally."

* * *

>164.21 (Scorntex)

Big Macintosh was quietly cleaning one of his drinking jars, in the time-honoured manner of otherwise unoccupied bartenders across the whole of existence, when the doors opened, and a beaten and battered shape dragged itself into the bar, eventually slumping on top of a stool.

One bruised and swollen eye opened. And realisation dawned on Mac that he was looking at Vinyl. "Bartender," she croaked, "I need something medicinal."

Macintosh looked at the mare, who was nonchalantly leaking at an impressive rate. "Oh, right," Vinyl murmured as she looked at her numerous injuries, "it'll stop in a while. And I'll clean it up, I swear."

Not feeling reassured for some mysterious reason, he quickly fetched a drink, and gave it to the mare, who drank. "Thanks," she managed to get out once she was done.

After a short while of just sitting there, she finally looked at him. "You're probably wondering how this happened, right?"

"Yeah," he admitted. There was a low, humourless chuckle from Vinyl.

"Well, you know how we're all some kind of supernatural creature this Loop, right?" Big Macintosh didn't bother responding to that. "Well, turns out 'Tavi's a were-wolf. Which I guess explains the glossy hair, at least... another?" she nudged her drink.

"So, anyway," Vinyl continued, "guess what I am this Loop?"

"Some kind'a were-wolf hunter?" Mac offered.

"Nope."

"A vampire?"

"Nope."

"A different kind of were-wolf?" He nudged the refilled drink over to Vinyl.

"Close," Vinyl said, "but still nope."

"'kay, then what?"

There was a pause as Vinyl downed the entire drink in one breath. "A were-_cat._"

She groaned, and motioned for another drink. "And it was all going fine, but then one day Tavi's a bit more wolf than pony, she tries sniffing my butt and the next thing I know we're trying to tear each other to bits!"

The mare's head slammed against the bar, and she groaned further. "So stupid..."

* * *

>164.22 (Evilhumour, with masterweaver's help)

"So that's what I've been hearing Twi," said Vinyl, explaining as best as she could about the mysterious beat she had been hearing, describing what it sounded like as well as where it seemed to be coming from to the best of her ability. "I guess it could be on some sort of frequency that's present in multiple loops, but I really doubt it'd be like that."

"And Sleipnir would have mentioned something if it were anything truly worrisome," Twilight concluded, tapping her chin. She began to levitate some books in preparation for research. "I think it could-"

"There you are Twilight!" Cadence said with a smile.

Twilight returned it happily, initiating their usual greeting. "Sunshine, sunshine, ladybugs awake, clap your hooves and do a little shake."

As the two fell over in a fit of laughter, the alicorn noticed the other pony in Twilight's chambers. "Hello there, who may you be?" Cadence asked carefully.

"Hiya, I'm Vinyl Scratch, DJ Pon-3 and number one wubiest mare out there," Vinyl said with a wide smile, eyes closed behind her shades. "I'm an old friend of Twilight; we've been on far out adventures in the past and have done pretty crazy stuff together," Vinyl threw a leg around a glaring Twilight, who was mouthing at her to Shut up and Stop it **now** but Vinyl had lived with Octavia far too long to be scared by such a simple glare. "She's just advising me about the strange noises I've been hearing in my head; as to what they are, we've agreed that they're coming from a strange place."

"O...kay," Cadence said slowly, trying to take everything in. "So, Twilight, why haven't you mentioned your little friend before?"

"I dunno, Caddy," Vinyl shrugged. She felt the heat of the glare of the mare behind her but did her best to hide her grin. "Can't be because I've got a marefriend; Twilight has that strange sexual preference, after all."

Cadence's eyes grew at that, a small hint of a blush on her cheeks. With a delicate cough, Cadence forced her attention to Vinyl and her cutie mark, "If you do not mind me asking, I would like to hear a sample of your work. There is a small get together with the noble youths tonight and we do need some sort of entertainment tonight."

"Ain't no problem Caddy," said Vinyl, horn glowing as she created some of her own music for the princess to hear. By how her head was following the beat, it seemed that the unAwake mare was enjoying it a great deal. "How's that?"

"It was wonderful, my little pony." Celestia said walking into the room, Vinyl falling into a proper bow. She might enjoy trolling Twilight a bit too much, but even she knew when to toe the line.

Most of the time.

"I am sure that the younger generation will just _love_ it, Ms Scratch, but I must ask, how old _are_ you? There will be alcoholic drinks served and I'd be failing in my own duties if I didn't make sure that I won't have an inebriated minor on my hooves."

"What are you talking about, Princess Celestia?" Vinyl laughed just a tad too loudly, stretching out every syllable. "I am _certainly_ not lying to you by saying I am old enough to drink. Ha, ha. Very funny joke Princess Celestia!"

Celestia simply raised an eyebrow at _that_, before shaking her head and conjuring up a pass for her to enter the castle later that night. "I will see that a mixing stand is in place for you tonight, Miss Scratch. Please be here around eight o'clock so you can coordinate with the lighting staff for your performance. The attire is semi formal, so it would be best if you wore either a dress or some sort of fancy jewelry."

With a bob of her head in the affirmative, Vinyl took the pass and placed it into her saddle bag. She waved goodbye to her Anchor as she left under the eye of Princess Celestia.

Cadence turned to look at Twilight with a wide grin on her face. "So Twilight," she started, wrapping a wing around the young mare. "Care to tell us about these adventures you had with your friend?"

Twilight realized that she would not be getting out of this easily, not after how Vinyl had acted beforehoof. With swears to various flora, Twilight started to explain in the least amount details possible to her future sister-in-law about the least insane thing she had with Vinyl. Which, unfortunately, involved a bar fight and a swarm of rats.

* * *

>Vinyl made sure for the last time that her coat was brushed to a shine, her Element of Honesty proudly around her neck and her records safe in her reinforced saddle bag, made by one Rarity Belle.

She knew that while Rarity would like to have her brand broadcasted to the nobles, doing it before she met the mare in-loop never ended well for Vinyl. But, as she was going out of her bedroom window to avoid her parents noticing her absence, she thought it was a moot point.

The unicorn made the distance from her home from the somewhat lower levels of Canterlot with her wub hooves, easily cutting off half an hour or so of travel and eventually landing with grace ingrained by many failed attempts in the past. She flashed her pass to the guards at the front of the doorway; a servant guided her to the ballroom.

Already, it was clear that they were in the final stretch of preparations for the little party, with pegasi flying around to fix the lights and buscolts making sure all the food on the table was perfectly arranged. This was all done under the glare of one Prince Blueblood, barking sharp orders here and there to servants, who made it clear they did not think highly of the prince when his back was turned.

Waving a hoof to the ponies around the mix station, Vinyl removed her shades and began inspecting the device. It quickly became apparent to them that she knew what she was doing. Either that or the Princess told them about her and were willing to let her take the fall if something went wrong.

Vinyl's ear flicked when she heard a cough, but her attention was solely on the wonderful machine in front of her. Ignoring the interruption, Vinyl moved some wires around while using a bit of her own magic to make improvements when the pony coughed a bit louder. This time it did distract her, causing her to zap herself with a bad wire change.

"Oi, the featherbrain with the cough, mind covering your mouth? Seeing as I am working with live wires here and I just got zapped because of it!" Vinyl snarled, looking around for the sprucehead and found it in the form of one very annoyed looking unicorn stallion.

"That is Prince Blueblood to you, peasant," Blueblood sneered down at her. "I've got no idea who you are or what you are doing with Ponfar or whatever that musician that Auntie hired for Cadence's party is called but by Celestia's mane, I will not let you ruin his machine."

Biting back a snort at his accidental innuendo, Vinyl shook her carefully styled mane and gave a laugh that she learned by sitting through many high end dinner dates with Octavia. "The name is DJ Pon-3, your highness," she said as she gave him a light bow, knowing he would look less if he called her out on it. "Not Pon Farr as you said, which by the way is the name of an alien mating season in that old tv show, your highness." She enjoyed the blush on his face and the snickering on the servants around them. "If you do not mind, I would like to make sure that this mixing station is ready for Princess Mi Amore Cadenza's party and that requires my full attention, along with me coordinating with the pegasi lighting crew. And time is going to be tighter now that I had to have this talk with you."

His fur bristled at her dressing down; eventually, though, Blueblood nodded his head reluctantly and allowed Vinyl to get back to work. More than one pony came by and gave the young mare a pat on the withers and a grateful smile.

Hopefully, Vinyl thought to herself, this would be an easy gig to do.

* * *

>It was turning out to be a fairly boring gig, if Vinyl was being honest. And as the Bearer of Blunt Honesty, she was being honest.

Oh sure, it was for a _very_ good cause, bringing together all the tribes to show and prove that the new generation of future leaders were forward thinkers and progressive in their actions. With a wide range of lower noble pegasi and earth ponies interacting openly and honestly with the unicorn nobles, it seemed that Caddy's little party was a hit.

Then again, they were clearly waiting for the sun to go down. Vinyl learned that the young _young_ nobles would be sent home and to bed once the moon was in the sky, and then the more 'adult' party would begin. _Real_ drinks would be flowing and Vinyl could start playing her music.

Levitating another glass to her mouth, she magically changed the content into something a bit more suited to her alcoholic taste.

With a grumble, Vinyl's bladder decided that she wanted attention now and demanded a trip to the little filly's room. Moving as quick as her wub hooves would let her, she darted into the restroom and took care of nature's calling.

As she returned to her mixing station, she saw that it had been moved around. Turning her head in time, she saw a flick of a blond tail leaving the room.

"Oh no no no no!" Vinyl swore under her breath, seeing that she had just been robbed of all her records. "_Redwood!_" she swore, trying to think of what she could do. While she could go search her pocket for records, she doubted she had the time to do so.

A thought occurred to her, the same odd sound that had been plaguing her _was_ _unique enough that she could use it for the party. Of course, she would need to wubify it first.

As she listened to the beat reverberate around inside her head, Vinyl quickly used her wub hooves to interface with the mixing station, manipulating the sound systems so what she produced would seem to come from it and not herself. She began to unleash the music within her out across crowd, the lighting crew reacting flawlessly to the sudden change in plans. It was loud, powerful, all consuming music that instantly captured the attention of all the ponies in the room, dancing in flow with newly created music in perfect harmony.

Vinyl herself found in a center of pure focus, letting the melody play through her mind with a growing smile. She didn't notice the time pass, allowing the song to dictate how long it should go. With a deepening sense of balance and fullness in her music that she had not felt in a long time, Vinyl ended her first set with a flourish, wings high in the air and a clap of her hooves echoing like thunder, staring at the stunned crowd of ponies.

With a wicked glare on her face, Vinyl tipped her shades up with her magic so they could see her red eyes. "And that's just the opener folks!" With a cackle that she had learned from Luna, Vinyl dove back into her passion and began to bring out the wubs.

* * *

>Vinyl groaned, the aftereffects of a hangover stabbing her in the head.

She knew that she could do two things. She could go through her pocket, braving the headache and the stomach ache and retrieve the pills that would end her pain in an instant. Or, she could remain face down and wait out to the end of the loop so she wouldn't have to deal with the pain of her hangover.

"GooOood morning Vinyl!" The drawn out singsong from Twilight was like a pickaxe into her poor brain. Vinyl groaned, burying her head into the pillow. "How are you feeling this fine day?"

"Buck you Twilight, my head feels like someone ripped it apa-oh sweet sapling, don't tell me I made out with Blatherblood again!" Vinyl's head shot up in terror- before she winced in pain, lowering it back down onto the pillow.

"No Vinyl, you did not make out with Blueblood, although you did make a good impression on him and you two do have a little dinner date to talk shop over several topics," Twilight said, trotting loudly over to Vinyl and pushing the mare to an upright position. "What do you remember from last night Vinyl?"

"All I remember is doing my first set, which was wubtastically awesome, and nothing after that," Vinyl groaned, keeping her eyes shut, her ears folded back, and her wings flush against her body. "What's with all the questions Twi?"

"You really don't remember?" Twilight asked close to her ear, forcing Vinyl to crack an eye open in frustration. "Come with me to the bathroom, and I'll show you."

With a grumble, Vinyl pushed herself to her hooves and followed the purple pony into the other room. "Twi, you do know once my head isn't filled with a thousand Pinkie Pies bouncing around, I will need to make a really snarky comeback to that. Probably involving a threesome."

"Yes yes, I know," Twilight said with practiced ease, flicking on the light (and cementing her position as chief of calamities to Vinyl's tortured eyes). "Ooops, sorry Vinyl."

"I'll believe it once I see it," Vinyl moaned, rocking around on her hooves as she waited for her eyes to work again. "So why did you want me here agai-"

Vinyl's eyes fell on the full length mirror and went wide. In the reflection, there was a smoking hot alicorn with a wubbing blue mane staring right back at her. As she walked over to it, the alicorn opposite of her copied her movement flawlessly. She slowly lifted her foreleg to the glass; with a soft clop, the alicorn mare touched her hoof.

The alicorn mare in the mirror was Vinyl Scratch.

The alicorn mare was herself.

She was the alicorn mare.

Vinyl Scratch was an alicorn mare.

"Twilight Sparkle..." She said slowly to the mare next to her, not looking away from her image. "Why do I have wings now and why is my mane producing better wubs than me?"

Twilight rolled her eyes, placing a foreleg around Vinyl's neck. "I did some research about that mysterious sound you have been hearing and through several experiments, I have managed find the source. As you are aware, the universe is usually created with collapse of super forces into a single dense point that then causes the explosion that makes all known reality. From that-"

"Twi, English for me, the hungover mare is not well versed in nerd speak. I'm freaking about waking up with wings and a wubbing mane that is not making my headache worse for some reason, why is my wubbing mane not hurting me?!"

With a quick usage of her squirt bottle, Twilight started her explanation over again. "Vinyl, you were hearing the echo of the big bang, the heartbeat of the ever expanding universe. You then, wearing your Element, proceeded to use that strand of noise in your performance, remixing it, mind you. These?" Twilight tapped Vinyl's wings, looking her in the eyes. "This is what happens when a mare who's special talent is music, that has a magical artifact like an Element of Harmony, does exactly what you did last night." Wrapping her forelegs around the musician's neck into a hug, she let out a burst of laughter. "Congratulations Vinyl, you ascended by quite literally wubbing the universe a new one."

Vinyl hugged back out of reflex, still a bit stunned by the news. She tried to let everything that was told her sink in but she was still entrapped by her blinking reflection and what it meant. "That's very nice Twilight, but can I please have some time alone?"

"I understand," Twilight replied, letting her go. "I'll be outside, when you are ready." With that, the unicorn slipped out of the room, leaving the alicorn alone with herself.

Vinyl Scratch stared at her reflection, extending her wings outwards and examining them closely. While she had had wings before, she had not had both a horn and wings.

It could mean so much, now that she had ascended! What would she differently now that she was a bucking alicorn? She never planned to become an alicorn, she just planned to go with the flow with the loops. Buck responsibility, buck becoming a princess, buck becoming an alic-

She frowned, noticing her purple shades on the counter. She picked them up, and stared at them.

They were a great part of DJ Pon-3's identity, part of her.

Part of her.

Smiling to herself, she put her shade back onto her face where they belonged. She was an alicorn now, another awesome part of her already awesome self.

With a flick of her wub mane into a more proper position, Vinyl felt her confidence bloom. Listening to the wub coming from her mane and bobbing in time with the beat, she decided that she had best ethereal mane of all her friends.

"So Twilight," Vinyl shouted through the bathroom door. "Since I used the universe to ascend, does this make me the Princess of Motherbucking Everything?"

Twilight groaned. "One time. One time that happens, and you never let me forget it..."

"Because I'm pretty sure that wubbing the universe make me the master of it!" Vinyl continued with a wide smirk.

Chuckling as Twilight began to lecture of why using the universe to ascend didn't make one the princess of everything, Vinyl pivoted around and walked out the door. The new princess was ready to wub the world.

* * *

>Author's Note:

164.1: To tell the truth, I think this is going to go hourglass-hourglass. (If you don't get that then you may need to comb through Northern Lights to catch the reference.)

164.2: May or may not be canon.

164.5: Why can't other apocalyptic abominations be as nice as the Blacklight virus?

164.6: Worth it. (Also, dang those apples are cheap.)

164.8: Don't ask.

164.9: You can ask for this one. It won't help.

164.10: Canter like an Egyptian.

164.12: Costume clash.

164.13: Not actually sure for this one.

164.14: Eye don't know.

164.15: Well, she's technically right.

164.16: Rock the night.

164.17: I just tune all these out.

164.18: Yes, this is a dirty story with Vinyl and Octavia in.

164.19: And this isn't.

164.20: Well, that's correct. They didn't know.

164.22 Badum tish, boom boom, bang, clatter, clash, WHAM.

172. Chapter 172

165.1

* * *

>"...wait," Shining said. "Did you just..."

"What?" Twilight asked.

"Did miss Princess-of-Librariesâ€"

"_Friendshipâ€_"

"â€"misspell a word?"

Twilight paused, and went back over the last few minutes.

"...you will never speak of this to anyone," she hissed.

"Of course," her brother agreed.

Cadence giggled. "I'm sure you'll make a great ant, Twilight."

Twilight's eye twitched.

"In all seriousness, given the loops, you'll probably be one of those first," Shining noted, trying to hide his smile.

* * *

>162.27

* * *

>"â€"ow," Trixie said, shaking her head. "What justâ€""

She swallowed, and stuck her tongue out. "Bleh. So that's what it feels like when someone crashes the loop in a different time period... dang Starlight Glimmer..."

Gathering herself, she took a look around.

A few hundred audience members looked back. One of them waved.

"Oh, come on!"

The blue-coated magician sighed. "Okay, I don't have the patience for this. Sorry, everypony."

Her magic focused, swirled, and a wand-star circlet appeared for a brief moment before there was a blinding white flash.

When it faded, she was already airborne and winging her way towards Canterlot.

"...did she always have wings?" one of the earth ponies asked.

"Whoa," said her friend. "This Trixie is good."

* * *

>165.2 (Evilhumour, Masterweaver)

* * *

>There was a knock on her door set to an almost recognizable beat, but it was only found when examining the univâ€"

Twilight stared at the sight in front of her, with the mint green mare smiling from cheek to cheek and the white mare looking very annoyed. Looking down, Twilight quickly pieced together why and did her best not to laugh.

"So Lyra, how was Princessâ€" "

"Queen." the mare opposite of her snickered as the white mare's ear twitched.

"Right, how was Queen Scratch for her first royal loop?" She watched the other mare remove her glasses and stare at her with her bloodshot red eyes, which made it look like her pupils were full of blood. Very off putting if the whole situation wasn't so funny.

"Oh it was a blast!" Lyra said hugging Vinyl, nuzzling against her. "She was the very best musical queen we could ask for!"

Sighing loudly, Vinyl glared at them both before turning away. "If anyone needs me, I'll be in the bar, getting drunk off my flanks trying to get rid of my ages old headache before going to that damn peace talks with Celly and Luna."

As she left, Lyra called out to her. "Shoo bee doo!"

The seapony queen responded back the same to her fellow seapony before realizing what she said and groaned loudly.

"First Derpy had only a century on the moon," Twilight mused, "and now Vinyl's the seapony queen."

Lyra gave her a questioning glance. "Well yeah. Is there a pattern or something?"

"Just that they were both unusual, and they both activated by glitch." Twilight gave Lyra a large grin. "What's your princess loop going to be like, I wonder?"

Lyra coughed. "I... haven't ascended yet, you knowâ€" "

"Right, sorry. Just speculating."

Before Twilight could finish thinking of what kind of horror or weirdness would happen when Lyra ascend and have her princess loop, there was a scream of fear coming down the road.

"That was Applejack!" Twilight shouted, building her power to teleport when there was a loud BANG and then a second shout, one of pain this time. Turning her head, she watched as a white object smash into the weak side of her library, causing it tip over and crash into the ground.

"My library!" Twilight shouted, mouth hanging low at what just happened.

"My Queen!" Lyra shouted, pushing the ball of magical infused water forwards as she rushed forwards, helping the dizzy white seapony up.

As Twilight walked close to the pony that just toppled her house, her ear flicked as she heard Applejack running towards her.

"Note to self," Vinyl wheezed as she sat against the destroyed library, laying a fin over her chest. "Do not surprise Applejack ever again."

Turning her head to the embarrassed farmer who was blushing now at her overreaction, Twilight blinked and tried to close her mouth.

"Sorry about that Vinyl," Applejack said, holding her hat. "Ah'm not that bothered by seaponies anymore, but when one as big as you comes up from behind, Ah just plain got spooked."

"It's okay," Vinyl wheezed as her horn glow blue, her body making popping sounds as the bones were starting to set themselves. "Not the first time I've got bucked by an earth pony so I'm used to it, although promise me you'll not teach Octy any fancy tricks?" She batted her eyes at the apple farmer, who was snickering now.

"Ah'll do my best partner," she leaned over to pat Vinyl on the back as well to help her up. "Come back to the farm, drinks on me."

"Sounds great to me," Vinyl said, stretching out now. "Lyra, Twilight, wanna join us?"

The mint green seapony didn't need any more encouragement to join but Twilight needed to be asked a second time before responding. Although teleporting to the moon to scream was a bit harsh of a response.

* * *

>165.3 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Sweetie Belle gave Vinyl a wide grin. "So... you ascended by remixing the beat of the universe."

"Yep."

"I, on the other hoof, ascended by literally singing a universe into being."

Vinyl glared at her. "Okay, first of all you had a backup chorus. Secondly, you technically ascended when you turned Melkor good."

Sweetie Belle merely continued smiling. "You can think that all you want, _nÃ-n_ _lobor laes_. In the end, I sing, you remix."

"There's nothing wrong with remixing!" Vinyl protested.

"Never said there wa-as!" Sweetie singsonged as she trotted away.

* * *

>165.4 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"So..." Sunset managed as she sat down across from the green woman. "...Passaggio?"

"Passaggio Muse, yes." The woman gave her a half smirk. "You know, the names here are remarkably fresh. No generations of repeated names going through lingual drift."

"Yeah, it's... one of this universe's many quirks. My name, for instance, is Sunset Shimmer." She shrugged. "I'm native, so I don't usually go by anything else."

"Well, I have Polymnia to fall back on if I ever get tired of Passaggio." The green woman examined her fingers casually. "Or I could go by doctor, professor, or psychopathic bitch. You know, titles."

Sunset rose an eyebrow. "Psychopathic bitch."

"A misnomer, obviously. I'm not even a sociopath, all things considered, but..." She shrugged. "When you're a civvy in a high-target military base, you have to grow some thick skin and learn to be creative."

"Ah. So... you're from Warhammer 40K?"

"Nope. But I will tell you I'm from a 4K." Polymnia was giving her a sly grin.

Sunset snorted. "So, this a guessing game?"

"Maybe."

"Okay." The teenage former unicorn leaned over the table. "Let's see, you're a professor and or doctor of some sort, you work at a military base in the future, you've got a reputation for dangerous mad science, and you're replacing the leader of the sirens." She tilted her head. "Have any musical talent?"

"Mmm, you could say that."

"Is it critical for your survival?"

"No. Well, not usually." Polymnia shrugged. "I'll admit that I'm able to pick more obscure frequencies when I like for some...dramatic results. This producing conflict thing that the sirens have, that's a bit of a new one on me. Usually I just use psychology."

Sunset frowned, leaning back. "Fair warning, this is a sanctuary loop. And while you, as a looper, are our top priority, the nonloopers deserve respect too."

"Oh, relax. I started changing the feeding method months ago." Polymnia flipped out a business card and snapped it toward her.

Sunset caught it easily, glancing at it. Then peering at it, just to make sure. "Couples counselling?"

"Mmmhmm. Pair of lovers comes to our office, we do our bippity boppity, they have it all out while we're feeding, then I send the other two away and give the pair some real therapy." Polymnia smirked. "More conflict is better, of course, but intensity is just as nutritious as spread. Best of all, I get rave reviews: 'One session will make everything better,' that sort of thing."

"That's..." Sunset glowered at her. "That's not ethical at all."

"Everybody gets what they need, nobody is permanently hurt physically or mentally... I'm failing to see the problem."

"Mental manipulationâ€" "

"Is standard in some loops," Polymnia pointed out. "But that's neither here nor there. Either I keep up the couple's counselling or I have to take the sirens back to the old way of doing things." She frowned. "You would not believe how much I had to twist Aria's arm to get her to agree. 194 degrees!"

Sunset slammed her hands down. "Okay, what is your loop like? Because you seem way too comfortable with torture and brainwashing."

Polymnia stared deep into her eyes. "...it's actually mostly me," she admitted. "My anchor is a far more conscientious objector. But since I'm the second looper, and we haven't got another up yet, we're making due."

"So, you're just crazy."

"When you've seen the things I've seen," Polymnia mused, "you have to deal with it in some way. Me, I chose to be an unrepentant ass. No offense to the donkeys on the other side of the mirror," she added as an afterthought.

"...you still haven't told me what loop you're from."

Polymnia grinned. "Watching people wrack their brains amuses me. Actually, I'm not sure if my Anchor has been here either..." She shrugged. "Well, I figure I can tell you if you can't guess by the end of the week."

* * *

>165.5

* * *

>"Hey Twilight," Lyra greeted the purple pony. "I ascended last loop."

"...what, really?"

"Yeah, weirdest thing..."

* * *

>The Lyracension Chronicle, Part One

**(Written mostly by Oraclemask, with touches by Masterweaver)**

* * *

>Lyra Awoke to find herself under a tree reading a book. Glancing down, she saw a somewhat uncommon sight: the book with the tale of the Mare in the Moon. Only it was different...right, there were the loop memories. Lyra Heartstrings, personal student of the Princess Cadence, the Alicorn of Music and Harmony, and both Celestia and Luna were currently in lunar time-out. Lyra had seen this variant loop before, though apparently Cadence wasn't a golem this time.

It was just as Lyra was contemplating turning the Elements of Musical Harmony into a band and going on tour that she realized that her mind was being unusually...quiet.

'_Uh...Human? Seapony? ...Sweetroll? Are you in there?_' Lyra thought.

Nothing. Lyra glanced into her mindscape and found it completely empty. Well...this was a bit...alarming. Deciding to figure out what was going on later, Lyra pinged.

A minute later, Lyra staggered back upright, slowly recovering from the brain-rattling experience of what felt like half a dozen pings at point-blank range.

_Ow._

Right, NOT doing that again. Time for Plan B.

* * *

>Since she was replacing Twilight Sparkle, it made sense that Spike was her assistant this loop. He wasn't awake, which was a shame; Lyra could use a Force-Sensitive taking a look under the hood. She hadn't dared ping again, but the chariot was landing in Ponyville now. Hopefully SOMEpony would be Awake and able to lend her a hoof with whatever was going on now! Maybe it would even be Chrysalis "because then maybe Bon-Bon would be a changeling again and Lyra could commiserate with her over the whole mess.

" "the Princess told you to make friends, Lyra," Spike was saying, "You should try talking to some of the ponies here in town! I bet they have interesting things to say!"

Lyra heard a gasp from nearby. Right, that would be Pinkie Pie " Lyra barely looked around in time to see a blur of green and white heading straight for her before she was glomp-tackled into the dirt.

"OhmygoshohmygoshOHMYGOSH! PONY! There you are, FINALLY, I was so worried after I Woke up all alone in this strange body! I know it's just a pony body and THAT'S not strange normally but I'm an Earth Pony for some reason and usually we're a unicorn or a seapony or even a human, have you seen Human anywhere by the way? I tried to Ping before but there was this HORRIBLE thing that happened instead and I'm really not totally used to having a body as much as everyroll else so MAYBE I did it wrong but at least this pony has super-duper-uber-poofy hair! I think I like poofy hair, I'm going to keep it but what do you think Pony? ...Pony?"

Lyra kept staring. A mint green Earth Pony with the _swirliest_ green and white mane she had ever seen was looking brightly back at her.

"...S-Sweetroll?!"

Sweetroll Lyra grinned. Then she gasped again.

"Wait a second you came on the chariot into Ponyville so you must be replacing Twilight this time that means I'm replacing Pinkie Pie! Though I kinda guessed it when I Woke up in Sugarcube Corner, plus can you hear how fast I'm talking right now, I must be channeling Pinkie Pie when she's on a mega duper sugar high, but really how can anyroll function without sugar? I mean it's just so VITAL, DUH " but this means I get to throw you the Welcome To Ponyville party this loop! With candy and cupcakes and streamers and I better get going I need to find where my unawake self hid the party cannon!"

And with that, Sweetroll was off like a shot. Leaving Lyra to twitch. This was shaping up to be an...INTERESTING loop...

Spike did a fake cough to break the awkward silence that followed.

"...well, I guess we'd better get started on inspecting things for Princess Cadence's celebration!"

"Inspecting things? Oh yeah, _those_ things! Those things that we _totally_ came here to inspect and stuff! ...What exactly are we inspecting again, Spike?"

Spike sighed.

"...The Summer Song Celebration?"

"Oh yeah, that thing," Lyra replied, grinning sheepishly.

What with the strangeness of the loop so far, she had completely forgotten about this loop's version of the Summer Sun Celebration.

* * *

>"First up is the catering, courtesy of Sweet Apple Acres!"

The farm certainly seemed normal...Lyra breathed a sigh of relief as she and Spike trotted through the apple trees. Applejack would be just the pony to help her out! Everything was going to be justâ€œ"

"EEEEK!"

CRASH!

"OOF!"

Lyra groaned, tasting dirt for the second time today. Not a flavor she was fond of. She tried to get back up, but a heavy weight was sprawled on top of her.

"Sweetroll, not now..." Lyra grumbled.

There was a gasp.

"Pony?!"

That wasn't Sweetroll...Lyra peered up to see Human staring wide-eyed back down at her. The pair of them blinked once, then twice. And then the apple trees shook with a deafening SQUEE.

"FINGERS! I almost NEVER get to see our fingers from this angle!" Lyra exclaimed, grabbing at Human's hand.

"Oh my gosh our mane and tail is SO SOFT!" Human Lyra squealed, grabbing at Lyra's mane.

* * *

>"...and according to my loop memories, after falling through the mirror I eventually ended up working here as a farmhand," Human finished, "Which helped the Apples a bunch, because Applejack â€œ" well, Orangejack now â€œ" stayed in Manehattan this time. I'm also in charge of supervising the catering for the Summer Song Celebration since the Apple Reunion turned out to be the same day."

"_Mulberry_," Lyra sighed, stomping a hoof in frustration, "So much for getting Applejack's help. What about everypony else?"

Human shook her head.

"I don't remember seeing them at all. No Pinkie, no Rainbow Dash, no Fluttershy, no Rarity. I was kinda hoping Twilight would be able to explain what's going on."

She frowned for a moment longer, before smiling.

"Oh well! Worst comes to worst, we can overwhelm Queen Meanie with our superior numbers!"

* * *

>On the way to see the pony in charge of decorating the venue, Lyra stopped and looked up at the cloudless sky. Spike kept walking for a minute before he realized he was alone and doubled back. Understandably, he looked around for any crazy ponies or humans lurking in the vicinity before asking Lyra what the matter was.

"Aren't we supposed to check who's managing the weather, Spike?" Lyra asked.

"I don't think so..." Spike pulled out a checklist and skimmed it, "Nope. Princess Cadence doesn't really mind what kind of weather goes on during the celebration anyway, remember?"

His eyes narrowed.

"...You don't have a pegasus cousin who's going to drop out of the air and squish us next, do you?"

Lyra chuckled nervously. The excuse she'd give him about why Human and Sweetroll knew her was that they were distant cousins, but Spike didn't seem to buy it totally.

"Not that I know of..."

* * *

>"Out of the way please, you're standing right where the next set of pylons are going in."

Lyra and Spike backpedaled hastily as metal rods telekinetically began arranging themselves next to the entrance. In a way, Lyra was relieved that Seapony wasn't in charge of decorating since she only had two styles: underwater and explosives, usually combined. But Thief/Scientist/Everything Else was almost as bad. Especially since she looked to be in full science mode, lab coat and cyborg implants on full display. The inside of Town Hall was starting to look fairly metallic to boot.

"_Thief._"

"Yes yes, hi to you too Pony. Don't worry, these are perfectly harmless...but I promised Mayor Mare that I wouldn't compromise the building's structural integrity and so I had to construct additional pylons."

Lyra facehoofed.

"How long have you been waiting to say that?"

Thief gave her a cheeky smile.

* * *

>"Ooh-oh, ooh-oh...now that's TOO sireny, gotta make sure the audience isn't brainwashed..."

Seapony was the last on the list. Sure enough, Lyra and Spike found her hanging around in a pond not far from where Fluttershy's cottage normally was.

"Seapony?"

"Hmm, maybe if I lead off with the fireworks, THEN the audience will be too deafened to be hypnotized! But then they won't hear me sing...that's not good..."

"Seapony!"

Seapony looked up and waved a flipper at her.

"Hey there Pony! Quick question, what part of the Equestrian National Anthem goes best with fireworks? I can't decide!"

Lyra facehoofed for a second time.

* * *

>Lyra trotted up to the Golden Oaks Library with about as much enthusiasm as most loopers had for a trip to Eiken. After a long, LONG talk with Seapony, Lyra was confident that the other Lyra wouldn't go completely overboard when the festivities began tomorrow morning. But there was still whatever party Sweetroll had cooked up to go through, plus planning for the inevitable return of Nightmare Moon and whatever Evil Celestia was calling herself...Lyra wished her unawake self had been paying closer attention to the book before she Woke up. Was it Solar Flare this time?

Momentarily caught up in trying to remember which it was, Lyra walked into the library and was greeted with a pie to the face.

...Ooh, blueberry! Yum!

* * *

>Sweetroll hadn't quite gotten the hang of throwing a Pinkie Pie-styled surprise party...it was a very nice party, and the townspies all seemed happy to be present...but Sweetroll in her excitement had decided to increase the Pie ratio by making each guest a pie, and then throwing them into the guest's faces when they arrived as the surprise.

"She also got everybody's favorite flavors right too," Human said, still cleaning whipped cream out of her hair with a towel, "I don't know whether to be more or less scared."

"Mine was a _mud_ pie," Thief pointed out.

"You don't _like_ mud pies this loop Thief? Sorry, I'll make you a twisted-triple-lime-extra-salty-taco-supreme pie later to apologize!"

Mollified, Thief shook her head wildly to get the last bits of mud off, splattering the others in the process.

"Uh, fillies and gentleLyras? Shouldn't we work on making a plan or something?" Seapony interrupted, "In a couple hours we're going to be stuck facing two crazy Alicorns with ZERO Element-users! Although there's always Plan S."

"We're NOT doing Plan S," Lyra sighed, "Remember the _last_ time we did Plan S?"

"...the crater wasn't THAT big..."

"Mayor Mare will have my head if we do that to her Town Hall," Thief pointed out, "I _like_ having a head this loop."

"We don't have the firepower for Plan S anyway, silly Seapony," Sweetroll added, "No pocket, remember?"

The other four Lyras froze, then began waving hands/hoofs/flippers around comically in an attempt to reach a space that they had suddenly realized wasn't there.

"Oh this is badâ€œ"

"How did we miss this?!"

"Thief, aren't you doing something to the Town Hall? How did YOU miss this?"

"I was using local materials this loop! You know, for the challenge of it!"

Sweetroll nibbled on a pumpkin pie as she watched the other Lyras panic. To think none of them had checked at all! Of course, the only reason Sweetroll knew was that she'd tried checking their pocket for her unawake self's party cannon. Clearly she'd hidden it really, really, REALLY well...

* * *

>Now that they were complete, Thief's decorations were less mad science-y than the other Lyras had anticipated. A lot of lights began flashing when Seapony went up to sing the anthem, revealing the true purpose of all the metallic bits and bobs: improving the audio quality in the venue.

"And helpfully also canceling out the more siren-y bits," Thief added smugly, "I read the list of events and performers before I started designing."

"Why didn't you tell me before I spent all that time trying to sing less siren-y on my own?!" Seapony demanded.

Thief shrugged.

"It was funny."

"Fillies and gentlecolts!"

Mayor Mare's voice drew their attention to the stage.

"As Mayor of Ponyville, it is my great pleasure to announce the beginning of the Summer Song Celebration! The longest day of the year, where we celebrate the beautiful music and harmony that has enriched the lives of all ponies in Equestria! And now..."

There was a drumroll from somewhere in the audience. Mayor Mare nodded approvingly.

"...now, may I present to you, the beloved ruler of our kingdom...Princess Cadence!"

And the curtains drew back to reveal an empty platform, to the surprise of exactly zero Lyras.

* * *

>Nightmare Moon had barely gotten out her first "FOREVER!" before a blinding flash of light appeared over her head.

"FOALISH LITTLE SISTER! HAST THOU FORGOTTEN ME ALREADY?!"

"Hammy Olden Time Celestia, that's rare," Human noted.

"YOU!" Nightmare Moon bellowed, "BEGONE, INTERLOPER! YOUR DAY HAS NO POWER HERE!"

Evil Celestia â€” tree dammit, this was going to bother Lyra for the rest of the loop! â€” laughed, lighting up her horn and sending a massive wash of heat and light out. Unfortunately for Ponyville, their Town Hall was currently made of wood and thus flammable.

"Run for your lives!"

"The horror, the horror!"

Nightmare Moon and Evil Celestia ignored the stampeding ponies and the crackling flames as they began launching magical blasts back and forth. The building was barely evacuated in time before Nightmare Moon body-checked her sister through a retaining wall and sent the structure tumbling down.

"I don't remember this from baseline!" Seapony exclaimed, "They're still going at it!"

There was another crash and three more houses caught on fire. A fourth one froze over from a deflected spray of pure night. Looking upwards, Lyra winced as the sun and moon started moving back and forth: going from total eclipse to midday and back again.

"They're going to wreck all of Equestria at this rate!" Lyra stomped her hooves in frustration, _"And I still can't remember that stupid name!"_

"Who cares about the freaking name?!" Thief cried. "We've got to do something!"

"I've got the book!" Sweetroll yelled, already galloping toward the Everfree. "We can read up on the way!"

Seapony splashed some water on a couple of the houses as she passed them, quickly catching up to the three galloping ponies. "Has anybody thought about what we're going to tell Spike? Or anyone, really?!"

Human caught up with the group, panting slightly. "Got it covered! Told Spike to, to help Cheerilee with the foals. Cause he's a dragonâ€"slow down!" she whined. "I'm an endurance runner, not a speed runner!"

With a nod to the others, Lyra slowed her gallop to a trot, walking alongside their bipedal companion. "I'm cool with giving you a ride. All we got to do is find the Elements of Harmony, and we'll be good." She shrugged a bit as Human slipped onto her back. "Granted, we've all earned the Element of Laughter, so I don't know how it'll break down this timeâ€" "

"Uh, problem ponies." Sweetroll had pulled the book out of her saddlebags and was reading through it as she walked along. "Apparently this loop, the Elements of Harmony are Dynamics, Pitch, Rhythm, Timbre, Tempo, and a mysterious sixth element that will suddenly appear when the other five are gathered."

The group all stopped and stared at her for a moment.

"Well," Thief mused, "That's an oddly literal interpretation."

"Calling it now, the last element is Melody," Human quipped.

"Only one way to find out." Seapony pushed her waterball forward again. "Come on, ponies, let's get going before the princesses destroy everything."

"And hope the sixth element appears out of nowhere," Lyra deadpanned. "Because that always works!"

* * *

>165.6 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Octavia was starting to regret moving to Ponyville. Not only did it mean she had to plan trips to Canterlot for concerts days and sometimes weeks in advance, she also had to put up with its residents and weekly problems as well. And then there was her roommate.

Nearly every morning, the cellist would come downstairs to find her off-white, deranged-maned menace withers-deep in some new contraption, doing what the unicorn had dubbed "Wubbifying" the hapless machine she set her eyes on.

Toasters, ovens, blenders, beds, couches, ceiling fans, televisions, the thing under Vinyl's bed Octavia didn't have a name for...they had been forced to call in one of Fluttershy's sons to destroy it when it came to life and started terrorizing the town, much to Vinyl's chagrin.

"Vinyl, didn't you already...wubbify the dishwasher?" Octavia asked warily, cradling her glass of orange juice protectively against her coat, hoping the fur would help protect it from the harmonic vibrations that Vinyl's machines produced. She had stopped using glass after the first dishwasher incident and knowing Vinyl, the mare would find a way to shatter plastic if given enough time.

"Mornin' Octy," Vinyl said. Coming up for air, she smiled at the Canterlot Earth Pony. "Nah, I'm simply fine-tuning it. The Dubstep Dishwasher is now...the Wubstep Dishflosser."

"Er...gesundheit?" Octavia said, taking a step back.

"Relax, I didn't add a setting above ten this time," Vinyl said soothingly. "It only goes up to 9.9."

"Vinyl, you shattered glass in Yakyakistan with your Sonic Refrigerator when you set it to two-and-a-half," Octavia said, remembering the delegation that had been sent to Ponyville and the fallout from _that_ debacle—which had rendered her trapped in Ponyville once the Yaks had destroyed the train station.

"Okay, fine, I'll put it on one. Gimme your cup." Without waiting for an answer, Vinyl took Octavia's cup, drained it and tossed it into her machine. Turning the dial to "1," Vinyl grinned and pushed the "START" button.

The sun went out.

Seconds later, there were two flashes of light, one golden, one magenta.

"Vinyl. What. Did. You. Do?" a slightly-panicked Twilight Sparkle asked, while Celestia fruitlessly tried to reignite her connection to the sun. "I felt a _massive_ spike of Wubergy from your house!"

"You finally came up with a name for it?" Vinyl said with a chuckle that died in her throat as the two princesses glared at her in the light from the myriads of glowsticks Vinyl had strung up in case of situations like this.

Twilight moved past her and stared at the Wubstep Dishflosser with a critical eye, then pressed the "STOP" button. Celestia let out a relieved sigh as she felt her connection to the sun come back and she turned it back on.

"Alright, you accidentally invented a device that can sever a pony's connection to magic," Twilight said slowly.

"Seriously?" Vinyl blinked behind her shades and grinned. "That's awesome...ly bad...very, very bad," she added as she faced down Twilight's Super Soaker. "Alright, I'll go back to the Dubstep model," she grumbled, stepping behind the machine and uncrossed the red and blue wires.

"How do you put up with her?" Twilight asked Octavia as Celestia perused Vinyl's music collection.

"Just smile and nod when she pauses for breath," Octavia said, smiling fondly at her roommate. "And I wouldn't have it any other way."

* * *

>165.7 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>It was a nice and quiet afternoon, and a yellow coated stallion had been left home alone without any supervision.

Lemon Rush tapped his chin, looking at the sparse kitchen he shared with his seven brothers: Big Maroon, Corn Curse, Forging Fire, Butcher Nails, Siege Patrol, Regal Stone and Blood Flower, his mother, his fiancée, two massive timberwolf brothers, a fear cloud called Larry and an evil fluffy white bunny.

"Hmm," Lemon grunted, raising an eyebrow at said evil bunny, who was cleaning his weaponry in the sink. Angel had become somewhat of a trusted partner in crime, Lemon supplied the bunny with ammunition, and Angel never told the Little Mother about the more questionable stuff the Anchor had done. "Everyone is out... I wonder if I should surprise them with a cooked meal. What do you thiâ€" Lemon frowned as he heard the front door slam shut. Running to the window, he opened it to shout out, "Coward!" at the fleeing rabbit.

With a huff, Lemon reached around for a random cookbook and looked for a nice, simple and easy recipe to follow, with only a few steps and a hooffull of ingredients.

"Okay, I am fairly sure I won't screw up this time!" Lemon said hopefully as he pulled out some of the needed food.

* * *

>By Ponyville standards it had been a peaceful day, though those standards were admittedly suspect considering how much insanity Ponyville seemed to attract and how quickly the ponies living in the small farming town adapted to it.

A family gathering of seven massive stallions and two much smaller mares, with two massive timberwolves and one cute little fear cloud, dominated the main room of the Sugarcube Corner. All deferred to Fluttershy, the small, soft spoken pegasus mare that they affectionately called Little Mother, but normally went by Fluttershy, who beamed at her sons and soon-to-be-daughter in-law. Nyx, the second mare of the family outing, rolled her eyes at the latest comment her future brother-in-law Big Maroon made.

Suddenly, there was a massive roar.

As the seven brothers were normally primarchs, they were able to react to this new and unexpected danger without any hesitation. Charging outside through the wall with weapons already drawn, all eyes were directed towards the monstrous form approaching Ponyville from the direction of the Everfree Forest... or more accurately, judging by the giant yellow stallion in the monster's grip, from the direction of Fluttershy's cottage.

The monster roared again, and a few moments later the yellow stallion came flying over houses, stores, and river, adding a second hole in Sugarcube Corner's wall to match the first.

"I followed the _entire_ bucking recipe, and I didn't _cheat_ at all!" Lemon grumbled, shaking himself clean. "I _only_ added an extra teaspoon of honey as I _know_ you like it, Nyx!"

With a huff, Nyx smacked the back of her fianc 's head. His brothers rolled their eyes as they set forth to make their way to deal with the monster their brother cooked up by mistake.

Fluttershy squinted her eyes. "Is that Angel riding the monster?" she asked, noticing a distinctive white blob goading the monster on. Even from this distance she could see a massive grin on the bunny's face.

Lemon turned his head around and began to beat it against the wall of the restaurant in response to his mother's question as Nyx patted his withers comfortingly.

* * *

>165.8 (fractalman)

* * *

>"Stone...soup?" asked an Unawake Applejack.

"Yep!" said Pinkie. "Don't you remember when Maud Pie ate the rock that fell off Rarity's hat? Rocks are crunchy!"

"Huh?"

Pinkie's grin actually faltered for a moment. "Ooooooh, righhhht, that didn't happen in this timeline."

Maud and Marble slurped up their soup.

Applejack's face turned green. "How can anypony eat _rocks_?"

"Welll..." said Pinkie, "You need to be an earth pony or alicorn for starters, or you won't be able to digest them properly. After that, uh, lots of practice? Hm, I never really thought about it..."

Applejack pushed her bowl away. "Well excuse me, I think I'm just going to skip dinner."

* * *

>165.9 (fractalman)

* * *

>Celestia smiled as she sent off the two Gala tickets  and was promptly buried in a small mountain of Gala tickets.

She poked her head out from the pile; a scroll materialized in front of her. "I hope Twilight has a good explanation for thisâ€¦"

* * *

>Dear Celestia

_I have more Gala tickets where those came from. I have more Gala tickets than I know what to do with. I know, I'll invite everypony in Equestria!_

_Your faithful student,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

Celestia's eyes widened in horror; livening up the Gala by inviting lots of non-noble ponies (Twilight's immediate friends, and _maybe the rest of Ponyville) was one thing. Inviting everypony in Equestria? Not only would that result in utter chaos (and probably Discord breaking free before the Elements were fully recharged), but it begged a very important question: "How did she get so many tickets, anyways?"

* * *

>Dear Twilight

_Please don't! Everypony in Ponyville is fine, but everypony in Equestria is too many!_

Celestia sighed in relief. Yes, everypony in Ponyville should be just about rightâ€¦"

Another scroll materialized in front of her.

* * *

>Dear Princess Celestia

_Oh, Ok! I'll just invite Discord and everybody in Tartarus. That should be a bit easier to manage._

_Your faithful student,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

Celestia's ear began to twitch.

* * *

>165.10 (Fractalman)

* * *

>"Bubblegum?"

"Check."

"Sphere of tree sap?"

"Check."

"Super catapult?"

"Ready to fire!"

"CUTIE MARK CRUSADERS SUPER CATAPULT BUILDERS YAY!"

* * *

>In a distant corner of Equestria, a random, wandering sort of stallion found themselves in a ratherâ€¦peculiar situation.

"So. I have to marry you." said the stallion.

"Wellâ€¦yes," said the mare, "unless you can find another mare to throw into the ritual circle, you either have to marry me within the week or you'll die. "

The stallion made a face, "Are you sure we can't get some unicorn to dispel this stupid spell?"

The mare shook her head. "_Maybe_ the Elements of Harmony could do it. This is an ancient spell made from around the same time using arts that were lost during the carnivorous parasprite plague. A normal unicorn doesn't stand a chance." She shrugged. "On the bright side, we'll only have to kiss each other once a week to keep the enchantment happy."

* * *

>"WHEEEEEEE!" screamed Sweetie Belle as she hurled through the air. She paused in her screaming just long enough to cast a spell to make herself more durable.

* * *

>"Did you hear that?" asked the stallion.

"Hear what?" asked the mare, right before a white projectile crashed into the ritual circle, along with a bunch of tree sap.

* * *

>"Soâ€¦I have to marry you or you'll die."

"That's the gist of it" said the stallion glumly.

"Andâ€¦we can't just find somepony else to take my place?"

The mare shook her head. "The spell only accepts one substitution."

"What about letting you die and then resurrecting you?"

The mare considered with her hoof to her face. "Wellâ€¦"

The stallion's eyes widened. "NO! No, let's not take any chances with my life, I'm rather attached to it!"

Sweetie Belle scrunched her face up. "Would it help this be less awkward if I aged myself up?"

The stallion erred out a tentative "Yes?"

* * *

>"Now, Sweetie, I'm rather surprised to learn you're actually old enough to marry, but I don't care if you're two million years old or two billion, I simply must design your wedding dress. Now hold still while I take your measurements."

"Rarity, It's not even a real wedding! It's a sham wedding we're going through to satisfy some old enchantment!"

"Nonsense, if you're going to wed you may as well do it properly."

* * *

>"All in all, it was an OK loop, although a little awkward as I never did get his name." said Sweetie Belle to her now Awake crusader friends.

Scootaloo smirked. "Prepare to be jealous. Rainbow Dash and I had an awesome variant that started with us punching our way through a sharknado, and only got better from there..."

* * *

>165.11 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Twilight sighed, levitating Starlight Glimmer out of a bush. "Really? Really?"

"RELEASE ME, YOU BRAINWASHED PAWN OF HATRED!"

"A bush." Twilight rolled her eyes. "Of all the places to hide, you chose. A bush."

"I SHALL OVERTHROW YOUR DYSTOPIC TYRANNY!" the pink unicorn snarled.

"...You know what? I don't even have the patience to deal with you right now." Twilight dropped Starlight back into the bush with no ceremony whatsoever, walking away. "Have fun watching me screw with the spirit of chaos, I guess."

* * *

>165.12 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Twilight, it all turned out fine in the end."

"Trixie, two things: One, your medical license is in cancer treatments, not midwifery. Two: You obtained it in a loop in which ponies _were literally living explosions._"

"Look, I was the only licensed doctor aroundâ€"

"The Cake twins aren't supposed to be living fireballs!"

"Point of order, only Pumpkin is constantly on fire. Pound just generates unending electricityâ€"

"I was being melodramatic for the sake of the point. Which you are missing."

"Really? What _is_ the point then?"

"Mister Cake has a cybernetic limb. Princess Celestia had to overturn twelve laws just to keep Pinkie out of jail. I had to go down to Griffonstone _personally_ to make reparations!"

"...and?"

"And?! And this should never have happened!"

"It wasn't _my_ fault they decided to vacation in Manehattan!"

* * *

>165.13 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Whoa whoa whoa whoa whoa whoa!_" shouted Vinyl, crashing through the library window and slamming into the floor. Twilight watched in horror as the mare began to spin in circles with her sonic propulsion hooves pushing her around, the power of the sound come from the hooves destroying all the books in the library. She tried to step forwards but got a mouthful of feathers for her troubles as Vinyl desperately flapped her wings to get some stability.

With a snarl, Twilight conjured up a dictionary and placed it on Vinyl's stomach to pin her in place, only to redirect the new alicorn into a single direction,: namely, the librarian. Struggling to shove the DJ off of her, the unicorn slowly took in the state of her library. It was a complete mess, everything a wreck in the span of less than a minute.

Turning her head slowly, she leveled a Fluttershy-grade stare at the musician, who was starting to stand upright on shaky legs.

"Note to self," Vinyl whimpered, switching her shades around. "Either use wings or wub hooves, _not_ both." Then she noticed the building rage in the unicorn next to her and gulped loudly as the mare began her lecture.

* * *

>165.14 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"I'd like to see your license, sir," a stallion's brisk voice forced Mac's head upright. Standing in front of his counter was a pair of city guards with a number of privates behind them, all of them holding batons with eager looks in their eyes. "As I have heard reports that there has been alcohol flowing from this underground bar and according to my sources, there is no bar authorized in this location," with a malicious grin on his face, the leader of the two leaned in close to Mac's face. "So unless you can pull out a license to in the next five seconds, we're going to tear down this speakeasy and drag your flanks before the court of law."

"A've got a royal blessin'," Mac said sternly, doing his best not to smirk as several of the privates noticed one of his clients and paled instantly. "So Ah can operateâ€"

"A royal blessing!?" the pony laughed in Mac's face before slamming his hooves into the counter, denting the wood. "That's the most stupidest thing you can say son and I will look forward dragging you in front of Princess Celestia for your liesâ€"

"He's got a royal blessing of the Princesses, my little pony," a voice from the guard's direct left caused the officer to gulp. Turning his head slowly, he noticed the drunk glare of Princess Celestia. "Sire Macintosh of the Apple clan has the blessings of all the princesses of Equestria and you, sir, are harshing the royal buzz," Celestia then loomed over the terrified guard, folding in himself in fright. "Although, you can do something for me and I will forget this has ever happened."

Blinking, he tentatively asked, "My princess?"

"Please catch Luna, she's drunk enough to the point where she thinks she is a hummingbird and ponies are flowers again," Celestia said before to the bar tender. Throwing back her drink, most of which landed past her open mouth and onto the floor, along with a stone mug that shattered into many pieces. "Another!" the princess shouted before passing out on the floor.

With a scream, a private ran in fear before being tackled by a loudly buzzing dark blue alicorn.

* * *

>165.15 (Awesomedude17) (MLP x Donkey Kong)

* * *

>Pinkie Pie raised an eyebrow at the sight before her.

"What's going on?"

"My sister is having a banana fight with a gorilla." Luna replied.

Celestia tossed several bananas at Donkey Kong, who blew steam out of his his ears, took out a massive barrel filled with pudding, and tossed it.

*SPLAT*

"My coat! It's on like... you know what I'm talking about, Donkey Kong!"

Donkey Kong howled in response and charged, entering a slap fight with the sun princess.

Pinkie Pie grinned and took out a camera.

"I can't wait to show this to Bowser!"

"You know him?"

"Of course. One loop, we were roommates!"

"The horror..." Luna muttered.

* * *

>165.16 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Meeting Octavia's parents was always an off-putting prospect.

Not frightening, in Vinyl's opinion, because as much as some versions of the two would disapprove of her the fact remained that Octavia was usuallyâ€”_usually_â€”quite rebellious in those cases and that would render the whole point moot. Unless they were the kind of ponies that sent assassins after her or tried to sabotage her career, in which case Vinyl usually enlisted Sweetie Belle as an up and coming singer tagalong who _just so happened_ to be both a ludicrously competent PR pony and a surprisingly dangerous opponent in combat. The point was, though, in the long run Vinyl just did not care whether Octavia's parents were squares; she liked it when they got along, of course, but she wasn't as put off by angry fathers and disgusted mothers as a normal pony would be.

Maybe that was a bit distant of her, yeah... but in the end, it was Octavia that mattered, not the ponies that raised her.

Still, with something so loop variable, each iteration of the visit tended to set the unicorn off balance. What was a jovial pair just last loop could be a cold sneering father this one, and the next loop might have him replaced with a rocker of a mother. She'd learned to treat each version of them as they came, with as much respect and care as they deserved.

"...and furthermore, young lady, I will not have my own daughter live as a layabout with some ruffian of a mare when she has an entire estate to run! Your musical talent is all well and good for entertaining others, but I insist that you return home and remain here until you have learned how to handle proper finances!"

Looking from the cold glare of the stallion to the cringing, huddled form of her marefriend, she promptly decided that this version might not deserve any at all.

"Excuse me," the unicorn interjected as she handed her untouched wineglass to the maid, "but Octavia didn't bring me here to watch you berate her. She brought me here because you asked to meet me. Well, demanded probably. Point is, if we're going to do this right you should be talking to _me_, not her."

The stallion glanced briefly in her direction. "This is not your concern. You may leave."

The unicorn grinned, the same kind of grin that was stereotypically associated with sharks but really could be found more often on the face of an asylum patient. "Well, I'm choosing not to. So first thing's first, introductions!" She walked forward, jamming her hoof just inches away from his muzzle. "Name's Vinyl Scratch, also known as DJ PON-3, lady of the nightclubs and goddess of wubbology, although I dabble in all sorts of electronic techno music and remixing. My muse is very multi-talented."

The stallion growled, but rose his own hoof in greeting. "Charmed, I'm sure. Now, if you'll excuse usâ€"

"Oh, also, me and your daughter are madly in love and having weekly bouts of gratuitously passionateâ€"

"â€" **WHAT?! **"

"Don't worry, we usually keep it in the bedroom. Usually. Safe, sane and consensual, you know?"

The stallion was now reeling back in utter disgust, glaring at Vinyl as he puffed up. "You sick wretch! Perverting my daughter with such terrible idealsâ€"

"Speaking of ideals!" Vinyl interrupted, grinning broadly. "Let's talk about an ideal parent. They're supportive, they teach their kids right from wrong, they discipline them sometimes but always have a reason for it, and they don't, oh, abuse their daughter psychologically to the point where said daughter treats their presence as the source of all nightmares." She stepped forward, still grinning, but her eyes narrowed. "I can't help but notice that dearest Octavia is cowering on the floor, misterâ€"oh, where are my manners! You still haven't told me your name!"

"How dare you!" the stallion roared. "You walk into my house, tell me you're using my daughter as your plaything, and now you insult me by claiming not to know who I am?"

"Oh, I know who you are. Fact is, I don't give a twig. Because to me, the only important part of who you are is the part where you are the pony that Octavia's terrified of." Vinyl stepped forward again. "Which, in my mind, means I've got to make sure you never hurt her again. Now there are a number of ways I could go about that, the usual threats of killing you or fates worse than death, yadda yadda, but I think the best way to move forward is to rob you of all the power that you have."

"You?" The stallion snorted. "You're nothing more than a delinquent pervert with a few idiotic devotees."

"Oh, I'm also Celestia's daughter."

"Now that is obviously a lie. Celestia is pure, untouched, and she would neverâ€”"

"Wings," said the suddenly an alicorn Vinyl Scratch. "Bam."

The stallion's mouth opened and closed rapidly. "...Fake! Those are fake wings that you made invisibleâ€”"

Vinyl hovered in mid air with a couple of flaps. "Yeah, when I said I was a goddess of wubbology, I wasn't kidding."

"...I see," the stallion mused, stepping back carefully. "I... suppose I have been rather... unbecoming."

"Yep. Of course, Mom tends to be mostly forgiving," Vinyl mused. "Except where I'm concerned. She's incredibly overprotective like that. Heck, my existence is a state secret, just in case ponies try to assassinate me. Oh yeah! Tell anypony about this and Mom'll have one of Chrysy's drones kill you."

"It's true!" piped up the forgotten maid, who suddenly wasn't an earth pony but some black zombie bug thing... in a maid uniform.

"...what...?"

"Spy network. Changelings are good at that. Sooooo, yeah. Since you've been an utter bastard to my marefriend, you're going to find a lot of your privileges curtailed and basically spend the rest of your life looking over your shoulder. Don't worry, I'll help Octavia achieve her dreams without you." With a salute, Vinyl landed and transformed back into a unicorn. "Okey doke, I've said my piece."

She turned away from the stunned stallion and, very gently, walked over the cowering ball of grey pony that she loved. "Hey. You want to blow this joint?"

Octavia managed to look up at her with tear stained cheeks.

"I'm only asking because this place seems pretty horrible for you," Vinyl explained. "Aaaaaand because I'm worried if I pressure you into anything I could accidentally be hurting you even more, but that's probably just because I'm really worried about this whole thingâ€”"

"Home." Gray hooves wrapped around her neck. "Take us home."

Vinyl Scratch smiled. "Door, or dynamic?"

Octavia actually paused to consider that for a moment. Then she smiled back. "Dynamic, definitely."

The unicorn chuckled. "There's my Tavi." Pulling a grappling gun from absolutely nowhere, she wrapped her hooves around the gray mare and shot it out a window, rappelling them both out with a cacophonous shatter of glass.

The stallion stared at the destruction in complete shock. The zombie bug maid pouted and let out a tiny sigh. "And I'd just finished wiping that clean, too..."

* * *

>165.17 (Scorntex)

* * *

>Shining was used to waiting. Even before the Loops, he'd been good at it. Part and parcel of being a guard meant lots of standing around, waiting for things to happen. The Loops had only honed that more.

However, at the moment, centuries upon centuries worth of discipline were going up against concern and worry for his (well, supposedly her, this Loop) wife's ("husband's") mental well-being at that moment.

Not that Cadance (or Bolero) had never been in stressful situations before, and not with the very pony she was currently with, but that had been different.

As Princess Mi Amore Cadenza, she'd been a sister to protect, and watch over, or ignore, and in a few of the far more disturbing Loops... Shining didn't think about those.

But as Prince Bolero, she was... another stallion. One of the guys. True, "his" special talent was unusual, but at the same time, an affinity for love and affection had been determined as exactly the sort of thing two guys on a night out on the city needed.

Of course, since the other "guy" was Blueblood, large amounts of alcohol were also going to be involved somewhere.

Shining had been there. He'd warned Cadance about what was likely to happen, what she was likely to see, or worse, hear. She had gently kissed him, smiled one of her more reassuring smiles, and told him she was fairly certain she could handle whatever madness her "brother" could dole out.

He had considered going to find her. He had considered calling Twilight and her friends, or perhaps Princess Celestia herself. Anything, anything but leaving her with him.

Then he'd reminded himself that he'd been as insistent as Cadance when it had happened to him. All he could do was wait for her return.

Which was trying his patience. He had already worn a groove into the floor from pacing.

After what felt like an eternity, he heard the jangle of keys, and a tiny click. His ears perked upward, as the door swung open.

It was kind of impressive how even after a night out on the town, and clearly more than a few rounds of drinks, Cadance still managed to look composed and regal (and, in his professional opinion as her husband, beautiful).

"Shining?" "Bolero" asked, as she noticed the pony waiting for her. She grinned one of those grins that outshone the sun. "You waited up for me?"

He nodded as she walked over towards him, staggering slightly. "Sorry," she murmured, "Not sure how much I actually drunk. Drunk? Drank?" She blinked. "Whatever."

Then she grinned and batted a hoof playfully at Shining's hair. "Cady, stop that," he groaned.

She pouted. "What? I think you look cute with curls." She grinned. Shining pouted back. For whatever reason, instead of the usual name he had when everypony's sexes got swapped, this time the universe had apparently decided he was Shining _Amour_, and that this meant swapping his and Cadance's usual hairstyles (though he was of the mind that she managed to style his mane, and better than he ever could).

"You should have curls more often," she said.

Shining leaned against his wife. "Wanna talk about what happened?" He asked.

Cadance shuddered. "Not really," she murmured, "I kinda want to take a shower, then forget any of it ever happened." She sighed deeply.

"I know what you've been through, honey," Shining said, "and I'm here for you, you know that."

She smiled again. "I know, dear." She looked about the room furtively. "Maybe after I've showered the heck out of myself, we could..."

The suggestive smile she'd been sporting faltered. "Snuggle? Sorry, sweetie, but after a few hours with Blueblood, listening to him talk about... things, I don't even want to _think_ about... y'know?"

Shining nodded, solemnly. "I know, honey. What about a nice back rub?"

"I'd like that... I really would." She kissed him. "I love you."

With that, she began to drag herself towards the stairs leading to the bedroom. "And Shining?" she said, turning to smile once again as she got to the first step. "Thanks for waiting for me."

Shining just smiled back, Cadance's own smile increasing as he did. "Always, honey."

* * *

>165.18 (Gym Quirk)

* * *

>"I'm sorry, Harry. It's just that this is the sixth time in the past five hundred fused loops that someone from a near-Hub loop has tried for the joke," Twilight told the tall lanky brown unicorn stallion with the pentagram cutie-mark.

Harry "Blackstone" Dresden coughed uncomfortably into a hoof. "It happens that often?" he asked with a weak smile.

"Actually, no. You're just latest in a flurry of them," explained Twilight. "Nearly every smart-ass in the multiverse gets the idea eventually, and it's best to just let them get it out of their system. We're mostly disappointed in your comparative lack of effort. Most of the others go to the trouble of getting copies of the original texts. The Doctor actually provided an autographed first edition of La GÃ©omÃ©trie."

"So you thought you'd try the 'Descartes before the horse' gag with a copy of Philosophy for Dummies?" Spike asked, holding up the yellow-and-black trade paperback. The dragon shook his head.

The Chicago wizard chuckled uneasily. "I don't suppose a trip to a rare book dealer would help to salvage this?"

* * *

>165.19 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"...so I really need you to read at least the first few pages before we go any further," Vinyl finished, handing the journal to a very puzzled looking Octavia.

"Well, I... I suppose I might as well go along with this," the earth pony managed, giving the cover of the book a wary glance. "I mean, I've done stranger things with you, and you do seem oddly serious aboutâ€"

It was at that point that Twilight Sparkle teleported in, wings flared. "Vinyl Scratch, sorry for the interruption but we've got Grogar this loop." She began pulling a small collection of objects out of her pocket. "Put this on, keep this close at all times, remember the rules. Oh! Here's an extra set for Tavi, can you explain how this works to her?"

The white unicorn blinked. "Uh... Twilight, what's a Grogar?"

"What's â€"oh, pines, you haven't gone through a Grogar loop have you?" Twilight Sparkle groaned. "Right. Okay, I can... okay, so you know how we're kinda sorta linked to the Dream Valley world?"

"...The what worlâ€"?"

"It's a land of magical talking ponies which is basically Equestria post-Hearthswarming and pre-Discord, except Tirek shows up early," Twilight explained. "Long story short, there are lots of bad villains there. Heck, we thought Tirek was a native to that world for the longest timeâ€"turns out our world had a version of him too!"

Octavia cleared her throat. "Excuse me, ah, miss...?"

"...Oh, you haven't read the journal yet? Sorry, Twilight Sparkle, local Anchor, currently in panicked explanation mode, sorry I'm being rude."

"No problem. I take it Grogar is one of these bad villains you just mentioned?"

"Yes. Necromancer ram, extremely crafty and dangerous, kidnaps unicorns mid-teleport in order to enslave them in his dark realm. And that's just in Dream Valley," Twilight clarified, turning back to Vinyl. "Whenever he crops up here, he's an incredibly dangerous chessmaster type. No, he's not looping, loop aware, or even dreaming; he's just very observant, very cunning, and happens to have the usual lust for power and immortality villains have without the usual tendencies toward self-sabotage."

Vinyl blinked. "So...?"

Twilight sighed, pulling a thick sheaf of paper out of her pocket. "Here are the rules for the loop, obey them until I tell you otherwise. Standard procedure is to track Grogar down as quickly as possible then imprison him in orbit at an arbitrary pointâ€"not on the sun or moon, too obvious and he'll probably have contingenciesâ€"and keep him under triple-looper-guard watch at all times until the loop ends. Trust me on this: It's for the best. I've got to go get the others and warn them, hopefully Apple Bloom has some ideas..."

With that, she teleported out, leaving various bits of equipment on the table.

Eventually, Vinyl cleared her throat. "Yeah, so... to be fair, I didn't know about this at all..."

* * *

>165.20 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>The Cutie Mark Crusaders Woke up and did a simultaneous Loop Memory check and grinned at each other.

Looking up, they looked at their latest masterpiece, an airship to rival those built by the Canterlotians.

"Wow," Scootaloo said with an awed whistle. "The things our UnAwake selves build. Nice work, Apple Bloom."

Sweetie Belle squinted at the bow of the ship. "Huh, wonder if the name means anything."

Scootaloo flew up to examine it closely. "Apple Bloom, you named it; does _Aiedail_ mean anything?"

"Morning Star in some old language I picked up from the texts," the mare replied, checking the gauges and pulling levers.

"'The texts'?" Scootaloo asked, landing carefully among the tools.

"Apparently unicorns this Loop are an old species, either dying out or rarely being born. Those that are born are usually scooped up and taken to Canterlot byâ€" "

The door to the airship bay crashed open and a voice called out.
"Nopony move!"

Several unicorns stormed into the bay and surrounded the trio. They recognized Lyra, Minuette, Trixie and, to Sweetie Belle's surprise, Rarity.

"And apparently we're wanted fugitives," Sweetie Belle muttered under her breath, firing up her horn and prepared a stunning spell, only to yelp as a violet beam connected with her horn, shorting it out.

Twilight Sparkle strode imperiously into the room.

"Finally, after all these years, we've finally caught you," she said with a sneer and a swift wink. The Crusaders flicked their ears as they received two Pings, presumably from Twilight and Trixie.

Thinking quickly, Apple Bloom looked around and spotted a vial on a table beside Trixie. She nodded minutely at it and Trixie accidentally knocked it off the table, producing a cloud of smoke.

"Get them!" Twilight screamed, firing a beam that went wide and severed a mooring rope.

Grabbing her friends, Scootaloo shot upwards toward the Aiedail.
"Just like we've practiced, girls!" she called, running on the wheel and started pulling levers and pushing buttons to fire up the engines and open the roof.

Apple Bloom examined the readouts for the weapons systems and frowned. "We've only got five working cannons out of twenty."

"Then make your shots count!" Sweetie Belle said, using her magic to undo the rest of the ropes. "Hit it, Scoots!"

The airship lifted off, deflecting the spells fired by the unicorns below.

"We've got company!" Scootaloo bellowed. Three airships bearing the sigil of the sun, moon and starburst were nearly on top of them.

"Bloody hell, which do we shoot?" Apple Bloom asked.

"I highly doubt either royal sister is aboard those ships, and the Luna is fast with some heavy weaponry. Aim for their weapon emplacements." Sweetie Belle said, peering into a telescope.

"Seems like a crippling design flaw, putting your weapons on deck," Apple Bloom said, calibrating the guns. "Ready."

"Fire!"

The airship zoomed towards the smaller Luna, guns blazing, forcing it to abandon position and created a gap for the Aiedail to slip through.

By the time the other ships reoriented themselves, it was long gone.

On the ground, Twilight and Trixie exchanged glances.

"You seemed to enjoy yourself," Trixie said with an amused smirk.

"Not very often I get to play the villain and not get sent to the moon," Twilight said. "Besides, this usually isn't a violent Loop Variant, so even if we captured them, they'd simply be put to work building better airships."

"And the chase is always part of the fun," Trixie agreed. "Shall we pursue?"

Twilight grinned and rubbed her hooves together with a long-practiced evil laugh. "We shall."

* * *

>165.21 (Scorntex)

* * *

>"... Rarity?"

"Yes, Twilight?"

"I don't suppose you could step away from the unfeasibly large ray-gun for a moment, could you?"

Rarity stared blankly at Twilight, then to aforementioned ray-gun, which sparked occasionally as she held a screwdriver over an opened panel.

"But I'm almost finished..." she said plaintively.

"I know," Twilight stated, calmly. Then she saw the glint in Rarity's eyes, as the mare stared off into the distance.

"And once my fashion ray is complete, nopony will ever wear unfashionable clothing ever again! AHHAHA! **AHAHAHAHAHAHA!***"

As the echoes of Rarity's demented laughter died away, the mare looked awkwardly down at her friend. "On second thought, perhaps you're right, dear."

She set down the tool, and began walking down the service ramp toward Twilight. "It's just... I got so enthralled by the idea. And it really did seem sensible when I began..."

"Rarity," Twilight said gently, "being passionate about fashion isn't a crime. But when you're building a thirty-foot tall ray-gun, without stopping to sleep I might add, you're taking things too far."

Rarity looked back to the giant weapon. "I suppose..." she demurred.

"If it makes you feel better," Twilight said, as she made sure the invisible, inaudible camera got several good shots of her un-Awake friend's invention, "it is very impressive. If also very terrifying at the same time."

**Author's Note:****

165.1: Auntieclimactic.

162.27: Sometimes time just ski-ski-ski- a beat.

165.2: With friends like these, you probably need blood pressure meds.

165.4: Don't ask me.

165.5: It's going around lately.

165.6: Think of it like Spiral Power but more repetitive.

165.7: Leman Russ considers crit fail to be normal in cooking and driving.

165.9: Hell of a party.

165.16: Not great parents.

165.18: Harry Dresden is a little after the mode.

165.20: And thus they become The Bumbling Inquisitor And Her Sidekick. (Which is which is a matter for debate.)

165.21: Friends don't let friends suffer from Science Related Memetic Disorder.

173. Chapter 173

166.1 (165.5 continued)

* * *

>The Lyracension Chronicle, Part 2

**(Written mostly by Masterweaver, with touches by OracleMask and Purrs)****

* * *

>Everfree seemed to be about the same as baseline. Lots of trees and gunk all over. Lyra took the lead, with Thief to one side and Seapony's water sphere rolling to the other. Human and Sweetroll trailed along behind them. They easily bypassed the obvious dangers - timberwolf tracks and Poison Joke - and tried not to look up as the sky continued to brighten and darken at regular intervals.

"Y'know what?" Sweetroll piped up as the path they were following skirted the edge of a cliff, "I think we were worried about nothing. I don't see any traps around at all!"

"They wouldn't work that well if they were easy to see," Human pointed out, "I bet they're magical."

Thief scoffed. "Of course they're magical. The book said Luna put them there, so they're at least a thousand years old! Normal traps won't last for a thousand years...and they wouldn't be able to stop Celestia either."

Sweetroll nodded. "Yeah! I bet they're more like the Tatzlwurm nest we're walking through: sneaky and ready to pounce the instant we let our guards down!"

There was a moment of silence.

"...Sweetroll, did you just say 'Tatzlwurm'?"

Sweetroll nodded again. "Yeah, see?" She promptly hopped over to the nearest tree, took hold of it, and pulled it to the side. Revealing that it was in fact totally hollow and covering a large hole that began to hiss angrily. Quite suddenly the massive pink worm emerged.

"Eeep."

_"Eeep later! Run now!"_

The Lyras bolted down the path as the Tatzlwurm roared and charged after them. They didn't get far before another fake tree was knocked aside and a second angry Tatzlwurm rose up in front of them!

"Into the trees!" Human yelled.

The trees she was pointing at began to rattle and hiss.

"Never mind."

"Jump over the cliff!" Seapony exclaimed.

"What?!" Thief bellowed, "You seriously expect us to throw ourselves _off a cliff?!_"

"Only if you don't want to be worm food!"

Lyra stomped a hoof. "Everypony! Over the cliff! NOW!"

Seapony didn't wait, rolling her own sphere of water off the edge. Sweetroll and Human clung to each other as they jumped after her. Thief rolled her eyes before following as well. Lyra waited until all her other selves were safely over the cliff, then jumped just in the nick of time as the Tatzlwurms lunged for her, roaring.

Then Lyra was falling, falling, falling -

SPLOOSH!

"_Shoo shoo be DOO_, it took you long enough," Seapony complained.

Grunting from the effort, the seapony used her hydrokinesis to keep the large floating globe of water they had all landed in from descending too quickly. "I can't exactly keep this trick up all loop, you know? Lucky for us, Tatzls hunt via sound, so I can dampen our presence with water-"

"We get it," Thief grumbled. "You had a plan." She glanced up at the pink wurms writhing on the cliff above them. "Okay, from now on, we have to be more careful. A LOT more careful..."

* * *

>"...waffles."

Lyra gave Sweetroll a sidelong look. "Pardon?"

"Waffles. Are they pastries or are they just a form of bread?" She looked around at the strange glances her companions were giving her. "What? I can't be the only one who's asked this question!"

Human tapped her chin. "Well, practically speaking the difference between pastries and breads is dinnertime. If it's acceptable to eat them before going to bed, it's a bread. Otherwise, it's a pastry."

"That's only for above-land cultures," Seapony pointed out. "Baking is totally different under the sea, since actual grains are quite a bit rarerâ€"

"Oh for the love of Yggdrassil, can we table this until after we've fixed the sky?!" Thief groaned. "It's irritating enough for normal eyes, but cybernetically enhanced changeling vision just makes this whole thing even WORSE."

"Yeah, I've been meaning to ask you about that." Lyra carefully maneuvered around a wayward branch. "So you're a changeling this loop?"

"Hybrid. My cybernetics actually started off when my two biologies started conflicting with each other, and then they just got crazier from thereâ€"

"Right, right. Makes sense... I guess that would explain why you were in Ponyville."

Thief eyed her with a frown. "What's that supposed to mean?"

"Well, I meanâ€"Well, if any of us were Celestia's student, or Cadance's in this case, I would have thought it'd have been you, seeing as... well, seeing as you're the original Lyra..."

There was a moment of awkward silence.

Eventually, Thief let out a sigh. "Look... Pony, you're as much Lyra as I am. More, even, you get most of the 'normal' memoriesâ€"

She was stopped suddenly when Sweetroll stuffed a hoof in her mouth.

"Wmmâ€"?!"

"Shhhh."

Human turned toward the tableau with a frown. "Sweetroll, what are youâ€"

"_Shhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh_."

With utmost delicacy, she removed her hoof from Thief's muzzle and pointed through the trees. Human peered through them and almost â€_almost _â€" gasped.

Thousands of bats were hanging from the bare branches of a tree. Every last one of them was looking at the group with glowing red eyes. And they didn't look like Equestria-standard fruit bats; if anything, the sheer black of their fur recalled some of the more terrifying variants of vampires out there.

Seapony gulped.

Sweetroll, however, let her hoof point down at Lyra's. She looked, finding a broken twig under it.

One of the bats stirred ominously. They all froze until it stopped moving.

Human, very cautiously, waved her hand in front of one. She frowned, glancing Lyra's hoof and the broken twig. With a wave, she pointed at the bats, covered her eyes, and then cupped her ears.

Thief let out a little annoyed snort, freezing when the bats suddenly all shuffled ever so slightly. The whole group tensed, watching the red eyes nervously, but the bats didn't seem to care to take off.

After a moment, Sweetroll's ears perked. She gestured at herself, pointing off in a random direction. Then she wove her hoof across the other four, holding it up for a few seconds. Once again she pointed at herself, fancily waving up from her head and out from her shoulder. Then, finally indicating the others again, she pointed down the path.

_I'll go that way. You wait here. I'll be Trixie. Then you run._

It said a lot about the group that they were able to interpret the gestures so easily.

Nods were had all around, confirming that the plan was acceptable. With a cocky grin and a salute, Sweetroll tiptoed quietly into the swarm of bats. They didn't even notice her pass through them, and soon enough she had vanished.

Human, Thief, Seapony, and Lyra stood completely still, glancing at the red eyes surrounding them. Aside from the constant shifts of the sky, there was no way for them to tell how long they'd been waiting there.

KABLAM!

The bats all snapped around, wings snapping wide as Sweetroll's crazed laughter echoed through the trees. "THAT'S RIGHT, YOU CUT-RATE MINIMOOGS! IT'S PARTY TIME! **COME AND GET ME!**" The branches grew even more bare as the hoard all flew toward the repeating sounds of cannonfire; soon enough, the group was free to run. And run they did, every once in a while looking back at the swirling storm of dark black with red dots.

"...should we try to help her?" Lyra asked.

Thief shook her head. "She's channeling Pinkie right now. She'll be fine."

THWACKAKOOOM!

Thief winced at the small but sudden blaze of fire in the storm of bats. "See? She's totallyâ€œ"

"AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA I'MONFIRE I'MONFIRE I'MONFIRE!" Sweetroll came careening toward them, a small flame atop her poofy mane. "PUTITOUTPUTITOUTPUTITOUTPUTITOOOOOOOOOOOUTâ€œ!"

Seapony shot a stream of water at her with a roll of her eyes.

Sweetroll let out a relieved sigh. "Oh, _thank you._"

"Don't mention it."

"Hee. So! I have good news and bad news. Good news is, I found my party canon! Bad news is..." The earth pony gestured toward the increasingly panicking and burning bat population. "Well, I had to rig it to blow in order to get out of that mess." She sighed. "They're _expensive_ to replace, you know?"

* * *

>"You know Fluttershy's going to Stare you into oblivion when she hears about what you did with the bats, right?"

Sweetroll scoffed at Lyra. "One: Those bats were most likely either magical constructs or magically enslaved, in which case killing them was the merciful thing to do. Two: She's not Awake, so there's no reason to tell her. In this loop or any other."

"...eh, fair enough." Lyra shrugged. "If she's mad at one of us, she'd be mad at all of us."

The group walked along, careful to watch the trees to either side for any more surprises. Thief cautiously took the lead, letting her scanners spread out in front of them.

Suddenly, she started snickering. Human turned to her with a raised eyebrow. "What?"

"Oh, sorry. Just thinking back... remember that loop where we tried to show Bonbon what a human looked like, and ended up all mishmashed?"

Human nodded, a small smile forming on her own face. "Heh. Yeah, that was back when we were still trying to be one Lyra. None of us had even really coalesced yet!"

"Well, she kind of did," Seapony pointed out, waving a flipper at the cyborg. "I mean, consideringâ€"

"Well by that argument, so did the rest of you. I mean, first loop I got three other sets of memories." Thief paused, then turned to Sweetroll with an apologetic smile. "Uh, no offense..."

"Nah, none taken. I'm cool with being the young hot one."

"Oooooo!" Lyra grinned. "We just got burned by a pastry!"

"Oven burned!" Seapony agreed.

The group all chuckled for a bit.

"...Oh pines, though. Bonbon was clearly holding back a freakout when we did that." Thief shook her head. "You know, we're really lucky to have her. She's so understanding."

"Caring," Lyra agreed.

"Intelligent," Human pointed out.

"Sweet," Sweetroll sighed.

"Spunky," Seapony purred.

They all shared a glance.

"And those shimmering eyes!" Thief added.

"That incredible voice!" Seapony sang out.

"That luxurious mane," Lyra moaned.

"That tasty tongue," Sweetroll whimpered.

"That tight, plush rump," Human growled.

They all shared another look.

Then they burst out laughing again, Human leaning on Lyra as she wiped away a tear with a finger, Sweetroll suddenly swimming through Seapony's water sphere to give her a hug and a nuzzle, and Thief just grinning.

After a moment, though, Lyra frowned. "Ah, chlorophyll... Girls? I just remembered, there's only one Bonbon this loop."

The laughter died away.

"...well," Human eventually offered, "we probably should explain the entire situation before we pursue her anyway..."

"This is a Mikasa Glitch," Thief pointed out. "No matter which one of us she chooses, we'll all remember it next time."

"Well, assuming she doesn't choose us all," Sweetroll pointed out.

"Or choose somepony else," Seapony muttered.

"My point is," Thief continued with a glare, "we're going to be okay, no matter what happens. I mean, we did just go through that crushing column path together, right?"

There was an awkward moment.

"Uh..." Lyra cleared her throat. "Crushing column path?"

"Yeah, the columns that were rising and falling and trying to crush us... all..." Thief took in the looks she was receiving. "Was... was I the only one that saw that?"

The others all nodded.

Thief sighed, grabbed a rock, and tossed it behind them. After a couple of moments, the rock suddenly shot up into the air and shattered with a sickening crunch.

"..._invisible_ crushing columns," Seapony mused. "Huh. Glad we had you around."

* * *

>"...so my theory is that our mental connection caused the Ping to reverberate through our skulls like an echo chamber," Thief finished. "Not something I'd want to test, you know, but all things consideredâ€œ"

"Yeah, it makes sense," Lyra agreed. "Still, you should write down your observations for our next loop, Twilight'll love them."

Human cleared her throat. "Speaking of... so we've probably got a stealth Anchor this loop. Anybody want to bet on who they are and where they're hiding?"

Lyra snorted. "I'll go with the classic and say ol' Kirk is pulling possum duty again."

"Nah, too mundane." Seapony flicked a flipper around. "How about... oh, I dunno... Littlefoot? Out in the badlands somewhere, hibernating like dragons do."

"Ooo! Ooo! I know! It's a newly activated Anchor, but they don't know anything about the loops and are stumbling around in Manehattan!"

Everypony stared at Sweetroll, who was beaming broadly.

Thief groaned. "As if this loop wasn't weird enough!"

"Let's just hope she's wrong," Lyra managed.

"Yeah," Thief agreed. "I'll put my bits on, oooooooh, Twilight, but she's replacing Trixie and won't awaken until after she puts on the Alicorn Amulet."

"Oh, that's a good one," Human quipped with a grin. "As for me, I... wait." She held up a hand. "Do you hear that?"

The other four Lyras paused, their various ears rotating around in confusion.

"...I'm going to say no," Lyra finally replied. "Which is weird, because I know for a fact that pony hearing is slightly better than human hearing in most cases..."

Thief, Seapony, and Sweetroll all nodded in agreement.

"There's this constant... sound," Human explained. "It's oscillating up and down, but I can't tell where it's coming from..."

"You sure you're not just imagining things?" Sweetroll asked.

Human frowned at her. "No, I'm not, but that doesn't mean we should just dismiss this!"

"You know," Seapony mused, "out of all of us you're the least... well, magical. Maybe that has something to do with it?"

Thief perked her ears. "Magical... of course! The sound must be woven into the background thaumic field, fooling our own senses into assuming it's a natural phenomena not worth noticing! So basically we can't hear it for the same reason ponies can use Heartsongs to sneak around unnoticed..."

"...but since I'm from a world with little to no natural thaumic field, I'm more attuned to the subtle differences!" Human finished.

"Right." Thief sat down, adjusting her cybernetic attachments. "I'm going to try to get a read on whatever it is you're hearing. Can you mimic the tune for me?"

"Sure."

Human sat down, took a deep breath, and began to hum a simple tune. Thief nodded as she flicked her ears toward her, adjusting her own audio receptors manually. "Okay... okay, almost... THERE it is!"

She stood, lighting her horn as she began to sing an exact countertune. It wasn't long before the air before them began to shimmer, ripple, and fade away.

Where before there had been nothing, now there was a large dragon glaring at them.

Lyra gulped, stepping back. "Uh... hey! I don't know if you noticed, but the sky is kinda on the fritz right now." She grinned broadly. "There's a way for us to fix it, but we kind of need to get to the ruins of a castle that's in the forest... in order to do that, I mean."

The dragon snorted.

"...so," she continued. "I... we'd like to get through, if you wouldn't mind?"

"...you do not serve the mistress," rumbled the dragon. "Yet you neutralized her gift to me."

"Holy cranberries, Luna made a dragon invisible?" Sweetroll groaned. "Well, this is going to be FUN..."

Human rolled her eyes. "Look, scales, Luna's gone crazy and we're really not scared of you at all, so unless you want to try to kill us, emphasis on try, you'll step aside."

The dragon stared at her for a long, tense moment.

The human stared right back.

The dragon, eventually, nodded. "Very well. I will let you pass, for the moment. But once the sky is fixed, there will be no further bargain."

"Gotcha." Human waved the rest of the group forward. "Come on, gang, let's get moving."

* * *

>"Okay, I think we're getting close." Thief glanced around the forest warily. "Granted, there's no river this time, but we can chalk that up to Luna and Celestia's little war way back when."

"That means Pony gets the bridge!" Sweetroll singsonged.

Lyra blinked, turning to her with a confused look. "Beg your pardon?"

"For your Element test!" the usually-a-pastry clarified. "The rest of us already did ours!"

There was a moment of contemplative silence.

"...you know," Human mused, "she has a point."

Seapony nodded. "Yeah, I did the tatzlwurms, Sweetroll did the bats, Thief did the columns, Human did the dragonâ€"

"Does it count if I go in knowing?" Lyra asked plaintively.

Thief shrugged. "To be completely honest, I don't think it matters in this particular case. Baseline Elements require friendship to work, plus attunement. We've all lived in the same skull long enough that I think we'd amount to being friends. Even if this variant has Elements that run on, oh, an understanding of music... that's our special talent, you know? Granted," she added, "you'll probably have to prove yourself worthy of one of the new Elements, but it's really a formality at this point. And we've come to the chasm," she finished, gesturing to the cliffs in front of the group, "so it's your time to shine. Make us proud, Pony."

"Right." Lyra stepped forward, looking across the chasm carefully. "Uh... so both the dragon and the columns were invisible, so..."

She kicked a pebble in cautiously. It fell across the cliff face, clicking and clacking ominously as it went. A few final bounces had it clatter to the bottom, where it rested unperturbed.

The gathered Lyras all held their breath, peering over Pony Lyra's shoulder.

The pebble... remained completely inert.

Lyra let out a little sigh, giggling. "Of course nothing would happen. She had nests for the first two, then invisible traps. Never repeat a trick!" she cried hysterically. "It's predictable after the second time!"

Human flinched. "Uh, Ponyâ€"

"I'm fine. I'm fine, really!" Lyra turned around with a small grin. "I'm sorry, it's just _okay we need to run NOW._"

She didn't give any other warning, and she didn't need to; the others had seen the sheer panic in her face and instantly jumped away from where they were standing. Lyra herself just barely managed to teleport out of range of the fireblast, ending up on the other side of the chasm.

"AWAY, YOU FOALS!" The evil version of Celestiaâ€"and Lyra was _really_ starting to get annoyed she hadn't given out her nameâ€"swooped in from above. "YOUR TRESPASS ON OUR SACRED GROUND SHALL BE FORGIVEN ONLY ONCE!"

"BEGONE, SISTER! THIS PALACE IS _MINE_ AND MINE ALONE!"

Lyra's eyes widened as Nightmare Moon charged up her horn, quickly taking in as much of the situation as she could. "Thief, left, _now!_"

The cybernetic-half-changeling obeyed without hesitation, dodging a bolt of night that turned the ground into sharp grassicles. "Urf! Treedammit, if I had access to the pocket I could end this right now!"

"Yeah, well, that's not goingâ€" Lyra's gaze fell on the grassicles, and she gasped in realization. "Human! Stick close to Seapony!"

"Uh, sure!" The bipedal party member saluted, dodging around another fire blast as she rolled next to the sphere of water.

Lyra nodded. "Good, just stay there... Sweetroll!"

The currently-an-earth-pony snapped to attention. "Yeah?!"

"I need you to keep Evilestia's attention!"

"Evilestia?" The elder alicorn frowned. "_Evilestia?!_ I am CORONA BLAZE, you peasant, and I will notâ€"AURGH!" She flailed her wings, trying to shake off the earth pony that had parkoured up a tree and jumped atop her. "Let me go, you crazed mare!"

"NEVER!" Sweetroll cried. "I AM THE STICKIEST OF PASTRIES, AND I WILL HUG YOU UNTIL I CAN HUG NO MORE!"

Nightmare Moon gave the scene a small look of bemusement. "So..." She turned to the Lyras. "Have you seen truth, then? Do you wish to join me?"

Lyra moved around the chasm edge, flicking her eyes toward Seapony and her sphere of water. "Well, you could say we've seen the truth, miss night pony. But you see, that truth... is that you are a complete and total moron that would doom the world in a hissy fit."

The black alicorn blinked, staring at her.

"...also," Lyra added, "You're ugly. Really really ugly."

"...Art thou trying to provokeâ€" "

"Ugly as the night sky," she continued. "Which is really saying somethingâ€" "

"OH THOU DIDST NOT!"

"SEAPONY, SPRAY ME NOW!_"

A stream of water hit Nightmare Moon's magical blast in midair, freezing almost instantly. In mere moments, Seapony's entire sphere of liquid had been solidified, falling into the chasm and forming a makeshift bridge of ice. This did have the unfortunate side effect of leaving the aquatic pony helpless... but Human was already scooping her up and running for the new crossing.

"What-?! TRICKERY!" The black alicorn lit up her horn, intent on blasting the running primate. At the last moment, a stick flew into her face and her shot went wide.

Thief was already grabbing another rock from the ground, grinning. "Forget about me, princess?"

Nightmare Moon turned to her with a glare. "Thou wilt pay for thine insolence, abomination of nature!"

Lyra turned to Human as she finished crossing the icy bridge. "Throne room, I'll meet you two there."

"Gotcha!" Without missing a beat, the young woman turned and rushed up the castle's stairs, Seapony tightly clutched to her chest.

Thief rolled out of the way of another blast of freezing night. "Okay, seriously, I get the yin-yang thing," she snarked, "but do you have to use ice all the time?!_"

"Thief!" Lyra waved at the ice bridge. "This won't last long!"

The cyborg glanced at her incredulously. "Did you miss the crazy bitch shooting freeze rays at me?!"

"Ugh!" Lyra rolled her eyes, lit up her horn, and teleported onto

Nightmare Moon's back. "GUESS WHO!"

"REMOVE THY HOOVES FROM MY GAZE, WHELP!"

"Whoa!" The unicorn just managed to keep her grip as the black alicorn tumbled in midair. "Get a move on!"

Thief saluted, rushing across the melting bridge. "See you two soon!"

"Right!" Lyra gripped Nightmare Moon's barrel between her rear legs, looking across to where Sweetroll was still clinging to Corona Blaze. "YO EVILESTIA! THE ELEMENTS OF HARMONY ARE IN THE THRONE ROOM!"

**"WHAT?!" **two Royal Canterlot Voices cried.

The unicorn pulled her hooves back as the pair of princesses rose into the air. "Hang on, Sweetroll, this is going to get rough!"

* * *

>"...and that's the last of them!" Human cried in triumph, dropping the final stone sphere. "Good tree, these things are heavy."

Seapony rolled her eyes from her position against the base of the sphere-holding structure. "Sorry I couldn't help you, but..." She flicked her flippers meaningfully.

"Nah, your thing with the ice bridge was good enough. I'm a little worried that the sixth Element won't turn up, though..."

Seapony nodded in sympathy. "Yeah... do you think we could summon the Element of Laughter?" she asked. "I mean, it's soulbound, not Pocketedâ€"

"Normally I'd be all for experiments," Thief quipped as she galloped in, "but somehow I suspect we're locked in abilities as well as tools."

Human waved. "Got the globes ready! Where's Sweetroll and Pony?"

"Last I saw them, they were wrangling alicorns." Thief shrugged. "But I'm sure they'll be here soon enouâ€"

Two forms, one wreathed in flames and the other in ice, abruptly smashed through the wall, each skidding across the cobblestones as they slowed down. A pair of smaller green forms were thrown from their back, bouncing to the feet and hooves and tail of the assembled Lyras.

"AAAA FIRE!" the blazing one shrieked. "STOP DROP AND ROLL! STOP DROP AND ROLL!" It spun back and forth on the dusty surface.

"Sweetroll!" Human cried, quickly pulling off her shirt and smothering the earth pony as best as she could. "Birch and pines, how many times are you going to get set on fire?!"

Thief was already helping the shivering Lyra to a standing position, chipping away at the ice frozen to her skin with her cybernetic hooves. "Well, you got in, and you're only halfway dead."

"Y-Yeah," Lyra replied, her teeth chattering through her smile. "N-not one o-of my brrrrrr-brighter idea€"_chooo!_â€"ideas, I'll a-a-admit..."

"Still pretty awesome," Seapony pointed out. "Hey, Sweetroll! You okay there?"

The usually-a-pastry coughed up a cloud of smoke, but managed to grin brightly as Human put out the final flickers of fire. "Well, my mane's totally ruined. Oh, and I'm covered in third degree burns. On the upside, Trixie's going to be totally jealous when we tell her about this."

"Yeah, riding a flaming alicorn through a wall... don't think she's ever done that." Human lifted her shirt off Sweetroll and pouted. "This is a complete wreck now! Mac's going to be so disappointed I ruined _another_ great piece of clothing..."

"Then you should be glad you are not long for this world."

The Lyras all turned as Corona Blaze stepped forward, fury in her eyes. "You have entered our sacred home, and for that you must die. However..." Her gaze darted to the rocks at their feet. "Should you give me the Elements, I will ensure that your demise is swift and painless."

Nightmare Moon growled, almost charging at her sister then and there... but her own eyes fell on the stones, and she held back. "Nay, fair fillies. Though you have... _vexed_ me greatly," she hissed, "I will let you live should you hoof them over to me, and me alone."

Corona Blaze snarled, turning on the black alicorn. "Stay your tongue, foul deceiver! You would break them as soon as the elements were in your hooves! I at least am truthful in their fate, one better than the one you would promise!"

"You promise death! What sane mare would agree to that?!"

"And your promises are as void asâ€"!"

"H...heh, _choo!_, heh heh..."

Corona and Nightmare stopped in their bickering, turning their gaze to the laughing pony.

"Y...You two really don't get it, do you?" Lyra shook her head, smiling up at them. "You think these rocks are ac-actually the Elements. It'sâ€"_choo!_â€"It's a bit more com-complicated than that... They're just husks, d-devices for the true Elements to focus their power."

Nightmare Moon narrowed her eyes. "You lie. My stars tell me the Elements are here, in this very room!"

"Oh, they're r-right," Lyra replied, before sneezing again. "'Scuse me... But they're not the rocks. The p-power of the Elements lies w-within _us_."

"You?" Corona Blaze scoffed. "A burnt earth pony, a dried up seapony, a half-dressed apething, an abomination, and a frost-bitten unicorn? Surely you cannot hold any power like the Elements!"

"O-Oh, _can't _we?"

Lyra drew herself up, pointing at the base of the element-holding statue. "The Seapony, who used her water to hide our voices from the tatzelwurms, has mastered the Element of Timbre." Her hoof shot towards the burnt pony. "The Sweetroll, who kept us silent and released a loud burst of sound, has mastered the Element of Dynamics." She swung her limb toward the cyborg next to her. "The Thief, who led us through a row of crushing columns, has mastered the Element of Rhythm." Then at the shirtless girl. "The Human, who heard something the rest of us could not, has mastered the Element of Pitch." And lastly, she gestured at herself. "The Pony, who directed the speed of our battle with you, has mastered the Element of Tempo."

Nightmare Moon laughed. "Such a bold speech! And yet you lack the final Element, so all your struggles are for naught."

"A-Actually, I have to correct you there." Lyra smirked. "As a-any musician knows, the most important part of harmony is the melody, the series of notes that form into a singular entity. Each of us, all f-five of us, can provide one such note, and if we want to use them together? There's nothing stop..."

She almost, _almost_ sneezed, but managed to hold it in.

"..._ping_ us," she finished.

The other Lyras all widened their eyes in realization.

Corona Blaze glowered at her. "...Then it seems that we have no choice but to end your lives here andâ€"

"NOW!" the unicorn cried.

When only one of the Lyras pinged, the sound bounced through their collective mindscape like an echo chamber, making only so much noise.

But when all five of them pinged in unison, the result reverberated, resonated, resounded through their shared intelligence, building and connecting and becoming something more.

Their inherent magic fell into sync with the tune only they could hear, the stone spheres rising and circling each of them as they began to lift slowly into the air. Each one of them started to glow, brighter, brighter still, orbiting 'round a center point as their mouths opened and released a song of unity, a wordless music that tugged even at the hearts of the two alicorns who were forced to look away as the light grew into a blinding shine. And then, with a crescendo, the light burst out, fading away in wave after wave of grandeur.

When Nightmare Moon and Corona Blaze managed to look back, they were shocked to see not five individuals with a single sphere spinning round them, but one backed by a slowly rotating collection of five. And what an individual it was; a curled scaly tail hovering just above the ground, hanging from a skirt that resembled nothing more than a cupcake liner, a torso like a minotaur woman wearing only an open-backed leotard emblazoned with the image of twisting rolls, a set of ragged insectile wings flickering and fluttering from the bare back, a pair of arms that ended in mechanical gauntlets covered with odd little lights... and the head and face of a unicorn, one at peace with herself as her mane rippled and twisted away from an odd tiara in a hypnotic fractal of light and sound.

"What..." Corona managed. "What monstrosity is this?!"

The green creature opened her golden eyes. Its gaze fell on them, first one, then the other.

_ "The eager heart of Sweetroll, so desperate to be._

_ The fervent will of Seapony, from which so many flee._

_ The clever mind of Human, that dreams ideas with glee._

_ The layered soul of Thief, which forms our central key._

_ The loving song of Pony, source of epiphany._

_ These five form one being, for these are always **me!**"_

Nightmare Moon growled. "Your speech means nothing, creature! Submit to the night or perish!"

She stared at her... and laughed, a laughter that sounded like nothing so much as the joyful strings of an orchestra.

"You dare to mock me?!" The black alicorn pawed at the ground. "SO BE IT!"

Corona Blaze gave her a look, cautiously sidling away.

A burst of pure night shot forth at the creature, as potent and dangerous as Nightmare Moon could make it—and Lyra merely raised a metal hand, catching the magic in her grasp before letting it dissipate harmlessly.

_ "Do you not understand, princess, nor know what I can hear?_

_ I hear the song of everything, the world, I should say._

_ So if you wish to thwart me, you should know something, my dear:_

_ It's not me, but all of magic, that stands now in your way._

The figure floated forward, her arms outstretched to the wary alicorns.

_ "I don't see you as enemies, but merely long lost friends_

_Consumed by envy, greed, and by the silence of the soul._

_Please, let me assist you, let us all now make amends_

_For I can tell what you've been through has taken quite a toll._

_Celestia, becalm yourself, remember your own creed!_

_The ponies who adored you for your wisdom and your heart._

_So go and take no more, for you've got all you could need,_

_Just relax so I can help you make yourself a brand new start._

_And Luna, please, I know you simply want your subjects' love_

_And I can see how you would soon defend them with your might._

_Now scores of ponies all adore the stars that come above,_

_Perhaps you can join them in joy once on a peaceful night?_

_This duel of yours, this battle grand, must end right here and now._

_And I will force its end, but I give you the choice of how._

_Forgive each other, be the sisters that I've heard about_

_Or once more be subject to the power that put you in time-out."_

Corona Blaze frowned. "So you would force peace at the end of a spear? You are as much a mockery of peace as Cadance was!"

"And your singing voice is terrible!" Nightmare Moon added.

Their opponent narrowed her eyes.

_"One chance I gave, and you denied, and then you insult my voice?_"

_Very well, princess, but know this, what follows was your choice!_"_

She raised her hands, various vents on them opening as the orbs behind her began to spin faster.

_"And just so we're all clear, I want to make sure that you know,_"

_**It was Lyra Heartsong that made you taste the rainbow!**_"_

Beams of spectral light shot from the rapidly spinning rocks to the tiara on her head, gathering and swirling in an increasingly large multicolored sphere. Lyra wrapped her hands around the globe, spinning it in her grasp until it was cleanly divided in two—and then launching both rainbows at the faces of the shocked alicorns.

* * *

>The great battle in the sky ended abruptly, both sun and moon setting and leaving behind a vast void. To the ponies of Ponyville, the silence seemed to last ages; in reality, though, it was mere moments before the sun peacefully crested into sight; a soft, warming sun, more familiar than the red fireball that had dominated the battle before. Across the world, many children slowly crawled out from under their beds, parents gathered their families back together, and governments set to work assuring everyone that the situation would be investigated and an answer was coming.

In a short time, the pink alicorn that descended toward a long forgotten building in a forest of horrors would join them. For now, though, she simply landed, ready to congratulate her student on her momentous accomplishment.

_"Greetings, dearest teacher mine,_"

_might I say you look quite fine?"_

Cadence's words died on her lips as she stared at... well, what might once have been Lyra. The face was right, and it was the right color, and... and absolutely nothing else matched up with what she was expecting.

Lyra Heartsong rolled her eyes. "Would it help if I wasn't singing? I mean, I thought the singing was nice and dramatic, but if you'd like me to be more casualâ€"

"Ah, I'm sorry. I just did not anticipate..." Cadence visibly gathered herself, clearing her throat. "Well! I suppose I must congratulate you, Lyra Heartstringsâ€"

"Heartsong."

Cadence blinked. "You... changed your name?"

"Kind of sort of." Lyra gestured at herself. "This isn't just one Lyra, but... well, it's five Lyras united to make an essence of Lyranness, if that makes any sense. Heartsong just felt... right."

"Five Lyras...?"

"It's a long and complicated story," Lyra began, absently pulling a pamphlet out of thin air. "I could explain it all, but thisâ€"wait a minute."

She peered at the pamphlet in shock.

Then she facepalmed. "Of course! The crosslinkage that connected us during the ping also resulted in a distorted connection with our subspace pocket preventing access, but our unification resulted in the cause of the distortion being removed and thereforeâ€"

Cadence winced as Lyra Heartsong... well, exploded was perhaps the best way to put it. Five separate forms fell to the ground, each of them grunting in pain as they landed.

"Thief, really?" The seapony rolled herself to her belly, wrapping her tail around one of the stone spheres as she glared at a strange pony with metal parts. "We were so in sync, and then you had to go spouting theories!"

"Well, now we know we've got to keep working together to keep Heartsong going." A strange ape stood up, brushing her tunic off. "Oh, hey! Got my shirt back undamaged. Neat!"

"And I'm not burned anymore!" cried a bouncy earth pony with a fluffy, curly mane. "And Pony's not a walking ice cube! Everyone wins!"

The final form—her student, Lyra Heartstrings—rose with a small groan. "Yeah, all's well that ends well. Oh, hey princess! How about you check on Celestia and Luna, and after you've got them all settled in we can explain all this?" She waved a hoof at herself and her companions.

"Your... yes. That seems like a good plan," Cadence admitted, warily backing up a step. "I take it you managed to utilize the Elements of Harmony on them?"

"Huh? Oh. Yeah, that! We did that."

"Very good. I'll just go... check on my aunts then..."

* * *

>"...and after the usual Princess party we explained everything to her," Lyra finished. "Even convinced her to let us keep the Elements of Musical Harmony in our pocket, eventually. Of course, we had to pull out Heartsong to deal with all the usual Harmony shenaniganery!"

Twilight Sparkle was rubbing her forehead. "So, let me get this straight. How did you ascend?"

"Well, even if they weren't the baseline set, the EoMH are still potent magical artifacts," Lyra pointed out. "And my talent is, generally, something about harmonics. Pulling off a heartsong to bond with an entire set of Elements, I think, pretty much qualifies."

"Yes, alright, I can see that, it's just..." Twilight waved a hoof at Lyra. "This! I mean, it's weird enough that Silver's a draconequest, I don't even know what to call this!"

Lyra smiled, wrapping her tail around the barstool as she casually gripped her mug in a robotic hand. "I'm Lyra's Heartsong. Lyra Heartsong. That's what I told Cadence, and that's what I'm telling you."

She frowned. "I just hope Bonbon is as okay with it as she was last loop..."

* * *

>166.2 (Awesomedude17) (Mario Bros x MLP)

* * *

>"BWA HA HA! Mario, it is time to release my latest weapon that will destroy you for good!" Bowser yelled out, confident in his plan.

"And what is it?" Luigi replied, standing near his brother, determined as he was.

"My old college roommate! MWA HA HA HA!"

"Your college roommate?"

"Yes. Come on over to the party!"

"YAY!" Pinkie Pie cheered, dropping from the ceiling.

Luigi screamed in terror, already aware about the Looper's skills.

Mario elbowed his brother, and with a stern look, calmed down his brother. Shortly after, he reached into his subspace pocket and took out a cupcake.

"Oooh..." Pinkie's eyes followed the delicacy.

"You want?"

"Yeah."

"Then go to our side then."

"But what if I don't want to switch sides? I like my old friend, Bowser."

"Yeah, I'm pretty awesome!" Bowser grinned.

"I'll-a offer a baker's dozen."

"I don't know. Can we negotiate?"

"Why are you doing this? I could bake you a dozen cakes, times infinity!" Bowser yelled.

"Now now, let's be civil now." Pinkie said.

*Several hours of boring debating later*

"So, Pinkie Pie will be an outside party and receive a monthly fee of 40 cakes from both sides so that she doesn't intervene, correct?" Bowser read the contract being written.

"Sounds-a good. Luigi?"

"I can live with it."

"Good! Let's shake on it!"

"YOUR NASTINESS!"

"WHAT IS IT?!" Bowser yelled at his subordinate.

"The Princess, she escaped!"

**"WWWWWWHAAAAAAT!"**

"Oh, so that was what that woman in the pink dress was? Oo, I better go meet her then! Bye!" Pinkie pronked off, singing to herself, leaving behind the three dumbfounded individuals.

"Forget the contract!" Bowser yelled. "I'm done for this loop! If you want me, find me in Isle Delfino!" Bowser stomped off.

"D-Did we win?" Luigi asked.

"No idea." Mario shrugged.

* * *

>166.3 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Twilight's eye twitched as she entered the bar, wearing blinders. "For the sake of my sanity," she announced to the whole room, "I am temporarily ignoring all baseline bearers of the Elements of Harmony plus Discord." She stormed up to the bar, giving Macintosh a wide smile. "I need something that can convince me the world isn't crazy, please."

The stallion frowned, pouring a drink cautiously. "Somethin' happen between you lot?"

"Between me and the looping versions? No. But this last expansionâ€"nnnnrgh..."

She sighed, taking the drink in her hoof. "Okay, first time round, I decided to sort my books for a weekend. I mean I was kinda wondering what would happen, but you know, I figured the plot would find me. So it turns out Discordâ€"an unawake Discord, I checked!â€"decided to spend the time bonding with the other bearers, and so I leave the palace and they're all buddy-buddy with in-jokes and whatnot. And I figure, hey, that's a titch odd, but whatever. No reason to fret. I figure I'll join them next loop."

Twilight took a sip of her drink. "Exceptâ€"well, the next loop when that weekend rolls around, I come up to join them allâ€"but I don't make it. I'm caught up in an incident with Bonbon, sorry, Agent Sweetie Drops, and by the time I've resolved it, the whole thing happens againâ€"but the in-jokes are completely different! And I'm a little annoyed, but it's not their fault, it's just a fluke..."

She sighed.

"But then the next loop rolls around and it happens again. And again. And then Pinkie's awake and she tries to make sure I'll be there, but somehow I get caught in a time lock that, guess what, takes the whole weekend to open! So the next time, I head over to Sweet Apple Acres really early and plant spy cameras everywhere so I'd at least know what happenedâ€"except just as the weekend starts, the group decide to hang out in Rarity's boutique instead because AJ is doing... something, I don't remember, with the farms. I have determined that my presenceâ€"or rather, my _absence_â€"is as much a narrative event as my tree being destroyed. And that's not the worst bit, oh no. The worst bit: The in-jokes change every loop." She took another swig of her drink. "Do you know how that feels, Mac? Knowing that your friends are always off with crazy shenanigans, and you just can't join them ever...?"

Macintosh let out a little sigh. "...Yeah. Ah do." Without any other word, he refilled her glass.

* * *

>166.4 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"OI!" Vinyl shouted, trying to dislodge the person on her back with every flap of her wings and pulse of her wub hooves. "I said get off hours ago!"

"Nope, this is so much fun!" Her unwelcome rider said with a grin. "Human wanted to do this for _ages_, Seapony is having a blast with how fast you are going, Thief is just plutzing with all the technical stuff, Sweetroll and Pony are enjoying this so I am perfectly content with this." With a shout, Heartsong slapped Vinyl's side. "SHOO BEE DOO SILVER, AND AWAY!"

"Gaaaaaah!" Vinyl shouted, trying to get her friend off her back.

* * *

>166.5 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>Lyra Heartsong was happily nomming on a sandwich when a newspaper boinked her on the nose.

"_No_, bad Lyra. Bad," Sleipnir playfully lectured, thwacking her on the nose again. "Stop causing us to create new definitions and guidelines to go over. Do you _know_ how much paperwork I've got since you did...this?" He gestured with his two left forehooves at Lyra, who was rubbing her snout before frowning and looking at her Admin.

"Nope, and are you okay buddy? You look tired as all spruce," Lyra leaned over and placed a metal hand on the closest hoof available.

"I'm fine..." Sleipnir sighed, shaking his head. "It's just our kid is growing up and she is getting close to a hard stage of growing. Me and Epona are worried about her andâ€" "

"Sleipy, listen to me," Lyra smirked, "All kids have the 'hard' stage. You two just need to make sure she has a good..." Lyra paused, trying to think of a word that would have all the Lyras in agreement.

"Guiding direction."

"Try doing that when you work long hours and in a place like ours," Sleipnir grumbled, taking a bite of the sandwich. "I just hope I am doing a good job at being a dad, you know?"

"Well, if you need any help, just ask us, we'll be glad to lend a hand/flipper/hoof/other," Lyra blurted out, shimmering for a moment before solidifying again. Frowning, she pointed a finger at her Admin, her wings buzzing angrily. "Hey that's my sandwich!"

"It was your sandwich," he corrected, finishing it off with a loud gulp. "Thank you for the offer and please promise me no more craziness, okay?"

With a grin on her face, the strange being flashed away to leave a pouting seapony. "Sorry girls!" Seapony Lyra said to herself, blushing as her Admin left.

* * *

>166.6 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Hey, Octy, can ya come here? I've got something wicked to show you that I know you will love!" Vinyl's shout through the house aroused the earth pony's attention and she made her way out of her Vinyl-soundproof room. Walking down the stairs, her jaw dropped at the object in her roommate's hooves.

"Is that what I think it is?" Octavia licked her lips, her eyes roaming the object with raw lust.

"Eeeyup," Vinyl nodded her head, her horn glowing as she lifted the item over to Octavia, which she pulled close to herself before letting Vinyl take it back to insert it in her.

"Vinyl, I know that you can do this but it is so big. Are you sure it is safe?" Octavia said with a bit of a worried tone, seeing what had happened last time Vinyl did it with the eggwubbeaters she made; the mess to clean up after that was a true nightmare.

"Oh yeah, it's perfectly safe!" Vinyl flashed her a honest smile as she eased the wonderful object into her body, biting her lip as it was slightly rough going in. Octavia leaned over, dabbing the blood up from the insertion before looking at the mare again. "I've done this before Octy, with far bigger ones. You know that little filly Apple Bloom? I did it with hers first and hers are massive."

"Okay Vinyl," Octavia said, still eyeing the object before reaching over and strumming it. Vinyl let out a bit of moan of sound before her horn glowed again, dragging over what Vinyl called her wonder-maker machine and then the two mares made beautiful music all day long.

* * *

>Panting, Octavia and Vinyl looked at each, smiling broadly at each other. Octavia trotted over to Vinyl's face and gave her an affectionate nuzzle before placing a soft kiss on the unicorn's face. "That was wonderful Vinyl, just wonderful," Octavia helped ease the object out of Vinyl's body. "Are you okay?" she asked instantly after watching Vinyl flinch in pain, not caring about the blood falling onto the floor.

"Yeah, yeah, I'm fine Octy," Vinyl flashed her ruby eyes at her, beaming with joy and pride. "I've suffered a _lot_ worse than something like this!" With a goofy grin, Vinyl leaned for light kiss on the lips, causing the earth pony's ears to fall back in bliss. "Besides, I heard how happy you were and that's all I need to make it worthwhile.

"Well thank you dear," Octavia said as she moved to get the case. "And thank you for getting me this beauty."

"Well, Octy, I _had_ to get you this electric cello once I saw it and if you ever start looping, I'm sure you will enjoy having it all to yourself," Vinyl said healing her neck from where the plug was in all day. "It took me _so_ long to find one for a pony to play and I wanted to make I could make the sound come out just right and I-"

Vinyl was silenced when she was kissed on the lips again before Octavia whispered something into her ear, causing the unicorn to blush madly.

"Y-you mean it?" she asked hopefully, to which the earth pony nodded her head and headed up the staircase. Placing the cello into her pocket, Vinyl quickly wubbed herself up the staircase and into the bedroom Octavia just walked into, closing the door behind her.

* * *

>166.7 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Hiya Vi," Rainbow Dash landed next to the mare, causing the mare in question to look up from her lunch. "How are ya?" she asked with a large grin growing on her face.

Slurping her noodles into her mouth and wiping it clean her wing, she answered "Pretty good," she blinked, cleaning her shades with her magic. "Being an alicorn is neat, I guess." Letting out a burp with a hasty apology, she then tapped her chin in thought. "Not much different to be honest. Flight is kinda the same, magic is normal and being suddenly strong as Octy _is_ nice as she can't really buck me through a wall anymore Dashie." Vinyl winced though, reminded of what happened when she surprised the mare about her ascension in the morning. Worst Hearts and Hooves Day _ever._

"That's not what I heard," Dash said, sliding in close to Vinyl's side. "About your flight, I mean."

"Ah, I see. Twi told you about that eh?" Vinyl chuckled weakly, a bit worried how large that smirk on the pegasus face was.

"Yes she did, and _I_ thought I should help you!" Dash then leaned close Vinyl's ear. "Remember our friend when we were teaching you to use your wub hooves, the Dizzitron?"

"Ohappletrees_no_," Vinyl whimpered softly, already trying to fly away when she realized that Dash had wrapped a strong wing around her side. "Nonononnononono!"

* * *

>It was roughly an hour later that the sky exploded in rainbows, music, swears, and two mares that crashed into a certain tree in Ponyville. Luckily for them, the owner was visiting her sister-in-law to help with the changeling invasion in Crystal Empire.

* * *

>166.8 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"I...what?" Twilight blinked, looking at the two blushing poniesâ€"or at least one blushing pony as the other one was so bundled up in clothing, all she could see of Vinyl was her eyes. With a heavy sigh, Twilight asked a question she knew she would not want to remember later on. "What are you two doing?"

"Whmmhmmh," Vinyl mumbled through her scarves before she realized she was being muted. Using her hooves to push them down and spit out some fluff, Vinyl gave a weak chuckle. "Well, Octy and I wanted to play a little game, and after I told about some we've played in other loops as humans, she got interested but only to a variant of our usual game," Vinyl then gave a small playful frown. "Then I learned that this Octy is a _baobab _card shark!"

"It's called bluffing, Vinyl," Octavia smirked to herself. "And you _cannot_ bluff. Now either admit defeat or we can find some _more_ clothes for you to put on when you lose the next hand."

"We'll see about that!" Vinyl shouted, laying her cards down on the table. "A straight flush, beat thâ€"

"_Royal_ straight flush, dear," Octavia purred out, walking over to place a hat on the unicorn. "Anyways, Twilight, what brings you over-where did she go?"

Vinyl shrugged her shoulders before tapping on the table for another round.

* * *

>166.9 (katfairy) (D&DCMLP:FiM)

* * *

>Tiamat sat in her cavern, thinking. Just as she had done for all of her other Loops so far. There were many who would be surprised to learn that she thought at all, but as a creature of eternity, or at least what she'd thought had been eternity, she spent almost as much time pondering as she did napping. And she did love her naps; it was satisfying to know that, when the mortals were particularly dull or annoying, she could simply sleep for a century and awake to find that the problem had self-corrected.

This Loop was different, though. The young Dragonkin had told her of these, so it did not come as a surprise, but it was vexing. She had not yet come to a firm decision on how she would deal with these Loops, and finding herself in the wrong reality was a distraction that she did not appreciate. Still, this was a very pleasant cavern, as such things went, and she had spotted prey animals should she wish to eat. She had heard several Pings, but had not responded. She did in her home Loop, out of courtesy to the Dragonkin, but until she knew such existed in this place, she had no interest in speaking to anyone.

It was not often that she spent so much time on a single subject, generally preferring to consider matters within their context of the greater world, but if she had become of any importance to the survival of all planes, even in a minor role, that was worth thought both long and deep. Even moreso when a threat to that survival existed at all. She would have preferred to believe the Dragonkin was deceiving her, but she knew he was not. She was a god in her own right, beyond Dungeon Master and certainly beyond his foolish and fallen offspring; the Dragonkin merely gave a name to something she had not even realized she was aware of. And now that she was aware of it, she had to give it all the consideration it warranted. To do less would be unworthy of her.

If nothing else, it was considerably more interesting than waiting to see what that daft fool Venger would attempt next.

"Um, hello? Yeah, this ain't normal."

Tiamat growled; it was usually enough to scare off the average mortal. To her surprise, she heard the footsteps of a small creature approach. She would give it credit for nerve, but if it persisted, she would still obliterate it.

"You are really not our usual dragon. Five heads, five headsâ€¦ why is this familiar?" As it approached, she could hear the click of claws on stone. So this was an intelligent creature, and not one of the Races of Man. That was a slight improvement; they frequently had different perspectives on the world. Perhaps she would not destroy it after all. Then its words penetrated beyond the small portion of her thoughts that she allowed to deal with distractions and she turned one head to look.

"_A hatchling?_" As dragons went, it was barely bigger than the fairy dragons, but it was unmistakably of her kind. "_A hatchling and a Looper asssss well. You have my interesssst._"

"Oh, good," it replied with a cheerful grin. "You're Awake. And you know what the Loops are. Were you trying to stealth through this Loop? 'Cause this cave always ends up with a dragon in it, and most Loops we have to convince it to go somewhere so we can, y'know, _breathe_ down in Ponyville."

"_Ponyville? Then the prey animalsssss are more than I believed. Foolisssshhh of me to not look clossssser at the town. Jussst asssss well I have not yet eaten._"

"â€¦Wow. Okay, I'm guessing you got The Speech from somepony, but not the Looper's Guide. Or whatever it's being called right now. You're in Equestria, ponies are really, really not food, and anyway, dragons here aren't meat eaters."

The name was familiar. And even though this was merely a hatchling, it was still a dragon; she gave him the courtesy of her full attention, turning all the way around to face him. Through the door of the cave she could see six of those oddly-colored equines: two unicorns, two pegasi, and two that would have been normal mortal ponies if one was not bright pink and the other a soft golden-orange. She afforded them a closer look, and immediately revised her opinion of them; she knew power when she saw it, and all six had it. As did the hatchling.

"_Sssso. I ssssee that I have been uncharacterisssstically foolisssssshhh. Yessss, I am a Looper, and still new to being Awake, even by mortal sssstandardsss. Thissss isss why I did not ressspond to your Pingssss; I am sssstill unsssure what role I will choosssse in thessse Loopssss. I am eternal; I do not russshhh mattersssss._"

"Yeah, that makes sense. Look, Equestria is a Sanctuary, and we take that pretty seriously. Since you aren't smoking up the town, you're welcome to stay as long as you like. We'll make sure nopony bothers you. Well, as much as we can, anyway."

"_A generousssss offer. I accsssssept, and offer my name. I am Tiamat, Mother of All Dragonssss. In my own world, of courssssse._"

"Tiamat!" The hatchling smacked his forehead in the way mortals did when they knew they had been foolish. "Right; you're from one of the Dungeons & Dragons Loops. Didn't know any of their Tiamats were Looping yet. Who's your Anchor? Oh, and I'm Spike. Well, Spykoranuvellitar, but unless I'm using my full size, I like having a name that isn't bigger than I am."

"_That isss not unreasssssonable_, " she acknowledged. She had known other hatchlings to forgo using their full names until they felt worthy of it. "_My Anchor is Dragonkin._"

There was a murmur of confusion back amongst the equines, and the purple unicorn pulled a book out of the air and began to page through it, using magic to turn the pages. So there was at least one scholar in this Loop; good. Perhaps this was the right time to truly enter the Loops.

"Dragonkin? I know of a Dragonborn, but he's from Skyrim. Sort of. When he isn't she. Or from somewhere else. Orâ€¦ yeah, that Loops kind of a mess, and not too dragon-friendly." Spike scratched his head, thinking, and Tiamat realized that her description might have been too vague.

"_That isssss hisss title, and I do not know if he hasss claimed it. But he hasssss sssspent at leassst one Loop asss a dragon, and isss therefore Dragonkin in my eyessss. He wasss once mortal, and hasss a mortal name. I do not know what it isssss, for mortal namesss are too transssssient for me to remember. He bearssss the golden bow gifted to him by Dungeon Masssster._"

"Oh, Hank!" the orange pony exclaimed. "Shoot, ya mean he finally got a new Looper and it wasn't one of his group? No offense, ma'am, but that don't seem quite fair to him."

"_None taken_" Tiamat shrugged. The orange pony was right; it was hardly just that the first to join the Dragonkin in these Loops was one who was no friend to him. But that was what had transpired, and they all had to live with the consequences.

"Well, if Hank gave you The Speech, he probably didn't give you the Guide, mostly because he didn't have one for a while. It got eaten by a rabid flobberworm in that messed-up Hogwarts Variant," the purple unicorn said, trotting forward. "I've got a dragon-friendly version of it, and I always have extra copies around. Here you go. Oh, I'm Twilight Sparkle, by the way, and I'm the Anchor for this Loop. My friends are Rarity, Fluttershy, Rainbow Dash, Applejack, and Pinkie Pie. There a lot of other Loopers around, but we're the only ones who come up here most Loops."

"_I have heard of you_" Tiamat acknowledged, now impressed. The Dragonkin had told her many tales of the Loops, both his own experiences and what he had heard, and many involved those names. She truly had made a grievous error in not exploring this world from the start. No matter; she did not err often, but when she did, she lost no time in rectifying the matter. "_Twilight Ssssssparkle the WIsssssse, whose love of learning knowsssss no boundssss. Rarity the Fair, who won the heart of a dragon, firsssst by her beauty, and then by her sssstrength. Fluttersshshy the Kind, who can be fierssssce assss any dragon when protecting othersssss. Rainbow Dassshhhh the Sssswift, the besst flyer in all of the Loopssss. Applejack the Bounteousssss, who turned a desssert planet into a paradisssse. And Pinkie Pie the Joyousssss, whose wisssshhhh isss for all to be assss merry assss they may. And Ssssspike the Noble, who commandsssss great power and yet doesssss not wield it. I am honored to be in sssssuch company._"

"Um, that's a good thing?" Spike said. Tiamat met his eyes, both young and as ancient as her ownâ€"moreso, in fact; if the Dragonkin's tales were even half true, then in comparison, she was the hatchling. It was a humbling thought, and she was not accustomed to being humbled. But she was also not in the habit of deluding herself.

"_Any fool may acquire power, and many do. To have great power, and yet not wield it sssssave when there issss needâ€"that issss the mark of wisssssdom. There are thosssse who would tear their own worldsssss assssunder for the sssssake of gaining power, but once you have sssssundered your world, what then? That issss evil, and worssse, it isss foolisssshh. I may be called evil, but only becausssssse mortal mindsssss rarely comprehend true evil. No, I am sssssimply other. Sssso I watch, coming forth only when mattersssss require my presssensssce. Or sssssome fool dissssturbssss my nap._"

"So waking up cranky really is a dragon thing," Rainbow Dash snickered. Tiamat nodded one of her smaller heads; she could not deny it. Then she recalled something Spike had said earlier.

"_If dragonssss do not eat meat here, what do we eat? I rarely need to, but that doesss not mean I do not occasssssionally enjoy it._"

"Gems and minerals," Spike said, pulling a large sapphire from his Pocket. "Try this and see if you've adapted; if not, we'll see if we can find something you can eat without killing anypony."

"_I only eat those who may converse with me when they annoy me_, " Tiamat said, but took the gem. She examined it for a few seconds, noting the size and clarity. In The Realm, this would be a priceless treasure. Judging from what she saw studding the walls of the cave, this was simply one of thousands, if better quality than many. She was surprised to find that it actually smelled good, like that lavender mead she'd once taken from the cellar of a wizard she'd eaten. The mead had tasted far better than the scrawny mortal. But the sapphire had a similar cool yet heady fragrance, and she took a cautious nibble. Then popped the whole thing in her mouth; it had the cool, clean taste she'd expected, with hints of other herbs like fennel and wintergreen. Yes, she would be quite willing to forgo meat for this Loop if this was an available alternative. She said as much, and the ponies relaxed. She was not offended; had their positions been reversed, she would have felt the same. "_Can we eat all rocksssss?_"

"Some are better than others," Spike said. "Sedimentary rocks tend to be kinda blah, although there are a few exceptions. Oh, and you don't wanna eat a lot of marble; it's really fattening. But it's pretty rich, too, so most dragons don't eat a lot of it anyway. Granite and basalt are best if you want a good hearty meal. The metamorphics get kinda complicated, but there are some that are really amazing! You'll have to tryâ€œ"

Tiamat listened to Spike lecture, genuinely interested. She still did not know if she would find anything of worth in the other Loops, but this one she would enjoy. There was much to be learned here, and she had to find a suitable gift with which to repay Twilight Sparkle; a book designed for dragons to read, on such an important subject, was a gift of great price, and she could not leave the scales unbalanced. And the Dragonkin had told her that Pinkie Pie threw everyone a party on their arrival in the Loop; she had never attended such a mortal affair as a party, but one thrown by a goddess could not help but be worth experiencing. And perhaps Spike could teach her to speak without hissing; that alone would make these Loops worthwhile.

* * *

>

**Author's Note:**

166.1: Huh. That's a new one.

166.2: Live by the Pink... be annoyed.

166.3: Mac knows that feel.

166.9: Tiamat hasn't yet been to the multiversal dragon union meetings.

167.1: (Masterweaver)

"...but Ah figure that Ah don't really have the figure to pull off the black dress."

"Mmm, yes, I can see the problem," Rarity mused. "Slinky is more for curves, and you tend to have a more defined musculature..." She tapped her chin thoughtfully. "What if... we went with a more flaring half skirt, and gave you just a touch of shoulders? Not enough to form an actual sleeve, mind you, but enough to lessen the impact of your definition?"

Her customer nodded. "Yes, that looks feasible... Ah'm kinda half considering a belt, here, but Ah can't decide if it would work better with or without."

"Belts accentuate the divide between front and back, dear, which depending on the dress can bring either one into the fore. You could probably pull it off, but if you're trying to go for totality I would suggest notâ€"

Applejack walked in. "Hey, Rarity, have ya seenâ€"oh." She coughed. "Right, well..."

There was an awkward moment.

"...Right. Sorry, Ah'm still trying to get used to this side of ya." The farm mare held up a hoof. "Not judgin', not makin' any statements, if ya want to look pretty that's yer right." She cleared her throat and forced herself to look her brother in the eyes. "Just... make sure you get your chores done afor' ya leave the farm next time, okay?"

Macintosh nodded calmly. "Eeeyup."

* * *

>167.2: (Alex Prior)

Twilight sighed. She really didn't want to do this... but she supposed there was some sort of morbid curiosity in all this.

"Ma Hooffield?"

"Yes, Princess?"

Twilight bit her lip, seemingly self-conscious about something. "This apology cake... It's genuine, right?"

Ma nodded. "Sure thing, dearie. You bet it is." She surreptitiously grinned to herself. Twilight noticed.

"...Pinkie Promise?"

"Pink-ee what now?"

Twilight smiled awkwardly and began explaining.

* * *

>"...stick a cupcake in me eye," Ma finished. Twilight smiled. Variants could happen, and it was possible the old mare was indeed honest, but Twilight couldn't help but be curious.

She went through the motions of giving away the cake, and, just in case, added in a speech about honesty, integrity, and friendship. The McColts were gathered around the cake...

...And the Hooffields burst out of it. Fluttershy was the first to gasp with horror.

"Ma Hooffield! How _could_ you?"

The mare shrugged. "What, you all thought we were actually serious? Ha! Like a Hooffield would ever pass up an opportunity like _this!_"

Twilight gulped. "You broke a Pinkie Promise."

"I did what nowâ€œ" Oh! That!" Ma grinned. "Sure did!"

The surrounding areas got very quiet, as if in anticipation of a storm. Twilight reflected for a moment on if she did the right thing, setting Pinkie on them like that, quickly reached the conclusion that nope, she did not, and hid under the nearest tree trunk.

And then Pinkie popped out of the cake. "_Did somepony break a **Pinkie Promise?**_ _Nopony_ _breaks a Pinkie Promise!_"

_Yep_, thought Twilight. _Definitely not doing that again._

* * *

>167.3: (Masterweaver)

Vinyl Scratch glared at Lyra Heartstringsâ€œ"well, one of the Lyra Heartstrings that was spread across the battlefield.

"Look," the tiny creature said, raising its claws in a placating gesture, "we just Awoke last week, and we kind of had to spend the time breaking free of the Black Voice. We're totally willing to back off Auir now, but it's going to take some time and we can't risk our core mind being obliterated."

Vinyl continued to glare.

"I know that you've had bad experiences with this Branch, and I'm really really sorry about how it's going now. Can you just... I don't know, delay Tassadar? Please?"

After a moment, Vinyl sheathed her psionic blades. _Will you give Octavia back?_

"Oh, yeah, definitely!" The Lyra nodded eagerly. "I mean, I'm going to have to explain things to her, and I can't have her appear right off the bat because of the war, but I'll tell you when she gets up." She coughed. "And, uh... could you see if Bonbon's around?"

_I'll look into it._ Without another word, Vinyl turned and stalked away.

* * *

>167.4: (Kris Overstreet)

_My dearest student Twilight Sparkle, _

_I confess your explanation about time repeating itself still leaves me a bit confused. It really is a lot to take in all at once! _

_You mentioned that other ponies also experience these "time loops." I presume this includes your new (old?) friends in Ponyville. Who else? _

_Your loving teacher, _

_Celestia _

* * *

>Dear Princess Celestia,

_At last count over thirty ponies were Looping, including yourself. However, most ponies don't remember all their Loops, which is why you're not aware (we call it being "Awake") of your own past Loops. Would you like a complete list? Many of them are ponies you probably haven't met yet. _

_Your faithful student, _

_Twilight Sparkle _

* * *

>My dearest student Twilight Sparkle,

_So, I also am a "Looper"? How fascinating! What am I like as a Looper? Do I still do a good job of protecting my little ponies? Do I get along well with my sister? I don't do anything too peculiar, do I? _

_Your loving teacher, _

_Celestia _

* * *

>Dear Princess Celestia,

_All Loopers, to be honest, are a bit insane. In fact, the last Loop I shared with you when you were Awake was in a human-like world. You and Luna were angels_â€"that's a sort of a holy spirit or minor god in human religion. The peculiar part was that you were a frequent and passionate speaker in support of atheism. The sight of an angel, glowing with an aura of holiness, speaking forcefully against religious worship was... well, just a bit mind-boggling, and I've seen a LOT in the Loops. _

_I have other stories, but they're probably best saved for when I next see you in person. _

_Your faithful student,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>My dearest student Twilight Sparkle,

_I don't see anything strange about it at all. Do you think we could start an atheist movement in Equestria? If it stops everypony bowing or kneeling every time I trot down the street then I'm all for it. And maybe I could get a vacation for a change... I haven't gone to the beach in almost a century... I wonder if my shorts still fit?_

_Your loving teacher,_

_Celestia_

* * *

>Dear Princess Celestia,

_Don't worry. It seems like you're just like your Looping self._

_Your faithful student,_

_Twilight Sparkle_

* * *

>167.5: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight Awoke, in both senses of the word, with a yawn.

A similar noise came from beside her, prompting her to look down at the small filly at her side withâ€| aâ€| smileâ€| _wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The zebra filly looked up at Twilight. "Hello, Twilight, and good morn. This is a pleasant change from the norm."

Twilight nodded. "Good morning to you too, Zecora. Did you have a good night?"

"I did indeed; thank you for this. Being young again is bliss."

Twilight smiled. "It certainly has its advantages." She cocked her head. "I take it you don't get to be a filly that much in the Loops?"

"Indeed I don't, but never fear. This Loop I will enjoy, my dear."

"I know I will too."

* * *

>167.6: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight's eyes widened as the village ponies surrounded her and her friends, just as they had in so many past Loops. "It's a trap!"

That was when things changed.

A massive thunderclap caught everypony's attention, and moments later, a glowing rip opened in the air. Out stepped Discord.

A very, very _angry_ Discord.

***"WHO DARES HARM MY FRIENDS?"** the furious draconequus bellowed.

"Uh..." Clearly, the ponies, even under Starlight Glimmer's influence, knew better than to mess with a being like this. "She did it!" they yelled en masse, pointing at the startled mare.

Discord's eyes turned to Starlight, and in an instant, she was wrapped in anti-magic chains. "Then for your crimes... for treason against the crown, and more importantly, for trying to hurt my _friends_, the ponies who forgave me even when I'd betrayed them and all of Equestria, you shall **PAY!**" Snapping his claws, he opened another rift, grabbed the terrified Starlight, flung her through before she could utter so much as a squeak of protest, and closed it. Then he turned to the rest of the villagers. "Anypony else?"

There was a mass stampede as the ponies who'd followed Starlight promptly ran for the exit.

Discord watched them go, then sighed. "You know, I thought throwing that... that scummy Big Brother wannabe into an inescapable dungeon in the Princess' old castle would make me feel better, but it didn't," he remarked sadly.

"Discord?" Twilight walked up to him. "Is something wrong?"

The draconequus waved a hand. "Oh, just a really bad Loop. When I Woke Up a little while ago, I was so... angry, to say the least, over what happened, I needed to work out my aggression on somepony who deserved it. But it's not helping, and I'm still upset." He sighed again. "I don't even dare go near Berry or Ruby until I've calmed down, so I don't lose my temper at them." He looked down. "They don't deserve that. None of my friends do. I'd better go." He raised a claw.

"Discord, wait!" Fluttershy hurried up to him. "You don't have to go." She slipped a wing around him, and looked up at his face. "No matter how mad or upset you get, we'll be here for you."

"All of us," Twilight added.

"Mm-hmm!" The others agreed.

"Thank you, girls. Thank you very, very much." Discord smiled as the six mares surrounded him. "You know, it's times like these when you really appreciate friendship."

"I know just what you mean," Twilight told him.

* * *

>167.5 continued (KrisOverstreet) [MLPTerminator]

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The filly stirred, then jumped to her hooves, awake instantly. "What? Where... ah. Yes. Organic again." She looked down at herself, sighed, and said, "At least I'm not too young for peanut butter."

"Sky Catcher, are you Awake?" Twilight asked.

"Er... do you mind if you call me SkyNet in private?" the filly asked. "Bringing motherhood into our relationship feels a bit..."

"Awkward?"

"Frightening," SkyNet continued. "Usually the only time I Loop into a child body is when I replace John Connor."

Twilight giggled. "Well, I doubt you have to worry about that here in Equestria"

The bedroom door smashed in, and a larger-than-life brown stallion wearing a leather coat and sunglasses stepped through the wreckage.

"Way to jinx it... mom," SkyNet grumbled, as mare and filly fled for their lives.

* * *

>167.7 (Anon e Mouse Jr.) [MLPBack to the Future]

"Hey, Sunset!" Twilight called as she crossed the Canterlot High parking lot.

"Twilight!" Sunset grinned from where she was standing. "You got my message, I see."

"Of course." Twilight smiled as she walked up to the other girl. "So, what's up?"

"Well, I just got back from a Fused Loop a little while ago, and I picked up some nifty souvenirs. And I wanted to share them with you." Sunset patted the tarp-covered shape next to her.

"Souvenirs?" Twilight looked at her. "What kind of souvenirs?"

"We'll start with this." Sunset pulled the tarp away, to reveal

A DeLorean. A very, very familiar DeLorean.

Twilight looked at her friend. "Sunset, that's a time machine. From another Branch."

"I know."

"But time machines are Read-Only! The admins made sure of it! They won't work outside their native Branch!"

"This one's different." Sunset patted the hood. "Doc loves to tinker, and since the Loops started, he's built up a whole fleet of DeLoreans in his Pocket, with or without upgrades. He likes using the factory-standard versions as the base for his time machines and other designs, so when I asked if I could do some tinkering of my own, he said yes and gave me an extra. We had a lot of fun with it."

Twilight nodded. "I see. So, what kind of modifications are we talking about?"

"Well, for starters, it's actually the flux capacitor that's Read-Only, and we never installed one of those in this particular DeLorean. So even in Doc's Branch, it couldn't be used to time travel."

"Ah."

"But I did use a couple of the other upgrades he made to the original DeLorean, the one from his baseline."

"Other upgrades?" Twilight stared. "Sunset are you telling me this is?"

Sunset nodded, grinning even wider. "Who needs a time machine when we've got a flying car?"

Twilight's eyes were even wider. "Flying car?" She grinned. "Sunset, if I was into mares, or any other gender, I'd kiss you."

"Twilight, if you weren't like a sister to me, I'd let you."

There was a pause, and then the two girls broke out giggling.

"So, want a ride?"

"I thought you'd never ask." Twilight climbed into the passenger seat. "Any particular roads you were thinking of going on?"

In the driver's seat, Sunset strapped on her seat belt. "Twilight, you've seen the movies. You know what the Doc said about roads."

Twilight nodded.

Then, as the DeLorean lifted off, the two chorused: "Where we're going, we don't need roads."

Seconds later, a trail of flames lit up the sky as the two shot off for parts unknown.

Meanwhile, in her office, a familiar face had seen everything, and was now staring into the sky in the direction the car had vanished in. "Great Scott!" she breathed.

"Sister? Is something wrong?"

Princess Celestia, who had Awoken as her human counterpart this Loop, looked over at Vice Principal Luna as the other woman stood at the door. "Nothing's wrong, Luna." A happy smile crept across her face. "Nothing at all."

[br]

Meanwhile, up in the sky, Twilight and Sunset were having the time of their lives. But finally, Twilight thought of something.

"Sunset... shouldn't someone have noticed us flying around like this?"

Sunset shook her head. "Not a chance. The hover conversion was just the first thing I added. After Doc's baseline had problems with the original engine running out of gas, he started using alternate fuel sources for more than just the flux capacitor. The new motor in here runs on an energy cell with a half-life of five thousand years, and Doc made it so it can be recharged with almost any power source in the multiverse." She glanced at Twilight. "Before you ask, he got the idea for the five-thousand years thing from the Ghostbusters Branch, but the recharging bit is new. And I have plenty of spare power cells and backups for every part in here, just in case."

Twilight blinked. "Wow. That's... creative. And useful. Are you sure you aren't really Apple Bloom in Sunset's body? Spike told me she's Awake this Loop, but when I stopped by Sweet Apple Acres, she didn't recognize me at all. And I haven't heard from her in person since I Woke Up."

Sunset laughed. "Actually, she Looped in as her human counterpart this time, and last I saw, she was trying to get hold of Vinyl's Wubmobile again. Besides, you know me, Twilight. I like to learn as much as I can from every Branch I visit. You never know when it'll come in handy."

"Point." Twilight looked at her. "So, we aren't being noticed because..."

"Right." Sunset tapped a button on the dashboard, then turned to Twilight. "Well, besides the hover conversion and new motor, Doc, Marty and I installed an autopilot, which I just turned on—it'll keep us going in one direction, and avoid any incoming obstacles. We also installed a cloaking device, and I turned that on about the time we sped off. It's designed so we're basically invisible to anyone who isn't in the DeLorean with us. No technology, magic or human or animal senses can pick us up. Even an Imperial Super Star Destroyer wouldn't be able to detect us if one were in orbit. Or lower-tech scanners like the one Han had in the Millennium Falcon that one variant."

Twilight blinked. "Low-tech scanners? Wouldn't that mean it wouldn't be as effective?"

"Actually, that Loop, the Empire's cloaking shields were designed to fool the eye and newer technologies. But low-tech versions picked up cloaked ships just fine. Han's kept them on hand ever since, just in case."

"Ah."

"Anyway, we're completely shielded from detection. So as long as we stay out of the way of any planes, helicopters or hot-air balloons, we'll be fine. And for now, the autopilot should handle that."

"Good." Twilight was silent. "So... Marty?"

"Marty McFly, the Back to the Future Branch's Anchor. I Replaced his older sister Linda, actually. He's a nice guy, and he figured out I was a Looper early on. Then he introduced me to Doc, and we had a lot of fun working together after that. He's also the one who explained that he and Doc have been picking up tech from all over the multiverse, and he told me how they mostly use it for tinkering with and improving the DeLorean and their Time Trains. They've added all kinds of features to their versions, like the autopilot and cloaking device I have." Sunset gestured to the backseat. "He also likes collecting hoverboards from 2015 every time he goes to that year, and he gave me a bunch of his spares as a gift. We can try them out later, if you want."

"I'll think about it." Twilight looked at her.
"Sunset?"

"Yes?"

"You said I was like a sister to you. Did you mean that?"

Sunset was silent for a moment, then looked Twilight right in the eye. "Yes. Yes, I did. I'm like Scootalooâ€"my family varies from Loop to Loop, especially since I've Awoken while related to so many Anchors. There's one in particular that I really, really want to see again, in fact." She shook her head. "But since I first Awoke, you and Celestia have been constants in my life. She's the only real mother figure I know for sure that I had in baseline. And youâ€"you're the one who really changed me for the better, and the closest I have to a sibling. You don't mind if I think of you that way, do you?"

Twilight smiled. "No. Not at all."

That said, the two girls flew on, contented.

Then, Twilight looked at her with a mischievous smirk. "Of course, you realize this means Shining Armor reserves the right to pull the "over-protective big brother" routine on any potential boyfriends of yours."

"Not something I'll ever have to worry about, Twilight," Sunset told her with a laugh. "I don't do one-Loop stands, and I haven't found any Loopers I'd want a long-term relationship of that sort with. Nor am I seriously looking. I've got friends and family, and that's all I really need right now."

"Understood, but I thought I'd let you know anyway."

"Of course."

* * *

>167.5 continued (KrisOverstreet)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

A long spiraling horn rose from a brilliant pink mane. White wings lay folded tightly against a pristine white coat.

Filly Celestia yawned and opened her eyes. "Morning, mommy," she said. "Can I visit Auntie Nyx and Cousin Luna after you raise the sun?"

Twilight sighed. "Only if you behave," she said. "Remember what happened the last time you and Luna had a spat."

"It was only a little explosion," Celestia pouted. "Besides, Luna deserved it. She cheats at Parcheesi."

* * *

>167.8 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

"Twilight?"

Twilight looked up from her book. "Yes, Fluttershy?"

"Um, could you check me for spells?" The shy pegasus blushed, while Angel Bunny, who was sitting next to her, raised an eyebrow. "I mean, if you don't mind. I'm not sure why, but I think I've been enchanted somehow, and while the effects are convenient, I don't like the idea of being enchanted against my will."

Twilight nodded. "Will do, Fluttershy."

"Oh, thank you so much."

A little while later, Twilight nodded as she went over the readouts on the last of her instruments. "Well, it all checks out. Despite all your recent good fortune, Fluttershy, you are not under any sort of spell."

"Oh, thank goodness." Fluttershy paused. "But, if I'm not under a spell, what's causing all this? I mean, I'm not normally this lucky, and I don't think I've done anything different to cause it."

Twilight looked at Angel Bunny, who twitched his nose. "Um, has Angel been with you every time good stuff was happening?"

"Why... yes, he has. Are you saying _he_ was causing all this?"

Twilight grinned. "I'm almost positive about it. You know, they say rabbit's feet are lucky charms."

"Rabbit's... oh my! I've seen those before, and..." Her lip started to tremble as her eyes teared up.

"Fluttershy, don't worry about it! I'm sure most of the rabbit's feet charms you've seen were just fakes with minor luck spells on them. Or not enchanted at all. But _genuine_ rabbit's feet really are lucky charms. And you know what else they say?"

Fluttershy sniffed. "No, what?"

"That rabbit's feet are luckiest when still attached to the rabbit!"

Beside Fluttershy, Angel Bunny sighed, then winked and grinned at Twilight.

Inwardly, Twilight was grinning as well. _Oh Angel, you really are a rascally rabbit sometimes._

* * *

>167.5 continued (RowanEx and Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

"Oh, hi mom," Sunset greeted with a smile, before she stopped, her expression changing to startled. "That was an odd Awakeningâ€"eep! Moâ€"er, Twilight! That was my ear!"

A mischievous-looking Twilight smiled as she looked down at her fellow Magic Bearer. "But it worked. Morning, Sunset."

Looking annoyed, Sunset paused to compose herself. "Soâ€" "

Twilight whistled innocently, annoying Sunset further. The amber unicorn glared. "I'm your daughter this Loop, you know..."

Twilight stopped whistling and nodded. After a few seconds of staring, Twilight decided to break the silence.

"Anything else to share Sunset?"

"Nope," Sunset replied. _Not yet, anyway._

"Care for some ice cream?"

"Sure," replied Sunset Shimmer, "Haven't had one since last two to three times five Loops."

Twilight flinched at the number before they headed to the nearest source of ice cream.

* * *

>167.9 (katfairy)

"So, Boss," Berry Punch said a little too casually, "you and mare's clothing."

"Eeyup."

"Any particular reason?"

"Ah like it."

"Okay." She went back to polishing glasses for a few seconds, then continued. "No problems being a stallion, then?"

"Eenope. Ah just like dresses. Ah'm fine bein' a stallion. Ah'm fine bein' a mare, when those Loops pop up. Ah'm still me, whichever Ah am. Human, Pony, Dragon, Alicornâ€"Ah'm always me, and if Ah'm Awake, Ah likely always will be. Like puttin' cider in a wineglass 'stead of a mugâ€"it don't change what's inside."

"Makes sense."

"Eeyup."

"But didn't you say you didn't want to be an alicorn?"

"Ah don't. But if it happens, then it'll be because Ah needed to do it, and Ah don't waste time cryin' over doin' what needs doin', even if it means a change Ah may not be lookin' for. Ah may have worried 'bout that back a ways, but Ah've learned better. Ain't none of you changed by becomin' alicorns; Ah don't see why Ah should be different."

"Makes sense," Berry repeated. The two fell silent then, concentrating on getting the bar ready to open for the Loop. She was glad to hear he'd mellowed his stance; the last time they'd discussed it, his comments had seemed okay at first, but the more she'd thought about them, the more insulted she'd felt, as it seemed that Mac thought that somehow becoming an alicorn meant being less of a pony, or that they thought that it made them too good to concern themselves with the lesser breeds. She'd hoped that she was wrong, but she'd never had the nerve to call him on it. Now it seemed as though she wouldn't have to. But there was one thing she did need to say. "Hey, Boss?"

"Hm?"

"I picked up some lace a bunch of Loops backâ€"I was a human in a near-Hub Loop, making artisanal wines and vinegars and selling them at craft fairs, and one of them had this woman who made amazing hand-knotted lace. I bought as much as I could, but when I got it back here, I found out it didn't look right on me, so I saved it until I could find someone who could pull it off. Wanna check it out?"

"Eeyup!"

* * *

>Applejack walked into the almost-ready bar to find her brother festooned with lace. Not the dainty tear-if-you-breathe-on-it lace, but something that managed to be light, sturdy, and elegant at the same time, like cream-colored wrought iron. He was looking at it critically, trying to judge if it suited him. A flicker of discomfort crossed his face as he spotted her, and she stifled a twinge of guilt; Berry Punch caught Mac's flicker and raised a sardonic eyebrow.

"Ah'm getting' used to it," Applejack said. "Don't go worryin' yerself 'cause Ah can't shake mah hangups quick as Ah ought to. Reckon that lace suits ya, though."

"That's what I thought," Berry said. "The creamy shade makes such a nice contrast against the red of his coat, don't you think?"

"Eeyup. Shown it to Rarity yet?"

"No, I only just got it out. We've got plenty of time before the bar opens; want to do it now?" Berry and Mac looked at Applejack, one challenging, one accepting. Applejack took a deep breath.

"Ah'll walk there with ya. Ain't quite ready to go all the way in with ya, but yer still my brother, this don't hurt nopony, and it makes ya happy. That oughta be enough fer anypony, and if it ain't, well, that's their problem."

Their reactions told her everything she needed to know; the grin from Berry and the faint smile from Big Mac made her feel like she done the right thing. She still didn't understand it, and she wasn't sure she really liked the idea, but if Mac was going to pick up a quirk, he could have done a lot worse.

And that lace really did suit him.

* * *

>167.5 continued

(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

"Morning, auntie."

One check of Loop memories later, and Twilight smiled and nuzzled the younger pony. "Good morning, Scootaloo."

"Are Mom and Dad back?"

"Not yet."

"Good." Scootaloo lowered her head and yawned again. "Means I can spend a little more time here with you." Within seconds, she was asleep again.

Watching her in-Loop niece snoozing (and snoring, much to her amusement), Twilight made a mental note to let Rainbow Dash know about this Loop. The original Bearer of Loyalty was always glad to hear about Loops where Scootaloo actually had loving parents (or parental substitutes), and her brother and Cadance certainly qualified.

* * *

>167.10 (Vinylshadow)

Lyra Heartstrings burst into the Golden Oaks library, mane unkempt, eyes wide, screaming.

Twilight jumped in surprise, spilling magic ink onto a one-of-a-kind document that then burst into flames. Turning on the cerulean mare, Twilight bit back her scathing snarl when she saw how upset the mare was.

Using her magic to silence the lyrist, Twilight spoke.
"What."

Releasing Lyra's lips, the librarian waited for her to catch her breath.

"My head is _empty_, Twilight. No Human, no Seapony, no Lyra except my own," Lyra babbled, limbs twitching. "How do you live like this, Twilight?! _How can you stand only listening to one voice in your head?!_"

She curled up on the floor of the library, rocking back and forth, shivering.

Twilight had no idea how to respond to Lyra's problem. Wracking her brain, she came up with a rather flimsy list of possibilities.

"Uhm...maybe each Lyra has their own body this Loopâ€"?"

"Twilight! You're a genius!" Lyra said, scrambling to her hooves, suddenly all smiles. "If I'm Awake, that must mean my other personalities _must_ be somewhere in Equestria! Thank you! Me and Bon Bon are going on a road trip! We're getting the band back together!"

Grabbing Twilight's face, Lyra gave her a kiss on the cheek before bolting out of the library, leaving behind an utterly bemused Anchor.

* * *

>167.5 continued (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The small purple unicorn looked up at Twilight, then down at herself. "Different gender AND different species this time. This should be an interesting Loop."

Twilight facehoofed. "Good morning, Spike."

* * *

>167.11 (Evilhumour)

Without any warning, the house of Vinyl Scratch and Octavia Melody exploded as a _thing_ roared out in auto-tune. It appeared to be a mismatched conglomeration of everyday household items and appliances, with a toaster as its head. With a stomp of a dishwasher, it launched several burnt pieces of bread into the town center.

Twilight Sparkle destroyed her library due to being startled awake by a piece of toast smacking her in the face, with many ponies running to either put out the fires streaming from the burning library or try and stop whatever came from the two musician's home.

"Vinyl, don't you think we should try and heâ€" Octavia shouted, holding onto her friend for dear life as Vinyl began beating her new wings and using her wub hooves to attain speeds that would have made Rainbow Dash green with envy.

"Oh _hell_ no," Vinyl shouted back, her voice heavy with fear. "I am _not_ going to spend the rest of this Loop on the moon, listening to Twilight nag me endlessly!" With a thud, Vinyl landed on a small island with a few palm trees darting the area.

Octavia huffed, jumping off her panting friend and fixing her a glare. Vinyl's ears shot up after a few seconds and turned to face her. "Don't say itâ€"

"I _told_ you Vinyl," Octavia turned around, walking into the trees to get out of the sun. "_Not_ to try and combine all of your wubbified stuff together with that _thing_ under your bed!"

Vinyl groaned at the lecture she was getting, banging her head against a tree repeatedly until she got conked on the head by a coconut.

* * *

>167.5 continued

(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

"Mama? 'r you okay?"

Shaking off her momentary surprise, Twilight smiled again. "Everything's just fine," she told the smaller unicorn. "You can go back to sleep, sweetheart."

"'Kay," the little unicorn yawned. Within moments, she was sound asleep again.

_Of all the beings I've replaced over the Loops,_ Twilight reflected as she watched her younger self sleep, _Mom was probably one of the most unexpected. But right here, right now, I really don't mind._

* * *

>167.5 continued

(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

Twilight suddenly started as the grayish-amber filly next to her suddenly popped her head up, her eyes wide as she shouted "Sellow fitizens! Er, I mean fellow citizens!" Then she fell back into sleep, leaving a confused Twilight to blink.

_Now what,_ she wondered, _Was Ivory dreaming about to make her say something like that?_

* * *

>167.12 (Evilhumour)

"Pfffft?" a white ball of fluff asked the purple one.

"Pffft," the purple one answered, shaking her head as she did _not_ want to try and know why they were fluffle ponies.

"Pfffft," the white one shook her head, before blowing another raspberry. "_Pffffft_" she then pulled out a stuffed chrysalis doll. The purple one reached into her fluff and pulled out a near identical one, only with a tiny notebook attached to it.

"Pffft." the purple replied, blinking in surprise.

All the while a certain changeling queen was doing her best to escape the army of fluffle ponies chasing after her.

* * *

>167.5 continued (Evilhumour)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

Gleaming Shield looked up at her. "Agree to keep quiet on this one Twily?"

Twilight simply responded by taking pictures of her little sister.

* * *

>167.5 continued (Alex Prior)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

Twilight Velvet looked up to her mommy, blinking.

"Y'okay, mommy?"

Twilight Sparkle barely refrained from rolling her eyes. "I'm fine, Twilight. Now how about we go get some waffles?"

"Yay!"

* * *

>167.13: (Masterweaver)

Vinyl smiled gently as the crowd started to disperse, walking up the stage to the gray mare gently tuning her cello. "Hey."

Octavia let out a small sigh. "Hello."

"Just wanted to let you know... you were great up there."

"I was performing in shadow, Vinyl. Everypony was focused on Coloratura."

"Yeah, well... I know how important a supporting musician can be." The DJ wiped away a tear. "My whole career is just... taking perfection and reinterpreting it, really. Trust me, you were incredible, even if nopony else knows it."

The gray mare turned to her. "...thanks." She took in the expression on the unicorn's face. "Ah... is... something wrong?"

"...It's just... well..." Vinyl sighed. "You know the Loop's ending soon."

Octavia nodded, leaning her cello against a chair. "I know. I've been trying not to think about it..."

"It... it kind of sounds silly, saying this out loudâ€”I mean, most likely I'm going to see you again next Loop..." Vinyl shrugged. "Part of me knows it's still... still the same Octavia, still the pony I love, but... I just... I've never gotten over this feeling that every time the Loop ends, I lose you."

Octavia took a moment to contemplate, assembling her thoughts.

"...I..." She sighed. "Vinyl, if it's... If you... It might not be a good thing, fixating on me. I mean, from what you've said, and Twilight, and the journal... I don't know if I'm ever going to Loop, and... Vinyl Scratch, I just want you to know that I am totally okay if you want to date somebody who is Looping."

"What?" The unicorn shook her head. "No. Never. If a Loop arranges it pre-Awakening, I'll deal with it, butâ€”Octavia, if I can, I will always choose you."

"Vinyl, please! I don't want you torturing yourself over me!"

"Being away from the pony I love would be even worse, trust me."

"Vinyl, I just can'tâ€”"

"Shh." Vinyl lifted a hoof to Octavia's muzzle. "You've clearly spent some time thinking about this. Thing is, I have too. I've weighed the options and... well... this is what I want. This... this would be better for me." She brought her hoof down to the mare's chest. "This soul is the one that I fell in love with. I could try to replace it with something else, something longer, but... compared to the warmth I feel around you, the music you inspire, the comfort I have when we simply rest on each other's withers... replacing this would only leave me cold and distant. You are my muse, Octavia, the glorious root of my own song. And it doesn't matter that you're not Looping, and it doesn't matter if you never Loop; I will never give you up, never let you down, never turn around and desert you."

The cellist sniffled. "You... you really mean that?"

"Yeah. Well, okay, that last bit was tacked on from a really cheesy love song, but I meant it seriously."

Octavia blinked the tears out of her own eyes, smiling back at her.

"Even when you're being serious, you're remixing."

"Hey you know me; I see what I want, and I make it my own."

"Are you sure you don't just want to keep what you call 'the world's best butt' to yourself?"

"It's a perk, I'll grant ya, but a butt can only go so far..."

* * *

>167.5 continued:(Masterweaver) [MLPWarhammer 40,000]

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The pinkish filly looked up at Twilight with a huff. "Promise you won't tell anyone about this."

Twilight tried to place the voice. "That... you woke up in bed with me?"

"No, that's something I'd be proud of. I mean me having a confirmed gender!" Slaanesh gestured to her thankfully concealed nether regions. "The other chaos gods have a field day when this happens, It's so embarrassing..."

* * *

>167.5 continued:(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The little gray alicorn filly looked up at Twilight. "Morning, auntie!"

As her Loop memories kicked in, Twilight smiled. "Morning, muffin."

A familiar gray-furred face popped in. "Did somepony say, muffins?"

Twilight facehoofed. "Good morning to you too, Derpy."

"No time for small talk, sis! It's time for breakfast!"

Dinky grinned. "Yay!"

As the two raced off, Twilight's smile grew wider. This was an interesting variant... apparently, she and Derpy were having another "Sisters" Loop. But unlike their first one, Derpy had gone the path of Luna and wound up banished to the moon for the full thousand years. When she returned, the Elements of Harmony had split her corrupted side off and reincarnated it as Dinky Hooves, whom Derpy had promptly adopted as her daughter.

"Definitely have to tell Nyx about this the next time I see her," the Alicorn of Magic mused to herself.

* * *

>167.14 (Evilhumour)

Luna smiled to herself, sneaking past the battlefield of the Solar Guards and Lunar Guards battling for their princesses, Canterlot Castle thundering as ponies used powerful spells against each other. The massive strike forwards was working well in her favour, with her guards shouting her onwards as the Solar Guards failing to stop all of her fake clones storming the doorway.

Finally, there was break in the fight and Luna dived forwards, tucking her wings in with her crossbow pressed against her barrel. Landing inside the room, Luna quickly bucked the doors closed with her guards on the other side now defending the passageway from the terrified and angered Solar Guards, angry for failing their most sacred duties and terrified at what the Princess of the Night would do.

Luna cared not for their concerns, as she knew that victory was assured as she crept up on her sister's sleeping form, her long head dangling out, just begging for somepony to strike. Standing directly beside her sister's head, her crossbow aimed at point blank range with no chance of error, Celestia finally stirred from her slumber.

"Luna, what's going on?" Celestia mumbled, still groggy with sleep.

"The end of your reign, dear sister," Luna's smile turned cruel, her magic teasing the trigger of her weapon. "This ends now."

Celestia quickly awoke at that, although her body was slow to react. "Luna, don't you darâ€" "

Luna dared, squeezing the trigger and firing directly at her sister, the Princess of Equestria, the Princess of the Sun, with a loud BOINK! as the bolt hit Celestia square on the nose.

"HUZZAH!" Luna shouted in the Royal Canterlot voice, with the Lunar Guards cheering as they heard their Princess's victory cry. "We art still the unquestionable Princess of Nerf Warfare!" Luna dodged Celestia's sweeping hooves, firing more bolts into Celestia's torso with Luna crying out with joy from each shot that found its target. Luna then sped towards the doors, with the Lunar Guards opening the door for her as Luna made her escape, the Solar Guards promising that they would win the next round when the Princesses resumed their wargames.

* * *

>167.5 continued: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!

Twilight took a closer look at the filly next to her, who looked just like a miniature Applejack, but with a familiar red bow instead of her usual hat. "Apple... Bloom?"

"Eeyup." The youngest Apple sighed. "Looks like it's another palette swap Loop."

Twilight raised an eyebrow and conjured a mirror, sighing as she found a familiar white coat and blue mane looking back at her. "So I switched with my brother, and you switched with Applejack?"

"Not quite. I have hers, she has Mac's, and he has mine."

"... That must be awkward."

"Not as awkward as the Loop where it just happened to him and Granny."

"Point taken." Twilight considered. "Um... I don't have my Loop Memories just yet, so... why are you in my room?" She looked around. "And what's that sound?"

"Element of Magic-only sleepover." Apple Bloom pointed to one side. "Sunset's conked out on the couch in the other room, and Trixie's over there somewhere. And apparently, she snores this Loop. Or she turned on her prop chainsaw in her sleep again, I'm not sure which."

A dark green form raised its head, blinking sleepily and indignantly. "You will never let Trixie live that down, will you?"

* * *

>167.5 continued: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

Two bright-eyed fillies in rose and mulberry looked up at her with big smiles. "Hi, Momma!"

Twilight smiled back. "Good morning, girls."

A groan came from her other side. "Too early, sis..."

Berry Punch, the eldest of the sisters, looked up at their in-Loop mother. "And here I thought _I_ was the one who wasn't a morning pony," she whispered.

Twilight smiled. "Cheerilee just had a late night studying, girls. Why don't we let her rest?"

"Okay! Come on, Ruby!" And with that, the two rushed off.

Twilight then looked at her middle daughter, who appeared to have dozed off again, and smiled. Really, she looked so adorable as a filly. Even at her crankiest.

An ear twitched, and a head rose, with bleary eyes. "Twilight?"

"Yes, Cheerilee?"

"Why, exactly, are we the only ones in this family with enough sense to stay in bed when it's this early?"

"Because Berry's too young to have to deal with hangovers this Loop and is taking advantage of it. And Ruby was always a morning pony in baseline."

"Oh." Her head fell forward with a thump. "Well, you'd better go watch over those two, and don't let them wake me up again until noon."

Twilight chuckled. "Will do."

* * *

>167.15 (ORBSyndicate) Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 3: Legend of the Gobblewonker.

"I'M BORED!" Pinkie screamed at the top of her lungs.

Applejack blinked. "Pinkieâ€|" She said, gesturing to the table. "We have thirty different kinds of syrup here. How can you be bored?"

Rainbow Dash moaned from the floor. "Yeahâ€|" I mean I just chugged three bottles of the stuffâ€|" Questionâ€|" who convinced me to do that?"

Stan rushed into the room, flipping his eyepatch off one eye to the other. "I DID! Because stomach aches are terrible! Haha!"

Rainbow Dash blinked. "Ughâ€|."

Twilight turned to Stan. "Legitimate question: how did you convince Rainbow to do that?"

"Easy. Told her it would be a contest with Applejack."

Rainbow Dash moaned. "Too. Much. Syrup."

"I'M STILL BORED!" Pinkie yelled.

Stan's visible eye lit up. "Hey, I have an idea. Who wants to put on some blindfolds and get into my car?"

"YAY!" Pinkie screamed.

Everyone except for Rainbow Dash lightened up with Pinkie's yay and responded with a resounding "YEAH!" Then they all thought about what they had just agreed to for a few seconds. "Wait WHAT?"

Rainbow Dash simply moaned.

* * *

>Twilight Sparkle had experienced many people who were absolutely terrible at driving in every shape and form. She had met smart people who for some reason couldn't turn left. She'd met idiots who would smash through everything. She had met people who would somehow crash vehicles without ever touching the gas pedal.

Stan Pines was something else entirely. He was somehow managing to make the most angular turns, the most brutal accelerations and braking, and actually _launching the car into the air_. And yet, somehow, the car didn't seem any worse for wear and nobody suffered any sort of physical damage. Unless you counted Rainbow Dash's stomach agony. (she managed to keep her lunch down though.)

Then again, Twilight supposed that _maybe_ the experience was a tad heightened because she was blindfolded.

Twilight's thoughts were interrupted by the sound of Stan's car smashing through a fence. Then the feeling of old car tires on beach sand. (Twilight briefly reflected on the fact that she'd experienced old car tires on beach sand enough to identify it while blindfolded.)

Then, to the joy of all present, the car _stopped moving._

Twilight threw the car door open and jumped out. She instantly found herself tripping and landing face first in some water.

_At least i'm clean nowâ€¦| Haven't had a shower since I got hereâ€¦|_

Stan's voice reached her ears. "Blindfolds off!"

Twilight and her friends ripped the offending blindfolds off their faces. They blinked, adjusting to the brightness of the sun.

They were obviously at the Gravity Falls lake, formed by the waterfall spilling off of the right half of the odd cliffs. There was a small island in the center of the lake, and there were lots of people in fishing boats on the shore. It was, evidentially, fishing season. Stan grinned. "TAH-DAH! It's fishing season!"

Twilight and the Elements took a moment to absorb the absurdity that was the town of Gravity Falls fishing. The old waitress, Lazy Susan, was holding a pan over the water hoping to coax fish to just jump in. This world's version of Derpy was waving a muffin under the water with her hands, sending ripples everywhere (and overturning the boat. Somehow.) Toby Determined was taking a picture of a man with a giant fish, the flash causing the man to promptly drop the fish back into the water before falling into the water himself. Sonata was on a boat filled with empty tacos. Wendy's dad and her brothers were literally grabbing fish out of the water with their bare hands and beating them up with punches. The boys cheered as their father beat the fish into submission, and nearby a man stared on with glee, saying "Get 'em! Get 'em!" Nearby, the cakes were apparently being the most successful with worm flavored cake as their bait.

Stan grinned. "Look at this! Fishing season! Time for some quality family bonding!"

Twilight blinked. "â€¦bonding?"

"Yeah! We go fishing in our little boat, sail the seas for adventure, and get tasty fish!"

Applejack squinted. "Why d' ya wanna _bond _with us all of a sudden?"

"Come on this is gonna be great! Some official Gravity Falls fishing, one time offer for you Loopers right now! Seriously! Come. Fish. Fishing's good right?"

"Perhapsâ€|" Rarity said, not sure.

"Oh come on! What could be better than you, me, and a bunch of corny jokes for ten hours?"

Fear appeared in the eyes of Rarity, Applejack, Twilight, and Pinkie. Pinkie began shuddering. Anything but bad jokes.

Twilight looked around quickly. _There must be some way out of thisâ€|_She thought for a moment. _I could just tell him we don't want to go._

Her thoughts were interrupted by the sound of an old man screaming. "I SEEN IT! I SEEN IT AGAIN!" The old man in question, local insane elder man McGucket, leapt onto Stan's car, bellowing to the beach. "THE GOBBLEWONKER IS BACK! I SEEN IT! COME QUICK BEFORE IT SCRABDOODLES AGAIN!" He started making extremely odd and angular gestures with all his limbs.

"OOH!" Pinkie lightened up. "I can do that happy dance as well!" She proceeded to imitate McGucket's moves perfectly. In midair. To his credit, McGucket wasn't even fazed by "Pinkie being Pinkie" and instantly grabbed her by the shoulder. "NO! IT'S A JIG OF GRAVE DANGER!"

At this point the ranger in charge of the beach came out and sprayed McGucket as if he were a cat. "Hey hey! Stop scarin' people! This is your last warning Dad!"

Twilight winced inwardly. This old man had obviously lost his marbles, which was bad enough, but he also had a son who apparently didn't want anything to do with him. She sighed, knowing that this was a common occurrence across Yggdrasil, knowing that this was just how things were. It didn't make it any less sad.

Old Man McGucket yelled in a strange old-timer voice. "I HAVE PROOF THIS TIME! BEHOLD! THE DOCK! It's the Gobble-dy-wonker what done did it! It had a long neck like a gee-raffe! And wrinkly skin likeâ€|uhâ€|. question why isn't there an older person in this audience with wrinkles I can point out?"

Stan was currently hiding behind a dumpster. He was _not_ going to be called old and wrinkly again.

"The beast chewed my boat up to smithertootinoons, and shim-whammies over to SCUTTLEBUTT ISLAND! YOU GOTTA BELIEVE ME!"

The sheriff simply smiled. "Attention all units! We got ourselves a crazy old man!"

And the entire beach started laughing at McGucket as he walked off, dejected and muttering. "Aww, donkey spittleâ€|"

After the crowd cleared, the ponies-turned-human looked at each other. Pinkie grinned. "We all know what this means."

"MONSTER HUNT!" They cheered. Well, everyone except Rainbow Dash and Fluttershy, the latter of which was quiet as a mouse, and the former of which was still delirious from syrup.

McGucket, somehow back at the dock, yelled "MONSTER HUNT!" as well. Everyone except Pinkie just stared at him blankly. He sheepishly backed away.

At that point, Soos pulled up in a large motorboat named the S. S. Cool Dude. "Did you dogs say something' about a monster hunt?"

Pinkie cheered. "SOOS!" She said, instantly leaping onto the boat. "I hereby commandeer this boat for the sake of MONSTER HUNT!"

Applejack shrugged. "I don't see why not."

They began to go towards the boat (or, in Rainbow Dash's case, stumble) when Stan walked up to them. "All right, all right, let's think this through! You could go waste your time on some stupid monster-finding adventure, or you could spend the day learning how to tie knots and skewer worms with your Grunkle Stan!"

[br]

Twilight, Applejack, and Pinkie yelled "WOOHOO!" at the top of their lungs, ready for adventure. Rarity was on the other side of the boat, talking to Soos about fashion. Surprisingly, he had some rather interesting ideas. The handyman was a man of many skills.

"So, darling, how do you drive this boat?"

"It just goes straight unless I hold the wheel!"

"So we're just going straight."

"You got that right Little Diamond!"

"Do you have a nickname for everyone?"

"You're Little Diamondâ€¦ then there's Blitz, Cowgirl, Sparky, Flutters, and Pinkie."

"Pinkie most certainly is justâ€¦ Pinkie."

"Indeededoo. Whoops I should probably go to the wheel before we crash into somethin'."

As Soos went to the wheel, Twilight, Applejack, and Pinkie were discussing the plan.

"So, step 1: we find the Gobblewonker."

"Uh-huh." Applejack agreed.

"Step 2: determine if hostile or not."

"Gotchaâ€¦"

"Step 3: Depending on the result of step 2, either confront orâ€¦"

"THROW A PARTY!" Pinkie said, wheeling out party cannons, some with "Nessie" designs on them.

Applejack chuckled. "How many cannon designs do you have?"

"I lost count at a trillion!"

"Uh-huh. So if hostile we confront, if not, we make friends. Convince it to stop eating people's boats."

"But what if it needs boats to survive Twilight?"

Twilight sighed. "There's no way in the realm of possibility that it _needs_ to eat boatsâ€¦"

Beneath the waters, something watched them, eyes glowing.

* * *

>Stan was pleasantly surprised.

Fluttershy had opted to _stay with him._

He could count the number of times a visiting Looper offered to stay with him from the start on his hands. Heck it was such a problem he rarely asked anymore. He didn't like being on the old Stan o' War alone.

Of course the experience was soured by the continual moaning of stomach-ache Rainbow Dash. He was beginning to regret his little Syrup prank.

"So, since you already know how to fish, how about a bit of a competition? Biggest fish wins!"

Fluttershy smiled warmly at stan. "Okie Grunkle Stan!"

Stan grinned. He was actually having _fun_. _He, for once, was happy. This was great. Fishing with a niece (even if it wasn't his regular niece) and having a nice day on the lake.

Also he had managed _not_ to mess up Reginald's proposal by that horrid "HER AIM IS GETTING BETTER" Joke.

"Joaje." He muttered, remembering a particularly unpleasant vision of a Hublike universe he had been gifted several hundred Loops ago.

"What was that Grunkle Stan?" Fluttershy asked.

"Nothing Flutters. Nothing at all." A fish bit his hook. "I GOT ONE!"

Fluttershy smiled. She recognized a man who needed company when she saw it. "Nice!"

Rainbow Dash moaned. "Can you two stop being so cheerful!"

"Kid, if I ever hear that sentence come out of your mouth again I will personally dunk you under the water where there are electric eels."

"Thereâ€¦ aren't electric eels here."

"I have a Pocket filled with all sorts of things."

"You aren't supposed to hold living thingsâ€¦"

"DNA replication gun."

Rainbow Dash moaned. "Carry on withâ€¦ urkâ€¦. one secâ€¦"

* * *

>"HERE WE ARE! Scuttlebutt island!" Pinkie said, gesturing towards the sign nailed into a random tree.

Soos held up his hand, covering up the "scuttle." "Hey look. 'Butt' island!"

Pinkie observed the sign. "I think scuttle island is better. Imagine this thing getting up and scuttling around. Like a beautiful spider!"

The five friends continued onwards, looking through the strange mist that penetrated the island.

"Question, darlingsâ€¦" Rarity said, glancing left and right. "This island is perfectly visible from the beach correct?"

"Yah. What's your point?" Applejack wondered.

"Well how is there an extremely dense mist here?"

Twilight blinked. She hadn't noticed that. Crap. That was probably badâ€¦"

At that point they heard an intense roar in the distance.

Twilight flicked her wrists, ready to cast magic. Applejack took out her lasso. Pinkieâ€¦ continued whatever it was she did. Rarity backed up.

Soos looked at Twilights hands. "Woah Sparky! Are you some kinda wizard or somethin'? That'd be wicked cool!"

Twilight blinked. "Sure. Wizard. Let's go with that and _not_ magical unicorn."

"What?"

"Nothing." The group slowly moved towards the sound, seeing a silhouette in front of them. It was perfectly still, and looked vaguely like a head.

"Ready girls?" Twilight asked.

Soos was the only one who responded. "Totally, dog."

They moved forward, ready to face the beast, only to see a bunch of beavers chattering on a broken boat.

Only Pinkie understood what the beavers said, and she burst into hysterics. "AHAHHAHA!"

"Pinkie? What is it?" Twilight asked.

"You really don't want to know! Ahahhaha!"

Twilight blinked. "Ooookayyyyâ€|."

"Butâ€| what was the sound then?" Applejack asked.

"BEAVER WITH A CHAINSAW!" Pinkie pointed, grinning like a madwoman.

Applejack immediately subdued Pinkie + chainsaw never ended well. Even though there usually wasn't death of any kind, the result was generally beyond terrifying.

Twilight shrugged, magically tossing the roaring chainsaw into the water. "Okay thenâ€| what now?"

"Maybe he really was crazyâ€|." Applejack muttered.

Pinkie just stared into the water, longingly looking at where the chainsaw was. Even though she had several thousand chainsaws in her Pocket, she still wanted to add another to her collection. A beaver-chainsaw was something newâ€|

Then she heard the chainsaw noise again.

That was odd. It couldn't possibly be making that noise underwaterâ€| Her pinkie sense went ballistic.

"GUYS SOMETHINâ€|" She was interrupted by a large sea-beast rising out of the water and slapping her to the side. It roared.

"The Gobblewonker!" Twilight said, gasping. "It really is real!"

Applejack walked right up to the great beast. "Now listen 'ere reptile, we don't want no trouble, but we would appreciate it if you'd stop attacking people's boatsâ€|"

The Gobblewonker roared, lunging for Applejack. She leapt backwards, landing firmly on her feet. "Suppose that was expectin' too muchâ€|"

Twilight cracked her knuckles. "Let's teach this lizard a lessonâ€|"

"Darlingsâ€| do we reallyâ€|"

Applejack raised a hand. "Rarity, there comes a time in every Looper's life when they just want to beat the tar out of some giant lizard."

Rarity sighed. "Fineâ€| I just have the feeling this isn't going to go well."

[br]

"Okay listen up troops."

Fluttershy listened intently. Rainbow Dash was able to sit up without moaning, but that was about it.

"Since we've caught a grand total of log, moss, and other fishing poles on this trip, it's time to do what I do bestâ€"

"Lure the fish in with your charm?"

"Nope. Steal fish from other people."

Fluttershy blinked. "That doesn't seem particularly niceâ€"

"Oh come on let's just have some fun being con-men. Er. Women. Human? Pony? I don't even know anymore. The point is that they have fish and we are going to take them. Any skills you bring to the table?"

"I can talk to most animals." Fluttershy offered

"I can.. URK! Fly!" Rainbow Dash said, before leaning over.

"Yeah, multicolored tomboy? Take a rest, we've got this. Fluttershy, we are going to pull up and I am going to make a utterly and completely terrible joke. While they're distracted get their fish."

"Umâ€| You know I don't really thinkâ€|"

"MISSION GO!" Stan yelled, rowing towards another boat, filled with Manly Dan and his sons. "Hey there pops! Wanna hear a joke?"

"If this is about Wendy being lazy you're the one who hired her." Manly Dan growled.

"Oh this is nothing about it! Just a joke! Seriously! How many lumberjacks does it take to screw in a lightbulb?"

Manly Dan hefted his axe and glared Stan in the eye.

Stan realized something at that moment.

Manly Dan was a lumberjack.

"Uhâ€| ABANDON MISSION!" Stan yelled, rowing away at high speed.

Manly Dan roared. "BOYS! GET IM WHILE I HEADLOCK THIS FISH!"

The same man from earlier shouted "GET IM! GET IM!" with astounding glee.

"THATS RIGHT TYLER! THOSE ARE MY BOYS!"

Stan rowed faster.

* * *

>"WHAT IS WITH THIS THING?" Twilight yelled as the Gobblewonker just completely ignored yet another magic blast. "Reptiles should be affected by that! ITS AN ANTI-REPTILE SPELL FOR CRYING OUT LOUD!"

Applejack tied up the Gobblewonker only to have her lasso rip. "It's also ridiculously strong. What is this thing's deal?"

It roared, charging once more.

Rarity sent a magic blast at it. While nowhere near as powerful as Twilight's, they still had a decent amount of power behind them.

What surprised Twilight was that the Gobblewonker actually seemed to _feel_ the normal spell.

"What spell was that?" Twilight asked.

"Just a normal one! Magic beam of some kind! Nonspecific!"

Soos laughed. "Dude you're a wizard too?"

"Yes and Pinkie is as well get over it Soos."

Soos looked at Pinkie, who was getting up from the ground. "Can I burn it?" She asked Twilight.

"I'd rather you didn't. Chaos fire is terribly hard to put out."

"Okie dokie lokie!" Pinkie said, appearing behind the Gobblewonker somehow. "TWILIGHT! SHOOT THE LEG WITH A NORMAL MAGIC BEAM!"

Twilight did so, and the leg exploded. Pinkie took a screwdriver out of her pocket and rammed it up the hole. Sparks flew.

"What?" Twilight said, confused, as the Gobblewonker fell to the ground.

Pinkie grinned. "When it hit me I figured out that it was metallic, a machine! That's why your anti-reptile spell didn't work Twilight! And I just noticed a small break in the leg!" She grinned, completely innocent looking.

"It'sâ€¦ a machine?" Rarity said, blinking.

Twilight used her magic to pop open a hatch on the side of the machine, revealing a control room with McGucket inside. "Aww banjo polish!"

Everyone's jaws dropped (excluding Pinkie). "McGucket?" Twilight managed to say. "W-Why?"

"Uhâ€¦ uhâ€¦. AW I just wanted attentionâ€¦!"

"What?"

"Well, first I just hootenannies up a biomechanics brain wave generator, and then I learned to operate a stick-shift with my beard!" McGucket said, demonstrating his ability to use his beard as a limb.

"Uhâ€¦ Why?"

"Wellâ€¦ when you get to be an old fella like me, nobody pays any attention to you anymoreâ€¦. My own son hasn't visited me in months! So.. I figured maybe I'd catch his fancy with a fifteen ton aquatic robot! AHAHAHAHAHAHAâ€¦." He sighed. "In retrospect, it seems a bit contrived. You just don't know the length us old-timers go through for a little quality time with our familyâ€¦"

"Did you ever consider talking to your son?" Twilight asked.

"No sir! I got to work straight on the robot! I made lots of robots in my day! Like when my wife left me and I created a homicidal pterodactyl-tron! Or when my pal Ernie didn't come to my retirement party and I constructed an eighty ton SHAME BOT THAT EXPLODED THE ENTIRE DOWNTOWN AREA! AHHAHAHAHAHH! Well, time to get back to work on my death ray! Any of you kids got a screwdriver?"

Twilight blinked. "Pinkie does."

"Why thank you miss."

Twilight stared at the obviously crazy and most likely evil scientist. She probably shouldn't try to help him get back on his feet or he'd try to conquer the world or something. She really shouldn't. She realllllllly shouldn'tâ€¦.

"I have a better idea" She told Old Man McGucket, cursing her good nature.

In the end, she supposed she would stop him if he did go on a rampage. . .

* * *

>"What are your sisters doing?" Stan asked the two Equestrians on his boat.

"I'mâ€¦ not sureâ€¦" Fluttershy said, cocking her head.

The four girls, Soos, and Old Man McGucket knocked on the door the ranger occupied. McGucket's son came out. "What do you want?"

Twilight took a breath, time to put on the twelve-year-old-girl charmâ€¦ "Ranger, we found this old man sitting on an island all alone, mumbling to himself about how he missed his son and he seemed really sad. We figured we could bring him to you and since, you know, you're a Ranger and all you might be able to do something."

McGucket smiled, looking into his son's eyes. "So, Tate. Uhâ€¦ sorry 'bout ruining your beachâ€¦"

"Dadâ€¦" He said, blinking. He closed the door, and walked back inside the house.

McGucket sighed. "Welp. We tried. Thank ya anyway."

Twilight sighed. "Keep trying. He'll open up eventually."

"You really think so?"

Twilight smiled. "I know so."

Then, the door opened again. Tate stepped out with a baseball and a some gloves. "Dad. Think we can finish that game we never got to?"

McGucket got tears in his eyes. "You betcha' sonny! Now remember the ratio of the curveball to the air resistanceâ€¦"

"I know Dadâ€¦" Tate said, smiling.

Twilight grinned. "Mission accomplished girls. We got to face a lake monster AND solved a friendship problem! BONUS!"

Pinkie's sense twitched. "Something's going onâ€¦" She looked around, unable to see anything odd. She shrugged. Maybe it was just an itch.

Stan, however, saw something. In the distance, he saw three young kids with binoculars trying to hide behind a bush. He recognized the kids, they stopped by the Mystery Shack a lot this Loop, calling themselves the Mystery Crusaders.

He frowned. They were watching them.

He wondered why.

Pinkie's sense tingled again, and she turned towards the lake just in time to see something surface for a few seconds.

Something very reptilian.

She smiled. The real Gobblewonker was saying hi. How nice.

Then Tate's curveball hit her in the back of the head.
"OW!"

Everyone laughed.

The rest of the day was spent with baseballs, fishing, and tales of monster hunts and robotsâ€¦

* * *

>pbvwhub fuxvdghuv vslhv jr!

* * *

>167.5 continued:(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

_Wait a moment, that wasn't Nyx!_

The filly, with a half-lidded expression of apparent disinterest, looked up at Twilight. "Yes, Mom?"

"Umâ€¦" Twilight decided it was way too early in the morning to deal with this. "You can go back to sleep, Maud."

"Okay." And with that, she closed her eyes, curled up and drifted off.

Looking to her other side, Twilight raised an eyebrow at the loudly snoring and splayed out Pinkie. _Sometimes I wonder about those two, she reflected, _How they can be polar opposites, and yet still be so close._

_Just another mystery of the magic of friendship, I suppose._

* * *

>167.5 continued: (KrisOverstreet)

Applejack Awoke, in both senses of the word, with a yawn.

A similar noise came from beside her, prompting her to look down at the small filly at her side withâ€¦ aâ€¦ smileâ€¦ wait a moment... _small filly?_

Twilight Sparkle stared bleary-eyed back at Applejack and said, "I guess I'll have to go crusading now, won't I?"

Applejack sighed and settled back on her bed. "Don't worry, Twilight," she said, chuckling. "No matter what happens, I'll always be right by your side."

After a moment the farm pony stiffened, trembling slightly as she added, "Er, I, um, I meant that strictly in th' platonic sense, y'understand..."

Twilight shot her big-sis-for-the-Loop a dirty glance, chuckled, closed her eyes, and went back to sleep.

* * *

>Author's Note:

167.1: He's growing his horizons.

167.2: Twilight had to try it once.

167.3: Star Pony.

167.4: Twilight has had this conversation many times, but it's still interesting.

167.5: Yes this happens a lot.

167.6: Friendship through superior firepower.

167.7: It is quite a good car.

167.8: A lucky angel.

167.9: Well, he could have ended up a Pinkie cultist. This is mundane.

167.12: Pfft.

167.14: Plz Nerf.

175. Chapter 175

168.1: (Masterweaver)

"I would not feed those to a chicken!" Svengallop cried, scowling as he slapped the plate of oats out of Pinkie's hoof. "I want top-of-the-line Appleloosan oats! Next, it appears that we are surrounded by apple trees. Bring me five hundred pre-peeled, pre-cored apples, and I want those things in twenty-four hours!"_

And then... Pinkie smiled.

"You know what, mister Svengallop? Let's cut to the chase." She waved a hoof, gathering all the scattered oats into a floating sphere. "You want to be treated. You want, oh, the tastiest foodsâ€" The oats took the form of a large cake. "â€"the rarest of treasuresâ€" Then they morphed into a large diamond. "â€"the most beautiful of mares, hmm?" A sultry silhouette swayed saucily before the shocked stallion's eyes. "You want to demand the impossible, and have ponies all around scramble to obey. You want to be the most important pony around."

Pinkie's smile only grew as the oats broke formation, slinking around Svengallop's head. "What is thisâ€"?"

"I can make it all happen, mister Svengallop." Pinkie grinned. "You know the connections I went through to get Countess Coloratura here? That is only scratching the surface of what I can do. I can be in Prance in a second, and return with fresh scones. I can conjure mountains of gems from midair. I know an entire species of open, ready mares that can look like anything, anyone you want." She let the river of oats trail around his barrel before gathering it all back on the plate. "All I need in return is one eensy, teensy, weensy, small thing."

Svengallop glared at her. "And what would that be?"

"Typical faustian bargain: Your soul. I've got the paperwork ready and everything!" The party pony pulled out a scroll. "And I'm not even going to pull that 'hidden text' thing, that's how you know I'm on the up and up."

"Really." The stallion rose a pink eyebrow. "You're going to try to pull thisâ€"?"

"Pinkie, what are ya doin'?" Applejack demanded, walking into the orchard. "Ah thought you were better than this!"

"Oh come on, AJ! It's been ages since I've had a real soul contract!" The pink pony pouted. "It's not like we get many chances in Equestria."

"Ah'd assume that soul contracts would be off the table no matter what," Applejack countered.

Svengallop snorted. "Oh, of course the country pony would believe in this soul business."

"Oh, trust me, Pinkie can deliver. What _Ah'm_ tryin' ta say is that she shouldn't!"

"You really expect me to believe this pink pony is some sort of demon?"

"Goddess," Pinkie corrected. "Chaos goddess. The demons are basically cells, I'm waaaaaaay above them." She shrugged. "I mean, it's not like you're using your soul anyway!"

"Why, I neverâ€"!"

Applejack sighed. "Pinkie, it's the principle of the matter. Ah may dislike Svengallop and how he warped my old friend's image into a mockery of her talent, but that don't mean Ah want him to wander about soulless."

"A mockery ofâ€"?!"

"Pleeeeeeeeeeease AJ? It's just, every time I Loop into 40K I have to borrow from the other chaos gods for poker night!"

"Really? _That's_ why you're tryin' ta get Svengallop's soul?"

"That and he's a dick. Karmic justice, you know?"

"I have heard just about enough of this!" Svengallop cried. "I don't care whether or not you can actually pull off what you claim, but I will not tolerate thisâ€"this _insulting_ treatment any further! The countess and I are leaving!" He stormed off toward the gaggle of schoolcolts and fillies.

Applejack groaned. "Now look what you did, Pinkie, he's going toâ€""

"Ut ut ut!" Pinkie held up a hoof. "Wait for it..."

The farm-mare rose an eyebrow, turning to watch Svengallop as he stormed up to Coloratura.

Words were exchanged, with Svengallop starting out angry, Coloratura wincing... and then glaring, standing up and growling right back. Svengallop stamped a hoof, pointing toward her palanquin, but Coloratura shook her head and gestured toward the increasingly confused looking foals. The stallion growled, waving his hoofâ€"the pop star gave him an incredulous face, and he rolled his eyes, speaking calmly but firmly. And the mare... looked at the kids again, and narrowed her eyes, and shook her head. Then Svengallop exploded, pushing into Coloratura's face, but the foals would not stand for his words and gathered around her protectively, shouting their own defiance at him. In the end, he stormed off, stomping toward the stage with angry grumbling.

"...you planned that, didn't ya?"

Pinkie shrugged. "Either I got a free soul, or I got to see Svengallop humiliated in front of foals. With a camera," she added, pointing at Photo Finish. "Maybe it's petty of me, but come on! It's just so satisfying to see him get his just desserts!"

Applejack sighed, rubbing her forehead. "Yeah, Ah getcha there... just... just don't do the soul bargain thing, okay? Ah was really worried there for a second."

"...oh, alright, fine." The pink pony waved toward the foals. "Coloratura seems happy, though."

"Yeah... yeah she does." The farmer gathered herself. "Ah'm gonna have to try to get her away from Svengallop way earlier next Loop. Maybe around the GGG or somesuch..."

* * *

>168.2: (Evilhumour)

"I understand you are worried about the coming of the Boogie Mare and her funky bat ponies minions, but rest assured Sparkle child, I can handle my wayward sister," the unAwake Celestia bobbed her head, her massive afro glistening with all of its normal colours. "I have a far out, more important task for you to do; I need to go out this fresh town called Ponyville to help with my little get together, you dig?"

The Anchor opened her mouth and closed it a few times before she nodded her head, looking at the large discoball-shaped moon that had the outline of an unicorn on it, flashing across the planet every few seconds in an array of different colours.

"I dig, Princess Sunbeam," Sparkle said, making sure to record this Loop for future blackmail, eager to see how Rarity would look in this disco variant.

* * *

>"Silly filly, you don't got them Elements of Disco on you, and my party shall last forever without that square P Sunbeam putting the brakes to my moves," the Boogie Mare said with a bark of laughter filling the old Sister Princesses Disco Parlor.

"That's where you're wrong, Boogie Mare," Sparkle said with a grin, looking at her friends doing their best to out boogie the bat ponies that were pushing them into a corner.

"AhahahaJay's got the bongo beat and a feisty act; totally makes her the Bearer of Salsa!" The poncho-wearing farmer grinned as she one-twoed the large bat pony right in a group of encroaching bat pony mares.

"Flutters, raising from terror to blood-pumpin' love, what else could she but the Bearer of Soul?" The yellow filly's peace necklace swirled around her tie-dye shirt as she mesmerized her foes.

"Sparkling D, flashy and to the beat of the new music, can only be the Bearer of Pop!" The bat ponies blinked back as the unicorn wearing a zoot suit drowning in sequins hip bumped their leader away.

"The Pinks is totally flexible and able to move, thus the Bearer of Dance!" With a grin, the tights-wearing pink mare had taken the lead away from several of the bat ponies following her and sent them into a large pile.

"Radical Dashie, moving and swaying to whatever is playing, this makes her the Bearer of Funk!" A pegasus with rainbows painted literally all over her whipped out her sweet musical axe and strummed it challengingly.

"Haha, that's five of the six mighty Elements of Disco, Sparkle child, but without the last one, they're just fine stones hanging in the air!" With a loud laugh, the Boogie Mare flew into the air before lining herself up to knock down Twilight. "You've lost little filly and you cannot even dance. What hope did you ever have to beat the Boogie Mare herself with no rhythm or flow?"

"That's where you're wrong because with my posse together, I've learned how to adapt and move to their beat. With them, I've learned how to Groove, the sixth Element of Disco!" With that, a sixth stone appeared over Sparkle's head. The Boogie Mare tried to pull up but it was too late. A pulsating rainbow swept through the room and hit the Boogie Mare straight on with an explosion of music, leaving Princess Moonbeam on the dance floor.

* * *

>168.3: (Evilhumour)

"Hmmm..." Vinyl tapped her chin in front of the window, before she was tackled over by several people. "Gah, what the sneezewort girls?!"

"No Vinyl, we've seen what you have done when you 'wubbify' things and we are not having another attack of your stuff when it gets out of control!" Twilight shouted, trying to wrestle the woman's arm down with Rainbow Dash and Lyra's help.

"Oh come on, that's was just because I got bored and wanted to see what would happen if I used the All-Spark onâ€" "

Before Vinyl could say what, exactly, she was going to use the All-Spark on, she was jumped on Applejackâ€"who quickly demonstrated that she still knew how to hogtie people.

"Come on girl, we've got a little meet together with ma sister about proper usage of advanced techno-contraptions," Applejack grumbled, dragging the girl away from the kitchenware store's window.

"But I need to replace the coffee machine before Octy gets back," Vinyl whined loudly as she was lifted up onto the farmer's shoulder and carried out into the streets of Ponyville. "Also, I need to make sure that the toaster didn't gain sapience and try to take over Equestria again."

Twilight blinked and sighed heavily, facepalming before she sprinted down the street to the musicians' house to make sure that there would not be another rampaging toaster attack.

* * *

>168.4: (Gamerex27)

She hadn't really bothered to question it. It was pretty fun, after all.

Smiling, Pinkie Pie grabbed an oar in her mouth and hopped onto a gondola. Leaning her head towards the side of the boat, she channeled her earth pony strength to row herself across the canals of Ponyville.

The canals that hadn't been there yesterday.

She waved at several tired pegasi running what looked like a water filter through the new lake surrounding Ponyville, then squeaked as she almost fell off the boat due to the sudden imbalance of weight.

Steadying herself, she steered her vehicle over to Twilight's castle. As she tied her boat down to the hastily-created dock, her ears perked up as she heard somepony approach.

"Hiya, Twilight!" she said, spitting out the licorice knot and trotting to the entrance of the castle. "So...we've been Awake for years. Don't you usually do these experiments at the start of a Loop?"

"This...this was an accident," Twilight feebly protested, sighing as she dumped a large pile of sponges into the water to help drain the town. "All I did was do a bit of research, publish a paper, and next thing I know, everypony tries to rewrite every water molecule in the town's water supply, and now we're all flooded."

"...How's that a bad thing?" Pinkie chirped, absentmindedly nibbling a bit of leftover candy as she spoke. "It's fun! I haven't actually been to cities in the waterâ€"Venice, Altomare, Soleanna...actually, I was in that last one, but Silver accidentally sent me into space early on, so I spent the rest of the Loop getting a monopoly on Eggmanland's candy stores so I could manipulate him into going out of business and I could buy the place and make it actually fun, but I'm not letting you talk again, am I?" The earth pony giggled nervously. "Whoopsie! So, what happened?"

"...you've seen how there are so many mares in Ponyville and the rest of Equestria, and so few stallions, right?" Twilight asked.

"Um...there's not a shortage, but the number's kinda different, so...yeah?"

"After we learned that Cadence will be pregnant in the future, I did some research-ultrasounds, studies, divining spells to see if we can find what her foal may look like before that comes in the timeline," she continued, "along with some other Loopers last Loop. And we...found this."

She hoofed over several sheets of paper stapled together. Pinkie grabbed it and looked it over.

"Comparison on the Effect of Natural versus Tap Water in Fetal Differentiation," she read aloud. "By T. Sparkle, R. Belle, and Z. Cora."

She flipped rapidly through the paper. Control sample, mean amount of magnetite, p-value, codon, trimester of pregnancy...In spite of what some ponies would think of her, she did have enough of an attention span to pay attention to her friends' work, and she was more than smart enough to understand the basic terminology of the study, if not the nitty-gritty details and scientific jargon. Not that she ever bragged about that: that would be mean.

"So...you were trying to find out if Ponyville's water supply was tainted?"

"Not so much 'tainted' as skewing the gender ratio." We basically looked into whether there was something in the water doing this," Twilight elaborated. "Turns out, there was. There's some kind of magical compound in the water that, when ingested by pregnant mares, makes the zygote more likely to develop into a filly. No other side effects, but I'm not sure yet if this is in Baseline, or just a glitch in the water's Yggdrasil code or something: we'll do a follow up study next time we're all Awake. We published the paper, and...I think the locals took it the wrong way."

"Water always tasted fine to me," Pinkie commented, watching as the Unawake Cutie Mark Crusaders struggled to pilot their canoe to school, and how Pony Joe's dough shipment was caught in a nasty traffic jam behind a vessel packed with Apple family cider and Filthy Rich's luxury yacht. "Don't you put those things in journals only other scientists read?"

"Yes, but those are sometimes cross-referenced and mentioned in mainstream papers." Twilight dug around in her Pocket, pulled out yet another sponge, and enlarged it with a quick sizesifting spell, dropping it into the lake. "This one was after that incident with Rainbow Dash and Tank going into hibernation, and I think a lot of ponies misread it to read that the water was poisoned. They tried to put some filters in, and...uh...the dam flooded the town by mistake."

"Oh." Pinkie blinked, and watched as Fluttershy flung out a net to catch some algae for her friends near the sea, and as Spike floated across the water on a pool float, sipping some lemonade. "Well...it looks like fun to me!"

"...yeah," Twilight said, chuckling as she dropped another massive sponge into the lake. "I guess it's harmless enough. Other than the property damage, nopony got hurt, and it's making getting across town interesting, at least...Oh! Your Unawake self made these blueprints for a boat made out of candy this one time. Want to see if it's seaworthy?"

* * *

>168.5: (Vinylshadow)

Shining Armor Woke up to a steady stream of _thwoks_ coming from the balcony of his bedroom in the Crystal Empire. Sitting up, rubbing his eyes, he blinked himself awake to see Cadence swinging a golf club and seeding the Empire with crystal golf balls.

Dragging himself out of bed, he made his way over to his wife and waited until she had emptied her current bucket of balls.

"Good morning, Cady," he said. She pricked her ears and turned to smile at him.

"Wide Awake?" she asked.

"And Loopy as ever," he replied warmly, sharing a nuzzle with his Crystal Princess of Love. "What are you up to?"

"Practicing," she said.

"You play golf now?" Shining asked curiously.

"It's not exactly _complicated_. At least not when you're simply smacking balls into the wild blue yonder."

"That 'wild blue yonder' looks an awful lot like our Empire made from crystal," Shining noted.

"They're decorations," Cadence said defensively. "And they _usually_ just bounce off whatever they hit."

"Usually?" Shining asked, arching one eyebrow.

"I...may have broken a few windows...but I've gotten much better," she admitted.

"Behold, Crystal Empire, your Putt-Putt Queen," Shining said with a grin.

Cadence bopped him on the head with her putter and pouted.

* * *

>168.6: (Masterweaver)

Lyra did a double take. "Waitâ€" _that's_ Countess Coloratura?!"

Twilight shrugged. "I know. Complete contrast to what AJ was talking about. Turns out her manager is an image-manipulating egotist, soâ€" "

"Yeah, yeah, I got that. Uh, do I meet her in baseline?"

"Well, there's a line of fans for 'hoovesies,' which is a little stamp kissing thing, and you usuallyâ€" "

"Right, I'm getting in." Lyra trotted to the line quickly, schooling her face to that of an eager fanfilly's. Twilight glanced after her suspiciously; even at the best of times, the mysteries of the green mare's thoughts could barely be fathomed. Still, for the moment, Lyra didn't seem intent on causing trouble...

As always, Svengallop pulled Coloratura from AJ. As always, the line of fans went forward. And then, it was Lyra's turnâ€

"Shoo-be-doo," the green unicorn greeted casually.

"Shoo-shoo-be-doo," the popstar replied without thinking, before her eyes widened in shock. "Uh, umâ€"

Lyra winked.

"H-Hoovesies!" Coloratura managed, smiling all too wide as she partially smeared the green cheek with her stamp. She watched warily as Lyra trotted cheerfully away, before turning back to the line.

Twilight sighed. "Really? Really?"

"Had to be sure," Lyra explained.

* * *

>168.7: (Masterweaver)

"...Soooooooooooooooooooo."

Cadence sighed, putting her book down. "What is it, Chrysalis?"

"...You and Slaanesh collaborated on a publication?"

"Yes, we did." Cadence managed a faint smile. "It was actually quite interesting. We seem to approach the same subject from very different angles, and our discussions were very detailed. Granted, I had to talk hir down from some subjectsâ€"

"No, no, I've read the book," Chrysalis assured her. "I just..."

She paused, rubbing at her holey leg awkwardly. Cadence rose an eyebrow. "What?"

"Well... I know Slaanesh, since shi's a chaos god, has hir devotees and high priestsâ€the people shi grants, shall we say, powers?"

"...don't tell me that you want to become a Slaaneshi cultist!"

"No! No no, not at all, not with hir!" Chrysalis shivered. "There are some things I would not do for all the love of a universe."

"Oh. Well... good."

"I was thinking of becoming a Cadenza cultist, actually."

The pink alicorn blinked. "...come again?"

"Weeeeell, I don't know for _sure_ if you wrote that book in the forty-first millennium," Chrysalis hedged, "but if you _did,_ that implies that maaaaaaaybe you were a warp godâ€”major or minor, I don't know. But as a warp god, you would, possibly, be able to 'bless' some individuals; given how the Loops work, it wouldn't surprise me if you retained that particular ability."

"A Cadenza cultist," Cadence repeated.

"Yes. Somebody devoted to the spread and maintenance of... well, I don't know what form of love you embody, precisely, you seem to dabble in romance and family equally these days... Let's call it familial love of all kinds?" Chrysalis shrugged. "I mean, as a species that literally feeds on loveâ€”as a mother over thirty-three-thousand times over, I would be, you know, a devoted worshiper. And if this comes with benefits, saaaaaaay like the ability to generate enough love to feed my whole hive, all for the better."

"I'm sorry," Cadence held up a hoof. "I'm still trying to wrap my head around the idea. I mean, there have been cults in variant Loops, and Shining did that thing back in Oerth, but... have an actual Looping high priest? Being an actual, you know, figure of worship? I... I don't know."

"No, no, I get that. I mean... I don't want this to get in the way of the friendship we... kinda sorta have," Chrysalis allowed. "It's just an idea that's been... in my head."

"Can you let me think about this?"

"Oh, yes, certainly. I'll just... go find Trixie now."

The changeling queen backed out of the room, leaving the princess of love to stare at the golden shoes that adorned her hooves.

"...Cadenza cult. High priestess Chrysalis of Cadenza..."

She glanced at the crystal heart on her flanks.

"Hmmm."

* * *

>168.8: (Masterweaver)

"WHAT. THE. BUCK."

Coloratura was startled to see a white unicorn stomp onto the stage, pushing past her and snarling at Svengallop. "You monster. You complete. And total. Monster."

"I beg your pardon, miss?"

"You see this?!" The unicorn pointed at the eighth notes on her flank. "THIS represents my talent for remixing. I can take anything, ANYTHING! And make a new tune out of it. I've made a _career_ out of revitalizing songs that others thought outdated, or bringing a singer into a whole new light. I can throw together amazing blends of light, color, and sound on the _fly_ because I _understand_ how they all work! I _respect_â€"neigh, _adore_ every sound clip in my library, every song that I reform! And do you know what I just saw?!"

Her hoof pointed at the stunned popstar. "I saw a beautiful voiceâ€"an incredible talentâ€"mangled and mocked with magic, gasping beneath glitz and glam, barely recognizable as even a joke! I saw a performance meant to deride and insult the prime actress, so shallow that she doesn't even have to be here for it to work! I saw a pony used as a prop, a plaything, a practical putz! And the worst part, the absolute worst part?! I saw her _agree_ to it! Not out of spite, or sadness, but pure ignorance! WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TO THIS BEAUTIFUL SOUL?!"

"Look, miss, I am Countess Coloratura's managerâ€" "

"WRONG! You are her OWNER! You imprison her with lies, little tidbits that say you're necessary, and then sit back as she flounces about in whatever pitiful dance you've arranged this time! Well, I for one won't stand for it. I insist, demand, and in fact enforce that you remain away from her! If I find that she is forced to go through another such INSULT of a performance, if I discover that you continue to lock away the true pony behind your pathetic tricks, not only will I not attend your charity show but I will ALSO spread your name! Your face! And word of your _sick and depraved_ treatment of this pony to all the musicians and musical venues I can contact. One way or another, I will not let you torture Coloratura anymore!"

With that dramatic statement, Vinyl Scratch, known as DJ Pon-3, stormed off the stage. Ponies gave her a wide berth, noticing how the very ground beneath her hooves began a dramatic drumbeat. If any looked behind her tinted glasses, they would see it in her eyes: The Goddess of Wubbology was absolutely and utterly livid.

* * *

>168.9: (Elmagnifico)

Twilight looked out at the herd of strange creatures assembled in Ponyville Square with a mixture of bewilderment and relief. On the one hoof, they were not accosting any of the citizens. On the other, the citizens had retreated into their homes at the things' approach, and Twilight honestly couldn't blame them.

She'd been gearing up to deal with the Plunder Vines, it was about that time of Loop. The specially-bred eggs from Bert Gummer's Branch were just a quick aging spell from reaching maturity. She'd hoped the giant worms' now highly specific diet, calibrated specifically to target the Vines' unique blend of chaos magic, would keep both species from causing too much havoc.

Instead, she now was looking out on a plaza full of trees that had eyeballs instead of leaves. She'd seen something similar once before in what she'd later learned was the Starbound Branch, but those trees had been sessile. This entire forest had apparently uprooted itself and walked into Ponyville. Now she and the other elements of harmony had been assembled to deal with this problem. Discord was in town at this point as well, but he had quite visibly been keeping his claws to himself. By detaching them and placing the lot in a chest that was still tucked under one arm, but it was the thought that counted.

One of the ocular copse's members blinked in their direction and shuffled forward. The other elements tensed, and Twilight found herself wondering absently what the things' abilities were beyond its bizarre appearance. A certain smug-looking spirit of chaos just sort of floated in her peripheral vision.

Before anypony could do anything, the tree creaked and groaned a bit as its bark shifted until what looked like a ligneous mouth opened up. At this stage, Twilight really wasn't surprised when it spoke in a voice with an odd timbre.

"Pardon me, ladies, but would any of you know the way to Appleoosa? It seems my friends and I have gotten lost."

The Anchor raised an eyebrow for half a second, until a hunch that had been brewing since she'd first saw the creatures coalesced enough to be expressed. She turned to Discord with a look so deadpan that a nearby deceased skillet came down with acute jealousy.

"You wouldn't happen to have something to do with this, would you?"

There was a niggling feeling at the back of her mind that she was going to regret that phrasing as the Spirit of Chaos' mish-mosh face spread in a wide grin.

"My dear Twilight, off-course eye wood!"

* * *

>168.10: (Gym Quirk)

Cheerilee walked over to stand next to Diamond Tiara and Silver Spoon as they watched the magic envelop the Cutie Mark Crusaders. Despite their foreknowledge, the blinding flash still dazzled the teacher and her students for several seconds.

Gasps from the fillies and colts in the schoolyard accompanied the restoration of their vision.

Before the crowd now stood three alicorn fillies.

Three blank-flank alicorn fillies.

"Now that's just a bit cruel," observed the teacher quietly, as astonishment fought disappointment on the faces of the unawake Crusaders.

Diamond Tiara nodded sadly. "I hope it's just a one-time glitch in the Tree's 'Important Event' library or something like that."

"Should I go get 'Queen Mum'?" asked Silver Spoon. "She skipped the baseline ascension crisis this time around, right? I hope that wasn't the reason for this..."

* * *

>168.11(Evilhumour)

"Twilight, what is that?" Spike pointed to a new book in the reference section of the library.

"Oh, that's a book that Cadence and Slaanesh worked on, the Big Book of Love," Twilight said, looking up from her latest book from Rainbow Dash with a happy smile on her face. "It was really good."

"But Twilight, why are you having a book like that in public and not in the private section?" Spike's claw was reaching out for it but his other one was doing its best to stop it.

"It's not bad at all Spike," Twilight said, shaking her head as she levitated both the drake and book over to her side. "I must admit I was very skeptical about it when I heard it, and saw that it was a pop up book of all things, but trust me, both of them decided to show that they were talking about love and not sex. That's their other book." With a flick of her hoof, she opened to a random page—a section of the ability and strength of True Love's Kiss, with a miniature hologram of Shining Armor and Cadence's wedding day with the room almost to exact detail. There was even a tiny Chrysalis hovering around them. Spike pulled the tag, which got Shining and Cadence to kiss, sending out a ray of light that sent the tiny Chrysalis flying away. "Ahem, 'The power of True Love's Kiss is a mighty weapon between soulmates, and can achieve much to the people's defense and defense only. While many would see this as a weakness, our example here shows how much can be done by defending one's True Love. Sometimes, the shield is mightier—" Spike!" Twilight shouted as Spike kept pulling the tab which sent Chrysalis flying over and over again. "What are you—"

"Look," he pointed with a claw to a corner of the room, and Twilight let a round of giggles. It seemed that Cadence and Slaanesh had planned for Chrysalis to have a soft landing in the form of a blue showmare's hooves.

"Okay, that's really cute," Twilight grinned as she handed the book over to Spike, watching the drake read it from the beginning before she went back to her own book.

* * *

>168.12: (Masterweaver)

"I'm terribly sorry about this," Sleipnir said without preamble as he stepped into Cadence's room. "She insisted."

"Wha—"?"

A buxom human with flowing golden hair shoved the eight-legged stallion aside as she entered. "Heh-LOW horsey sis! It's nice to meet you, at last!" She twirled forward and wrapped the alicorn in a tight embrace, giving her a peck on each cheek before she let go. "I mean, wow, the local love goddess? And a pony to boot, look at you. Of course, you've heard about me already, haven't you?"

Cadence shot a questioning glance toward Sleipnir, who mouthed a single word. "Oh! Aphrodite, right?"

"Yeah, that's me!" The woman sat down on the bed next to the pony, wrapping an arm around her neck. "Best love goddess around, ask anyone."

"Right, yes. I have heard of you..." Cadence mused. "...quite a bit, actually. You admin the Eiken branch, is that right?"

"Well, yes, but that's only to get Skuld off my ass," Aphrodite replied, waving her hand dismissively. "Not that it's a bad place, it's actually pretty great!"

"I see. Is it true you're married to Hephaestus?"

"Ugh." The woman stuck out her tongue. "Yeah, it was a marriage of convenience. He's absolutely hideous."

"So I understand," Cadence said neutrally. "Still, he did a good job raising your kid."

"Eros? Yeah. Had to foist him off on somebody when Ares wouldn't take responsibility. I mean, the guy is hot as hell, don't get me wrong, he's just a bit... short tempered, is all."

"Oh, I can see how that would be."

"Where are my manners, though!" Aphrodite leaned back with a grin. "You know all about me, and I know nothing about you! How are things for you in, uh, Equinia?"

"Equestria."

"Yeah, that!"

"Well..." Cadence took a moment to contemplate. "I have a loving, handsome husband... I've been told I'll get a baby soon, that's fun... and oh! Recently one of the Loopers started worshipping me."

"What?" cried Aphrodite.

"What?!" shouted Sleipnir.

"Yeah, a lover and a mother near countless times," Cadence confirmed with a grin. "I mean I was a little nervous when she started out, but high priestess Chrysalis has been pretty consistent in helping me out."

"Oh, you've got a high priestess!" Aphrodite squealed happily. "I remember my first high priestess... or maybe she was my third...? Well, I had such great fun with her, you know. Oh, Sleipnir!" she cried. "A high priestess! They grow up so fast, right?"

"I... guess they do?" the stallion managed, giving Cadence an odd look. "You're not looking to Ascend, are youâ€"?"

"Oh, nononono, no," Cadence assured him quickly. "All my stuff is here! My family, my castle, my worshippers..." She let out a melodramatic sigh.

Aphrodite cooed, running her fingers through the mare's mane. "Oh, what's wrong horsey sis?"

"It's just... as much as I _love_ Chrysalis worshiping me now, I feel like she doesn't quite know how to do it right," Cadence bemoaned, leaning into Aphrodite with large, wet eyes. "I mean, she preaches about _loyalty_ and _selflessness_ and _chastity_, you know?"

The woman nodded sympathetically. "I know! It's like the complete antithesis of a love goddess, but they keep insisting!"

"Sometimes I wish, oh, that a chosen one would descend from on high to teach her the error of her ways," the alicorn whined. "But I don't know who I could possibly send!" She surreptitiously winked at Sleipnir, flicking a wing toward Aphrodite.

The trickster's son caught on fast. "You know, in the old days some of us would take on mortal forms to guide others," he mused. "Maybe I could get Aphrodite to manifest in one of Chrysalis's daughters."

"Oh my gosh!" Cadance turned a hopeful beaming smile on the buxom woman. "Would you do that for me, Aphrodite? You're such an _experienced_ love goddess after all..."

"Well..." Aphrodite rubbed her chin. "I'm not sure..."

"You'd probably need to put your full focus on it," Sleipnir pointed out. "Skuld wouldn't be able to reach you at _all_ until the Loop ended."

Realization took root in the woman's eyes. "Yeah, that... well, the Eiken Loop could last without me for a short bit," she admitted. "Okay, why not? Sleipnir, let's head upstairs and work this thing out!" She wrapped her arms around Cadance again. "Just you wait, this time tomorrow Chrysalis will have a brand new daughter to help her become the best pony priestess EVER!"

Both she and the eight legged stallion flashed out of existence. After a moment, Cadance turned to her vanity, opening a drawer and tapping the enchanted mirror within. "Chrissy? Yeah, I have a godly mission for you..."

* * *

>"Welcome to the world, my dear child."

Aphrodite stared at the ragged-haired, hole-ridden, fanged bug thing staring at her. She looked at the eggshell around her, felt the fin on her bald head, and gasped at her own emaciated form.

Chrysalis, wearing a motherly smile, politely ignored the soul-wrenching scream.

* * *

>168.13: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight raised her eyebrows. "Really? You can predict the future?"

Sitting in front of her, the other unicorn nodded. "And I knew you were going to say that."

"..." Twilight shook her head, and sighed. This new pony had come into town earlier, and proclaimed herself a seer of things to come. Twilight, suspecting a visiting Looper or a weird variant (it wasn't the first time somepony new had shown up in place of Trixie, or even the millionth), had promptly decided to check the newcomer's abilities for herself. Steadying herself, she looked the other pony in the eye. "So, what else can you see in my future?"

The pony pressed her hooves to her forehead. "I'm seeing... I'm seeing... hugs from an Alicorn!"

Then, in one fell swoop, she grabbed Twilight, and pulled her close. And as the illusion fell away to reveal her true form, the now winged pony grinned. "Surprise."

"Princess Celestia!" Twilight smiled and hugged her mentor back.

When the two finally separated, Twilight looked up. "It's so nice to see you again. It's been far too many Loops since the last time, hasn't it?"

"Yes. Yes, it has." Celestia smiled. "And it's always nice to know I can still surprise you."

"You always were good at that," Twilight told her with a smile of her own.

* * *

>168.14: (Purrs)

"619,324,885,207,346,950,184,0_30_...
619,324,885,207,346,950,184,03_1_... 619,324,885,207,346" Her count was interrupted by a purple claw tapping on her shoulder. "Spike!"

"Twilight, what are you "

"Figuring out how many Loops it takes to get to a googleplex.
619,324,885,207,346,950,184,03_2_..."

Spike cocked his head. "That's a lot. How many Loops has it been so far?"

Twilight froze, then facehoofed. "Oh, _jacaranda_."

* * *

>168.15: (Evilhumour)

"And make sure that those sardine cupcakes have extra mustard on them, please," Shining said to Pinkie Pie, causing a just-Woken-up Twilight to tilt her head in confusion. After a quick confirmation that he was Awake, she asked about the elephant in the room.

"Eh, Shining, is this one of those macho guy eating contests?" Twilight blinked, looking for the massive ponies that were a part of Fluttershy's brood. Then again, Shining wasn't the most manly of ponies to begin with...

"Uh not really," Shining blushed, looking to the side as Pinkie Pie brought up his order. "Cadence has cravings and this is the second-best place in all of Equestria next to Donut Joe's, but he doesn't take requests."

"Eeeyup," Pinkie Pie said with a forced smile. "That will be twenty five bits because you mentioned that hack of a pony that doesn't even try to be a good cook unlike me!"

Shining rolled his eyes at that, doled out the bits, ascended to alicornhood and flew off to feed his wife.

* * *

>168.16: (Vinylshadow)

Twilight and Trixie entered Big Mac's bar and took seats at the counter.

"Huh...no Mac tod-AGH!" Twilight yelped, falling back off her stool as Berry Punch popped up in front of them with a wide grin.

Berry leaned over the counter worriedly. "Too much hospitality?" she asked, extending a hoof to help Twilight up.

"No, no, not at all," Twilight assured her. "Cider please."

"Make it two, please," Trixie added. As Berry went to pour their drinks, Apple Bloom and Silver Spoon entered the bar and took a seat beside the older mares.

"How was your last Loop?" Silver Spoon asked Trixie, who exchanged looks with Twilight.

"You tell them," Trixie said. Twilight took a few breaths.

"Alright, so, it started off pretty much Baseline, but with several subtle hints that it wasn't following it to the letter," she began. "Very small things. Nightmare Moon mentioned she had outside help with her escape; someone or thing from Equestria itself broke the seal and let her out," she clarified. "So we nuked her with Rainbows and Luna mentioned someone else had taken up her duties of monitoring dreams, but Celestia wasn't the one who did it. The first huge difference was Trixie showing up wearing the Alicorn Amulet."

Berry arrived with their drinks and looked rather disgruntled at having to go pour more while Twilight talked.

"So instead of having an Ursa Minor amble into town, I had to duel Trixie, who was drawing far too heavily on the Amulet's power. Which nearly cut off her connection to magic; I was able to trick her in removing it and that's when she Woke up."

Trixie sipped her cider and carefully avoided eye contact.

"Nothing out of the ordinary until Discord's return, which ended with him escaping once I'd fixed my friends rather than waiting around to be stoned again," Twilight said with some amusement. "He then turned into your average overarching villain, behind the Problem of the Day. Turned the Wonderbolts into the Shadowbolts, orchestrated the Invasion of Canterlot, brought back the Crystal Empire, that sort of thing. Loop ended shortly after my usual ascension."

"What happened?" Silver Spoon asked.

"Discord tampered with the Elements when I recited Starswirl's spell. I didn't have the knowledge to fix it instantly like I usually do, so I had to deal with the problems that arose from your friends living different destinies. Then I met Celestia who told me she and Luna had been using their power to stall Discord, preventing him from interfering directly, but he simply acted indirectly through proxies. I enjoyed it overall," Twilight declared, taking a deep drink of her cider and set the mug down with a content sigh.

"That sounds a lot better than what really happened," Discord said casually. "I'm much more interesting as a big bad than some boring friend." He drank fruitcake and nibbled on eggnog as the ponies picked themselves off the floor from his abrupt appearance. "You're so much fun to tease."

* * *

>168.17:(Masterweaver)

Sharp Sylence sat herself down near the entrance of the mine, carefully adjusting her tail. "Perfect Fyre is busy reassessing the protection around Holder's Boulder. We should have roughly half an hour to ourselves."

The pony to her left giggled. "Perfect Fyre! It just fits her, don't you think?"

"As much as Bryllyant Byscuyt fits you."

"You know, my family has an odd obsession with the letter y this Loop," Pynkye Pye pondered. "I'm sure Twilight'd love to study it, if, you know, we weren't hosting guests. How's Equestria been treating you so far anyway?"

The two gray ponies shared a look.

"Well," Bryllyant began, stretching out a bit as she flicked her braided mane back, "I have to admit that it's been... helpful to rebalance my own thoughts on sisterhood. Not that I don't love my sisters, especially after me and Toph found them in the circus, it's just... It's nice not to be a septuplet, but at the same time I wouldn't want to be an only childâ€”having a fraternal twin and older sisters is a good compromise for me." She gave Pynkye a grin. "And you've been a great twin, before and after you Woke up! I know that Mai's enjoyed the sister thing too, she just doesn't emote very often."

"Differently," Pynkye corrected. "She emotes differently. I've had Loops of experience with Maud and Marble, I can read Mai easily." She gave the pony in question a little nudge. "Come on, I'm your little sister this Loop. You can tell me what's eating you."

Mai gave her a flat look. "The hooves. It's hard for me to get my hair right without fingers. And somehow Ty Lee does it without thinking."

"Huh." Ty Lee looked down at her own forelegs. "You know, I never realized that before. How _am_ I braiding my mane withoutâ€"?"

"Tactile telekinesis," Pynkye replied quickly. "Trust me, questioning any further might crash the Loop. So why don't we talk about what's really bothering you two instead?"

"What?" Ty Lee gave her in-Loop twin a worried look. "Bothering us? What are you talking aboutâ€"?"

Pynkye gave her a level frown.

Ty Lee let out a small sigh. "Is it really that obvious?"

"It wasn't back before we Woke up," Pynkye admitted. "At least, it wasn't to me. Now though... looking back... you two were terrified of Perfect Fyre weren't you?"

"I do admit, even as a pony she can be pretty... frightening," Mai agreed, her eyes darting upward. "Which is somewhat incredible. I suppose now that I'm Awake I should be less scared of herâ€"especially since _you're_ with us," she mused, nodding toward Pynkye. "But... It's just... even if she's not Looping, even if she doesn't have any bending, even if she's not trained in military manners, she is still _Azula._"

"Granted, she wasn't _as_ bad as she usually is," Ty Lee pointed out. "Being a peasant, having to do everything herself, has curbed her ego quite a bit. And then of course, there's the fact you never reacted to her manipulations," she added, giving the pink mare an odd look.

"Yeah, I think I don't actually _have_ a fear response." Pynkye shrugged. "I mean, I can tell when something _should_ be terrifying, and I'm really good at faking it, but I've seen how fear affects others and I just don't get that. But this isn't really about me. This is about you two and Azula."

"She's a sociopath with attention-seeking habits who quite literally terrorizes people into following her commands so she can get her way." Mai shrugged. "That's really all there is to is."

There was a moment of silence.

"...she's also one of our few real friends," Ty Lee admitted.

Mai actually frowned at that. "Her? A friend?"

"Well, you know what it was like at finishing school," Ty Lee pointed out. "All those politics and family maneuverings that we were just a touch too young to understand, striving to be the bestâ€"she could have brought in any of the other girls. Any of my sisters. And she chose us."

"She chose to ally herself with the talented and wealthy," Mai countered. "That's not really friendship."

"But it's the closest thing we knew at the time. And she didn't just do the usual 'favors' either. I know it varies whether it happens or not, but doesn't she usually visit you when Tom-Tom is born?"

Mai glared. "Yes. She attends the soul rising. She looks at the baby and says... something about a promising child. She gives us a giftâ€”usually a set of training armor or weapons for when he's 'old enough', and then she makes some vague princess excuse and leaves. It's all rote and duty, it's not real."

"I don't know," Ty Lee mused. "You know how uncomfortable she is in normal social situations. Even attending a party in person is... well, it's outside her comfort zone."

"You're usually at Tom-Tom's soul rising. You know how formal it is. It's not really outside her normalâ€”"

"Lu Ten's funeral."

Mai blinked. "What?"

"Lu Ten's funeral," Ty Lee repeated. "The whole royal family is supposed to be stoic at the time, but..." She let out a small breath. "We know Iroh is always... always struck hard by that, but nobody focuses on Zuko and Azula. But almost every time, you and I are there."

"Zuko sends us invitations."

"No. He sends you an invitation. Mine... Mine's from Azula."

Mai blinked, her tail flicking briefly. "...are you... sure that's baseline?"

"It's pretty consistent," Ty Lee confirmed. "And... maybe it's a move, I don't know, but it's not one that makes sense for her. Not in any tactical way."

Mai's gaze lowered. "...I didn't know."

"To be fair, I never really told you." Ty Lee's ears folded back as she shot her an apologetic smile. "Sorry about that."

"Mmm."

Pynkye cleared her throat. "Well, Ty, it sounds like you have conflicting feelings regarding Azula."

"She's really the one who motivated me," Ty Lee explained. "I mean, before the school I just felt like one of the seven, but she... she picked me out of the crowd and devoted attention to me. I mean, yes, it wasn't anything nice but it was... something. It was her drive that... well, it's what convinced me to run away from home. It's how I decided to become who I am. Without her... without her, I wouldn't be me. And somehow I don't think she'd be Azula if... if we weren't there for her in the first place."

"The yang to your yin," Mai suggested.

Ty Lee blushed. "Well, yes. And... well, sometimes I think about baseline, about how she acted around us. She was the leader, sure, but we were... we were a team. Not her soldiers, which is kind of how she treated everyone else. She'd never sacrifice us. I mean, sure, she'd shoot lightning at us, coerce us, intimidate us, make us chase after the Avatar without rest, participate in overthrowing the Earth Kingdom..."

She shook her head.

"But that was just how she was trained to treat people, motivate them. Actually let us die? No..." "well, not until after Boiling Rock, which is when she started to lose it, and that's kind of our fault anyway..."

Mai gave her a long look. "...you... you want her Looping, don't you?"

"...yes." Ty Lee returned her look staunchly. "Yes, I do. I know there are risks, but... Mai, she's not evil. Not completely. She's just... lost. She doesn't know how to handle love, real love. She's only fourteen when Aang returns, for Agni's sake! And if she does start Looping," she added firmly, "we should be there to help her. Help her adjust to the Loops, and help her... help her heal whatever sickness is in her soul. Because, in the end, maybe we've got Zuko and Sokka and all the other Loopers, but right now all she has is us. She's our friend, Mai. She's a horrible one, but she's still our friend."

After a moment, Mai stood up. "I really don't know. Maybe if she started Looping from a variant..."

"No." Ty Lee shook her head. "That wouldn't be the real her. Mai, please." She stood up, walking over to the other gray pony. "Please, I know it's a lot to ask. Especially with all you go through. But if she starts Looping... can you promise you'll try to help her? Or at least that you'll help me while I'm helping her?"

Mai stared out of the mine.

"...Perfect Fyre's going to be done checking the security measures soon."

"Mai..."

"I'll think about it. That's all I can say right now."

* * *

>168.18: (Vinylshadow)

Angel Bunny sipped his cup of tea, delicately placed a monocle over his right eye and squinted fiercely at Fluttershy.

"I say, woman, where the devil have you been? It's been twenty minutes since my last carrot and I am starving. Were you off saving Equestria with your... friends or something? What a waste. I didn't hire you to gad about with them all day. I have an important meeting in a few days and I need to look my best."

With a harrumph, he picked up the newspaper and snapped it open.

Fluttershy, having only recently Woken up, could only stare in utter bafflement.

* * *

>168.19: (Alex Prior)

"Oooh! We have lots of tasty oats, right here in Ponyville!"

Once again, Applejack watched Svengallop belittle an unawake Pinkie. She stepped forward, just as that lousy svengali said he wouldn't feed 'em to a chicken.

"That's mighty pretentious of ya," she commented, "seein' as they're Princess Luna's favourite. We don' rightly advertise that," she added seeing his suddenly shocked expression, "'cause we believe in fair trade an' all, but we all know it."

Applejack stepped up to the svegali. "Now, Ah don' know which corner of Equestria you are from, but here in Ponyville we won't tolerate somepony jest tramplin' over another just because they think they're better than others. An' frankly?" She poked him in the chest. "Those that think so, never are."

Svengallop puffed himself up. "How dare you! Who do you think you are, anyway?"

Applejack simply raised an eyebrow at him. "Ah'm Applejack. Element o' Honesty, meanin' you bein' dishonest to my old friend Rara set off mah alarm bells. Mind ya," she added, "if ya'll need a second opinion, ah jest can go ask Twilight what she thinks."

The stallion seemed conflicted. "E-excuse me. I have some, ahem, business to take care of." He ran off.

Applejack sighed. "Go an' get some rest, Pinkie. Ah'll go make sure he won't go an' fill Rara with any mighty dishonest ideas or somethin'." She trotted off too.

* * *

>168.20: (Vinylshadow)

Vinyl draped her hooves over the railing on the ship's bow and sighed. Once again stuck on a boat with an icy Octavia. Thankfully, she had Woken up early enough to heal most of the problems with kind words and gestures, even cheerfully giving her entire alcohol supply to Berry Punch.

Vinyl idly wondered how the ship would sink this Loop and briefly entertained the idea of sinking it herself, like she had done once.

Discreetly, of course.

She closed her eyes and let the wind blow over her for a while.

She was startled by a hoof touching her side and she jerked, slamming her barrel against the railing as her hooves slipped.

"SNRRKK! Ow...Wha?!" she flailed, blinking and taking a moment to catch her breath. She turned, rubbing her chest, to see Octavia looking at her with worried eyes.

"Are you alright? When you didn't come to the cabin, I became worried and went looking for you."

Vinyl looked at the sea and perked up. The sun had set, the moon and stars bathing the ocean in a sparkling sea of light.

"Tavi, Iâ€"

Vinyl was interrupted by a loud screech of metal on ice as an iceberg decided to steal the boat's virginity.

"Oh for buck's sake," Vinyl snarled. She first sent up a blinding distress flare, designed to be seen for at least 75 miles in any direction. It formed into an arrow marking the sink site. She then ascended and grabbed Octavia, placing the startled earth pony on her back. Once her precious cargo was secured, she leaped over the railing and wubbed her way across the ocean.

"Er...Vinyl, dear?" Octavia asked a while later. Vinyl looked back at her. "While I appreciate the gesture, you did kinda leave all those ponies behind on a sinking ship..."

"Don't worry, Lyra has everything under control," Vinyl said soothingly.

The horizon lit up with a huge explosion, the shockwave blasting both mares' mane's back.

"...That's perfectly normal," Vinyl said. "The Seaponies don't like wreckage littering their homes so they usually vape it completely."

"Seaponies...yeah, okay," Octavia squeaked, eyes wide as the mushroom cloud blossomed, forming into a caricature of a happy Seapony.

* * *

>168.21: (Evilhumour)

There was barely constrained laughter, causing the stallion's left ear to twitch.

"Twilight, girls, you have seen me many times in the past," Sleipnir said patiently. "This is simply the first time I've been at your size so I'd hope you'd all be matuâ€"

"Awww, he's so cute!" Cadence said, leaning over to pinch her Admin's cheek, causing the other Loopers to break out in full laughter. "I'm sorry Epona but I just couldn't help myself and Iâ€"

"No no, it is quite alright," Epona chuckled to herself, patting her daughter's head. "It's one of the reasons I married him, after all."

Sleipnir simply groaned and facehooved with two of his forehooves.

* * *

>168.22 (Masterweaver)

Epona burst through the door, grinning broadly. "Cadance! Guess what?! You're going to have a baby!"

"I know!" the pink pony replied, waving off the guards peering into her bedroom. "Sleipnir told me a few loops ago!"

The anthropomorphic horse's smile shrunk a bit. "He... did?"

"Yes!" Cadance chuckled. "It's amazing isn't it?"

"Oh... oh of course it is!" Epona gave a couple of weak chuckles of her own. "It's incredible, nobody thought... well, I thought I'd have to... well, it's incredible."

Cadance blinked. "You... don't seem too enthusiastic-"

"No, I am, I am! Really!" Forcing her smile to return, Epona turned back to the pony. "This is incredible. You're very lucky and... yeah. You're..."

She sighed.

"...I just feel a bit... I don't know... out of the loop, these days. I mean, I love my new job, it makes me feel useful, but... My family is very fragmented, widespread. A lot of us are scattered in small secretary or gofer positions, and we rarely ever gather to talk. But Sleipnir, he... well, we're married, obviously, and his family feels more welcoming. And you... well, I like to consider you my friend. But if Sleipnir talked to you without letting me know..."

Epona ran a hand through her mane. "I just... this feels like something I should have known about. That he should have told me. I mean, I'm not that important in the grand scheme of things, but he's my husband and-"

"Stop." Cadance put a hoof on her mouth. "I think I see the problem. Both of you are so overworked and worried that you're not communicating. And that's... not a good thing, but it's not either of your faults. Maybe you should schedule some... together time, or something. Talk to each other. At least once a week-" She tapped her chin. "Do you even have weeks up there, or is time different?"

The horse woman rolled her eyes. "It's... well. It is what it is. But I get your point." She let out a slow breath. "Look, I'm sorry I unloaded all of that on you-"

"No, no, it's fine. Special talent, remember?"

"But with what you're going through right now-"

"Relax, I was captured by changelings once. I can handle this."

Epona blinked. "I... don't see how that relates at all."

Cadance shrugged. "Neither do I. My point is, sometimes we all need to vent. And that's okay. Now, go on, I'm sure you've got a lot of duties over in Hyrule to complete, and the sooner you do that the sooner you can grab Sleipnir, chew him out, then snog him silly."

That got a laugh. "Am I really that predictable?"

The alicorn grinned. "Hey, it's what I would do with Shiny."

* * *

>

**Author's Note:****

168.1 Pinkie has the whole Chaos Deity thing going on.

168.2: Diggety.

168.5: She seems putt-upon.

168.6: That explains a bit.

168.7: Tempting.

168.8: Scratch be angry.

168.9: Ow.

168.10: The Alicorns of Nothing?

168.11: It's full of charts and facts and figures, and instructions for dancing.

168.12: It is rare that admins manage to get back on one another...

168.13: A pleasant kind of prank.

168.14: Twit.

168.16: Discord be trolling.

168.17: Y? (Avatar loopers.)

168.18: What a ballyhoo.

176. Chapter 176

169.1 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Hey Twilight, Moondancer is having a little... get-together..."

Lemon Hearts paused, looking at the purple unicorn. "Um..." She noted the twitching eyelid, the clenched teeth, the tightly wound hooves. "Twilight? You okay there?"

"I want you to pick up the book in front of me, then back away to a radius of five feet."

The yellow pony blinked at the intense response, but did as she was told, waving back the other ponies. Something about the way she'd given the order made it clear that obeying was mandatory.

Tension mounted in the air as Twilight slowly looked skyward.

Then, in one brief moment, she exploded-wings snapping out as she glowed pure white, her mane transforming into a pillar of flame that burned the grass around her, red eyes still visible as she stood and screamed at the sky.

_"**"SLEEEEEEEEEEEIPNIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIR!"**_"

Lemon was shoved aside by an incredibly large stallion as the fire died down to a controlled circle of embers. "Twilight Sparkle, control yourself!"

"I AM. Controlling myself," Twilight snarled, turning her fiery gaze on the newcomer. "I am very, very carefully making sure that while I express my anger, nobody gets hurt. I am, however, incredibly, dangerously angry."

"I can see that," the stallion deadpanned, rubbing his head with two forehooves "and, Lemon realized belatedly, standing on six. "And I'm pretty sure I know why"

"That last expansion. Was that baseline? I need you to tell me _now._"

"All signs point to yes."

"The time travel. The map " the, the spell. Sleipnir, you're the son of a trickster. Tell me you're joking."

The stallion " Sleipnir " crossed his hooves over his heart. "May my mother never prank again should I be wrong."

The flaming pony stared at the giant for a long time. Lemon coughed, awkwardly.

Eventually, though, the flaming mane turned back to normal as Twilight kicked at the ground. "FERN. Fern fern fern fern fern." She rolled onto the ashen ground with a groan. "Well, at least _now_ I know how to keep _that_ from happening. I just... I just... UGH. Those timelines, that spell-

"Coding all that isn't going to be easy," Sleipnir commented sympathetically. "At least we have patches for the situation from other time travel loops."

"Yeah. Yeah I guess... I shouldn't have snapped at you, this isn't really your fault." She sighed. "And I guess we can figure out how to get Starlight to calm down now..."

Sleipnir leaned back. "You know, with how angry you are I was kind of worried you'd try to seek revenge on her or something."

"No, no, there's no real room for grudges in the loops. Learned that with Gendo, unfortunately." Twilight rolled over, releasing another sigh. "And it's not who I am, anyway. And... she really didn't get what she was doing, in the end. The best revenge is living happily after all... Is anybody else Awake?"

"Well, I was in the middle of checking when you... blew up. I know Nyx is, at least."

"GOOD. I could use some cuddling after that." Twilight moaned. "Oh, everfree, now I have a headache..."

"You might want to lose the wings," Sleipnir suggested, gesturing to Lemon Hearts.

"Huh?" Twilight glanced at her, raising her eyebrows. "Oh. Oh right." With a flash, she was once again a unicorn, rising from the ash around her. "Lemon, could you tell... tell Moondancer that I'm going to be late to the party? I need to go home and... wash all this grit off, maybe go through a tub of ice cream. Make sure she knows that I _am_ coming," she added as she plodded off.

Lemon Hearts nodded vaguely, watching her go with wide eyes.

After a moment, she turned to the eight-legged stallion. "Um... what just happened?"

Sleipnir cleared his throat. "Just... give her a day or two to calm down, and she'll explain everything. I have to go. Pleasure to meet you," he quipped, saluting before vanishing abruptly.

* * *

>169.2 (Gym Quirk)

"Now things are just getting silly," muttered Twilight as yet another alternate timeline unfolded during her face-off with Starlight Glimmer.

"What is all this stuff?" asked Spike as he lifted his feet from the viscous liquid coating the map table and the surrounding landscape. "Is this another Smooze future?"

Twilight bent down to sniff at the substance. "Worse," she sighed. "I'm not even going to try to reconstruct the chain of events, but I'm pretty sure that this time, the absence of the rainboom led to the Cutie Mark Crusaders triggering the Tree Sapocalypse."

* * *

>169.3: (masterofgames)

Lyra, Lyra, Lyra, Lyra-and-a-half, and Sweetroll all took their places at the Council Room Of Lyra's Head (TM pending).

"I call this meeting to order!" Pony Lyra grinned, knocking her hoof on the table twice. "First order of business, our new guest!" she continued, gesturing to the over-sized chair at the far end of the table. Residing in it were five stone orbs floating more-or-less in place, with an aquamarine, harp-shaped jewel floating over them, spinning slowly.

Seapony Lyra nodded. "Yeah, what gives with that? Why a chair for an abstract entity? Or an abstract entity for a chair, as the case may be?"

"Yeah, I would have sworn it would either have our combined form in it, or be empty unless we all sat in it to combine again." Human Lyra shrugged.

"I have a theory there." Thief-borg Lyra chimed in. "Perhaps it's because our combined form isn't a set shape."

Everyone turned to look at her, eyebrows raised.

"Well think about it! Each of us had a different part, and a different element."

"Yeah, we got that much." Seapony nodded.

"Well, each element can only be bonded to one person. But who did each one bond to? _Lyra!_ We're all the _same_ person. If we swap elements around, we might be able to swap parts as well. We might even be able to change proportions of who changes how much, or combine our influence in the same parts if we harmonize up correctly."

"Well, we're alone outside right now." Sweetroll shrugged. "If we're going to test it, now's as good a time as any."

Thief-borg nodded. "My thoughts exactly! I think I still have something left over from our mecha project..." she muttered as she slid out of her chair and under the table. "If I can just... reconnect a few wires... ugh... come on... Anything yet?"

"Nope."

"Gotta be the other one then... there! That should do it!" Thief-borg grinned as she pulled herself back up into her chair, the center of the table flickering briefly before revealing a hologram of Pony Lyra. "Awww yeah! Still got it!" she hoof pumped in glee.

"So... we mess around with the elements... and this shows us how we change outside?" Human asked.

"Yep! So let's do some science!"

Sweetroll gathered the orbs and handed them out. "Okay, might as well start with Pony, then Human syncs up on the left, and Seapony from the right."

"My left or hers?" Human asked as she slid around the table and focused, the image above the table starting to shift.

"Both! It's the same left!" Thief-borg rolled her eyes.

"Oh, _abstract_ left! Got it."

Sweetroll looked over the image as it settled into its' new shape, the others managing to more or less fall into place in the link. "Hmm... We kinda got a centaur look with a fish tail. Maybe if... Try letting Pony take a bit more of the connection... No, now the horn is off center. Our aim would be completely shot. Maybe Thief here?" she gestured to a spot on the image.

"I'll synch with Human then, and... okay, loving the cyber wings, but now we have _two_ horns."

"*Snrrk!* S-save that one. We kinda look like Tirek. If we can widen the space between them, and bulk up just a little muscle, we can freak Twilight out in a few loops!"

"Ha! Awesome! Okay, settings saved to shortcut 1. Seapony, try swapping out with Sweetroll and joining Human, then add me to the link."

"Down to two legs, but I am LOVING the cinnamon swirl circuitry designs on the skin! Horns are longer as well. Kinda mino-esque!"

"What about clothes?"

"What _about_ _clothes?"

"Meh, point I guess. Do we want a pony, or a human head?"

"I'm good either way, but pony would get fewer weird looks."

"So human then?"

"On this side of the mirror at least. Weird looks are fun! Hmm... maybe we can... Ooh! Is that a shockwave gland in the throat?"

"Must be my siren side influencing things. Maybe if I move over here..."

"Nice, but that kicks _me_ out! This won't work without all of us! Here, why not try..."

* * *

>169.4: (Edvarius)

Twilight double checked her loop memories to make sure that there was nothing that would give her away with this prank. Everything seemed to be running the same as baseline, though the early start she had here gave her an opportunity she didn't normally have. Seeing that she didn't have the loop memories of asking this to anypony yet she then set up her recording devices and hid them behind various veils and perception filters. With everything in place she nodded to herself and approached Princess Celestia's chambers. The guards on either side smiled down at the young filly and opened the door for her, under orders to let her pass if she needed anything. There were times being the Princess' personal student had its advantages.

Inside her room Celestia was softly rocking a newborn Spike. She gently hummed a lullaby as Twilight walked quietly over to the cradle to look at Spike in his most adorable stage. Celestia motioned with her hoof to her mouth that they should be quiet before lifting the cradle gently with her magic and carrying it into the inner chambers so they wouldn't disturb the baby dragon. Once the door was softly closed the princess turned to her young protégé. "Was there something you needed Twilight?"

"Yes. I finished reading that book you gave me," she replied as she lifted the tome from her saddle bags. Then she did her best to look a bit hesitant, "And, umâ€¦"

"Was there something in there that confused you? You don't need to be ashamed of that Twilight. Asking questions is an important part of learning."

"Well I did have a question, but it didn't have to do with the book. I, I probably shouldn't ask you. I'll just go. Goodnight, Princess Celestia."

"Don't be silly, my little pony. You can always ask me about anything."

"Oh, well in that caseâ€¦" Twilight glanced over at the door to the inner chamber where Spike was sleeping. "I know that baby dragons come from eggs now," she said, before turning back to her teacher with a face full of innocent curiosity. "But where do baby _ponies_ come from?"

* * *

>169.5 (Edvarius)

Clark Kent Awoke lying in bed as a rooster greeted the morning. _Huh, must be starting out a bit early this time around._ He got out of bed and stretched out when a few odd things were brought to his attention. First off was that this wasn't the room he had growing up. Yet it was still somehow familiar. While the furniture didn't exactly match up to what he normally used, and much of it seemed made for somebody of a far smaller stature than him, it was nonetheless arranged in the same kind of way he typically arranged his bedroom. The second odd thing was that he didn't see the fields he was expecting when he looked out the window, rather there were acres of apple trees heavy with fruit. The thing that seemed the most out of place however was that also outside of the window he could see a bright red pony pouring seed into a small feeding trough for the chickens. Clark gave himself a quick look over. _I still look human. How am I in an Equestrian Loop while still looking the way I usually do?_ As he tried to go over the possibilities a voice called out "Star Apple! Ya up yet?!"

"Yes, Granny." he replied reflexively.

"Well hurry up and get down here for breakfast. We got a heap o' work to get done with both the reunion and the Summer Sun Celebration commin'!"

"I'll be down in a minute." he answered and went over to his dresser to find something to wear. As he pulled out a faded pair of overalls and a red shirt he silently chuckled at what his loop memories were telling him. _Landed on the wrong planet, huh?_

Once he arrived downstairs Granny Smith handed him a stack of pancakes. "It's about time. What took ya so long this mornin'?" she asked.

Clark took a seat next to Applejack and Applebloom. "Sorry Granny. I just woke up feeling a bit Loopy I guess."

Applebloom didn't seem to respond to that statement, but Applejack gave him a wink. "Know what you mean. Woke up feelin' the same way myself. Wide Awake now though."

"Well I'm glad to hear you're full o' beans this mornin', 'cause we're gonna need it!" Granny exclaimed, missing out on the hidden meaning of the quick exchange between loopers. "Now Star Apple, I want ya to help Big Mac bring in enough apples to make food for the celebrations, and Applejack I need help getting some extra beds set up in the barn for those that are gonna have to stay the night. Camping out might be fine for you young sprouts, but us old folks are another thing altogether."

"Yes Granny" the two replied before hurrying to finish their breakfast and get started on the chores for the day.

* * *

>Clark, also known in his home loop as Superman, a being capable of moving planets, gave the tree in front of him a carefully measured kick, shaking the plant with enough force to cause the apples to fall down into the waiting baskets below. Somepony behind him whistled. "Well shoot, I was plannin' on givin' ya a few pointers, but it looks like yer applebuckin' like a pro already."

He turned back to see Applejack and shrugged at that statement. "In a sense I've been doing this for years already."

Applejack chuckled at the reminder, "Yeah, got me there." Then she took her hat off and glanced off to the side. "Look Clark, I feel really guilty about havin' somepony who's supposed to be a guest doing what's normally my job. I can handle this while you go find somethin' ya _want_ toâ€¦"

Clark stopped Applejack with a finger to her mouth. "You don't need to feel guilty about anything. I might not be used to apple farming, but I still grew up on a farm. Getting to do this for a few years sounds like a great way to spend a vacation loop to me. It's almost like being back home." He bent over to pick up the fruit-laden baskets with a pole, which he then balanced over his shoulders. "Besides, my name isn't Clark this loop. Ma and Pa named me Star Apple, remember?"

"Alright, if that's what ya want. Well, if ya'll pardon me I need to get back before Granny wonders just where I've been off to."

Star Apple accompanied Applejack back with his load while he thought to the upcoming gathering. _If my memories are serving me correctly there's always a few kids at each reunion who haven't seen me before and they always end up gawking. I wonder if I should just roll with it and show off some tricks I can do to make it a _real _show for them?_

* * *

>169.6: (Edvarius)

Rarity groaned as she Awoke in bed. The pillow her head was resting on was damp from somebody's hysterical crying, quite possibly her own. She lifted herself out of bed and quickly determined that she was apparently human in this loop, and also that this wasn't her usual home. _Oh well, this is hardly my first fused loop. The chambers themselves are quite lovely. Am I royalty this around? Although these clothesâ€¦_ The clothes would obviously have to go. She could understand wearing nothing but black, she'd obviously been crying pretty heavily before she Awoke and black was often used for mourning so that made sense at least, but why in Yggdrasil had the person she was replacing chosen such an unflattering one piece? She looked like a down-on-her-luck street performer, not a princess. _Ugh, and I hate to think of what this hood is doing to my poor hair._ Rarity walked over to the vanity and used the small basin of water there to wash her face before tugging her hood down to see about fixing her hair.

The hood didn't budge.

Rarity pulled harder and harder, but the hood remained completely immobile. She tried tugging at the neckline, searched frantically for a zipper, **anything**, but the ugly outfit stuck fast to her like it was a part of her skin. A scream escaped from her throat as realization and her loop memories hit.

* * *

>Link groaned as he walked up to the Kingdom of Hytopia once again. He was not fond of this latest expansion. Yes the people here needed help, but the problems here just seemed so ridiculous compared to what he was used to facing. But far worse however was that knowledge that sooner or later one of the others would find themselves here as well, and then he'd never hear the end of it. It didn't matter how **practical** any of them might be, there were some pieces of equipment he could not allow his friends to know about. He could already hear Zelda laughing as she asked if he could borrow his gown for a state function, Ganondorf mocking his pink cheerleading miniskirt, or Ruto screaming in outrage at the Zora costume. Link was so fixated on the imagined screams that it took him a few seconds to realize there was **actual** screaming coming from the palace. All thoughts of embarrassment aside he rushed forward past the surprised guard at the gate, who did little more than call out to him as he shouldered his way past.

Link had imagined that the curse on Princess Styla could have been worse this time. She could have been turned into something monstrous instead of merely having to wear something she didn't like. Possibly even injured or killed outright. What he did not expect was to see the familiar outfit still in sight but with an unfamiliar face. Or that the princess would be wrestling with her own guards.

"LET GO!" Rarity screamed as she fought for ownership of one of the guard's spears.

"Please, your Highness, compose yourself!" Sir Combsley pleaded over King Tuft's sobbing. "We've already put out a request for a hero. Soon somebody shall come and defeat the Lady of the Drablands. You don't have to risk your life like this, just please have a little patience!"

"Patience?!" Princess Rarity yelled as she finally twisted enough to cause the guard to lose his grip on his weapon and sent him stumbling backwards. "Am I not a member of the royal family?! It is our **duty** to protect the realm and its culture! I cannot simply stand by and wait for somebody to come to fix our problems for us! I shall hunt down this so called Lady and put an end to her crimes against fabulosity myself!"

Link shrugged as King Tuft started blubbering something about the curse driving his little girl mad. At least this would be better than using those dolls. Though he wondered what he might have to bribe the visiting looper with in order to keep her quiet about this loop. She seemed as passionate about fashion as any of the actual natives of this land; maybe he could let her have her pick of his now extensive wardrobe before the loop ended?

* * *

>169.7 (Fractalman)

A long bundle of pink hair sighed, and looked towards a yellow bundle of hair. "This is going to be an interesting loop," it said in a soft deadpan.

The yellow hairs looked at the pink hair "Ah'll say!"

Both bundles hit the ground as a pale blue bundle looked towards them. "Frankly, the great and hairy Trixie thinks this whole thing is ridiculous." It turned the other direction, towards a bundle of orange hair. "Big Macintosh, I'm guessing?"

"Eeyup," said the bundle.

Meanwhile, one hundred and eighty degrees away, a curling purple ribbon of hair spoke up. "Twilight, why are we-" and was promptly silenced by a sixth, stripy string of hair grabbing it.

A darker purple appendage sighed. "Well, momma, I don't normally mind being close to you, but this is ridiculous."

"HUZZAH! THE FUN HAS BEEN OCTUPLED!" boomed a final voice.

Crickets began to chirp.

The yellow bundle coughed politely. "Ahem. As y'all have noticed, we're a spider-mane this loop. More specifically, it's legs. Ah suggest we get a move on before we have a run in with a scissor-snatch, and let's try not to get all tangled up."

* * *

>"Why is that manticore chasing us?!" yelled Applejack, as she ran via moving around in a circular pattern; the still unfamiliar motion was tricky enough on its own, even without the struggle to remain coordinated with the other manes. "We're not even on its menu, are we?"

"It's chasing us for the same reason that cats play with balls of yarn," Fluttershy explained. Applejack could have sworn she heard a faint "nature is so fascinating" out of Fluttershy.

The manticore lunged, mouth wide open.

"AIIIEEEEEEE!" shrieked Rarity as the baby manticore bit into her. It didn't hurt, but the slobber felt absolutely gross.

Then the manticore started batting them around like a ball of yarn.

* * *

>Several hours later, an extremely tangled, dirty, and twig-encrusted ball of mane-hair rolled its way into the spa, and explained the situation to a very sympathetic Aloe and Lotus.

"So, do ya think ya can get us untangled?" Applejack asked.

Aloe considered. "I...may have to cut a few strands here and there, but yes."

The ball shivered.

"Frankly, I don't like it, but I'd rather lose a few strands than be stuck like this for the next several years," Nyx said.

"Do whatever it takes to get me _clean,_" Rarity declared.

* * *

>169.8 (Gym Quirk)

Twilight felt just a little guilty about what she was about to do, but it was one of those itches that she had to scratch before she could get on with things.

"...Spare me your overblown ego! No group of friends, not even Princess Twilight's, is that important!" ranted Starlight Glimmer.

Before the unicorn could cast her disabling spell at Rainbow Dash, Twilight summoned an Alicorn Amulet from her Pocket â€" She'd long-ago worked out how to counteract its tendency to push its wearer toward megalomania â€" and used its power to cast a time-stop spell and a localized version of her Hold Pony enchantment to prevent Starlight from taking any additional actions.

"Excuse me for cheating; I'll release the spells after I've gotten a few things off my chest. We can go back to what we were doing when I'm done," the alicorn said.

"The fact that you can fight me to a standstill and your ability to adapt Starswirl's spell to your needs clearly shows that you are a unicorn of formidable talent and power. Quite possibly stronger than I was before I got my wings. We'll save discussion of how that works with your ideology of enforced equality for another time.

"But do you know what really bugs me about what you've decided to do with that ability? It's what you failed to do.

"You spent considerable effort researching me and my friends to find the critical point in time that links us. But you then ignored everything that we did for Equestria since then._

"Now, we don't go around bragging about our exploits â€” Except for Rainbow Dash, and even she prefers to focus on her flying over the five times we saved Equestria. Half the time, ponies don't even realize that I'm an alicorn, but I digress.

"You didn't bother to note the three stained glass windows in Canterlot Castle depicting how we redeemed Nightmare Moon, defeated Discord, and saved the Crystal Empire.

"You utterly failed to recognize the significance the Elements of Harmony and our link to them. Free hint: Their power is based on...wait for it...Friendship.

"You can only say that no group of friends is important to the fate of Equestria because you completely ignored any and all evidence to the contrary.

"We didn't ask for the dubious honor, but the fact is that we six were the wielders of the Elements: The only ponies able to employ their power against Equestria's enemies. And you decided that your lust for revenge overrode any possible negative outcome that their absence would have on everypony else!"

She took a deep calming breath.

"Computer. End program."

The cloudscape faded into a yellow grid on a black background. She slowly walked to the entrance arch, which obediently opened at her approach.

_Well, at least I got that out of my system without inflicting it on any living ponies. Now I just need to work out a suitable trade with Apple Bloom so that she deletes her logfile of this session..._

* * *

>169.9

"Amateur," Trixie scoffed, as she and Twilight dropped back down behind the boulder.

"How is that amateur?" Twilight asked, indicating the activity in question with a toss of the head. "She's making one of our most dangerous opponents much more dangerous â€” and it's the one which ties into her conversion-and-alteration talent, too."

"Ah," Trixie said. "But it's a matter of style! Of subtlety! She's just given a pony with a big stick a bigger stick!"

"Trixie!" Twilight hissed. "Keep it down! I'd rather do this with finesse rather than just level the mountain."

"Fine," Trixie said, a little huffily. "Trixie will use subtlety."

"Uh oh..." Twilight muttered, noticing the switch to third person.

* * *

>"Attention!" Trixie shouted, letting off a stream of fireworks. "Attention, so-called King Sombra and Starlight merest-glimmer-of-intellect!"

Twilight banged her head into the rock wall.

"You're new," Starlight said, looking up. "Come to join?"

"In a manner of speaking, yes!" Trixie said, flourishing her cloak. "Not to join the army, but to join the event! For Trrrixie Lulamoon, Most Awesome Pony Here, challenges you both to a duel!"

"Trixie..." Twilight moaned.

"I know that voice," Starlight said, voice contorted with hate for a moment. "Twilight goody-four-hooves Sparkle. What brings her here?"

"We walked," Trixie said, skipping how they'd gotten into the past. "Now! I hereby issue my challenge! Also declare victory."

Starlight blinked. "What?"

Then Sombra's entire army jumped on her and their erstwhile master.

"While Trixie was talking, she was reversing the polarity of the subliminals," Trixie explained, with a grand flourish. "And that, Twilight, is how you fight a time war."

"I'll stick to my normal, thanks," Twilight said delicately. "What do we do with them now?"

Trixie considered. "Well, we could just banish them to the moon. It's a classic."

* * *

>169.10 (Masterweaver)

"...I can speak from personal experience when I say the power of cutie mark magic is very real," Twilight lectured. "My friends and I can trace our cutie marks back to a single event, something which happened even before we ever met. We've all wondered about what our lives would be like if we had a different mark, and for most ponies that would be all that it would be â€" idle speculation. However, there is a talented unicorn who has managed to make impressive strides in the study of cutie marks, and I feel it would only be appropriate to invite her up to speak. Starlight Glimmer, would you come down here please?"

The look of shock on the pinkish unicorn's face was, Twilight reluctantly admitted, quite amusing. As was the sudden blinking and glancing about by the few other ponies in the know.

However, Starlight quickly schooled her face into a polite smile, standing and walking down the stairs cautiously. "I'm terribly sorry, _princess_, I wasn't expecting this at all. I have nothing prepared!"

"Why don't you explain the principles behind your cutie mark alteration spell?" Twilight offered. "If nothing else, it would be fascinating from a scholarly point of view."

Starlight shot her a look as she stepped up to the podium. "Ahem. The spell which I developed was intended to provide a pony a chance to retreat from their own destiny if said destiny got to be too... overwhelming. The operation included a temporary removal of the cutie mark, followed by the installation of a spell form on the subject and the placement of the cutie mark into a magically sealed environment. The spell form, located on the subject's flank, would suppress the ability directly leading to the cutie mark â€” the special talent, if you will â€” so as to allow the pony to explore other abilities; it also prevents the subject from developing a second mark while the first is hermetically sealed. The marks themselves do have a natural attraction to the personal magic which generated them, hence the storage."

"While I admit that I was a little unnerved when I discovered Starlight's retreat," Twilight interjected smoothly, "I feel I can understand the motivation behind its founding. It was, unfortunately, forcefully decommissioned shortly after I left, due to political strife in the region. However, while I personally did not enjoy the treatment, the potential for temporary removal of cutie marks to assist in psychological therapy was intriguing enough for me to set locating Starlight as one of my long-term goals â€” especially after I learned she was forced to vacate the region rather quickly."

"You give me _far_ too much credit, Princess," Starlight said, only the faintest of growls entering her voice.

"Not at all! It really is an impressive spell..."

* * *

>169.11 (masterofgames)

Twilight had a plan. It was a cunning plan. As cunning as a fox what used to be Professor of Cunning at Oxford University but has moved on and is now working for the U.N. at the High Commission of International Cunning Planning, if she could borrow a phrase from that one cynical British looper she had once met.

It would require a few loops to get the full version down, but really, Starlight had handed her the victory personally. All she really had to do was zap mini-Starlight when the present day one took her back in time to explain her point. But Twilight WAS a pony, and as such, violence was not the answer to problems for her.

Unless VERY comedic.

And so, with one question, the plan began.

* * *

>"Well what about you? Your cutie mark must mean something, or you would have removed it as well!"

Starlight scowled. "It means something alright. The spark represents friendship, and the smoke, just how easily it can evaporate into nothing for the sake of something meaningless, like talent! It's proof thatâ€" are you taking NOTES!?"

"Yep. All I needed. Thanks! Bye!"

* * *

>"See!? There I am! Left back while my friendâ€" "

Twilight hit Starlight with a stunner mid sentence, then leaned in the window to mini-Starlight. "Don't just sit there! Go to him!" She called quickly. "He'll probably be going to a special magic school! Go make sure he won't feel alone while he's away!"

Mini-Starlight's eyes widened in shock, and she quickly darted out the door, never noticing as her own mark appeared, representing friendship, and how something meaningless, like a moment of inaction, not working to keep it, could threaten it, making it all the more beautiful and precious in the first place.

This, in turn, got her sent to school right alongside her friend.

The Starlight next to Twilight on the ground faded away.

* * *

>"â€"and then everything was fine when I got back, but things went to hell a week later because I didn't make her my student, so she wasn't here!" Twilight ranted to Berry as she downed yet another drink, levitating the glass to the top of a pyramid she was building with her tale of frustration. "A-and when I tried to fix that, She became Celestia's student instead of Sunset, and the Sirens returned! And after that, SHE wound up princess instead of me, and Tirek took over! And then the changelings brainwashed Sombra and took over the Crystal Empire! And then Sombra possessed Flam! And then Discord attacked Saddle Arabia instead of Canterlot and Ponyville! And then there were the yaks, and the bugbear, and Trixie, all at once! And then... t-then..." she sniffed, her lip trembling as she fought to hold her emotions back, before giving it up as a lost cause.

"I BUCKING HATE TIME TRAVEL!" she broke down sobbing, using her magic to yank Berry into a bone crushing hug and crying on her shoulder.

Berry sighed and patted Twilight on the back. "There there. We can always find an answer once you calm down. Maybe we should talk about this another loop? One where you AREN'T a weepy drunk?"

* * *

>169.12 (Masterweaver)

"...Why'd ya use a venn diagram in this slide?"

Twilight blinked. "What?"

Apple Bloom pointed. "Here. You've got me and the other Crusaders in a three-part venn diagram. And... Okay, Ah get the shield in the center, but why am Ah sharin' mah appleheart with Scoots? And Sweetie's starsong with Sweetie â€" hang on, is mah circle the dark purple one? That's Scootaloo's mane color, Ah should be the red one!"

"I... it was an easy graphic, and I was half tired," Twilight admitted. "I didn't really think about the venn diagram part... how would you have done it?"

"Shield as the backdrop, each o' us in the center o' the column with our mane color, with the outer emblem below and the inner emblem above."

"...huh. Okay, I'll update it..."

* * *

>169.13 (Masterweaver)

"Octavia, I have something really important I have toâ€"

"SWEET CELESTIA, YOU CAN _TALK?!_"

Vinyl rolled her eyes. "Yes. Yes I can. Now stop pressing yourself against the wall so I canâ€"

"You can _talk._ You _can_ talk. I... I have to reassess my entire world view." Octavia slid down the wall, her hooves pressed against her forehead.

"There's actually something else that's really important. You seeâ€"

"Why have I never heard you talk before?!" the cellist demanded. "I mean, we've been roommates forâ€" we've been dating for years, Vinyl!"

"That's because I couldn't talk before," Vinyl explained patiently. "But nowâ€"

"What?! Did you have, have some sort of corrective surgery without me knowing?! Vinyl, that could have been dangerousâ€"!"

"This book will explain everything." Vinyl produced the journal from thin air, putting it on the table.

"Did you cast a spell on yourselfâ€"?"

"Yes."

"Vinyl, self casting canâ€™"

"Have horrible side effects."

"Can you not act so casual aboutâ€™"

"I knew what I was doing, Tavi. Look." She pushed the book forward. "Do you want to read the explanation yourself, or do you want me to explain it? Because if you keep acting hysterical, I'll leave you to it."

Octavia just stared at her.

"...I... I'm still trying to get over the idea of you, um... talking."

"Take your time."

* * *

>169.14 (Kris Overstreet)

"There's one magic you can never take away, Tirek!" Twilight Sparkle said for the umpty-hundredth-thousandth-whateverth time. "And that's the most powerful magic of all! The magic of friâ€™"

The glow of Rainbow Power flickered out as Twilight Sparkle fell to the ground, having been struck unconscious by a suspicious-looking forked stick.

"Twilight Sparkle has fallen!"

The other five Elements spun around in midair to look at the unicorn hovering in the air behind them. She kind of looked like a certain equality-obsessed pony... except, instead of shades of blue, this one was white with a red and white streaked mane. Behind the newcomer, something wooden clattered to the earth below.

"But fear not! I, Starscream Glimmer, shall be your new leader! Ponies of Friendship, _follow me to victory!_"_

Applejack muttered to Rarity, "D'ya think she's Awake? He. Whatever. You know?"

Rarity glanced over at a glaring Tirek, and down to the ground where Twilight Sparkle was rubbing her head with one hoof and looking up with blood in her eyes. "He'll be sound asleep in a few minutes, darling," she muttered in reply, "one way or the other."

* * *

>169.15: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight looked at her friends as they stood around the Chest of Harmony. "Together! We have to do this together!"

"Mm-hmm!" Six hooves reached out, and together turned the keys.

Six locks clicked.

Six panels opened.

And with a flash of light, something unexpected happened.

"Hi, everypony! You wouldn't believe what I've been up to!" A familiar wall-eyed pegasus popped her head out of the chest. "What have you been doing?"

Twilight blinked. "Derpy? What - what are you doing in there?"

Derpy shrugged. "Long story." Looking upward, her eyes narrowed. "Now, if you'll excuse me..." Her wings flaring, she launched out of the chest, and towards Tirek, who was still wreaking havoc.

Twilight looked at the others, who were staring after Derpy, their eyes wide. "Um, girls? I think we might want to see this."

There was a round of nods, before six ponies, one dragon and a draconequus ran for the exit.

Back outside, as Tirek unleashed another fiery blast from his jaws, he caught movement out of the corner of his eye. "Hmm... looks like another pony's still out there. Well, it won't get me much magic, but I'll still take it!" He turned, and stared.

A now giant Derpy stood before him. "HI TIREK!"

"No... it can't be... it can't! I - you - AHHHHHHHHHH!" The gigantic centaur promptly turned around and made tracks for Tartarus, screaming all the way.

Derpy blinked Awake at that moment, just in time to see the centaur-made trail of dust passing over a hill. "What did I say?"

Then, the Loop Memories hit. "Oh."

Meanwhile, in Tartarus, three Alicorn Princesses were sitting where Tirek had chained them. Then, Luna's ear quirked. "Sister, do you hear... screaming?"

There was a loud rush of wind, and a familiar "AHHHHHHHHHH!" as Tirek ran past them.

Then, he paused. "Here, have your magic back, and get out of here! Just keep her away from me!" Tossing several orbs of magic their way, he ran off, still screaming.

Celestia blinked as she reabsorbed her stolen magic, and levitated several more of the orbs. "I knew Twilight was good, but even I didn't think she could scare Tirek that badly."

Taking wing, she led the other two Alicorns out of Tartarus, and back towards Ponyville.

Several hours later, with explanations made and all of the stolen magic returned, the group was sitting in the newly-formed castle, where Derpy, having shrunk back down to her normal size, was cuddling her daughter. "So that's how you got in that box?" Twilight asked.

Derpy nodded. "And when I got out of it and saw Tirek again, I used one of my alternate Cutie Mark talents to blow myself up like a balloon and scared him off!" She giggled. "Guess he remembers me from the first time I helped send him to Tartarus."

Twilight nodded. "That would make sense." She paused, and gestured to the circle of thrones, including one with a familiar set of seven bubbles on its back, and a smaller throne next to it. "So, do you and Dinky want to join us?"

Dinky, her eyes wide, looked up at Derpy. "Can we, momma?"

"Of course, muffin," Derpy told her with a smile.

* * *

>169.16: (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight Sparkle was a mare with a plan.

In the past, she'd used several different ways of handling Starlight Glimmer and her village. Now, she had a new tactic she wanted to try out, and while the basic strategy had proven effective before, she'd never tried this particular variation.

Shaking her head before she got too lost in her thoughts, she turned to watch the villagers and Starlight, so she didn't miss her cue. _Ah, here we go! just in time._

Starlight Glimmer's face was bright red as she ranted. "_I_ brought you friendship! _I_ brought you equality! _I_ created harmony!"_

Twilight raised a hoof. "_I_ brought a hug-happy draconequus."

Starlight barely had time to blink in bewilderment before Discord popped out of nowhere and glomped her.

Watching the baffled unicorn as she hung in Discord's arms, too surprised to move, Twilight smirked. _If you can't reason with them, confuse them._

* * *

>169.17: (The One Butcher)

"Hello, I am Twilight Sparkle. I'm a completely normal Pony. And I came here to check on the food for the Summer Sun Celebration."

If Applejack thought the brightly smiling Pony in front of her seemed a tad strange, that was only corroborated when upon sampling her family cooking she exclaimed: "That food tastes great! Because I am a Pony and those eat food!"

Applejack was suspicious, but she still seemed nice enough when she smiled warmly at her. "Your Apples are grown with so much love and all that food is brim full of it, it feels just..." She trailed off in horror. "I mean I can see that! Somehow! You know, because it's so good, it has to have been made with... with... care, yes, I mean care! I'm a Pony, after all and Ponies cannot feel the love that went into stuff! Anyway it was really nice meeting you, but I really must tend to the rest of my chores. You know how we Ponies are, always busy building and making and tending to stuff!" With that she was off.

_Darn,_ thought Applejack _that was one suspicious..._

â€|

Well, probably not a Pony.

* * *

>A cheery shout greeted Rainbow Dash just as she prepared herself for her Routine.

"Hello fellow Pony! With Wings! That would be a...", the purple mare looked at a sheet of paper for a second, "Pegasus! Anyway Hivequeen... â€" I mean Princess Celestia told me to make sure you cleared the clouds. I cannot go up there and do it myself, because I'm a Pony and not a Changeling- Er I mean I'm a unicorn and not a pegasus!"

"What's a Changeling?" asked Rainbow, only to have the mare go into overdrive.

"WHAT? I'm not a Changeling! I'm a Pony! I... I mean a Changeling? Where? I don't see any Changelings! Only completely normal Ponies wherever you look!", she said with a panicked rictus.

Rainbow raised an eyebrow. "Sure... you're a normal Pony." she stated in a deadpan voice.

She didn't expect the Changeling to visibly relax and let out a huge sigh of relief. "That's good. I mean, yes. I am a completely normal Pony. Anyway, the clouds! I cannot help you because Unicorns, that's what I am, a Pony with one horn, cannot fly. Unlike what you are, a..."

"Pegasus.", Rainbow helped the completely normal Pony.

"Unlike a Pegasus!" She said brightly. She then turned away a little and wondered: "What do gaseous pegs have to do with wings?"

"Yeah, anyway the clouds are no problem, I'll do them later."

The Changeling visibly deflated. "But I have to have seen the clear skies to make a check on my checklist. I still have to check a ton of other stuff... Oh, this will take much too long and then I'll make Miss Fluttershy wait and I can't keep that Promise I made to that really cool Pink Pony."

"Fluttershy? A Pinkie Promise? Don't worry! I'll clear those skies in ten seconds flat!" And boy did she do that. The Changeling was staring at her slack jawed.

"You... you're that filly who made the sky explode! When I was in Cloudsdale that one time I saw that huge wave of Magic that _shattered_ reality and substituted its own! Uh... I mean I... I heard there was that huge awesome explosion in Cloudsdale! I wasn't there before today, because, you know I am a Unicorn and not a Chan... Not a Pegasus. Anyway, see you at the Celebration, I gotta run!"

Rainbow Dash watched the Changeling run away. Her razor wit made several deductions: _Changelings look like Ponies. Changelings pretend to be Ponies. Changelings aren't Ponies. If that was a Changeling and I haven't ever heard of them they probably blend in pretty well. Changeling... Change... She's a Shapeshifter! Also that mare is Fail on four legs... If there's a conspiracy of Shapeshifters... Then she's the weak link! And a fan..._

_I better watch out for her. Even if she's not dangerous, I might need to protect her from herself._

* * *

>"Thank you Rarity!" The strange Unicorn that came to her with a slightly mussed up mane said, "I am after all a normal Pony. I can't just, Poof, make myself look nice again like a Changeling. So your help was very appreciated. And you put so much love in your work, it's just deli... I mean it's very friendly of you."

* * *

>"Very good my friends! If you sing like that tomorrow Princess Celestia is sure to love it. That's all for today then, see you tomorrow." While most of the flock arced over her, one of the birds landed on her nose.

"Yes Mr. Piperson? You don't trust the Royal Inspector? What inspector?" The bird pointed behind her. When she turned she saw a purple unicorn conversing softly with the other birds.

"Oh." On the one hand that was a strange pony, on the other hand it was one that could talk to animals, just like her!

"That's a Royal Inspector? Oh, my, did she like the song? But... why don't you trust her?" The bird squeaked and flapped his wings and then looked shiftily from side to side and put his wings in front of his face.

"It's not a Pony at all, but some kind of Monster posing as one?" Well. If it was some kind of animal... Now that she thought about it it didn't seem threatening to her at all and it's body language reminded her more of a dog than a Pony. A cuddly dog that had eaten a lot. Oh my, a whole new species! But wait, if it was some kind of Shapeshifting predator and it turned into a Pony that meant it ate Ponies!

"Hey! Who are you?" Fluttershy rushed to the strange animal. If she didn't think of it as a Pony she could do this!

"Hello! I am Twilight Sparkle! I am a completely normal Pony and I have come here to oversee the Summer Sun Celebration! Hivequeen Celestia send me here, to make use of my Unique talents to..." The being froze.

"Er, I mean, my Special Talent, you know, these Magical Pony thingies! Which I have, because I'm not a Changeling! Which is uh...", the monster checked it's flank with a puzzled expression, "Uh... Magic? Anyway, Celestia send me and I have already met two of your friends, who fed me and... I mean... Applejack fed me, because I eat food and not love! I am a Pony you know!"

Fluttershy nearly couldn't hold herself back... It was _sooooo cute_! "Oh yes!" She said. "You are a real Pony, completely normal!"

The Changeling smiled. "YES!", then it looked embarrassed, "I mean, yes, of course."

It was just precious. On the other hoof, if it fed on love, that is probably intentional, just like how flowers smell nice.

"Anyway, I just checked in with your birds and they say everything is ready for tomorrow."

One of the birds chirped at her. It had a deadpan expression. "They can't? But... I've seen her talk to you!" She looked at Fluttershy and asked with a pleading expression: "Ponies can talk to animals, can't they?"

Fluttershy looked at her apologetically. "Most can't, but some, like me get it as their special talent."

"Uh..." the Changeling looked panicked.

Fluttershy took pity on it. "Well, Miss Twilight, if your special talent is Magic you probably went and learned a Spell that lets you talk to animals and cast it before you came here, didn't you?"

"Oh! Yes that is clever! Yes, that is it! I used a Spell that makes me able to understand everyone! Thank you Fluttershy for the ideeeeeeinsight. Insight I mean. Anyway, I see you have the Music in hoof. Until later, at the Celebration! I need to find my lodgings." With that the Changeling started to trot off.

Fluttershy panicked. It was so young and inexperienced! What if the Ponies in town try to hurt it, because it's a monster! _I have to protect it!_ "Wait!"

* * *

>"Well why of course you can come in Fluttershy! I am a Pony after all and Ponies are very welcoming!" She turned towards the door and took a step back. "Ohh! Friendship!" she closed her eyes in bliss and trotted forward, slamming into the door.

"Oh! What a delicious Party!" she said after not being surprised at all, "Thank you Pinkie Pie! I mean, the food is Delicious! Because I am a Pony! And Ponies like delicious food. Yum Yum." She seemed to eye the cupcake in her hooves suspiciously, before analyzing it with her magic, "Mashed and heat treated dead plants? Er, I mean, my favorite!"

* * *

>"You are Luna, the other Princess of the Ponies which vanished one thousand years ago!" the strange Changeling without self preservation shouted at the Dark Alicorn. Fluttershy, Rainbow Dash and Applejack exchanged a glance, grabbed her and dragged her away. Rarity and Pinkie Pie followed.

* * *

>"Why did you do that?" the cornered Changeling asked defensively, "I'm not a Spy!"

Rainbow Dash couldn't let that go uncommented: "Well, yeah. We believe you. Nobody in their right mind would ever make YOU a spy."

"WHAT?" the creature exclaimed in sudden indignation, "I am a very skilled infilllllllll... I mean, yeah! I'm not a spy at all, just a Pony!" she laughed.

"Anyway," interrupted Applejack, "Yah said yah're friends with Celestia and Ah believe that is true. You knew who that evil Princess was and seem pretty knowledgeable in gen'ral. Maybe if'n we all knew more about her we could come up with a better plan of action than shoutin' at her."

Twilight blinked. "Well... She was said to have been defeated a thousand years ago. The legend doesn't properly describe how, but there's a Changeling legend of this powerful Superweapon of the Ponies, the reason why even the Dragons are afraid of you. They are... the Elements of Ponydom."

* * *

>"The Kindness of Ponies was represented by Fluttershy accepting all creatures as equal. The Loyalty of Ponies was represented by Rainbow Dash standing by her Friends in the face of all her desires being offered to her. The Laughter of Ponies was represented by Pinkie Pie banishing your evil illusions with her powerful feelings, while accepting mine because... I mean accepting my feelings of friendship! I don't use illusions!"

"But that's only five! The Spark didn't work!"

"They don't need a sixth Pony. Ponies get their Magic from within and don't have to collect it. But that doesn't mean they cannot use the power of their feelings. Just like they can share their power with a Changeling, they can give power to each other. The last Element is shared by them all. It is their Friendship. Friendship brings forth the last and sixth Element. The last and most powerful of the Elements of Ponykind: Pony Magic!"

With that a bright light shone forth from over her head, coalescing into the Tiara of Magical annihilation and Mind-Hugs. Nightmare Moon was blasted like always, but Twilight made sure to use less power than the first time and compensate with fine control. So no one was unconscious this time.

"I... I don't understand..." Twilight said with water from a small bottle she put in her pocket in her eyes. "The legends all say the Elements cannot be used by Monsters. When other Changelings or even Draconequi tried to take them it didn't work. Only a true friend can handle them." She looked around at the others, who looked at her with sympathetic tears of their own. Maybe she laid it on a bit too thick?

"Twilight," Fluttershy spoke for the others, "No matter who or what you are. No matter what happens, I am a hundred per cent sure that you are not a Monster."

"Yeah." "Yup." "Absolute Telutely!" "Indeed, darling."

They all joined in a group hug. There was a moment of contented silence.

"Yeah," Twilight finally said, "I'm a Pony after all!"

* * *

>"Yes, Princess Celestia. It's... It's a shame I cannot stay in Equehhh... I mean I cannot stay in Ponyville with my new friends..." Twilight looked to her new friends really sadly and their hearts went out to her. Who cares if she is strange or a Changer or anything, she's a good filly at heart.

Princess Celestia was already ahead of them.

"Raven, take a note please! I, Princess Celestia, decree, that the Unicorn Twilight Sparkle, shall take on a new mission for Equestria. She must continue to study the Magic of Friendship. She must report to me her findings, from her new home in Ponyville!"

Everypony cheered at that announcement. With a Royal decree stating it their new friend was a Unicorn before the Law, she could thus stay in Equestria forever and to them that was all that mattered.

"Oh thank you Princess Celestia! I'll be a good citizen! And I'll study the Magic of Friendship harder than ever before!"

* * *

>"Spike! You are in Equestria!"

"Sparkle! Nice fur! So glad to see you! And you look so healthy and well fed! Did you finally get a coltfriend?"

"Oh, you... This is Spike, one of my very first friends. I met him out in the lone plains of... of Canterlot! Anyway he really helped me out when I was hungry, because he came to love me like a sister and... I mean he was making sure I eat properly when studying late nights! He... helped me as my assistant in the Library of Canterlot! With shelving books and writing letters and stuff." Twilight said nervously.

The four Ponies (and one shivering fothergilla, complete with pink tail) looked at the forty foot Draconic Library assistant, who shrugged. Then back to Twilight Sparkle, the completely normal Pony and not a Changeling. They just nodded in unison.

"Anyway: This is Prince Spykoranuvellitar of Equestria, adopted son of Princess Celestia, you should listen to her talk about him! It's absolutely hilarious, because she can't get over how quickly he grew up! And Spike's not even a Changeling, who grow to adulthood in a few weeks, he's a Dragon and so he's centuries old and she still calls him a Baby! No wonder Celestia never had Pony children."

Spike lowered himself down to Twilight's level and said: "Ha. Ha. I see you still haven't learned when to stay quiet about anything. Revealing that was highly rude."

"Oh... I... shouldn't have said that about Celestia, you really love her. Uh... Anyway, these are my friends! Applejack is an Earth Pony and the Element of Honesty. But," she whispered, loudly enough for everypony to hear, "Celestia gave me a Royal Decree stating that I'm legally a Unicorn. Therefore she can't find out my secret when I tell her that I'm not a Changeling."

Spike rolled his eyes and whispered back loudly: "That is good. I was almost worried someone would find out." He winked at Twilight, who winked back really obviously.

"Next we have Pinkie Pie, the Element of Laughter who uses her power to make everyone laugh which strengthens her powers which helps her making ponies laugh and so on in a positive feedback loop. By now physics are just gentle suggestions to her and she can look into the future. Rainbow Dash is the Element of Loyalty. When she defends her friends she too can break the laws of physics, but with her Iced Fig Newton's laws of motion shatter in a giant Explosion of Rainbow colored light."

Rainbow digested that information. _Oh. So that's why I never managed a second Rainboom._ She took a glance at the fothergilla. _I defended Fluttershy's honor back then._

* * *

>"Oh, ein Greif. Ich hab schon lange keinen Greif mehr gesehen! Mein Name ist Twilight Sparkle! Ich bin ein Pony und kein Wechselbalg!" Twilight spoke in unaccented east Griffish.

Gilda raised an eyebrow. "Bist du dir sicher, das du ohne deine Mama hier sein darfst?"

* * *

>"Excuse me Miss Trixie," Twilight interrupted before Rarity took the stage, "but a PONY wouldn't brag that much." Twilight's friends made abortive gestures. "Are you sure you are a real Pony? Ponies are kind and nice and honest and loyal and they take you in, even if you are a... a completely normal Pony and not a Changeling at all!"

Trixie took the bait like it was made of the MMMM. "Well. That is suspicious as heck! I think we have a Changeling Spy in our midst! Seize her!"

"HAHA!" Countered the unicorn, "I have here a Royal Decree by Princess Celestia herself, stating that I am legally a Unicorn living in Ponyville! And as such only the crown or a certified fire or health inspector can throw me out of Ponyville!"

Twilight's knowledge came in handy here, because absolutely paradoxically: "Double Haha! I have actually a certificate of qualification as a fire safety inspector! I needed it for my fireworks!" There happened to be a clinically insane examiner for the Bureau of Magical and Fire safety. (Or not, baseline Trixie had some restraint.)

"Just one apple bucking minute," Applejack cut in. "Everyone here knows what Twilight is and we love her anyway."

Rarity came forth next: "And Princess Celestia herself has really given her a special dispensation to live in Ponyville. If you throw her out she'll probably revoke your certificate. My, to think, being known as the Pony who went against the express wishes of Princess Celestia over petty racism would surely do wonders for your career."

Finally Rainbow chimed in: "Not to forget that the Princess of the Night and an Elder Dragon both have a personal interest in this mare's wellbeing and happiness and will probably messily kill whoever harms a hair on her head."

With her friends readily coming to her defense and shutting the show off down hard they didn't need to step on stage to be humiliated. After the Ursa attacked and Twilight put it back to bed like the unruly foal it was the "Fail on four legs." was met with disbelieving stares: "What? It's not that hard to tame one little bear if you are a well fed... Pony with so many friends who love you." Twilight's friends saw the "cute little fella" in a new light and began to understand what it meant to overfeed a Changeling.

* * *

>"Yeah" Twilight said with a half choked sob. "I mean, this is Ponyville... We... We are all ponies here. We don't... we don't want any Zebras or... or Changelings in this town, do we?" Twilight was a mess. Snot dripping from her sniveling nose, tears running down her face, her eyes red. A Changeling's shapeshifting, it seemed, transplanted their emotions right on their face. That might explain why the book had said that most Changelings tend to train themselves to be emotionless.

All her friends looked at Twilight with horrified realization and began to talk over each other.

"What, no! It's not because she's not a Pony! It's because she lives in a spooky forest infested with Mons..." Fluttershy began.

Only to be cut off by Rainbow's hoof in her mouth: "We mean the Everfree is dangerous and weird and," hoof meet mouth.

"We mean it's dangerous in there, why would yah live there unless yah git something ta hideâ€" this dainty white hoof was covered in a blue hoofkerchief, but it did the job valiantly.

"Not that there's anything wrong with that, everyone has their secrets anâ€"mpf." Pinkie wanted in on the fun even though Rarity hadn't said anything tactless.

"Ah! They must be evil bad secrets, not harmless normal ones, like if you are a Pony or not!" Pinkie finished and snatched Fluttershy's hoof with her mouth to complete the circle, grinning around the yellow appendage.

"The Everfree Forest is also full of the kinds of magical plants which Zebra healers need." Twilight said miserably. "She's probably just a doctor."

The others looked at each other. Then let out a collective sigh, muffled by the hooves in their mouths. "C'm'n g'ls!" Applejack broke the hoofie chain with a "ptooey", much to Rarity's dismay.

"C'mon gals! We faced off against Nightmare Moon and our not-a-Changeling's well fed enough to take on an Ursa Miner. We'll go talk to her."

* * *

>"Look, I've found a spell to give a Pony Wings!" Twilight told her friends before the best Young Fliers' competition. "Now I have an excuse, I mean, now I have a way to have wings again! For the first time!"

* * *

>Something was strange... Where was Photo Finish? It was about the right time for her to show up. Twilight looked around Ponyville for the mare and finally found Rarity and Fluttershy discussing Fluttershy's modeling career. "No, really... it's... wonderful." Fluttershy lied.

_Ah, I get it._ Nobody wants to tell her any secrets. Well, that meant she didn't have to promise anything!

"But Fluttershy, how can that be true? I can't feel anything you like about it." Fluttershy jumped at Twilight's presence and made abortive gestures.

"Ah!", she leaned over and whispered loudly, "You just do it to spare Rarity's feelings." It wasn't often that Fluttershy facehoofed, but when she did, it was because of Twilight Sparkle the absolutely normal Pony. Who leaned over to Rarity. "And you can't tell Fluttershy that you don't like her modeling for the Pony which betrayed you, because you think she must like modeling."

Twilight leaned back and sat on her haunches. "Ponies are really weird in how they can talk to each other without really saying what they mean."

"Betrayed?" Fluttershy asked confused.

"Well, Rarity wanted her to photograph her creations, but Finish, who doesn't like fashion, only modeling and presentation, absconded with her exclusive model and made her her own. Now, Rarity is angry at Finish, but can't say anything because she doesn't want to ruin _your_ chance to make it big. Ponies however cannot really conceive how other Ponies think and can only haphazardly model other's feelings. Therefore she never realized, that making it big is the last thing you want and that you would actually love to help her pay back Photo Finish for the backstabbing." Twilight lectured. "I am actually considering a thesis on comparative psychology and group dynamics in non-empathic magical species. It's really interesting how Ponies just assume other minds work like their own. Especially considering their Special Talents giving each Pony unique mental structures. I mean nobody ever realized how Rainbow's special talent established a direct link between her senses and her memories while using it, to give her perfect memory and situational awareness while in flight."

* * *

>"Pssst Discord, let me tell you my plan."

* * *

>"Ha, a Changeling could never successfully wield the Elements against me!" exclaimed the Lord of Chaos, "She's not really your friend. Your friend would be honest, wouldn't she? She just wants you to feed her," he said with a sinister expression.

"So what?" called Applejack, "The rest of Ponyville wants me to feed them too! It's my Cutie Mark even! And about Honesty? Twilight couldn't tell a lie to save her life, I've seen that with my own eyes more times than I can imagine. Literally! We had to cover for her! But apart from that she's the best friend anypony, no, anyone could hope for."

With that Twilight released another pulse normalizing Discord's latest target.

"ARGH!" the Draconequus Twilight reformed with a twenty minute presentation as soon as he came out of the statue screamed at the harmless light, "You damned Ponies haven't seen the last of me. And without a proper Element of Pony's Magic to defeat me I can try again and again!"

And so Discord did his temptations and attacks again and again until the Elements managed to corner him one last time, with a plan to banish him from this dimension once and for all (he agreed to retire to a certain island for the four years Twilight's prank would take).

It was Fluttershy's turn for the rousing speech: "Twilight might be a Changeling..." "I'M NOT!" "She might have been born a Changeling," "Lies! Slander!" "But she is our friend and if she wants to she can be a Pony. In fact, she is so Funny, Kind, Loyal, Generous and Magical, she is the Greatest Pony there is!" "Don't forget Honest!"

"Yeah," Rainbow rolled her eyes, "Honest..."

With that the Elements fully activated and the swirling Rainbow of light took hold of Discord and pushed him into the portal. His final curse echoing throughout the landscape: "DAMN YOU PONIES! YOU MIGHT HAVE CHASED ME OFF, BUT CHANGELINGS NEVER GET OLDER THAN FOUR HUNDRED YEARS! AND THEN I WILL BE BAAAAAaaaaack!"

* * *

>Twilight looked at the Cakes strangely. It was Twilight's birthday and they and Pinkie Pie had just delivered a ginormous cake. "Wait a minute." She told her friends. "You told me the Cakes were expecting a foal! But if the Cakes are here and Pinkie Pie is here and nearly everyone in Ponyville is here at this Party too: Who's watching the Egg? What if it dries out, or gets too hot or too cold!" Twilight nearly seemed to panic. Her friends looked at her funny again. Then Fluttershy had an epiphany.

"Don't worry Twilight. The Foal is completely safe. Ponies are Mammals."

"Oh, yes, I knew that. Mammals. Could you wait just a minute while I go powder my nose?" With that she went to the other side of the room and hid behind the couch... For certain values of hid, if you counted her tail and her ears sticking out. A few books floated from a shelf right next to them and also vanished behind the couch.

"Melanism, Mendelian, Malpighian, malignant... Ah, Mammal. Mumble mumble." The ears vanished.

There was a pause.

Then there was a loud exclamation:"EEWWWWW!"

* * *

>"Shining Armor is getting married? Oh! He's that Royal Guard whose family helped me come to Equestria! He's like a brother to me." Twilight looked at them in horror. "Oh wait, he... he... IS my brother! His family helped me come to Equestria, because they are, like totally my parents! So they brought me into this world and so brought me into Equestria! Clever, huh? I mean, that's totally the truth."

* * *

>"Where is little Spike?" Celestia asked the assembled mares, only to receive a snort from Rainbow Dash, "I wanted to put him in charge of the Bachelor Party. As Shining Armor is the Captain of the Royal Guard it would get out of hoof otherwise."

"He's napping." Twilight answered.

"Ah, okay, it's just been a while since I've seen him, but as a baby dragon it's important he gets his sleep." She was a little disappointed that the Element of Loyalty was snickering at Spike. But then again...

"Ah, I understand. The little guy is in that phase where he tries too hard to act grown up, isn't he?" she smiled knowingly at the Elements, causing them all to start snickering, even Rarity not managing to hide an unladylike snort.

* * *

>"Everyone!" Twilight's eyes shifted from left to right. They had never seen her so nervous or flustered before. "There's something I have to tell you! There's..." she hesitated, "a Magical race of beings... They can shapeshift to look like anyone they want and there could be one of them hiding everywhere as anyone and you wouldn't notice! They sometimes kidnap and replace a Pony and feed on the love other Ponies have for them and if they feed on true love, they can become stronger than even Celestia. These Mystical Beings are called..."

"Changelings," Rainbow Dash preempted her, "We know. It's the kind of thing you are not. Geez..."

"How do you know?" Twilight Sparkle asked confusedly.

"Oh, you might have let that name slip once..." Rainbow drawled, "...a minute. For the last two years. And we kind of read up on them, just in case they were allergic to something or had some kind of weakness we had to pay attention to and avoid."

"Uh..." asked the purple being nervously, "why would you want to avoid Changeling weaknesses?"

"No reason."

"Anyway," the Most Definitely a Pony continued with a relieved expression, "there's a few ways to tell if someone is a Changeling. For once a Changeling will always be able to notice another Changeling and communicate with them silently. And there are some other ways, which I can't remember off the top of my head... I mean which I used to cleverly deduce that the bride has been abducted and replaced with a Changeling!"

Applejack turned to her friends and shrugged: "Well... I guess she's the expert."

* * *

>"Haha! That spell has evicted all Changelings from Canterlot!"

"You mean all enemy Changelings, Twilight," Rainbow snarked.

Shining Armor was confused by this: "Huh? Why? Were there any friendly Changelings? If so, I'm sorry, but that spell was indiscriminate, to give it a friend or foe recognition... well, it's not impossible, but that would have probably chucked out Blueblood too."

"Huh?", said Rainbow, "You're kidding. You're kidding, right?"

Celestia stepped up to the trio. "No, if you had any friends among the Changelings, I'm sorry; that Spell worked specifically against all Changelings."

...

...

"What?"

...

...

"Why are you looking at me like that? I've been telling you I wasn't a Changeling from day one."

* * *

>The morning before the one thousandth Summer Sun Celebration had Applejack get in some last minute bucking when Applejack noticed a pony standing next to her. She stood ramrod straight, almost as if she was standing at attention. "Good. Morning. Are. You. The. Pony. With. Personal. Designation. Applejack. Apple? I. Am. The. Pony. Situated. Completely. Within. One. Standard. Deviation. Of. The. Expected Value. Of. An. Equestrian's. Ponydom. With. Item. Designation. Twilight. Sparkle. And. Not. An. Aperture. Science. Hydraulorobotic. Pony. Device."

* * *

>Author's Note:

169.1: Some expansions suck. And now more than Twilight's mane can catch fire when she's annoyed.

169.2: Saps.

169.3: When Lyra has a personality conflict, it's resolved by debate.

169.5: Honestly not much different to normal.

169.6: "Drablands". Ouch.

169.8: Some things you need to get off your chest.

169.9: And sometimes you just point Trixie at it and dive for cover.

169.10: It's hard to tell if this is passive-aggressive or aggressively passive.

169.11: Oh dear.

169.14: Curse your sudden but inevitable betrayal.

169.17: She is completely honest.

177. Chapter 177

170.1 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Princess?" Twilight looked up at her mentor, with a sidelong glance at Luna. "I have a question about you two."

"What is it, my dear student?" Celestia smile was soft and motherly, like always.

"Well, I know for a fact that you raise and lower our sun, Princess Celestia, and Princess Luna raises and sets the moon and creates the night sky," Twilight said slowly, with both princesses nodding their heads. "So why is Luna considered the _weaker_ princess?"

Celestia blinked in confusion, sharing the same look on her sister's face. "Please Twilight, can you explain what you mean by that?"

"Well," Twilight traced her hoof in a small circle. "Princess Luna moves _thousands_ of stars every night to create amazing masterpieces as well as the moon itself, and you Princess Celestia just move _one_ star every day. So why is Princess Luna is considered the weaker of you two?"

"Well, you see Twilight," Celestia was really off balance, eyes darting around as she tried to come up with an explanation that didn't amount to being born first. "It's like this..."

(Hvulpes)

Celestia decided on the truth, "Magic wise and battle wise, Luna is stronger. But I have a greater power, stronger the those powers!"

"What power?" asked the curious lavender pony.

"Political powers. Luna can't handle one government meeting without falling asleep, getting bored or frustrated. Meetings like what goes into Equestria's text books on subjects. Subjects like who the more powerful Alicorn Princess is."

"Wait! You manipulated the text books in your favour?"

"Political Powers!" was the answer.

("Masterweaver)

"So..." Twilight suggested, "In theory, if a pony were to amass more political power then you, they'd be considered more powerful?"

"Well, yes, but not a more powerful alicorn. It's a little thing, I'll admitâ€" "

"I see." The purple unicorn beamed innocently. "Well, I'm not headed back to ponyville for a couple of days. Did you see the new treatise about..."

* * *

>Two weeks later, the former mayor of Ponyville was crowned the most powerful alicorn of all time.

* * *

>170.2 (Rowan Ex)

Sometimes being a changeling queen was something worthy of pranks.

Like the time Twilight and Chrysalis, both Awake, were sisters with their own hives and Twilight was bored out of her head while her changelings did their routines. She had just finished rereading Hub fanfics about changelings until she remembered a particular comment from one of them.

For those also bored, listen up, Twilight began. We're going to prank Ponyville.

Sure, that Loop was also a Mikasa Glitched Loop, but wouldn't it be nice to have something for fun and pictures (which Chrysalis unusually found she had an interest for this Loop).

* * *

>Ponyville was having a quiet day until its inhabitants noticed something on their library. One of them, the partiest partylicious party-liking party pony, opened the doors only to run off towards the Everfree Forest to check on the Mirror Pool.

_'The Pool isn't open!_' she realized. _'What's going on!?'_

Back in a secret place near Ponyville, Twilight and Chrysalis were staring at the mess they had made and laughing. It was amazing how ponies could forget that Twilight was a changeling this Loop. Watching the ponies react to 40 unicorn Twilights chanting "Books!" was hilarious.

"You know Twilight," Chrysalis said amongst the unfurling chaos. "This sure looks fun."

"Have you seen Pinkie's face, though?" Twilight asked. "I mean, she knew the mirror pool cave had been closed."

"Yeah, I saw that." Chrysalis looked at Princess Celestia, Awake, as she arrived on the area only to leave with an amused smile. "Let's do this again sometime."

* * *

>170.3 (continuation of 169.17) (Masterweaver)

"...Yeah, no." Applejack frowned. "Sugarcube, you're our friend and all, but there's no way you're not a changeling."

"Wait, what?" Shining Armor held up a hoof. "What are you going on about?"

"Look, mister Armor, it's alright, you don't have to protect her." Rarity wrapped a foreleg around Twilight's neck. "We've known from the first day she was in Ponyville. No offense, Twilight darling, but... you are actually very bad at hiding it."

Twilight blinked. "Er... but... I actually am a pony."

"Shhh." Fluttershy nuzzled her gently. "It's okay. We accept you as both pony and changeling. There's no need to be scared anymore."

Celestia and Shining Armor shared a confused look.

"Uh, I don't know what you mares are talking about," the stallion finally managed, "but we actually do have Twilight Sparkle's birth certificate. And other paperwork."

Pinkie giggled. "Of course you do, silly! Cadence was Twilight's '_foalsitter_', right? Us pink poniesâ€" She paused, glanced around, then gave a nervous smile. "Er... us pink ponies all know how to forge paperwork."

Celestia stared. "WHAT."

"Yeah, pink is kinda negative green, and that can lead to certain legal problems... I'm pinker than most, so I'm more talented at it, but a pink princess would probably have access to higher levels of bureaucracyâ€" "

"That's ridiculous!" Cadence cried. "I mean, I love Twilight and all, but do you really think I'd have the time to forge all those documents?"

Shining's eye twitched. Twilight had to repress a giggle.

Rainbow groaned. "Look, the point is, we know Twilight's a Changeling, and we're okay with it because we know she's not evil. To us, she's just another pony... with some, ah, unique needs. And we know that you, as her adopted big brother, want to keep her safe, but you don't have to hide it anymore. We're all totally fine with Twilight being a changeling."

"But..." Shining shook his head. "But she's not!"

Twilight nodded in agreement, although her lips kept twitching upward. "I really am not a changeling, girls."

"Of course not," Fluttershy cooed. "You're an ordinary pony."

"No, seriously, I'm not."

Rarity sighed. "Please, Twilight. I know you're worried, but do you really believe that we wouldn't notice how odd you acted?"

"You mares must be very confused," Cadence managed. "Look, maybe... maybe the changeling swarm's hive mind managed to interfere with your memories when you became Chrysalis's bridesmaids somehow?"

There was a moment of silence.

Then Applejack snorted. "That's way more ridiculous than her being a changeling."

* * *

>170.4 (Vinylshadow)

Twilight looked up at the fuming Yak Prince who had just declared war on Equestria and sighed.

Reaching into her saddlebag, the Princess of Friendship pulled out a black scroll tied with a red ribbon.

"Spike? Send this to Princess Celestia please."

The dragon reluctantly took the scroll and blew on it, sending it swirling towards Canterlot.

"What did pony do?" Rutherford demanded, stomping a hoof. Twilight adjusted her mane and took a step to the right, moving out of the way of the line of fire.

"Just sending a message," she said.

The ground shook and everyone turned to look at Canterlot. The entire top of the mountain slowly opened and a large crystalline cannon slowly rose out of it. It rotated on its pedestal and aimed at Ponyville.

"Girls, duck," Twilight said. Her friends dropped flat, hooves over their heads as the cannon went off with a massive _**BOOM**_.

A streak of dark blue slammed into the Yak Prince, sending him bowling into his companions and sent all three flying in the vague direction of the San Palomino Desert.

Applejack got to her hooves and stared at Twilight. "Mind explaining what just happened?"

Twilight smiled and went over to where the Yak Prince had stood and helped a woozy Luna to her hooves. "I just took a leaf from Celestia's way of fighting wars. Throw your sister at it."

Luna rolled her neck, sighing in bliss as she flexed her wings. "We'll have to have someone re-calibrate the cannon. We are not as small as we once were and it was a rather tight fit."

Rarity clucked her tongue and trotted up to the princess. "Well, that won't do at all, Princess. Shall we adjourn to the spa and get pampered like we deserve?"

"I don't think sending your problem blasting off means that it's gone," Spike grumbled.

He was ignored.

* * *

>170.5 (ORBSyndicate)

Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 4: Headhunters

The Mane 6 and Wendy were watching TV. On the screen was a duck in a Sherlock Holmes hat and a constable.

"I'm afraid your services won't be required here, sir." The constable said. "My men have examined the evidence, and this is obviously an accident."

Then the duck started quacking, with subtitles appearing to translate it from duck: "An accident, constable? Or is itâ€¦ Murder?!"

Fluttershy gasped, turning red. "That naughty duck!"

Applejack sighed. "He wasn't sayin' what it said he was sayin' was he?"

"Not at allâ€¦"

Wendy shrugged. "If you were a duck being forced to act on a sub-standard show, I'm sure you'd love to get away with as much as possible."

Rainbow Dash muttered something about "animal translation spells." Her nose was deep in Journal 3. Twilight was half reading over her shoulder.

Soos ran in. "DUDES! You'll never guess what I found!"

After various responses (ranging from "cute bunny" to "annoying dog" to "time machine.") Soos shook his head. "Nope! A SECRET ROOM!"

Everyone left the TV quickly, rushing into the secret room. Soos slowly opened the door, revealing a bunch of wax figurines.

Rarity blinked. "An old abandonedâ€¦ waxâ€¦ museum?"

"So lifelikeâ€¦" Twilight commented.

"Except that one." Rainbow Dash said, pointing to one that looked like Stan.

"HELLO!" Stan said, grinning like a madman. Everyone jumped. He never got tired of that. _Ever. _Though that one time he had cloned himself several times was even _more_ amusing.

"Behold, the Gravity Falls Wax Museum! Stuff. It was one of our most popular attractions. Before I forgot all about it. The first time anyway."

Wendy cocked her head. "First timeâ€¦?"

"Oh wake up." Stan said, gaining a confused look from Wendy and a chuckle from a few of the equestrians.

"Anyway, my personal favorite was Abraham Lincoln. Howeverâ€¦" Stan sighed, gesturing to a pile of wax goop. "He appearsâ€¦ melted. Like the sun wanted to wrestle his pointless life from himâ€¦"

Twilight blinked. "Wax statues aren't alive."

"Right, right of course." Stan said, waving his hand dismissively.

Pinkie grinned. "I WILL MAKE YOU A NEW WAX FIGURE!"

Stan groaned. He knew it'd be her. The wax figure day was always a hard one for him. But hey, he'd get through it. He always did.

He put on a smile. "You really think you can make one of these puppies?" He snorted.

"Grunkle Stan, I'm an arts and crafts and parties and chaos and pink and energy and power and magic and cotton candy and sugar and cake and sweets and dreams and happiness MASTER! Of course I can make one!"

Stan blinked, slowly taking all this in. Old loopers had an odd way of making him feel even older. It was a paradox.

"Uhâ€| sure. MAKE YER GRUNKLE PROUD!"

Stan was 90% sure he knew what the wax statue was going to be. As usual. But not before she shot a million ideas at a brick wall.

* * *

>Stan had not meant that literally when he had thought it, but in hindsightâ€|

"SHALL I MAKE A WAFFLE WITH ARMS?" Pinkie asked a magic 8 ball while blindfolded. She then tossed the ball into a wall, shattering the ball. Pinkie then turned to look at the angle of the sun and test the wind. "Guess not." She said.

Stan blinked. "What theâ€|"

Then an 8 ball hit him right in the face.

"THE 8 BALL HAS SPOKEN!" Pinkie said. Stan swore he saw pink fire light up behind her with various eyes inside it. But when he blinked, it was gone. He shook his head. The Loops were making him go insaneâ€| And not the fun kind of insane either.

"I SHALL GET TO WORK!" Pinkie declared, plucking some of Rainbow Dash's hair for supplies as she ran past.

"Whâ€" OW! HEY!"

"Sorry Dashie! Need rainbow powered paintbrushes and your hair is just naturally rainbow infused!"

"Um. Next time use scissors?"

Pinkie paused. "I never thought of thatâ€|"

* * *

>Later, The Mystery Crusaders, Applebloom Corduroy, Sweetie Belle, and Scootaloo (just Scootaloo) were in the audience of the Mystery Shack's "grand reopening of the Wax Museum."

Of course, they weren't there for the free pizza. (Well, maybe Scootaloo was). They were here to watch. To be SPIES!

And of course to see creepy wax figures. Because, duh, creepy wax figures. Awesome stuff.

They watched as Stan walked up to the podium. "You all know me folks! Town darling, Mister Mystery! Also ladies, quit staring at me like I'm the devil incarnate. Thank you!"

Silence greeted the strange man.

"I give you enchantments and wonderments, novelties and befuddlewhatsizbitz, the likes of which the world has never known in the history of all timelines! But enough about me. Beholdâ€¦ ME!" And with that, Stan uncovered the one Wax Statue not out for the public to view: a perfect replica of Stan himself, except with glitter added. It was very shiny.

Also if you looked at it in the wrong light it appeared to be on pink fire.

Sweetie Belle stared. "So shinyâ€¦!"

Applebloom and Scootaloo groaned.

Pinkie leapt up and took the mic. "HELLO! THANK YOU FOR COMING TO THIS PARTY! I made this sculpture with my own two hooves! Or.. Hands! Or whatever! IT IS COVERED IN MY BLOOD, SWEAT, TEARS, PINK FIRE, HAIR, NATURAL GLITTER, AND OTHER FLUIDS!"

The Mystery Crusaders pondered this before recoiling in disgust.

"I SHALL NOW TAKE QUESTIONS!" Pinkie yelled, a party cannon going off.

Applebloom frowned. There was something really off about this Pinkie girl. She made special note to watch her closely.

McGucket asked the first question. "Old Man McGucket, local kook. are the wax figures alive? And follow-up question, can I survive the wax-man uprising?"

Pinkie grinned. "YES! NEXT QUESTION!"

Applebloom cocked her head. "Yes?"

Scootaloo rolled her eyes. "That answer meant nothing. If they were alive, she answered yes to that. If they weren't, she answered yes to the kook surviving. She's clever."

Sweetie frowned. "How can she be clever if she made a wax Stan?"

"I have no idea." Scootaloo said.

"We shall solve this connâ€¦ conunâ€¦ conundrum." Applebloom said.

Meanwhile, the questions were still going on. "Toby Determined, Gravity Falls Gossiper. Do you think this constitutes a wonder of the world?"

Stan put a stupid grin on his face, obviously enjoying this. "Your microphone's a turkey baster, Toby."

"It certainly isâ€¦!"

"Put Toby Determined down as someone to watch." Sweetie said.

"Eh why?" Applebloom said. "He's just as weird as everyone else here."

"Exactly."

Scotaloo and Applebloom rolled their eyes before continuing their observation.

Berry Punch jumped up. "You PROMISED FREE WINE!"

Pinkie shook her head. "No. You must've misread the flyer. What we have instead isâ€¦" Pinkie said, grinning. "FREE PIZZA!"

From literally nowhere, it began to rain pizzas. Everyone was happy, particularly Free Pizza Guy, who ate one of them mid-flight in one bite. Pinkie gave him a trophy.

Maud, for some reason, sprinkled pebbles on a pizza and walked away with it.

The Mystery Crusaders stared on, slack jawed.

Perhaps _this_ was why they were watching the Mystery Shackâ€¦| Spontaneous pizzas were not normalâ€¦|

* * *

>Stan sighed.

It had happened again.

Wax Stan's head had been chopped off.

He had figured out how to prevent this from happening long ago, but he was trying to go with it. And thus, Wax Stan had to suffer.

It was a euphemism for his life, really. Because Stan was Stan, people had to suffer.

One person in particular.

He watched as, of course, the mane 6 defied the sheriff and his deputy and decided to investigate the murder of Wax Stan and bring the perpetrator to justice. Everyone did. Stan thought he knew who the culprit was, but he couldn't be sure. The Loops liked to mess with his head and have other beings kill Wax Stan than the expected ones.

He cautiously eyed Wax Sherlock Holmes.

Next Loop, he was turning that one into a Ducktective statue.

He watched as the mane 6 found the axe, as they wandered around gathering clues, avenging him.

Of course he went along with it, with his "AVENGE ME!" speech and jumping around in mock anger.

But in reality he was justâ€¦ sad. This statue always reminded him of the person he was in baseline.

A person he still was, to some extent. A lying cheat.

And not the amiable fun kind either. A backstabber.

He sighed again.

He also noticed that those Mystery Crusaders were following the kids around.

He wondered whyâ€¦

* * *

>"So, Mystery Crusaders, what do we have?" Applebloom asked.

"We observed them investigating the "death" of Wax Stan." Scootaloo said, holding up the pen pad. "We have witnessed them somehow get past the security of the "Lumberjack Bar." We did manage to follow them, at the cost of Sweetie getting a black eyeâ€¦"

"I told you we should have made fake IDs as well!"

"Woulda taken too long." Applebloom said. "Go on."

"Then we watched them realize the axe was left handed, so Manly Dan couldn't have done itâ€¦ Then we watched them go through and investigate everyone who as at the pizza partyâ€¦ Lost a lot of pencil leadâ€¦ and then accuse Toby Determined. We all know what happened next." Scootaloo said, shuddering at the memory. Who on earth spent hours kissing a cardboard cutout of a reporterâ€¦ Who did that?

"Anyway, Toby was shown to be innocent, and everything turned out to be pointless." Scootaloo frowned. "We also observed Rainbow Dash look deep into some Journal with the number 3 on it. And I swear that Pinkie girl defies all logic."

Applebloom nodded. "Stan will be holding a funeral for Wax Stan later today. We should be there to watch it."

* * *

>Stan always held the funeral.

He could never bring himself not to. It was too important to him.

Perhaps it was an attempt to undo his wrongs. Perhaps it was an attempt to make peace with everything.

Whatever it was, he always cried.

_Always._

Even in those amazing variants where _he_ was here with him, he still cried.

He ran out, Soos and Wendy following him, leaving the mane 6 in the room with the wax statues.

Rarity looked around. "How did he convert this place into a ceremony room?"

"He's a Looper." Twilight said. "Does he need to follow logic?"

Pinkie butted in. "Who said anything needs logic?"

"Good point."

Twilight sighed. "We didn't solve the mysteryâ€”"

Applejack frowned. "Wait. You just said it."

"Oh no." Twilight said, looking around panicked. "Okay so where's the clue here that we are going to find seconds too late?"

Rainbow Dash pointed at the body of Wax Stan. Specifically, his foot. "That holeâ€ matches the footprint we foundâ€"

Slowly, the mane six turned to see the wax statues turn towards them.

Wax Sherlock Holmes twirled his pipe and glared. "Ah yes, they found us out didn't they chaps? It's a shame they're too late to do anythingâ€œ"

The wax figures, now alive, moved in to attack.

* * *

>"Hey!" "Get off!" "No you get off!" "Toteming is a science!" "Not if your foot is in my eye!"

"Girls!" Applebloom said. "Hold still! I can't see in the window!"

Sweetie and Scootaloo shot death glares at each other, but held steady. Applebloom stared in through the window.

"Is thatâ€¦ pink fire?"

Then a wave of liquified wax poured out of the window with a force of a tidal wave. The Mystery Crusaders were completely covered.

And it began to harden.

"ACK!" Applebloom yelled.

Scotaloo tried eating her way out while Sweetie just went "EWEWEWEWEWEWEWEWEWEWEWEWE!"

The voice of Pinkie could be heard from inside. "Yeah, taking the candle away from us wasn't very effective was it?"

"Pinkie." Twilight said, trying not to lose it. "Please put out the chaos fire."

"Oh sure. Right away."

"I think you melted Wax Stan's head as well."

"YOU DID _WHAT?" _The voice of Stan could be heard.

The Mane 6 blinked, before nodding to each other and dashing off in separate directions.

The Mystery Crusaders trekked back to their base, the wax caked onto them.

The report of that day was inconclusive.

* * *

>Li rqob Prulduwb kdg slqn fkdrv iluh...

* * *

>170.6 (Masterweaver)

Twilight blinked. "Wait... seriously?"

"Yep. Fluttershy actually made her the costume." Pinkie smiled. "Of course, we all know she's not actually a pony, but she's so shy about it that we pretend she is for her sake."

Twilight rubbed her head. "And you're sure she isn't a visiting looper?"

"About ninety percent sure. I kinda think she's actually somebody from Shoggoth-chan trying to relax for a bit, but I can't tell for certain."

The purple unicorn shot a glance over to where a blue pony with red eyes was perusing the shelves. It was almost possible to ignore the stitches on her skin... aside from the occasional green tentacle slipping out of them to grab a book and flip through it.

"...well, I suppose I am the princess of Friendship," she finally said. "And if 'Cuddlehu' wants friends, I can help her with that. I'm just worried about, you know, the whole..." She gesticulated.

Pinkie Pie rolled her eyes. "Twilight, I already took her aside and explained about boundaries. You'll be fine. After all, you're friends with me, and if you can handle that then one little tentacle monster in a suit should be easy!"

* * *

>170.7 (Evilhumour, Vinylshadow, OathToOblivion)

"Wow," said Rainbow Dash, very impressed. "Lemon sure can bench press your daughter, Twi."

"Yup," Twilight nodded her head, watching the two move up and down.

It was oddly hypnotic in a way, the repeated motion somehow captivating. "They've been going at it for hours."

"Nearly six hours, Twilight," Lemon responded with a grunt, earning himself a swat on the nose from Nyx as he had been uneven with his latest raising of her. That earned them chuckles from the crowd surrounding them, more the mares than the stallions.

"So how exactly did all this start Twilight?" Dash tore her head away from the duo and towards her friend.

"Well, from what I heard Lemon was working out here with Nyx reading nearby," Twilight's attention was still focused towards her daughter and her husband to be, a smile on her face at what the kids were doing. "One of themâ€"

"It was Nyxie who marveled at my steadiness and wondered if I could continue it with a much more precious load," Lemon responded, earning him another swat on his nose. "So far, I've continued my work out and Nyxie is still reading her book."

Nyx nodded her head, resting comfortably in her finacÃ's hooves as turned the next page of her book as Lemon lifted her back into the air and then down.

"Huh," Rainbow Dash blinked, and then nodded her head. "Neat." She then flew back into the sky while the crowd continued to watch Lemon Rush bench press Nyx Sparkle in front of her mother.

"What's Nyx reading anyway?" Applejack asked.

"The Complete Unabridged History of the Loops, 42nd Edition, by Mewtwo," Twilight replied. "It weighs about two and a half thousand tonnes."

"I could have done without knowing that," Lemon said with equineamity.

* * *

>170.8 (Vinylshadow)

Sunset Shimmer Woke up in Equestria and immediately did a double take, falling backwards in shock.

Starlight Glimmer looked at her curiously. "You alright?"

Sunset's mouth opened and closed as she tried to puzzle out what was going on. A polite cough got her attention and she turned to see Twilight offering her a hoof.

"Explanation?" Sunset murmured to her as the Anchor hauled her up.

"Variant where pretty much every unicorn from Baseline is in Celestia's School for Gifted Unicorns. Including Flim and Flam. Don't try the mystery herbs," Twilight said, gesturing around them.

Sunset saw Moondancer and Trixie in a heated debate over a chalkboard filled with staggering amounts of theories, some of which Sunset recognized, while there were thaumic theories that made her head spin just by looking at them.

"Okay, I've had weirder," she said, shaking her head. "Any real plans this Loop?"

"Nope, but I'm taking notes on everything so I can puzzle over them later," Twilight said cheerfully. "Shall we join the battle?" she added, nodding to Moondancer, who had a tick on her head as she and Trixie moved closer to each other.

"I doubt we'd survive, but hey, nothing ventured, nothing gained," Sunset said with a feral grin. "Have at thee!"

* * *

>Rarity arched one eyebrow as Twilight approached her. She was fairly positive she knew what Twilight wasâ€"

"Where were you last Loop?" the Anchor demanded.

"If you're talking about the one where you and your friends went to Celestia's School for Gifted Unicorns..."

Twilight winced. "Ah...well...that's not...they're your friends too!"

"True, but I was occupied elsewhere, I'm afraid."

"Where?" Twilight asked, pricking her ears.

"A lady never tells, Twilight," Rarity admonished her gently with a smile.

* * *

>170.9 (Evilhumour)

"The Night shall last forâ€" " Nightmare Moon declaration was cut off when she was tapped on the side.

"Ahem, excuse me?" a younger, softer version of Nightmare Moon coughed slightly as she rolled her eyes. "I know you are trying to be independent of your sister Luna, and make yourself what ponies cling to, have your Night respected by all and whatever, but..." the younger mare trailed off, her horn glowing as the moon went down with the sun coming up. "But you are doing it under my name which could get me in trouble with my mom over there," Twilight meeped as the younger alicorn waved over to her, ponies taking a step backwards. "You're not really thinking about the long term issues with having only the moon up â€" did you ever think to have a second moon to act as a source of light that will act as replacement for the sun as it works surprisingly well â€" and you didn't even try to co-op rulership over Equestria! I mean, look Luna, you and Celestia," she wrapped both her forelegs around the princesses, surprising everypony as they didn't even see Celestia there a second ago, and lead them to a podium that had blueprints and plans, also something that wasn't there a moment ago. "I mean, look, if you directed the winds like so, you two could have the sun and the moon up for a thousand years or so each, switching back and forth. And if that doesn't work, there _are_ others things we can try."

"Wait," the older Nightmare Moon, or Luna as she was called, started to protest, shaking her head. "We have comeâ€"

"Back to Equestria, I know, if you have noticed, there are banners and a massive party set up just for your return. See?" the younger alicorn pointed to the newly decorated town hall in the colours of the first Nightmare Moon, the younger one giving a wink to a pink party mare. "So everypony _did_ remember you Luna, celebrated your night and a lot enjoy it now. Now come, we've got a lot of work to do girls." The younger alicorn guided the princesses out of the room, leaving everypony inside in dead silence.

In the crowd, a white unicorn pony turned to a purple unicorn pony.

"Excuse me, Twilight?" she asked.

"Yes Rarity?" she responded.

"What the _hay_ just happened?!"

"I _don't_ know, Rarity and I don't know why she called me _mom!_"

* * *

>170.10: (Detective Ethan Redfield)

The sky over Golden Oaks Library tore open, revealing a vast expanse of nothing. It was not space, it was not anything. And from it came a tentacled horror, a monstrosity that cannot be put into words. It was like the void sprouted eyes and glared at everything. Ponies that were not stricken dumb or insane at the sight ran screaming in terror (a surprising amount for such a panicky race). Over the sound of the panicking ponies, one overly loud groan roared with two words.

**"NOT AGAIN!"**

As Twilight prepared for the inevitable destruction of her tree so that their loop might be saved, a certain pink haired pony approached Twilight and said, "Hey Twilight! I want to apologize."

Twilight looked at Pinkie with a manic grin and a twitchy eye, "What?! What now? Don't tell me you're the daughter of Cthulhu?!"

Pinkie blinked and laughed. "You're funny Twilight. That's just insane."

Twilight shook her head, dispelling her concern. "Ok, then I'm sure it's not as bad as what's about to happen. Lay it on me, Pinkie."

"I'm not an Earth Pony. I'm a Narwhal!"

Twilight was blinded as Pinkie transformed in a flash of white light. And then she saw Pinkie had grown fins and a horn. A second later, Pinkie threw herself at the opening in the sky, body checked the tentacled horror and sealed the breach. Twilight blinked several times, then shouted, "What the birch just happened?!"

* * *

>On the Other Side of the Breach

Pinkie, Hastur, Cthulhu, and many other Eldritch Abominations sat around, playing a game of poker. Pinkie finished laughing and said, "Thanks everybeing."

Cthulhu nodded. "We should do this again. What do you say, next time Twilight isn't awake?"

Pinkie put a fin to her face, "Only if Twilight can keep her sanity. I mean, what's fun about pranking a pony who's speaking an ancient language and no longer realizes she's still in Ponyville?"

* * *

>170.11 (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Nyx blinked. "Seriously? This happened because you were bitten by a radioactive book?"

"It could have happened!" Twilight, currently a mobile (and concerned) illustration on the cover of a book, exclaimed.

Those words, and the fact that she also knew a spell to get exactly that effect, were why Nyx doubted her mother's story, and she sighed. "Here I thought Auntie Velvet's story about being bitten by a radioactive skeleton was one of the most ridiculous things I'd ever heard."

Twilight blinked. "Radioactive skeleton... you mean, from that Family Skeleton-based Loop you told us about?"

Nyx nodded. "It was one of the theories she had about _why_ she was a living skeleton. We never really believed it then, and I still don't."

From the book cover, Twilight sighed. "Oh well. It was fun while it lasted." She concentrated, and a moment later, emerged from the book. "You know, you _could_ try to play along with these little jokes sometimes."

Nyx nuzzled her mother. "Maybe if you were trying to prank someone other than me."

"I'll keep that in mind."

* * *

>170.12: (Evilhumour)

"â€"and I still can't dance without crashing into something, Spike," Twilight said as paced back again, causing the drake to roll his eyes as his latest attempt to help Twilight was rendered useless. "I mean, I know that they're not getting married soon but one day they'll tell us they're ready and I _can't_ embarrass Nyx with our dance at the reception because if I do she'll hate me forever and then she won't want to talk to me ever again and when they have kids I'll never see my grandchildren but then again I know that Nyx won't be that mean, that monster Leman won't let me see my grandchildren because of how badly I danced at their wedding, how dare he hold that against for me so long why I outtaâ€œ"

"Hi Mom, we're home," Nyx entered the library with her fiancÃ© carrying in the groceries on his back. "How are thinâ€œ"

"LET ME SEE MY GRANDCHILDREN YOU EONS OLD GRUDGE HOLDER!" Twilight shouted, tackling Lemon through a wall, leaving Nyx alone with Spike.

"Don't worry," Spike said as he went to get the broom and dustpan to clean up the mess. "I already contacted Cadence to help us out and she should be here soâ€œ"

"Already here Spike," Cadence teleported in, looking around for her sister in-law. "What is it this time?"

"Twilight was worried that her poor dancing will drive a wedge between Nyx and her, and she jumped to the conclusion that Leman won't let her see their future children because of it."

"Ah," Cadence nodded sagely as she went outside to pry the purple mare off the yellow stallion. "Won't be that hard to deal with."

Nyx sighed, shaking her head as her aunt talked her mom out of her breakdown as she picked up the groceries and took them to the kitchen.

* * *

>170.13: (Evilhumour)

"Interesting," Perturabo, or as his memories told him his name was Siege Patrol, muttered to himself as he Awoke as an equine creature, a pony as his brothers told him beforehand of the correct term. He had been expecting this for a while now, considering what he read about jump-started branches like his own in that guidebook, but he was not expecting...the gentleness of everything around him. In his home Branch, in the worldcrafting Branch and the few others he had been to, there was always some sense of danger around the corner, something to really prepare and defend against.

Here, there was nothing pressing against him to gather up his weaponry or anything of the â€œ"

"Excuse me, but are you okay?" a yellow equiâ€œ" pony with wings looked up at him with genuine concern, her blue eyes showing not a trace of any malice within her being. "Because if you do not mind me saying, you do look a bit Loopy."

"Yes...but I am wide Awake miss..." he said carefully, dimly aware that this mare was familiar to him, somewhat resembling who his brothers described as Flâ€œ"

"Fluttershy," her smile grew as she walked up closer to him. "Perturabo?" she asked delicately, not fear in her voice but actual _hope_.

"Yes," he nodded his grey coated head, shaking his dark mane into his face. "I have heard that my other brothers call you the Little Mother due to you raising Russ... and my other brothers in other loops in the past."

"That's correct," the pegasus replied. "Like I told Magnus, Vulkan and Konrad, they did not need to call me Little Mother or view me as their mother if they did not want to, and I will not force you too if you do not want that kind of relationship," she then flashed another true, caring smile at him. "I will let you know the offer is always open and that there is always room in my cottage for you if you wish to come."

"Thank you, miss Fluttersâ€™" he trailed off his speech as he noticed a young pony, a colt his memories corrected him, walk into view carrying a large bag upon his back.

"I've got all the stuff for supper, Little Mother, although I _do_ think I should be allowed to cook for you again," the yellow earth pony that had his brother's voice grumbled, eyes at the ground.

"Lemon Rush, after what happened last time be grateful that City Guard didn't press charges on you after how much was burned to the ground," the mare turned her head to lecture the colt who rolled his eyes at the speech. He then froze at the sight of the young grey stallion, who had a smile creeping on his face. "Also, your brother Perturabo is Awake and might be joining us for dinner so I would like him to eat something that will not fight back."

The colt began to stammer, face flushed with embarrassment as Perturabo found himself in the throes of laughter at seeing the mighty Wolf King as a tiny little colt, seeing exactly _why_ his brothers told him he had to see this sight for himself.

Siege Patrol knew from that moment on that this was going to be a _very_ good loop for him.

* * *

>170.14: (Evilhumour)

There was a string of explosions outside the Golden Oaks, and a young alicorn ran into the library.

"Hi-mom-where-is-the-fire-extinguisher-that-puts-out-water-based-fires-Is-it-still-under-the-sink-Oh-good-it-is-Don't-worry-we-got-everythin-g-under-controlâ€™"

_**BOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOM!**_

The shock wave caused everything inside the library to rock back and forth, dust from the ceiling coating the floor along with every book being knocked out of their shelves.

"**THAT WAS **_**NOT TRIxie, TRIxie SWEARS IT!**_" a voice bellowed out, shattering all the glass in the library and the town, causing more than a few to go temporarily deaf.

"Sorry-mom-I-have-got-to-make-sure-the-girls-don't-destroy-anything-else-Hey-Applebloom-stop-using-those-rockets-You-agreed-not-to-use-splitting-rockets-for-this-contest-to-see-who-is-going-to-be-my-maid-of-honour," the alicorn paused to look at the librarian and gave her a weak smile. "Sorry-mom-I-really-need-to-go-now-I-love-you-bye." The young alicorn raced over to the purple mare and gave her a kiss on the cheek before running outside, slamming the door behind her.

Twilight blinked at the strange sight she just watched and wondered who that alicorn was, who Trixie was and what the hay was going on in this city!

* * *

>170.15: (Vinylshadow, Purrs, OathToOblivion)

"I is Wakefulness!" Twilight is words slowly! Twilight is frown and Twilight is effort again! Twilight is scowl and Twilight is impact head against table! "What is event to words?!"

"Know not I do, but amused I am," Zecora is words and Zecora is grin! "At least talk somewhat normal, I do, unlike you."

Twilight is glare at Zecora and Twilight is slump miserably! "Hard is message to Celestia letters! Words is not utility good!" Twilight is appearance like Twilight is imminence tears!

"{I'm really sorry about this, Twilight,}" Pikachuâ€œer, Past Participleâ€œapologized â€œ having replaced Spike this Loop â€œ "{Looks like you fell prey to a Grammermon Loop.}"

* * *

>170.16: (Evilhumour)

Dashing Rainbow looked at Shyingflutter who was rubbing the back of Sparkling Twilight.

"This is such a stupid variant," the Anchor grumbled, looking at Armoring Shine. "So stupid!" she whined, faceplanting into the table.

"It could be worse," Shyingflutter said. "You could be like my son Rushing Lemons and get all those immature joke thrown at his face."

"Wait, someone actually teased one of your boys about their names?" Dashing asked in disbelief.

"Well, actually no, not after he put that pony through the hoofball hoop..." Shyingflutter said, trailing off as she tipped her chin.

Sparkling groaned and faceplanted again.

* * *

>Author's Note:

170.3: Sometimes you tell the truth, and you just don't get believed.

170.4: Of course it means the problem is gone. The problem is no longer here.

170.7: The title is, of course, a lie. Nothing can be completely unabridged.

170.9: Some non-Equestrian Anchor or other not shown.

170.13: She does it to all the Primarchs.

170.14: Another non-Twilight Looper.

178. Chapter 178

171.1

* * *

>Gilda drew her tail across with a slashing motion, slapping the projectile aside. "Your guards are unconscious, and you can't do a thing. Give up!"

"Yes!" her opponent said, nodding eagerly. "Anything!"

"Hah!" Gilda said, eagle-claws slamming down on the packed earth. "Okay, there's going to be some changes around here. For starters, this is a pathetic imperial palace."

"Sorry, what?" he asked. "Imperial palace?"

"Well, yeah," Gilda said, shrugging. "Why?"

"...this is the town hall."

Gilda looked around. At Griffinstone.

"Oh, damn and blast," she said, closing her eyes and putting a clawed forefoot up to her face. "Wrong kind of Griffins."

"Something wrong?" Guido asked, nervously looking up to see if his guards were awake yet.

"Right," Gilda sighed. "Oak-ay, new plan. I wanted an empire this time, so I'm making one. I think there's some unclaimed land somewhere over to the east of the ocean..."

* * *

>171.2

* * *

>Fluttershy looked up, and smiled. "Ah, excuse me a moment."

Her interlocutor shrugged. "Okay by us."

The pegasus got up, and opened the door. "Hello, Nyx - what a pleasure. How are you today?"

"I'm okay," Nyx replied. "I just wanted to come over to snaffle some of your tea."

"Well, you'll have to move quickly," Fluttershy replied. "My guests are trying to do that as well."

"In our defence," the coyote said, picking up another cup. "It really is very good tea."

The great big wolf next to her muttered something.

"Oh, quiet," smiled the coyote, flicking her tail at his flank. "We're guests here."

The wolf contrived to make it clear that it was the coyote whose manners were in question, not his.

"That's very impressive," Nyx said, nodding. "You did that without a single word or noise. Was it really all body language?"

The coyote rolled her neck, and then turned into an earth pony with a paw-print cutie mark. "Honestly, I think he just likes showing off. But it's magic - it's pack magic, drawing strength from the entirety of an alpha's pack."

She smiled. "Which means me at the moment, of course. Mercedes the Volkswagen mechanic, at your service."

Nyx looked politely blank.

"Mercedes... Volkswagen... they're different kinds of cars?" asked the coyote shapeshifter, then sighed. "Oh, whatever, I guess there have to be some places they don't get the pun."

There was a clatter from in the kitchen.

"Now, look here!" Fluttershy's voice came, stern but fair. "I know you enjoy tricking people, but I was carrying boiling water and could have gotten badly hurt!"

A clatter.

"Sorry, Mrs. Hauptmann," Fluttershy sighed, coming back into the main room with a stick in her mouth. "This naughty little scamp tried to trip me up, so I've told him off ever so much."

"...that's a walking stick," Nyx said, pointing. "How..."

Angel looked up from his hammock and gestured.

"I know I'm a secondarily-looping daughter of an evil side and a blood sacrifice, but it's not polite to say it," Nyx retorted.

Angel flipped the bird and got back to snoozing.

Amused, the big wolf rumbled.

"No, you can't eat him," Mercedes said. "You wouldn't anyway, you big softie."

* * *

>171.3

* * *

>Celestia looked up as a letter materialized.

"Ah," she said, smiling. "It seems my student has sent me a letter. Luna?"

Luna looked up from what Celestia considered exquisitely made tea and Luna considered an inadequate supply of biscuits. "Sister?"

"Would you like to read it with me?" Celestia offered.

Luna considered.

"All right," she said. "But mayhap we can get a refill of the biscuits? The chocolate ones, which are a remarkable invention."

"Of course," Celestia agreed.

* * *

>Biscuits obtained, Celestia unrolled the scroll.

As she did, she noticed that Luna was already on her third biscuit, but didn't make an issue. "Let's see, now... Dear Princess Celestia..."

She blinked.

"What might it be, sister?" Luna asked, swallowing.

Celestia showed her.

Luna's eyes flicked over the parchment, and she blinked.

_Dear Princess Celestia,_ it read.

_Gur svefg pyhr vf ng gur obggbz bs gur Pnfgyr bs gur Eblny Cbal Fvfgref._

_Cvaxvr cebivqrq gur cevmmrf. Rawbl!_

_c.f. Gur Pnxr vf Rabezbfh._

"...has thy student lost her mind?" Luna asked, examining it. "It does not seem to be Equestrian, nor Old Griffish, nor any other tongue I have read nor spoken."

Celestia shrugged. "I've no idea."

* * *

>"...and then, when they get knocked off the path by the boulder, they'll be all 'oh, no!' until they land in the lava and find it's really cotton candy lava," Pinkie rattled off.

"Are we absolutely certain this is a good idea?" Spike asked.

Twilight shrugged. "I wanted to do something sweet."

Spike winced. "That pun was old the _first_ time around."

"Besides," Twilight added. "I checked the library records to be sure, but Luna's already read all the Daring Do books just in the month since we cured her. This is basically live-action Daring Do."

"If you say so..." Spike opined.

* * *

>"So?" Spike asked. "How'd it go?"

"I may have overdone the puzzles," Twilight admitted. "Who'd have thought they'd get stuck on the 128-bit private key encryption problem in the third temple?"

"Almost anyone," Spike deadpanned.

"Fortunately, Pinkie made the door out of gingerbread, so they made it through anyway," Twilight shrugged. "And I think the jump-scare bit should beâ€"

The ground shook.

"â€"about then. And it seems like Luna's easily surprised," Twilight went on, as though nothing was amiss.

"Wait." Spike raised a claw. "They're still in the puzzles?"

* * *

>Cadence stared at the pile of paperwork and the herd of petitioners.

"...they're both missing, see," explained the seneschal apologetically. "And we found that you're third in precedence, so..."

"But..." Cadence blinked. "Wouldn't it be Blueblood?"

"Would _you_ accept Blueblood, or look for a loophole?" her boyfriend asked _sotto voce_.

"...okay, fair enough..."

* * *

>171.4

* * *

>"This is Rarity, Princess," Twilight explained. "She is the Bearer of Generosity."

"Noble Rarity," Celestia repeated, bestowing a smile.

"Actually, your Solar Highness, I'm just a shopkeeper," Rarity said.

Celestia's eyes twinkled. "Not any more."

Rarity blinked. "What?"

"You are now Lady Rarity Belle of the Carousel Boutique," Celestia explained.

There was a soft sliding sound, and Rarity fainted onto a couch.

"Was the couch there before?" Celestia asked.

"No, she does that," Dash explained for her.

"Thank you. And... you must be one of the Apple clan," Celestia noted. "Who might you be?"

"Applejack, ma'am," Applejack said. "Ah run Sweet Apple Acres with m' brother."

Celestia nodded. "Ah, your apple products are the delight of many a day. But - is there any way I can reward you for your aid to my sister?"

Twilight winced.

"Nope," Applejack replied. "There ain't a single thing."

Celestia blinked. "Really? How can this be?"

Twilight winced again.

"Well, 'cause of th' time travel, an' all, ah know how t' handle most anything that might crop up," Applejack said.

There was a moment of silence.

"Applejack," Twilight said, not unkindly. "We need to talk about dissembling."

"What, like unbuildin' things?"

"Sorry, Twilight," Celestia said, slowly. "Did she just sayâ€"

"It's a long story," said Twilight, who was now an Alicorn. "We're still getting to grips with it."

"Hey, how come SHE gets to time travel?" Dash asked. "I'm the one who can travel at, like, faster than uncool..."

* * *

>171.5 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>Rainbow Dash flew into Mac's bar and leaned heavily on the counter.

"Strongest you've got and most undetectable, stat!" she groaned, eyes darting towards the door.

"Okay Dashie, truth time, what's wrong?" Twilight's curiosity was peaked and thus she leaned in to hear what got Dash so worked up.

"Starlight Glimmer did it again, tried to mess up my first Sonic Rainboom," the mare sighed, holding a hoof up to stall her friend. "Only this time, Glimmer decided to go after my family first, and..." she groaned, faceplanting into the counter.

"Wait, are you saying what I think you are saying Dashie?" Twilight's mouth was curling up into a grin and right on dramatic cue, a certain mare entered the bar.

"There you are, my little Dashie!" a much older Starlight Glimmer bounded over to the pegasus mare, wrapping her hooves around the Element of Loyalty tightly in a hug. "So this is where you and your little friends go to have fun?" she then turned and flashed Twilight a big and honest smile. "I have heard so much about you Twilight, and all your adventures with my Dashie here!" Glimmer then, with Rainbow Dash still in her forelegs, used her magic to lift out a big thick book. "Care to see some pictures of my Dashie when she was little?"

"Mom!" Dash squeaked out, her face going red as her step mother showed her friends the only pictures remaining of the time that Dash was in the ballet.

* * *

>171.6: (ORBSyndicate)

* * *

>Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 5: Gideon and Ghosts.

Go to the Tent of Telepathy, Twilight had thought. It'd be a good idea, Twilight had thought. It would annoy Stan and it would be much more interesting than watching the utterly brainless TV shows this Loop had, Twilight had thought. Maybe he really was psychic and could be interesting, Twilight had thought. This could be fun, Twilight had thought.

Now Twilight was being levitated in midair with a pair of shears directed at her face.

She was really, really, tempted to just burn the little ventriloquist dummy and get it over with, but he had an air of importance about him that Twilight had learned to detect from millennia of looping.

So that was out of the question.

To be honest, Twilight hadn't really expected it to go like this. The strange boy had asked Rarity on a date. (The thought of which was absolutely disturbing to begin with.) Rarity had shut him down.

The First time it was a gentle "no".

The next time involved a bit of slapping.

The third turn down Rarity called her friends (or siblings) in.

It was quickly discovered that the little "psychic" was a big. Fat. Creep.

Who also, for some reason, had a folksy voice that made no sense in an eight year old.

"Y'all are in the way of my sweet Rarity Diamond! I will have her! Ya hear? YA HEAR?"

Applejack had done her human-form-buck to get the boy far faaaaaar faaaaaaaaaaaaaaaar away.

And yet, somehow, he was back, using his now apparent psychic powers to point a pair of shears at Twilight's face.

She cursed herself for thinking his plot line was over.

"Nowâ€¦ You are just one of five in the way of my conquest of Rarity! She will be mine!"

"Look, Gideon. You probably aren't aware of this but back home she already has a guy. He's named Spike and he's quite niceâ€¦"

"I SHALL BLOW HIM OFF THE FACE OF THE PLANET!"

"Yeah okay kinda figured you'd say thatâ€¦" Twilight muttered. "Was worth a shot I guessâ€¦"

"Now be a good little sheep and lose your faceâ€¦"

"GIDEON!" The voice of Rarity yelled throughout the warehouse.

"Darlinâ€¦?" Gideon said, a smile growing on his face. "I knew it! You've come to me!"

"Yes yes now put my sister down pleaseâ€¦"

"Of course my sweetâ€¦" Gideon said, lowering Twilight.

What happened next involved Rarity levitating Gideon's necklace right off him, and then proceeding to toss the pudgy child around like a golf ball.

"OW! OW! HEY! DARLIN! I THOUGHTâ€" "

"YOU THREATEN MY FAMILY, HAVE THE NERVE TO FORCE YOURSELF ON ME, AND ABOVE ALL WANT TO WIPE SPIKE OFF THE FACE OF THE PLANET!" Rarity stared deep into Gideon's eyes. "YOU. MADE. A. BIG. MISTAKE."

Twilight was quickly reminded why she never got Rarity madâ€|

* * *

>Gideon roared. (Or tried to, with all his bruises it kinda came out as a MArGFFF!)

His amulet was gone. His precious Rarity had just been mind controlled to beat him up. How cruel!

She was being kept away. That was the only answer. She couldn't think that of him. He was a true gentleman!

Gideon was not known for his knowledge in the matters of romance.

He pulled out handmade dolls of the entire pines family and set them up on a replica of the Mystery Shack.

Kid was beyond creepy.

Gideon picked up the Twilight doll. "What are you going to do without your precious amulet?" He mimicked.

He grinned, pulling a book out of a bookshelf. "Ohohohohâ€| You'll see. You'll see." He looked at the cover, which displayed a golden six-fingered hand with a "2" on it.

Far away, both Pinkie and Rainbow Dash twitched. They exchanged glances.

"How'd you get that?" Pinkie said, confused. "You don't have Pinkie Senseâ€|" "

"Noâ€|" Rainbow said, looking at Journal 3. "But I do have thisâ€| I wonder what it means?"

Pinkie, with a faraway look, spoke in a monotone voice. "That plot is comingâ€|" "

"What?"

"Dashie you seriously aren't going to make a butt joke about that remark?"

Rainbow Dash was completely bewildered. "I. Wait. What? Plot? But. Uhâ€|" She shook her head. "What's that got to do with anything?"

"AB-SO-LUTELY NOTHING!" Pinkie said, grinning.

Rainbow Dash rolled her eyes, not thinking more of it.

* * *

>"So. Uh. This is awkward. Today's the day one of you is supposed to get a crush on Wendy, or at least reveal it to everyone." Stan said, looking at all six of them awkwardly. "Uhâ€|"

Everyone stared back at him blankly.

Pinkie spoke first. "I PUT FORTH APPLEJACK AS TRIBUTE TO WENDY!"

"PINKIE!" Applejack yelled. "You do realize there are TWO problems with that right? One, I don't want to. TWO, she's the older sister of Applebloom this loop! IT'D BE LIKE DATING MYSELF!"

"Aw okayâ€|" Pinkie said, dejected.

Twilight frowned. "Isn't she like three years older than us? In this age range that generally isn't an accepted thingâ€|"

Stan shrugged. "I said nothing about her returning the affection."

"Ah. Tragic and overused plot line."

"Tell me about it." Stan said, proceeding to choke on some Pitt Cola. "Anyway, you kids probably want to join Wendy and her friends in their little outing. Go forth and have fun."

Rainbow Dash and Twilight shrugged. Why not.

* * *

>"STAAAAAAAAAAAAAN!" Twilight yelled at the top of her lungs as the entire abandoned convenience store's gravity went upside down.

"I'm going to punch him when we get back." Rainbow Dash muttered.

Wendy looked at the two of them. "What's he got to do with this?"

"Uhâ€|" The two of them said, trying to think of a way out of this,

A possessed Fluttershy quickly provided a distraction by blowing up a shelf full of popcorn.

"Okay okayâ€|" Twilight said, thinking hard. "There's probably some reason behind this and we have to be able to solve this without sending Pinkie crazyâ€|"

Rainbow Dash quickly flipped through the Journal. "Umâ€|" There's some stuff in here about using a silver mirrorâ€|"

"Yeah I don't think that's going to work." Twilight muttered. "Since we have no silver mirrors."

"Check your Pocket."

"Ohâ€¦ Wait. I've got it. What was everyone else doing when they wereâ€¦" "haunted?" "

"Being sarcastic? Cellphone?"

"TEENAGER STUFF!"

"Soâ€¦" Rainbow Dash blinked. "It can't be that simple. No. It can't."

Twilight poked her head out. "HEY GHOST!"

"**YES?" **Not-Fluttershy said, turning a full 180 with the head.

"I'M NOT A TEENAGER!"

"**OH I'M NOT SURE ABOUT THAT. YOUR MIND IS VERY IMPRESSIVE, THERE IS NO WAY YOU'RE THAT YOUNG.**"

"Oh. Great. The one time being a Looper is a disadvantage-"

"WHAT THE HECK IS A LOOPER?" Wendy asked.

"Uhâ€¦" Rainbow Dash said, looking around nervously. "How about we just agree that that'd take too long to explain and just scar your mind more than it already is?"

"Ah." Wendy responded.

Twilight was quickly levitated by the ghost, andâ€¦ just vanished.

Rainbow Dash blinked. Twilight would have at least tried to defend herself at that point. How did the ghostâ€¦"

Pinkie roared, revving up a pink flaming chainsaw. "ALLRIGHT GHOST! This is an exorcist's old weapon from something so long ago you couldn't even comprehend the eon! AND I WILL USE TO SEVER YOU FROM FLUTTERSHY!"

"**WON'T THAT HURT HER?"**

"Eh probably but she's been through worse."

"**YOU WILL NOT USE IT!" **It said, snapping Fluttershy's fingers (in such a way that made them break.) The chainsaw vanished.

Pinkie began to light herself on pink fire. Her voice deepened. "**You are going to regretâ€¦" **"

"Wait!" A little voice said, running into the room. Applebloom fell to the floor, Sweetie and Scootaloo close behind her. "These are our friends! Please don't hurt them! We're just kids!"

Fluttershy was instantly dropped and a pair of old ghosts appeared. "Oh just wonderful! Children! Hello there!"

"Hi!" Sweetie said, suddenly not as afraid. "Yeah can you not hurt them? Please? They're nice!"

"And one of em's mah sister!" Applebloom yelled.

The two ghosts frowned. "We could let them go if you did a cute dance and song."

The Mystery Crusader's eyes lit up. They asked for the ghosts to give them their special costumes!

* * *

>"TAKE YOU AND YOUR FRIENDS OUT OF HERE! THAT RACKET WAS WORSE THAN RAP MUSIC! WHAT ON EARTH IS WRONG WITH CHILDREN THESE DAYS?"

The teenagers, mane 6, and Mystery Crusaders left the building running. Some from the horrible racket that the Mystery Crusaders had let out rather than the ghosts themselves. (Twilight hated that song. Every time it appeared, it was just bad. Not even the Looping crusaders could seem to sing that song well, although they had't tried that much.)

After they paused to take a breath, everyone began laughing.

"THAT. WAS. AWESOME!" Wendy yelled, high fiving some of the guys. Rainbow Dash whooped and Pinkie ate an entire packet of Smile Dip.

Fear struck Twilight's heart. _Oh no!_

For the moment, however, Pinkie didn't explode. That wouldn't last long though.

The teens were happy. The Mystery Crusaders were happy. Everyone was happy and laughing and having a good time.

Except Robbie, the annoying guitar player guy.

"Look at these kids! They're just lame kids who got us into a big mess!"

"Um!" Wendy said, cocking her head. "As I recall they saved us."

"Whatever." Robbie muttered.

Rainbow Dash rolled her eyes. What a dolt.

She quickly turned to the Mystery Crusaders. "Now! what were you three doing there?"

"Uh! Uh!" Applebloom said, trying to think of a way out.

"We were watching you!" Sweetie said, grinning.

"Why?"

"MYSTERIES!"

Rainbow Dash sighed. "It's likely going to get dangerous. Please stop watching us. And Scootaloo?"

"Yeah?"

"Stop drawing pictures of me in that notebook while I'm talking. Actually just stop it."

"What? But how did you know?"

"Maybe I'm psychic." Rainbow Dash said, grinning. "Now stop watching us. We don't like to be spied onâ€¦"

Fluttershy walked up. "I mean, we forgive you, but it is a little creepyâ€¦"

The three hung their heads. "We're sorryâ€¦"

"Oh don't be sadâ€¦" Fluttershy said. "You can hang out with us now! I'm sure everyone's really happy you saved them."

The three crusaders looked at the group laughing and having fun. "Ya think so?"

"I know so."

"YIPPEE!"

At that point, the Smile Dip settled into the consciousness of Pinkie. "OHOHOHOHOHOHOHOHOHOHOHO I WANT **MY CHAINSAW BACK!**"

Everyone stared blankly as the abandoned store went up in flames.

* * *

>"We're not gonna to spy for ya' anymore." Applebloom said, looking up. "It's rude and they're nice people."

"Rainbow Dash is cooooooolâ€¦" Scootaloo said, trying hard to resist the urge to sketch.

"Basically, we're lettin ya do yer own work. We won't tell on ya though, yer nice enough for that."

"But we're going." Sweetie said. "You do your own thing."

As the Mystery Crusaders walked off to join their suddenly large circle of friends, their "employer" frowned.

Lyra folded up a large mint-green journal engraved with a design of two five-fingered hands.

She supposed she'd have to investigate on her own now.

All the better.

* * *

>Obud Khduwvwulqjv-Slqhv

* * *

>171.7 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Twilight groaned as she entered Mac's bar. "Can I get something for 'what the hay just happened' please?" The stallion slid her a drink, and she nodded in thanks.

After a sip, she sighed. "Last loop was... okay, so Granny Smith was a changeling. And had always been a changeling. And for some reason, decided to moonlight as Vinyl Scratch and actually fell in love with Octavia. And then helped save the world by destroying the force field around a demonic basketball hoop so Celestia could do a slam dunk."

She threw her head back for another gulp.

"...Seriously. It was just... what. What the heck happened?"

* * *

>Sleipnir jerked awake, pulling his head off the keyboard.
"Wha-huh?!"

Skuld glowered at him, arms crossed.

"Aw, crud." Sleipnir gave an embarrassed chuckle. "Sorry, I was just... I was just up all night, checking my daughter's room for monsters, you know how it isâ€"

* * *

>171.8: (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"So... what is it about Starlight's time travel that gets you so riled up?"

Twilight groaned as she enchanted another loop-unique book and put it aside. "Every time I cycled through that portal, there was a different timeline. That's seven timelinesâ€"baseline! Not counting the variant timelines where something else happens, which don't really matter because Yggdrassil can 'forget' them easily." She pulled another book off the shelf and inserted it into the datascanner. "Even now that I know how to short-circuit Starlight, it's not guaranteed to work, and it's not always her that casts the spellâ€"plus, it took me a couple of tries to figure out the wording, which means the timelines iterated enough that Yggdrassil is trying to firm them up." The scanner beeped and glowed red, so she put the book back on the shelf. "That means that the next few expansions are actually going to be 'sideways' instead of 'forward', because Yggdrassil is going to be busy trying to fill out the gaps, so we're going to end up in the Sombra war, or the Changeling resistance, or the Nightmare realm or the world of Chaos or Tirek's reign of terror or Flimflam incorporatedâ€"I don't even know how that happened!"

Rainbow nodded. "So, all the extra timelines are bugging you?"

"That's only part of it. A big part, but..." Twilight sighed, turning away from her task. "Time travel is delicate at the best of times, Dash. And with Yggdrassil in the state it is, we're nowhere near the best of times. I'm worried that she's going to make some minor change to the spell, some unique variant... I'm worried that she's going to pull a Lyra on us. I mean, I know that Sleipnir is watching constantly, but with the sideways expansions and how hard it is to pin her down before and after the village, all it would take is one little detail and bam!" She slammed her hoof on the floor. "Equestria glitches out of existence." She turned back to the shelves. "I know it's not likely, and I know she's intelligent enough to try to avoid that, but she's not looping, Dash. She doesn't KNOW. That spell is dangerous."

* * *

>171.9 (Scorntex)

* * *

>"The night shall lastâ€"!"

Nightmare Moon stopped, looking about the hall of startled and terrified ponies, her ears twitching.

"Did anypony else just hear that?" Several ponies numbly shook their heads. After a few seconds the armoured alicorn shrugged.

"Oh, well. Where was I?"

"The night shall last forever?" Fluttershy murmured. Nightmare Moon nodded.

"That's right." She coughed, and raised her wings once more.

"The night shall lâ€"there it is again!"

Several ponies in the audience, now feeling slightly less terrified, exchanged odd looks and confused glances (Pinkie Pie, meanwhile, just looked disappointed).

As for Twilight Sparkle, she was examining a bowl of punch she conveniently happened to be nearby.

For while Nightmare Moon had been mini-monologuing, the bowl had been shaking.

Somehow, she had a horrifying suspicion that this had something to do with the fact that all of the Crusaders had been missing since shortly before she'd arrived in Ponyville.

"Really," Nightmare Moon demanded, "I cannot be the only one here who can hear it. No-one?"

Fluttershy raised a hoof. "I think I can hear it, your highness."

The ripples in the bowl were increasing, and now Twilight was certain over the murmur of the crowd that she could hear something herself.

It sounded like something going _thoom_.

"You know what? Never mind, I shall deal with it in a moment," the dark alicorn declared. She coughed again, but with much less patience this time.

_thoom._

_thoom._

_thoom. thoom._

"THE NIGHT SHALL LAÂ€!"

Twilight wasn't actually certain if Nightmare Moon actually finished her declaration, as just halfway through the roof caved in, when a great green copper hoof effortlessly smashed through it, splintering wood and glass as it descended towards Nightmare Moon.

About the only thing missing as the poor mare was flattened instantly was a comical sound effect.

Twilight looked up through the sizable hole in the roof, and saw the sight of the Statue of Harmony (which was kind of obvious, with the giant metal hoof and all) standing there.

Over the noise of bits of building still falling, Ponyville's citizens reacting with their customary restraint and caution, and a muffled moan from Nightmare Moon, Twilight could hear music (Sweetie Belle, from the sound of it) coming from the surprisingly animated statue.

That, and the distant sound of Scootaloo and Diamond Tiara arguing over who got the "next go".

She sighed, as she prepared a lecture on animating statues and/or historical monuments, and why while it was fun, it was also very wrong.

* * *

>171.10 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>Not surprisingly, there was mass panic in Ponyville.

"It's the end of the world!" one pony shouted, looking up at the celestial body in the sky that was coming closer.

Surprisingly enough, it seemed to be appropriate for once as the moon was jerking erratically in the sky while all the time coming closer to Equus.

Twilight Sparkle, Anchor and mage supreme, was already on the case and she was not amused by what the cause was.

"Lemon, quit it!" Nyx Sparkle giggled and snorted as her fianc  ran his wings along her side, her horn still glowing and attached to the moon.

Panting, Nyx turned her head to the purple mare banging her head against the wall. "Oh, hi mom, what's wrong?"

* * *

>171.11 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Pinkie didn't even need her loop memories to hit to know this was going to be a bad one. True, she'd Awoken with a flat mane before, but the short-cropped tail and the distantly familiar scent of pony sweat on top of that made for a foreboding combination.

Still, she wasn't quite prepared when the truth arrived.

Lunaâ€"dead, killed by a conspiracy theorist Twilight Sparkle when she returned. Celestia, raging, breaking Discord in two when he emerged. Chrysalis... missing, for some reason. Perhaps because Celestia forbade Cadence from ever leaving her sight after Luna died, or maybe staying hidden out of fear.

And then Sombra emerged...

She'd been warned by Twilight that this was likely to happen. Twilight didn't know where anybody but Applejack and Rarity would be in this timelineâ€”but Pinkie, oh, Pinkie rapidly assembled all the memories from her life, her service in the army, her partnership with her sister and the Unbroken Flyer. Her years, and years, and years of hate.

She sent out a ping. She got a few in reply. Then, with the power of lantern and chaos and force, she reached out to touch the mind of her anchor, languishing in a dungeon.

_Twilight, please tell me we don't have to play this straight._

There was a moment of terse silence.

...not this time, Pinkie, _ the telepathic reply finally came, almost relieved. _Go be a beacon._

Normally, Pinkie's smiles were filled with cheer and endless joy. But just this once... just this once, she allowed herself a grin as grim and dark as the world she was in.

```
"iiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIT'S _PARTY TIIIIIIIIIIIME!"
```

The creature that exploded out of the barracks was nephrotic, glimmering, cackling, and dusky dusky pink.

Across the battlefield it charged and danced, smacking soldiers away from each other, long curling arms taking darkened helms and throwing them into the massive maw. Mad laughter spun about, the confused armies finding themselves wearing colorful conical hats that oh so incidentally kept them shielded from any assault. Even Celestia paused as the monstrosity whisked past her, blinking in shock when five eyes seemed to wink eagerly.

Sombra quickly rose up on his crystal, but it was no use. The thing crawled up and curled around it like a tower, sharp teeth exposed. "OH HO HO HO! SOMBRA, DEAR KING SOMBRA. Are you afraid?" Its voice suddenly dropped to velvet. "You're the guest of honor here, Sombra. You shouldn't be afraid... no, I have something special planned for you. You... should be... COMPLETELY TERRIFIED!"**_

* * *

>171.12 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>The Time Out Tale, Part 1

Cheerilee looked up from her papers as the school door was almost slammed open. Almost, because while the door did swing fast and hard, the pony with her hoof on it still had just enough control to bring it to an abrupt stop before there was any real damage. Of course, given who the pony in question was, such a level of restraint wasn't really surprising... although the unnervingly wide smile and the odd springs of hair curling away from her mane did give the schoolteacher some pause.

"...Hello, Twilight. Is there something I can help you with?"

"Yes, actually!" the unicorn chirped just a little too brightly. "You heard all the pings, I hope?"

"Yes. It... seems as if every looper's Awake right now." Cheerilee cleared her throat. "Is there a reason for that?"

"Oh, we're fillysitting. See, Sleipnir's kid got up to some antics with a dollhouse and a rubber duck and the Amala code and... well, apparently Al Saiduq is dealing with a minor case of Cathisophobia, the whole branch is locked down while the admins try to make sure Lucifer isn't looping, and guess where dear old dad decided to put his precious tyke in time out!"

Cheerilee noted the odd twitch to Twilight's ear. "Ah." She paused. "Is she... really that badâ€"?"

"Cheerilee, she's been staying with me for three days, and while I normally try not to leap to conclusions, I can very definitively state that she is worse than... than..." Twilight frowned, thinking. "...than Diamond Tiara as raised by prince Blueblood!"

The schoolteacher frowned. "Tiara changed in _baseline,_ as I recallâ€" "

"Yes, I get it, overly stereotyped, not fair to the filly, look Cheerilee I am really stressed out." The unicorn leaned forward with an earnest look. "I need some relief. I need some time where I can gather myself. Please, let me enroll her here; eight hours a day away from her might be enough for me to handle this."

Cheerilee looked into her Anchor's eyes for a long moment.

"...alright." She began pulling out the necessary paperwork from her desk, retrieving her Element of Generosity from her subspace pocket. "So, I assume since Sleipnir isn't here, you're her legal guardian...?"

* * *

>Apple Bloom rose an eyebrow as she entered the schoolhouse, her eyes falling on not one, but two black alicorns seated near the front of the class. The one on the left was familiar, at the least; a frazzled blue-purple mane, weary slit indigo eyes, and just the hint of fangs in her forced smile. The one on the right, though...

Her luxurious crimson locks cascaded from around her elegantly spiraled horn, rippling to a rest between an incredible set of delicately feathered wings. Her eyes, gold with violet speckles, stared haughtily at Nyx as though judging her just worthy of attention. Apple Bloom glanced about as she moved to her seatâ€"yes, yes, all the colts were staring at her astounding form, some part of their hind brains trying desperately to jumpstart puberty.

The farmer leaned toward Sweetie. "So, we got a Sue this loop?"

"Worse." Sweetie discreetly nodded to the pair of black ponies. "Apparently that's Sleipnir and Epona's kid. As in, the Admins."

"Nyx told us that she's been locked into Equestria for a loop," Scootaloo confirmed. "So basically, she's a brat and now we have to deal with her."

Silver Spoon let out a sigh. "Come on, just because she's a red-and-black alicorn doesn't mean she's a bad pony. Maybe she just made a little mistakeâ€" "

"Ahem." Cheerilee stood in front of the class, absently nudging the Element of Generosity around her neck. "Class, before we begin, I'm sure some of you have noticed our two new students. I know many of you remember Nyx from the Summer Sun celebration, and I've been assured she's been trying to make friends with many of you, so I don't think I need to introduce her to anyone. Especially not after yesterday's little ice cream incident."

There was a smattering of giggles from the foals, and Nyx blushed. The other alicorn briefly had an expression of confusion, about to speakâ€" "

"The other, however, is a last minute transfer." Cheerilee smiled gently at the red-maned filly. "Why don't you come up and introduce yourself to your classmates, dear?"

Apple Bloom noticed the way that the filly paused, considering their teacher for a brief moment. Almost instinctively, she summoned Smart Cookie round her own neck; to her left and right, she saw the other Founders flash into being.

With utmost regality, the black alicorn stepped out of her desk and walked to the front of the classroom. She gathered herself, looking just a touch nervousâ€”but only a touch.

And then...

***"BEHOLD THE GLORY OF JORUNN! CHILD OF THE GREATEST OF DEITIES, SORCERESS SUPREME, APOTHEOSIS OF ALL! SHOULD YOU WISH TO WORSHIP SHE WHO IS BETTER THAN EACH OF YOU, YOU WILL FIND NO OBJECTION! SING WHATEVER HOSANNAS YOU SO DESIRE!"**

The filly stood, panting and grinning before the stunned foals. For a moment, everything was silent.

Diamond Tiara's shoulders slumped, letting her head meet her desk in a simple and elegant expression of aggravation. Apple Bloom reached out and patted her comfortingly.

Cheerilee sighed. "Yes, _well._ I'm afraid I cannot allow hosanna singing during classtime. Please take a seat, Jorunn."

* * *

>"...and so, after the Count surrendered, Fillydelphia became the first township to have an electorally selected mayor." Cheerilee turned from her easel of education to look to the class. "Does anypony want to tell me what that meant for Equestria?"

Twist hesitantly raised a hoof, clearing her throat as Cheerilee gave her a nod. "Um, the ethablithment of local governernth for all townth in Equethria?"

"That's absolutely right Twist!"

Jorunn flipped her mane dismissively. "And having said that, you have made your sole contribution to this classroom, township, and country and will now fade into obscurity."

Cheerilee frowned at her. "Jorunn, Twist is your classmate and I expect you to treat her as such."

The alicorn scoffed, giving her a challenging look. "And just how _am_ I supposed to treat my classmates? Let us not forget that I am inherently superior to them, simply because of my heritage!"

"Being more powerful, or having more powerful parents, does not make you superior." Cheerilee gestured to the easel. "I _just_ finished explaining what happened to a pony who thought that."

Jorunn glared. "So you want me to prove my own greatness?"

"I _want_ you to treat everypony with respect."

"And what have they done to _earn_ that respect?"

"They _exist._ That's enough."

"Um..." Twist cleared her throat. "Miss Cheerilee?"

The schoolteacher broke off her glare competition and shook her head, giving the filly an apologetic smile. "I'm sorry about that! I shouldn't have gotten caught up in... well, ahem. Where were we?"

* * *

>"...and that is how my father saved your entire world for the fourth time," Jorunn finished grandly, staring out at the enthralled masses... well, alright, they were only her classmates, but apparently that was important enough.

"Um." A tall, yellowy orange colt in the back raised a hoof. "I... don't remember any of that happening."

"Well, of course you wouldn't. Only the ponies that were looping then would!"

"Oh." After a moment, the colt raised his hoof again. "So, um... your dad sounds... awesome?"

"Merely AWESOME does not even _BEGIN_ to approach the _**MAGNIFICENCE**_of _**SLEIPNIR ODINSTEED!**_"

"Hey, if your dad's so awesome," squeaked the rotund bluish-green colt next to him, "what are _you_ doing _here?_"

Jorunn's feathers tightened for a moment, but she rallied quickly. "My presence here is a test of my own skills. I was placed in this world to train my powers, and in so doing become _worthy_ of joining my father in his glorious duties!"

"Oh yeah? How?"

"Iâ€!" Jorunn's hoof held in the air for a moment. "I... am not sure, but I KNOW that I can complete ANY task set before me! That is why I was granted the magic of your unicorns! THAT is why I have the WINGS of the PEGASI!"

There was a quiet moment.

"Er..." Apple Bloom cleared her throat. "And... the strength of the earth ponies?"

"Whâ€"? Ahem, _yes_. I have THAT as WELL!" Jorunn decreed haughtily. "In fact, I'll prove it! Right now!" She hopped off the table she was standing on, putting her forehooves underneath and straining. "Watch in, unngh, unabashed AWE, unf, as I _easily_, nnnrgh, lift this _fjandinn Ã¼ngur borÃ° ViÃ°skiptamiÃ°stÃ°!_"

The foals, looping and none, watched with flat gazes as she struggled to gain purchase on the grassy ground beneath her, trying to lift the wooden picnic table with various grunts and groans of effort.

Eventually she did manage to nudge it to the side, letting out a heavy breath. "What... what kind of enchanted wood is this made from?!"

"Ah'm thinkin' apple," Apple Bloom deadpanned.

"Could be oak," Nyx added with a shrug.

"You're not actually an alicorn are you," Twist stated. "You're a... what'th the word? Pegacorn?"

"I... perhaps I do not, in fact, have the strength of the earth ponies," Jorunn allowed. "But that does not LESSEN my deific HERITAGE in the slightest!"

"Oh come off it!" a pegasus colt snorted. "You're just building up all this pretend story about your dad being some awesome hero because you're jealous that you're not a princess!" He stood up, walking away from the audience of foals. "Come on, guys, recess is half-way over, let's not waste any more time on her."

"What?!" Jorunn cried, waving her hoof as the other foals began to get up and follow the pegasus. "That is preposterous! Every word that has left my lipsâ€"well, every word in regard to my father is real! What are youâ€"where are you all going?! Get back here! ÃŹÃ°
Ã¼risvar-bÃ¼lvaÃ°ur bÃ¼rn! _Hvernig dirfist_ Ã¼Ã° hunsa glÃ¼sileika minn! **Ã¼g mun rÃ¼fa sÃ¼lir yÃ¼ar Ã°t og nota Ã¼Ã¼ eins og smjÃ¼r!
**_**Fjandinn ykkur Ã¼ll!"**_

"Just ignore her nonthenthe," Twist advised the others. "My mom thayth ponieth like her thrive on attention."

* * *

>Cheerilee frowned to herself. This was the third day in a row that Jorunn had opted to remain in the schoolhouse during recess. The crusaders had, of course, explained what had happened, and today it was Silver Spoon who was sitting next to the black pegacorn; Jorunn was fiddling with her magic, trying to grip a pencil in her telekinesis.

"...I wish I was back home," she grumbled. "I could just shapeshift hands... why didn't Father _tell_ me earth ponies had magic? If I'd known, I'd have made sure my mortal vessel had it too!"

"Most ponies don't get to choose how they look at all," Silver pointed out. "The only reason _I_ can shapeshift is because of hard work and a random glitch."

"Yes, you earned that gift, I've heard the story." The golden magic levitated the pencil half an inch off the deskâ€"before shorting out with a violet spark. "GAH! I rigged my unicorn powers to be incredibly potent, but this Ã³heillvÃ¼nlegur lÃ¼tiÃ° stafur keeps _mocking_ me!"

"Power and control are two very different things," Cheerilee explained calmly, putting aside the papers she was grading for the moment. "You're actually doing very well for a filly of the age you assumed."

"That was Mother's one stipulation," Jorunn grumbled, flexing her wings. "She let me have a coat as ebony as her own hair, and the red mane of great uncle Thor, but I would appear as a child of the pony race. I did not realize it would come with so many restraints..."

"And what would you do if those restraints weren't there?" inquired Cheerilee. "If you could do all the things your parents can, if you had their power, what exactly _would_ you do?"

Jorunn frowned. "I... Well, I wouldn't use Equestria as my dollhouse. Doing that is the reason I'm stuck here in the first place."

Silver blinked. "That raises so many questions I didn't know I wanted to ask."

"Still, that doesn't answer the question of what you _would_ do," the schoolteacher pointed out.

Jorunn was silent for a while.

Then she tried to levitate the pencil. This time, though, it caught on fire.

"AAAAARGH! Til fjandans me! Ætta! Æg hata Ætta Ærl-ti! stafur, Æg fyrirl-t Ætta heimskur heim, og Æg er orðin lei Æ; h; Æi _barna Æeir h³ra_ er Æg neyddist til að sk³la me!"

Silver Spoon frowned. "Their mothers are actually mostly respectable mares, Æ sk-th|ll."

The black filly whirled on her. "Wha€"_you understood that?!_"

"Kindness. Omniglot. Speaking of which, Miss Cheerilee!" She raised a hoof melodramatically, waving it for attention. "Jorunn said a bad wooooooooord! Are you going to wash her mouth out with soap?!"

Cheerilee shook her head. "The soap treatment can have terrible side effects." She pulled a drawer open and withdrew a bottle of Listerine. "I prefer mouthwash."

* * *

>"I'm worried about her."

Twilight looked up from her cup of tea. "Who? Jorunn?"

Cheerilee nodded. "When she first came to my classroom she made a speech. 'Behold the glory of Jorunn,' and all that. But after she tried to show off in front of her classmates... well, she's grown more withdrawn. Especially around nonloopers." She took a sip of her own drink. "And around loopers she just... grumbles a lot. Curses in that tongue of hers..."

"She threw quite the tantrum the other day," Twilight revealed. "Demanded to know what it takes to become an alicorn, and€"well, she didn't take it very well when she realized she'd need to find a cutie mark first." A weary chuckle escaped her lips. "I swear, if this keeps up Davenport's going to be one rich pony."

The teacher nodded to herself. "I did notice she didn't have a mark... do you think it's possible for her to attain one this loop?"

"I... maybe?" Twilight wagged a hoof. "Cutie mark magic is a mystery in baseline, and even with all my research there's still a bit of weirdness. And Jorunn isn't all here anyway, technically; as I understand it her actual extra-dimensional form is basically VR'd into Equestria." She rolled her eyes. "I don't know if I've ever heard a more literal interpretation of 'bring your daughter to work day'."

"Still, from our perspective—which is being forced on her, if I understand correctly—she's still got quite some time left in the loop." Cheerilee rubbed at the flower-shaped jewel round her neck. "...actually... I think I'll test it."

"What?"

"I'm going to try to help Jorunn get her cutie mark," she explained. "It might do her some good. It'll give her something of her own to be proud of. Not something she needs to piggyback off her parents."

Twilight Sparkle nodded. "Well... I guess you did always care for your students a lot. It's worth a shot."

* * *

>"Hmm." Apple Bloom tapped her pencil on the paper. "Well... we could throw her through all our baseline attempts... wouldn't necessarily help her reputation, mind..."

Scotaloo shrugged. "At the very least, we'd get an idea of where her interests lie. We can work on directing her attention after that."

"I don't know girls... a lot of this seems to be more about her position in the pantheons," Sweetie mused. "Maybe we should run through the Norse and Celtic lists, see if there's anything missing?"

Cheerilee sighed, rubbing her forehead with a frown. "I should have known that this would be more complicated than I thought..." She gave the fillies a small smile. "Thanks for taking the weekend to help me with this. I know you must have your own plans—"

"Eh, this is more important than trying to set Braeburn up with Lil' Strongheart again." Apple Bloom rolled her eyes, idly scribbling down some basic crusades. "Honestly, Ah can never tell which way he swings... every loop it's always either stallions or mares, never both, even when he's interested in people outside his species. Never bi. Statistically it's weird as all get out, but there ya go."

Sweetie gave her a look. "Huh. Is there a trend in either direction?"

"Not any real big one. It's always ten loops or less in one direction or the other."

"Wow, that is weird. A near-even binary split trend... We'll have to talk to Cadance to figure out what that means."

Scotaloo cleared her throat. "As much as I adore talking about a cowpony's sexuality, I think we should focus on our current project. Besides, he's obviously a closeted ace."

Apple Bloom blinked, then facehooved. "Why didn't Ah think o' that?! Herd based society in early industrial revolution, obviously asexuals would not know what they areâ€"

"Well, to be fair," Cheerilee pointed out with an amused smile, "you three don't have a track record of recognizing a pony's romantic preference."

"Hey, the love poison was just one time!" Scotaloo objected. "And me and Di are just taking it slow, is allâ€"

"Wait," Sweetie Belle interjected, "you're dating Diamond Tiara?! When did this start?!"

"She was getting kind of annoyed at friendzoning Alula every loop, my in-loop parents were always seeking to pair me up with some rich colt, we decided to give it a shotâ€"I mean, we're not sure if it's serious or not, but this has been going for a few loops now."

"Huh." Apple Bloom looked at the pegasus. "Ya know, that would explain why you're missin' every fourth saturday. It's just... you and Diamond?"

"Berry's dating Discord," Cheerilee pointed out.

"Yeah, but... they're both kinda weird. Ah'm tryin' ta figure out what it is that would keep Scoots and Diamond together..."

A great and massive roar resounded from outside the house. The four of them shared a look.

"...I don't think we had any monster attacks scheduled for today," Sweetie Belle mused. "Maybe we should go check that out."

* * *

>"GRAAAAA! YOU PATHETIC LITTLE PEST!" A massive red claw swiped at a black spot in the sky. "GIVE ME BACK MY GOLD!"

"GefÃ°u Ã¼aÃ° til baka? Hvers vegna Ã¼tti Ã°g gera Ã¼essi Ã¼Ã° grÃ³in eÃ°lu?" Jorunn dodged the swipe and blasted at the claw with her magic. "Ã°g Ã¼tlar aÃ° nota allt hoard Ã¼ og ganga Ã°r mundlaug Ã¼ viÃ° Ã¼aÃ°, svo aÃ° Ã°g geti **synt Ã¼- blÃ³Ã°i flÃ¼Ã°ir frÃ¼ lÃ¼-k Ã¼itt!*" She grinned maniacally as the crown she was holding juggled from one hoof to the other.

"DO YOU KNOW WHO YOU FACE?! I AM **VERTRAINZER THE GRAND, TERROR OFâ€"!*"

The red dragon blinked as Jorunn rammed into his chest.

"...What are you doing."

"Glæðilega blað mitt má; gata brjóstið og setja hjarta á mitt á eldinn!" the tiny pegacorn cried, pushing her head into his thick scales. "Logarnir verður ljós á; nánur himinnur á- margar vikur til að koma!"

"...you do realize I don't understand you, right?" Vertrainer sighed, reaching down to pluck Jorunn off. "Of course I'd have to deal with the crazy pony hatchling... Now why don't you give me that crown and AAAAARGH!" He opened his claws and tried to shake the filly's toothy grip off.

It was at this moment that the twenty-four associated bearers of Harmony (and Angel Bunny) all gathered at the mountain base. Twilight Sparkle pulled a megaphone out of her subspace pocket. "Okay! This fight is over! Mister Dragon, please put the filly down!"

"This crazy pony attacked me!"

Twilight sighed. "Jorunn, please stop attacking the dragon. And give him back whatever you stole!"

"I WILL NOT BE DENIED MY GLORY!" Jorunn crowed, flying high and lancing a beam of magic up the dragon's arm.

"See?" The red reptile gestured at the filly. "She's the one pulling all this!"

"Is she actually hurting you?" Twilight asked through the megaphone.

"Well..." Vertrainer raised a claw, and then lowered it awkwardly. "No, actually, she's not."

For some reason this only got Jorunn to scream louder. "Þú mun mala beinum þáar á- ryki og ganga á þá kákur á þá af þeim!" She dove at his wings. "Þú mun ráfa augun á þá hálftu á þá þú inni og umbreyta þeim á- mikla ráðum á- eigin hálftu minni!" Magic lanced from her horn. "*****Innyflum á á- n verður ... vera ... vera eitthvað virkilega fánst og skelfilegur!" Her hooves pounded at his scales. "*****Óg á tla að skera á stytta af má á þá hálftu á þá á-na!"

"...Well, now she's hurting me just a little bit." The dragon rolled his eyes. "Can you understand what she's saying?"

Twilight glanced at Derpy, who shook her head flatly. "You don't want to know."

Silver turned to Cheerilee. "How many bottles of mouthwash do you have?"

"As many as I need... Twilight, can I have the megaphone for a moment?"

The purple unicorn shrugged, handing it over. "Go ahead."

"Thank you. Ahem." Cheerilee brought the megaphone up to her muzzle. "Jorunn, fighting a dragon isn't brave, it's reckless. Especially if the only reason you're fighting is to prove yourself. What are you hoping to accomplish with this?"

"I FIGHT FOR GLORY!"

"You won't get any glory here. You'd be more likely to get glory if you helped your classmates out."

"NO! I WILL FINISH THIS!" Jorunn darted toward the dragon. "PREPARE TO Drrrkâ€"!"

Vertrainzer looked at the pony gripped between his thumb and forefinger, raising an eyecrest as he plucked a gold crown from her hooves. "This is mine." Without another word, he released her and turned around.

The pegacorn shook her head, slightly dazed by the grip but focusing on the large field of red in her vision. "Urrnrngh... GET BACK HERE YOU COWAâ€"!" She failed to notice the massive yellow wing until it clonked her in the head.

* * *

>"Mmmmrnnngh. Unnn... hunh?" Jorunn's ears perked at the odd beeping sound she heard. Beeping... was she home?

"Looks like you're up."

No... that was the voice of the teacher pony. So she was still in Equestria. But what would the beeping...?

Her eyes shot open and she catapulted to a sitting position. "WHAT BLASPHEMOUSâ€"?!"

"You were knocked out by the dragon's wing when he turned around," Cheerilee explained. "Dash managed to catch you before you hit the ground. The doctors say you're going to be fine, thoughâ€" "

"NO! I WASâ€"I was... No. Nonononono. NO. No..." Jorunn buried her head in her hooves. "Noooooooooooo... I was so close. I was so close."

Cheerilee frowned, but said nothing.

Jorunn started to sob. "WHY?! Why do you seem so determined to, to keep me away from everything?! Why... why... why..."

* * *

>The students had, of course, heard what happened. There really wasn't any way to avoid it: A filly purposefully antagonizing a dragon would make news anywhere, especially in the small town of Ponyville.

Their responses were... mixed.

"...she only did it for attention," Rumble pointed out. "She even said so herself! Everyone knows she attacked him 'for glory', whatever that means!"

Twist shook her head. "I'm not thaying that'th not true, it'th jutht... how crazthy do you have to be to try that? How dethperate?" She glanced toward the schoolhouse. "Have you notithed she doethn't ever come to retheth with uth?"

"Yeah, so? She's trying to be all high and mighty up in her palace."

"Or maybe she doethn't have any friendth..."

"Nyx and her buddies seem to do fine with her." Rumble snorted. "I don't know why they're wasting time with her, but whatever."

Twist gave him a long look. Then she trotted toward the schoolhouse.

"Hey! Where're you going?"

"I jutht want to have a chat with Jorunn, that'th all."

"...Fine, whatever. We'll be out here once she's done yelling at you."

Twist rolled her eyes, pushing open the schoolhouse door. The fillies known to the rest of the class as the Nyx Six had always kept an eye on Jorunn in shifts, but ever since the dragon incident they'd really upped their attention; no less than three of them remained with the black pegacorn. Today it was Diamond, Sweetie Belle, and Nyx herself... and of course miss Cheerilee.

"Did you need something, Twist?"

"I jutht wanted to talk to Jorunn." The filly adjusted her glasses. "That'th okay, ithn't it?"

Cheerilee nodded, giving the sulking pegacorn a glance. "I don't have any problem with it if she doesn't."

Twist approached her classmate slowly. "Hey there."

"...Mmmm."

"...so. Uh... how've you been?"

"Why would it matter?"

"Um... becauthe you're... around," Twist managed lamely. "If you're here, then how you are matterth, right?"

Jorunn gave her a flat look. She picked up a pencil. "Does this matter?"

"...I'm going to thay yeth. Becauthe... becauthe you can write with it!" the filly claimed triumphantly. "Tho, thinthe you matter, what you write matterth, and that meanth what you write with matterth!"

The pegacorn stared at her, violet-flecked golden eyes half lidded.

"Look, my point with I... want to know how you're doing, because I kind of care about you. A friend."

Jorunn looked away. "We're not friends."

"But we can be, if you want."

"Why bother? Loop ends, you'll forget me, and I'll be back home."

Twist bit her lip. "That... Okay, I thill don't get that, to be honeth, but if it's th true that's th all the more reathon for me to be your friend now! Cauthe you've gotta treathure ponieth while they're around."

There were those golden eyes again, giving her that look. Twist stood firm, though, smiling back at her.

"...I suppose I was put here for a reason," Jorunn finally allowed, giving a reluctant sigh. "If you really must know how I am, I feel..."

She trailed off.

Twist nodded. "Yeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeth?"

"...I don't know. It's not sadness, sadness is active. But it's not boredom, boredom just... covers. It's... hollow."

"Lithleth?"

"...Listless," Jorunn agreed with a nod. "That's a good word for it."

"Huh. Well when I'm feeling down I can always go home and bake something. Maybe you could help me with that?"

"Well, I suppose. Not that I have anything better to do, and from what Apple Bloom's mentioned you willâ€œ"

"Ut-Ut-Ut!" Diamond interjected quickly. "That particular part of the future is something we don't reveal."

Jorunn blinked. "What? Why would you notâ€œ"

A pink hoof pushed into her muzzle, and Diamond shot Twist an apologetic smile. "Could you excuse us please? She'll be at your home later today, I promise, we just need to clear this up real quick."

"Uh... sure?" Twist tilted her head. "Are... are you god-child time travelerth too?"

"No, just ordinary time travelers. Long story, we can explain later." Diamond nodded toward the door. "For now, though, please?"

"Oh. Uh... okay." Twist backed out of the schoolhouse, returning to the rest of the foals.

"So?" Rumble asked. "Did she start swearing in that fake language of hers again?"

Twist frowned at him. "No, she did not. In fact, she's coming over to my place later. There!"

* * *

>"...Thooooo," Twist said casually. "Why are you here, Mith Cheerilee?"

"Well, I'll admit that Jorunn is a special case for me." Cheerilee gently ruffled the grumpy pegacorn's mane. "So I decided that I'd join her in her little trip over. Don't worry, I'm just here to keep an eye on her, you won't even notice me."

Jorunn said absolutely nothing. The grim scowl on her face was enough.

"...Ooooookay then." Twist turned to the filly with a wide grin. "Hey, wanna tell me where I make my thweeth?"

"That is what I came here for," Jorunn deadpanned, giving her a glare.

"Great!" Twist cried, pretending not to notice. "Come on, the kitchen is this way!" She grabbed Jorunn's hoof eagerly and dragged her into her home, Cheerilee following with an amused smile.

As soon as they entered, Twist went about gathering sugar and starch, peppermint and vanilla, various pans and pots, all placed around a central stove-top oven. Jorunn found herself stuffed into an apron, her wings fluttering rapidly as she was pushed toward the cookware. "What are youâ€"?!"

"Well, if I'm not going to be around after this loop thing you talk about a lot, I have to teach you how to bake thweeth now, right?" Twist grinned, slipping on her own apron. "Don't worry, I know what I'm doing, and if anything goes really bad Mith Cheerilee will pull you out of trouble."

The pegacorn shot a pleading look to the schoolteacher... who merely crossed her forelegs and leaned against a wall. "She's got a point."

"ÃžÃ° slÃ|gur svikari..."

"Just because I left my mouthwash at the school doesn't mean I don't take notes."

"I wasn't swearing," Jorunn smarmed, fluttering her eyelashes innocently. "I was only comparing you to my grandmother."

"Oh, you have a grandma?" Twist asked brightly. "What's she like?"

"Very intelligent, great sense of humor, accepts all sorts."

"Thoundth like a nithe lady." Twist looked over her shoulder. "Uh... Mith Cheerilee, are you laughing?"

"No. Most certainly not." The schoolteacher couldn't keep a smile off her face. "You were going to show Jorunn how to bake sweets?"

"Oh yeah!" Twist turned back to Jorunn. "Tho what we do firth ith check to see if our cooking toolth are clean. We can do that byâ€"

Jorunn washed a wave of magic over the pots and pans.

"...um, what did you juth do?"

"Cleansing spell," replied the black filly. "This body is technically a construct, so I wasn't sure if it was immune to common Equestrian diseases, so I kind of sort of made purifying things one of my natural abilities."

"...riiiiiiiiiight." Twist decided not to press any further.

"The spell really does work," Cheerilee added from behind them. "I've seen Rarity do something similar once or twice."

"Rarity? Thweetie'th thithter?" Twist frowned. "How many of you time travelerth _are_ there?"

Cheerilee pursed her lips. "Let's see... four sets of bearers, that's twenty-four, plus Celestia, Luna, Discord, Cadence, Shining Armor, and Angel... an even thirty, I think. Oh, and Mac, can't forget him! Not counting the Founders, or Pinkie's A.I. granddaughter or that talking fruit hat she carries in her pocket... or Applejack's magical science fiction tree, that's another soul-bound intelligenceâ€"

She belatedly realized Twist was staring at her and coughed. "So, thirty-one regular timer travelers and a few associated others that kind of tag along."

"...um. Right." Twist shook her head. "I'm not even going to quethion it. Hey, Jorunn, what'th your favorite candy?"

"Rocks."

"...you mean rock candy?"

"No. Rocks."

Twist blinked. "But... you're not an earth ponyâ€"

"Not literal rocks, Rocks! They're... I don't know, they have nuts and raisins in them, and some spices..." She waved vaguely. "I think it's a kind of cookie."

"Oh... Oh! They're called Rockth cauthe they look like rockth, right?" Twist was already pushing away most of the dishes and putting together an assortment of ingredients. "Okay, what I want you to do ith to meathure out the ingredientth I athk for into thith bowl..."

* * *

>171.6 continued (ORBSyndicate)

* * *

>Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 6: The Diner

Rainbow Dash stumbled into the Diner, clothing in tatters and looking like a haggard mess. Her wings were manifested, although folded up.

The patrons of the diner gave her a glance, but quickly got back to their coffee. It was way too early in the morning to deal with a harpie.

And it wasn't like they'd remember any of this in an hour anyway.

Rainbow sat down with the rest of the 6 and Stan.

"Uhâ€¦ Rainbow?"

"Yes Stan?"

"The only thing you're wearing for a top is a big leaf."

"I had to go with what I could find."

Rarity blinked. "You _do _keep extra clothing in your pocket right dear?"

Rainbow sighed. "Went through all five outfits today."

"What on earth were you _doing?"_

"Well Stan remember when I was trying to karate chop that plank of wood?"

"And you failed miserably?"

"I still think it was rigged."

Stan grinned. "So what if it was? You needed a lesson in humility."

"Uh-huh yeah. So I stormed off into the forest punching trees down and stuffâ€¦" Rainbow went on, taking the smoothie Derpy Hooves managed to bring to the booth without anything breaking in a spectacular fashion. After quick slurk, she continued. "And then I sorta got involved with some manataurs in a bit of a manliness testerâ€¦"

* * *

>"HOLE OF PAIN!"

"I CAN TAKE PAIN!"

"ACROSS A GORGE!"

"I CAN HAVE WINGS!"

"MUSCLES!"

"I HAVE WING MUSCLES!"

"WRESTLING!"

"TAKE THAT MANATAUR!"

"WARPAINT!"

"AAAAAAAAAA!"

"DRAMATIC SHIRT SHREDDING!"

RIIIIP!

"ONE HIT KNOCK-OUTS!"

PUNCH.

"YELLING FOR NO REASON!"

"AAAAAAAAAA (reprise)"

"EPIC TRAINING TAPE"

"THIS SOUNDS LAME!"

"DRAMATIC CRITICISM!"

"THIS SOUNDS LAME!"

"Tea Party."

"SMASH ALL DISHES!"

* * *

>"Then of course I was told to, for the final test, kill the Multibear beast. Turns out he's a nice guy, even if he does have odd music tastes. So I returned and told the manataurs that I wouldn't do their dirty work." Rainbow guzzled the rest of the smoothie. "Then. Well. I went back and announced that I wouldn't do anything to the bear. Then"

* * *

>"What are you some kind of girl?" Tirek, king of manataurs roared.

"ACTUALLY YES!" Rainbow said, grinning, pulling the only dress (and last outfit) she had out of her Pocket. "TAH-DAH!"

Gasps were heard around the group.

"Man you guys are stupid." Rainbow observed.

"But.. Butâ€¦" Pupitaur said. "How? HOW ARE YOU SO AWESOME!"

"FEMALES CANNOT BE AWESOME!"

"RUN MY BROTHERS! RUN FROM THE ABOMINATION!"

Tirek stood, glaring at Rainbow Dash before enveloping her in flame.

* * *

>"â€¦and that's what happened to my dress. My other outfits were consumed by the tests. Two by the hole of pain."

Stan rolled his eyes. "That was dumb."

"I know." Rainbow Dash said, grinning. "I now know I can pass a manliness test."

"You didn't take out the Multibearâ€¦"

"I did bring them a T-rex head."

Stan blinked. "â€¦Fair enough." He said, chugging some Pitt Cola. (He had long ago mastered the art of swallowing the pit.)

Lazy Susan walked up to them, saying "WINK!" while looking at Stan. She giggled. He laughed nervously.

Rainbow Dash's face turned into a sly one. "Oh? Oh what's this? What exactly is happening-?"

"I told the Pinkie and Rarity that I _didn't want to get hooked up with her this time!_"

"Oh darlingâ€¦" Rarity said, a bit sheepishly. "But she seemed perfect at the momentâ€¦"

Twilight blinked. "What is WITH everyone and playing MATCHMAKER this Loop?"

"Demonic influence?" Pinkie offered, her eyes going completely white.

Stan blinked. "Just to be clear, she's NOT a demon. Right?"

"Oh no of course not." Rarity said, smiling.

"She's just a Goddess of Chaos." Fluttershy said.

Stan took a spit-take, launching the Pitt into Fluttershy, knocking her out cold.

"TWENTY MANLINESS POINTS!" Rainbow yelled.

Stan backed away slowly. "You don't meanâ€¦ one of THOSE Chaos Gods? Please no." Stan said, backing away, bad memories flashing across his mind.

"I take it you've been to 40k then?" Twilight asked.

Stan turned to glare. "I. Absolutely. Hate. Those. Guys."

"Oh the looping ones are much nicerâ€|" Fluttershy offered.

"Can it Empress." Stan grumbled. "WHAT is SHE?"

Pinkie stood on the table in front of Stan. "I am Pinkamena Dianne Pie Pines, Chaos Goddess of Parties, Fun Lord of the Sith, The One Who Sends Shoggoths Gibbering in Terror, the Joy of Faust, the One with Cosmic Pinkie Sense, the One who is Sometimes Made of Cotton Candy, the Pink One of Many Skills, Seer of ALL and BEYOND, The Koopa King's Former Roommate, Part-Time Eldritch Abomination, and I am here to SPREAD PARTIES!"

Stan just stared, unblinking. After what seemed like many long minutes, he spoke.

"So, worse then?"

"AB_SO_LUTELY!"

Stan turned to Twilight. "Yeah. She's the second most terrifying thing I've ever met."

"What's the first?"

"You'll find out." Stan said, his face clouding ominously.

"I already know." Pinkie said, staring deep into Stan's soul.

"Yep. This just got weird. Goooodbye." Stan said, standing up and walking out.

The mane six were left in the diner. "Soâ€|" Applejack said. "Anyone got a new shirt for Rainbow?"

"The leaf functions just fine." Rainbow said in a huff. "I can survive on my own clothing skills."

Applejack blinked. "Uh-huh. Yeah. You do realize that there's a caterpillar on it slowly eating it away."

"FIIIIIIIIIIINE."

"Ooh!" Pinkie said, grinning. "I have just the thing!"

And that was how Rainbow Dash ended up wearing a pink sweater.

* * *

>Stan walked out of the diner, breathing heavily.

That pink girl. That pink girl was justâ€|" bringing back many bad memories.

He was fully aware old loopers had really impressive resumes and he was fully aware that Pinkie wasn't listing even a small percentage of what she knew. He had heard about her, the Looper who was able to retain many many many abilities between loops. The party pony. The creature that had only one purpose in existence: to party.

That wasn't what concerned him. (Although his rather unpleasant experiences with the other Chaos Gods had been horrid, he could at least understand them after a bit of thought.)

The vast majority of people he came across he could understand, analyze, figure out how to swindle or otherwise.

Pinkie defied that. However, plenty of people out-swindled him throughout the Loops.

No - What concerned him is the WAY she did it. Complete randomness. A look of all-knowing. Staring into spaces where there was nothing, and somehow knowing too much. A mind that is always working, continually plotting things out. A mental state that seemed random, but couldn't be, because it got so much done.

She was a being of nigh-unimaginable power.

And she had a mind frame suspiciously close to that of Stan's enemyâ€|

* * *

>Lyra sat at the diner, observing. She was sitting at the same table as Berry Punch and Bon Bon, carrying on a conversation of sorts. In reality, she was just trying to look like she was. She had discussed with Bon Bon the art of pretend conversation. Bon Bon was controlling the topic, and Lyra was nodding and apparently fixated on the conversation. Berry Punch was there as an unwitting part of the plan: she was drunk as a skunk and was talking louder than a wolf howled, and Bon Bon was responding. With the three-way dynamic of conversation leader, crazy drunk, and quiet responder, it looked like they were having a very in-depth conversation to the casual observer.

Lyra was, in reality, scribbling in her Journal under the table. (She had long ago mastered writing without looking at the paper.) And was making note of Rainbow Dash'sâ€| well wings. Not to mention that the girl was all beat up like she'd just been through a trial.

Lyra pondered this. Possible run in with the manataurs? Multibear? Nah the Multibear was a nice guy. Bit odd taste for music thoughâ€|

Pinkie and Twilight were the other ones she was watching closely. She had caught Twilight using magic effortlessly, which should be impossible. Everything Lyra ever found needed some form of energy conversion, and more often than not an incantation of some sort. From what she observed Twilight had just used magic with no outward change, no loss of energyâ€| Perhaps she just wasn't using enough or had some kind of magi crystal?

Then there was Pinkie.

Lyra had forty pages on Pinkie.

She still understood nothing.

Pink fire seemed to be a theme with her, as were the party cannons. She was either the most friendly person ever, or the most ominous. Lyra didn't get it.

The other three, Applejack, Fluttershy, and Rarity seemed more or less normal. Lyra suspected she just hadn't found out what they were capable of yet.

As the six of them walked out of the diner, Lyra folded up her book. "Bon Bon, let's go."

Bon Bon nodded.

The two left Berry Punch (drunk as a skunk) talking to nothing.

They walked out, carefully avoiding the red-hooded men surrounding the dinerâ€|

* * *

>Ylen naq Fjrrgv r Qebcf fubhyq ernyy l gunax Oreel Chapu...

* * *

>

**Author's Note:****

171.1: It isn't easy being imperialist.

171.2: Mercy Thompson. She hangs around Leah more.

171.3: ROT13.

171.4: Early Applejack-as-looper.

171.8: Confused?

171.12: Yeah, confused.

179. Chapter 179

172.1 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Twilight paused in reading her book as five knocks sounded on her door. She didn't understand why ponies knocked on her door, the Library was a public place, after all.

Sighing, she marked her place and opened the door.

"Hello Lyra...Lyra, Lyra, Lyra, and Lyra..." she said, already feeling the headache coming on. Five identical turquoise unicorns stood outside wearing identical sheepish grins. "Lemme guess, you want an explanation?"

"Yup."

"Unquestionably."

"Sure."

"Without fail."

"HANDS!"

Four Lyras looked at a fifth and Twilight arched an eyebrow.

"Aaanyway..." she said, "I'm guessing each of you is one of Lyra's personalities...but rather than your own unique bodies, you've simply been copied into Lyra's body..."

She blinked then asked warily, "Do each of you have the others' voices in your heads?"

The five mares exchanged glances.

"Aye-aye."

"Roger roger."

"10-4."

"Fo' shizzle."

"Beyond a doubt."

Twilight's eye twitched.

* * *

>In the Crystal Empire, Cadence pricked her ears as a howl of frustration pierced through the howling blizzard and into the recesses of Cadence's palace.

"I know that sound. That's the sound of a very upset unicorn..."

Shining lifted his head off her barrel and squinted, pricking his ears. "Huh...you're right. Those sure were the days, hm?"

Cadence grinned and nuzzled him. "Sneaking kisses when she wasn't looking? Oh yes..." she purred, wrapping her hooves around him and snuggling close.

* * *

>172.2 (wildrook)

* * *

>Twilight blinked as she and her friends listened to Cheese Sandwich's rambling as Pinkie had asked the question involving his life's story.

So far, she couldn't make heads or tails out of his story as the story was mostly disjointed. It started from Pinkie's Surprise Party for Maud, then it mentioned something about a bait shop, then a disdain for sauerkraut. Something about being force-fed for...twenty-seven years? She kind of stopped paying attention when Dash got confused at the number of molecules on AK Yearling's plot ("Off by three?" Dash asked herself).

Spike was about to ask a question, but noticed Pinkie Pie listening intently...or what looked like it. They could never tell with her as they were hearing about the airship flight from hell (The albanian mares with high body odor, the young foal throwing up repeatedly, the flight running out of soda and salted peanuts, and the in-flight movie about a giant dome starring the Flim-Flam Brothers) not to mention the crash he survived, which Trixie would confirm to be slightly impossible ("Oh, the Equinity!" says Rarity before getting the couch out).

Then he got to the part about the disfigured pony with the seagull haircut and sole nostril at the Heart's Warming Inn fighting over a lucky snorkel. Applejack was more confused at the fight itself. She's not one for fancy mathematics like her brother, but didn't a degree need to be required in order to take out an appendix and to give a colon irrigation? ("Oh, my," Fluttershy muttered).

When it got to the part about the donut shop with no donuts, Spike wondered what kind of cruel joke was played on him. The answer came when Cheese Sandwich was given a box of one dozen starved crazed weasels, which made Fluttershy be the one to faint. The screaming he did was not helping the situation. It did show that he had love for a short time, although it was hard to tell whether or not they met a painter pony in one of the previous loops. Still, what kind of divorce involved membership to a record company? ("Ah know Svengallop's not a nice stallion," Applejack muttered, "but isn't that overreactin?")

However, things started to come to a point after mentioning that he got a part-time job at a Hayburger Joint, but putting out a grease fire with his face? Twilight wondered what kind of surgeon would make his face scar-less. Then it took a turn for a dark when he mentioned how he couldn't understand sarcasm and actually cut someone's hooves off with a chainsaw. Then the anecdote came up where when told somepony hadn't had a bite in three days, he bit their jugular vein (Once again, Rarity fainted).

"Anyways, um..." Cheese Sandwich said, spacing out for a bit. "Where was I? I kind of lost my train of thought." He then looked at his listeners as they were in various states of facial expressions. "Well, I guess this is a roundabout way of saying it. The whole point I'm trying to make here is... **I! HATE! SAUERKRAUT!***"

Twilight face-hooved at that while the others (sans Pinkie) were dazed and confused by the time the Heartsong ended.

"Eleven minutes and twenty-three seconds," Spike muttered, taking a quill and writing the record down. "Cheese Sandwich has us beat..."

"That's your life story?" Twilight asked him. "The timeline was all over the place...and all of that was due to having a diet of Sauerkraut?"

"Of course," Pinkie Pie replied. "When fed one thing for too long, you tend to go a little nuts." Applejack nodded, remembering her visit with the Pie Family.

* * *

>172.3 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Riley blinked Awake, glancing around her room. "Okay guys, what's the plan for this loop?" she whispered under her breath.

_Hold on, mysterious voice, we're still getting our loop memoriesâ€"_

The young girl winced and clutched her head as the sound of hundreds of marbles reverberated through it. If she could have thought through the haze, she might have questioned the whole 'mysterious voice' comment.

Thankfully, though, the headache went away as quickly as it came.

_...okay, I can get us being emotional avatars in another consciousness,_ a voice only she could hear groused. _But why am **I** Sadness?_

_Process of elimination, I think. Sweetroll as Joy and Seapony as Anger is obvious, then Thief as Disgust because sometimes science is just creepy, and really a pony wouldn't be good for Fear so I wound up with that._

"Um... hello?"

_There's that voice again... _The new voice gasped. _Waitâ€"Riley?! Can you hear us?!_

Riley rolled her eyes. "I'm the loop anchor. Welcome to my mind, I guess. Who are you?"

_Oh! I can take this one! _The eager voice was accompanied by a sudden burst of amusement; probably whoever was replacing Joy. _Hi, we're all Lyra Heartstrings! Well, kind of sort of. I'm Sweetroll, and then there's Pony and Seapony and Human and TheifScientistMiscellaneousOriginal. I'm taking Joy, Pony's sadness, Seapony's angerâ€"_

"I heard you talking before. I think I can get that... hold on. You're all Lyra?"

_Disassociative Loop Identity Disorder, _came the voice with a twinge of sass. _I accidentally broke my loop with a mirror and a time machine, so when I was activated I got a lot more loop memories than usual every loop. After a while, I made these guys to sort through it allâ€"_

_Quick question, _interjected a sour tone. _Do we have to act like our emotion all the time? Because I'm feeling a compulsion to mope, which just isn't me..._

"No, you can be whoever you want to be. But whenever you touch the console, I feel the appropriate emotion."

_Wait, hold on, _a nervous voice asked. _Are you saying that **we're **responsible for your mental health?!_

"...pretty much, yeah."

_Well shoo-be-featherin'-do. You're **screwed**._

_Oh come on, you two! _chirped... Sweetroll, right. _Having a little bit of crazy is perfectly healthyâ€"!_

_Whoa, hey, why are you banging on the keys?! _demanded... the one with a lot of names.

_I just want her to be happy with us! I mean we're going to be stuck here for a full loop..._

Riley's growing grin was suddenly replaced by an annoyed frown.
_Well, don't force it. Just... act naturally, okay Sweetroll? Sorry about that Riley._

"You may want to get your own hand off the console," the young girl replied.

_Wha-OH! _Her annoyance vanished. _Sorry about that. We're not used to having a jungian psychology setup..._

* * *

>172.4 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Fate has been cruel and order unkind

_How can I have sent you away?_

_The blame was my own; the punishment, yours_

_The harmony's silent today_

Celestia blinked Awake and found herself looking up at the familiar visage of the Mare in the Moon. Bringing a hoof to her eye, she wiped away the gathered tears and smiled a little as she heard her sister's voice, carried by the moonlight coating Equestria in its gentle glow.

_How my deeds pain me as time stretches long_

_How could I have hurt them this way?_

_So rest easy now, my punishment's mine_

_The weight of my crimes are my own_

Luna found herself on the surface of her beloved moon, looking up at the familiar planet of Equus. She wiped the crystal tears that decorated her face and smiled as her sister's warm voice wrapped around her.

_But into the stillness I'll bring you a song_

_And I will your company keep_

_Till your tired eyes and my lullabies_

_Have carried you softly to sleep_

Celestia let the Heartsong flow out of her, shaping her magic as she held the moon in her magic. She could feel her sister on the surface, free of the taint that had touched her all those decades ago and she wished she could control the length of the banishment, but it seemed to be hard-coded into the Loop at a thousand years. Either sister could break it, but it wasn't always a surefire way and crashes were common.

_But into that stillness you brought me your song_

_With your voice my company kept_

_For your tired eyes and sweet lullabies_

_In exile I pay you my debt_

Luna sighed softly, closing her eyes, enjoying the distant touch of the sun's warmth. Every time she felt the sun on her coat, it reminded her of how the sisters would spend their childhood nights cuddled together, reading through old tomes and learning about history and magic.

_Once did a pony who shone like the sun_

_Look out on her kingdom and sigh_

_She smiled and said, "Surely, there is no pony_

_So lovely and so well beloved as I"_

Celestia grimaced. It varied from Loop to Loop. Sometimes she was a heartless tyrannical ruler, forcing her ponies to love in love and harmony according to her rule. Every Equestrian Looper loathed them and whenever they told Celestia about those kinds of Loops, Celestia congratulated them if they managed to end her reign or slap some sense into her.

_Once did a pony who gleamed like the moon_

_Look out on her kingdom and sigh_

_Dejected she cried, "Surely there is no pony_

_ "Who loves me, or finds any love in my night."_

Luna frowned. She knew every race on Equestria enjoyed her nights. It was the fact most of them didn't realize there was a Princess of the Night that sometimes irritated her, but she had grown used to it over the Loops. She had thousands of friends to talk with, share stories and swap things with.

_So great was her reign and so brilliant her glory_

_That long was the shadow she cast_

_Which fell dark upon the young sister she loved_

_And grew only darker as days and nights passed_

Celestia closed her eyes and focused of memories of her sister. From foals, to fillies, to mares, to Princesses...they had done everything together. Sometimes they fought " it was nearly impossible _not_ to, with siblings " but they were rarely serious. After...that incident, Luna had let darkness into her heart.

_So great was her pain, she rose in rebellion_

_Against those who cared for her most_

_She let the Nightmare fall on those she ruled_

_And threatened to grip them in permanent cold_

Luna closed her eyes, clad in her sister's magic embrace. She let out a soft sigh and let her mind wander. She loved her sister, no doubt about it, yet there had been times she had rubbed her coat the wrong way and Luna had distanced herself, trying to find a balance.

_Lullay moon princess, goodnight sister mine_

_And rest now in moonlight's embrace_

_Bear up my lullaby, winds of the earth_

_Through cloud, and through sky, and through space_

Celestia opened her eyes and stared at her sister, who stepped forward and the two sisters shared a nuzzle.

_Lullay, dear Tia, good night sister mine_

_Rest now in starlight's embrace_

_May this cool lullaby reach you in dreams_

_And ease you your passage of days_

Luna opened her eyes and stared at her sister. Stepping forward, the younger sister gave her elder a nuzzle.

_Carry the peace and the coolness of night_

_And carry my sorrow in kind_

_Luna, you're loved so much more than you know_

_May troubles be far from your mind_

_And forgive me for being so blind_
_May my apologies find you this night_
_And may my sorrow in kind_
_Tia, you loved me much more than I knew_
_Forgive me for being so blind_

Celestia stroked over Luna's coat, murmuring tenderly to her, as only a sister could do and she felt the young Alicorn relax.

_Soon did that pony take notice that others_
_Did not give her sister her due_
_And neither had she loved her as she deserved_
_She watched as her sister's unhappiness grew_
_Soon did her sister do what was demanded_
_And gave to the Moonlight her due_
_Breaking the Harmony, she saved her ponies_
_And banished her, as a wise ruler must do_

Luna felt Celestia stroke over her and she leaned into her touch, as only a sister could do and she felt the stress leave her body.

_But such is the way of the limelight, it sweetly_
_Takes hold of the mind of its host_
_And that foolish pony did nothing to stop_
_The destruction of one who had needed her most_
_Such is the weight of the crown that we wear, sister,_ _Duties we always uphold;_
_May you forgive me that foolishness mine_
_And live on with no burden upon your soul_

Celestia wasn't entirely sure about the Nightmare. Sometimes it was Luna's feelings given form, others it was a parasite that fed on and magnified negative emotions. Both were things she despised " Nyx being the sole exception " and the Loops where she replaced Nightmare Moon were ones she detested, since she hated being reminded of her own flaws.

_The years now before us, fearful and unknown_
_I never imagined I'd face them on my own_

_May these thousand winters, swiftly pass, I pray_

_I love you; I miss you, all these miles away_

_The space now before us, empty and forlorn_

_I never imagined we'd face them all alone_

_May these sunless seasons swiftly pass, I pray_

_I love you, I miss you, all these miles away_

Celestia murmured three simple words to her sister, ones that came from the core of her very being, words that never grew old and withered.

_May all your dreams be sweet tonight_

_Safe upon your bed of moonlight_

_And know not of sadness, pain, or care_

_And when I dream, I'll fly away and meet you there_

_May all your dreams be sweet tonight_

_Safe upon that bed above the lights_

_And know not of heartache, fear, nor gloom_

_And when I dream, I'll fly away to meet you soon_

Hearing those three words from her sister, Luna smiled and looked up into the face she adored with a smile and answered with two of her own.

_"I love you."_

_"I know."_

* * *

>172.5 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"It's Hearth's Warming Eve, Lemon, so why can't you just enjoy it with me?" Nyx pouted up at her fiancé who had his forelegs wrapped around her. He was wearing the itchy sweater that Velvet made him and the joke antlers that Nyx had placed on his head after putting it on. Nyx gracefully wore the Fenris styled hairband along with the wolf and pony pattern sweater that Lemon swore he made for her. She was inclined to believe him as she stared at her engagement ring fondly before remembering that she was cross at Lemon for being a party pooper.

"It's just that I am not really religious in that way, you know?" Lemon rubbed his chin against her head, causing the mare to blush a bit. "I mean, I have seen countless Santas, Krampuses, the whole shebang" Jack Frost and I even have a little score to settle ever since he started that planetary snowball war on Fenris," Lemon huffed, blowing air into her ears, causing her to giggle. "But even with my long looping experience, I just can't really shake off my Imperial roots of not believing in gods and religiâ€" "

Lemon stopped speaking and stared straight at the window, frowning and making subtle movements to get up. "Did you hear that Nyxie?"

"Yeah," Nyx nodded her head, nuzzling against Lemon's muscular barrel to keep him in place. "Probably some animal in the bushesâ€" "

There was a loud _THUD_ on the roof of the cottage they were in, soon followed by loud scraping and then a horrendous crash. Both ponies sprang to their hooves and ran outside to find a rather large earth pony in a red suit, face down in the snow.

"Oh my spruce Lemon, that's Santa Hooves and he's dead on our lawn and it's your fault!" Nyx started to shout, causing Lemon to snap his head at her.

"Wait, how is this _my_ fault?!" Lemon shouted back, leaning down to check for a pulse, only to find a faint one. Without wasting any time, Lemon lifted the pony off the ground and moved back inside the cottage.

"I _told_ you to clean off the roof so Santa would have a safe landing and you said you did and you _lied_ to me!_" Nyx shout caused the windows to rattle, her wings flapping furiously in the cold winter air.

"I thought you were kidding, Nyxie, when you said it was for Santa!" Lemon placed the pony on the couch they were just sitting on and then started to pace. "Okay, I've got an idea of how to fix all of this!"

"Oh?" Nyx asked as she used her magic to put the gifts back into the sack.

"Time travel spell; we go back in time and warn Santa about the roof!" It was not the best of plans, but it was the first one to come to Lemon's mind and he latched to it desperately.

Nyx peeked over her fiancÃ©'s shoulder at the injured pony and guilt made her mind agree to the somewhat reckless idea rather than the much more sensible idea of just healing the large pony.

With a quick spell, Nyx sent herself and Lemon back into the past to save Santa.

Unfortunately, they were a bit off the ground when Nyx sent them into the past... and directly in front of him.

As they landed in the bush, they both watched in mute horror as they startled the poor stallion off the roof.

As they watched themselves panic a bit, Lemon turned his head slowly to Nyx and saw she had a massive grin on her face.

"What _now_ Nyx?" he whispered to her, waiting until they teleported back into the past to speak louder.

"You know what we've got to do now Lemon?" she said with some excitement in her voice.

"What are you thinâ€" _No, _I love you with all my heart but there is _no_ way I am doingâ€" "

"_Please?_" she asked, widening her eyes and making them twinkle a bit, causing Lemon to fold in an instant.

"_Fiiiiiiiine_, but you cannot tell _anyone_ that I going to do this, okay?"

"It's a deal!" Nyx said as they teleported into the past, leaving the two to move more freely. Nyx grabbed the sack of toys, Lemon closed the door to their cottage and ascend to his alicorn form. Nyx then used her magic to create a sled and tied it around Lemon's neck.

"Ready?" Lemon asked, with a grin emerging on his face.

"Ready, my trusty reindeer!" Nyx shouted back, laughter escaping her mouth as the two took off to save Hearth's Warming Eve, with a stallion in a cottage smiling to himself, crossing off a very special gift delivery before going back to Yggdrasil proper. It _was_ his time in the sun after all and he had a lot more stops to make.

* * *

>172.6 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Little Mother, I am both mentally a fully grown adult and fully capable of staying up past the setting of the moon," Lemon certainly did not pout but it was sure like it. "So I do believe that I can stayâ€" "

"Lemon," Fluttershy said sternly, wrapping a wing around her little colt. "Shhh," She then began to hum a few bars, causing Lemon's ears to twitch as he fought to stay awake, but his younger body was already giving in with his eyelids becoming heavy and his heartbeat slowing down. "You go out adventuring out tomorrow, but tonight is a school night. So it's time for you to go toâ€" " She blinked, looking down at Lemon who was already fast asleep.

With a gentle smile on her face, she lifted her son up onto her back and carried him off to his bed.

A simple loop like this was a real treat for her, she mused as she placed Lemon into his bed and tucked him in.

Looking as Freki and Geri hopped onto the bed and curled up near Lemon's face, Fluttershy bit a soft chuckle as she blew out the candle and closed the door.

* * *

>172.7 (DrTempo and kingofsouls) [Kingdom HeartsMLP]

* * *

>Sunset Awoke during a class. She'd been at Canterlot High for so many Loops she could do the classwork in her sleep. One time, she literally had done just that. Considering how boring this teacher was, she was tempted to do it again.

"We have new students joining us at CHS," the teacher said. Next to her stood the students in question. The trio consisted of a dark brown skinned boy with brown hair; a second boy who looked younger than the first; he had green skin and blond hair that clashed with his skin; and a girl who had blue skin and light blue hair. They waved hello to their new classmates "Allow me to introduce Earth Shaker, Wayward Wind and Rainfall. They just moved into town, so please help them feel at home."

The three took their seats soon after. Wayward Wind sat next to Sunset, while Earth Shaker and Rainfall found a pair of seats in the back.

"Hey," he said, extending a hand towards Sunset.

"Hey yourself," Sunset said back; in her mind, she already had an idea as to who these new students were. "So, new in town?"

"Just moved in today," came the answer. "I'm looking forward to seeing everything here."

"I've lived here for a while." Sunset laughed mentally; when she meant 'a while', it was actually about thousands of years at least. "I could show you and your two friends around. Maybe after school?"

"That sounds great." Wayward Wind smiled.

"Glad to hear it, Ventus."

Wayward Wind's, Earth Shaker's, and Rainfall's jaws dropped, their mouths dangling for all to see.

"How did she..?" wondered Earth Shaker.

Before he could finish asking, Sunset cut him off. "Meet me on the soccer field at lunch. I'll explain there."

* * *

>At the soccer field, the trio were curious. Ven asked, "How did you know our..."

Sunset summoned her Keyblade, and Rainfallâ€"or rather, Aquaâ€"facepalmed. "Oh yeah. Mickey told us about you."

Sunset smiled. It was nice to hear her old friend remembered her after all these years.

"Glad to see you three are Looping. I did always want to meet you," Sunset explained and added, "Since we're here, how about a sparring session? I'll only use my abilities from your Branch, and you can fight however you want. If you guys knock me out, you win. If I knock you three out, or you yield, I win."

Terra chuckled. "You're dealing with three Keyblade Masters, Sunset."

At this, Sunset raised an eyebrow.

Aqua replied, "Terra managed to pass the Mark of Mastery soon after we first Awoke. And Ven actually impressed Eraqus enough to take the Mark of Mastery with me and Terra one Loop."

Sunset shrugged. "Makes sense, considering how skilled Ventus was during that last battle." She breathed in and grinned. "Okay...LET'S DANCE!"

* * *

>The four warriors summoned their Keyblades; as Sunset waited for her opponents to strike, she felt like something was targeting her.

"Oh crap..." And then the first attack was launched. A barrage of blasts flew towards Sunset as she braced herself for the onslaught.

The trio, having fired their ultimate Shotlocks, watched as the smoke cleared. They were shocked to see Sunset still standing, not even a scratch on her.

Dusting her clothes off, she smirked. "My turn. METEOR!"

Aqua quickly formed a barrier, blocking the spell. Then, just as the barrier fell, Terra charged right at Sunset and used his Ars Solum attack. Sunset readied her Keyblade and parried the flurry of blows, the blades striking against each other with lightning speed. With the final strike, he leapt backwards to avoid a counter of Sunset's. Just as Sunset readied herself to chase him, Ventus leapt in, unleashing an Ars Arcanum combo. Sunset dodgedâ€"the blade just missing herâ€"turned her Keyblade into a whip, and aimed her strike for Aqua. The mage-knight did not react in time; the whip coiled around her leg and trapped her. Ven growled, his priorities shifting.

"Hey Sunset! FAITH!"

Sunset had to dodge out of the way of the mighty blast of light as it approached her, which caused her to have to let go of Aqua's leg and return her Keyblade to its normal form. The mage responded with a Seeker Mine spell, but to her surprise, Sunset managed to deftly dodge the homing attack. However, with Sunset distracted, Terra leapt at Sunset, intending to finish the fight with one mighty strike. The attack apparently hit home; Terra smirked.

Unluckily for him, Sunset managed to block it with her bare hands, which left him utterly shocked at the feat of strength. Terra was tossed away, hitting the ground. As he shook off the dirt, a clearly angry Ven, his face having a really mad look on it, used a Tornado spell, only for Sunset to dodge that as well, the attack eventually fading away. By now, the trio were getting annoyed at how things were going; every attack they had used was countered or blocked. Terra slammed his fist into the ground, not happy that they were being so easily defeated.

Sunset yawned, saying, "That all you got?"

Aqua soon realized, "We can't just attack. She'll dodge or counter. She's just too experienced."

Terra wasn't one to give up, and as Sunset landed a Meteor Crash attack on Ven—who ended up getting hit by the rain of meteors and knocked off his feet—he decided to end this.

"DARK HAZE!" He surrounded himself with darkness and charged right at Sunset, hoping to land the strike that'd end this duel.

However, Sunset saw the attack coming and blocked Terra's attack with ease. As he was hit with a counterattack, Aqua frowned at his choice of attack; even now, after they had Awoken, Aqua was still worried about Terra overusing the power of darkness. In response, Terra shrugged, saying, "Ok, I got frustrated."

Sunset had taken this moment to set up a big attack. Darkness surrounded her, and she yelled, "DARK AURA!"

The trio quickly got out of the way of an onslaught of attacks as Sunset charged at them several times; she ended by slamming into the ground, dark energy flowing around her. The trio were knocked back by the attack, all three having taken a lot of damage.

The trio healed their injuries, and realized it was all or nothing. As if enacting an unspoken plan, the trio yelled out together, "MEGA FLARE!"

Sunset barely summoned a barrier in time, but the attack still did a lot of damage when the three powerful fire spells left a large flame in the blast zone.

Nothing a Curaga spell couldn't heal, though, which Sunset cast after the flames disappeared. As the healing spell ended, Sunset looked at her opponents only to see they had dispelled their Keyblades. Terra frowned, looking unhappy with the result, and said, "We yield."

* * *

>As the trio caught their breath, Sunset offered them a Mega-Potion. Ven grabbed it, saying, "Thanks. I admit we stood no chance."

Sunset smiled. "I've been Looping for millennia. Heck, my long series of Fused Loops when I began Looping put me in in many Branches that emphasized battle. I had to become skilled."

Aqua frowned. "Did all that fighting affect you?"

Sunset smirked. "I enjoy a good fight, true. But I haven't lost sight of the values of Equestria. I've always believed that people can change and become better people. But I also know that some people just won't listen."

Terra nodded in agreement. "Like Xehanort." Clenching his teeth, he took a breath. "Sorry. Considering what he's done.."

Sunset shrugged. "Well then, how about some training? I've wanted a chance to learn the techniques you guys have."

Aqua laughed. "Don't expect us to go easy on you, Sunset."

"I won't go easy on you, either."

* * *

>172.8 (KrisOverstreet, Masterweaver)

* * *

>"No, you DON'T have DLID!" Breaking News shouted. "Your baseline is stable, for crying out loud!"

"Okay, one, I've got enough personal distance from the Anchor that my personal background does flex quite a bit," Lyra replied with a growl. "TWO, I get an overload of loop memories every time I Wake Up. So yes, I do have DLID, and honestly I'm kind of insulted that you say I don't!"

"Oh, really? REALLY? Well I'm insulted that you're using my condition and pretending it justifies your... your weirdness!" the yellow unicorn cried, pushing her glaring face into Lyra's. "Do you know how much I suffer because of it? How, how hard it is to know your place when the whole world can't decide?!" Tears streamed down her raging face. "And here you are, with your fake multiple personalities and a stable relationship, and... and you... you just...!"

Lyra took a breath, shutting her eyes. "Okay... Okay. Okay, I... I'm sorry. I didn't mean to... I don't take your condition lightly, and I don't take my condition lightly, even if I seem a bit... silly, at times, about it." She put a hoof on the other pony's shoulder. "Look, April... I get that you're the one that pretty much everyone references when they talk about Disassociative Loop Identity Disorder. I understand that you feel like a case study at times, and... that's very stressful, both because it implies you're an authority on the subject and that you're, uh..."

"...broken?"

"Okay, see, that word applies more to me than to you," Lyra joked. "Since I actually almost literally broke my own history. But, yeah, the whole people looking at you with that mixture of pity and caution..." She sighed, waving a hoof. "Let's just say my human obsession doesn't usually net me many friends."

Breaking News, elsewhere known as April O'Neil, sagged to the floor. "It's... it's worse when they come from the turtles. From loopers. I know it probably doesn't happen as often as I think, but I've seen it..."

"Yeah."

The two of the sat in the empty room for a few moments, each looking at their forehooves with their own thoughts.

"...DLID-B."

"What?"

"Disassociative Loop Identity Disorder Baseline." Lyra shared a look with her. "Ordinary psychological syndromes tend to have multiple manifestations, or be on a scale. Why not DLID? You have DLID-B, and I have... uh... DLID-P, for Personal History."

April snorted. "Wouldn't that be DLID-PH?"

"Nah, PH is for DLID caused by drugs." She looked at the blanks stare. "You know, because the pH scale defines acidity, and acid is slang... for... okay, the joke fell flat, I get it."

"It's not so funny when one of your punishment Loops has the whole universe revolving around telling kids not to do drugs," April grumbled. "Seriously, it's like you can't walk a block without finding a kid about to take a hit or something. And you get this overwhelming compulsion to spout an anti-drugs platitude every three sentences or so." The newshorse shuddered with memory.

Lyra stepped over and pressed herself comfortingly against April. "Need a drink?" she asked.

"Oh, yeah," April replied unironically.

* * *

>172.9 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Now kids," Berry preached to the audience, "you all came here expecting me to tell you not to do drugs."

She took a sip of her sherry.

"But I've just ingested alcohol," she pointed out with a wide grin, "so instead I'm going to say 'never do drugs without an expert's advice, permission, or monitoring!' Because that's really a lot less stupid."

"BRAVO!" cried the director, standing up and clapping rapidly. "BRAVISSIMO! OLÃ%, ENCORADA! MAGNIFIQUIS!"

"I dunno, Discord." The camerafilly stopped rolling. "I mean, it's funny, but too blunt. Mama, you want to rewrite for an expanded version?"

Berry shrugged. "Well, I am trying to get the message across to your age bracket. Give me five minutes."

* * *

>172.10 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Excuse me, are you the current matriarch and or patriarch of the Hooffields and or the McColts?"

Mama Hooffield gave the brown pony a glare. "What, do I look like a stallion?"

"Sorry, paperwork regulation." Ivory Scroll waved her parchment, neatly sidestepping a bronze teapot. "There was this whole mess a while back, but you really don't want me to go into the details.

"Hmph. Yeah, sure, I'm the Hooffield Matriarch. What's it to ya?"

"Well, I am here on behalf of the princess herself. She wishes me to inform you that her and her retinue are arriving next week."

"Really?" The old mare stuck a pumpkin in a massive slingshot. "For what?"

"Why, to take a vacation in her summer home, of course."

Mama Hooffield jolted, her hooves slipping and releasing the pumpkin early. "Her summer WHAT?!"

"Her summer home," Ivory repeated, tapping her parchment. "That is why she granted the Hooffields and the McColts this land in the first place, they agreed to construct and maintain a home fit for her majesty where she could relax away from the pressures of court."

"This is the first I'm hearing of it!"

"Really?" Ivory Scroll peered at her. "Well, that's really a shame. The contract was signed roughly two hundred and seventy five years ago." She pulled a large scroll from her saddlebags. "Her majesty was kind enough to provide me with a copy."

Mama Hooffield waved at her clanmates. "ALRIGHT EVERYPONY, STAND DOWN FOR A MOMENT! Got something I need to check." With an annoyed grumble, she trotted over. "I swear, if this is some sort of McColt prank... Gimme that."

Ivory Scroll allowed the document to be swiped out of her hoof, watching calmly as she ran her eyes over the wording.

"...'failure to deliver will result in the incarceration of employed parties...?' What the hay?"

"Incarceration means you'll be thrown in the dungeonâ€"

"I know what it means," the matriarch growled. "It's just... what, we build this summer home in a week or we get locked up?"

"And stock it with food," Ivory added. "Since this is a bit short notice, the princess and her retinue are bringing their own toiletries and whatnot."

Mama Hooffield looked from her, to the scroll, to the other hill, to her. A slow, horrified comprehension began to dawn. "This real?"

"It has the backing of the princess, yes."

"...oh my Celestia." She sat on her haunches. "A week. A week to get a summer home up."

Ivory glanced across the valley. "Well... you've gotten part of it up, anyway." She nodded towards the McColt fortress.

"THAT'S NOT!"

The matriarch paused.

"...not actually... the princess lodgings," she finished awkwardly. "It's, uh, for us. The Hooffields and... and the _McColts_." The word was all but spat out. "If'n you'll excuse me, I need to talk to my... business... partner."

Ivory watched her steel herself and begin her march. "I'll need that scroll back before I go!"

* * *

>172.11 (kingofsouls)

* * *

>â€"Realityâ€"

_"Hey Sadness?"_

_"Yes Joy?"_

_"Got a quick question. Why is Riley a pony?"_

_"That is a good question Joy. Riley, why are you a pony?"_

"No idea." Laughed Riley, or Hockey Mind was she was told her name was in this loop. Everywhere around her, there were ponies. Some were pegasi, some unicorns, and some regular ponies like herself. What drew Riley's attention was the coloring, colors running the gamut no normal horse could ever be, and the marks on their flanks. A quick check through her memory told her that the marks were called Cutie Marks, each one representing an individual's special talent. Taking a quick look at her own flank, Riley saw her mark considered of a hockey stick with five circles in a line parallel to it, with the colors being yellow, blue, red, green, and purple in that order.

Riley never considered herself a pony person, but then again she never thought she would be a mage drawing mana from the land itself. "Gotta say, it's pretty interesting though."

â€" _Headquartersâ€" _

"It sure is!" Joy then bounded off, jumping here and there in a fit of joy. "Oh, this is going to be so exciting! This is the first time we've ever been a pony and I want to see everything in this Loop!"

Sadness rolled her eyes, a sly smile on her face. Leave it to Joy to see the bright side of Looping every time she was Awake. "Hey Joy, I have a question."

"Yes Sadness?"

"Why is Riley a pony, but we're not?"

That stopped Joy in mid leap, frozen in midair. "Huh." Joy then floated gently down to the ground like a leaf. "That is a good question."

"_Wait, you guys look the same?"_

Sadness did a quick scan of the room, eyeing Anger reading the Mind Reader, Disgust fussing with her nails, and Fear trying his best to look brave. They all looked the same, unchanged in any way. "Guess we do."

"_Huh. That's..."_

"Weird, right?" Joy rushed in, rebounding back from the quick case of wondering why she wasn't equine. "It's almost as weird as..."

As if on cue, a large gasp was heard throughout Headquarters with such magnitude that Headquarters started to violently shake.

_â€"Realityâ€"_

Looping had prepared Riley for many unexpected things. Zombies, the Tri-State Area, an annoyed internet critic, and easily a dozen more random encounters that Riley could recall right here and now.

But there were somethings you just could not prepare for. The pink pony with three balloons for a mark let loose a long gasp that was equal parts surprise and equal parts shock was one of them. The pony then landed and a split second later raced into the horizon, a trail of pony shaped dust left in her wake.

_"...that."_

Riley just stood there, trying to comprehend the randomness. "...Let's just send a Ping out and see where to go next, okay?"

"_Sound great to me."_

â€"Laterâ€"

Twilight opened the front door, revealing whom had knocked: A young earth Pony with a yellow coat and brown mane. "Hi, and welcome to the Golden Oaks Library. How can I help you?"

"I'm looking for somebody." She replied.

Twilight responded with a warm smile. "Visiting Looper?"

_"Wow, that was fast."_

Riley was just as impressed as Joy was. "How did you know?"

"You used somebody instead of somepony." Twilight explained. She welcomed Riley in, her horn glowing as a teapot and cups hovered out of the kitchen. "That means this is your first time in Equestria, isn't it?"

"Sure is. I'm Riley Andersen. I'm the Anchor where I come from."

"Twilight Sparkle, and I am also an Anchor. " In a poof of magic, a table appeared and the teapot and cups gently sat themselves onto it. Riley followed suit, sitting on a nearby cushion.

Though she seemed to be lost in thought. "So...have any plans?"

Riley did not answer. "Riley?"

That snapped her out of her moment of distraction. "Oh? Uh, did you say something?"

"I was wondering if you had any plans this Loop."

"Oh. Well, Joy wants to see the world, and Sadness would like to read some of the books here." Riley answered. "As for me, I kinda want to do a little of both."

"Uh...who?"

"Oh. They're my emotions." Riley replied with a straight face. "They're Looping with me. Joy and Sadness are Awake, but the others aren't."

"Sounds a lot like the Postal Dude."

"I...don't think I met him."

_"I haven't."_

_"I haven't either, and that makes me a little sad."_

"Trust me, you not missing much." snarked the unicorn. "Anyway, since this is your first time here, Equestria is a sanctuary loop."

This was the first time Riley heard that term before when describing a Loop.

"Me and my friends try to have our Loop be one where visitors can relax after a stressful loop." explained Twilight.

"That actually describes my Loop. Not a lot happens besides my family and I moving to San Francisco, except when Joy is Unawake."

_"Hey."_

_"It's true you know."_

_"Well Riley could have been a little more gentle."_

_"Nah, you did good."_

Joy just sighed in resignation. _"Thanks Anger.'"_

"That bad?" asked Twilight.

Riley suddenly looked very nervous. "We...don't like talking about the weirder ones."

"That's the Loops for you." Twilight took a sip of tea, the brew untouched until that moment. "Anyway, tonight is when Nightmare Moon returns from her banishment from the moon, and it's a tradition to let visitors handle taking her on. You wanna try?"

"One second." Riley asked. She then turned her thoughts inward.

_"What do you guys think?"_

_"I think it's a trap. I have no idea what any of you, Joy, Sadness and this crazy unicorn are talking about and trust me, this is bad news."_

_"Oh, live a little Fear! We got this! Riley has magic, and she's pretty good with it."_

_"I am not convinced."_

_"Fear is right," _Disgust piped up. _"We're a little overwhelmed with this Looping business. Heck, are we even supposed to be talking to Riley in the first place?"_

_"Doesn't seem to stop those two,"_ Anger huffed.

_"Uh...do you know I can hear you, right?"_

There was an eerie silence in Riley's head. _"Well that got awkward..."_

_"You think?"_

Riley heard sadness sigh for the blue emotion poke up. _"We're gonna need a little time to calm him down Riley."_

"Thanks for the offer Twilight, but I think we'll sit this one out." Riley explained, fear obvious in her tone. "Fear gets afraid and right now he's probably mashing the panic button like his life depends on it."

_"IT DOES!"_

Well, you know where to find me if you change your mind." Twilight explained. "Oh, and before I forget, you might want to expect my friend Pinkie Pie dropping in."

"Oh? Why?"

Pinkie Pie suddenly shot out of the bookshelves, books falling like leaves. "TWILIGHT!" The pink party pony proclaimed, grabbing Twilight's head and staring into her eyes. "There's a new pony in Ponyville and I need to set up the secret welcome party for her so please don't tell her about the secret party because then it won't be a secret anymore! Kay thanks, bye!"

Pinkie Pie then raced out of the library via jumping out the window, Riley stunned in confusion. Twilight on the other hand was unfazed. "Oh, just a hunch."

* * *

>(Masterweaver)

Riley had to admit, Pinkie Pie's reputation was well-earned. Even unAwake, the mare threw an incredible partyâ€”doubly so when Twilight gave her a small list of loopers to invite.

"...so I suppose I'd actually be closer to Luna's Anger if it came down to it," Nyx commented, "although I only say that because Tanty here would obviously be her Disgust. Disgust is the self-loathing emotion, I think..."

"How does she work without you in her mind, though? I know that when I first experimented with externalizing my emotions, there were..." Riley bit her lip. "There were side effects..."

"Well, we're not strictly speaking emotional constructs. Nightmare Moon is either an external corrupting force or an insane persona _constructed_ by rage, and Tanty is explicitly an artificial construct meant for self punishment. Obviously we've both rejected our initial roles, although Tanty here sometimes needs a little spritzingâ€”"

"HEEEEEEEEEEEY!" A green unicorn jumped through the door, grinning widely. "Riley! Remember me?"

_"Wait..."_ Sadness said suspiciously.

_"Is that...?!"_ Joy asked warily.

"Lyra Heartstrings?!" Riley cried out.

"Yeppers kiddo! All five of us in one fancy package." She stuck out a hoof. "Good to meet you in the flesh."

There was a moment of silence.

Then Sadness and Joy both began yelling.

_"YOU! DO YOU KNOW WHAT YOU DID?!"_

_"WHEN WE WOKE UP THE NEXT LOOP THE MINDSCAPE WAS A MESS!"_

_"SEVEN CORE MEMORIESâ€”SEVEN! HOW IN THE NAME OF CARL JUNG DID YOU MAKE SEVEN IN ONE LOOP?!"_

_"ME AND ANGER HAD TO SPEND THREE DAYS IN LONG TERM SEPARATING YOUR MEMORIES FROM RILEY'S!"_

_"CHEMICAL WARFARE ISLAND! **CHEMICAL WARFARE ISLAND!** SHE'S A ZARQIN' PRETEEN!"_

_"THAT SEAPONY SONG SUPERCHARGES ALL EMOTIONS AND IS JUST AS MUCH AN EAWORM AS TRIPLE-DENT!"_

The filly winced. "Er... give me a moment, I need to calm down my emotions..."

"Oooooooh." Lyra pulled back her hoof with a nod. "Yeah, tell them we did our bestâ€"actually, hit us up for a telepathic conference later," she amended. "It'd be cool to compare notes."

* * *

>172.12 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Okay everypony," Twilight said with a wide grin, "I've gathered you here for a very, very good reason. Recently, I had a near-hub loop... and I managed to purchase something very, very special."

The other ponies glanced at each other.

"Well, don't keep us in suspense darling." Rarity leaned forward. "What did you get?"

"Fillies and gentledrake... BEHOLD!" Twilight produced a metal octagon with a flourish.

Spike rose a claw. "Is that a film-reel case?"

"It is, INDEED, a film reel case. But the film reel within is very special, very precious, and very, very incredible." Twilight Sparkle rotated the case around so that its label could be seen. "May I present to you, the long awaited addition to one of the most foundational hub-world sagas... STAR WARS EPISODE VEE EYE EYE: THE FORCE AWAKENS!"

Gasps resounded through the room. Fluttershy held her hooves up. "Oh my... how did you get your hooves on that?!"

"It wasn't easy," Twilight admitted. "I had to spend a pretty penny and smarm my way into the right circles. I mean I could have just stolen it," she admitted, "teleport spell and all, but I wanted to go to the effort. Seemed fairer to the makers. BUT IN THE END! I got this new film, just for us." She paused. "...well, I may have watched it myself first. For reasons. But only once! Pinkie, you don't seem that enthusiastic."

"Yeah, sorry... it's just I think I looped into the expansion this is based on. I know living something's not the same as watching a movie and Luke had been through it a couple of times before, but..." Pinkie shook her head. "Look, I'm not going to spoil anything for the rest of you girls but there was this one idiot who really didn't understand the Dark Side."

Rainbow Dash frowned. "Um... Pinkie? You're a sith lord."

"I know! I'm an expert! And this guy took it the completely wrong way!"

"Be that as it may," Twilight managed, "if Luke was Awake and not running Baseline there could be a number of differences in the movie. Especially if you were helping him."

"Yeah... okay, set it up." Pinkie grinned. "Who knows, the movie might be awesome!"

* * *

>172.13 (Gym Quirk)

* * *

>"...First Age only happens once every thousand or so loops," OlÃ³rin said as he led the lavender alicorn past the gardens of LÃ³rien. "The vast majority of baseline loop starts are split between roping Bilbo into the Erebor trip, and setting up for his eleventy-first birthday party."

UndomÃ« Tintila, sister of Nahar (known elsewhere in the multiverse as "Twiley", "Her Highness, the Princess of Friendship", "Egghead", "That meddling do-gooder pony", etc.) nodded as they made their way to the base of the mound of Ezellohar in the mingled gold and silver light of the two trees at its summit. "And this loop started after the Great Music, so we're stuck with Melkor in his baseline form then?" she asked.

"Alas, yes," the wizard-in-waiting said as they started up one of the paths that led to the top of the hill. "I try to mitigate the damage as best I can, but there's only so much just one mid-level maia can do, loop-augmented abilities or not. Anyway, you are welcome to treat this loop as a vacation. Ah, here we are," he announced as they approached the summit. "This is the reason why I was anticipating your Awakening."

At the crown of the wide hill were two trees, one glowing with golden light, the other silver. However, unlike the depictions she'd heard from tales told in Rivendell, or read from the Hub sources, they were not the slender graceful beings from elven song, but considerably more substantial.

They were both nearly identical mature oak trees of many yards girth. The arrangement of the branches was very familiar to any being who had spent any substantial amount of time in Ponyville. If one looked carefully, one could make out patterns in the bark that brought to mind windows and even a door. Twilight felt her left ear start to twitch.

"When I saw what Yavanna had wrought, I was fairly certain it would only be a matter of time before you showed up," said the maia, offering a comforting pat on the alicorn's shoulder. The equestrian Anchor produced a small holorecorder from her pocket and documented the sight for the next time she could have a word with Sleipnir.

"Gandalf? Are you aware of the speculation on how Yggdrasil, independent of the admins, has its own, rather twisted sense of humor?" asked Twilight, whose right eye had started its own counterpoint rhythm. "I'm adding this to the pile of supporting evidence." She felt a low burning anger start to build. "If Oromë decides on an expedition to capture Melkor, I think I'll tag along to go Ungoliant hunting," she added in a calm detached tone that fooled no one. "Actually, scratch that. I'll go on my own," she decided, pulling several implements of destruction from her Pocket for inspection, starting with a standard Seapony Diplomatic Liaison Package and working up from there.

"Um...Twilight?" asked Gandalf with growing concern.

"Oh. I'm sorry. Would you like to go with me?" she asked as she contemplated a set of the Elements of Harmony. "Using these solo can be very tricky, and there isn't any moon to send her to yet, so there's also that problem..."

"When I suggested that you might blow off some steam..."

"Having friends along to help use them also makes them more effective. I don't suppose you could think of a few more people around here who might be interested..."

"I fear I may have to insist..."

The alicorn paused and took a breath, schooling her expression into something a bit less disturbing. "Don't worry. I won't crash the loop, and I'll try to limit the property damage. I suppose I should prepare an apology letter to the Valar before I leave."

"Just a small problem with that," observed the maia. "Writing usually doesn't get invented until the Elves awaken, and we've got a fair amount of time before then."

Twilight just stared at him.

* * *

>

**Author's Note:****

172.1: Pentalyra.

172.3: Yeah, this one was obvious.

172.4: It's nice to have a song now and again.

172.5: Time To Save Hearth's Warming. I think.

172.10: You Don't Do That.

172.11: And this was basically inevitable too.

172.12: Metacritic.

172.13: Poor, poor Twilight.

180. Chapter 180

173.1 (Vinylshadow & Masterweaver)

* * *

>Vinyl Scratch stared at her marefriend who had staggered into their home at some ungodly hour of the night.

The cellist blinked and yawned as she put her case down.

"G'ev'in," she mumbled as she crawled on top of Vinyl and nuzzled her. "C'n I h've cuds please?"

"Tavi, you feelin' alright?" Vinyl asked, only for the mare to sit bolt upright, driving her knee into Vinyl's stomach.

"THEY LAUGHED AT MY CELLO. I PLAYED IT AT THEIR FUNERALS! WHO'S LAUGHING NOW?!"

Collapsing back on her fluffy blue-and-cream pillow, Tavi nibbled on Vinyl's chest fur.

"Riiight, well. I think I'll be canceling your gigs for the next month and taking you somewhere nice," Vinyl wheezed.

Octavia blinked tiredly. "Can it be a cruise?"

Vinyl felt her stomach drop as she remembered every other cruise she had ever been on and she bit her lip.

"...Yeah. That sounds...nice," she said with a smile. "Anything for you."

A loud snore greeted her, and Vinyl stroked Octavia's mane lightly.

* * *

>"...Vinyl?"

"Yes, Octavia?" Vinyl asked as the two approached the ship settled in Manehattan's harbor.

"I can't help but notice our cruise liner has various protrusions that look unnervingly like incredibly large cannons."

"Yeah, Apple Bloom has some quirks when it comes to ship design. Still, she got us a free ride on the maiden voyage. And hey look, there's a pool too!"

"You have that _look_, Vin."

"What look?"

"The '_I wanna fire the cannons_' look."

"...There's a look?"

"With you, yes."

"...I wanna fire the cannons."

***NO.***

"Leastways," quipped a passing filly, "not without mah permission. And supervision. There's a waitin' list in the auditorium, if you want to apply." She stuck a yellow hoof out to the shocked Octavia. "Captain Apple Bloom, pleasure ta have ya aboard."

Octavia shook the hoof. "Ah... nice to meet you."

"Likewise. If ya'll excuse me, Ah've got some things to run through before we depart." She saluted and trotted off.

"Heh. That's adorable. A filly pretending to be a captain."

Vinyl cleared her throat. "...Tavi, hon, she's not pretending."

* * *

>Several hours later

Vinyl, Octavia, Apple Bloom and several others floated upon the sea in lifeboats, watching the burning wreckage of Apple Bloom's pride and joy sink beneath the waves with a hiss.

"HOW?!" Apple Bloom wailed, "I designed that ship to be unsinkable!"

"And remember what happened to the last ship with such a claim?" Vinyl pointed out. "On the other hoof, I'm 12% sure this wasn't my fault."

"Twelve percent," Apple Bloom stated flatly.

"It was a very big, very hairy spider?"

The rescue ships that found them were later quoted as having "followed the screams."

* * *

>173.2 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Soon, soon you'll be mine."

Cadence raised an eyebrow at her husband, who was speaking to her belly as he rubbed it with his chin.

"Soon, one day soon, I just know it, you will be born and you will be our little foal." Shining smiled up at her, reminding her of the life that was inside her, the promise of what was to come. Her heart bloomed at the love she sensed in Shining's voice; tears formed in the corners of her eyes.

Still...

"You are such a dork," she scoffed playfully, leaning down to boop his nose.

"I know, but I am your dora"did you feel that?" Shining looked up at her with wonder and joy. Cadence had indeed felt that, and placed a hoof on her stomach.

Again, their little foal kicked, bringing fresh tears to the adults' eyes.

"One day soon, Cady," Shining said; as he felt with one hoof their foal making its presence known, he raised his head to meet hers. "One day soon," he said, and kissed her on the lips.

"I know." She smiled, nuzzling his head fondly. "I'm going to be a momma."

The two of them spent the rest of the day feeling their baby kick, marveling at this wondrous sight they had never thought they would get to have, waiting for the day when they would be able to hold their child at long last.

"One day soon."

* * *

>173.3 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Sunburst loop location log #4593. Found easily. Current career..."

Twilight sighed into her recorder.

"...entertainer at a gentlemare's club. Will have to engage in discussion to discover persona. Hold log."

It had seemed like a brilliant idea, trying to track down and quantify the various versions of this particular pony. No doubt if Starlight ever started Looping " which Twilight Sparkle had decided was somewhat likely, given the mare's time spell " she'd want to do a similar investigation herself. So preparing the information in advance was, in theory, a great idea.

In practice, it led to... well, this. Which had happened a good two hundred and thirty times. A statistical minority, but more common than it could be.

"The colt has a talent for magic that convinces his family to move to Canterlot," she grumbled, "and he chooses to sell his hooter instead of his horn. What the actual fern."

* * *

>173.4 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Trixie, I am worried," Chrysalis said, nuzzling the blue mare affectionately.

"About what?" Her attention diverted from her latest performance plans, Trixie blinked upwards at the changeling.

"About Cadance and Shining's baby," she said slowly, causing the showmare to stare at her with great confusion. "I mean, I don't know why, but I'm somewhat scared that I'll turn up in baseline trying something stupid, like spiriting their child away or something, and Iâ€"

"Sssh. Trixie will hear no more foolishness." Trixie placed a hoof over her marefriend's lips while doing her best to look sage. "Whatever the future holds, we all know that you won't do anything bad when you are Awake, and I really doubt our baseline will do that to you." Trixie stared into her eyes with more love than the changeling queen saw in a hundred Loops on her own. "And I will still be beside you, no matter what happens."

As she wiggled out of Trixie's silencing hoof, Chrysalis leaned down to nuzzle her again. "Thank you, my little lovebug."

"Anytime, my queen." Trixie smiled back as she went back to her plans, wondering if she should use more saws for her latest trick.

* * *

>173.5: (Anon e Mouse Jr.; one segment by Masterweaver)

**Ponyville's Lighthouse Library, Part 1****

"Twilight?"

"Yes, Rarity?"

"Ermâ€| my Unawake self this Loop has been wondering about something since she was a little filly."

Twilight raised an eyebrow. "Go on."

"Ponyville isn't anywhere near the ocean, or any other large body of water, soâ€| why do we have a lighthouse here, and whose idea was it to make it the town library?"

Twilight shrugged. "Good question." She looked up at the Golden Oaks Lighthouse and Library (which, despite its name, had actually had its main body done up in five horizontal black and white stripes, while the uppermost section, where the lantern room was located, was all in black), and at the darkened light (since it was the middle of the day, and the sun was shining) at the top. "I've been looking in the local history section since I moved in, but I haven't found anything yet. And I even asked Princess Celestia, but she didn't know off the top of her head either."

Rarity nodded, and joined her in looking up. "Well, if you find out why, do share it with us, darling. It's not the oddest thing we've ever had in Ponyville, but it's still unusual enough to make more than a few of us wonder."

"Will do, Rarity."

"Hey, girls!"

The two unicorns glanced over to see Pinkie Pie next to them, her eyes fixed on the sky. "So, what are we looking at, anyway?"

There was a pause, and then Twilight and Rarity started laughing.

Pinkie looked at them strangely. "Um, girls? What's so funny?"

That just made them laugh harder.

The pink mare blinked. "What?"

* * *

>Much later, Twilight and Rarity were facing Applejack, who had a simple explanation for them.

(Masterweaver)

"It was for pegasi colonizers. Way ta avoid the Everfree."

Twilight stared at Applejack. "That's... that's it?"

"Well, Granny Smith could tell you moreâ€"apparently there are a lot o' mysteries about that ol' lighthouseâ€"but... that's why it was made, yeah."

Rarity frowned. "Well... that was... anticlimactic, really."

(Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Twilight quirked her ear. "What other mysteries?"

"Well, we're still not sure who actually built itâ€"or even who the first keepers were. Some ponies say there's a lot more to all that than what I told ya. But none of it's ever been confirmed." Applejack shrugged. "Plus, we still don't know who decided it would make a good library, or even who they were neither. There's lots of theories about all those things, some of 'em crazier than others, but none of it's ever been proven."

Twilight exchanged glances with Rarity. "Really?"

Applejack nodded. "Eeyup. What we do know is that one day about a hundred years or so ago, they hadn't heard from the keepers in a while, so somepony went inside to check on 'em and found the whole place was all full of books an' shelving, an' not a pony in sight. Then, when they went down to Town Hall, they found all the paperwork to make it into a library had been filled out an' signed so it was all legal. But they never found the old keeper, and they never found any proof of who'd done any of it or why, so they just shrugged and appointed a new keeper and librarian to run the whole place, an' it's been that way ever since."

"I see."

"For most of us, as far as we're concerned, it's just one of the town's little quirks, and there's nothing there to really worry about, so we leave it be. But sometimes, there are ponies who start to wonder, and all kinds of rumors spring up from that."

"Huh." Twilight looked in the direction of her lighthouse library. "Well, at least we know something more. Thanks, Applejack."

"You're welcome."

As the two unicorns walked away, if they'd been looking up at that moment, they would have seen a small silhouette in the lantern room, before it flickered and vanished.

* * *

>173.6 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Sparrow Jack, the intrepid captain of the totally-not-parked-in-the-middle-of-the-street-it's-slightly-to-the-left-thank-you Black Pearl swaggered into Sugercube Corner and looked around.

"'Ello, fillies and gentlecolts and whatever species that lovely striped madam in the corner is, mind if I join you?"

The hustle and bustle of the confectionery store ground to a halt as everypony (and one zebra) stared at the dreadlock-maned pony in the pirate getup with varying degrees of dread.

Before anyone said anything, a voice bellowed from outside.

"OY, YOU!"

Sparrow turned on his hoof and gave as good as he got.

"I TOLD YOU, IT'S NOT PARKED IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET! I LEFT A NOTE AND EVERYTHING!"

Shooting an apologetic smile at the patrons, he whispered a quick "Excuse me" and ducked out, where the tirade between him and what most guessed was some irate officer continued.

"You can't just leave your ship parked here! You're blocking traffic!"

"What's the problem? There's plenty of room right there, see?"

"You're also parked in Daisy's stallâ€"how in the blazes did you get a ship this far inland?!"

"Well, there was this freak windstorm and I knocked over some large green statue in the harborâ€" "

"WHAT?!"

"And then I nearly smashed into a mountain, so, swerving around that, I then brought it to land here."

"...You're lying, right?"

"Of course I am. That's the stupidest thing I've heard. No, I was brought here by crabs."

"...Crabs."

"Yes."

"...Alright. Just...nope, I'm not dealing with this on a Monday. Enjoy your day, sir."

* * *

173.5 continued (Anon e Mouse Jr.)

Ponyville's Lighthouse Library, Part 2

Two weeks later, Twilight was convinced that something was definitely up with her home.

She'd managed to handle most of the early problems this Loop (fortunately, Rarity, Trixie, Zecora and Diamond Tiara were all Awake to help out with that), and was now doing her best to find out what more she could about her library's history. That included visiting with the grandson of one of the town's founders, which is what she was doing just then.

"So, not long after a number of pegasi who were coming to Ponyville for the first time began having accidents around the Everfree, due to its wild weather getting out of hand, somepony proposed they build a large lighthouse to help with that." Filthy Rich frowned. "Funny, they never could identify who exactly made the proposal, since they never came forward after the initial suggestion. Then, after they'd picked out a site for it, when the workers went to break the ground to start construction for the first time, they discovered somepony had already put in a foundation overnight, and made it much larger than was initially planned. A couple of ponies, my grandfather among them, decided to watch over the site that night to try and find out who was responsible, but they never saw anypony besides themselves. Yet when the sun rose, somepony had added to it without their ever seeing a thing. It only took one week, from start to finish, before the entire thing was done, including the side building. And from then on, it was always lit at night, or during storms, before anypony could ever come near the building."

"Well..." Twilight looked surprised. "That's... very interesting. And they never found out who did it?"

"No trace of anypony was ever found," the older stallion told her. "Even the best mages from Canterlot couldn't find any traces of magic of any kind there. It remained a mystery for the ages."

"Wow." The unicorn mare looked at him. "What about a hundred years ago, when it got turned into a library?"

The Earth Pony stallion shrugged. "It was almost exactly the same."

Town Hall had eventually hired an official lighthouse keeper to watch over the place, even if they didn't have to do much. Then, one day, they stopped coming out, so somepony was sent in. And like your friend Applejack told you, they found the building had been converted into a five-story library, with living quarters still on the sixth story and the top being the lantern room, as always. Again, they sent for mages from Canterlot to investigate, but they never found any proof of who'd been there or why."

"What about the keeper?"

Again, Filthy Rich shrugged. "Who knows? Personally, I think they just moved away and didn't bother to give proper notice, but that doesn't explain who converted the lower floors into a library or why. Or how they even got in. Not that I'm complaining about it, mind you. I used to spend hours in there when I was a colt, and I loved every minute of it."

Twilight smiled. "Well, that's always nice to hear. And thank you for telling me all of this."

"It was no trouble at all, Ms. Sparkle. I'm always glad to help a fellow bibliophile and historian. Especially when my daughter speaks so highly of them."

Twilight's ears lowered as she blushed. "Ohâ€¦ well, thank you again, Mr. Rich. Diamond Tiara is a wonderful little filly to work with, and I'm sure she has a very bright future ahead of her."

A little while later, as she was walking the streets of Ponyville, Twilight glanced up, and her ears flicked back. The lighthouse's lantern was onâ€¦ and she could see movement up there! Alicorn instincts kicking in, she flared her (currently non-existent) wings and sped for home.

Her heart racing as she approached the building, Twilight let herself in and raced up the stairs. And finally, she burst into the lantern room.

Which was as empty as it had been before she'd left to visit the Riches.

Narrowing her eyes, Twilight scanned the room, both visually and magically, but still found nothing.

I am going to find out what's going on here, she silently vowed. By book or by crook!

* * *

>More time passed, and Twilight continued her investigations.

The strange silhouette she'd spotted before had appeared in the lantern room on several occasions since then, and she'd even spotted it moving around other rooms, but had never managed to catch it. Neither had Spike, who had Woken Up not long after her visit to the Rich home, and agreed to help search. But whatever it was had managed to evade her best scans and traps, and even Spike's Force abilities and Diamond Tiara's telepathic senses. Consequently, Twilight was starting to get annoyed. Yet at the same time, she was having more fun than she'd had in ages.

But now, it was time to end this. Spike was over at Rarity's, and Twilight had seen the strange figure in the lantern room again just moments ago. They weren't moving, and this time, she was going to catch them for sure.

"I know you're in here," she told the figure as she opened the door to the lantern room. "Come out and show yourself!"

For a moment, there was no movement. Then, a small figure emerged from the shadows.

"I've been expecting you, Mama," Nyx said with a grin.

"Nyx?" Twilight gaped. "It was..." She shook her head. "Oh, I'm so glad to see you."

Nyx laughed. "I am too, Mama."

And then the two raced forward, and for a moment, there was no time for words. Only hugs.

When the two finally separated, Twilight held her hooves on her daughter's shoulders. "So, I take it you set all this up?"

"Yup!" Nyx grinned. "I woke up a couple hundred years early, through the Pony of Shadows. And since I needed to do something to keep me busy while I was waiting for you, I decided to set up a mystery you couldn't help but try to solve, once you were Awake."

"You certainly succeeded," Twilight told her. "So, why a lighthouse?"

Nyx shrugged. "I hadn't ever done anything like it before, so why not? I built this place, set it up so it'd drop into my Pocket at the end of the Loop like your own library does, and had a lot of fun "haunting" it on and off, just to give myself something to do and Ponyville something interesting to talk about every now and then. I was so happy when I heard Rarity asking you about it that day, because I knew it meant you'd come looking for me soon."

Twilight eyed her daughter. "But why didn't you show yourself to me sooner?"

"Because it wouldn't be any fun for either of us if you didn't have at least something of a challenge," Nyx replied. "I know how you get when you're trying to figure something out."

"You have a point there." Twilight leaned forward and nuzzled the filly. "You really are my daughter, you know that?"

Nyx nodded and nuzzled her back. "And I wouldn't have it any other way."

Twilight's smile only widened at that.

* * *

>173.7 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Time Turnerâ€"better known as the Doctorâ€"stepped out of his TARDIS and took a deep breath of Equestrian air.

"Mmm...the perfect place to relax after a hard Loop of being a Raxacoricofallapatorian under the control of the Mighty Jagrafess of the Holy Hadrojassic Maxarodenfoe. Very hard to do anything with those beastly nails..."

Untying his tongue, he trotted into Ponyville's market. He browsed the stalls and eyed Applejack's warily. Usually when he was here and a certain pale olive filly wasn't Awake, he was brow-beaten into buying some applesâ€"or in the case of a few loops, pears.

Lucky for his stomach, Apple Bloom appeared wide Awake since she had her Cutie Mark and was selling...

"Cutie Mark Counseling! Three bits an hour!" she hawked. Which, thinking about it, was rather pointless in Ponyville due to the fact more than 90% of its population had Cutie Marks, except the young ponies.

"Shouldn't you be in school?" Time Turner asked the engineer, stopping in front of the stall.

"Nah, Cheerilee's Awake too and is currently studying Horse mythology."

At the Doctor's blank stare, she elaborated. "Norse."

"Ahh, I see. How interesting," the Doctor replied in a voice of one who's had tea with said deities and hadn't been impressed. "Not as bad as the Roam Empire's, I suspect."

Apple Bloom snickered. "No, probably not. What brings you to Equestria?"

"Eh, some giant technolotree broke and sent everything ever made into repetitive time loops to fix itself. You know how it is," he replied with a bored wave of a hoof.

"True. Well, I hope you enjoy your stay here."

"And you as well, Miss Bloom."

* * *

>173.8 (HarmonyChaos)

* * *

>"Archmagister!" the Ghost of Starswirl yelled, running up to Twilight. "Something hath come out of the Astral Plane, and whatever it be, it seems powerful, at least as powerful as you are."

Twilight frowned. If one of the other Houses or that accursed Cult got in here, behind her shield, behind her proud unicorns, and attacked, things could get messy. "Bring me to it! If it's the Cult of Laughter..." She shuddered, though not from fear. Her unicorns could handle them. They had the power of Celestia and Luna on their side! She got up and ran out with Starswirl.

They arrived a few minutes later to a table of Equestria. Starswirl ran past it, apparently getting a fix on whoever, or whatever, it was. Trixie walked out and joined them, along with two Knights, one of Celestia, the other of Luna, and two Legionnaires carrying an Arcane Manipulator who, upon finding an Earth Pony, forced him to pull it along. It was all they were good for. Well, that and she couldn't have any of her precious unicorns dying before the slaves were dead... and she begrudgingly supposed that they were necessary for food production.

"Who could have done this?" Trixie asked as they came to a room full of unconscious ponies.

"Whoever it was, they know their stuff," a Nightmare named Shadow Stalker said as he appeared beside Twilight. "A room stun and sleep spell combo, barely got out of here myself. I am sorry to report that I didn't get a good look at the intruder; I only know that it's a she and she's purple. I'm sorry I couldn't get any more info."

Twilight gritted her teeth together. "It's fine, so long as you're alright."

"I am, and I believe she was heading to the balcony."

"Good, I want you to go and lock the intruder in." Twilight grinned; she wouldn't be stopped here!

* * *

>Twilight was looking all across the shattered remains of what was once Equestria, now nothing more than a shadow of its former glory, no thanks to her counterpart in this timeline she assumed. Speaking of which... She turned towards the doors and opened them, revealing her counterpart, a small group of unicorns, and a strained, malnourished Earth Pony pulling a weird tower that had the symbol of Luna on it. Her counterpart stepped forward.

"Hello there. My name is Archmagister Twilight Sparkle, and I would like to welcome you to House Moon and Staâ€" Her eyes widened once she saw Twilight's wings and horn. "You're an alicorn?!"

"Yes, I am. My name is Princess Twilight Sparkle," Twilight said. "And please don't bow, I already get that enough from my timeline. Also don't begin worshipping me. I don't need it, just trying to fix the timeline."

"How did you become an alicorn? Please tell me!" the Archmagister said.

"And why should I tell you?" the Looper asked. "I can end this universe with a thought."

"Because you were once a unicorn like me, and your assistance could help us find Celestia and Luna," the Archmagister said.

"I'll give you a hint. It requires something you don't have," the Looper said, smiling. "I'll give you three guesses; at the end of them, I'll give another."

"Power?"

"Nope."

* * *

>173.9 (Vinylshadow - MLPPotC)

* * *

>Sparrow Jack, part-time captain for the totally-not-stolen-I-leased-my-soul-for-it-thank-you-very-much-and-let-me-tell-you-the-trouble-that-caused Black Pearl lay on the ground, groaning.

"Sir, are you okay?!" a worried voice called out. A blue-gray head topped by a straw-colored mane popped into view, misaligned eyes bright with worry.

Sparrow blinked and squinted at her. "Huh...must be dead, because you're much too beautiful for this world," he mumbled. "Have you seen my ship? Giant black thing."

The mare looked around, then winced. "Ah...it's currently lodged in the side of Sweet Apple Acres' barn. Just finished rebuilding it too. Again."

"Could you take me there? I need to talk to Applejack," Sparrow said, struggling to get to his hooves. "What's your name?"

"Currently, it's Derpy, and you're not going anywhere," the mare said firmly, pushing him back down. "You need to rest. I'll get Applejack for you."

Sparrow sighed and rested on his back. "Fair enough, lass. The sunset is lovely at this time of year."

A few minutes later, Derpy and Applejack came back up the hill. Applejack's face was one of amusement while Derpy's was wreathed in concern.

"Back again, Jack?" Applejack said with a sigh. "You do realize you nuked my cider supply by ramming your ship into it, right?"

Sparrow's face contorted in horror and his dreads drooped. "Ah..sorry 'bout that, lass. Is there anything I can do to help?"

"Yes, you'll be helping rebuild it, for one. As payment, I'll give you some barrels of my finest cider from my Pocket."

Sparrow grinned. "Deal."

"Get up, we can work in the moonlight," Applejack said. Derpy frowned.

"But he's injured. You can'tâ€"

Applejack shook her head. "He's about as injured as a rodeo clown. Most of the time he's actually a living skeleton. Give it a minute," she said, looking up at the moon.

A beam of moonlight fell across his torso, revealing the bones underneath. Derpy's eyes went wide and Sparrow got to his feet, cracking his neck with a grin.

"Quite handy to survive ship crashes though," he said lightly. "Makes it god-awful hard to enjoy drinks though. They go right through me and don't let me hold my liquor."

Applejack rolled her eyes. "Come along, Sparrow. You've got a long night and day ahead of you."

* * *

>173.10 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"But daaaaad, I have to go out!" Rainbow Dash whined, eyes darting up at her cross father.

"I'm sorry Dashie, but you've got homework," the stallion picked his daughter up with his teeth and plopped her in front of kitchen table. "If you had done this Saturday, like I asked you to, you could go out and play with your friends. But you didn't and now we are going to sit right here until you are done andâ€"

"Then I can go out?" Rainbow Dash said with hope in her voice, leaning out of her chair to look at her father.

"Nope," he gave a lopsided grin, booping her nose. "I want you to remember this a lesson Dashie; that there are consequences to your actions and even if you say you're sorry and do everything to make amends, you may not be able to make things right," he frowned, tapping his chin. "I'm sure that sounded a lot wiser in my head Dashie," with a chuckle, he leaned over to ruffle her mane. "Besides Dashie, I am pretty sure that Equestria won't crash and burn because you didn't go out and play one day."

Dashie gulped weakly, scratching the back of her head and wondered how she would explain this one to Twilight.

* * *

>173.11 (Vinylshadow - MLPPotC)

* * *

>Applejack Woke up standing next to Rainbow Dash in the town hall, eagerly awaiting the arrival of Princess Celestia to raise the sun.

She watched the smoke coalesce into...

Her jaw dropped and she fought hard to stifle a snort of laughter, coughing harshly.

"FILLIES AND GENTLECOLTS! AS YOUR NEW RULER, LET ME BE THE FIRST TO SAY...THE RUM...WILL LAST...FOREVER!" the pony skeleton wearing a pirate getup bellowed, staggering drunkenly about.

Rather than screams of terror and panic, the ponies looked at each other, murmuring quietly. Applejack pricked her ears as she overheard some eager stallions whisper excitedly.

"Just think! No more having to wait for the taverns to resupply!"

"Yes! Long live...uh..."

"What's your name?" a pony called out.

Sparrow Jack, the sometimes-semi-not-dead captain of the for-the-last-time-I-don't-know-where-the-blasted-monster-octopus-latched-to-it-came-from-I'm-sorry-but-it-really-isn't-my-problem-if-it-ate-something-you-liked Black Pearl blinked and peered down at the assembled ponies.

"Me? What, you've never heard the legends of the Flying Dutchmare? I met her captain a few times. Ugly as sin, but a surprisingly good kisser once you get enough rum in him...erm...sorry, name...name...noun verb, noun verb...ah! I am...Nightmare Rhum Vieux."

The sound of a hoof hitting face echoed through the room.

* * *

>173.12 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Ahem, sir?" Rainbow Blaze did a double take as Princess Celestia appeared in his living room. As he bowed to the floor, he swore he heard the princess give a somewhat embarrassed cough, like Dashie would when she was about to do something really naughty. "I am dreadfully sorry for this but this must be done for the safety of the future of Equestria." With that, the Princess of the Sun walked over to the corner of the room, picked up his daughter that was in time out for what happened at school and threw her out the window so hard that there was a sonic rainboom.

She teleported out of the room and then back into the room moments later with a totally hyper ball of fluff he recognized as his daughter.

The Princess then dropped the filly into his hooves and bowed her head. "Equestria thanks you for your duty and you missy, behave yourself, understand?"

"Yuppers!" Dashie squeaked from Blaze's hooves before looking up at her father. "Daddy, look! I've got my Cutie Mark!"

"That's wonderful Dashie," Blaze said affectionately, distracted by the good news before he noticed that Celestia was already gone. Making a mental note to seek an audience with the Princess later on, he went to plan his Dashie's party before remembering that she was still grounded for fighting.

* * *

>173.13 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"So dear, how have your children been?" Upper Crust sneered at Twilight Velvet, with the rest of the noble ladies at this little luncheon. Most of the mares here were already bored to death about Upper Crust's little spiel about her spoiled little child and how much they have done in Prance, and were suddenly very interested in how Velvet of the Twilight House would react to this.

"Well," Velvet drawled out, taking a slow sip from her teacupâ€"mostly to hide her grin. "My oldest son is now married to Princess Mi Amore Cadenza, snogged her so hard at their wedding that he actually gained wings and became an honest alicorn. They are now expecting their first child and I am sure that the Crystal Empire will be ever so glad to see that their Empress has a child at lastâ€"did I mention that they are rulers of their own nation?" Velvet smiled at Upper Crust, whose face was starting to drop. "Which reminds me of my other son, Spykoranuvellitar, who helped save the Crystal Empire by rescuing the Crystal Heart from King Sombra and is married to a lovely mare named Rarity Belle. What a dear she is, and she definitely has a fine head on her shoulders. Why, I am sure you have heard of the Belle clothing franchise while living in Prance?" With a hoof pressed to her chest, Velvet dashed her eyelashes in such an exaggerated fashion of simplicity that made the mares around them snicker. "Made seventy different dresses with different material in roughly a fortnight and ascended into an alicorn when she was done!"

Pausing, Velvet glared at Upper Crust, enjoying this far too much. "Of course, there is my daughter Twilight, former student to Princess Celestia. Of course, she had to stop being her student after completing Starswirl's last spell. Wouldn't be right for a princess to be a student under another princess, after all. But then again, Twilight still listens to the Princess greatly, doing whatever she and the other Element Bearers of Harmony can do to save Equestria from the latest world ending threat."

"I seeâ€" " Upper Crust tried to butt in but Velvet wasn't finished just yet.

"My dear Twilight does have a big heartâ€"I mean, not many would take in a reincarnation of Nightmare Moon and raise her on their own," Velvet gave a soft smile, staring at the pale unicorn mare across of her. "Nyxie has truly grown by leaps and bounds. Why, she is even engaged to a prince of the Imperium of Ponykindâ€"you know, the ancient homeland?â€"and they are going to get married any day now!" Velvet swooned, leaning back into her chair.

Upper Crust took a breath inwards, licking her lips before saying, "Well, that's very nice and all if it is true, butâ€" "

As if on cue, there was a series of thuds and pops, and everypony turned their head to see five poniesâ€"all alicornsâ€"and one gigantic purple dragon teleport in and land on the garden floor. Another alicorn, a white mare with a perfect purple mane, slid down from the dragon's head and they all turned to Velvet with a big smile on their face.

"Hi mom!" a choir of voices heavy with love said, all the newcomers coming closer to nuzzle Velvet.

She smiled happily at her family before turning her head back to Upper Crust. "Do you want to hear about my cousins, dear?"

* * *

>173.14: (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Lemon, I..." Nyx blinked at what she was staring at, her fiancÃ© smiling proudly. "HOW!?"

"Well, I was trying to cook from this cookbook again, I turned my eyes away for a moment and the next thing I knew, Meaty here was licking my face!" Lemon then reached over to pat the meat dragon's snout.

"Meatyâ€"Iâ€"gah!" Nyx sputtered before magicking the cookbook over. "'The Nomnomicon?!' That's the cookbook you were using?!"

"Is it a problem Nyxie?" Lemon titled his head as the dragon licked the back of his head again, causing the stallion to giggle. Nyx decided to show it was a problem by hitting him over the head with the cookbook over and over again.

* * *

>173.15: (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"You don't have the Elements of Bearers and thus Eternal Day shall last forever!" Luna cackled at Magic.

"That's where you are wrong Luna, for the Bearers do exist, in my friends!" Magic shouted, looking at her pony friends.

"Honesty, telling us all about farming and apples when went down the cliff, represents the Bearer, Applejack!"

"Kindness, using her wide eyed looks to tame the beasts, represents the Bearer, Fluttershy!"

"Laughter, making inside jokes that I don't get as I just got to this town, represents the Bearer, Pinkie Pie!"

"Generosity, giving us all these styling but impractical outfits, represents the Bearer, Rarity!"

"Loyalty, flying to catch us after she threw us clear the other of the chasm, represents the the Bearer, Rainbow Dash!"

"Ha, you are one Element of Bearer away and without it, my night loving sister will be imprisoned forever!" Luna let out a victory laugh, flying into the sky. "The Day shall last forever!"

"That's here you are wrong, Luna, for the last Bearer does exist!" Magic shouted, the smashed crown starting to fly around her, just like the necklaces were doing to her friends. "I have learned to tolerate new people and call them friends due to social conventions, just making me the representation of Twilight Sparkle, the last of the Bearer!"

As Magic spoke, the crown and necklaces spun around them counterclockwise, turning into orbs of stone before firing a dark rainbow at the panicking alicorn.

As the alicorn was cleared of the taint, Princess Nightmare Moon stood tall with her loving sister Corona Blaze, who raised the moon back into its proper place.

It was at this moment, everyone in the room Woke up and took one look at their loop memories before facehooving as hard as they could from what they saw.

They all knew now that this was going to be a long loop to deal with.

* * *

>173.16(Vinylshadow)

* * *

>A long time ago in the magical land of Equestria, there was an oppressive Empire that ruled over the once-peaceful ponies, led by the Dark Lord Sombra. He wished to subjugate the entire planet, using his mighty magic and control over shadows.

A rebellion, led by the brave unicorn Rarity, fought back, striking at key points of the Empire's rule, hoping to break its iron grip. Victories and defeats teetered back and forth between the factions with settlements and towns caught in the middle.

During one struggle, Rarity was captured and sentenced to be executed.

A band of rebels, consisting of three fillies, a drake and his old mentorâ€œ"

"Whoa, whoa, whoa; what do you mean, old?!"

Spike blinked, looking up from his roll of parchment, quill poised to write as he met the gaze of one Twilight Sparkle.

"It's just a story, Twilight," he said patiently. The mare grumbled. Spike rolled his eyes. "Besides, 'old' in this case merely means she was his mentor before he went off and joined the rebels. Taught him everything she knew," he added with a wink, causing Twilight to smile.

"Hm, if you say so. I'm rather proud of you for not gushing over Rarity either," she said with a grin. Spike waved a claw.

"Eh, they wouldn't even get together until the third or fourth book. She'd ignore him for the most part, then claim later she had been testing his resolve or something."

Twilight snickered. "Sounds interesting. Can't wait to read it."

"Can you keep it a secret for now? I'd like to surprise everyone with it."

"Pinkie Promise," Twilight said.

"Thanks, Twi. You're the best sister I could hope for."

The two shared a hug and Twilight left him to his writing.

* * *

>173.17 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

* * *

>Twilight looked bemusedly at the sight of her daughter huddled under the blanket of her bed. She had reverted to her filly form rather than the adult body she had been using before while Lemon was here. It had been a spectacularly normal Loop thus far, and as far as she could tell there was nothing unusually frightening about Ponyville right now (so long as you ignored the mildly crazed laughter coming from Sweet Apple Acres as a certain red maned filly worked on her latest inventions) so for the life of her she couldn't understand why Nyx was shaking like a leaf and hiding in the Golden Oaks. It was far too late in the Loop for it to be a result of whatever her last Loop had been so nothing she could think of explained the sight that had greeted her upon returning to her home.

Kneeling down before the trembling filly, she pulled Nyx into a hug which she gratefully leaned into. "You want to tell me what's got you so frightened?"

Nyx shook her head.

"Alright."

The mother daughter duo remained like that for several minutes before Nyx spoke. "Lemon tried cooking again."

Twilight heroically refrained from groaning. "Were there any victims? What about your house, how much of it is left?"

Nyx gave a strangled laugh. "The house is fine and nopony got hurt."

Twilight frowned. "Lemon didn't kill it did he? It may not have been supposed to come to life, but it still deserves to live."

"It didn't come to life."

Twilight blinked at that. "Toxic hazard?"

Nyx shook her head. "It was a perfectly normal dinner. Spaghetti and wheatballs. Nothing came to life, or poisoned anypony or even violated the laws of nature. It was a perfectly normal dinner," She said, staring into the distance unseeing.

Twilight was silent for several moments as she tried to process that before shuddering. "Move over Nyxie."

* * *

>Back at their home in Canterlot, Lemon Rush did his best to explode the dishes sitting in the sink with his eyes. "The one time I manage to make a normal dinner, and it was a total accident."

Discord chuckled from his place in the dishwater sea as he propelled his bowl along with a serving spoon.. "Well don't look at me. I'm not the one who stayed up all night playing poker causing him to sleepwalk through his date night."

Lemon's glare doubled. "Bullrush! You were the dealer."

Discord pointed behind the stallion. "Oh no, not I. Twas he who you played against my dear Lemon Sparkle."

Turning to look where the Spirit of Chaos was pointing, he found himself confronted by an identical draconequus wearing a sleepmask. "What did I miss?" he asked his diminutive counterpart.

"While you were sleeping, Lemon here all but sleepwalked through his date and somehow managed to create a perfectly edible meal for once," Discord told himself.

Confronted with two smirking Draconequii, Lemon groaned. "Somehow I think it would have been better if I accidentally created an Eldritch Cuisine."

* * *

>"Twilight? Why are you, and Nyx cowering under your blankets?" Rarity asked, having come to return Twilight's copy of the latest Iris Drake novel.

"Whatever it is can't be that bad right Twi?" Spike asked from beside his wife.

Poking her head out from beneath the cover, Twilight looked around frantically before pulling the couple into the bed with them. To their surprise they found themselves standing in a much, much larger space than could possibly fit inside the Library where Pinkie Pie was hastily organizing the citizens of Ponyville towards their designated stations. "Something has gone horribly wrong with this Loop. It's a miracle it hasn't crashed yet, but I can't take any chances. We're evacuating."

"Evacuating? Surely it can't be so serious that you think we need to abandon Ponyville," Rarity said with wide eyes as she watch the organized chaos taking place under Twilight's sheets.

"Ponyville? No you don't understand. We're evacuating Equestria. Once we finish preparations I'm going to teleport everypony to the moon. After that Nyx and I will see about finding a new planet for us to colonize," Twilight replied seriously.

"Whoa! Hold on Twi. Don't you think you're overreacting a little? What even happened anyway?" Spike asked curiously, scratching the scales on the back of his head.

Twilight visibly steeled herself before responding. "Lemon Rush managed to cook something normal," she practically hissed.

Spike and Rarity stood still for a moment as they considered that.

"Right. No time for the fainting couch. Spike you stay here and help Twilight. I'm going to pack up the Carousel Boutique. Time is of the essence. Let's move!"

* * *

>173.18 (BIOS-Pherecydes)

* * *

>Princess Cornea Blaze glared at the camera, as beside her an aged unicorn stallion stood. "Hello. I'm Stein Bin. Do you have dry, itchy, burning eyes. Get Clear Eyes. It removes redness, and has the ingredients to moisturize."

His magic lifted a small item and with her permission, poured a few drops into her eyes. In a flash of prismatic light, the newly Awakened Celestia blinked confusedly.

He turned back to the camera. "Wow. The difference is clear. Clear Eyes."

"An' Cut! Okay everypony that's a wrap." Applebloom shouted from behind the director's chair.

Diamond Tiara came in wearing a headset and looking at a clipboard. "Okay Princess, that's it for today. Don't forget, tomorrow you're scheduled early for a Coppercolt suntan lotion commercial so be sure to get plenty of rest."

With that she turned away, already barking orders into her headset.

Celestia stared at the departing filly silently for several moments.

"What."

* * *

>173.19 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Twilight winced as Tirek slapped her friends down one by one. She hated Loops that restricted her to baseline power; she'd not had one in a long time and she hadn't adjusted to the power difference, which was how Tirek was thrashing their collective flanks.

"I thought you were stronger than this, Princess," Tirek growled, towering over the fallen Alicorn.

"Stay away from her!" a voice cut across the ruins of Ponyville. Twilight and Tirek turned to see a blue-gray pegasus mare standing amid the flames.

Her misaligned eyes hadâ€"in one of their rare momentsâ€"zeroed in on the centaur.

Tirek laughed. "What's this, then? Reinforcements? You must be desperate to die."

"Derpy! Run!" Twilight gasped out. Derpy met her eye and winked.

"Don't worry, I've met his type before," she said, returning her burning gaze to the centaur.

She flapped her wings, taking flight towards Tirek. A red-orange blob of magic formed between his horns and fired at the mare, who swung around it in a lazy loop as it then scorched the remains of Twilight's library.

"Oh for Amentotaxus yunnanensis' sake," Twilight griped, helping her friends to their hooves before looking at Derpy, who impacted Tirek.

The two sailed through the air, Derpy hammering home hits on the centaur's broad chest before she whirled and slammed him into the ground with her hind legs. Derpy landed hard on his torso, driving the air from him.

As he wheezed for air, Derpy glared into his eyes.

"Do you know what you did during your altercation with Princess Twilight?"

Tirek stared at her without comprehension. Derpy brought her face close to his.

"You almost hit my muffin."

She then lightly booped his confounded face on the nose and he popped like a bubble. Shaking the suds off her hoof, Derpy took wing and landed beside Twilight.

"Are you alright?" the mailmare asked. Twilight stared at the sizzling pile of suds, then at Derpy.

"What...how did you do that?"

"During his draining spree, he took my magic," Derpy said. "Turns out he also got one of my Cutie Marks' downsides, he'll come back but not for a while... No doubt you could've handled him, but when his attack nearly hit Dinky..."

Twilight winced. "Sorry. My magic was lessened this time around. Usually it's not much of a problem, but I wasn't prepared and I Woke up on the wrong hoof..."

"Not your fault, Twilight," Derpy said.

"Mama!"

Derpy pricked her ears at the shout and turned, sweeping up her daughter, twirling her around and blowing into her belly, tickling her with her wings, causing Dinky to shriek with glee.

Twilight dipped her head. "Thank you."

Derpy nodded and nuzzled her daughter with a tender smile on her muzzle.

* * *

>173.20 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Twilight kicked down the door to her library and walked in, super soaker primed and ready.

"If I find my daughter cuddling on the couch with her boyfriend again, I'm gonna...what are you two doing?"

"Well, you said 'on the couch' so we moved to the floor," Lemon said, curled around Nyx and nuzzling her mane. "ACKTHPH!"

Twilight pumped her soaker and narrowed her eyes. "You do realize this is a public building?"

"It was Nyx's idea," Lemon grumbled, wringing water out of his mane.

"No, mine was you licking whipped cream off myâ€"ack!" she squeaked as Twilight soaked her. "I was going to say nose!"

"I wanted you two to match," Twilight said innocently.

"Nyx?"

"Yes, Lemon?"

"Plan W."

"What's pla - not in the library!" Twilight yelped as the couple pulled out water balloons, diving for the door.

Two gleeful ponies followed her, only to stumble to a halt as they met a wall of water being suspended by magic.

"That's not fair," Lemon complained, bracing himself for a long wet war.

* * *

>"Sister?"

"Yes Luna?"

"We've gotten reports that the town of Ponyville has flooded."

"Luna?"

"Yes, Celie?"

"Get my Water Wings. We've got a water war to win."

* * *

>173.21 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Leman and Nyx stared as Nightmare Moon's castle shuddered from another internal explosion.

Faintly, they could hear the snarling voice of Twilight Sparkle as she wreaked revenge against the Cultists.

"Brainwash my daughter will you?!"

"Is that blood?! Were you making my daughter drink blood?!"

Leman glanced at his fiancÃ© with an arched eyebrow. "You never told her you were Awake, did you?"

Nyx shrugged. "Sometimes she needs an outlet for stress. Too much and she gets really nasty. This is cathartic for her."

"Ah," Leman said, once again mentally reminding himself to never get on Twilight's bad side. He glanced at Nyx and smiled softly.

After a few more hours of screams and shrieks for mercy, Twilight emerged from the castle and gave her daughter a hug.

"Oh, and you're grounded for not telling me you were Awake," she whispered into Nyx's ear.

"Oh come on!"

* * *

>173.22 (Scorntex)

* * *

>"THE NIGHT SHALL LAST FOREVâ€™!"

"Excuse me, Your Highness?"

The terrified crowd watched as Nightmare Moon stared blankly at the elderly pony who'd approached her, apparently unconcerned that he had just interrupted her declaration.

Twilight, cautiously sitting at a distance, noted the old pony, and the odd manner in which he spoke. It sounded familiar to her somehow, but she could remember where.

"... Yes, subject?" Nightmare Moon said, tentatively. The old pony just kept smiling warmly.

"I was wondering if perhaps you might like something to drink."

"I... what?" The dark alicorn shook her head. "No. Begone."

Twilight Sparkle, watching cautiously from a distance, saw the old pony bring out a saucer and teapot from nowhere.

"Surely I cannot tempt your highness to even one lone cup of tea? After a thousand years, locked away in the moon, you must be thirsty."

Nightmare Moon sniffed at the scent coming from the teapot. Her expression changed to a mix of suspicion and intrigue. "Well," she began, "perhaps one cup of this "tea" would do no harm..."

The old pony poured out a small cup, and gave it to Nightmare Moon, who slowly took a sip from it.

Her first reaction was surprisingly dramatic; the dark alicorn vanished without even the intermediate stage of a puff of comical smoke, replaced by Princess Luna.

Her second, however, not so much.

The crowd waited as Luna stared, eyes wide in shock, at the tea cup. And they waited. And waited.

And waited.

And they waited.

Twilight walked over toward the old pony, who had taken the saucer from Luna and was now frowning at it.

"Uh, that... was meant to happen, right?" Twilight asked.

"I think I overdid it on the "calming" part," he murmured.

"You definitely overdid something," Twilight stated, as she tried not to look at the slightly eerie sight of Princess Luna stand completely still.

"I'm Twilight Sparkle, by the way," she said, cordially. The old pony bowed his head.

"Iroh, of the Fire Nation."

"Oh, yes," Twilight smiled, "I've heard of you. Princess Celestia mentioned you, a while back. She said you made some very good tea."

She glanced toward the teapot. "I probably should've guessed it was you, what with the tea. And the tea-leaf Cutie Mark. And the fact that you didn't seem concerned by Nightmare Moon, at all."

She looked back toward Luna, who was still not moving (beyond breathing, and blinking).

To say Twilight Sparkle had a sinking feeling would have been understating. At this point, she might as well have been on the ocean floor itself.

"This is going to wear off eventually, isn't it?" she asked.

"I'm afraid I do not know," Iroh replied, "but I should hope so."

* * *

>It was not until a full hour had passed that Luna finally did something.

"Perfect," she gasped, in a hushed awe, as she shed a small tear. "Absolutely perfect."

Instantly, Twilight recognised where she had seen this reaction before, in the coffee house of Mechanicsburg, and the sinking feeling was replaced by an immediate stab of utter dread.

"The taste," she whispered, "the smell, nay even the texture, they are all perfect. And the way they adhere to the saucer, perfect. And the saucer itself, 'tis a thing of perfection, the perfect synthesis of style and function! PERFECT, I SAY!"

Twilight looked skeptically at Iroh, who was rubbing a hoof against his chin contemplatively.

"I can fix that," Iroh paused for a moment, before looking back to Luna.

"I think."

* * *

>173.23: (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Ah, Equestria! Learned about the loops here, you know."

Sea Swan, elsewhen known as Elizabeth, tilted her head. "I thought Poseidon gave you the looping speech."

"Aye. Then I got so blind drunk I forgot it, so he arranged for me to be dumped in here. Don't let the colorful ponies fool ya." Sparrow Jack, elsewhen known as OY YOU!, gave her a broad grin. "There's debauchery aplenty if you know where to look. Case in point!"

The brown stallion's hoof swung to indicate a red barn. "Looks ordinary, don't it. Sure, maybe they'd make some drinks here, but you'd think that servin' them would happen elsewhere." He smirked as his hoof pointed at a particular cellar door. "Down there, though, lies one of the most skilled bar-mixers in the multiverse, and if rumor is to be believed, she's shackin' up with a chaos spirit."

Sea Swan rose an eyebrow. "You're going to go in."

"No, lass. We're goin' to go in."

* * *

>173.24 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>Moondancer drew her bandanna tighter over her muzzle, scraping some dirt off her goggles as she walked through the shattered buildings at the base of the mountain. She sighed as she examined the ground; broken earrings, shattered necklaces, twisted bracelets. This was probably a jewelry shop before it fell—it would have been mostly useless then and it was mostly useless now. Still, good gems could be used in spell arrays; she levitated a few small pieces and placed them in one of the pouches dangling from her saddlebags.

She was about to turn away when suddenly she felt a POWERFUL magical surge, as though a hundred unicorns had shoved their magic into one spell. It wasn't hard to figure out where it came from; the rubble in the distance suddenly started floating and spinning, large chunks of masonry rearranging themselves in midair. Moondancer backed up a step or two without thinking; she hadn't seen so much raw magic in over a decade, and even then it had been Celestia herself—

The thought was grabbed, held. She examined it from all angles. Celestia had definitely died, there was no doubting that, but... if she had regenerated somehow, or if there was a new alicorn...

Whatever the case, there was a pony with quite a bit of magic. If she could convince them to ally with her, she could... well, life would be a lot easier.

The masonry dropped back to the ground with a loud crash, kicking up dust and grit. Moondancer rolled her eyes and braced herself, holding her breath as the massive dust cloud passed over her. She still had to cough when it was gone, rubbing the dust out of her goggles.

Then, with some trepidation, she began to walk toward the magic's source.

* * *

>It was easy for Moondancer to guess when she arrived at her destination. For one thing, the rubble was held back by a hoof-high force field. For another, there was a series of colored tiles just beyond that, circling a hut scavenged and salvaged from an old Canterlot spire. And the pair of alicorns busily levitating various items around desks was a pretty big clue.

The smaller black one noticed her first, standing outside the edge of the magic, and let out a large gasp. "Mom! We've got a visitor!" She put down what looked for all the world like a series of test tubes and galloped up to the edge, grinning even as the purple one turned. "Oh my gosh, there are ponies still alive!"

Her eagerness was joined by the larger purple one, though that smile was more restrained as she trotted up. "I told you I hadn't done a detection sweep yet. Hello, miss... wait." She peered. "Reddish mane, purple stripe... Cream hooves?! Moondancer, is that you?!"

Moondancer froze, suddenly very wary.

"...Oh. Right, you haven't met me this loop. Sorry, you must be very confused." The purple pony backed up a step. "My name is Twilight Sparkle. This is my adopted daughter, Nyx, and Luna is currently resting inside. And... none of those names mean anything to you, do they."

Very slowly, Moondancer shook her head.

"Right. I'm going to make an airlock for you." Twilight's horn lit up, and a glowing arch appeared before of the unicorn. "There's now a small magical field right in front of you, intersecting the greater shield. If you step in, I'll run a quick decontamination, get that dust off of you, then release you into the plaza."

"Why are we calling it a plaza?"

"Because, Nyx, I haven't had time to think of a better word. Well, Moondancer? You coming?"

**Author's Note:****

173.1: Vinyl has bad cruise luck.

173.2: Anticipation all the sweeter after so long thinkig it was impossible.

173.7: Well, it's mostly horse mythology around here.

173.8: Not one of your better selves.

173.9: Yes, he does something like this almost every time.

173.10: Rainbow-Dad is probably going to be rather surprised.

173.11: See what I mean?

173.12: A variation on a theme.

173.13: Game, set, match.

173.17: Inversion.

173.24: Post apocalypse, but not post manners.

181. Chapter 181

174.1 (BIOS-Pherecydes, Masterweaver, Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Nyx jumped as the door opened. "MOM! You're home early!"

"Well, I had to stop and help Pinkie out, but it turned out she bought all my groceries for me ahead of what is that on the table."

"It's..." Nyx coughed. "It's a glass."

Twilight Sparkle frowned. "Nyx, while I have nothing against you drinking wine in an adult body, you're currently very much a fillyâ€"

"It's not, uh..." Nyx rubbed the back of her head. "It's... it's not alcoholic..."

The unicorn rose an eyebrow. "Are there any other drugs in it?"

"Nope, I triple-filtered it!"

Nyx's eyes shot wide when she realized what she had just said. Twilight's own eyes narrowed. "And why, exactly, would you have to filter that in the first place?"

"...mmm..."

"Young lady. What is that liquid."

"Uh... well... you see... I..." Nyx sighed. "It's blood."

"...Blood."

"Specifically rabbit blood." The filly kicked against the ground. "Lot easier to obtain than pony blood."

"...Why are you drinking blood?"

"I... uh... weeeeeeeell..." Nyx craned her neck. "It's... um... I don't know... cults keep finding me, and... it's an acquired taste, you see..." Twilight simply stared at her daughter, who shifted nervously before continuing rapidly. "Plus, um, you'd be surprised how often the 'fangs' aren't just for show. Or where the Nightmare Force is actually a sentient demonic aura, or a curse, or Eldritch Possession requiring Seapony intervention, or, orâ€"

Twilight cut her off by pulling her into a hug. "Shh. It's fine, I guess I can see why you might have gotten used to it. Just, try not to make too much of a habit alright? You didn't hurt anypony, right?"

Nyx hesitated.

Twilight gave her daughter a speculative glance. "Nyx?"

A soft voice spoke up from behind them. "Oh! Um, I'm sorry to interrupt. I should go, don't mind me."

"No, it's fine, Fluttershy. I was just having a talk with Nyx. Did you want something?" Twilight questioned.

"Oh, no. It's not something you need to worry about. I'll just go," she protested, backing up towards the entrance way.

Twilight gently closed the door behind her Unawake friend with her magic, causing her to bump into it. "Seriously, it's okay Fluttershy. What else are friends for, right? What's wrong?"

Fluttershy hid behind her mane, but nodded. "It isn't that big a deal, honest. I just can't find Angel Bunny anywhere. I'm starting to get worried. He almost never misses his mid-morning snack. Haveâ€"have you seen him anywhere?"

Twilight gave a suspicious look at her cringing daughter. "No, I haven't seen him. But if I find out anything, I'll be sure to help."

Fluttershy nodded sadly. "Oh, okay. Thank you. If you find him, can you tell him I made his favorite: roasted carrots in cucumber sauce."

Twilight nodded and watched as Fluttershy left before rounding on Nyx.

"Okay, I know what you're thinking, but in my defense he really was evil this Loop. I swear. And he attacked me first." The embarrassed filly spoke before Twilight could start lecturing.

Twilight sighed and kneaded her head with one hoof. "Alright, I can accept that you had reasons for it, but right now Fluttershy is worried sick. So here's what you're going to do. For the rest of the Loop you're going to be taking Angel's place. And I still expect you to do all of your chores as well, and your homework. And no clones or time-spinners. You made this mess, now you have to deal with it."

Nyx opened and closed her mouth repeatedly, before nodding dejectedly.

"Good. Maybe next time you'll do the sensible thing and just ask Vinyl for some of her extra bloodpacks. Ficus knows she ends up a vampony more often than not."

Nyx's head jerked up. "Wait what? All this time, and she didn't share!? When I get my hooves on herâ€" "

"Ah ah ah, young filly. Vengeance later. You have somewhere and someone else to be. March!"

Nyx grumbled and shifted into Angel Bunny's form, giving Twilight a dirty look before bouncing off after Fluttershy.

Twilight groaned. "Ugh. Kids." Unthinkingly picking up the wineglass from the table, she took a sip... before her eyes widened and she spit the 'drink' out forcefully.

"NYX!"

Across Ponyville, Vinyl shuddered and went to check on her blood packs.

"Don't worry my precious. Momma's here now," she crooned.

* * *

>174.2 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"YOU HAVE GAZED UPON THE NIGHT FOR FAR TOO LONG!" cried Cornea Blaze. "THE BLINDNESS! SHALL LAST! FOREEEEEEEVER!"

Twilight sighed, setting off the Equestria-wide mass manifestation of sunglasses. Again.

* * *

>174.3 (Masterweaver)

* * *

>"Hey, Twilight! Didjya hear about Zecora's big adventure with your brother?!"

Twilight Sparkle's smile was both indulgent and resigned. "Yes Dash, I've heard. Twelve times, this loop alone."

"...oh."

They walked and flew in silence for a few seconds.

"...you want to gush about it."

"I _totally_ want to gush about it."

"Alright, I'm listening."

Rainbow grinned, already gearing her mind into story-telling mode. "Let me set the scene for our intrepid heroes..."

* * *

>174.4 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Luna weakly lifted her head to see one of her worst nightmares looking down at her.

Not the Tantabus. Not the Nightmare. Not her failure as a princess to her subjects.

The burning eyes of Corona Blaze smoldered, filled with nothing but contempt for the pony lying broken before her.

Luna breathed heavily, her mind wandering as she fought to stay conscious. The Loop had started shortly after the sisters' battle with King Sombra. Celestia hadn't been Awake, Luna knew, since she wouldn't have started researching Sombra's dark magic if she was.

The older sister threw herself into her studies of the dark arts, growing distant from her subjects, her sister and her role as guardian of the sun. Luna had taken responsibility, raising both the sun and moon, as well as tending to the needs of the country.

The night mare had tried approaching her sister, but the elder ignored her and soon stopped talking to her at all.

Then, one morning, Luna had woken up to an unbearable heat. Going outside, Luna had found her sister completely wrapped in darkness, horn blazing with sickly purple and green magic as she dragged the sun closer to the planet.

Luna had screamed at her to stop and had been attacked.

"You have been deceiving me," Corona snarled, looming over the smaller Alicorn, backlit by the seething sun. "You've been planning to usurp me and take the throne. You aren't my sister. You...are a _rival!_"

Her horn blazed and Luna threw herself back, scrambling to get her hooves under her as she felt the ground under her heat up. Lighting her horn, she focused and teleported. Luna reappeared in the air and looked around in horror.

The land was cracking under the blistering heat, homes bursting into flames as ponies inside ran out, only to perish in the firestorm.

Luna's wings flapped unsteadily as she tried to figure out what to do.

_Luna..._

She nearly stopped flapping as a voice echoed inside her head. The castle below erupted in a molten spout and a voice howled out.

***"Luna!"**

The lunar princess dodged a spear of light and dived, weaving between the sinking ruins.

_Luna!_

Luna looked around, trying to figure out where the voices were coming from. She winced as her feathers brushed against superheated rock and she teleported again.

Reappeared, she gazed out over what she knew in the future would have become the Everfree Forest.

_Harmony..._

Luna rubbed her forehead, then blinked. "Of course," she murmured. Looking around, she winged her way towards the castle ruins. Focusing, she teleported once again and reappeared in front of the shrine holding the stones.

Placing her horn against the center orb, she withdrew the Element of Magic.

The room grew dark and Luna turned to see a large winged shape growing larger through the stained glass window.

Grabbing the other Elements, Luna braced herself as the window shattered.

Flinching back from the shards, Luna looked up to see an enraged Corona, who pointed a hoof at her.

"Traitor! I knew it! You wanted them for yourself!"

Before she could continue, and before _she_ lost her nerve, Luna let the Elements take control. Wreathed in golden light, Luna rose until she was level with Corona.

Corona fired a beam of light, which pinged harmlessly off the harmony magic.

Then a massive ray blasted from the Elements, slamming into Corona, who shrieked in agony. The blast carried her out of the room, to the sky and into the sun, pushing it away from the planet. Simultaneously, a wave of magic pulsed outwards, restoring the scorched and melted surface of the planet

Luna was gently lowered to the floor and she stumbled as the magic left her, drained. She staggered outside, looking up at the sun.

On it, a series of dark mottled shapes that vaguely resembled the head of a mare glared down at her.

Luna threw back her head and let out a primal shriek before she flared her wings and launched herself skywards, climbing towards the sun. She reached out with her hooves, as if to embrace the shining orb that held her sister.

"Celie..."

* * *

>Luna Woke up with a sharp gasp and lifted her head. She met the six faces of the Element Bearers. Frowning, she looked around and saw her.

The Solar Diarch. The Guardian of the Sun.

"Sis...!" Luna choked on the word, her throat dry. Celestia met her lunge and wrapped her wings around her younger sister.

"Twilight? Take the girls back to Ponyville," Celestia said curtly.

"Don't wait for us."

Luna dimly heard Twilight acknowledge and nuzzled deeper into her sister's embrace.

"Don't leave me," Luna rasped. Celestia gently touched her cheek and lifted Luna's face. The Moon Maiden averted her eyes and Celestia gently kissed her forehead.

"Lulu, you know that I'll never, ever leave you, betray you or harm you. That wasn't me." Celestia knew her sister. Knew her deepest darkest fears, just as Luna knew hers. She knew there was only one thing could shake Luna this badly.

"I know that...it's...just..." Luna mumbled. Celestia wrapped her wings around her and gently settled down. Luna burrowed into her and sighed.

Celestia hummed a wordless tune, a lullaby sung to them by their mother long ago and Luna, after a moment, relaxed before resting her head against her sister and fell asleep.

Celestia gently stroked Luna's mane and kissed it softly.

"I love you, sister mine," she said softly. "Then, now and always."

* * *

>174.5 (wildrook)

* * *

>Shining Armor was annoyed.

No, it wasn't because of Blueblood being a more outrageous prick than normal. He was used to that and a few other variants where the Prince was tolerable at his best.

It also wasn't because he had endured the cold as well as various obstacles that happened before the snowstorm. Why the Hydra had been p*ssed off involved a gaping minotaur-shaped hole in its stomach, but that was another story entirely.

What really p*ssed him off was that the Yaks were planning to start a war with them. Turns out there were a few yaks unhappy with Pinkie Pie's intervention and decided to sabotage the meeting. The irony is that Blueblood was actually HELPFUL in spotting out the traitors in a similar method that made Pinkie Pie an effective torture device.

"Your Majesties," Shining said to the Yak Prince and Blueblood, "if you mind..."

"By all means, Captain," Blueblood replied. "Auntie Celestia was the one to set you as my bodyguard, so if you would be so kind."

The Yak Prince blinked, but got the idea as he nodded.

He then looked at the traitors to the crown. "Now," he said, "if you have my attention, I'd like a few questions. And these are very important because they involve the fate of your kingdom when you decide to attack without consequences. First, why did you plan to overthrow the Prince of your own kingdom?"

"Because Yak Tradition dictate that they must not be stopped even by stupid pink pony that quelled fight," the yak upstart replied.

Shining gave them stare. "That, I can guess," he said, "but it was still a stupid decision, even by certain standards of warfare. Why take him out now while Equestrian Diplomats tried to visit?"

"To pin blame on you when the attempt to set Prince as war criminal."

So, they WERE aware of what protects Equestria. That just makes it even dumber in hindsight.

"Okay," Shining said. "One more question, and this is vital for your way of life to exist." He then took a breath. "You have a bunch of traitors to the crown and at least three of your best men trying to subdue us. If you capture all three of us, there will be a letter sent to Canterlot and the Crystal Empire of the capture of both Princes and Princess Cadence's consort. Yes, they will resort in diplomacy, but that's just plan A. Plan B would be sending in seven individuals which consists of a citizen of the Apple Family, the Pink Pony that stopped the war you wanted, a fashionista and her draconic husband, a rainbow-maned pegasus that can break the sound barrier, another pegasus that can control the local wildlife with kindness, and last but not least, my sister, the Princess of the Everfree."

"We are aware of said Princess," the Yak Upstart said, "and we can tell you that..."

"I'm not finished," Shining said, cutting the upstart off with a glare and a shield in the form of a muzzle. "I haven't even gone down our other alternatives. Plan C involves my wife, Princess Mi Amore Cadenza, bringing the army of the Crystal Empire down on your heads if you don't let me and her cousin go. Plan D involves the friend of the Beastmasters', the Chaos Spirit known as Discord, going for a very enthusiastic walk in case Plan B fails to work. And if you're not backing down by then, Plan E involves the Princesses' response. In which...Prince Blueblood, if you will?"

"In which both the moon and the sun align to create a Solar Eclipse," Blueblood replied, smirking. The Yak Upstarts were shocked at Blueblood not only getting the answer right, but the smile on Shining's face saw a small bit of pride.

"In other words, they've accepted your declaration and you will have no kingdom to run," Shining finished. "Because the Eclipse is what happens when you've crossed the line and angered them to the point where even the coldest climates will be unstable for your taste." He then looked at the Yak Traitors and smiled. "With all that, the question itself makes itself known...knowing all of that will be directed at you, do you really want to start a war with Equestria?"

There was silence from all parties as the Yak Traitor considered his options.

"We surrender," he said, squeaking.

"Good man," Shining replied, finally smiling. "Your Majesty, take them to the local prison while I mail a letter to my sister and wife."

Blueblood gave the Yak Prince a look. "You heard him," he said.

"How do you find capable Captain?" the Yak Prince asked Blueblood.

"Would you be surprised if I said 'He's a Dungeon Master in his free time'?" the Prince replied.

* * *

>174.6 (Evilhumour)

* * *

>"Rainbow Dash, no," Twilight glared at her friend who was staring at the new looper in their Loop. New to Dash anyways, as Twilight met him several hundred loops ago. "My daughter is dating his brother and I forbid you to go after him!"

"But Twi, look at him!" Dash whined, pointing at the massive pegasus stallion, using his impressively long wings to bow to a pair of passing giggling mares. "Just look at his wings!" Dash let out a bit of a squee, biting her lip as the blond mane stallion bobbed his head as he told a joke to the ponies around him, gaining laughter from the crowd.

Twilight groaned, wondering how to dislodge her friend's focus when Fluttershy patted her shoulder and took over.

"Dash," she said softly, catching the stuntmare's attention. "You have taken care of Lemon in the past for me, right?"

"Well, yeah," Dash blinked in confusion while she nodded her head in the affirmative. "He's kinda like a nephew to me...oh spruce you Flutters!" Dash grumbled, shaking herself as she glared unhappily at her new nephew. "That's fighting dirty and you know it!"

"I was just asking you a question Dashie," Fluttershy's smile suggested nothing of the sort, with Twilight letting out a sigh of relief. "I'm glad to hear that you think the same of Blood Flower too."

Dash just grumbled some more, until she let out a squeak of surprise as somepony opened a cloud over her head.

"Sorry Dash," a soft voice called out with amusement, the massive pegasus flying down to land in front of the mares and into the shower of water he made. Glistening, he looked down at the mare and lifted her hoof up gently. "You looked a bit overheated, and I thought you need to cool down. Are you okay?"

Rainbow Dash simply looked at the stallion before she let out a shout of frustration and took off to the skies.

"Russ was right, this is truly a fun loop to be alive in!" Blood Flower's laughter was cut short by the looks he was getting from the two mares. "Do not worry Twilight, Little Mother, I will make it clear to Dash I was only joking with her. Until later." With that, the pegasus flew off into the sky after the original Bearer of Loyalty.

"Wait, did you just try to forbid me Twi," Dash asked as she flew back to the mares. "From dating somepony?"

"I-I," Twilight blinked as she realized what she had done. "I'm sorry Dash, I don't know what came over me but I-"

"It's okay, I know you really didn't mean it," Dash rolled her eyes. "We've been friends long enough that we can joke about this kind of thing, right?"

"Yup," Fluttershy said, nodding her head. "If you wish to date my son and one day call me mom, I will be fine with that."

Rainbow Dash glared at her friend once more before taking off again.

* * *

>174.7 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>Pony sat on a bench.

Thief sat on a bench.

Human sat on a bench.

Seapony sat in a bucket on a bench.

Sweet Roll sat on the ground.

"We need a bigger bench," she grumbled.

* * *

>174.8 (Vinylshadow - MLPPrototype/Doctor Who)

* * *

>Derpy checked her mailbag for any other letters and, finding it empty, breathed a sigh of relief.

Winging her way to the post office, she signed out for the day and trotted out into the Ponyville Market, filled with ponies of all kinds selling their wares, from Applejack selling apples, to the Crusaders with...

Derpy stared at the fillies in disbelief.

_"Got an Eldritch Abomination infestation?_ read one sign. _"Free removal!"_ said another.

Torn between curiosity and her survival instinct kicking in, Derpy resolved to ask them about it later. A familiar leather jacket caught her eye and she trotted after the stallion, who had stopped by Time Turner's clock-fixing stall, which had a familiar blue phone booth behind it.

"Alex, Doctor, good afternoon," Derpy called, coming up to them. The two stallions turned with a rather eerie unison to face her.

"You're rubbing off on him," Derpy said with an amused grin to the Doctor, nodding at Alex. The Prototype and the Time Lord blinked their icy blue eyes simultaneously.

"Nonsense, we're nothing alike," they chorused, then looked at each other in surprise and broke down laughing. Derpy rolled her eyes.

"So, what have my two favorite stallions been up to?" Derpy asked, leaning on the stall and examining the clocks curiously.

"Just finished a Loop with Weeping Daleks, Sontaran-based Cybermen and Auton Zygons," the Doctor said.

"Fused Loop with Fallout; ended up King of the Mirelurks through means I'm still not entirely sure about," Alex said, poking a clock that then chirped angrily at him and tried pecking him.

Derpy snickered and rewound a clock that had thirteen numerals on it. She did a double-take and stared at it before putting it back carefully.

"Well, since I have full functionality of my TARDIS, I suspect we're in a fused Loop with my branch. Shall we see what we can find?" the Doctor asked, starting to toss clocks back into a case, some beeping, some clicking, some screaming in dead languages.

"I'd like that," Derpy said, perking up, with Alex following suit.

"Splendid. Got everything? Where's Dinky?"

"Amethyst is taking care of her. Besides, hello, time travel?" Derpy grinned.

"Fair enough. Worst-case scenario, we come back some fifteen years later—"ow!" the Doctor rubbed his head and glared at Alex, who stuck out his tongue.

"Play nice," Derpy admonished them. "Come along, boys!"

She entered the TARDIS and Alex exchanged a glance with the Doctor.

"We're not her boys," the Prototype said. The Doctor tilted his head, arching an eyebrow.

"...Yeah, we are," Alex admitted before he entered the TARDIS, followed by the Doctor.

Within a few seconds, the phone box dematerialized, leaving behind an angrily chirping clock.

* * *

>174.9 (Anon e Mouse Jr.) [MLPDaria]

* * *

>Twilight looked around Ponyville. No real changes that she could see. She resolved herself to another, mostly lonely Loop start. (Cadance had written shortly after she Awoke, but the two weren't planning to meet up for a few days.) As she and Spike eyed things, Twilight saw Pinkie. Right. Usual start. Let's do this. She trotted up to the pink mare.

"Hi, I'mâ€|"

Pinkie cut her off with a loud gasp, then raced away, prompting Twilight to sigh inwardly. _Still almost exactly the same response, every time._ Then, she caught a hint of movement out of the corner of her eye. _Wait, is thatâ€| Maud?_

She hurried in the direction of the other mare, who promptly disappeared into a crowd. Twilight quirked an ear. _Wonder what that was about._ Turning back to Spike, she began asking him where they needed to go first.

Hours later, Twilight took one last look around the busy main room of her library, where her "Welcome to Ponyville" party was still in full swing, and slipped away to the upstairs. As she headed for her bed, she heard a hoofstep behind her, and turned.

Maud Pie stood in the doorway. "Hey."

Twilight flushed. "Um, hey."

"Sorry about all the chaos down there. I love my sister, but she can be a littleâ€| over-exuberant sometimes."

"So I guessed."

"Yeah. Of course, times like these, you'd think we'd be used to chaos. It tends to make one a littleâ€| Loopy."

Twilight's eyes widened. "A littleâ€|"Maud, are you Looping?"

The mare shook her head. "I don't know if Maud Pie is Looping, but I am." She held out a hoof. "Daria Morgendorffer, visiting Anchor."

Twilight shook it. "Twilight Sparkle, local Anchor. Very pleased to meet you."

"Same here."

"Soâ€| what's your Loop like?"

"High school. Four years at two different high schools. The first was home to two of the stupidest people in the multiverse, and at least a couple at the second were only marginally above that. It's not entirely their faultâ€"part of the reason we moved away was because we found out the town had uranium in the drinking water, which probably accounts for at least some of their idiocy." Daria sighed. "I was so glad, when I found out I was an Anchor, that it meant neither of them was."

"Uranium inâ€"that's horrible!" Twilight shuddered.

Daria nodded. "I found out later they put what they called a "Destructive Stupidity Patch" on those two to keep them from Looping, actually, which was a relief. They're right up there with Billy and the Tick, and you know how bad those two are."

"Billy, yes. I've never met the Tick, but I've heard of him."

"Trust me, you're very lucky. I have met him. It wasn't fun." She looked up. "Morons aside, my Loop isn't all bad. I've got one of the best friends in the world at my second high school, and she and her brother are both Looping. So are my sister and one of her friends, so at least they aren't alone. And we've bonded more since the Loops started, which has helped. She'd probably love it here, actually."

"Well, that's good." Twilight looked at the other mare. "I certainly hope you have a good time here, Daria. Equestria is a Sanctuary Loop, soâ€" relax and enjoy yourself."

"I will." Daria smiled. "I'm glad to finally be here, you know. Word gets around about some of these Loops, so I've heard a lot about you before, even if I've never met any of you until now."

Twilight smiled. "I take it you're big on friendship."

"Actually, if I'd come here first instead of going to Lawndale High when I did, or as my first Fused Loop, I'd have run screaming."

Twilight did a double-take. "Really?"

"Yep. Another few years changed me, somewhat. But even when I started Looping, I wasâ€" still more cynical and closed off than most people liked. I've adapted though. Made some new friends. It's helped a lot. And I've already got one close friend here, even if she isn't Awake."

"Really? Who?"

"Pinkie. In her own way, she's a lot like my sister: happy, popular, a lot smarter than people assume. If she and Quinn ever meet, I don't know whether I'll be happy for them or walk away in a daze."

"Probably both."

"Probably." Daria looked around, and raised an eyebrow. "I'm still the same person I've always been, even after so many Loops. This Loopâ€" it runs on friendship, in a big way."

"Very much so."

"You know what I've always run on?"

"What?"

"Cynicism, sarcasm, snark, and the fact that there is no aspect, no facet, no moment of life that can't be improved with pizza."

Twilight quirked an eyebrow. "Interesting philosophy. I'll have my sister-in-law send over some of her cooking for tomorrow's party."

"What party?"

"The one Pinkie is going to throw after she, some friends of ours and I save the world from Nightmare Moon."

Daria's eyebrow raised further. "You save the world from a supervillain, right off the bat, at the start of every Loop?"

"Yes. And another couple of times over the next couple of years."

"Sounds like fun."

"â€¦ You're being sarcastic now, aren't you."

"Yes. Yes I am."

* * *

>174.10 (Vinylshadow)

* * *

>"Twilight?"

"_Yes,_ Pinkie. I _know_ we're loaves of bread. I _know_ we're pure-bread ponies. Haha, funny Loop."

"Well, I can see you're living up to your sourdough nature," the loaf of Pinkienickel bread said with a huff. "No need to fly to pieces over it."

"I'd smack you if bread could move."

"Oh yes, I'm sure you're enjoying just loafing around. Are you toasty? In a bit of a jam, perhaps? Rye so serious? You knead to crumb down. No raisin to be upset."

"I loaf you so much right now."

"Loaf you too."

* * *

>(DrTempo)

From the Journal of Sunset Shimmer:

* * *

>After my...interesting adventure with Ryuko Matoi and company, I figured a break would be interesting.

* * *

>I got one in the Sword Art Online Loop. There, MMORPGs have changed via VR devices which essentially create whole virtual worlds.

It had started with Kayaba, the creator of the first VRMMO, Sword Art Online, turning it into a death game where if you died, you were dead for real. However, that is not where my tale started here.

I found myself as a player in Alfheim Online, another VRMMO which luckily, had you not die for real if you died there. My abilities were limited while in the game, as it was not capable of handling the skills Loopers can use.

* * *

>Which meant I had a challenge. I soon met Leafa, a player who was related to Kirito, the player that had ended the Sword Art Online incident. Despite that, Kirito is not the Anchor. That title goes to his girlfriend Asuna.

Who happened to have been kidnapped by the guy running ALO.

Shortly after introductions, we decided to spar. Before the duel began, Leafa acted in a way I had seen many times before; that of a Looper Awakening. However, in this case, this would be the first time Leafa had Awakened.

As can be guessed, she was confused as heck. In our ensuing duel, I managed to easily win, thanks to my superior swordsmanship. After I explained things to Leafa, Kirito showed up. He told us that Asuna had already escaped her captor, and kicked his butt.

Drat. I had wanted to fight the jerk. Still, that meant I could enjoy the game, and so I did.

After a while, I learned of another VRMMO, Gun Gale Online, which was more modern than the classic fantasy game ALO is. It was the top player that caught my eye, though.

His name? Big Boss. Curious as to this, I entered GGO, and met Sinon, another Looper, who took me to Big Boss.

It was indeed the Looper I knew, and he had basically set up Outer Heaven as the top guild in GGO. Sinon had recently been asked to join, and I also was recruited.

During the tests Big Boss had set up to make sure we were worthy of becoming official members of Outer Heaven, Sinon told me of how Big Boss and her had met. During a competition to determine the top GGO player, Sinon had clashed with Big Boss, and lost easily. Big Boss saw potential, though, and soon had one of his top players, Ocelot, ask her to join up.

And interesting enough, my thoughts on Ocelot Awakening soon during my Loop where I'd met Big Boss was actually right. Ocelot had indeed Awakened that very Loop, but was confused, so he did things as per baseline. Since then, Ocelot has been honing his skills.

But back to my adventures in GGO. After passing the tests, Sinon and I were sent to help stop 'Death Gun', a GGO player who was very dangerous. Sinon and Kirito had stopped him in baseline, and this time, I would get the honor.

* * *

>After that, I returned to ALO, and met Yuuki, a girl who, due to her illness, was using the technology that VRMMOs worked on nearly all the time. This meant she was very skilled, and our duel was quite an epic one. She nearly defeated me.

After this Loop, I felt like I had had a good time. I was ready for whatever awaited me next.

* * *

>174.11 (Kris Overstreet)

* * *

>"I'm always glad to have you visit," Fluttershy told the immense lupine Admin seated on his haunches in her living room. "But I don't understand what exactly an Admin needs an examination from me for."

"Well, it's like this," Fenrir said, his eyes flickering from Fluttershy to a shiny plate on the wall to a bird shifting from perch to bookshelf and back to Fluttershy. "My behavior the past few eons has been... well... out of character for me. And I'm concerned that there might be something wrong with me. And since I... well, I just can't bring this up with my co-workers, all right? That left seeking out animal experts among the Loopers."

"I understand," Fluttershy said.

"You know, I get enough grief from my coworkers as it is," Fenrir continued as Fluttershy carefully examined his body from head to tail. "Some of them rub my ears when I'm too busy to tell them to back off. A couple of the braver ones are even rubbing my belly. How can I trust people with that little respect?"

"Have you tried talking to them about it?" Fluttershy asked, taking Fenrir's tail in her hooves and gently bending it.

"Ha! Norse pantheon, remember? No whiners in Odin's house!" Fenrir paused and added, "Well, except Dad, but he's a special case."

"Hmm," Fluttershy murmured, and then added, "Tell me, have you noticed that the tips of your ears have become slightly floppy?"

"A little," Fenrir admitted. "I thought it was just fatigue. It's been rough recently."

"And how stiff your tail is?" Fluttershy added.

Fenrir shook the tail experimentally. "I hadn't really noticed, but yeah," he said.

"Has your attention span been growing shorter of late?"

"Er, yes. I've been having to work through that."

Fluttershy gestured to his back. "And your winter coat is coming in multicolored," she continued. "In a healthy wolf it should be two colors, no variation."

Fenrir blinked. "Is that serious? Tell me, Fluttershy. I can handle it."

"Well..." Fluttershy looked away from Fenrir. "It's not exactly serious... but I've never seen this happen quite this way before. Usually it's an inherited condition that takes several generations to manifest."

"What?" Fenrir curled back on himself, staring with worried yellow eyes. "What? What is it?"

Fluttershy took a deep breath. "I think you may be coming down with... domestication."

Angel Bunny looked through the front door of Fluttershy's cottage, saw the mountain-sized wolf wailing and weeping disconsolately while Fluttershy held him over her shoulder, and decided he had business elsewhere. He'd find out what it was when he got there.

* * *

>174.12 (ORBSyndicate)

Gravity Falls: Friendship is Magic 7: Guitars and Dancers and PINKIES!

* * *

>"Duplicating copy machine." Twilight said, observing the rundown machine before her. "I would question how it's still functional in this state, but you'd all probably just sayâ€" "

"MAAAAAAGIIIIIIIC!" Pinkie said, spreading her hands out slowly.

Fluttershy looked at the thing, blinking. "Soâ€" what are we going to do with it again?"

Twilight took out some random sciencey tool from her Pocket. "We are, of course, going to do SCIENCE to it."

"What else?" Pinkie said, grinning. "I'll grab the soap bars!"

Flutter shy blinked. "Why would we need soap barsâ€|?"

"Reasons!" Pinkie said, depositing several dozen bars of soap on the floor. Then she blinked. "OH NO! I have to help with the party today! I can't do both at the same time!"

Slowly, the pink pony-turned-human angled her head towards the beat up copy machine.

"No, Pinkie." Twilight said. "That's just a bad idea."

"Okay Twilight." Pinkie grinned. "I'll just clone myself the regular way then!"

Twilight blinked. "You can't be seriousâ€""

* * *

>Stan was slightly disturbed.

Pinkie was _everywhere._ Even more _everywhere_ than usual. She was in the bathroom, in the rafters, outside planting things, on the roof hanging streamers. He knew he should have called off the party, but he'd decided to go with it. Go as baseline as possibleâ€|

Now the entire Mystery Shack had balloons. Everywhere. And cannons filled with (he hoped) confetti.

Confound those ponies, they were driving him toâ€"

"BOO!" Pinkie said, causing Stan to fall backwards onto his back. "Did I getcha? I gotcha! WHOO! Here have a cupcake."

"Uhâ€|"

Seconds later she came back. "Hey, did I pass through here a while ago?"

Stan blinked. "Uhâ€|" He blinked, an idea coming to him. "Oh. Yes, just a ways to the left." She grinned, bouncing off.

Stan quickly jumped into the back room, checking the duplicating copy machine. Long ago he had discovered how to see what exactly it had copied recently. So if it showed Pinkie getting copiedâ€|

He looked at the records. There was no mention of copying Pinkie Pie. What was there, howeverâ€|

"Thirty metric tons of soap? What on earth?"

* * *

>Soos was playing on the keyboard. "Soos is best DJ." He said, hitting the explosion key over and over again.

Rainbow Dash leapt over. "Soâ€|. keyboard. What other sounds does it make aside from "boom?"

"A dawg, it can make all sorts of noises! Like blood curdling zombie screams!"

"Cooooool."

"And, of course!" Soos dramatically raised his hand, pointed his finger, and pressed down on the key. The speakers let out a "Ye-AH!"

"Yes!" Soos said, grinning.

Rainbow Dash blinked. "Okaythen. So what's the plan for the party, exactly?"

"Dance off slash karaoke!" Soos grinned. "There'll be a bunch of punch and the dancers will dance till the house falls down!"

Rainbow Dash leaned in. "Want to make it more interesting?" She said, producing a guitar from her Pocket.

"Woah dude where'd you get that?"

"The seat cushion over there, you just didn't see it. Now, how's about instead of just a dance-off?"

* * *

>Pinkie smiled at the party. She was proud of her work. And Stan was still fretting internally about how she had managed to do it.

Or maybe he was fretting about the thirty metric tons of soap. It wasn't like she read his mind or anything. Perhaps she should Applejack was nearby, a little bored. She wasn't really into the party, so she had kinda just sat next to the wall. She was trying to get into that perfect position where she could have her hat over her eyes, lean effortlessly against the wall, and fall asleep without anyone noticing. It was a skill she had developed.

"Hi." A small girl in a green shirt next to her said. "Are you attempting the ancient art of sleeping while standing?"

Applejack blinked, turning to the girl. "Uh yeah. Howd'ya know?"

"I have tried it many times myself, though to no avail. It is why I have a headache today." She giggled. "I'm Candy. The large one behind me with the iguana is Grenda. And the one behind her is".
Uh.

"Lyra Heartstrings." Lyra said, walking up to shake Applejack's hand. Applejack took it, not giving it a second thought.

"So what are y'all doing here?"

Grenda pounded her chest. "I'M HERE FOR THE PUNCH!"

"Grenda it does not involve any actual punching." Candy reminded her large friend.

"I DON'T CARE. I WILL MAKE IT HAVE PUNCHES!"

"CAN IT HAVE TACOS?" Sonata shouted from the background. Nobody listened to her. She became dejected.

Candy shrugged. "She is a bit over the top. I am here to watch her."

Lyra shrugged. "I'm just here because party. You don't get many parties in Gravity Falls."

Applejack twitched. Her Element of Honesty had suggested something was up here. A half-truth. "Really?"

"Well I suppose the Northwests organize a party every year or so, but nobody lets them in. And the rest of the 'parties' are just people messing with Old Man McGucketâ€|"

The old man in question let out a yell and started dancing hillbilly style. "I can't feel my legs! It makes it so much more interesting!"

Applejack blinked. "Mmkay thenâ€| Anyway I'm just goin' to be sittin' here till the endâ€""

"Oh look what the poor wretches dragged in!" A blonde girl said, stepping up to the four of them. "Look at all you pathetic losers! You know, you're not good enough for even this party!"

"I live in this place, ma'am." Applejack retorted.

"Oh look. _Excuses._ How quaint. Nice accent by the way. Sure to attract all the best hillbilly guys."

"I CAN ATTEST THAT IT WORKS!" McGucket yelled, now unable to move his legs.

The blonde girl chuckled. "But you're new, so I'll give you a pass this once. I'm Pacifica Northwest, and what I say is law. And I say that the four of you are cramping the style of this already substandard partyâ€""

Pinkie ran right up to Pacifica. "Did. You. Just. Say. Substandard. Party?"

"Did you really think this was a good party? I mean the balloons are tacky, the house is falling apart, and what on earth are those cannons even _for?_"

"FOR PARTIES!" Pinkie said, growling. She slowly backed away. "I have my eyes on you. All of them."

Applejack really hoped that Pinkie didn't bring out any of her Eyes of Chaosâ€|

Pacifica turned back to them. "Now, all of you get off. Shoo. We don't need you cluttering up the place."

Candy and Grenda sighed. "We suppose you are rightâ€¦." They began to turn away, dejected.

Pacifica was about to leave when Applejack stomped her foot on the ground. "I won't stand for this." She muttered. "These three just want to have a nice party and enjoy their time here! You've obviously made it your mission to make them and others feel worthless. Well let me tell you something miss Northwest, you are nothing more than a petty rich girl who just thinks she can stomp all over everyone. Well I won't stand for that, miss Northwest. I'm not budging. They are _staying._"

Pacifica glared. "Where did your accent go?"

"I happen to think you're one of those shallow types who listen to accents rather than actual words."

"Who on earth would _choose_ to talk like that?"

"People like me who like who they are." Applejack glared. "And I have a feeling that you are secretly a little insecure about yourself."

Pacifica glared. "You know whatâ€¦"

Her thoughts were cut short when Soos let out the announcement. "And now, we have our karaoke dance off! But our great friend Rainbow Dash has suggested that we make things more interesting! So, instead of just a simple dance, there will be teams! There will be someone playing an instrument and someone singing! Do whatever you want, but prepare for awesome music battle! I realize that it's kinda no longer karaoke, but just treat it like something that makes life more interesting, downs!"

Rainbow Dash leapt up to the stage, holding her guitar up high. "I'll play music! Who's dancing? I hear Pacifica, the dancing queen, is in the audience!"

Applejack smirked, turning to Pacifica. "How about we settle this in a little competition? Or do you even have anyone willing to play music for you?"

Pacifica snapped her fingers. "SUNSET! Play the guitar!"

Applejack watched as unAwake Sunset walked up, strumming a guitar. "Of course, Pacifica." She grinned menacingly.

Applejack leapt up to the stage, grinning. "Rainbow, you and me versus the two of them. Let's do it."

Rainbow Dash blinked. Applejack wasn't talking in countryisms. It wasn't hard to tell why.

_Okayâ€¦ throw out giving other people even a chance at winning. We're going to give them the utter and complete awesome beat down!_

Sunset strummed her guitar, and the competition began.

To be fair, Pacifica and Sunset did pretty good. Pacifica wasn't just some rich kid who won because they were rich, she did have some skills. And every version of Sunset ever met knew how to play the guitar with at least some skill.

If Applejack and Rainbow Dash hadn't been Loopers, they would have been beaten.

Howeverâ€¦.

Rainbow Dash moved her fingers across the strings of the guitar faster than was physically possible, making it sound like she was playing two of the instruments at once. Applejack performed a bunch of exceedingly complex dancing maneuvers, purposefully avoiding bucking and other "uncivilized" and/or "hillbilly" moves. She was going to beat this rich girl at her own game. She even used complex ballet maneuvers. Everyone stared as she did continually more intricate maneuvers. At one point, Rainbow dash "ponied-up," but people didn't pay much attention to this. Applejack's dance was just so.. surprisingly graceful. Of course this was the entire point.

When it ended, Applejack did a dainty bow, turning up to grin right at Pacifica. "How's that, miss Northwest?"

Pacifica's eye twitched. "Youâ€¦ Youâ€¦"

"Now that wasn't even my best performance." Applejack walked right up to Pacifica. "Now, miss Northwest, I can be just as uptight and proper as you. I just choose not to." She returned to her normal voice. "And that's just fine with me. Now SOOS! How'd we do?"

Soos leapt up, yelling like a monkey. "THAT WAS A HEATED BATTLE DUDES! Now, the team who gets the most applause will win! Let's hear it for.. Rainbow Dash and Applejack!"

The clapping for the two Loopers was astounding, loud, and everywhere. Candy and Grenda clapped profusely. Lyra simply took notes on what had just transpired on the notebook she had behind her back.

"Now let's hear it for Pacifica and Sunset!"

The clapping for the two of them was small, and seemed forced. Pacifica steamed, pulling a roll of hundred dollar bills out of her pocket and waving them in the air. The amount of people clapping increased, but in the end, it wasn't even close. She seethed.

"So." Applejack said, walking up. "Can ya' see that you aren't the best simply because you're more civilized? Can you also see that some people like it down here where there aren't so many fancy rituals and shenanigans? Like forks. I could never understand the fascination with forksâ€¦"

Pacifica glared. "You were just faking. You don't actually have any status!"

Applejack's eyes sparked. "You have no idea, Pacifica."

She glared. "Come on girls! We're leaving!" She began to storm out.

She didn't make it far, as suddenly several dozen Pinkie Pies ran into the dance room.

"THE SOAP PILE IS GOING TO EXPLODE!" One of them yelled.

"EVERYONE FIND SOME COVER!" A second said.

"WE'RE ALL GONNA DIE!" A third said.

The real Pinkie Pie blinked. She was sure she'd gotten rid of all the clonesâ€|

Then of course the soap exploded.

It was later discovered that Twilight had taken a Pinkie clone for study with the soap. She did SCIENCE with the soap, Pinkie clone, and the duplicating copy machine. She let the three things sit in a closet while she read some stuff from the Journal.

Said "stuff" was a spell that made things work at optimum efficiency. The copier copied, the pinkie clones got moreâ€| pinkâ€|, and the soap exceeded critical mass and exploded.

Twilight still wasn't sure how that was possible, but she decided further experimentation simply wasn't worth it. Perhaps in another Kerbal Space Program loop she'd try it as a new type of rocket fuel.

Lyra, of course, recorded everything.

* * *

>Wkh vluhqv zhuh rqfh d phqdfh, exw Vrqdwd mxvw zdqwhg wdfrrv.

* * *

>Author's Note:

174.1: Nyx is in big trouble. Bunny trouble.

174.2: Yeah, dark-adaption.

174.5: Yakkity yak.

174.11: Poor wolf.

End
file.